

THE LAW OF CONTRACT

AUSTRALIA
Law Book Co.
Sydney

CANADA and USA
Carswell
Toronto

HONG KONG
Sweet & Maxwell Asia

NEW ZEALAND
Brookers
Wellington

SINGAPORE AND MALAYSIA
Sweet & Maxwell Asia
Singapore and Kuala Lumpur

THE LAW OF CONTRACT

by

SIR GUENTER TREITEL,
Q.C., D.C.L., F.B.A.

Honorary Benchers of Gray's Inn Formerly Vinerian Professor of English Law

ELEVENTH EDITION

THOMSON

SWEET & MAXWELL

First edition 1962
Second edition 1966
Third edition 1970
Fourth edition 1975
Fifth edition 1979
Sixth edition 1983
Seventh edition 1987
Eighth edition 1991
Ninth edition 1995
Tenth edition 1999
Eleventh edition 2003

Published in 2003 by Sweet & Maxwell Limited of 100 Avenue Road, London NW3 3PF
Computerset by Interactive Sciences,
Gloucester
Printed in England by MPG, Bodmin

A CIP catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library

ISBN 0 421 788402 (h/b)
ISBN 0 421 88 50X (p/b)
ISBN 0 421 788305 (ISE)

All rights reserved. Crown copyright material is reproduced with the permission of the Controller of HMSO and the Queen's Printer for Scotland.

No part of this publication may be reproduced or transmitted in any form or by any means, or stored in any retrieval system of any nature without prior written permission, except for permitted fair dealing under the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988, or in accordance with the terms of a licence issued by the Copyright Licensing Agency in respect of photocopying and/or reprographic reproduction. Application for permission for other use of copyright material including permission to reproduce extracts in other published works shall be made to the publishers. Full acknowledgment of author, publisher and source must be given.

No natural forests were destroyed to make this product:
only farmed timber was used and re-planted

©
G. H. Treitel
2003

PREFACE

In the four years since the last edition of this book, many important changes in the law of contract have been made, both by legislation and by judicial decision. These changes have continued the trend of qualifying, or of engrafting exceptions on, previously existing rules. The result has been a further increase in the complexity of the subject and hence, unavoidably, in the length of the text.

The most important statutory change has been the enactment of the Contracts (Rights of Third Parties) Act 1999, though as this Act largely follows the structure of the 1998 Bill on the topic, discussed in the last edition of this book, only relatively minor changes in that discussion have been made. Other statutory changes with significant impact on contract law are the Limited Liability Partnerships Act 2000 (discussed particularly in the chapters on Capacity and Agency), the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 and the Enterprise Act 2002. The effects of the last two Acts extend far beyond our topic: their main impact on it is that they have repealed (or led to the repeal of) much legislation affecting contract law that was formerly contained in the Financial Services Act 1986 and the Fair Trading Act 1973. Many further legislative changes are contained in secondary legislation. This edition takes account, in particular, of the many important changes made by the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999 to the previous (1994) version of these Regulations, and of the entirely new body of rules introduced by the Sale and Supply of Goods to Consumers Regulations 2002. A glance at the table of Statutory Instruments will show how widespread the impact of the latter Regulations has been (even in a book that does not purport to be about sale of goods as a special contract) in introducing new concepts into English contract law. The same is true, if to a less significant extent, of the Consumer Protection (Distance Selling) Regulations 2000. This edition also attempts (with considerable trepidation on my part) to deal with the impact on the law of contract of electronic means of communication; it does so particularly, though not exclusively, in the light of relevant provisions of the Electronic Communications Act 2000 and of the Electronic Commerce (EC Directive) Regulations 2002.

Developments in the courts have continued at an accelerated pace: this edition takes account of more than 350 new cases. Among many decisions of the House of Lords which have called for substantial changes in the text, reference may here be made to Johnson v Gore Wood (on estoppels), Director General of Fair Trading v First National Bank (on unfair terms in consumer contracts), Royal Bank of Scotland v Etridge (on undue influence), Alfred McAlpine Construction v Panatown (on damages in respect of a third party's loss), The Starsin (on Himalaya Clauses), Att-Gen v Blake (on discretionary account of profits as a remedy for breach of contract) and Farley v Skinner (one of a group of cases on damages for non-pecuniary loss). A number of decisions of the lower courts also deserve special mention here: for example, Baird Textile Holdings v Marks and Spencer (raising many issues of contractual intention, consideration and estoppel), Jennings v Rice (on proprietary estoppel) and The Great Peace (on equitable relief for mistake).

Significant changes in the text have also been made where they were prompted by new reflections on points not directly affected by changes in the primary sources: this is, for example, true of the accounts of the various kinds of estoppel discussed in Chapter 3 and of the relationship between them. As a result of these and many other minor changes, about a quarter of the text is new.

My warm thanks are due to the staff of the Codrington Library of All Souls College for continuing to provide their usual excellent service in times of extreme difficulty (caused by building works there); and to the staff of the Underwood Law Library of Southern Methodist University for helping, during my visit at the proof correcting stage to the Law School there, to keep me in touch with current English materials. It is a pleasure also to thank Professor Colin Tapper and Dr Katharine Grevling, both of Magdalen College, for their continuing help with the retrieval of electronically stored information. I am grateful, too, to Andrew Turner for compiling the Index, Angela Foskett and Linda Gibbs for compiling the Tables of References and to Riaz Darr, Dan Leissner, Louise Etherington and Mark Ralph for help with cross-referencing.

The main work on this edition was completed in the first week of December 2002; later developments to March 2003 were (more briefly) incorporated at the proof stage. I am grateful to the publishers for making this possible and for their help in many other ways.

The first edition of this book was published over 40 years ago, and work on that edition had begun many years before then. For the whole of that time, I have found my work on the subject immensely enjoyable, largely because of the stimulus provided in this branch of the law by the subtlety and inventiveness of the courts, helped, no doubt, by the Bar. Nevertheless, and particularly while that enjoyment and my fascination with contract law have by no means diminished, I think that the time has come to pass the task to other hands. I am confident that it will be performed with distinction by Mr Edwin Peel, Fellow of Keble College, who has agreed to edit future editions; and I hope that he will find it as satisfying and enjoyable as I have done in writing this and the earlier editions.

GHT

April 28, 2003

CONTENTS

Preface	v
Table of Cases	xi
Table of Statutes	cxix
Table of Statutory Instruments	cxlix
Miscellaneous	cli
1. INTRODUCTION	1
2. AGREEMENT	8
1. Offer	8
2. Acceptance	16
3. Termination of Offer	41
4. Special Cases	47
5. Certainty	49
6. Conditional Agreements	62
3. CONSIDERATION	67
1. Introduction	67
2. Adequacy	73
3. Past Consideration	77
4. Consideration Must Move from the Promisee	81
5. Consideration Must be of Some Value	83
6. Rescission and Variation	99
7. Proprietary Estoppel	134
8. Special Cases	149
9. Promises in Deeds	158
10. Proposals for Reform	160
4. CONTRACTUAL INTENTION	162
1. Illustrations	162
2. Intention and Consideration	173
5. FORM	176
1. General Rule	176
2. Statutory Exceptions	177
3. Formal Requirements for Rescission and Variation	188
6. THE CONTENTS OF A CONTRACT	191
1. Express Terms	191
2. Implied Terms	201
7. STANDARD FORM CONTRACTS	215
1. Exemption Clauses at Common Law	216
2. Other Standard Terms at Common Law	244
3. Legislative Limitations on Effectiveness of Standard Terms	246
4. Other Legislative Techniques	283

8. MISTAKE	286
1. Mistake Nullifying Consent	286
2. Mistake Negating Consent	298
3. Mistake in Equity	310
4. Documents Mistakenly Signed	326
9. MISREPRESENTATION	330
1. Meaning of "Representation"	330
2. General Conditions of Liability	335
3. Damages for Misrepresentation	343
4. Rescission for Misrepresentation	369
5. Limits to the Right to Rescind	377
6. Excluding Liability for Misrepresentation	385
7. Non-Disclosure	390
8. Misrepresentation and Estoppel	403
10. DURESS AND UNDUE INFLUENCE	405
1. Duress at Common Law	405
2. Undue Influence in Equity	408
3. Moneylending and Consumer Protection	427
11. ILLEGALITY	429
1. The Problem of Classification	429
2. Types of Illegality	430
3. Effects of Illegality	480
12. STATUTORY INVALIDITY	513
1. In General	513
2. Gaming and Wagering Contracts	514
13. CAPACITY	539
1. Minors	539
2. Mental Patients	557
3. Drink and Drugs	559
4. Corporations	560
14. PLURALITY OF PARTIES	568
1. Plurality of Debtors	568
2. Plurality of Creditors	575
15. THIRD PARTIES	580
1. Introduction	580
2. The Common Law Doctrine	582
3. Scope	606
4. Exemption Clauses and Third Parties	626
5. Exceptions	645
16. ASSIGNMENT	672
1. At Common Law	672
2. Equitable Assignments	674
3. Statutory Assignments	675
4. General Requirements	678
5. Consideration	682
6. Subject to Equities	689
7. Negotiability	691

8. Rights which are not Assignable	693
9. Assignment by Operation of Law	699
10. Assignment Distinguished from Transfer of Liabilities	701
17. AGENCY	705
1. Definition	705
2. Capacity	709
3. Creation of Agency	710
4. Effects of Agency	727
5. Termination	748
18. PERFORMANCE	753
1. Method of Performance	753
2. Vicarious Performance	755
3. Rescission for Failure to Perform	759
4. Stipulations as to Time	826
19. BREACH	832
1. What Amounts to Breach	832
2. Effects of Breach	843
3. Repudiation before Performance is Due	857
20. FRUSTRATION	866
1. Development	866
2. Applications	869
3. Limitations	898
4. Effects of Frustration	909
5. Juristic Basis	920
21. REMEDIES	926
1. Damages	926
2. Action for an Agreed Sum	1013
3. Specific Relief in Equity	1019
4. Restitution	1049
Index	1065

TABLE OF CASES

20th Century Lites v Goodman 149 P. 2d. 88 (1944) .....	886	Acme Mills v Johnson 133 S.W. 784 (1911) .....	927
29 Equities v Bank Leumi (UK) Ltd [1986] 1 W.L.R. 1490; [1987] 1 All E.R. 108, CA ....	829	Acrow (Automation) v Rex Chainbelt Inc [1971] 1 W.L.R. 1676; [1971] 3 All E.R. 1175; 115 S.J. 642, CA .....	5
A v B (Copyright: Diary Pages) [2000] E.M.L.R. 1007, Ch D .....	444	Actionstrength Ltd (t/a Vital Resources) v International Glass Engineering SpA [2001] EWCA Civ 1477; [2002] 1 W.L.R. 566, CA .....	182
A Roberts & Co v Leicestershire CC [1961] Ch. 555; [1961] 2 W.L.R. 1000; [1961] 2 All E.R. 545; 59 L.G.R. 349; 105 S.J. 425, Ch D .....	322	Acton v Graham Pearce & Co [1997] 3 All E.R. 909, Ch D .....	956
A Schroeder Music Publishing Co Ltd v Macaulay (formerly Instone [1974] 1 W.L.R. 1308; [1974] 3 All E.R. 616; 118 S.J. 734, HL ... 215, 421, 454, 456, 458, 461, 462, 464, 470, 471, 1044		Adam v Newbigging (1888) L.R. 13 App. Cas. 308, HL; affirming (1887) L.R. 34 Ch. D. 582, CA .....	343, 368, 378, 380
A to Z Bazaars (Pty) Ltd v Minister of Agriculture 1974 (4) S.A. 392 (C) .....	28	Adamastos Shipping Co Ltd v Anglo Saxon Petroleum Co Ltd [1959] A.C. 133; [1958] 2 W.L.R. 688; [1958] 1 All E.R. 725; [1958] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 73; 102 S.J. 290, HL .....	191
AA Dickson & Co v O'Leary (1979) 254 E.G. 731; 124 S.J. 48, CA .....	742	Adams v Lindsall (1818) 1 B. & Ald. 681 ... 16, 24, 25, 41
Aaron's Reefs v Twiss [1896] A.C. 273, HL (UK-Irl) .....	339, 385, 394	Adams v Morgan [1924] 1 K.B. 751 .....	744
AB Marintrans v Comet Shipping Co Ltd (The Shinjitsu Maru No.5) [1985] 1 W.L.R. 1270; [1985] 3 All E.R. 442, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	982, 986	Adams v Richardson & Starling [1969] 1 W.L.R. 1645; [1969] 2 All E.R. 1221, CA .....	237
Abbott v Strong [1998] 2 B.C.L.C. 420; The Times , July 9, 1998, Ch D .....	347	Adams Holden & Pearson v Trent Regional Health Authority (1989) 47 Build.L.R. 34 .....	1061
Abbott v Sullivan; Abbott v Isett Cornporters Committee Members [1952] 1 K.B. 189; [1952] 1 All E.R. 226; [1951] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 573; [1952] 1 T.L.R. 133; 96 S.J. 119, CA .....	205, 210	Adamson v Jarvis (1827) 4 Bing. 66 .....	436
Aberfoyle Plantations Ltd v Cheng [1960] A.C. 115; [1959] 3 W.L.R. 1011, PC (FMS) .....	829	Addax Ltd v Arcadia Petroleum Ltd [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 493, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	953
Abrahams v Herbert Reisch Ltd [1922] 1 K.B. 477, CA .....	958	Adderley v Dixon (1824) 1 C. & S. 607 .....	1021, 1024
Abrahams v Performing Right Society Ltd [1995] I.C.R. 1028; [1995] I.R.L.R. 486, CA .....	749, 833	Addis v Gramophone Co Ltd [1909] A.C. 488, HL .....	987, 988, 991
Abu Dhabi National Tanker Co v Product Star Shipping (The Product Star) (No.2) 201; [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 397; The Times , December 29, 1992, CA .....	64, 807	Addison v Brown [1954] 1 W.L.R. 779; [1954] 2 All E.R. 213, QBD .....	447
Acetylene Co of GB v Canada Carbide Co (1922) 8 L.L.Rep. 456 .....	873, 882	Addison v Gandasequi (1812) 4 Taunt. 574 .....	737
Achille Lauro Fu Gioacchino & C v Total Societa Italiana Per Azioni [1969] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 65, CA .....	869	Adelfa, The See Adelfamar SA v Silos e Mangimi Martini SpA
Ackerman v Protim Services [1988] 2 E.G.L.R. 259; The Times , July 9, 1988, CA .....	221	Adelfamar SA v Silos e Mangimi Martini SpA (The Adelfa) [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 466, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	872, 891, 897, 905
		Aditya Vaibhav, The See Century Textiles and Industry Ltd v Tomoe Shipping Co (Singapore) Pte Ltd
		Adler v Dickson (No.1) [1955] 1 Q.B. 158; [1954] 3 W.L.R. 696, CA ... 627, 628, 629, 630, 631, 655
		Admiralty Commissioners v Owners of the SS Amerika [1917] A.C. 38, HL .....	591

- AEG Telefunken AG v Commission of the European Communities (107/82) [1983] E.C.R. 3151; [1984] 3 C.M.L.R. 325, EC] ..... 477
- Aegean Dolphin, The See Dolphin Hellas Shipping SA v Itemslot
- Aegean Sea Traders Corp v Repsol Petroleo SA (The Aegean Sea) [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 39; [1998] C.L.C. 1090, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 202
- Aegnoussiotis Shipping Corp of Monrovia v Kristian Jebsens Rederi of Bergen AS (The Aegnoussiotis) [1977] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 268, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 763
- Aello, The See Sociedad Financiera de Bienes Raices SA v Agrimpex Hungarian Trading Co for Agricultural Products
- Aerial Advertising v Batchelors Peas Ltd (Manchester) [1938] 2 All E.R. 788, KBD ..... 777, 816
- Afivos Shipping Co SA v R Pagnan & Fratelli (The Afivos) [1983] 1 W.L.R. 195; [1983] 1 All E.R. 449, HL ..... 754, 778, 779, 780, 796, 854, 861
- AG Securities v Vaughan; Antoniadis v Villiers [1990] 1 A.C. 417; [1988] 3 W.L.R. 1205, HL ..... 172, 195
- Agapitos v Agnew (The Aegeon) (No.1) [2002] EWCA Civ 247; [2002] 3 W.L.R. 616, CA ..... 336, 392
- Agathon, The See Kissavos Shipping Co SA v Empresa Cubana de Fletes
- Aggeliki Charis Compania Maritima SA v Pagnan SpA (The Angelic Grace) [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 87, CA ..... 984
- Agia Skepi, The See Compania Continental del Peru SA v Evelpis Shipping Corp
- Agip SpA v Navigazione Alta Italia SpA (The Nai Genova and The Nai Superba) [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 353, CA ..... 109, 322, 340, 403
- Agius v Great Western Colliery Co [1899] 1 Q.B. 413, CA ..... 979
- Agnew v Lansforsakringsbolagens AB [2001] 1 A.C. 223; [2000] 2 W.L.R. 497, HL ..... 397
- Agra Bank Ex p. Tondeur, Re (1867-68) L.R. 5 Eq. 160, Ct of Chancery ..... 834
- Agra Bank, Re (1868) L.R. 3 Ch.App. 555 ..... 680
- Agrabele (No.2), The See Gebr Van Weelde Scheepvaart Kantoor BV v Compania Naviera Sea Orient SA
- Agricultores Federados Argentinos Sociedad Cooperativa v Ampro SA Commerciale, Industrielle et Financiere [1965] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 157, QBD ..... 754
- Agroexport State Enterprise for Foreign Trade v Compagnie Europeene de Cereales [1974] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 499, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 65
- Agrokor AG v Tradigrain SA [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 497, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 808, 848, 883, 901
- Agrosin Pty Ltd v Highway Shipping Co Ltd (The Mata K) [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 614; [1998] C.L.C. 1300, QBD (Comm Ct) .... 387
- AIB Group (UK) plc (formerly Allied Irish Banks plc and AIB Finance Ltd) v Martin [2001] UKHL 63; [2002] 1 W.L.R. 94, HL ..... 192, 193, 194, 198
- Aiken v Stewart Wrightson Members Agency Ltd [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 577; [1997] 6 Re. L.R. 79, CA; affirming [1995] 1 W.L.R. 1281; [1995] 3 All E.R. 449, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 608, 748, 758, 984
- Ailion v Spiekermann [1976] Ch. 158; [1976] 2 W.L.R. 556, Ch D ..... 434, 491, 505
- Ailsa Craig Fishing Co Ltd v Malvern Fishing Co Ltd (The Strathallan) [1983] 1 W.L.R. 964; [1983] 1 All E.R. 101, HL ..... 215, 222, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237
- Aiolos, The See Central Insurance Co Ltd v Seacalf Shipping Corp
- Ajayi (t/a Colony Carrier Co) v RT Briscoe (Nigeria) Ltd [1964] 1 W.L.R. 1326; [1964] 3 All E.R. 556; 108 S.J. 857, PC (Nig) ..... 131, 132
- Aker Oil & Gas Technology UK plc v Sovereign Corporate Ltd [2002] C.L.C. 557, QBD (T&CC) ..... 403
- Akerhielm v De Mare [1959] A.C. 789; [1959] 3 W.L.R. 108, PC (EA) ..... 335
- Akiens v Salomon (1993) 65 P. & C.R. 364; [1993] 14 E.G. 97; [1992] E.G.C.S. 131, CA
- Aktieselskabet de Danske Sukkerfabrikker v Bajamar Compania Naviera SA (The Torcenia) [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 210, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 795
- Aktion Maritime Corp of Liberia v S Kamas & Brothers (The Aktion) [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 283, QBD (Comm Ct) .... 673, 789, 796, 807, 962
- Aktion, The See Aktion Maritime Corp of Liberia v S Kamas & Brothers
- Al Nakib Investments (Jersey) Ltd v Longcroft [1990] 1 W.L.R. 1390; [1990] 3 All E.R. 321, Ch D ..... 347
- Al Saudi Banque v Clarke Pixley (A Firm) [1990] Ch. 313; [1990] 2 W.L.R. 344, Ch D ..... 342, 345, 347
- Al Tawfiq, The See Linnett Bay Shipping Co Ltd v Patraicos Gulf Shipping Co SA
- Alan Estates Ltd v WG Stores Ltd [1982] Ch. 511; [1981] 3 W.L.R. 892; [1981] 3 All E.R. 481; (1982) 43 P. & C.R. 19; (1981) 260 E.G. 173; 125 S.J. 567, CA ..... 63, 159, 160
- Albazero, The See Owners of Cargo Laden on Board the Albacruz v Owners of the Albazero
- Albert v Motor Insurers Bureau [1972] A.C. 301; [1971] 3 W.L.R. 291; [1971] 2 All E.R. 1345, HL ..... 164
- Albion Sugar Co v William Tankers [1977] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 457, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 762

- Alder v Moore* [1961] 2 Q.B. 57; [1961] 2 W.L.R. 426, CA ..... 464, 1004
- Alderslade v Hendon Laundry Ltd* [1945] K.B. 189; [1945] 1 All E.R. 244, CA ..... 224, 840
- Alec Lobb Garages Ltd v Total Oil Great Britain Ltd* [1985] 1 W.L.R. 173; [1985] 1 All E.R. 303, CA; affirming [1983] 1 W.L.R. 87, Ch D .... 407, 421, 423, 453, 461, 471, 473, 509, 510
- Alecos M, The See Sealace Shipping Co Ltd v Oceanvoice Ltd*
- Alev, The See Vantage Navigation Corp v Suhail and Saud Bahwan Building Materials*
- Alex Lawrie Factors Ltd v Modern Injection Moulds Ltd* [1981] 3 All E.R. 658, QBD ..... 994
- Alexander v Gibson* (1811) 2 Camp. 555 ..... 711
- Alexander v Railway Executive* [1951] 2 K.B. 882; [1951] 2 All E.R. 442, KBD .... 217, 231
- Alexander v Rayson* [1936] 1 K.B. 169; 114 A.L.R. 357, CA ..... 450, 482, 483
- Alexander v Rolls Royce Motor Cars Ltd* [1996] R.T.R. 95; The Times, May 4, 1995, CA ..... 990
- Alexander v Standard Telephones & Cables Ltd (No.1); Wall v Standard Telephones & Cables Ltd (No.1)* [1990] I.C.R. 291; [1990] I.R.L.R. 55 ..... 214
- Alexander v Steinhart Walker & Co* [1903] 2 K.B. 208, KBD (Comm Ct) ..... 680, 1042
- Alexander Hamilton Institute v Jones* 234 Ill. App. (1924) ..... 33
- Alf Vaughan & Co Ltd (In Receivership) v Royscot Trust plc* [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm.) 856, Ch D ..... 406
- Alfred C Toepfer International GmbH v Itex Itagrani Export SA* [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 360, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 857
- Alfred McAlpine Construction Ltd v Panatown Ltd (No.1)* [2001] 1 A.C. 518; [2000] 3 W.L.R. 946, HL ... 580, 591, 592, 593, 594, 596, 597, 598, 599, 600, 601, 602, 603, 644, 654, 934, 993, 1000
- Alfred McAlpine Construction Ltd v Panatown Ltd (No.2)* [2001] EWCA Civ 485; 76 Con. L.R. 224, CA ..... 57, 599, 654
- Alfred McAlpine plc v BAI (Run-Off) Ltd* [2000] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 545; [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 437, CA ..... 789, 790, 795, 799, 800, 810
- Alghussein Establishment v Eton College* [1988] 1 W.L.R. 587; [1991] 1 All E.R. 267, HL ..... 844
- Ali v Christian Salvesen Food Services Ltd* [1997] I.C.R. 25; [1997] I.R.L.R. 17, CA ..... 204
- Ali Shipping Corp v Shipyard Trogir* [1999] 1 W.L.R. 314; [1998] 2 All E.R. 136; [1998] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 643; [1998] C.L.C. 566, CA ..... 203, 207, 208
- Aliakmon, The See Leigh and Sullivan Ltd v Aliakmon Shipping Co Ltd*
- Alicia Hosiery v Brown Shipley & Co* [1970] 1 Q.B. 195; [1969] 2 W.L.R. 1268, QBD ..... 404, 584
- Al-Kandari v JR Brown & Co* [1988] Q.B. 665; [1988] 2 W.L.R. 671, CA ..... 608
- Allcard v Skinner* (1887) L.R. 36 Ch. D. 145, CA ..... 409, 410, 412, 418, 419, 424
- Allcard v Walker* [1896] 2 Ch. 369, Ch D .... 311, 314, 315
- Allen v Bloomsbury HA* [1993] 1 All E.R. 651; [1992] P.I.Q.R. Q50; [1992] 3 Med. L.R. 257, QBD ..... 5, 540, 841
- Allen v Hearn* (1785) 1 T.R. 56 ..... 519
- Allen v Pink* (1838) 4 M. & W. 140 ..... 193
- Allen v Rescous* (1676) 2 Lev. 174 ..... 432
- Allen v Robles* [1969] 1 W.L.R. 1193; [1969] 3 All E.R. 154, CA ..... 788, 813
- Allen v Waters & Co* [1935] 1 K.B. 200, CA .... 606
- Alliance Bank v Broom* (1864) 2 Dr. & Sm. 289 ..... 90, 91
- Alliance & Leicester Building Society v Edge-stop Ltd (Application for Leave)* LTA 94/5856/B, CA; affirming [1993] 1 W.L.R. 1462; [1994] 2 All E.R. 38, Ch D ..... 340
- Alliance Paper Group plc v Prestwich (No.1)* [1996] I.R.L.R. 25, Ch D ... 458, 459, 461, 466
- Allied Dunbar (Frank Weisinger) Ltd v Frank Weisinger* [1988] I.R.L.R. 60; The Times, November 17, 1987 ..... 458, 462
- Allied Irish Bank plc v Byrne* [1995] 2 F.L.R. 325; [1995] 1 F.C.R. 430, Ch D ..... 418, 425
- Allied Maples Group Ltd v Simmons & Simmons* [1995] 1 W.L.R. 1602; [1995] 4 All E.R. 907, CA ..... 955, 956
- Allied Marine Transport v Vale do Rio Doce Navegacao SA (The Leonidas D)* [1985] 1 W.L.R. 925; [1985] 2 All E.R. 796, CA ..... 9, 10, 22, 32, 35, 87, 109, 403
- Allison v Clayhills* (1907) 97 L.T. 709 ..... 412, 419
- Allkins v Jupe* (1876-77) L.R. 2 C.P.D. 375, CPD ..... 513
- Alloway v Phillips (Inspector of Taxes)* [1980] 1 W.L.R. 888; [1980] 3 All E.R. 138, CA ..... 674
- Allseas International Management v Panroy Bulk Transport SA (The Star Gazer and The Star Delta)* [1985] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 370, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 1023
- Alluhsen v Borries* (1867) 15 W.R. 739 ..... 1036
- Allwood v Clifford* [2002] F.M.L.R. 3, Ch D ..... 746
- Almare Seconda and Almare Quinta, The See Blackgold Trading of Monrovia v Almare SpA Navigazione of Genoa*
- Alpenstow Ltd v Regalian Properties plc* [1985] 1 W.L.R. 721; [1985] 2 All E.R. 545, Ch D ..... 54, 1034

Alpha Trading Ltd v Dunnshaw-Patten Ltd [1981] Q.B. 290; [1981] 2 W.L.R. 169, CA; affirming [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 284, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	66, 205, 741, 744
Alsabah Maritime Services Co Ltd v Philippine International Shipping Corp [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 291; (1984) 134 N.L.J. 124, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	998
Aluminium Corporation of America v Essex Group Inc 499 F.Supp. 53 (1980) ....	868, 884
Amalgamated Investment & Property Co Ltd (In Liquidation) v Texas Commerce International Bank Ltd [1982] Q.B. 84; [1981] 3 W.L.R. 565, CA .....	115, 120, 121, 122, 123, 135, 137, 148, 198, 298, 335
Amalgamated Investment & Property Co Ltd v John Walker & Sons Ltd [1977] 1 W.L.R. 164; [1976] 3 All E.R. 509, CA .....	313, 886, 895, 905
Amalgamated Metal Trading Ltd v Department of Trade and Industry; The Times , March 21, 1989; The Financial Times , February 28, 1989, QBD .....	332, 349
Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants v Osborne (No.1) [1910] A.C. 87, HL .....	451
Amantilla v Telefusion 9 Con. L.R. 139 .....	127
Amar Singh v Kulubya [1964] A.C. 142; [1963] 3 W.L.R. 513, PC (EA) .....	498
Amazonia, The See Furness Withy (Australia) Ltd v Metal Distributors (UK) Ltd ( The Amazonia ) .....
AMB Imballaggi Plastici Srl v Pacflex Ltd [1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 249; [1999] C.L.C. 1391, CA .....	706
Amec Civil Engineering Ltd v Cheshire CC [1999] B.L.R. 303, QBD (T&CC) .....	981
Amec Properties v Planning Research & Systems [1992] B.C.L.C. 1149; [1992] 1 E.G.L.R. 70, CA .....	1021, 1023
Amerena v Barling (1995) 69 P. & C.R. 252; [1993] E.G.C.S. 111, CA .....	959
American Accord, The See United City Merchants (Investments) Ltd v Royal Bank of Canada .....
American Airline v Hope; sub nom. Banque Sabbag SAI v Hope [1974] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 301, HL; affirming [1973] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 233, CA .....	57
American Cyanamid Co v Ethicon Ltd [1975] A.C. 396; [1975] 2 W.L.R. 316, HL .....	1041
American Trading and Production Corp v Shell International Marine Ltd ( The Washington Trader ) [1972] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 463, US Ct .....	880
Amer-UDC Finance Ltd v Austin (1986) 162 C.I.R. 170 .....	853
Amherst v James Walker Goldsmith & Silver-smith Ltd [1983] Ch. 305; [1983] 3 W.L.R. 334, CA .....	9, 10, 109, 116, 828
Amicable Soc v Bolland (1830) 4 Bligh (N.S.) 194 .....	438
Amiri Flight Authority v BAE Systems plc [2002] EWHC 2481; [2003] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 1, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	266
Amoco Australian Pty Ltd v Rocca Bros Motor Engineering Co Pty Ltd [1975] A.C. 561; [1975] 2 W.L.R. 779, HC (Aus); (1973) 47 A.L.J.R. 681 .....	453, 473, 481, 509
Amsprop Trading Ltd v Harris Distribution Ltd [1997] 1 W.L.R. 1025; [1997] 2 All E.R. 990, Ch D .....	589, 670, 703
Anangel Atlas Compania Naviera SA v Ishikawajima-Harima Heavy Industries Co (No.2) [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 526, QBD (Comm Ct) ....	49, 95, 126, 128, 193, 197, 746
ANC Ltd v Clark Goldring & Page Ltd [2001] B.C.C. 479; [2001] B.P.I.R. 568, CA .....	431
Anchor Line v Keith Rowell ( The Hazelmoor ) [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 351, CA .....	808, 860
Ancienne Maison Marcel Bauche SA v Woodhouse Drake and Carey (Sugar) Ltd; Ancienne Maison Marcel Bauche SA v EF Hutton & Co (London) Ltd [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 516; [1983] E.C.C. 405, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	435, 484
Ancil v Manufacturers Life Insurance Co [1899] A.C. 604, PC (Can) .....	446
And So To Bed Ltd v Dixon [2001] F.S.R. 47, Ch D .....	592
Andersen v Fitzgerald (1853) 4 H.L.C. 484 ....	337
Anderson v Corporation of Lloyd's (No.2) [1992] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 627 .....	202
Anderson v Martindale (1801) 1 East 497 ....	571, 575, 576
Anderson v Pacific Fire & Marine Insurance Co (1872) L.R. 7 C.P. 65 .....	330
Anderson v Thornton (1853) 8 Exch. 425 ....	373
Anderson & Sons Ltd v Rhodes (Liverpool) Ltd See WB Anderson & Sons Ltd v Rhodes (Liverpool) Ltd .....
Anderson Ltd v Daniel [1924] 1 K.B. 138, CA .....	433
Anderton v Rowland The Times , November 5, 1999 .....	48, 585
Andre et Cie SA v Cook Industries Inc [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 463, CA .....	8, 836
Andre et Cie SA v Etablissements Michel Blanc et Fils [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 427, [1977] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 166, QBD (Comm Ct) CA .....	333, 334, 335, 360, 402
Andre et Cie SA v Marine Transocean Ltd ( The Splendid Sun ) [1981] Q.B. 694; [1981] 3 W.L.R. 43, CA ....	8, 9, 35, 809, 905
Andre et Cie SA v Tradax Export SA The Times , January 21, 1983, HL; [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 254, CA .....	883
Andrew Miller & Co v Taylor & Co Ltd [1916] 1 K.B. 402 .....	888, 891
Andrews v Hopkinson [1957] 1 Q.B. 229; [1956] 3 W.L.R. 732, Assizes (Leeds) .....	583
Andrews v Ramsay & Co [1903] 2 K.B. 635, KBD .....	746

- Andrews Bros (Bournemouth) Ltd v Singer & Co Ltd [1934] 1 K.B. 17, CA ..... 221, 227
- Aneco Reinsurance Underwriting Ltd (In Liquidation) v Johnson & Higgins [2001] UKHL 51; [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 929, HL; affirming [1998] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 565, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 395, 939
- Anemone, The See Clipper Maritime Ltd v Shirlstar Container Transport Ltd (The Anemone)
- Angel Bell, The [1981] Q.B. 65 ..... 482, 483
- Angel v Jay [1911] 1 K.B. 666, KBD ..... 377
- Angelia, The See Trade and Transport Inc v Iino Kaiun Kaisha Ltd
- Angelic Grace, The See Aggeliki Charis Compania Maritima SA v Pagnan SpA
- Angelic Star, The See Oresundsväret AB v Lemos
- Angell v Duke (1874-75) L.R. 10 Q.B. 174, QBD ..... 180, 200, 356
- Anglia Television Ltd v Reed [1972] 1 Q.B. 60; [1971] 3 W.L.R. 528, CA ..... 940, 942
- Anglian Water Services Ltd v Crawshaw Robbins & Co Ltd [2001] B.L.R. 173; [2001] N.P.C. 32, QBD ..... 979, 985
- Anglo African Merchants Ltd v Bayley; Exmouth Clothing Co Ltd v Bayley [1970] 1 Q.B. 311; [1969] 2 W.L.R. 686, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 709, 746
- Anglo African Shipping Co of New York Inc v J Mortner Ltd [1962] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 81, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 1017
- Anglo Auto Finance Co v James [1963] 1 W.L.R. 1042; [1963] 3 All E.R. 566, CA ..... 1005
- Anglo Continental Holidays v Typaldos (London) [1967] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 61; 111 S.J. 599, CA ..... 227, 253, 992
- Anglo Russian Merchant Traders Ltd and John Batt & Co (London) Ltd, Re [1917] 2 K.B. 679, CA ..... 65
- Angus v Clifford [1891] 2 Ch. 449, CA ..... 344
- Ankers v Bartlett [1936] 1 K.B. 147, KBD ..... 518
- Annadale v Harris (1727) 2 P.Wms. 432 ..... 443
- Annangel Glory Compania Naviera SA v M Golodetz Ltd (The Annangel Glory) [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 45; [1988] P.C.C. 37, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 683
- Annangel Glory, The See Annangel Glory Compania Naviera SA v M Golodetz Ltd
- Anns v Merton LBC [1978] A.C. 728; [1977] 2 W.L.R. 1024, HL ..... 610
- Anonima Petroli Italiana SpA and Neste Oy v Marlucidez Armadora SA (The Filiatra Legacy) [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 337, CA ..... 613
- Anscombe & Ringland v Butchoff (1984) 134 N.L.J. 37 ..... 459, 508
- Anscombe & Ringland v Watson [1991] 2 E.G.L.R. 28; [1991] 38 E.G. 230 ..... 741
- Antaios Compania Naviera SA v Salen Rederierna AB (The Antaios) [1985] A.C. 191; [1984] 3 W.L.R. 592, HL ..... 779, 795, 979
- Antaios, The See Antaios Compania Naviera SA v Salen Rederierna AB
- Antama, The See Marina Shipping v Laughton
- Antares, The See Kenya Railways v Antares Co Pte Ltd
- Antelizo, The See Food Corp of India v Antelizo Shipping Corp (The Antelizo)
- Anthony v Wright [1996] 1 B.C.L.C. 238 ..... 346
- Antonis P Lemos, The See Samick Lines Co v Owners of the Antonis P Lemos
- Antrobus v Smith (1805) 12 Ves. 39 ..... 685
- Antwerpen, The See Glebe Island Terminals Pty v Continental Seagram Pty (The Antwerpen)
- Anwar Al Sabar, The See Gulf Steel Co Ltd v Al Khalifa Shipping Co Ltd
- Apex Supply Co, Re [1942] Ch. 108, Ch D ..... 1005
- Apley Estates Co Ltd v De Bernales [1947] Ch. 217; [1947] 1 All E.R. 213, CA ..... 573
- Appleby v Myers (1867) L.R. 2 C.P. 651 ..... 870, 871, 913, 915
- Appleby v Sleep [1968] 1 W.L.R. 948; [1968] 2 All E.R. 265; 66 L.G.R. 555; 112 S.J. 380, DC ..... 5
- Applegarth v Colley (1842) 10 M. & W. 723 ..... 518, 528, 531
- Applegate v Moss [1971] 1 Q.B. 406; [1971] 2 W.L.R. 541, CA ..... 961
- Appleson v Littlewoods [1939] 1 All E.R. 464 ..... 163
- Appleton v Binks (1804) 5 East 148 ..... 736
- Appleton v Campbell (1826) 2 C. & P. 347 ..... 444
- Aquis Estates Ltd v Minton [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1452; [1975] 3 All E.R. 1043, CA ..... 812
- AR Dennis & Co Ltd v Campbell [1978] Q.B. 365; [1978] 2 W.L.R. 429, CA ..... 524
- Arab Bank plc v John D Wood (Commercial) Ltd [2000] 1 W.L.R. 857; [2000] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 471, CA ..... 981
- Arab Bank plc v Zurich Insurance Co; Banque Bruxelles Lambert SA v Zurich Insurance Co [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 262; [1998] C.L.C. 1351, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 577
- Arab Monetary Fund v Hashim [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 543 ..... 747
- Aragon, The [1991] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 61 ..... 799
- Aramis, The [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 213; The Financial Times, November 22, 1988, CA ..... 8, 47, 70, 97, 169, 171, 174, 210
- Aratra Potato Co Ltd v Taylor Joynson Garrett [1995] 4 All E.R. 695; (1995) 145 N.L.J. 1402, QBD ..... 431
- Arawa, The See Producers Meats Ltd v Shaw Savill & Albion Co Ltd
- Arbitration between Comptoir Commercial Anversois and Power Son & Co, Re [1920] 1 K.B. 868; (1919) 1 Ll. L. Rep. 266, CA ..... 201, 202, 885, 897, 901
- Arbitration between R & H Hall Ltd and WH Pim Junior & Co Ltd, Re See R & H Hall Ltd v WH Pim Junr & Co Ltd

- Archbolds (Freightage) Ltd v S Spanglett Ltd
[1961] 1 Q.B. 374; [1961] 2 W.L.R. 170,
CA ..... 486, 487, 488
- Archer v Brown [1985] Q.B. 401; [1984] 3
W.L.R. 350, QBD ... 340, 343, 357, 358, 360,
362, 936, 968, 975, 987
- Archer v Hudson (1846) 15 L.J.Ch. 211 ..... 412
- Archer v Stone (1898) 78 L.T. 34 ..... 729
- Arcos Ltd v Aronson (1930) 36 Ll. L. Rep.
108, KBD ..... 59
- Arcos Ltd v EA Ronaasen & Son [1933] A.C.
470; (1933) 45 Ll. L. Rep. 33, HL ..... 776, 793, 802, 825, 836
- Arctic Shipping Co Ltd v Mobilia AB (The Tatra) [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 51, QBD
(Comm Ct) ..... 399, 403, 716
- Ardennes, The See Owners of Cargo Lately Laden on Board the Ardennes v Owners of the Ardennes
- Arenson v Arenson See Arenson v Casson
Beckman Rutley & Co
- Arenson v Casson Beckman Rutley & Co
[1977] A.C. 405; [1975] 3 W.L.R. 815,
HL ..... 346, 983
- Argens v Whitcomb 147 P. 2d. 501 ..... 1056
- Argo Caribbean Group v Lewis [1976] 2
Lloyd's Rep. 289, CA ..... 181
- Argo Hellas, The See Richard Adler (t/a Argo Rederei) v Sutos (Hellas) Maritime Corp
- Argonaut, The See Neptune Maritime Co of Monrovia v Koninklijke Bunge BV
- Argy Trading Development Co v Lapid Developments [1977] 1 W.L.R. 444; [1977] 3
All E.R. 785, QBD ..... 68, 113, 116, 156, 393
- Aries, The See Aries Tanker Corp v Total Transport Ltd
- Aries Tanker Corp v Total Transport Ltd (The Aries) [1977] 1 W.L.R. 185; [1977] 1 All
E.R. 398, HL ..... 785, 788
- Ariston Srl v Charly Records Ltd Financial Times, March 21, 1990 ..... 1002
- Armagas Ltd v Mundogas SA (The Ocean Frost) [1986] A.C. 717; [1986] 2 W.L.R.
1063, HL ..... 712, 713, 714, 716
- Armhouse Lee Ltd v Chappell The Times,
August 7, 1996; The Independent, July 26,
1996, CA ..... 444
- Armitage v Nurse (Exclusion Clauses) [1998]
Ch. 241; [1997] 3 W.L.R. 1046; [1997] 2
All E.R. 705; (1997) 74 P. & C.R. D13; The Times, March 31, 1997; The Independent,
April 11, 1997, CA ..... 222, 344
- Armstrong v Jackson [1917] 2 K.B. 822 ..... 378, 385, 399, 745
- Armstrong v Sheppard & Short [1959] 2 Q.B.
384; [1959] 3 W.L.R. 84, CA ..... 136, 143
- Armstrong v Stokes (1872) L.R. 7 Q.B. 598 .... 731
- Armstrong v Strain [1952] 1 K.B. 232; [1952]
1 All E.R. 139, CA ..... 344
- Armstrong & Holmes Ltd v Holmes; Armstrong & Holmes Ltd v Dodds [1993] 1
W.L.R. 1482; [1994] 1 All E.R. 826, Ch
D ..... 153
- Arnhold Karberg & Co v Blythe Green Jour-dain & Co; Theodor Schneider & Co v
Burgett & Newsam [1916] 1 K.B. 495,
CA ..... 297, 481
- Arnison v Smith (1889) L.R. 41 Ch. D. 348,
CA ..... 352
- Aron & Co Inc v Comptoir Wegimont SA
[1921] 3 K.B. 435; (1921) 8 Ll. L. Rep.
236, KBD ..... 804
- Aroso v Coutts & Co [2002] 1 All E.R.
(Comm) 241; [2001] W.T.L.R. 797, Ch
D ..... 578
- Arpad, The (No.2) [1934] P. 189; (1934) 49 Ll.
L. Rep. 313, CA ..... 953, 954
- Arrale v Costain Civil Engineer [1976] 1
Lloyd's Rep. 98; (1975) 119 S.J. 527, CA .... 84, 127, 131, 134, 197, 422
- Arras and Hoegh Rover, The See Mosvolds
Rederi A/S v Food Corp of India
- Arta, The See Markappa Inc v NW Spratt & Son
- Arthur JS Hall & Co v Simons [2002] 1 A.C.
615; [2000] 3 W.L.R. 543, HL ..... 78, 347, 480
- Arthur White (Contractors) Ltd v Tarmac
Civil Engineering Ltd; sub nom. Spalding
v Tarmac Civil Engineering Ltd [1967] 1
W.L.R. 1508; [1967] 3 All E.R. 586; 111
S.J. 831, HL ..... 224
- Artistic Upholstery Ltd v Art Forma (Furniture) Ltd [1999] 4 All E.R. 277; [2000]
F.S.R. 311; (1999) 22(12) I.P.D. 22118; The Times, September 21, 1999, Ch D ..... 48
- Aruna Mills Ltd v Dhanrajmal Gobindram
[1968] 1 Q.B. 655; [1968] 2 W.L.R. 101,
QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 788, 826, 980
- Asfar & Co v Blundell [1896] 1 Q.B. 123, CA;
affirming [1895] 2 Q.B. 196, QBD ..... 870
- Ashburn Anstalt v WJ Arnold & Co [1989] Ch.
1; [1988] 2 W.L.R. 706, CA ..... 39, 50, 607,
1021
- Ashbury Railway Carriage & Iron Co Ltd v
Riche (1874-75) L.R. 7 H.L. 653, HL ..... 560, 724
- Ashby v Costin (1888) L.R. 21 Q.B.D. 401,
QBD ..... 604
- Ashington Piggeries Ltd v Christopher Hill
Ltd [1972] A.C. 441 ..... 968
- Ashmore v Corp of Lloyd's (No.2) [1992] 2
Lloyd's Rep. 620; The Times, July 17, 1992,
QBD (Comm Ct) .... 205, 207, 208, 209, 211,
984
- Ashmore Benson Pease & Co Ltd v AV Dawson Ltd [1973] 1 W.L.R. 828; [1973] 2 All
E.R. 856, CA ..... 433, 484, 504
- Ashton v Corrigan (1871) L.R. 13 Eq. 76 ..... 1021
- Ashton v Turner [1981] Q.B. 137; [1980] 3
W.L.R. 736, QBD ..... 432, 483

- Ashville Investments Ltd v Elmer Contractors Ltd [1989] Q.B. 488; [1988] 3 W.L.R. 867, CA ..... 324
- Askey v Golden Wine Co Ltd [1948] 2 All E.R. 35; 64 T.L.R. 379, KBD ..... 435
- Aspden v Seddon (No.2) (1876) 1 Ex.D. 496 ..... 702
- Aspden v Webbs Poultry & Meat Group (Holdings) Ltd [1996] I.R.L.R. 521, QBD ..... 202
- Aspinalls to Powell and Scholefield (1889) 60 L.T. 595 ..... 772
- Associated British Ports v Transport and General Workers Union [1989] 1 W.L.R. 939; [1989] 3 All E.R. 822, HL ..... 4
- Associated Distributors Ltd v Hall [1938] 2 K.B. 83, CA ..... 1005
- Associated Japanese Bank (International) Ltd v Credit du Nord SA [1989] 1 W.L.R. 255; [1988] 3 All E.R. 902, QBD .... 204, 255, 290, 291, 292, 293, 295, 296, 298, 319, 321, 924
- Association of British Travel Agents Ltd v British Airways plc [2000] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 204; [2000] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 209, CA; affirming [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 169, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 202
- Asilleros Canarios SA v Cape Hatteras Shipping Co Inc (The Cape Hatteras) [1982] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 518, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 733
- Astley v Austrust Ltd [1999] Lloyd's Rep. P.N. 758 ..... 986
- Astley v Reynolds (1731) 2 Str. 915 ..... 407
- Astley v Weldon (1801) 2 B. & P. 346 ..... 1002
- Astley Industrial Trust v Grimley [1963] 1 W.L.R. 584; [1963] 2 All E.R. 33, CA ... 227, 583, 791, 805
- Astra Trust v Adams and Williams [1969] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 81, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 64
- Astro Exitto Navegacion SA v Southland Enterprise Co (The Messiniaki Tolmi) (No.2) [1983] 2 A.C. 787; [1983] 3 W.L.R. 130, HL ..... 1019, 1022
- Asty Maritime Co Ltd v Rocco Guiseppe & Figli SNC (The Astyanax) [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 109, CA ..... 17, 723, 728
- Astyanax, The See Asty Maritime Co Ltd v Rocco Guiseppe & Figli SNC
- Ateni Maritime Corp v Great Marine Ltd (The Great Marine) (No.2) [1991] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 421, CA; reversing [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 250, QBD (Comm Ct) .... 55, 779, 813
- Athenaeum Soc v Pooley (1853) 3 D. & J. 294 ..... 689
- Athenasia Comminos, The [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 277 ..... 838
- Athenian Harmony, The See Derby Resources AG v Blue Corinth Marine Co Ltd
- Athos, The See Telfair Shipping Corp v Athos Shipping Co SA (The Athos)
- Atisa SA v Aztec AG [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 579, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 867, 889, 920
- Atkins v Hill (1775) 1 Cowp. 284 ..... 79
- Atkinson v Denby (1862) 7 H. & N. 934 ..... 492, 495
- Atlantic Baron, The See North Ocean Shipping Co v Hyundai Construction Co (The Atlantic Baron)
- Atlantic Estates plc v Ezekiel [1991] 2 E.G.L.R. 202; [1991] 33 E.G. 118 ..... 358
- Atlantic Lines & Navigation Co Inc v Didymi Corp (The Didymi); Atlantic Lines & Navigation Co Inc v Leon Corp (The Leon) [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 583; (1984) 81 L.S.G. 740, CA ..... 893
- Atlantic Lines & Navigation Co Inc v Hallam Ltd (The Lucy) [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 188, QBD (Comm Ct) .... 338, 358, 359, 380, 394
- Atlantic Marine Transport Corp v Coscol Petroleum Corp (The Pina) [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 103, CA; affirming [1991] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 246, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 54, 324, 325
- Atlantic Shipping and Trading Co Ltd v Louis Dreyfus & Co (The Quantock [1922] 2 A.C. 250; (1922) 10 Ll. L. Rep. 707, HL ..... 100, 103, 447
- Atlas Express Ltd v Kafco (Importers and Distributors) Ltd [1989] Q.B. 833; [1989] 3 W.L.R. 389, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 94, 406
- Atlas Maritime Co SA v Avalon Maritime Ltd (The Coral Rose) (No.1) [1991] 4 All E.R. 769; [1991] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 563, CA ..... 706
- Atlas Shipping Agency (UK) Ltd v Suisse Atlantique Societe d'Armement Maritime SA (The Gulf Grain and The El Amaan) [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 188; [1995] I.L.Pr. 600, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 646, 649
- Atlee v Backhouse (1838) 3 M. & W. 633 ..... 407
- Attfield v DJ Plant Hire & General Contractors Co Ltd [1987] Ch. 141; [1986] 3 W.L.R. 432, Ch D ..... 1021
- Att-Gen of Australia v Adelaide Steamship [1913] A.C. 781, PC (Aus) ..... 462
- Att-Gen of Ceylon v Silva (AD) [1953] A.C. 461; [1953] 2 W.L.R. 1185, PC (Cey) .... 713, 717
- Att-Gen of Ghana v Texaco Overseas Tankships Ltd (The Texaco Melbourne) [1994] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 473, HL; affirming [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 471, CA; reversing [1992] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 303, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 948, 953, 959
- Att-Gen v Barker [1990] 3 All E.R. 257; The Independent, August 24, 1990, CA ..... 455, 460, 1040, 1041
- Att-Gen v Blake [2001] 1 A.C. 268; [2000] 3 W.L.R. 625, HL .... 60, 320, 456, 502, 929, 930, 931, 932, 936, 1046

- Att-Gen v Guardian Newspapers Ltd (No.2);
Att-Gen v Observer Ltd (No.2); Att-Gen v
Times Newspapers Ltd (No.2) [1990] 1
A.C. 109; [1988] 3 W.L.R. 776, HL ..... 444, 455, 456, 928
- Att-Gen v Luncheon and Sports Club Ltd
[1929] A.C. 400, HL ..... 515
- Att-Gen v Tomline (No.2) (1877-78) L.R. 7
Ch. D. 388, Ch D ..... 318
- Att-Gen of Hong Kong v Humphreys Estate
(Queen's Gardens) Ltd [1987] A.C. 114;
[1987] 2 W.L.R. 343, PC (HK) ... 53, 119, 135, 139, 140, 141
- Att-Gen of Hong Kong v Reid [1994] 1 A.C.
324; [1993] 3 W.L.R. 1143, PC (NZ) ..... 745, 746, 747, 928
- Att-Gen's Reference (No.1 of 1985) [1986]
Q.B. 491 ..... 747
- Attia v British Gas plc [1988] Q.B. 304; [1987]
3 W.L.R. 1101, CA ..... 993
- Attica Sea Carriers Corp v Ferrostaal Poseidon Bulk Reederei GmbH (The Puerto Buitrago) [1976] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 250; The Times, November 25, 1975, CA ..... 204, 795, 944, 1014, 1016, 1017
- Attika Hope, The See G & N Angelakis Shipping Co SA v Compagnie National Algerienne de Navigation (The Attika Hope)
- Attorney General's Reference (No.1 of 1985),
Re [1986] Q.B. 491; [1986] 2 W.L.R. 733,
CA (Crim Div) ..... 718
- Attwood v Lamont [1920] 3 K.B. 571, CA ..... 456, 460, 464, 508, 509
- Attwood v Small (1838) 6 Cl. & F. 232 ..... 339
- Aubert v Walsh (1810) 3 Taunt. 277 ..... 523
- August Leonhardt, The See K Lokumal &
Sons (London) Ltd v Lotte Shipping Co
Pte Ltd (The August Leonhardt)
- Austin Knight (UK) Ltd v Hinds [1994]
F.S.R. 52, Ch D ..... 459
- Austin v Great Western Railway (1866-67)
L.R. 2 Q.B. 442, QB ..... 607
- Austin v Zurich General Accident and Liability Insurance Co Ltd [1945] K.B. 250;
(1945) 78 Ll. L. Rep. 185, CA; affirming
[1944] 2 All E.R. 243, KBD ..... 667
- Autry v Republic Productions 180 P. 2d 888
(1947) ..... 873, 904
- AV Pound & Co v MW Hardy & Co Inc [1956]
A.C. 588; [1956] 2 W.L.R. 683, HL ..... 65, 889
- Avery v Bowden (1855) 5 E. & B. 714 ..... 865
- Avimex SA v Dewulf & Cie [1979] 2 Lloyd's
Rep. 57, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 107, 108
- Avintair v Avill 1995 S.C.L.R. 1012, OH ..... 51
- Avon CC v Howlett [1983] 1 W.L.R. 605;
[1983] 1 All E.R. 1073, CA ..... 313
- Avon Finance Co v Bridger [1985] 2 All E.R.
281; 123 S.J. 705, CA ..... 328, 329, 408, 425, 426
- Avon Insurance plc v Swire Fraser Ltd [2000]
1 All E.R. (Comm) 573; [2000] C.L.C. 665;
[2000] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 535, QBD (Comm
Ct) ..... 338, 359, 363
- Awilco of Oslo A/S v Fulvia SpA di Nav-igazione of Cagliari (The Chikuma) [1981]
1 W.L.R. 314; [1981] 1 All E.R. 652,
HL ..... 778, 781, 825
- Awwad v Geraghty & Co [2001] Q.B. 570;
[2000] 3 W.L.R. 1041, CA ..... 431, 481, 504
- Ayers v South Australian Banking Co
(1869-71) L.R. 3 P.C. 548, PC (Aus) ..... 560
- Ayerst v Jenkins (1873) L.R. 16 Eq. 275, Lord
Chancellor ..... 443
- Aylesford v Morris (1873) L.R. 8 Ch.App.
484 ..... 420
- Azov Shipping Co v Baltic Shipping Co (No.3)
[1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 453; [1999] 2
Lloyd's Rep. 159, QBD (Comm Ct) .... 48, 108,
113, 114124
- B (Adult: Refusal of Medical Treatment), Re
[2002] EWHC 429; [2002] 2 All E.R. 449,
Fam Div ..... 559
- B (Consent to Treatment: Capacity), Re; sub nom. B v NHS Hospital Trust; B (Adult: Refusal of Medical Treatment), Re [2002]
EWHC 429; [2002] 2 All E.R. 449, Fam
Div ..... 721
- B & S Contracts and Design v Victor Green
Publications [1984] I.C.R. 419; (1984) 81
L.S.G. 893; (1984) 128 S.J. 279, CA ..... 94, 96, 406, 883
- Babacomp Ltd v Rightside Properties Ltd
[1974] 1 All E.R. 142; (1973) 26 P. & C.R.
526, CA; affirming [1973] 3 All E.R. 873,
Ch D ..... 831
- Babcock v Lawson (1880) 5 Q.B.D. 284 ..... 332
- Bacardi Martini Beverages Ltd v Thomas
Hardy Packaging Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ
549; [2002] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 335; [2002]
2 Lloyd's Rep. 379, CA ..... 259, 261, 613
- Backhouse v Backhouse [1978] 1 W.L.R. 243;
[1978] 1 All E.R. 1158, Fam Div .... 421, 422
- Bacon v Cooper (Metals) Ltd [1982] 1 All E.R.
397, QBD ..... 933
- Badagry, The See Terkol Rederierne v Petroleo Brasileiro SA and Frota Nacional de Petroleiros
- Badische Co, Re [1921] 2 Ch 331, Ch D ..... 876, 888, 899, 901
- Baetjer v New Zealand Alcohol Co 66 N.E. 2d.
748 (1946) ..... 902
- Bagot v Stevens Scanlon & Co Ltd [1966] 1
Q.B. 197; [1964] 3 W.L.R. 1162, QBD ..... 841, 983, 984
- Bagot Pneumatic Tyre Co v Clipper Pneumatic Tyre Co [1902] 1 Ch. 146, CA ..... 703
- Bahamas Oil Refining Co v Kristiansands Tank
Rederie (The Polyduke) [1978] 1 Lloyd's
Rep. 211, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 172, 216, 217

- Bailey v Bullock [1950] 2 All E.R. 1167; 66 T.L.R. (Pt. 2) 791, KBD ..... 989
- Bailey v HSS Alarms Ltd The Times, June 20, 2000, CA ..... 608
- Baillie v Kell (1838) 4 Bing.N.C. 638 ..... 836
- Baillie's Case, Re See International Society of Auctioneers and Valuers
- Baily v De Crespigny (1869) L.R. 4 Q.B. 180 ..... 895, 901
- Bain v Fothergill (1874) L.R. 7 H.L. 158 ..... 999
- Bainbridge v Firmstone (1838) 8 A. & E. 743 ..... 68, 86, 156, 537
- Bainbridge v Browne (1880-81) L.R. 18 Ch. D. 188, Ch D ..... 412, 413, 424, 425
- Bainham v Manning (1691) 2 Vern. 242 ..... 443
- Baird Textile Holdings Ltd v Marks & Spencer plc [2001] EWCA Civ 274; [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 737, CA .... 50, 60, 107, 108, 112, 113, 114, 115, 120, 123, 132, 140, 170, 171, 172, 175
- Baker v Baker [1993] 2 F.L.R. 247; (1993) 25 H.L.R. 408, 1993, CA ..... 145, 146
- Baker v Black Sea & Baltic General Insurance Co Ltd [1998] 1 W.L.R. 974; [1998] 2 All E.R. 833, HL ..... 202, 208, 214
- Baker v Jones [1954] 1 W.L.R. 1005; [1954] 2 All E.R. 553, QBD ..... 450
- Baker v Kaye [1997] I.R.L.R. 219; (1998) 39 B.M.L.R. 12, QBD ..... 612
- Baker v Monk (1864) 4 D.J. & S. 338 ..... 420
- Baker v Walker (1845) 14 M. & W. 465 ..... 90
- Baker v White (1690) 2 Vern. 215 ..... 442
- Bal v Van Staden [1902] T.S. 128 ..... 26
- Balder London, The See Gatoil Anstalt v Omenial Ltd
- Baldry v Bates (1885) 52 L.T. 620 ..... 711
- Baldry v Marshall [1925] 1 K.B. 260, CA
- Baldwin v British Coal Corporation The Times, May 11, 1994 ..... 981
- Baldwyn v Smith [1900] 1 Ch. 588, Ch D .... 558
- Baleares, The See Geogas SA v Trammo Gas Ltd
- Balfour v Balfour [1919] 2 K.B. 571, CA .... 164, 165, 166, 174
- Balfour Beatty Construction (Scotland) Ltd v Scottish Power 1994 S.L.T. 807; The Times, March 23, 1994, HL ..... 971
- Ball v Coggis (1710) 1 Bro. P.C. 140 ..... 1021
- Ballard (Kent) Ltd v Oliver Ashworth (Holdings) Ltd [2000] Ch. 12; [1999] 3 W.L.R. 57; [1999] 2 All E.R. 791, CA .... 103, 117, 814, 936
- Ballenita and BP Energy, The See ERG Petroli SpA v Vitol SA
- Ballett v Mingay [1943] K.B. 281, CA ..... 551
- Balli Trading Ltd v Afalona Shipping Ltd (The Coral) [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 1; (1992) 89(34) L.S.G. 40, CA ..... 626
- Ballylton, The See Owners of Steamship Ballylton v Preston Corporation
- Balsamo v Medici [1984] 1 W.L.R. 951; [1984] 2 All E.R. 304, Ch D ... 589, 607, 612, 616, 748
- Balston Ltd v Headline Filters Ltd (No.2) [1990] F.S.R. 385, Ch D ..... 400, 457
- Baltic Shipping Co v Dillon (1993) 176 C.L.R. 344 ..... 15, 785, 943, 989, 1050, 1051
- Banbury v Bank of Montreal [1918] A.C. 626, HL ..... 352
- Banco Central SA v Lingoss & Falce Ltd (The Raven) [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 266, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 689, 691
- Banco de Portugal v Waterlow & Sons Ltd; Waterlow & Sons Ltd v Banco de Portugal [1932] A.C. 452; [1932] All E.R. Rep. 181, HL ..... 591, 979
- Banco Exterior Internacional SA v Thomas [1997] 1 W.L.R. 221; [1997] 1 All E.R. 46, CA ..... 419
- Banco Santander SA v Bayfern Ltd; sub nom. Banco Santander SA v Banque Paribas [2000] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 776; [2000] Lloyd's Rep. Bank. 165, CA ..... 573, 690
- Bandar Property Holdings Ltd v JS Darwen (Successors) Ltd [1968] 2 All E.R. 305; 19 P. & C.R. 785, QBD ..... 203
- Bangladesh Export Import Co Ltd v Sucden Kerry SA [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 1, CA .... 452, 886, 898, 901
- Bank Leumi le Israel BM v British National Insurance Co Ltd [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 71, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 341
- Bank Line Ltd v Arthur Capel & Co [1919] A.C. 435, HL ..... 868, 872, 873, 891, 893, 900, 901, 904, 905, 909, 921
- Bank Melli Iran v Samadi-Rad [1995] 1 F.C.R. 465 ..... 370
- Bank of America National Trust and Savings Association v Christmas (The Kyriaki) [1994] 1 All E.R. 401; [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 137, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 1013
- Bank of Baroda v Panessar [1987] Ch. 335; [1987] 2 W.L.R. 208, Ch D ..... 413, 753
- Bank of Boston Connecticut (formerly Colonial Bank) v European Grain & Shipping Ltd (The Dominique) [1989] A.C. 1056; [1989] 2 W.L.R. 440, HL .... 689, 764, 783, 788
- Bank of Credit and Commerce International (Overseas) Ltd (In Liquidation) v Price Waterhouse (No.3) [1998] Ch. 84; [1997] 3 W.L.R. 849, Ch D ..... 939, 974
- Bank of Credit and Commerce International (Overseas) Ltd (In Liquidation) v Price Waterhouse (No.2) [1998] Lloyd's Rep. Bank. 85; [1998] B.C.C. 617, CA .... 346, 348
- Bank of Credit and Commerce International SA (In Liquidation) v Ali (No.1) [2001] UKHL 8; [2002] 1 A.C. 251; [2001] 2 W.L.R. 735, HL ..... 88, 398
- Bank of Credit and Commerce International SA (In Liquidation) v Ali (No.3) [2002] EWCA Civ 82; [2002] 3 All E.R. 750; [2002] I.C.R. 1258, CA .... 955, 956, 974, 991

Bank of Credit and Commerce International SA v Aboody [1990] 1 Q.B. 923; [1989] 2 W.L.R. 759, CA ..... 409, 410, 411, 419	Banque Keyser Ullmann SA v Skandia (UK) Insurance Co See Banque Financiere de la Cite SA (formerly Banque Keyser Ullmann SA) v Westgate Insurance Co (formerly Hodge General & Mercantile Co Ltd)
Bank of Cyprus (London) Ltd v Markou [1999] 2 All E.R. 707; [1999] 2 F.L.R. 17 ..... 424	Barber v Fox (1682) 2 Wms. Saund. 134, n.(e) ..... 68, 81
Bank of India v Trans Continental Commodity Merchants Ltd (No.1) [1982] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 427, CA ..... 481	Barber v Manchester Regional Hospital Board [1958] 1 W.L.R. 181; [1958] 1 All E.R. 322, QBD ..... 3, 4
Bank of Ireland v Evan's Trustees (1855) 5 H.L.C. 389 ..... 715	Barber v NWS Bank plc [1996] 1 W.L.R. 641; [1996] 1 All E.R. 906, CA ..... 760, 793, 1051, 1054
Bank of Liverpool v Holland (1926) 43 T.L.R. 29 ..... 677	Barber v Vincent (1680) Free.K.B. 581 ..... 540
Bank of Montreal v Stuart [1911] A.C. 120, PC (Can) ..... 409, 412	Barber v Wolfe [1945] Ch. 187, Ch D ..... 853
Bank of New Zealand v Simpson [1900] A.C. 182, PC (NZ) ..... 197	Barclay v Messenger (1874) 43 L.J.Ch. 449 ..... 829
Bank of Nova Scotia v Hellenic Mutual War Risk Association (Bermuda) Ltd (The Good Luck) [1992] 1 A.C. 233; [1991] 2 W.L.R. 1279, CA ... 203, 205, 240, 396, 397, 789, 846, 847, 855, 968, 984, 985, 987	Barclay v Pearson [1893] 2 Ch. 154, Ch D ..... 482, 491, 526
Bank of Scotland v Wright [1990] B.C.C. 663; [1991] B.C.L.C. 244 ..... 120	Barclay v Prospect Mortgages, Ltd [1974] 1 W.L.R. 837; [1974] 2 All E.R. 672, Ch D ..... 491
Bank voor Handel en Scheepvaart NV v Slatford (No.2 [1954] A.C. 584; [1954] 2 W.L.R. 867, HL ..... 705	Barclays Bank Ltd v Quistclose Investments Ltd [1970] A.C. 567; [1968] 3 W.L.R. 1097, HL ..... 646
Bankers' Trust Co v PT Jakarta International Hotels and Development [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 785; [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 910, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 1020, 1045	Barclays Bank Ltd v WJ Simms Son & Cooke (Southern) Ltd [1980] Q.B. 677; [1980] 2 W.L.R. 218, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 294, 756
Bankway Properties Ltd v Penfold-Dunsford [2001] E.W.C.A. Civ 528; [2001] 1 W.L.R. 1369, CA ..... 74	Barclays Bank plc v Boulter [1999] 1 W.L.R. 1919; [1999] 4 All E.R. 513, HL ..... 425
Banner Homes Holdings Ltd (formerly Banner Homes Group plc) v Luff Developments Ltd (No.2) [2000] Ch. 372; [2000] 2 W.L.R. 772, CA ..... 55, 136, 138	Barclays Bank plc v Caplan [1998] 1 F.L.R. 532; (1999) 78 P. & C.R. 153, Ch D .... 461, 506
Banner Industrial & Commercial Properties v Clark Paterson [1990] 47 E.G. 64 .... 110, 815	Barclays Bank plc v Coleman [2001] Q.B. 20; [2000] 3 W.L.R. 405, CA ..... 418, 427
Bannerman v White (1861) 10 C.B. (N.S.) 844 ..... 354, 790	Barclays Bank plc v Fairclough Building Ltd (No.1) [1995] Q.B. 214; [1994] 3 W.L.R. 1057, CA ..... 839, 985
Banning v Wright [1972] 1 W.L.R. 972; [1972] 2 All E.R. 987, HL ..... 105, 111, 132, 812	Barclays Bank plc v Goff [2001] E.W.C.A. Civ 635; [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 847, CA .... 426
Banque de l'Indochine et de Suez SA v JH Rayner (Mincing Lane) Ltd [1983] Q.B. 711; [1983] 2 W.L.R. 841, CA ..... 87	Barclays Bank plc v Khaira The Times , December 19, 1991, Ch D ..... 400, 412
Banque Financiere de la Cite SA (formerly Banque Keyser Ullmann SA) v Westgate Insurance Co (formerly Hodge General & Mercantile Co Ltd) [1991] 2 A.C. 249; [1990] 3 W.L.R. 364, HL; affirming [1990] 1 Q.B. 665, CA .... 391, 396, 397, 402, 608, 975	Barclays Bank plc v O'Brien [1994] 1 A.C. 180; [1993] 3 W.L.R. 786, HL ..... 384, 409, 411, 413, 414, 416, 417, 424, 425, 426, 445
Banque Financiere de la Cite SA v Parc (Battersea) Ltd [1999] 1 A.C. 221; [1998] 2 W.L.R. 475, HL ..... 607	Barclays Bank plc v Quinecare Ltd [1992] 4 All E.R. 363 ..... 707, 983
	Barclays Bank plc v Schwartz The Times , August 2, 1995, CA ..... 217, 421
	Barclays Bank plc v Taylor [1989] 1 W.L.R. 1066; [1989] 3 All E.R. 563, CA ..... 202
	Barclays Bank plc v Weeks Legg & Dean [1999] Q.B. 309; [1998] 3 W.L.R. 656; [1998] 3 All E.R. 213, CA ..... 81, 841
	Barell Ex p (1875) L.R. 10 Ch App. 512 ..... 1007
	Barex Brokers Ltd v Morris Dean & Co [1999] P.N.L.R. 344, CA ..... 611
	Barings plc (In Administration) v Coopers & Lybrand [1997] B.C.C. 498; [1997] 1 B.C.L.C. 427, CA ..... 346, 408
	Barjeau v Walmsley (1746) 2 Stra. 1249 ..... 531

- Barker v Stickney* [1919] 1 K.B. 121, CA .... 621, 703
- Barker v Walters* (1844) 8 Beav. 92 ..... 373
- Barker's Estate, Re* (1875) 44 L.J. Ch. 487 .... 79
- Barkway v South Wales Transport Co Ltd* [1950] A.C. 185; [1950] 1 All E.R. 392; 66 T.L.R. (Pt. 1) 597; 114 J.P. 172; [1949] W.N. 484; 94 S.J. 128, HL ..... 249
- Barkworth v Young* (1856) 1 Drew. 1 ..... 892
- Barlow Clowes Gilt Managers Ltd, Re* [1992] Ch. 208; [1992] 2 W.L.R. 36, Ch D ..... 455
- Barnard Marcus & Co v Ashraf* [1988] 18 E.G. 67, CA ..... 741
- Barnes v Toye* (1884) 13 Q.B.D. 410 ..... 541
- Barnett v Javeri & Co* [1916] 2 K.B. 390, KBD ..... 838, 961
- Barranduna, The See Scancarriers A/S v Ao-tearoa International*
- Barrett v Great Northern Railway* (1904) 20 T.L.R. 175 ..... 627
- Barrett v Innpreneur Pub Co (GL) Ltd* [2000] E.C.C. 106; [1999] E.G.C.S. 93, Ch D ..... 507
- Barrett v Lounava* (1982) Ltd [1990] 1 Q.B. 348 ..... 202, 208, 209, 210, 1035
- Barrow Lane & Ballard Ltd v Phillip Phillips & Co Ltd* [1929] 1 K.B. 574; (1928) 32 Ll. L. Rep. 228, KBD ..... 294, 296
- Barrow v Chappell & Co* [1976] R.P.C. 355, Ch D ..... 1032
- Barry v Davies (t/a Heathcote Ball & Co)* [2000] 1 W.L.R. 1962; [2001] 1 All E.R. 944, CA ..... 12, 155, 738, 948
- Bart v British West Indian Airways* [1967] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 239, CA (Guy) ..... 607
- Bartlett v Barclays Bank Trust Co Ltd (No.2)* [1980] Ch. 515; [1980] 2 W.L.R. 430, Ch D ..... 957
- Bartlett v Wells* (1862) 1 B. & S. 836 ..... 554
- Barton v Armstrong* [1976] A.C. 104; [1975] 2 W.L.R. 1050; [1975] 2 All E.R. 465; (1973) 119 S.J. 286, PC (Aus) ..... 341, 405, 408
- Barwick v Reade* (1791) 1 H.Bl. 267 ..... 698
- Basham (Deceased), Re* [1986] 1 W.L.R. 1498; [1987] 1 All E.R. 405, Ch D .... 136, 140, 141
- Basildon DC v JE Lesser (Properties) Ltd* [1985] Q.B. 839; [1984] 3 W.L.R. 812, QBD ..... 758, 841, 985, 986
- Baskcomb v Beckwith* (1869) L.R. 8 Eq. 100, Ct of Chancery ..... 317
- Basma (Abdul Karim) v Weekes* [1950] A.C. 441; [1950] 2 All E.R. 146, PC (West Africa) ..... 733
- Basnett v J&A Jackson Ltd* [1976] I.C.R. 63; [1976] I.R.L.R. 154, HC ..... 981
- Bass Holdings Ltd v Morton Music Ltd* [1988] Ch. 493; [1987] 3 W.L.R. 543, Ch D ..... 811
- Batard v Hawes* (1853) 2 E. & B. 287 ..... 570
- Bateman v Hunt* [1904] 2 K.B. 530, CA ..... 680
- Bates v Barrow Ltd; Ansell v Robert Barrow Ltd* [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 680; The Times, February 9, 1995, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 524, 967, 968, 976
- Batis Maritime Corp v Petroleos Mediterraneo SA (The Batis)* [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 345; The Times, November 28, 1989, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 944, 1061, 1062
- Batis, The See Batis Maritime Corp v Petroleos Mediterraneo SA*
- Batson v Newman* (1875-76) L.R. 1 C.P.D. 573, CA ..... 517, 527
- Batthyany v Bouch* (1881) 50 L.J.Q.B. 421 ..... 1023
- Batty v Metropolitan Property Realisations Ltd* [1978] Q.B. 554; [1978] 2 W.L.R. 500, CA ..... 983
- Baumgart's Case See Societe Anonyme des Grands Etablissements de Touquet Paris-Plage*
- Baumwoll Manufactur Von Carl Scheibler v Furness* [1893] A.C. 8, HL; affirming [1892] 1 Q.B. 253, CA ..... 624
- Bawden v London, Edinburgh and Glasgow Assurance Co* [1892] 2 Q.B. 534, CA ..... 338, 708
- Bawejem Ltd v MC Fabrications Ltd* [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm.) 377; [1999] B.C.C. 157, CA ..... 693
- Baxendale v London, Chatham & Dover Railway* (8174) L.R. 10 Ex. 38 ..... 979
- Baxter v Connelly* (1820) 1 J & W 576 ..... 1034
- Baxter v Portsmouth* (1826) 5 B. & C. 170 ..... 558
- Bay Ridge, The See Manatee Towing Co Ltd v Oceanbulk Maritime SA (The Bay Ridge)*
- Bayley v Boulcott* (1828) 4 Russ. 345 ..... 685
- Bayley v Homan* (1837) 3 Bing.N.C. 915 ..... 100
- Baylis v Dinley* (1815) 3 M. & S. 477 ... 549, 724
- Baynham v Philips Electronic (UK) Ltd* [1995] O.P.L.R. 253; The Times, July 19, 1995, QBD ..... 49
- Baytur SA v Finagro Holdings SA* [1992] Q.B. 610; [1991] 3 W.L.R. 866; [1991] 4 All E.R. 129, CA ..... 701
- BC Saw-Mill Co Ltd v Nettleship* (1868) L.R. 3 C.P. 499 ..... 970
- BCT Software Solutions Ltd v Arnold Laver & Co Ltd* [2002] EWHC 1298; [2002] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 85, Ch D ..... 242
- Beach v Reed Corrugated Cases* [1956] 1 W.L.R. 807; [1956] 2 All E.R. 652, QBD ..... 957
- Beale v Kyte* [1907] 1 Ch. 564, Ch D ... 323, 325
- Beale v Taylor* [1967] 1 W.L.R. 1193; [1967] 3 All E.R. 253; 111 S.J. 668, CA ..... 354
- Beaton v McDivitt* (1988) 13 N.S.W.L.R. 162 ..... 39, 68, 84, 138
- Beattie v E & F Beattie Ltd* [1938] Ch. 708; [1938] 3 All E.R. 214, CA ..... 586
- Beattie v Lord Ebury* (1871-72) L.R. 7 Ch. App. 777, CA in Chancery ..... 333, 565
- Beauchamp v Winn* (1873) L.R. 6 H.L. 223, HL ..... 319

Beaumont (Deceased), Re; sub nom. Martin v Midland Bank Trust Co [1980] Ch. 444; [1979] 3 W.L.R. 818; [1980] 1 All E.R. 266, Ch D .....	174
Beaumont v Humberts (A Firm) [1988] 29 E.G. 104, QBD .....	338, 341, 346
Beaumont v Reeve (1846) 8 Q.B. 483 .....	443
Beavan (No.1), Re; sub nom. Davies Banks & Co v Beavan (No.1) [1912] 1 Ch. 196, Ch D .....	559
Beck & Co v K Szymanowski & Co See Ernest Beck & Co v K Szymanowski & Co
Becket v Cohen [1972] 1 W.L.R. 1593; [1973] 1 All E.R. 120, DC .....	331
Beckett v Nurse [1948] 1 K.B. 535; [1948] 1 All E.R. 81, CA .....	183
Beckham v Drake (1849) 2 H.L. Cas. 579; (1841) 9 M. & W. 79, HL .....	177, 699
Bedford Insurance Co Ltd v Instituto de Resseguros do Brasil [1985] Q.B. 966; [1984] 3 W.L.R. 726, QBD (Comm Ct) ....	434, 485, 487, 714, 725
Beech v Keep (1854) 18 Beav. 285 .....	684
Beer v Beer (1852) 12 C.B. 60 .....	575
Beer v Bowden [1981] 1 W.L.R. 522; [1981] 1 All E.R. 1070, CA .....	56
Beesly v Hallwood Estates [1960] 1 W.L.R. 549; [1960] 2 All E.R. 314, Ch D .....	112, 153, 159, 169
Begbie v Phosphate Sewage Co Ltd (1874-75) L.R. 10 Q.B. 491, QBD .....	335
Behn v Burness (1863) 1 B. & S. 751 .....	353, 789, 790, 794
Behnke v Bede Shipping Co Ltd [1927] 1 K.B. 649; (1927) 27 Ll. L. Rep. 24, KBD .....	1023
Behzadi v Shaftesbury Hotels Ltd [1992] Ch. 1; [1991] 2 W.L.R. 1251, CA .....	828, 830
Belcham and Gawley's Contract, Re [1930] 1 Ch. 56, Ch D .....	807
Bell Houses Ltd v City Wall Properties Ltd (No.1) [1966] 2 Q.B. 656; [1966] 2 W.L.R. 1323, CA; reversing [1966] 1 Q.B. 207, QBD .....	566, 567
Bell v Balls [1897] 1 Ch. 663, Ch D .....	309, 432
Bell v Lever Bros Ltd [1932] A.C. 161, HL .....	77, 286, 287, 289, 290, 291, 292, 294, 296, 310, 312, 319, 320, 400, 777, 924, 1057
Bell v Marsh [1903] 1 Ch. 528, CA .....	399
Bell v Peter Browne & Co [1990] 2 Q.B. 495; [1990] 3 W.L.R. 510, CA .....	609, 984
Bellefield Computer Services Ltd v E Turner & Sons Ltd; Unigate (UK) Ltd v E Turner & Sons Ltd [2000] B.L.R. 97; (2000) 2 T.C.L.R. 759, CA .....	613
Bellinger v Bellinger (Validity of Marriage: Transsexual) [2001] EWCA Civ 1140; [2002] Fam. 150; [2002] 2 W.L.R. 411; [2002] 1 All E.R. 311, CA .....	3
Bellingham v Dhillon [1973] Q.B. 304; [1972] 3 W.L.R. 730, QBD .....	981
Bell's Indenture, Re [1980] 1 W.L.R. 1217; [1980] 3 All E.R. 425, Ch D .....	957, 960
Belvoir Finance Co Ltd v Harold G Cole & Co Ltd [1969] 1 W.L.R. 1877; [1969] 2 All E.R. 904, QBD .....	497
Belvoir Finance Co Ltd v Stapleton [1971] 1 Q.B. 210; [1970] 3 W.L.R. 530, CA .....	432, 496, 502
Bem Dis A Türk Ticaret S/A TR v International Agri Trade Co Ltd (The Selda) [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm.) 619; [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 729, CA .....	942, 951
Ben Shipping Co (Pte) Ltd v An Bord Baine (The C.Joyce) [1986] 2 All E.R. 177; [1986] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 285, QBD (Comm Ct) ....	202
Bence Graphics International Ltd v Fasson UK Ltd [1998] Q.B. 87; [1997] 3 W.L.R. 205, CA .....	950, 951, 973
Benmax v Austin Motor Co Ltd [1955] A.C. 370; [1955] 2 W.L.R. 418, HL .....	315, 897
Bennett v Bennett [1952] 1 K.B. 249; [1952] 1 All E.R. 413, CA .....	439, 447, 506
Bennett, Walden & Co v Wood [1950] 2 All E.R. 134; 66 T.L.R. (Pt. 2) 3, CA .....	742
Bent v Wakefield and Barnsley Union Bank (1878-79) L.R. 4 C.P.D. 1, CPD .....	92
Bentall Horsley & Baldry v Vicary [1931] 1 K.B. 253, KBD .....	40, 744
Bentley v Mackay (1851) 15 Beav. 12 .....	684, 685
Benton v Campbell Parker & Co Ltd [1925] 2 K.B. 410, KBD .....	734, 738
Bentsen v Taylor Sons & Co (No.2) [1893] 2 Q.B. 274, CA .....	789, 790, 791, 811
Bentworth v Lubert [1968] 1 Q.B. 680; [1967] 3 W.L.R. 378; [1967] 2 All E.R. 810, CA .....	63
Benyon v Nettleford (1850) 3 Mac. & G. 94 .....	443
Beoco v Alfa Laval Co [1995] Q.B. 137; [1994] 3 W.L.R. 1179, CA .....	975
Beresford v Done (1682) 1 Vern. 98 .....	451
Beresford v Royal Insurance Co Ltd [1938] A.C. 586, HL .....	438, 439
Berg Sons & Co Ltd v Adams [1992] B.C.C. 661; [1993] B.C.L.C. 1045, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	347
Berg v Sadler and Moore [1937] 2 K.B. 158, CA .....	374, 729
Berge Sisar, The See Borealis AB (formerly Borealis Petrokemi AB and Statoil Petrokemi AB) v Stargas Ltd
Berge Sund, The See Sig Bergesen DY & Co v Mobil Shipping and Transportation Co
Bergerco USA v Vegoil Ltd [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 440, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	800
Beriello v Felixstowe Dock & Railway Co [1989] 1 W.L.R. 695 .....	981
Berkeley Leisure Group Ltd v Williamson [1996] E.G.C.S. 18, CA .....	326
Berkeley Securities (Property) Ltd, Re [1980] 1 W.L.R. 1589; [1980] 3 All E.R. 513, Ch D .....	696
Berkeley v Hardy (1826) 5 B. & C. 355 .....	669

Berkley Administration v McClelland [1990] F.S.R. 565 .....	455
Bernard v Riverside Casino Corporation 323 F. 2d 977 (1963) .....	523
Bernard v Williams (1928) 44 T.L.R. 436 .....	828
Berners v Fleming [1925] Ch. 264, CA .....	315
Bernstein v Pamson Motors (Golders Green) Ltd [1987] 2 All E.R. 220; [1987] R.T.R. 384, QBD .....	817, 990
Berry v Berry [1929] 2 K.B. 316, KBD .....	189, 190
Berry v Newport BC (2001) 33 H.L.R. 19; [2000] 2 E.G.L.R. 26, CA .....	933
Berryman v Hounslow LBC The Times , December 16, 1996 .....	967
Bertel v Neveux (1878) 39 L.T. 257 .....	57
Besseller Waechter Glover & Co v South Derwent Coal Ltd [1938] 1 K.B. 408 .....	104
Best's Case (1865) 2 D.J. & S. 650 .....	22
Beswick v Beswick [1968] A.C. 58; [1967] 3 W.L.R. 932; [1967] 2 All E.R. 1197, HL ... 186, 589, 590, 591, 592, 593, 595, 599, 600, 601, 604, 605, 626, 647, 648, 649, 650, 654, 666, 669, 670, 671, 1021, 1022, 1026, 1034, 1036, 1038, 1039 .....
Beta Computers (Europe) Ltd v Adobe Systems (Europe) Ltd 1996 S.L.T. 604; [1996] C.L.C. 821, OH .....	18
Betterbee v Davis (1811) 3 Camp. 70 .....	754
Bettini v Gye (1875-76) L.R. 1 Q.B.D. 183, QBD .....	775, 776, 778, 826
Betts v Burch (1859) 4 H. & N. 506 .....	1000
Betts v Gibbins (1834) 2 A. & E. 57 .... 436, 455, 622 .....
Bettyes v Maynard (1882) 46 L.T. 766 .... 312, 319 .....
Bevan Ashford v Geoff Yeandle (Contractors) Ltd (In Liquidation) [1999] Ch. 239; [1998] 3 W.L.R. 172, Ch D .....	478
Beverley's Case (1603) 4 Co.Rep. 123b .....	557
BHP Petroleum Ltd v British Steel plc [2000] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 133; [2000] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 277; [2000] C.L.C. 1162; 74 Con. L.R. 63, CA .....	222, 224, 840
BICC plc v Burndy Corp [1985] Ch. 232; [1985] 2 W.L.R. 132, CA .....	780, 781
Bickerton v Burrell (1816) 5 M. & S. 383 .... 734 .....
Bidder v Bridges (No.3) (1888) L.R. 37 Ch. D. 406, CA .....	131
Biffin v Bignell (1862) 7 H. & N. 877 .....	405
Bigg v Boyd Gibbins [1971] 1 W.L.R. 913; [1971] 2 All E.R. 183, CA .....	11
Biggar v Rock Life Assurance Co [1902] 1 K.B. 516, KBD .....	709
Biggin v Minton [1977] 1 W.L.R. 701; [1977] 2 All E.R. 647, Ch D .....	856
Biggin & Co Ltd v Permanite Ltd [1951] 2 K.B. 314; [1951] 2 All E.R. 191, CA .....	979
Biggs Ex p. (1859) 28 L.J.Ch. 50 .....	338
Bigos v Boustead [1951] 1 All E.R. 92, KBD ... 432, 435, 492, 494, 495 .....
Bilbie v Lumley (1802) 2 East 469 .....	1059
Bilke v Havelock (1813) 3 Camp. 374 .....	92
Binder v Alachouzos [1972] 2 Q.B. 151; [1972] 2 W.L.R. 947, CA .....	482
Binions v Evans [1972] Ch. 359; [1972] 2 W.L.R. 729, CA .....	607
Binnington v Wallis (1821) 4 B. & Ald. 650 .... 443 .....
Binstead v Buck (1776) 2 Wm.Bl. 1117 .....	719
Birch v Thomas [1972] 1 W.L.R. 294; [1972] 1 All E.R. 905, CA .....	218
Bircham & Co Nominees (No.2) Ltd v Worrell Holdings Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 775; (2001) 82 P. & C.R. 34, CA ... 19, 41, 58, 153 .....
Bird v British Celanese Ltd [1945] K.B. 336; [1945] 1 All E.R. 488, CA .....	843
Bird v Brown (1850) 4 Ex. 786 .....	725, 726
Bird v Hildage [1948] 1 K.B. 91; [1947] 2 All E.R. 7, CA .....	105
Birkett v Acorn Business Machines Ltd [1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 429; (1999) 96(31) L.S.G. 35, CA .....	435, 481, 482
Birkin v Wing (1890) 63 L.T. 80 .....	557
Birkmyr v Darnell (1704) 1 Salk. 27 .....	181
Birmingham and District Land Co v London and North Western Railway Co (No.2) (1889) L.R. 40 Ch. D. 268, CA .....	111
Birmingham Mosque Trust v Alawi [1992] I.C.R. 435 .....	170
Bishop & Baxter v Anglo Eastern Trading & Industrial Co Ltd [1944] K.B. 12; (1944) 77 Ll. L. Rep. 83, CA .....	49
Bishop v Bonham [1988] 1 W.L.R. 742; (1988) 4 B.C.C. 347, CA .....	235
Bisset v Wilkinson [1927] A.C. 177, PC (NZ) .....	330
Black Clawson International Ltd v Papierwerke Waldhof-Aschaffenburg AG [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 446; [1981] Com. L.R. 61, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	905, 909
Black v Smallwood (1966) 39 A.L.J.R. 405 .... 735 .....
Blackburn Bobbin Co Ltd v TW Allen & Sons Ltd [1918] 2 K.B. 467; 3 A.L.R. 11, CA .....	876, 877, 886
Blackburn BS v Cunliffe, Brooks & Co. (1882) 22 Ch D.61 .....	565
Blackburn Low & Co v Vigors (1887) L.R. 12 App. Cas. 531, HL .....	392
Blackburn v Liverpool Brazil and River Plate Steam Navigation Co [1902] 1 K.B. 290, KBD .....	238
Blackburn v Mackey (1823) 1 C. & P. 1 .....	540
Blackburn v Smith (1848) 2 Ex. 783 .....	380
Blackett v Bates (1865) L.R. 1 Ch. 177 .... 1033, 1037 .....
Blackgold Trading of Monrovia v Almare SpA Navigazione di Genoa (The Almare Seconda and The Almare Quinta) [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 433; [1981] Com. L.R. 187, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	851, 853, 949, 968
Blacklocks v JB Developments (Godalming) Ltd [1982] Ch. 183; [1981] 3 W.L.R. 554, Ch D .....	323, 325, 326

Blackpool and Fylde Aero Club v Blackpool BC [1990] 1 W.L.R. 1195; [1990] 3 All E.R. 25, CA .....	15, 154, 171, 955
Blades v Free (1829) 9 B. & C. 167 .....	711, 751
Blake v Blake (1967) 111 S.J. 715, CA .....	458
Blake v Concannon (1870) I.R. 4 C.L. 323 .....	547
Blake & Co v Sohn [1969] 1 W.L.R. 1412; [1969] 3 All E.R. 123, QBD .....	64, 742, 743
Blakeley v Muller & Co [1903] 2 K.B. 760n .....	910
Blane Steamships Ltd v Minister of Transport [1951] 2 K.B. 965; [1951] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 155, CA .....	868, 900
Blankenstein, The See Damon Compania Naviera SA v Hapag-Lloyd International SA
Blathwayt v Baron Cawley [1976] A.C. 397; [1975] 3 W.L.R. 684, HL .....	479
Blay v Pollard [1930] 1 K.B. 628, CA ...	307, 322
Bliss v South East Thames RHA [1987] I.C.R. 700; [1985] I.R.L.R. 308, CA .....	809, 813, 988
Bloom v American Swiss Watch Co (1915) A.D. 100 .....	36
Bloomer v Bernstein (1873-74) L.R. 9 C.P. 588, CCP .....	774, 834
Bloomer v Spittle (1871-72) L.R. 13 Eq. 427, Ct of Chancery .....	325
Bloxham's Case (1864) 33 Beav. 529; (1864) 4 D.J. & S. 447 .....	23
Bloxsome v Williams (1824) 3 B. & C. 232 ....	485, 486, 487, 490
Blue Anchor Line Ltd v Alfred C Toepfer International GmbH (The Union Amsterdam) [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 432, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	238
Blyth v Fladgate; Morgan v Blyth; Smith v Blyth [1891] 1 Ch. 337, Ch D .....	570
BMBF (No.12) Ltd v Harland & Wolff Shipbuilding & Heavy Industries Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 862; [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 385, CA .....	855
Boardman v Copeland BC [2001] EWCA Civ 888, CA .....	988
BOC Group plev Centeon LLC [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 970; 63 Con. L.R. 104, CA .....	197, 248
Boddington v Lawton [1994] I.C.R. 478; The Times , February 19, 1994 .....	466, 481, 1057
Bodger v Nicholls (1873) 28 L.T. 441 .....	390
Bogg v Raper The Times , April 22, 1998 .....	243
Boissevain v Weil [1950] A.C. 327; [1950] 1 All E.R. 728, HL .....	482
Bold v Brough, Nicholson & Hall, Ltd [1964] 1 W.L.R. 201; [1963] 3 All E.R. 849, QBD .....	957
Bolton v Madden (1873) L.R. 9 Q.B. 55 ....	68, 69, 82
Bolton v Mahadeva [1972] 1 W.L.R. 1009; [1972] 2 All E.R. 1322, CA .....	783, 820
Bolton Partners v Lambert (1888) 41 Ch.D. 295 .....	726
Bonacina, Re [1912] 2 Ch. 394 .....	80
Bond Worth Ltd, Re [1980] Ch. 228; [1979] 3 W.L.R. 629; [1979] 3 All E.R. 919; 123 S.J. 216, Ch D .....	220
Bonde, The See Richco International Ltd v Alfred C Toepfer International GmbH
Bone v Eckless (1860) 5 H. & N. 925 ...	494, 502
Bonhote v Henderson [1895] 2 Ch. 202, CA; affirming [1895] 1 Ch. 742, Ch D .....	326
Bonnard v Dott [1906] 1 Ch. 740, CA .....	491
Bonsor v Musicians Union [1956] A.C. 104; [1955] 3 W.L.R. 788, CA .....	243
Bontex Knitting Works v St John's Garage (1943) 60 T.L.R. 44 .....	232
Booker v Palmer [1942] 2 All E.R. 674, CA ....	170
Boomer v Muir 24 P. 2d. 570 (1933) .....	1062
Boone v Eyre .....	770, 771, 816
Booth v Hodgson (1795) 6 T.R. 405 .....	502
Boots The Chemist Ltd v Street (1983) 268 E.G. 817 .....	326
Boots v E Christopher & Co [1952] 1 K.B. 89; [1951] 2 All E.R. 1045, CA .....	743
Borag, The See Compania Financiera Soleada SA v Hamoor Tanker Corp Inc
Borealis AB (formerly Borealis Petrokemi AB and Statoil Petrokemi AB) v Stargas Ltd (The Berge Sisar) [2001] UKHL 17; [2002] 2 A.C. 205, HL .....	704
Bornman v Tooke (1808) 1 Camp. 376 .....	821
Borries v Hutchinson (1865) 18 C.B. (N.S.) 445 .....	954, 970
Borrowman Phillips & Co v Free & Hollis (1878-79) L.R. 4 Q.B.D. 500, CA .....	754
Bos v Helsham (1866) L.R. 2 Ex. 72 .....	772
Bostel Bros v Hurlock [1949] 1 K.B. 74; [1948] 2 All E.R. 312, CA .....	432
Boston Deep Sea Fishing & Ice Co v Ansell (1888) L.R. 39 Ch. D. 339, CA .....	746, 784, 822, 824, 836, 844
Boston Fruit Co v British & Foreign Marine Insurance Co Ltd [1906] A.C. 336, HL; affirming [1905] 1 K.B. 637, CA ....	666, 723
Bouchard Servais v Princes Hall Restaurant (1904) 20 T.L.R. 574 .....	468
Boucraa, The See L'Office Cherifien des Phosphates Unitramp SA v Yamashita-Shinnihon Steamship Co Ltd (The Boucraa)
Bougoyes Offshore SA v Caspian Shipping Co (No.2) [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 665 .....	635
Boulting v Association of Cinematograph Television and Allied Technicians [1963] 2 Q.B. 606; [1963] 2 W.L.R. 529, CA .....	746
Boulton v Jones (1857) 2 H. & N. 564; L.J.Ex.117; 6 W.R. 107 .....	305, 308, 1063
Bourne v Mason (1669) 1 Ventr. 6 .....	588
Bourne v McEvoy Timber Preservation (1975) 237 E.G. 496 .....	608
Bournemouth & Boscombe Athletic FC v Manchester United FC The Times , May 22, 1980 .....	63, 66, 201
Bousfield v Wilson (1846) 16 L.J. Ex. 44 ....	502
Boustany v Piggott (1995) 69 P. & C.R. 298; [1993] E.G.C.S. 85, PC (Ant) .....	421

- Bouygues Offshore v Ultisol Transport Contractors [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 153 ..... 380, 381, 636
- Bovis Construction (Scotland) Ltd v Wha-tlings Construction Ltd 1995 S.C. (H.L.)
19; 1995 S.L.T. 1339, HL ..... 235, 237
- Bow Cedar, The See Bunge NV v Compagnie Noga d'importation et d'Exportation SA
- Bowdell v Parsons (1808) 10 East 359 ..... 834
- Bower v Bantam Investments [1972] 1 W.L.R.
1120; [1972] 3 All E.R. 349, Ch D ..... 1045
- Bowerman v Association of British Travel
Agents Ltd [1996] C.L.C. 451; (1995) 145
N.L.J. 1815, CA ..... 8, 13, 38, 162, 172, 585
- Bowes v Shand (1877) 2 App.Cas. 455 ..... 794, 800, 801, 826
- Bowlay Logging v Domtar [1978] 4 W.W.R.
105, Sup Ct (BC) ..... 942
- Bowmaker (Commercial) Ltd v Day [1965] 1
W.L.R. 1396; [1965] 2 All E.R. 856 (Note),
QBD ..... 979
- Bowmaker (Commercial) Ltd v Smith [1965] 1
W.L.R. 855; [1965] 2 All E.R. 304, CA ..... 809
- Bowmakers Ltd v Barnett Instruments Ltd
[1945] K.B. 65, CA ..... 496, 497, 498, 501, 504
- Bowry v Bennett (1808) 1 Camp. 348 ..... 444
- Bowskill v Dawson [1955] 1 Q.B. 13 ..... 647
- Box v Midland Bank Ltd [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep.
434, CA [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 391, QBD
(Comm Ct) ..... 330, 349, 360
- Boyd & Forrest v Glasgow & South Western Railway Co 1915 S.C. 20 ..... 381
- Boyd v Hind (1857) 1 H. & N.938 ..... 129
- Boydell v Drummond (1809) 11 East 192 ..... 185
- Boyo v Lambeth LBC [1994] I.C.R. 727;
[1995] I.R.L.R. 50, CA ..... 749
- Boyter v Thomson [1995] 2 A.C. 628; [1995] 3
W.L.R. 36, HL ..... 731, 732, 734
- Bozon v Farlow (1816) 1 Mer. 459 ..... 1034
- BP Exploration Co (Libya) Ltd v Hunt (No.2)
[1983] 2 A.C. 352; [1982] 2 W.L.R. 253;
[1982] 1 All E.R. 925, HL ..... 107, 837, 840,
872, 900, 909, 913, 914, 917
- BP Exploration Operating Co Ltd v Chevron
Shipping Co [2001] UKHL 50; [2003] 1
A.C. 197; [2001] 3 W.L.R. 949, HL ... 341, 624
- BP Refinery (Westernport) Pty Ltd v Shire of Hastings 180 C.L.R. 266; (1978) 52
A.L.J.R. 20 ..... 202, 204
- Brace v Calder [1895] 2 Q.B. 253, CA ..... 750, 978
- Bracewell v Appleby [1975] Ch. 408; [1975] 2
W.L.R. 282, Ch D ..... 929
- Bradburn v Great Western Railway (1874)
L.R. 10 Ex. 1 ..... 981
- Bradburne v Botfield (1845) 14 M. & W.
559 ..... 575
- Bradbury v Morgan (1862) 1 H. & C. 249 .... 45
- Braddon Towers Ltd v International Stores
Ltd [1987] 1 E.G.L.R. 209 ..... 1032
- Bradford v Williams (1872) L.R. 7 Ex. 259 ..... 774
- Brading v F McNeill & Co Ltd [1946] Ch.
145, Ch D ..... 948
- Bradley v Eagle Star Insurance Co Ltd [1989]
A.C. 957; [1989] 2 W.L.R. 568, HL ..... 668
- Bradley v Gregory (1810) 2 Camp. 383 ..... 129
- Bradley v H Newsom Sons & Co [1919] A.C.
16, HL ..... 783, 807, 857
- Bradshaw v University College of Wales [1988]
1 W.L.R. 190; [1987] 3 All E.R. 200, Ch
D ..... 450
- Bradstock Trustee Services Ltd v Nabarro Nathanson [1995] 1 W.L.R. 1405; [1995] 4 All
E.R. 888; [1996] O.P.L.R. 247, Ch D ..... 649
- Bradstreets British Ltd v Mitchell; Bradstreets
British Ltd v Carapanayoti & Co Ltd
[1933] Ch. 190, Ch D ..... 436
- Brady v Brady [1989] A.C. 755; [1988] 2
W.L.R. 1308, HL ..... 74, 84, 561
- Brady v St Margaret's Trust [1963] 2 Q.B. 494;
[1963] 2 W.L.R. 1162, CA ..... 853
- Brady v Todd (1861) 9 C.B. (N.S.) 592 ..... 711
- Braemont SS Co Ltd v Andrew Weir (1910) 15
Com. Cas. 101 ..... 901
- Bragg v Villanova (1923) 40 T.L.R. 154 ..... 1052
- Braithwaite v Foreign Hardwood Co [1905] 2
K.B. 543, CA ..... 767, 769, 836
- Braithwaite v Thomas Cook Travellers
Cheques [1989] Q.B. 553; [1989] 3 W.L.R.
212 ..... 987
- Branca v Cobarro [1947] K.B. 854; [1947] 2 All
E.R. 101, CA ..... 55
- Branchett v Beaney, Coster & Swale BC [1992]
3 All E.R. 910; (1992) 24 H.L.R. 348,
Ca ..... 988, 991, 1057
- Brand Estates, Re [1936] 3 All E.R. 374
- Brandeis Brokers Ltd v Black [2001] 2 All E.R.
(Comm) 980; [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 359,
QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 708
- Brandeis Goldschmidt & Co Ltd v Western Transport Ltd [1981] Q.B. 864; [1981] 3
W.L.R. 181, Ca ..... 949
- Brandt v Lawrence (1875-76) L.R. 1 Q.B.D.
344, CA ..... 787
- Brandt v Liverpool Brazil and River Plate
Steam Navigation Co Ltd [1924] 1 K.B.
575; (1923-24) 17 I.L. L. Rep. 142, CA .... 97, 232, 597, 640
- Branwhite v Worchester Works Finance Ltd
[1969] 1 A.C. 552; [1968] 3 W.L.R. 760,
HL ..... 583, 707, 1058
- Brauer & Co (Great Britain) Ltd v James Clark (Brush Materials) Ltd [1952] 2 All E.R.
497; [1952] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 147, CA ..... 65, 882, 883
- Braymist Ltd v Wise Finance Co Ltd [2002]
EWCA Civ 127; [2002] Ch. 273, CA ..... 178, 736
- Breen v Amalgamated Engineering Union
[1971] 2 Q.B. 175; [1971] 2 W.L.R. 742;
[1971] 1 All E.R. 1148, CA ..... 243
- Bremer Handels GmbH v C Mackprang Jr
[1979] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 221, CA ..... 107, 108,
109, 117, 814, 815, 837, 878

Bremer Handels GmbH v Continental Grain Corporation [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 269, CA .....	877, 878, 908
Bremer Handels GmbH v Deutsche Conti-Handels GmbH (Non Delivery) [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 45, CA .....	108, 813, 814
Bremer Handels GmbH v Deutsche Conti-Handels GmbH (Shipment Period) [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 689, QBD (Comm Ct) ....	107, 109, 110
Bremer Handels GmbH v Finagrain Compagnie Commerciale Agricole et Financiere SA [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 259, CA ....	107, 813, 814
Bremer Handels GmbH v JH Rayner & Co [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 216, CA; reversing [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 73, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	754, 964
Bremer Handels GmbH v Raiffeisen Hauptgenossenschaft eG (No.1) [1982] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 599, CA .....	105, 108
Bremer Handels GmbH v Vanden-Avenne Izegem PVBA [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 109, HL ...	107, 109, 797, 798, 799, 800, 801, 878, 883, 901, 908, 960
Bremer Handels GmbH v Westzucker GmbH (No.1) [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 207, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	107, 108, 117
Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH v Bunge Corporation [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 476; [1983] Com. L.R. 103, CA .....	108, 109, 110, 117, 958
Bremer Vulkan Schiffbau und Maschinenfabrik v South India Shipping Corp Ltd [1981] A.C. 909; [1981] 2 W.L.R. 141, HL .....	796, 823
Brennan v Brighton BC. (No.2) [1997] E.G.C.S. 76; The Times , May 15, 1997, CA .....	626
Bret v JS (1600) Cro.Eliz. 756 .....	83
Breton's Estate, Re (1881) 17 Ch.D. 416 .....	685
Brett v East India and London Shipping Co Ltd (1864) 2 H. & M. 404 .....	1029
Brewer v Westminster Bank Ltd The Times , February 5, 1953, CA .....	577
Brewster v Kitchell (1691) 1 Salk. 198 .....	866, 890
Brian Cooper & Co v Fairview Estates (Investments) [1987] 1 E.G.L.R. 18; (1987) 282 E.G. 1131, CA .....	741
Brice v Bannister (1878) 3 Q.B.D. 569 .....	678, 682
Bridge v Bridge (1852) 16 Beav. 315 .....	675, 684
Bridge v Campbell Discount Co Ltd [1962] A.C. 600; [1962] 2 W.L.R. 439, HL; reversing [1961] 1 Q.B. 445, CA .....	842, 851, 1005, 1006, 1010
Bridge v Deacons [1984] A.C. 705; [1984] 2 W.L.R. 837, PC (HK) ....	456, 458, 459, 460, 462, 463
Bridge Oil Ltd v Owners and/or Demise Charterers of the Ship Guiseppe di Vittorio (No.1) (The Guiseppe di Vittorio) [1998] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 136; [1998] C.L.C. 149, CA .....	624
Bridger v Savage (1884) 15 Q.B.D. 363 .....	523, 525
Bridges & Salmon Ltd v Owner of The Swan (The Swan) [1968] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 5, PDAD .....	733, 737
Briess v Woolley [1954] A.C. 333; [1954] 2 W.L.R. 832, HL .....	344, 709
Brigden v American Express Bank Ltd [2000] I.R.L.R. 94, QBD .....	253
Briggs Ex p. (1866) L.R. 1 Eq. 483 .....	339, 383
Briggs v Oates [1991] 1 All E.R. 407; [1990] I.C.R. 473, Ch D .....	454, 750, 849
Briggs v Rowan [1991] E.G.C.S. 6, Ch D .....	166
Bright v Ganas 189 A. 427 (1936) .....	778
Brightman & Co v Bunge y Born Limitada Sociedad [1925] A.C. 799; (1925) 22 Ll. L. Rep. 395, HL; affirming [1924] 2 K.B. 619, CA .....	892, 893
Brightman & Co Ltd v Tate [1919] 1 K.B. 463, KBD, 433 .....	433
Brikom Investments Ltd v Carr [1979] Q.B. 467; [1979] 2 W.L.R. 737, CA .....	84, 90, 99, 102, 103, 106, 109, 112, 113, 116, 117, 128, 130, 133, 200, 242, 341, 357, 584, 935
Brikom Investments Ltd v Seaford [1981] 1 W.L.R. 863; [1981] 2 All E.R. 783; (1981) 42 P. & C.R. 190; (1981) 258 E.G. 750; 125 S.J. 240, CA .....	335
Brimnes, The See Tenax Steamship Co v Owners of the Motor Vessel Brimnes (The Brimnes) .....
Brinkibon v Stahag Stahl und Stahlwarenhandels GmbH [1983] 2 A.C. 34; [1982] 2 W.L.R. 264, HL .....	19, 22, 24, 26, 27, 42
Brinnand v Ewens (1987) 19 H.L.R. 415 .....	135, 139
Brisbane v Dacres (1813) 5 Taunt. 143 .....	1059
Briscoe v Lubrizol Ltd (No.1) [2000] I.C.R. 694; [2000] P.I.Q.R. P39, CA .....	612
Brise Construction Ltd v Plastic Ltd [1996] 1 W.L.R. 675 .....	1056
Bristol and West Building Society v Christie [1996] E.G.C.S. 53, QBD .....	981
Bristol and West Building Society v Fancy & Jackson [1997] 4 All E.R. 582; [1997] N.P.C. 109, Ch D .....	938, 977, 986
Bristol and West Building Society v May May & Merrimans (No.1) [1996] 2 All E.R. 801; [1996] P.N.L.R. 138 Ch D .....	400
Bristol and West Building Society v May May & Merrimans (No.2) [1998] 1 W.L.R. 336; [1997] 3 All E.R. 206, Ch D .....	981
Bristol and West Building Society v Mothew (t/a Stapley & Co) [1998] Ch. 1; [1997] 2 W.L.R. 436, CA .....	337, 338, 371, 745, 938, 984

- Bristol, Cardiff and Swansea Aerated Bread Co v Maggs (1890) L.R. 44 Ch. D. 616, Ch D ..... 17
- Bristow v Eastman (1794) 1 Esp. 172 ..... 556
- Britain & Overseas Trading (Bristles) Ltd v Brooks Wharf & Bull Wharf Ltd [1967] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 51, QBD ..... 220
- Britain v Rossiter (1882-83) L.R. 11 Q.B.D. 123, CA ..... 185, 1029, 1062
- Britannia Distribution Co Ltd v Factor Pace Ltd [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 420, DR (Manchester) ..... 785, 788
- British & Beningtons Ltd v North West Char Tea Co Ltd [1923] A.C. 48; (1922) 13 Ll. L. Rep. 67, HL .... 103, 190, 767, 836, 1018
- British & Commonwealth Holdings plc v Quadrex Holdings Inc (No.1) [1989] Q.B. 842; [1989] 3 W.L.R. 723, CA .... 800, 827, 828, 829
- British Airways Board v Taylor [1976] 1 W.L.R. 13; [1976] 1 All E.R. 65, HL ..... 332
- British and American Telegraph Co Ltd v Colson (1870-71) L.R. 6 Ex. 108, Ex Ct ..... 27
- British Bank for Foreign Trade v Novinex [1949] 1 K.B. 623; [1949] 1 All E.R. 155; [1949] L.J.R. 658; 93 S.J. 146, CA .... 56, 740
- British Bank of the Middle East v Sun Life Assurance Co of Canada (UK) [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 9; [1983] Com. L.R. 187, HL ..... 713
- British Car Auctions v Wright [1972] 1 W.L.R. 1519; [1972] 3 All E.R. 462; [1972] R.T.R. 540; [1972] Crim. L.R. 562; 116 S.J. 583, QBD ..... 11
- British Crane Hire Corp Ltd v Ipswich Plant Hire Ltd [1975] Q.B. 303; [1974] 2 W.L.R. 856, CA ..... 214, 221
- British Eagle International Airlines Ltd v Compagnie Nationale Air France [1975] 1 W.L.R. 758; [1975] 2 All E.R. 390, HL ..... 479
- British Electrical and Associated Industries (Cardiff) Ltd v Patley Pressings Ltd [1953] 1 W.L.R. 280; [1953] 1 All E.R. 94; 97 S.J. 96, QBD ..... 49
- British Equitable Insurance Co v Great Western Railway (1869) 38 L.J.Ch. 132 ..... 393
- British Fermentation Products Ltd v Compar Reavell Ltd [1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 389; [1999] B.I.L.R. 352, QBD (T&CC) .... 221, 253, 258
- British Glanzstoff Manufacturing Co Ltd v General Accident Fire and Life Assurance Corp Ltd [1913] A.C. 143, HL ..... 1001
- British Guiana Credit Corp v Da Silva [1965] 1 W.L.R. 248; 109 S.J. 30, PC (BG) ..... 17
- British Homophone Ltd v Kunz (1935) 152 L.T. 589 ..... 55, 286, 619
- British Imex Industries v Midland Bank Ltd [1958] 1 Q.B. 542; [1958] 2 W.L.R. 103, QBD ..... 152
- British Industrial Plastics Ltd v Ferguson [1940] 1 All E.R. 479 ..... 619
- British Motor Trade Association v Gilbert [1951] 2 All E.R. 641; [1951] 2 T.L.R. 514, Ch D ..... 468
- British Motor Trade Association v Salvadori [1949] Ch. 556; [1949] 1 All E.R. 208, Ch D ..... 620, 622
- British Movietonews v London and District Cinemas [1952] A.C. 166; [1951] 2 All E.R. 617, HL ..... 867, 868, 881, 883, 884
- British Racing Drivers Club Ltd v Hextall Erskine & Co [1996] 3 All E.R. 667; [1996] B.C.C. 727, Ch D ..... 976
- British Reinforced Concrete Engineering Co Ltd v Schelfff [1921] 2 Ch. 563, Ch D ..... 455, 509
- British Road Services Ltd v Arthur V Crutchley & Co Ltd (No.1) [1968] 1 All E.R. 811; [1968] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 271, CA; reversing [1967] 2 All E.R. 785, Assizes (Liverpool) ..... 20
- British Russian Gazette & Trade Outlook Ltd v Associated Newspapers Ltd; Talbot v Associated Newspapers Ltd [1933] 2 K.B. 616, CA ..... 100
- British South Africa Co v De Beers Consolidated Mines Ltd See De Beers Consolidated Mines Ltd v British South Africa Co
- British Steel Corp v Cleveland Bridge & Engineering Co Ltd [1984] 1 All E.R. 504; [1982] Com. L.R. 54, QBD .... 36, 37, 51, 54, 168, 1062
- British Steel Corp v Granada Television Ltd [1981] A.C. 1096; [1980] 3 W.L.R. 774, HL ..... 455
- British Telecommunications plc v James Thomson & Sons (Engineers) Ltd [1999] 1 W.L.R. 9; [1999] 2 All E.R. 241, HL ..... 607, 638, 758
- British Telecommunications plc v Sun Life Assurance Society plc [1996] Ch. 69; [1995] 3 W.L.R. 622, CA ..... 753
- British Telecommunications plc v Ticehurst [1992] B.C.L.C. 383; [1992] I.C.R. 383, CA ..... 766, 821
- British Transport Commission v Gourley [1956] A.C. 185; [1956] 2 W.L.R. 41, HL ..... 957
- British Waggon Co v Lea & Co (1880) 5 Q.B.D. 149 ..... 756
- British Waterways Board v Norman (1994) 26 H.L.R. 232; [1994] C.O.D. 262, QBD ..... 431
- British Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co Ltd v Underground Electric Railways Co of London Ltd (No.2) [1912] A.C. 673, HL ..... 980, 981, 982
- British Columbia Saw-Mill Co Ltd v Nettle-ship (1868) L.R. 3 C.P. 499 ..... 964, 996
- Britvic Soft Drinks Ltd v Messer UK Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 548; [2002] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 321, CA ..... 54, 259, 979
- Broaders v Kalkare Property Maintenance [1990] I.R.L.R. 421, EAT ..... 435

Broadwick Financial Services Ltd v Spencer [2002] EWCA Civ 35; [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 446, CA .....	163, 428
Brocklesby v Temperance Permanent Building Society [1895] A.C. 173, HL .....	717
Brockwell v Bullock (1889) L.R. 22 Q.B.D. 567 .....	558
Broderick, Re [1986] 6 N.I.J.B. 36 .....	125
Brodie, Re; sub nom. Brodie v Brodie [1917] P. 271, P.D. 101 .....	441
Brogden v Marriott (1836) 3 Bing.N.C. 88 .....	516
Brogden v Metropolitan Railway (1877) 2 App. Cas. 666 .....	19, 22
Bromley v Smith [1909] 2 K.B. 235, KBD .....	544
Bronester v Priddle [1961] 1 W.L.R. 1294; [1961] 3 All E.R. 471, CA .....	741
Brook v Hook (1871) L.R. 6 Ex. 89 .....	724
Brooks v Beinrstein [1909] 1 K.B. 98, KBD .....	851
Brooks v Olyslager Oms (UK) Ltd [1998] I.R.L.R. 590, CA .....	457
Broom v Cassell & Co Ltd (No.1) [1972] A.C. 1027; [1972] 2 W.L.R. 645, HL .....	935, 936
Broom v Speak See Shephard v Broom .....
Brown & Davis Ltd v Galbraith [1972] 1 W.L.R. 997; [1972] 3 All E.R. 31, CA .....	584
Brown Jenkinson & Co Ltd v Percy Dalton (London) Ltd [1957] 2 Q.B. 621; [1957] 3 W.L.R. 403, CA .....	436
Brown v Brine (1875) L.R. 1 Ex.D. 5 .....	92
Brown v Byrne (1854) 3 E. & B. 703 .....	199
Brown v Duncan (1829) 10 B. & C. 93 .....	433
Brown v Gould [1972] Ch. 53; [1971] 3 W.L.R. 334, Ch D .....	49, 56, 57, 58
Brown v Harper (1893) 68 L.T. 488 .....	549
Brown v Heathlands Mental Health NHS Trust [1996] 1 All E.R. 133; (1996) 31 B.M.L.R. 57, Ch D .....	1042
Brown v KMR Services Ltd [1995] 4 All E.R. 598; [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 513, CA .....	934, 975, 981
Brown v Knowsley BC [1986] I.R.L.R. 102, EAT .....	62, 844
Brown v Leeson (1792) 2 H.Bl. 43 .....	519
Brown v McKinnally (1795) 1 Esp. 279 .....	408
Brown v Overbury (1856) 11 Exch. 715 .....	450
Brown v Raphael [1958] Ch. 636 .....	331
Brown v Sheen and Richmond Car Sales Ltd [1950] 1 All E.R. 1102; [1950] W.N. 316, KBD .....	583
Browne (A Bankrupt), Re; sub nom. Official Receiver Ex p. v Thompson [1960] 1 W.L.R. 692; [1960] 2 All E.R. 625, ch D .....	521
Browne Ex p. Martingell, Re [1904] 2 K.B. 133, KBD .....	521
Browne v Bailey (1908) 24 T.L.R. 644 .....	532
Browner International Ltd v Monarch Ship- ping Co Ltd (The European Enterprise) [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 185, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	265
Browning v Morris (1778) 2 Cowp. 790 .....	491
Browning v Provincial Insurance Co of Canada (1873) L.R. 5 P.C. 263 .....	730
Brownlie v Campbell (1879-80) L.R. 5 App. Cas. 925, HL .....	393
Brownlow Ltd v Edward Moore Inbucom Ltd [1985] 3 All E.R. 499; (1985) 82 L.S.G. 1165, CA .....	697, 698
Bruce v Warwick (1815) 6 Taunt. 118 .....	549
Bruner v Moore [1904] 1 Ch. 305, Ch D .....	24
Bruns v Colocotronis (The Vasso) [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 412, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	525
Bruton v London & Quadrant Housing Trust [1998] Q.B. 834; [1998] 3 W.L.R. 438, CA .....	172
Bryan v Maloney 74 B.L.R. 35; 51 Con. L.R. 29, HC (Aus) .....	610
Bryant v Flight (1839) 5 M. & W. 114 .....	740
Bryant v Richardson (1866) 14 L.T. 24 .....	540
BS & N Ltd (BVI) v Micado Shipping Ltd (Malta) (The Seaflower) (No.1) [2001] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 240; [2001] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 341, CA; reversing [2000] C.L.C. 795, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	65, 331, 773, 798
BS & N Ltd (BVI) v Micado Shipping Ltd (Malta) (The Seaflower) (No.2) [2000] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 169; [2000] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 37, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	964
Buckland v Farmar & Moody [1979] 1 W.L.R. 221; [1978] 3 All E.R. 929, CA .....	370, 760, 852
Buckpitt v Oates [1968] 1 All E.R. 1145, As- sises (Devon) .....	164, 544
Budgett & Co v Binnington & Co [1891] 1 Q.B. 35, CA .....	898
Building and Civil Engineering Holidays Scheme Management Ltd v Post Office [1966] 1 Q.B. 247; [1965] 2 W.L.R. 72, CA .....	969, 979
Bulk Oil (Zug) AG v Sun International Ltd and Sun Oil Trading Co Ltd [1984] 1 W.L.R. 147; [1984] 1 All E.R. 386, CA .....	449, 979
Bulk Oil (Zug) v Sun International Ltd and Sun Oil Trading Co Ltd (No.2) [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 531, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	767, 969
Bulk Trading Corp Ltd v Zenziper Grains and Feed Stuffs [2001] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 385; [2001] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 357, 2001, CA .....	50
Bull v Pitney Bowes Ltd [1967] 1 W.L.R. 273; [1966] 3 All E.R. 384, QBD .....	462, 463, 505
Bullock v Lloyds Bank Ltd [1955] Ch. 317; [1955] 2 W.L.R. 1, Ch D .....	409, 412, 419
Bunard v Haggis (1863) 14 C.B. N.S. 45 .....	551
Bunge Corp v Tradax Export SA [1981] 1 W.L.R. 711; [1981] 2 All E.R. 540, HL .....	760, 791, 795, 796, 798, 800, 801, 825, 827
Bunge Corp v Vegetable Vitamin Foods (Pte) Ltd [1985] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 613; (1984) 134 N.L.J. 125, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	769
Bunge GmbH v CCV Landbouwbeland [1980] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 458 .....	809

- Bunge NV v Compagnie Noga d'importation et d'Exportation SA (The Bow Cedar) [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 601; [1981] Com. L.R. 92, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 227
- Bunge SA v Compagnie Europeene de Cereales [1982] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 306, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 108
- Bunny v Hopkinson (1859) 27 Beav. 565 ..... 969
- Burdett-Coutts v Hertfordshire CC [1984] I.R.L.R. 91 ..... 846
- Burges v Wickham (1863) 3 B. & S. 669 ..... 195, 199
- Burges' Policy (1915) 113 L.T. 443 ..... 651
- Burgess v Cox [1951] Ch. 383; [1950] 2 All E.R. 1212, Ch D ..... 183, 185
- Burgess v Merrill (1812) 4 Taunt. 468 ..... 571
- Burgess v Purchase & Sons (Farms) Ltd [1983] Ch. 216; [1983] 2 W.L.R. 361, Ch D ..... 346
- Burgess' Policy, Re (1915) 113 L.T. 43 ..... 647, 649
- Burke v South Eastern Railway Co (1879-80) L.R. 5 C.P.D. 1; (1879) 49 L.J. Q.B. 107, CPD ..... 219
- Burmah Oil Co Ltd v Bank of England 125 S.J. 528; The Times, July 4, 1981 ..... 423
- Burn v Carvalho (1839) 3 My. & C. 690 ..... 680
- Burnett v Westminster Bank Ltd [1966] 1 Q.B. 742; [1965] 3 W.L.R. 863, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 217, 220
- Burns v Burns [1984] Ch. 317; [1984] 2 W.L.R. 582, CA ..... 166
- Burnside v Harrison Marks Productions [1968] 1 W.L.R. 782; [1968] 2 All E.R. 286, CA ..... 576
- Burrell Ex.p (1876) 1 Ch. 537 ..... 331
- Burrell v Jones (1819) 3 B. & Ald. 47 ..... 733
- Burrell & Sons v Leven (1926) 42 T.L.R. 407 ..... 88
- Burroughes v Abbott [1922] 1 Ch. 86, Ch D ..... 323
- Burrows v Lock (1805) 10 Ves. 470 ..... 403
- Burrows & Burrows v Sharp (1991) 23 H.L.R. 82; [1991] Fam. Law 67, CA ..... 145, 146, 1032
- Burrows v Brent LBC [1996] 1 W.L.R. 1448; [1996] 4 All E.R. 577, HL ..... 106, 134, 169
- Burrows v Rhodes; sub nom. Burroughs v Rhodes [1999] 1 Q.B. 816, QBD ..... 489
- Bushwall Properties Ltd v Vortex Properties Ltd [1976] 1 W.L.R. 591; [1976] 2 All E.R. 283, CA ..... 51
- Business Computers Ltd v Anglo-African Leasing Ltd [1977] 1 W.L.R. 578; [1977] 2 All E.R. 741, Ch D ..... 690
- Business Seating (Renovations) Ltd v Broad [1989] I.C.R. 729, HC ..... 508
- Bute v Thompson (1844) 13 M. & W. 487 ..... 295
- Butler Machine Tool Co v Ex-cell-o Corp (England) [1979] 1 W.L.R. 401; [1979] 1 All E.R. 965, CA ..... 19, 20, 21, 47
- Butlin's Settlement Trusts (Rectification), Re; sub nom. Butlin v Butlin (Rectification) [1976] Ch. 251; [1976] 2 W.L.R. 547; [1976] 2 All E.R. 483, Ch D ..... 321, 322, 323, 326
- Butterfield v Byron 27 N.E. 667 (1891) ..... 871
- Butterworth v Kingsway Motors Ltd [1954] 1 W.L.R. 1286; [1954] 2 All E.R. 694, As-sizes (Liverpool) ..... 1051, 1054
- Buttery v Pickard (1946) 62 T.L.R. 241 ..... 131
- Button v Thompson (1869) L.R. 4 C.P. 330 ..... 784, 786
- Button's Lease, Re; sub nom. Inman v Button [1964] Ch. 263; [1963] 3 W.L.R. 903; [1963] 3 All E.R. 708, Ch D ..... 153
- Butwick v Grant [1924] 2 K.B. 483, KBD ..... 711, 727
- Buxton v Lister (1746) 3 Atk. 383 ..... 1020, 1024
- Buxton v Rust (1871-72) L.R. 7 Ex. 279, Ex Chamber ..... 184
- BV Oliehandel Jongkind v Coastal International Ltd [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 463, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 64, 863
- Byblos Bank SAL v Rushingdale SA [1987] B.C.L.C. 232; [1986] P.C.C. 249, CA; affirming [1985] P.C.C. 342 ..... 159
- Byrne & Co v Leon Van Tien Hoven & Co (1879-80) L.R. 5 C.P.D. 344, CPD ..... 27, 41, 42
- Byrne v Schiller (1871) L.R. 6 Ex. 319 ..... 917
- C (Adult: Refusal of Medical Treatment), Re [1994] 1 W.L.R. 290; [1994] 1 All E.R. 819, Fam Div ..... 559
- C & P Haulage v Middleton [1983] 1 W.L.R. 1461; [1983] 3 All E.R. 94, CA ..... 942, 980
- C Czarnikow Ltd v Centrala Handlu Zagranicznego Rolimpex (CHZ) [1979] A.C. 351; [1978] 3 W.L.R. 274; [1978] 2 All E.R. 1043, HL ..... 65, 889, 899, 905
- C Itoh & Co Ltd v Companhia De Navegacao Lloyd Brasileiro (The Rio Assu) (No.2); C Itoh & Co Ltd v Republica Federativa Do Brasil (The Rio Assu) (No.2) [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 115, CA ..... 201
- C Joyce, The See Ben Shipping Co (Pte) Ltd v An Bord Banne
- C Sharpe & Co Ltd v Nosawa & Co [1917] 2 K.B. 814, KBD ..... 960, 963
- Cabell v Vaughan (1669) 1 Wms.Saund. 291 ..... 569, 570
- Cackett v Keswick [1902] 2 Ch. 456, CA ..... 360
- Cadbury Schweppes plc v Somji [2001] 1 W.L.R. 615; [2001] 1 B.C.L.C. 498, CA ..... 432
- Caerns Motor Services Ltd v Texaco Ltd; Geedes v Texaco Ltd [1994] 1 W.L.R. 1249; [1995] 1 All E.R. 247, Ch D ..... 694
- Caird v Moss (1886) L.R. 33 Ch. D. 22, CA ..... 326
- Calabar Properties Ltd v Stitcher [1984] 1 W.L.R. 287; [1983] 3 All E.R. 759, CA ..... 593, 753, 935, 945, 947, 990, 1035
- Calder v Dobell (1871) L.R. 6 C.P. 486 ..... 737

Calder v Rutherford (1822) 3 Brod. & B. 302 .....	570	Cap Palos, The See Owners of the Cap Palos v Alder
Caledonia North Sea Ltd v London Bridge Engineering Ltd [2002] UKHL 4; [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 321, HL .....	696	Caparo Industries plc v Dickman [1990] 2 A.C. 605; [1990] 2 W.L.R. 358, HL .....	345, 346, 347, 348, 349, 608, 612
Caledonia North Sea Ltd v Norton (No.2) Ltd See Caledonia North Sea Ltd v London Bridge Engineering Ltd		Cape Asbestos Co v Lloyds Bank [1921] W.N. 274 .....	105, 108
Calico Printers Association Ltd v Barclays Bank Ltd (1931) 39 Ll.L. Rep. 51, CA .....	747	Cape Hatteras, The See Astilleros Canarios SA v Cape Hatteras Shipping Co Inc
Callery v Gray (No.1) [2002] UKHL 28, HL; affirming [2001] EWCA Civ 1117; [2001] 1 W.L.R. 2112, CA .....	431	Capital & Suburban Properties Ltd v Swycher [1976] Ch. 319; [1976] 2 W.L.R. 822, CA .....	856
Callisher v Bischoffsheim (1869–70) L.R. 5 Q.B. 449, QB .....	89	Capital Finance Co Ltd v Bray [1964] 1 W.L.R. 323; [1964] 1 All E.R. 603, CA .....	18
Calverley v Williams (1790) 1 Ves.Jun. 209 .....	317	Capital Trust Investments Ltd v Radio Design TJ AB [2002] EWCA Civ 135; [2002] 2 All E.R. 159, CA .....	88
Cambridge Nutrition Ltd v BBC [1990] 3 All E.R. 523; The Times , December 5, 1987, CA .....	1, 85, 992, 1041	Caplen's Estate, Re (1876) 45 L.J.Ch. 280 .....	685
Cambridge v Callaghan The Times , March 21, 1997 .....	669	Caporale v Rubine 105 A. 226 (1918) .....	769
Cambro Contractors v John Kennelly Sales The Times , April 4, 1994, CA .....	325	Capper's Case (1868) L.R. 3 Ch.App. 458 .....	546
Camden Exhibition and Display v Lynott [1966] 1 Q.B. 555; [1965] 3 W.L.R. 763, CA .....	213	Captain George K, The See Palmco Shipping Inc v Continental Ore Corp
Camdex International Ltd v Bank of Zambia [1998] Q.B. 22; [1996] 3 W.L.R. 759, CA .....	695, 696	Captain Gregos, The See Cia Portoraffi Com- merciale SA v Ultramar Panama Inc
Campanari v Woodburn (1854) 15 C.B. 400 ....	750	Car and Universal Finance Co Ltd v Caldwell [1965] 1 Q.B. 525; [1964] 2 W.L.R. 600, CA .....	372, 373
Campbell v Edwards [1976] 1 W.L.R. 403; [1976] 1 All E.R. 785, CA .....	313, 346	Caraman, Rowley & May v Aperghis (1923–24) 17 Ll. L. Rep. 183, KBD .....	323
Campbell v Griffin [2001] EWCA Civ 990; [2001] W.T.L.R. 981, CA .....	136, 145	Caraman, Rowley & May v Aperghis (1928) 40 T.L.R. 124 .....	375
Campbell v Jones (1796) 6 T.R. 570 .....	763	Carapanayoti & Co v ET Green Ltd [1959] 1 Q.B. 131; [1958] 3 W.L.R. 390, QBD .....	868
Campbell Discount Co Ltd v Gall [1961] 1 Q.B. 431; [1961] 2 W.L.R. 514, CA .....	583	Care Shipping Corp v Latin American Ship- ping Corp (The Cebu) [1983] Q.B. 1005; [1983] 2 W.L.R. 829, QBD (Comm Ct) ....	676, 904
Campbell Mostyn (Provisions) Ltd v Barnett Trading Co [1954] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 65; The Times , February 10, 1954, CA .....	953	Cargill International SA v Bangladesh Sugar & Food Industries Corp [1998] 1 W.L.R. 461; [1998] 2 All E.R. 406, CA .....	1004
Canada Steamship Lines Ltd v King, The [1952] A.C. 192; [1952] 1 All E.R. 305, PC (Can) .....	222, 223	Cargill SRL (Milan) (formerly Cargill SpA) v P Kadinopoulos SA [1992] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 1; The Times , October 24, 1991, HL .....	10
Canadian Pacific Railway Co v King, The [1931] A.C. 414, PC (Can) .....	136, 137, 143	Caribonum Co Ltd v Le Couch (1913) 109 L.T. 587 .....	457
Cancol Ltd, Re [1996] 1 All E.R. 37; [1995] B.C.C. 1133, Ch D .....	129	Carlill v Carbolic Smoke Ball Co [1893] 1 Q.B. 256, CA .....	13, 24, 37, 38, 72, 162, 330, 514, 515, 516
Candler v Crane Christmas & Co [1951] 2 K.B. 164; [1951] 1 All E.R. 426, CA .....	346	Carlsh v Salt [1906] 1 Ch. 335, Ch D .....	391
Candlewood Navigation Corp v Mitsui Osk Lines (The Mineral Transporter and The Ibaraki Maru) [1986] A.C. 1; [1985] 3 W.L.R. 381, PC (Aus) .....	614, 616, 623	Carlisle and Cumberland Banking Co v Bragg [1911] 1 K.B. 489, CA .....	329
Cann v Willson (1888) L.R. 39 Ch. D. 39, Ch D .....	346	Carlton Hall Club Ltd v Laurence [1929] 2 K.B. 153, KBD .....	532, 533, 535
Cannan v Bryce (1819) 3 B. & Ald. 179 .....	510	Carlyle Finance Ltd v Pallas Industrial Fin- nance Ltd [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 659; [1999] R.T.R. 281, CA .....	18, 31
Canning v Farquhar (1885) 16 Q.B.D. 722 ....	44	Carmichael v National Power plc [1999] 1 W.L.R. 2042; [1999] 4 All E.R. 897, HL .....	167, 195, 198, 334, 833
Cannon v Hartley [1949] Ch. 213; [1949] 1 All E.R. 50, Ch D .....	683, 1036	Carne v De Bono [1988] 1 W.L.R. 1107; [1988] 3 All E.R. 485 .....	753, 1009
Cantor Fitzgerald International v Callaghan [1999] 2 All E.R. 411; [1999] I.C.R. 639, CA .....	807, 809, 813

- Carney v Herbert [1985] A.C. 301; [1984] 3 W.L.R. 1303, PC (Aus) ..... 505, 510, 511
 Carney v Plimmer [1897] 1 Q.B. 634, CA ..... 531
 Carpenter v Marnell (1802) 3 B. & P. 40 ..... 672
 Carpenters Estates Ltd v Davies [1940] Ch. 160, Ch D ..... 1035
 Carr v L & NW Railway (1875) L.R. 10 C.P. 310 ..... 110
 Carr v Lynch [1900] 1 Ch. 613, Ch D ..... 183
 Carr-Glynn v Frearsons [1999] Ch. 326; [1999] 2 W.L.R. 1046, CA ..... 617
 Carrington v Roots (1837) 2 M. & W. 248 .... 185
 Carter v Boehm (1766) 3 Burr. 1905 ..... 396
 Cartwright v Cooke (1832) 3 B. & ad. 701 .... 100
 Cartwright v Hoogstoel (1911) 105 L.T. 628 ..... 41
 Case of Sutton's Hospital (1613) 10 Co.Rep. 1 ..... 560
 Casey's Patents, Re; sub nom. Stewart v Casey [1892] 1 Ch. 104, CA ..... 78
 Casper Trader, The See Hancock Shipping Co Ltd v Deacon & Trysail (Private) Ltd
 Caspian Sea, The See Montedison SpA v Icro-ma SpA
 Caspiana, The See GH Renton & Co Ltd v Palmyra Trading Corp of Panama
 Castello's Case (1869) L.R. 8 eq. 504 ..... 546
 Castle Alpha, The See Mitsubishi Corp v Castletown Navigation
 Castle v Wilkinson (1870) L.R. 5 Ch.App. 534 ..... 1029
 Catlin v Cyprus Finance Corp (London) Ltd [1983] Q.B. 759; [1983] 2 W.L.R. 566, QBD ..... 577
 Cato v Thomson (1882) 9 Q.B.D. 616 ..... 772
 Cator v Croydon Canal Co (1841) 4 Y. & C. Ex. 405 ..... 675
 Catt v Tourle (1868-69) L.R. 4 Ch. App. 654, CA in Chancery ..... 468
 Cattle v Stockton Waterworks Co (1874-75) L.R. 10 Q.B. 453, QBD ..... 614
 Cavalier Insurance Co Ltd, Re [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 430; The Times, May 31, 1989, Ch D ..... 434, 486, 487, 492, 495
 Cavendish-Woodhouse Ltd v Manley (1984) 148 J.P. 299; 82 L.G.R. 376, DC ..... 284
 CBI NZ Ltd v Badger Chiyoda [1989] N.Z.L.R. 669 ..... 448
 CCC Films (London) v Impact Quadrant Films [1985] Q.B. 16; [1984] 3 W.L.R. 245, QBD ..... 74, 156, 940, 942, 1055, 1057
 Cebu (No.2), The See Itex Itagrani Export SA v Care Shipping Corp
 Cebu, The See Care Shipping Corp v Latin American Shipping Corporation
 Cedar Trading Co Ltd v Transworld Oil Ltd (The Gudermes) [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 623, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 55
 Cehave NV v Bremer Handels GmbH (The Hansa Nord [1976] Q.B. 44; [1975] 3 W.L.R. 447 ..... 760, 777, 794, 796, 797, 805, 808, 825, 960
 Cellulose Acetate Silk Co Ltd v Widnes Foundry (1925) Ltd [1933] A.C. 20, HL ..... 1002, 1003
 Celsteel Ltd v Alton House Holdings Ltd (No.2) [1987] 1 W.L.R. 291; [1987] 2 All E.R. 240, CA; affirming [1986] 1 All E.R. 598, Ch D ..... 391
 Cemp Properties (UK) v Dentsply Research & Development Corp (No.2) [1991] 2 E.G.L.R. 197; [1991] 34 E.G. 62, CA .... 350, 360, 363, 394
 Central de Kaap Gold Mines, Re (1899) 69 L.J.Ch. 18 ..... 824
 Central Insurance Co Ltd v Seacalf Shipping Corp (The Aiolos) [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 25, CA ..... 675, 678, 696, 697
 Central London Property Trust v High Trees House Ltd [1947] K.B. 130; [1956] 1 All E.R. 256 (Note), KBD .... 107, 112, 114, 117, 126, 131, 132, 133, 134, 140
 Central Railway of Venezuela v Kisch See Venezuela Central Railway Co v Kisch
 Centrovincial Estates v Merchant Investors Assurance Co [1983] Com. L.R. 158, CA .... 8, 87, 306, 307
 Century Textiles and Industry Ltd v Tomoe Shipping Co (Singapore) Pte Ltd (The Aditya Vaibhav) (No.1) [1991] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 573, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 788
 Cerberus Software Ltd v Rowley [2001] EWCA Civ 78; [2001] I.C.R. 376, CA .... 845
 Cerealmangimi SpA v Alfred C Toepfer (The Eurometal) [1981] 3 All E.R. 533; [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 337, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 814, 836
 Cerebus Softwar Ltd v Rowley [2001] EWCA Civ 74; [2001] I.C.R. 376 ..... 980
 Ceres Stevedoring Co Ltd v Eisen und Metall AG (1976) 72 D.L.R. (3d) 660 ..... 633
 Cerium Investments v Evans [1991] 20 E.G. 189; (1991) 135 S.J.L.B. 217, CA ..... 844
 Cert plev George Hammond plc [1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 976; [2000] C.L.C. 387, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 223, 224
 CH Giles & Co Ltd v Morris [1972] 1 W.L.R. 307; [1972] 1 All E.R. 960, Ch D ... 1031, 1032
 Chakki v United Yeast Co Ltd [1981] 2 All E.R. 446; [1982] I.C.R. 140, EAT ... 891, 905
 Challoner v Bower (1984) 269 E.G. 725 ..... 8
 Chalmers Ex p. (1873) L.R. 8 Ch.App. 289 .... 774, 834
 Chamber Colliery Co Ltd v Twyterould (1893) [1915] 1 Ch. 268n ..... 702
 Chamberlain v Boodle & King [1982] 1 W.L.R. 1443; [1982] 3 All E.R. 188, CA ..... 51
 Chamberlain v Stoneham (1889) 24 Q.B.D. 113 ..... 93
 Champanhac & Co Ltd v Waller & Co Ltd [1948] 2 All E.R. 724, KBD ..... 950
 Chancery Lane Developments Ltd v Wades Departmental Stores Ltd (1987) 53 P. & C.R. 306, CA ..... 828

- Chanda, The See Wibau Maschnefabrik Hartman SA v Mackinnon Mackenzie
 Chandle v East African Airways Corporation [1964] F.A. 78 ..... 989
- Chandler v Kerley [1978] 1 W.L.R. 693; [1978] 2 All E.R. 942, CA ..... 444
- Chandler v Webster [1904] 1 K.B. 493, CA .... 910, 911
- Chandris v Argo Insurance Co Ltd [1963] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 65; 107 S.J. 575, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 1013
- Chandris v Isbrandtsen Moller Co Inc [1951] 1 K.B. 240; [1950] 2 All E.R. 618, CA ..... 239
- Channel Home Centers Division of Grace Retail Corporation v Grossman 795 F.2d 291 (1986) ..... 60
- Channel Island Ferries Ltd v Cenargo Navigation Ltd (The Rozel) [1994] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 161; The Times, April 5, 1994, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 945, 947
- Channel Island Ferries Ltd v Sealink UK Ltd [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 323, CA ..... 901
- Channel Tunnel Group Ltd v Balfour Beatty Construction Ltd; France Manche SA v Balfour Beatty Construction Ltd [1993] A.C. 334; [1993] 2 W.L.R. 262, HL ..... 447, 1035, 1041
- Chanter v Hopkins (1838) 4 M. & W. 399 ..... 227, 818, 834
- Chapelton v Barry Urban DC [1940] 1 K.B. 532, CA ..... 14, 217
- Chaplin v Hicks [1911] 2 K.B. 786, CA ..... 956
- Chaplin v Leslie Frewin (Publishers) Ltd [1966] Ch. 71; [1966] 2 W.L.R. 40, CA ..... 544, 549, 550, 571
- Chaplin & Co v Brammall [1908] 1 K.B. 233, CA ..... 408, 425
- Chapman v Black (1819) 2 B. & Ald. 588 ..... 528
- Chapman v Fraser (1795) ..... 373
- Chapman v Michaelson [1909] 1 Ch. 238, CA; affirming [1908] 2 Ch. 612, Ch D ..... 491
- Chappell v Times Newspapers Ltd [1975] 1 W.L.R. 482; [1975] 2 All E.R. 233, CA ..... 843, 1028, 1029, 1042
- Chappell & Co Ltd v Nestle Co Ltd [1960] A.C. 87; [1959] 3 W.L.R. 168, HL ..... 85, 86
- Chapple v Cooper (1844) 13 M. & W. 252 ..... 540, 541
- Charge Card Services Ltd, Re [1989] Ch. 497; [1988] 3 W.L.R. 764; [1988] 3 All E.R. 702, CA ..... 12, 18, 81, 85, 211, 583, 702, 755
- Charles Rickards Ltd v Oppenheim [1950] 1 K.B. 616; [1950] 1 All E.R. 420, CA ..... 105, 106
- Charles Roberts & Co v British Railways Board [1965] 1 W.L.R. 396; [1964] 3 All E.R. 651, Ch D ..... 564
- Charlton v Fisher [2001] F.W.C. Civ 112; [2002] Q.B. 578, CA .... 437, 438, 481, 668, 669
- Charnock v Liverpool Corporation [1968] 1 W.L.R. 1498; [1968] 3 All E.R. 473, CA ..... 156, 584
- Charter v Sullivan [1957] 2 Q.B. 117; [1957] 2 W.L.R. 528, CA ..... 948, 955
- Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China v British India Steam Navigation Co Ltd [1909] A.C. 369, PC (Straits Settlements) ..... 231
- Charterhouse Credit Co v Tolly [1963] 2 Q.B. 683; [1963] 2 W.L.R. 1168, CA ..... 225, 226, 239, 818, 853, 945, 947, 1057
- Chas Davis (Metal Brokers) Ltd v Gilyott & Scott Ltd [1975] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 422, QBD ..... 638
- Chase Manhattan Equities v Goodman [1991] B.C.C. 308; [1991] B.C.L.C. 897 .... 195, 338, 391, 399, 487
- Chasen Rider v Hedges [1993] 1 E.G.L.R. 47 ..... 741
- Chatterton v Maclean [1951] 1 All E.R. 761, KBD ..... 851
- Chattey v Farndale Holdings Inc (1998) 75 P. & C.R. 298; [1997] 1 E.G.L.R. 153, CA ..... 1036
- Chaucer Estates v Fairclough Homes [1991] E.G.C.S. 65, CA ..... 881
- Chaudhry v Prabhakar [1989] 1 W.L.R. 29; [1988] 3 All E.R. 718, CA ... 157, 345, 347, 388
- Cheale v Kenward (1858) 3 D. & J. 27 ..... 76, 87
- Cheall v Association of Professional, Executive, Clerical and Computer Staff (APEX) [1983] 2 A.C. 180; [1983] 2 W.L.R. 679; [1983] 1 All E.R. 1130, HL ..... 168, 467, 478, 844
- Cheese v Thomas [1994] 1 W.L.R. 129; [1994] 1 All E.R. 35, CA .... 145, 380, 382, 414, 423
- Cheikh Boutros Selim El-Khoury v Ceylon Shipping Lines (The Madeleine) [1967] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 224, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 779
- Chelini v Nieri 196 P.2d 915 (1988) ..... 936, 989
- Chelmsford Auctions Ltd v Poole [1973] Q.B. 542; [1973] 2 W.L.R. 219, CA ..... 738
- Chelsea & Waltham Green Building Society v Armstrong [1951] Ch. 853; [1951] 2 All E.R. 250, Ch D ..... 669
- Chelsea v Muscut [1990] 2 E.G.L.R. 48 ..... 1041
- Chemco Leasing SpA v Rediffusion [1987] 1 F.T.L.R. 201, CA ..... 43, 168
- Chemical Venture, The See Pearl Carriers Inc v Japan Line Ltd
- Chemidus Wavin Ltd v Societe pour la Transformation et l'Exploitation des Resines Industrielles SA [1978] 3 C.M.L.R. 514; [1977] F.S.R. 181, CA ..... 510
- Cherry v Colonial Bank of Australasia (1869) L.R. 3 P.C. 24 ..... 334, 565, 739
- Chesterfield v Janssen [1750] 1 Atk. 301; (1750) 2 Ves.Sen. 125 ..... 420
- Chesterton v Barone [1987] 1 E.G.L.R. 15 ..... 737
- Chettiar (ARPL Palaniappa) v Chettiar (PLAR Arunasalam) [1962] A.C. 294; [1962] 2 W.L.R. 548, PC (FMS) .... 450, 494, 500, 501
- Chevalier Roze, The See Neptune Orient Lines Ltd v JVC (UK) Ltd

- Chevron International Oil Co Ltd v A/S Sea Team (The TS Havprins)* [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 356; [1983] Com. L.R. 172, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 728
- Chichester v Cobb* (1866) 14 L.T. 433 .... 97, 183
- Chief Constable of Hampshire v A* [1985] Q.B. 132; [1984] 2 W.L.R. 954, CA ..... 502
- Chief Constable of Kent v V* [1983] Q.B. 34; [1982] 3 W.L.R. 462, CA ..... 502
- Chief Constable of Leicestershire v M* [1989] 1 W.L.R. 20 ..... 502
- Chief Constable of North Wales v Evans* [1982] 1 W.L.R. 1155; [1982] 3 All E.R. 141HL ..... 1030
- Chief Constable of Surrey v A* The Times, October 27, 1988 ..... 502
- Chief Constable of the West Midlands v White* (1992) 156 J.P.N. 762; (1993) 157 L.G. Rev. 226, QBD ..... 501
- Chiemgauer Membran und Zeltbau GmbH (formerly Koch Hightex GmbH) v New Millennium Experience Co Ltd (formerly Millennium Central Ltd) (No.2)* [2002] B.P.I.R. 42; (2001) 98(5) L.S.G. 36, Ch D ..... 964
- Chikuma, The See Awilco of Oslo A/S v Fulvia SpA di Navigazione di Cagliari*
- Chilean Nitrate Sales Corp v Marine Transportation Co Ltd (The Hermosa)* [1982] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 570; The Times, March 4, 1982, CA ..... 774, 857, 862, 868
- Chillingworth v Esche*; sub nom. Chillingworth v Esche [1924] 1 Ch. 97; [1923] All E.R. Rep. 97, CA ..... 53, 59, 1007
- China National Foreign Trade Transportation Corp v Evlogia Shipping Co SA of Panama (The Mihalios Xilas)* [1979] 1 W.L.R. 1018; [1979] 2 All E.R. 1044, HL ..... 107, 108, 812, 813, 815
- China-Pacific SA v Food Corp of India (The Winson)* [1982] A.C. 939; [1981] 3 W.L.R. 860, HL ..... 108, 719, 720, 721, 722
- Chinn v Collins* [1981] A.C. 533 ..... 686
- Chinn v Hochstrasser* [1981] A.C. 533; [1981] 2 W.L.R. 14, HL; reversing [1979] Ch. 447, CA ..... 1020
- Chinnock v Sainsbury* (1861) 30 L.J.Ch. 409 ..... 1031
- Chiodi v De Marney* (1989) 21 H.L.R. 6; [1988] 41 E.G. 80, CA ..... 990
- Chiron Corp v Murex Diagnostics Ltd (No.8)* [1995] All E.R. (E.C.) 88; [1995] F.S.R. 309; The Times, October 14, 1994, CA ..... 285
- Chiswell Shipping and Liberian Jaguar Transports Inc v National Iranian Tankers Co (The World Symphony and The World Renown)* [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 115, CA; affirming [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 251, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 996, 997
- Choko Star, The See Industrie Chimiche Italia Centrale and Cerealfin SA v Alexander G Tsavlis & Sons Maritime Co*
- Chorley BC v Ribble Motor Services* (1997) 74 P. & C.R. 182; [1996] E.G.C.S. 110, CA ..... 205
- Chrisdell v Johnson and Tickner* (1987) 19 H.L.R. 406; (1987) 54 P. & C.R. 257, CA ..... 815
- Christie Owen & Davies v Rapacioli* [1974] Q.B. 781; [1974] 2 W.L.R. 723, CA ..... 49, 742
- Christie Owen & Davies v Stockton* [1953] 1 W.L.R. 1353; [1953] 2 All E.R. 1149, QBD ..... 742
- Christie v Borelly* (1860) 29 L.J.Ch. 153 ..... 763
- Christopher & Co v Essig* [1948] W.N. 461; 92 S.J. 675 ..... 40
- Christy v Pilkington* 273 S.W. 2d. 533 (1954) ..... 838
- Christy v Row* (1808) 1 Taunt. 300 ..... 819
- Chrysalis, The See Finelvet AG v Vinava Shipping Co*
- CHT Ltd v Ward* [1965] 2 Q.B. 63; [1963] 3 W.L.R. 1071, CA ..... 531, 532, 533, 534
- Chubb Cash v John Crilley & Son* [1983] 1 W.L.R. 599; [1983] 2 All E.R. 294, CA ..... 1054
- Churchward v Churchward* [1895] P. 7, PDAD ..... 441
- CIA Barca de Panama SA v George Wimpey & Co Ltd (No.1)* [1980] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 598, CA ..... 63
- Cia Portocrafti Commerciale SA v Ultramar Panama Inc (The Captain Gregos) (No.2)* [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 395, CA ..... 121, 169, 589, 641
- CIBC Mortgages plc v Pitt* [1994] 1 A.C. 200; [1993] 3 W.L.R. 802, HL ..... 409, 410, 425
- Cie Commerciale Sucres et Denrees v C Czarnikow Ltd (The Naxos)* [1990] 1 W.L.R. 1337; [1990] 3 All E.R. 641, HL ..... 798, 799, 800
- Cie Francaise de Chemin de Fer Paris-Orleans v Leeston Shipping Co* (1919) 1 L.L.R. 235 ..... 375
- Cie. Francaise d'Importation etc. SA v Deutsche Continental Handelsgesellschaft* [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 592 ..... 9, 10, 32, 109
- Cil v Owners of the Turiddu (The Turiddu)* [1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 161; [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 401 ..... 591, 605
- Cipriani v Burnett* [1933] A.C. 83; [1933] 1 W.W.R. 1, PC (Trin) ..... 450
- Circle Freight International Ltd v Medeast Gulf Exports Ltd* [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 427, CA ..... 217, 220
- Ciro Citterio Menswear plc (In Administration), Re See* Ciro Citterio Menswear plc v Thakrar
- Ciro Citterio Menswear plc v Thakrar* [2002] EWHC 662; [2002] 1 W.L.R. 2217; [2002] 2 All E.R. 717 ..... 513
- Citadel Insurance Co v Atlantic Union Insurance Co SA* [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 543; [1982] Com. L.R. 213, CA ..... 21, 22, 55, 84, 154, 392

Citibank NA v Brown Shipley & Co Ltd [1991] 2 All E.R. 690; [1991] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 576, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 301, 302, 306	Cloughton v Price (1998) 30 H.L.R. 396; [1997] E.G.C.S. 51, CA ..... 412, 419
Citizen's Bank of Louisiana v First National Bank of New Orleans (1873) L.R. 6 H.L. 352, HL ..... 116	Clay v Southern (1852) 7 Ex. 717 ..... 733
Cito, The (1882) L.R. 7 P.D. 5, CA ..... 783	Clay v Yates (1856) 1 H. & N. 73 ..... 432, 433, 485
City and Hackney HA v National Union of Public Employees (NUPE) [1985] I.R.L.R. 252; (1985) 82 L.S.G. 118, CA ..... 1042	Clay's Policy of Assurance, Re [1937] 2 All E.R. 548 ..... 647, 649, 651, 666
City and Westminster Properties (1934) Ltd v Mudd [1959] Ch. 129; [1958] 3 W.L.R. 312, Ch D ..... 200	Claygate v Batchelor (1602) Owen 143 ..... 453
City Index v Leslie [1992] Q.B. 98; [1991] 3 W.L.R. 207, CA ..... 521	Clayton v Ashdown (1714) 2 Eq.Ca.Abr. 516 ..... 545
Civic Structures v Clark Quinney & Co [1991] 2 E.G.L.R. 165; [1991] 47 E.G. 97 ..... 349	Clayton v Ashdown (1714) 9 Vin. Abr. 393 (G.4) 1 ..... 1037
Civil Service Cooperative Society v General Stream Navigation Co [1903] 2 K.B. 756, CA ..... 910	Clayton v Jennings (1760) 2 W.B. 706 ..... 150
Clapham v Draper (1885) Cab. & El. 484 ..... 824	Clea Shipping Corp v Bulk Oil International (The Alaskan Trader) (No.1) [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 315; [1983] Com. L.R. 222, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 449, 846
Clare v Lamb (1874-75) L.R. 10 C.P. 334; (1875) 23 W.R. 389, CCP ..... 287	Clea Shipping Corp v Bulk Oil International (The Alaskan Trader) (No.2) [1984] 1 All E.R. 129; [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 645, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 1016, 1017, 1018
Clarion Ltd v National Provident Institution [2000] 1 W.L.R. 1888; [2000] 2 All E.R. 265, Ch D ..... 202, 203, 206, 208, 313, 433	Cleadon Trust Ltd v Davis [1940] Ch. 940, CA ..... 1037
Clark v BET plc [1997] I.R.L.R. 348; [1997] O.P.L.R. 1, QBD ..... 955, 977	Cleaver v Mutual Reserve Fund Life Associa- tion [1892] 1 Q.B. 147, CA ..... 591, 649, 650
Clark v Kirby Smith [1964] Ch. 506; [1964] 3 W.L.R. 239, Ch D ..... 841, 957, 976, 984	Cleaves Western Valleys Anthracite Collieries Ltd v Owners of The Penelope [1928] P. 180; (1928) 31 Ll. L. Rep. 96, PDAD ..... 899
Clark v Lindsay (1902) 88 L.T. 198 ..... 271, 288, 869	Clef Aquitaine Sarl v Laporte Materials (Bar- row) Ltd [2001] Q.B. 488; [2000] 3 W.L.R. 1760, CA ..... 341, 361, 937
Clark v Malpas (1862) 4 D.F. & J. 401 ..... 420	Clegg v Hands (1890) L.R. 44 Ch. D. 503, CA ..... 694
Clark v University of Lincolnshire and Hum- berside [2000] 1 W.L.R. 1988; [2000] 3 All E.R. 752, CA ..... 450	Clements v London and North Western Rail- way Co [1894] 2 Q.B. 482, CA ..... 543, 547
Clark v West Ham Corporation [1909] 2 K.B. 858 ..... 244	Cleobulos Shipping Co Ltd v Intertanker Ltd (The Cleon) [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 586, CA ..... 760, 788
Clark Boyce v Mouat [1994] 1 A.C. 428; [1993] 3 W.L.R. 1021, PC (NZ) ..... 746	Cleon, The See Cleobulos Shipping Co Ltd v Intertanker Ltd
Clarke v Bruce Lance & Co [1988] 1 W.L.R. 881; [1988] 1 All E.R. 364, CA ..... 608	Cleveland Manufacturing Co Ltd v Muslim Commercial Bank Ltd [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 646; [1981] Com. L.R. 247, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 712
Clarke v Chadburn [1985] 1 W.L.R. 78; [1985] 1 All E.R. 211, Ch D ..... 432, 481	Cleveland Petroleum Co Ltd v Dartstone Ltd (No.1) [1969] 1 W.L.R. 116; [1969] 1 All E.R. 201, CA ..... 472, 473
Clarke v Cobleigh (1789) 2 Cox 173 ..... 554	Cleveland Petroleum Co v Trinity Garage (Bexleyheath) The Times , September 8, 1965 ..... 509
Clarke v Dickson (1858) El. Bl. & El. 148 ... 378, 380	Clifford Davis Management Ltd v WEA Rec- ords Ltd [1975] 1 W.L.R. 61; [1975] 1 All E.R. 237, CA ..... 421, 456, 461, 464, 1041
Clarke v Earl of Dunraven (The Satanita ) [1897] A.C. 59, HL; affirming [1895] P. 248, CA ..... 47, 585, 632	Clifford v Turrell (1841) 1 Y. & C. Ch. 138 ..... 1021
Clarke v Mackintosh (1862) 4 Giff. 134 ..... 339	Clifton v Palumbo [1944] 2 All E.R. 497, CA ..... 11
Clarke v Nationwide Anglia Building Society [1998] E.G.C.S. 47; (1998) 95(12) L.S.G. 29, CA ..... 100, 169	Clipper Maritime Ltd v Shirlstar Container Transport Ltd (The Anemone ) [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 546, QBD (Comm Ct) .... 55, 119, 182, 185, 403
Clarke v Newland [1991] 1 All E.R. 397, CA ..... 461	Clipsam v Vertue (1843) 5 Q.B. 265 ..... 795
Clarke v Shee and Johnson (1774) 1 Cowp. 197 ..... 535, 536	Clive v Beaumont (1847) 1 De G. & Sm. 397 ..... 19
Clarkson Booker Ltd v Andjel [1964] 2 Q.B. 775 ..... 737
Claude Neon Ltd v Hardie [1970] Qd.Rep. 93 ..... 898

- Clough Mill Ltd v Martin [1985] 1 W.L.R. 111; [1984] 3 All E.R. 982, CA ..... 1051
- Clough v Kelly (1996) 72 P. & C.R. D22 ..... 136, 145
- Clough v London and North Western Railway Co (1871-72) L.R. 7 Ex. 26, Ex Chamber ..... 371, 384
- Clowes Developments (UK) Ltd v Mulchinnock [1998] 1 W.L.R. 42; [1997] N.P.C. 47, Ch D ..... 762
- Clowes v Higginson (1813) 1 v & B. 524 ..... 317
- Clubb v Huston (1865) 18 C.B. (N.S.) 414 ..... 445
- Clugas v Penaluna (1791) 4 T.R. 466 ..... 510
- Clyde Cycle Co v Hargreaves (1898) 78 L.T. 296 ..... 540
- Clydebank Engineering & Shipbuilding Co Ltd v Don Jose Ramos Yzquierdo y Castaneda [1905] A.C. 6, HL ..... 934, 1000, 1001
- CMA CGM SA veteiligungs KG MS Northern Pioneer Schifffahrtsgesellschaft mbH & Co [2002] EWCA Civ 1878; [2003] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 204, CA ..... 449
- CMG, Re [1970] Ch. 574; [1970] 3 W.L.R. 80, CP ..... 412
- CN Marine Inc v Stena Line A/B (The Stena Nautica) (No.2) [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 336; [1982] Com. L.R. 203, CA .... 620, 624, 1023, 1026
- Coastal (Bermuda) Petroleum Ltd v VTT Vulcan Petroleum SA (No.1) (The Marine Star) [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 329, CA ..... 878, 892
- Coastal (Bermuda) Petroleum Ltd v VTT Vulcan Petroleum SA (No.2) (The Marine Star) [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 383; [1996] C.L.C. 1510, CA; reversing [1994] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 629, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 172, 972, 973, 977
- Coastal International Trading (now Challenger Petroleum Ltd) v Maroil AG [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 92, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 970
- Cobec Brazilian Trading & Warehousing Corp v Toepfer [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 386, CA ..... 783, 785, 813, 815
- Cochrane v Moore (1890) 25 Q.B.D. 57 ..... 685
- Cockerton v Naviera Aznar, SA [1960] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 450, QBD ..... 14
- Cocking v Pratt (1749) 1 Ves.Sen. 400 ..... 312, 319, 412
- Cockshott v Bennett (1788) 2 Term Rep. 763 ..... 432
- Coco Cola Financial Corporation v First National Ltd [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 274 ..... 202, 205
- Codelfa Construction Pty Ltd v State Rail Authority of NSW (1982) 149 C.L.R. 337 ..... 879, 886
- Coggs v Bernard (1703) 2 Ld.Raym. 909 ..... 156
- Cohen v J Lester Ltd [1939] 1 K.B. 504, KBD ..... 491
- Cohen v Kittell (1889) L.R. 22 Q.B.D. 680, QBD ..... 524
- Cohen v Nessdale Ltd [1982] 2 All E.R. 97, CA; affirming [1981] 3 All E.R. 118; (1982) 263 E.G. 437, QBD ..... 53
- Cohen v Roche [1927] 1 K.B. 169, KBD ..... 184
- Cointat v Myham & Son [1913] 2 K.B. 220, KBD ..... 435, 437, 968, 992
- Colburn v Patmore (1834) 1 Cr. M & R. 72; (1834) 4 Tyr. 677 ..... 435
- Colchester BC v Smith [1992] Ch. 421; [1992] 2 W.L.R. 728, CA; affirming [1991] Ch. 448; [1991] 2 W.L.R. 540, Ch D ..... 84, 89, 90, 120
- Coldunell v Gallon [1986] Q.B. 1184; [1986] 2 W.L.R. 466, CA ..... 412, 418, 428
- Cole v Gibson (1750) 1 Ves.Sen. 503 ..... 443
- Cole v Gower (1805) 6 East 110 ..... 441
- Cole v Rose [1978] 3 All E.R. 1121, DC ..... 827, 830, 1008
- Cole, Re [1964] Ch. 175 ..... 685
- Colebrook's Conveyances, Re; sub nom. Taylor v Taylor [1972] 1 W.L.R. 1397; [1973] 1 All E.R. 132, Ch D ..... 323
- Cole-McIntyre-Norfleet Co v Holloway 141 Tenn. 679; 214 S.W. 87 (1919) ..... 33
- Coles v NW Bank (1875) L.R. 10 C.P. 354 ..... 717
- Coles v Trecothick (1804) 9 Ves. 234 ..... 421, 1027
- Colledge v Bass Mitchells & Butlers Ltd [1988] 1 All E.R. 536; [1988] I.C.R. 125, CA ..... 981
- Colley v Overseas Exporters (1919) Ltd [1921] 3 K.B. 302; (1921) 8 Ll. L. Rep. 127, KBD ..... 63
- Collier v Brown (1788) 1 Cox C.C. 428 ..... 421, 1027
- Collier v Hollinshead (1984) 272 E.G. 941 .... 165
- Collin v Duke of Westminster [1985] Q.B. 581; [1985] 2 W.L.R. 553, CA ..... 10, 35, 99, 107, 109
- Collings v Lee [2001] 2 All E.R. 332; (2001) 82 P. & C.R. 3, CA ..... 303, 371
- Collins v Associated Greyhound Racecourses Ltd [1930] 1 Ch. 1, CA ..... 728
- Collins v Blantern (1767) 2 Wils.K.B. 341 ..... 445
- Collins v Brook (1860) 5 H. & N. 700 ..... 585
- Collins v Godefroy (1831) 1 B. & Ad. 950 ..... 93
- Collins v Locke (1879) 4 App.Cas. 674 ..... 465
- Collins v Prosser (1823) 1 B. & C. 682 ..... 568
- Colonia Versicherung AG v Amoco Oil Co (The Wind Star) [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 261; [1997] C.L.C. 454, CA; affirming [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 570, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 70, 89, 667
- Colonial Mutual General Insurance Co Ltd v ANZ Banking Group (New Zealand) Ltd [1995] 1 W.L.R. 1140; [1995] 3 All E.R. 987, PC (NZ) ..... 676, 679
- Coloniale Import-Export v Loumidis Sons [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 560, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 65
- Colt v Nettervill (1725) 2 P.Wms. 301 ..... 1020
- Colyer v Mulgrave (1836) 2 Keen 81 ..... 651
- Colyer v Clay (1843) 7 Beav.188 ..... 311, 312

- Combe v Combe; sub nom. Coombe v Coombe [1951] 2 K.B. 215; [1951] 1 All E.R. 767, CA ..... 91, 112, 113, 114, 123, 131, 134
- Comdel Commodities Ltd v Siporex Trade SA [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 424, CA ..... 1004
- Comemisco Ltd v Contrapol, unreported, 1983 ..... 260
- Comet Group v British Sky Broadcasting The Times, April 26, 1991 ..... 842
- Comfort v Betts [1891] 1 Q.B. 737, CA ..... 677
- Commercial Fibres (Ireland) Ltd v Zabaida (t/a Lenmore Trading) [1975] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 27, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 950
- Commercial Plastics Ltd v Vincent [1965] 1 Q.B. 623; [1964] 3 W.L.R. 820, CA ..... 454, 457, 461, 507, 508, 509
- Commercial Union Assurance Co plc v Sun Alliance Insurance Group plc [1992] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 475, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 120
- Commission for the New Towns v Cooper (Great Britain) Ltd (formerly Coopind UK) [1995] Ch. 259; [1995] 2 W.L.R. 677, CA ..... 49, 53, 164, 178, 180, 322, 324, 339
- Commission of the European Communities v United Kingdom (165/82) [1984] 1 All E.R. 353; [1983] E.C.R. 3431, ECJ ..... 168
- Commissioner of Public Works v Hills [1906] A.C. 368; (1906) 22 T.L.R. 589, PC (Cape) ..... 1007, 1008
- Commissioner of Stamp Duties v Bone [1977] A.C. 511; [1976] 2 W.L.R. 968, PC (Aus) ..... 99, 573
- Commonwealth of Australia v Amann Aviation Pty Ltd (1991) 66 A.L.J.R. 123 ..... 942, 955
- Commonwealth of Australia v Verwayen (1990) 95 A.L.R. 321; (1990) 170 C.L.R. 394 ... 114, 119
- Compagnie de Commerce et Commission, SARL v Parkinson Stove Co [1953] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 487, CA ..... 17
- Compagnie Generale Maritime v Diakan Spirit SA (The Ymnos) (No.2) [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 574; [1982] Com. L.R. 228, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 795, 796, 798, 800
- Compania Colombiana de Seguros v Pacific Steam Navigation Co (The Colombiana) [1965] 1 Q.B. 101; [1964] 2 W.L.R. 484, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 696
- Compania Continental del Peru SA v Evelpis Shipping Corp (The Agia Skepi) [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 467, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 156, 641, 984
- Compania Financiera Soleada SA v Hamoor Tanker Corp Inc (The Borag) [1981] 1 W.L.R. 274; [1981] 1 All E.R. 856, CA ..... 978
- Compania Naviera General SA v Kerametal (The Lorna I) [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 373; [1982] Com. L.R. 257, CA ..... 783, 917
- Company (No.001946 of 1991) Ex p. Fin Soft Holdings SA, Re [1991] B.C.L.C. 737 ..... 338
- Company, A, Re [1989] 2 All E.R. 248 ..... 455
- Comptoir Commercial Anversois v Power Son & Co See Arbitration between Comptoir Commercial Anversois and Power Son & Co, Re
- Concordia C, The See Rheinoel GmbH v Huron Liberian Co
- Concordia Trading BV v Richco International Ltd [1991] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 475, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 799
- Condor v The Barron Knights Ltd [1966] 1 W.L.R. 87; 110 S.J. 71 ..... 872
- Congimex Companhia Geral de Comercio Importadora e Exportadora Sarl v Tradax Export SA [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 250, CA; affirming [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 687 ... 65, 880, 886, 887, 889
- Congimex Sarl (Lisbon) v Continental Grain Export Corp (New York) [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 346, CA ..... 838, 876, 886, 890
- Connaught Restaurants v Indoor Leisure [1994] 1 W.L.R. 501; [1994] 4 All E.R. 834, CA ..... 222, 237, 265, 788
- Connolly Shaw Ltd v A/S Det Nordenfeldske D/S (1934) 49 Ll. L. Rep. 183, KBD ..... 230
- Connolly-Martin v Davis; sub nom. Connolly-Martin v D [1999] Lloyd's Rep. P.N. 790; [1999] P.N.L.R. 826, CA ..... 611
- Connors Bros v Connors Ltd [1940] 4 All E.R. 179 ..... 455
- Constantine v Imperial Hotels Ltd [1944] K.B. 693, KBD ..... 4
- Constantinidi v Ralli [1935] Ch. 427, Ch D ..... 323
- Consten v Commission of the European Communities (C56/64); Grundig v Commission of the European Communities (C58/64) [1966] E.C.R. 299 ..... 476
- Construction Industry Training Board v Labour Force Ltd [1970] 3 All E.R. 220; 9 K.I.R. 269, DC ..... 584
- Container Transport International Inc v Oceanus Mutual Underwriting Association (Bermuda) Ltd (No.1) [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 476, CA ..... 17, 342, 392, 395, 396
- Continental Grain Export Corp v STM Grain Ltd (Charles E Ford Ltd) [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 460, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 101, 865, 878
- Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co of Chicago v Papanicolaou (The Fedora, The Tatiana and The Eretrea II) [1986] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 441; [1986] Fin. L.R. 373, CA ..... 237
- Convenience Co Ltd v Roberts; Convenience Co Ltd v Noton [2001] F.S.R. 35, QBD ... 458, 459
- Cooden Engineering Co v Stanford [1953] 1 Q.B. 86; [1952] 2 All E.R. 915, CA ..... 1005
- Cook v Fearn (1878) 48 L.J.Ch. 63 ..... 325
- Cook v Field (1850) 15 Q.B. 460 ..... 516
- Cook v Lister (1863) 13 C.B.N.S. 543 ... 128, 129, 756
- Cook v Spanish Holiday Tours Ltd The Times, February 6, 1960 ..... 989

- Cook v Swinfen* [1967] 1 W.L.R. 457; [1967] 1 All E.R. 299, CA ..... 992, 993
- Cook v Taylor* [1942] Ch. 349, Ch D ..... 897
- Cook v Wright* (1861) 1 B. & S. 559 ..... 89, 90
- Cook Industries Inc v Meunerie Liegeois SA* [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 359, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 108, 109
- Cook Industries Inc v Tradax Export SA* [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 327, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 109, 883
- Cooke & Sons v Eshelby* (1887) L.R. 12 App. Cas. 271, HL ..... 727, 730
- Cooke v Oxley* (1790) 3 T.R. 653 ..... 68, 153
- Cooker v Child* (1673) 2 Lev. 74 ..... 669
- Cook's Settlement Trusts, Re* [1965] Ch. 902; [1965] 2 W.L.R. 179, Ch D ..... 589, 649, 651
- Coomber, Re* [1911] 1 Ch. 723, CA ..... 412, 419
- Coombes v Smith* [1986] 1 W.L.R. 808; [1987] 1 F.L.R. 352, Ch D ..... 81, 135, 141, 166
- Coope v Ridout* [1921] 1 Ch. 291, CA ..... 53
- Cooper v Firth Brown, Ltd* [1963] 1 W.L.R. 418; [1963] 2 All E.R. 31, Assizes (Sheffield) ..... 957
- Cooper v Micklefield Coal & Lime Co Ltd* (1912) 107 L.T. 457 ..... 694
- Cooper v National Provincial Bank Ltd* [1946] K.B. 1, KBD ..... 398
- Cooper v Parker* (1885) 15 C.B. 822 ..... 126
- Cooper v Pibbs* (1867) L.R. 2 H.L. 149, HL (UK-Irl) ..... 287, 314, 319, 320, 321, 382
- Cooper v Tamms* [1988] 1 E.G.L.R. 257, DC ..... 338, 351, 363
- Cooperative Bank plc v Tipper* [1996] 4 All E.R. 366; The Times, July 5, 1996, Ch D ..... 323
- Cooperative Insurance Society Ltd v Argyll Stores (Holdings) Ltd* [1998] A.C. 1; [1997] 2 W.L.R. 898, HL ..... 1019, 1020, 1026, 1032, 1033, 1034, 1043
- Cooperative Retail Services Ltd v Taylor Young Partnership Ltd* [2002] UKHL 17; [2002] 1 W.L.R. 1419, HL ..... 224, 1056
- Cooperative Wholesale Society Ltd (t/a CWS Engineering Group) v Birse Construction Ltd* (formerly Peter Birse Ltd [1997] C.L.C. 1290; 84 B.L.R. 58, CA ..... 606
- Cooter & Green v Tyrell* [1962] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 377 ..... 584
- Cope v Rowlands* (1836) 2 M. & W. 149 ..... 434, 488
- Coppin v Walker* (1816) 7 Taunt. 237 ..... 738
- Coppock v Bower* (1838) 4 M. & W. 361 ..... 446
- Coral (UK) Ltd v Rechtman and Altro Mozart Food Handels GmbH* [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 235, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 735
- Coral Leisure Group v Barnett* [1981] I.C.R. 503; [1981] I.R.L.R. 204, EAT ..... 430, 444, 484
- Coral v Kleyman* [1951] 1 All E.R. 518; [1951] W.N. 138, KBD ..... 520
- Coral, The See Balli Trading Ltd v Afalona Shipping Ltd*
- Corbett v Bond Pearce (A Firm)* [2001] EWCA Civ 531; [2001] 3 All E.R. 769, CA ..... 618
- Corby v Morrison (t/a the Card Shop)* [1980] I.C.R. 564; [1980] I.R.L.R. 218, EAT ..... 451, 484, 507
- Corfield v DS Boshier & Co* [1992] 1 E.G.L.R. 163; [1992] 04 E.G. 127 ..... 956
- Cork & Brandon Railway v Cazenove* (1847) 10 Q.B. 935 ..... 546
- Cork v Rawlins* [2001] EWCA Civ 202; [2001] Ch. 792, CA ..... 700
- Cornfoot v Fowke* (1840) 6 M. & W. 358 ..... 344
- Cornish v Abington* (1859) 4 H. & N. 549 ..... 307
- Cornish v Midland Bank plc; sub nom. Midland Bank plc v Cornish* [1985] 3 All E.R. 513; [1985] F.L.R. 298, CA ..... 334, 400, 414
- Cornwall v Henson* (1750) 1 Ves.Sen. 509 ..... 722
- Cornwall v Henson* [1900] 2 Ch. 298 ..... 776
- Corpe v Overton* (1833) 10 Bing. 252 ..... 1008
- Corpe v Overton* (1833) 10 Bing. 252 ... 548, 549
- Corporacion Nacional del Cobre de Chile v Sogemin Metals Ltd* [1997] 1 W.L.R. 1396; [1997] 2 All E.R. 917, Ch D ..... 340
- Cort v Ambergate etc Railway Co* (1851) 17 Q.B. 127 ..... 767
- Cory Brothers Shipping Ltd v Baldan Ltd* [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 58, CC (Central London) ..... 734
- Cory v Gertcken* (1816) 2 Madd. 40 ..... 556
- Cory v Patton* (1872) L.R. 7 Q.B. 304 ..... 55, 392
- Cory v Thames Ironworks Co* (1868) L.R. 3 Q.B. 181 ..... 969
- Cory, Re* (1912) 29 T.L.R. 18 ..... 67, 160
- Cosgrove v Horsfall* (1946) 62 T.L.R. 140 ... 628, 631
- Coslake v Till* (1826) 1 Russ. 376 ..... 828, 1034
- Costello v Chief Constable of Derbyshire* [2001] EWCA Civ 381; [2001] 1 W.L.R. 1437, CA ..... 501
- Cotman v Brougham; sub nom. Anglo Cuban Oil Bitumen and Asphalt Co Ltd, Re* [1918] A.C. 514, HL ..... 561
- Cotnam v Wisdom* 83 Ark. 601; 104 S.W. 164 (1907) ..... 721
- Cotronic (UK) v Dezonie (t/a Wendaland Builders)* [1991] B.C.C. 200; [1991] B.C.I.C. 721, CA ..... 503, 736, 1063
- Cott UK Ltd v FF Barber Ltd* [1997] 3 All E.R. 540, QBD ..... 447
- Cottage Club Estates Ltd v Woodside Estates Co (Amersham) Ltd* [1928] 2 K.B. 463, KBD ..... 681
- Cotterrell v Leeds Day* [2001] W.T.L.R. 435, CA ..... 403
- Cotton v Heyl* [1930] 1 Ch. 510, Ch D ..... 683
- Cottrill v Steyning and Littlehampton Building Society* [1966] 1 W.L.R. 753; [1966] 2 All E.R. 295, QBD ..... 971
- Couchman v Hill* [1947] K.B. 554; [1947] 1 All E.R. 103, CA ..... 242, 354, 790

Coulls v Bagor's Executor and Trustee Co (No.1) (1966-67) 119 C.L.R. 460; (1967) 40 A.L.J.R. 471, HC (Aus) ..... 578, 591, 592, 605, 606, 650, 1026, 1039	Cox v Phillips Industries Ltd [1976] 1 W.L.R. 638; [1976] 3 All E.R. 161, QBD ..... 988
Coulthard v Disco Mix Club Ltd [2000] 1 W.L.R. 707; [1999] 2 All E.R. 457, Ch D ..... 745	Cox v Prentice (1815) 3 M. & S. 344 ..... 294
Coulthart v Clementson (1879-80) L.R. 5 Q.B.D. 42, QBD ..... 45	CPC Consolidated Pool Carriers GmbH v CTM CIA Transmediterranea SA (The CPC Gallia) [1994] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 68, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 52
Countess of Warwick Steamship Co v Le Nickel SA [1918] 1 K.B. 372, CA ..... 874	CPC Gallia, The See CPC Consolidated Pool Carriers GmbH v CTM CIA Transmediterranea SA (The CPC Gallia)
Country & Metropolitan Homes Surrey Ltd v Topclaim Ltd [1996] Ch. 307; [1996] 3 W.L.R. 525 ..... 828, 1007	Crabb v Arun DC [1976] Ch. 179; [1975] 3 W.L.R. 847, CA ..... 137, 138, 140, 142, 143, 144, 147, 148, 149
Countryside Communications Ltd v ICL Pathways Ltd [2000] C.L.C. 325 ..... 118, 1062	Craddock Bros Ltd v Hunt [1923] 2 Ch. 136, CA ..... 322, 326
County Hotel and Wine Co Ltd v London and North Western Railway Co [1918] 2 K.B. 251, KBD ..... 696, 697	Crage v Fry (1903) 67 J.P. 240 ..... 435
County Ltd v Girozentrale Securities [1996] 3 All E.R. 834; [1996] 1 B.C.L.C. 653, CA ..... 154, 163, 169, 745, 986	Craig (Deceased), Re; sub nom. Menecees v Middleton; Craig, Re [1971] Ch. 95; [1970] 2 W.L.R. 1219, Ch D ..... 414, 418
County Natwest v Pinsent & Co [1994] 3 Bank. L.R. 4, QBD ..... 975	Crampton v Varna Railway Co (1871-72) L.R. 7 Ch. App. 562, Lord Chancellor ... 1021, 1026
County Personnel (Employment Agency) Ltd v Alan R Pulver & Co [1987] 1 W.L.R. 916; [1987] 1 All E.R. 289, CA ..... 935, 946, 960	Crane v Hegeman Harris Co Inc [1939] 4 All E.R. 68, CA; affirming [1939] 1 All E.R. 662, Ch D ..... 321, 324, 326
Courage Ltd v Crehan (C453/99) [2002] Q.B. 507; [2001] 3 W.L.R. 1646, ECJ ..... 490	Cranleigh Precision Engineering Ltd v Bryant [1965] 1 W.L.R. 1293; [1964] 3 All E.R. 289, QBD ..... 18, 858
Courage Ltd v Crehan (No.1) [1999] U.K.C.L.R. 110; [1999] F.C.C. 455; [1999] Eu. L.R. 834, CA ..... 204, 205	Crantrave Ltd (In Liquidation) v Lloyds Bank plc [2000] Q.B. 917; [2000] 3 W.L.R. 877, CA ..... 719, 756
Courcier and Harrold's Contract, Re [1923] 1 Ch. 565, Ch D ..... 773	Craven Ellis v Canons Ltd [1936] 2 K.B. 403, CA ..... 299, 302, 567, 1063, 1064
Court Line Ltd v Dant & Russell Inc (1939) 64 Ll. L. Rep. 212, KBD ..... 897	Crears v Hunter (1887) L.R. 19 Q.B.D. 341, CA ..... 91
Court Line v Gotaverken AB (The Halcyon the Great) [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 283; (1984) 134 N.L.J. 203, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 677, 678, 681	Credit Agricole Indosuez v Muslim Commercial Bank Ltd [2000] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 172; [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 275, CA ..... 710
Courtney & Fairbairn Ltd v Tolaini Brothers (Hotels) Ltd [1975] 1 W.L.R. 297; [1975] 1 All E.R. 716, CA ..... 51, 60	Credit Lyonnais Bank Nederland NV v Burch [1997] 1 All E.R. 144; [1996] 5 Bank. L.R. 233, CA ..... 414, 419, 420, 422, 426
Coutts & Co v Browne Lecky [1947] K.B. 104; [1946] 2 All E.R. 207, KBD ..... 572	Credit Lyonnais v PT Barnard & Associates Ltd [1976] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 557, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 329, 434
Couturier v Hastie (1852) 8 Ex. 40 ..... 182, 295, 296, 297	Credit Suisse Asset Management Ltd v Armstrong [1996] I.C.R. 882; [1996] I.R.L.R. 450, CA ..... 464
Coventry Shepherd & Co v Great Eastern Railway (1883) 11 Q.B.D. 76 ..... 404	Credit Suisse v Allderdale BC [1997] Q.B. 306; [1996] 3 W.L.R. 894, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 120, 560, 563, 564
Cowan v Milbourn (1867) L.R. 2 Ex. 230 ..... 481	Credit Suisse v Waltham Forest LBC [1997] Q.B. 362; [1996] 3 W.L.R. 943, CA ..... 564
Cowan v O'Connor (1888) L.R. 20 Q.B.D. 640, QBD ..... 24	Cremdean Properties v Nash (1977) 244 E.G. 547, CA ..... 386, 773
Coward v Motor Insurers Bureau [1963] 1 Q.B. 259; [1962] 2 W.L.R. 663, CA ..... 164	Crescendo Management Pty Ltd v Westpac Banking Corporation (1989-1990) 19 N.S.W.L.R. 40 ..... 405
Cowen v Truett Ltd [1899] 2 Ch. 309, CA ..... 325	Cresswell v Inland Revenue Commissioners [1984] 2 All E.R. 713; [1984] I.R.L.R. 190; [1984] I.C.R. 508 ..... 762
Cowern v Nield [1912] 2 K.B. 419, KBD ..... 545, 553, 556, 557	Cresswell v Potter (1968) [1978] 1 W.L.R. 255n ..... 421
Cox v Bankside Members Agency Ltd [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 437; The Times , May 16, 1995, CA ..... 202, 668, 878
Cox v Bishop (1857) 8 D.M. & G. 815 ..... 703

- Cricklewood Property & Investment Trust Ltd v Leighton's Investment Trust Ltd [1945] A.C. 221; [1945] 1 All E.R. 252, HL ..... 868, 890, 894, 895, 901
- Crisan's Estate, Re 102 N.W. 2d 907 (1961) ..... 721
- Crocker Horlock Ltd v B Lang & Co Ltd; sub nom. Sellers v London Counties Newspapers [1949] 1 All E.R. 526; [1949] W.N. 97, KBD ..... 741
- Crockfords Club Ltd v Mehta [1992] 1 W.L.R. 355; [1992] 2 All E.R. 748, CA ..... 529, 532, 533, 534, 535
- Crofton v Colgan (1859) 10 Ir.C.L.R. 133 ..... 517
- Cronmire Ex p. Waud, Re [1898] 2 Q.B. 383, CA ..... 523
- Crooks & Co v Allan; sub nom. Crooks v Allan (1879-80) L.R. 5 Q.B.D. 38, QBD ..... 219
- Cropper v Cook (1868) L.R. 3 C.P. 194 ..... 712
- Cross v David Martin & Mortimer [1989] 10 E.G. 110; 1 E.G.L.R. 154 ..... 933, 946
- Cross v Sprigg 2 Mac. & G. 113, reversing; (1849) 6 Hare 552 ..... 130
- Crossland (Inspector of Taxes) v Hawkins [1961] Ch. 537; [1961] 3 W.L.R. 202; 39 T.C. 493, CA ..... 585
- Crouch v Credit Foncier of England Ltd (1873) L.R. 8 Q.B. 374 ..... 692
- Crouch v Martin (1707) 2 Vern. 595 ..... 674
- Crow v Rogers (1724) 1 Str. 592 ..... 588
- Crowden v Aldridge [1993] 1 W.L.R. 433; [1993] 3 All E.R. 603, Ch D ..... 55, 172, 398, 672
- Crowfoot v Gurney (1832) 9 Bing. 372 ..... 672
- Crowther v Farrer (1850) 15 Q.B. 677 .... 87, 100
- CT Bowring Reinsurance Ltd v Baxter (M Vatan and M Ceyhan) [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 416; [1987] 1 F.T.L.R. 7 ..... 912, 918
- CTN Cash and Carry Ltd v Gallaher Ltd [1994] 4 All E.R. 714, CA ..... 406, 423
- C-Trade of Geneva SA v Uni-Ocean Lines Pte of Singapore (The Lucille) [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 244, CA ..... 905
- Cud v Rutter (1719) 1 P. Wms. 570 ..... 1020
- Cullen v Knowles [1898] 2 Q.B. 380, QBD ..... 576
- Cullinane v British Rema Manufacturing Co Ltd [1954] 1 Q.B. 292; [1953] 3 W.L.R. 923, CA ..... 942, 943
- Culworth Estates v Society of Licensed Victuallers (1991) 62 P. & C.R. 211; [1991] 2 E.G.L.R. 54, CA ..... 945
- Cumber v Wane (1721) 1 Stra. 426 ..... 125
- Cumbrian Newspapers Group Ltd v Cumberland & Westmorland Herald Newspaper & Printing Co Ltd [1987] Ch. 1; [1986] 3 W.L.R. 26, Ch D ..... 586
- Cumming v Ince (1847) 11 Q.B. 112 ..... 405
- Cumming v Mackie 1973 S.C. 278; 1973 S.L.T. 242, OH ..... 532
- Cundell v Dawson (1847) 4 C.B. 376 ..... 433
- Cundy v Lindsay (1878) 3 App.Cas. 459 ..... 298, 299, 301, 307, 309, 311, 321, 328, 371, 550
- Cunliffe v Harrison (1851) 6 Exch. 901 ..... 776, 784, 787, 825
- Cunningham v Harrison [1973] Q.B. 942 ..... 606
- Curragh Investment v Cook [1974] 1 W.L.R. 1559; [1974] 3 All E.R. 658, Ch D ..... 434
- Currencies Direct Ltd v Ellis [2002] EWCA Civ 779; [2002] B.C.C. 821, CA ..... 434
- Currie v Misa (1875) L.R. 10 Ex. 153 ..... 68, 80
- Curtrie v London City and Midland Bank Ltd [1908] 1 K.B. 293, CA ..... 42
- Curtis v Chemical Cleaning & Dyeing Co [1951] 1 K.B. 805; [1951] 1 All E.R. 631, CA ..... 241, 390
- Curtis v Perry (1802) 2 Ves. 739 ..... 499
- Curtis v Williamson (1874) L.R. 10 Q.B. 57 .... 737
- Cusack Smith v London Corp (No.2) [1956] 1 W.L.R. 1368, QBD ..... 894
- Customs and Excise Commissioners v Diners Club [1989] 1 W.L.R. 1196; [1989] 2 All E.R. 385, CA ..... 81, 583, 584, 702, 755
- Customs and Excise Commissioners v National Westminster Bank plc [2002] EWHC 2204; [2003] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 327, Ch D ..... 755
- Customs and Excise Commissioners v Oliver [1980] 1 All E.R. 353; [1980] S.T.C. 73, QBD ..... 432, 481
- Customs and Excise Commissioners v Paget [1989] S.T.C. 773, DC ..... 706
- Customs and Excise Commissioners v Telemed Ltd [1992] S.T.C. 89, QBD ..... 81
- Cutler v McPhail [1962] 2 Q.B. 292; [1962] 2 W.L.R. 1135, QBD ..... 573
- Cutter v Powell (1795) 6 Term Rep. 320 ..... 782, 784, 785, 824, 872, 912, 914
- Cuxon v Chadley (1824) 3 B. & C. 591 ..... 673
- CVG Siderurgicia del Orinoco SA v London Steamship Owners Mutual Insurance Association Ltd (The Vainqueur Jose) [1979] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 557, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 1006
- Cynat Products Ltd v Landbuild (Investment & Property) Ltd [1984] 3 All E.R. 513; (1984) 1 Const. L.J. 42, QBD ..... 841
- Cyril Leonard & Co v Simo Securities Trust Ltd [1972] 1 W.L.R. 80; [1971] 3 All E.R. 1318, CA ..... 836
- Czarnikow Ltd v Roth Schmidt & Co [1922] 2 K.B. 478; (1922) 12 I.L. L. Rep. 195, CA ..... 242, 448
- D & C Builders Ltd v Rees [1966] 2 Q.B. 617; [1966] 2 W.L.R. 288, CA ... 125, 127, 132, 134, 156, 406, 422
- D & F Estates Ltd v Church Commissioners for England [1989] A.C. 177; [1988] 3 W.L.R. 368, HL ..... 610, 613, 616, 758, 983
- D & M Trailers (Halifax) v Stirling [1978] R.T.R. 468; (1978) 248 E.G. 597, CA ..... 19
- D McMaster & Co v Cox McEwen & Co 1921 S.C. (HL) 1 ..... 886
- D v M [1996] I.R.L.R. 192; The Times, March 18, 1996, QBD ..... 461

D v National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children (NSPCC) [1978] A.C. 171; [1977] 2 W.L.R. 201, HL .....	478
D'Angibau, Re (1880) 15 Ch D. 228 .....	651
Da Costa v Jones (1778) 2 Cowp. 729 .....	519
Dadomar General TJ Park, The [1986] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 68 .....	201, 204, 207, 209
Daewoo Heavy Industries Ltd v Klipriver Shipping Ltd (The Kapitan Petko Voivoda) [2002] EWHC 1306; [2002] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 560, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	236
Dagenham (Thames) Dock Co, Re (1873) L.R. 8 Ch. App. 1022 .....	1009
Daily Mirror Newspapers Ltd v Exclusive News Agency (1937) 81 S.J. 924 .....	436
Daily Mirror Newspapers v Gardner [1968] 2 Q.B. 762; [1968] 2 W.L.R. 1239, CA .....	622, 843
Dairy Crest v Pigott [1989] I.C.R. 92, CA .....	459
Dakin & Co v Lee [1916] 1 K.B. 566 ...	786, 787
Dakin v Oxley (1864) 15 C.B. N.S. 646 .....	777, 785, 817
Dale (Deceased), Re, [1994] Ch. 31; [1993] 3 W.L.R. 652, Ch D .....	68, 71, 85, 136, 150
Dalrymple v Dalrymple (1811) 2 Hag.Con. 54 .....	162
Dalton v Inland Revenue Commissioners [1958] T.R. 45 .....	679, 682
Daly v General Steam Navigation Co (The Dragon) [1981] 1 W.L.R. 120; [1980] 3 All E.R. 696, CA; affirming [1979] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 257, QBD (Adm Ct) .....	15, 219
Daly v General Steam Navigation Co (The Dragon) [1981] 1 W.L.R. 120; [1980] 3 All E.R. 696; [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 415, CA .....	585
Damon Compania Naviera SA v Hapag-Lloyd International SA (The Blankenstein) [1985] 1 W.L.R. 435; [1985] 1 All E.R. 475, CA .....	55, 66, 763, 774, 852, 1011, 1013
Danah, The See Kuwait Maritime Transport Co v Rickmers Linie KG
Dane v Kirkwall (1838) 8 C. & P. 679 .....	557
Dancroft Jersey Mills v Criegee The Times , April 14, 1987, CA .....	970
Daniels v White & Sons Ltd [1938] 4 All E.R. 258, KBD .....	839
Danish Bacon Co Ltd Staff Pension Fund Trusts, Re, [1971] 1 W.L.R. 248; [1971] 1 All E.R. 486, Ch D .....	184
Danish Mercantile Co v Beaumont [1951] Ch. 680; [1951] 1 All E.R. 925, CA .....	725
Danowski v Henry Moore Foundation [1996] E.C.C. 380; [1996] E.M.L.R. 364, CA .....	213
Danziger v Thompson [1944] K.B. 654, KBD .....	728
Darbey v Whitaker (1857) 4 Drew. 134 .....	1034
Darbishire v Warran [1963] 1 W.L.R. 1067; [1963] 3 All E.R. 310, CA .....	945, 946, 978
Darlington BC v Wiltshier Northern Ltd [1995] 1 W.L.R. 68; [1995] 3 All E.R. 895, CA ...	588, 590, 593, 594, 595, 596, 597, 600, 601
Daulia Ltd v Four Millbank Nominees Ltd [1978] Ch. 231; [1978] 2 W.L.R. 621, CA .....	38, 718
Daun v Simmins (1879) 41 L.T. 783 .....	844, 849
Davenport v R. (1877) 3 App.Cas. 115 .....	844, 849
Davenport, Re; sub nom. Bankrupt Ex p. v Eric Street Properties [1963] 1 W.L.R. 817; [1963] 2 All E.R. 850; 107 S.J. 457, CA .....	545
David Blackstone Ltd v Burnetts (West End) Ltd [1973] 1 W.L.R. 1487; [1973] 3 All E.R. 782, QBD .....	812
David Payne & Co Ltd, Re; sub nom. Young v David Payne & Co [1904] 2 Ch. 608, CA .....	565
David T Boyd & Co v Louis Louca [1973] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 209, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	50, 892
David Taylor & Son v Barnett Trading Co [1953] 1 W.L.R. 562; [1953] 1 All E.R. 843, CA .....	482
Davidson v Jones-Fenleigh (1980) 124 S.J. 204 .....	786
Davidson v Tulloch (1860) 3 Macq. 783 .....	360
Davies v Benyon-Harris (1931) 47 T.L.R. 424 .....	545, 548
Davies v Collins [1945] 1 All E.R. 247, CA .....	229, 230, 757
Davies v Davies (1887) L.R. 36 Ch. D. 359, CA .....	478
Davies v Directloans Ltd [1986] 1 W.L.R. 823; [1986] 2 All E.R. 783, Ch D .....	428
Davies v Leighton (1979) 68 Cr. App. R. 4; [1978] Crim. L.R. 575, DC .....	12
Davies v London and Provincial Marine Insurance Co (1878) L.R. 8 Ch. D. 469; (1878) 26 W.R. 794, Ch D .....	393, 398, 492
Davies v Parry (1988) 20 H.L.R. 452; [1988] 21 E.G. 74, QBD .....	249, 346
Davies v Presbyterian Church of Wales [1986] 1 W.L.R. 323; [1986] 1 All E.R. 705, HL .....	170
Davies v Sweet [1962] 2 Q.B. 300; [1962] 2 W.L.R. 525; [1962] 1 All E.R. 92; 105 S.J. 1083, CA .....	18, 733
Davies, Re [1892] 3 Ch. 63 .....	604
Davis & Co (Wines) Ltd v Afa-Minerva (EMI) Ltd [1974] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 27; 9 B.L.R. 99, QBD .....	360
Davis Contractors v Fareham Urban DC [1956] A.C. 696; [1956] 3 W.L.R. 37, HL .....	211, 881, 901, 920, 921, 923
Davis v Radcliffe [1990] 1 W.L.R. 821; [1990] 2 All E.R. 536, PC (IoM) .....	345, 616
Davison v Donaldson (1882) 9 Q.B.D. 623 .....	737
Davitt v Titcomb [1990] Ch. 110; [1990] 2 W.L.R. 168, Ch D .....	438, 574

Davestone Estates Ltd's Leases, Re; sub nom. Manprop Ltd v O'Dell [1969] 2 Ch. 378; [1969] 2 W.L.R. 1287, Ch D ....	242, 450, 507
Davy Offshore Ltd v Emerald Field Contracting Ltd [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 142; The Financial Times , March 18, 1992, CA .....	159
Davys v Buswell [1913] 2 K.B. 47, CA .....	182
Dawney Day & Co Ltd v de Braconier d'Alphen [1998] I.C.R. 1068; [1997] I.R.L.R. 442, CA .....	455, 458, 459, 466, 474, 508
Dawson v Great Northern and City Railway Co [1905] 1 K.B. 260, CA; reversing [1904] 1 K.B. 277, KBD .....	678, 696, 691
Dawsons Ltd v Bonnin [1922] 2 A.C. 413; (1922) 12 Ll. L. Rep. 237, HL .....	396, 791
Day v McLea (1889) L.R. 22 Q.B.D. 610, CA .....	100
Day v Singleton [1899] 2 Ch. 320, CA .....	999
Day v Wells (1861) 30 Beav. 220 .....	316
Day's Will Trusts, Re [1962] 1 W.L.R. 1419; [1962] 3 All E.R. 699, Ch D .....	51
DC Thomson & Co Ltd v Deakin [1952] Ch. 646; [1952] 2 All E.R. 361, CA .....	619
De Balkany v Christie Manson & Woods Ltd (1997) 16 Tr. L.R. 163; The Independent , January 19, 1995, QBD .....	293
De Beers Consolidated Mines Ltd v British South Africa Co [1910] 1 Ch. 354, Ch D .....	560
De Begnis v Armistead (1833) 10 Bing. 107 ....	510
De Bernardy v Harding (1853) 8 Exch. 822 .....	822
De Bussche v Alt (1878) L.R. 8 Ch. D. 286, CA .....	747
De Cicco v Schweitzer 117 N.E. 807 (1917) .....	97
De Francesco v Barnum (No.2) (1890) L.R. 43 Ch. D. 165, Ch D .....	543
De la Bere v Pearson Ltd [1908] 1 K.B. 280, CA .....	157, 976
De Lassalle v Guildford [1901] 2 K.B. 215, CA .....	355, 356
De Mattos v Benjamin (1894) 63 L.J.Q.B. 248 .....	525
De Mattos v Gibson (1858) 4 De G. & J. 276 .....	620, 621, 622, 623, 1033
De Meza & Stuart v Apple van Straten Shena & Stone [1975] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 498, CA; affirming [1974] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 508, QBD .....	985
De Molestina v Ponton (Application to Strike Out) [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 587; [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 271 QBD (Comm Ct) .....	384
De Roo v Foster (1862) 12 C.B. (N.S.) 272 ....	554
De Wutz v Hendricks (1824) 2 Bing. 314 ....	452
Dean v Ainley [1987] 1 W.L.R. 1729; [1987] 3 All E.R. 748, CA .....	947
Dean v Allin & Watts [2001] EWCA Civ 758; [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 249, CA .....	611, 618
Dean v Dean [1978] Fam. 161; [1978] 3 W.L.R. 28, Fam Div .....	447
Deanplan Ltd v Mahmoud [1993] Ch. 151; [1992] 3 W.L.R. 467, Ch D .....	573
Dearle v Hall (1828) 3 Russ. 1 .....	682
Debenham Tewson & Chinnocks v Rimington [1990] 34 E.G. 55, CA .....	741, 743
Debenham v Mellon (1880) 6 App.Cas. 24 ....	711
Debenham v Perkins (1925) 113 L.T. 252 ....	737
Debtor (No.13A-IO-1995), Re [1995] 1 W.L.R. 1127; [1996] 1 All E.R. 691, Ch D .....	812
Debtor (No.564 of 1949), Re [1950] Ch. 282; [1950] 1 All E.R. 308, CA .....	545
Debtor, A, Re (No.517 of 1991) The Times , November 25, 1991 .....	189
Debtor, Re (No.259 of 1990) [1990] 1 W.L.R. 226 .....	129
Debtors (Nos.4449 and 4450 of 1998), Re [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 149; [1999] B.P.I.R. 548, Ch D .....	60, 61
Decro-Wall International SA v Practitioners in Marketing [1971] 1 W.L.R. 361; [1971] 2 All E.R. 216, CA ....	749, 770, 771, 774, 807, 826, 844, 845, 846, 864, 1022, 1043, 1045
Deeny v Gooda Walker Ltd (No.2) [1996] 1 W.L.R. 426; [1996] 1 All E.R. 933, HL ....	957
Deeny v Gooda Walker Ltd (No.3) [1995] 1 W.L.R. 1206; [1995] 4 All E.R. 289, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	981
Deepak Fertilisers & Petrochemical Corp v Davy McKee (London) Ltd [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm.) 69; [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 387, CA .....	603, 637
Deepak Fertilisers & Petrochemicals Corp v ICI Chemicals & Polymers Ltd See Deepak Fertilisers & Petrochemical Corp v Davy McKee (London) Ltd
Defries v Milne [1913] 1 Ch. 98, CA ...	696, 697
Delaney v RJ Staples (t/a De Montfort Recruitment) [1992] 1 A.C. 687; [1992] 2 W.L.R. 451, HL .....	749, 833, 845, 1044
Delaurier v Wyllie (1889) 17 R. (Ct of Sess.) 167 .....	638
Delian Spirit, The See Shipping Developments Corp v V/O Sojuzneftexport
Delimitis v Henninger Brau AG (C234/89) [1991] E.C.R. I-935; [1992] 5 C.M.L.R. 210, ECJ .....	477
Dellafiora v Lester; Lester v Adrian Barr & Co [1962] 1 W.L.R. 1208; [1962] 3 All E.R. 393, CA .....	742
Deloitte Haskins & Sells v National Mutual Life Nominees [1993] A.C. 774; [1993] 3 W.L.R. 347, PC (NZ) .....	616
Den Norske Creditbank v Sarawak Economic Development Corporation [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 35, CA; affirming [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 616, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	564
Denman v Brise [1949] 1 K.B. 22; [1948] 2 All E.R. 141, CA .....	894
Denman v Midland Employer's Mutual Assurance Soc Ltd [1955] 2 Q.B. 437 .....	693
Denman v Winstanley (1887) 4 T.L.R. 127 ....	1014

- Denmark Productions v Boscobel Productions
[1969] 1 Q.B. 699; [1968] 3 W.L.R. 841,
CA; reversing in part (1967) 111 S.J.
715 ..... 544, 749, 777, 901, 905, 1016
- Dennant v Skinner [1948] 2 K.B. 164; [1948] 2
All E.R. 29, KBD ..... 300, 310
- Dennis Reed Ltd v Goody [1950] 2 K.B. 277;
[1950] 1 All E.R. 919, CA ..... 742, 743
- Dennis v London Passenger Transport Board
[1948] 1 All E.R. 779; 64 T.L.R. 269,
KBD ..... 606
- Denny Mott & Dickson Ltd v James B Fraser
& Co Ltd [1944] A.C. 265; 1945 S.L.T. 2,
HL ..... 868, 887, 888, 890, 895, 920, 921, 922
- Denny v Denny See Denny's Trustee v
Denny
- Denny's Trustee v Denny; Denny v Warr
[1919] 1 K.B. 583, KBD ..... 442, 453
- Dent v Bennett (1839) 4 My. & Cr. 269 ..... 77, 412
- Dent v Davis Blank Furniss [2001] Lloyd's
Rep. P.N. 534, Ch D ..... 939
- Denton v GN Railway (1856) 5 E. & B. 860 ..... 14, 85
- Denton's Estate, Re; sub nom. Licenses Insurance Corp and Guarantee Fund Ltd v
Denton [1904] 2 Ch. 178, CA ..... 397
- Department of the Environment v Thomas
Bates & Sons Ltd [1991] 1 A.C. 499;
[1990] 3 W.L.R. 457, HL ..... 616
- Department of Trade and Industry v St Christopher Motorists Association Ltd [1974] 1
W.L.R. 99; [1974] 1 All E.R. 395, Ch D ..... 437
- Deposit Protection Board v Barclays Bank plc
[1994] 2 A.C. 367; [1994] 2 W.L.R. 732,
HL ..... 675, 677, 680, 681, 682, 696
- Deposit Protection Board v Dalia See Deposit Protection Board v Barclays Bank plc
- Deputy v Stapleford 19 Cal. 302 (1861) ..... 405
- Derby Resources AG v Blue Corinth Marine
Co Ltd (The Athenian Harmony) (No.1)
[1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 410; [1998] C.L.C.
1159, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 945, 953
- Derry v Peek (1889) L.R. 14 App. Cas. 337;
(1889) 5 T.L.R. 625, HL ..... 343, 360, 364
- Deutsche Schachtbau- und Tiefbohrgesellschaft mbH v Ras Al-Khaimah National Oil Co [1990] 1 A.C. 295; [1988] 3 W.L.R.
230, HL ..... 49, 448, 478
- Devaux v Connolly (1849) 8 C.B. 640 ..... 294
- Deverill v Burnell (1872-73) L.R. 8 C.P. 475,
CCP ..... 893, 959
- Dewar v Mintoft [1912] 2 K.B. 373, KBD ..... 183, 1011
- Dews v National Coal Board [1988] A.C. 1;
[1987] 3 W.L.R. 38, HL ..... 957
- Dexters Ltd v Schenker & Co (1923) 14 Ll. L.
Rep. 586, KBD ..... 153
- Dextra Bank & Trust Co Ltd v Bank of Jamaica [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 193, PC
(Jam) ..... 313
- DI Henry Ltd v Wilhelm G Clasen [1973] 1
Lloyd's Rep. 159, CA ..... 869
- Diamond v Bank of London and Montreal
[1979] Q.B. 333; [1979] 2 W.L.R. 228;
[1979] 1 All E.R. 561; [1979] 1 Lloyd's
Rep. 335; 122 S.J. 814, CA ..... 26
- Diamond v British Columbia Thoroughbred Breeders Society (1965) 52 D.L.R. (2d)
146, Sup Ct (BC) ..... 287
- Diamond v Campbell Jones [1961] Ch. 22;
[1960] 2 W.L.R. 568, Ch D ..... 957, 959, 971
- Diamond v Lovell [2002] 1 A.C. 384 ..... 179
- Dibbins v Dibbins [1896] 2 Ch. 348, Ch D ..... 725
- Dick Bentley Productions Ltd v Harold Smith
(Motors) Ltd [1965] 1 W.L.R. 623; [1965]
2 All E.R. 65, CA ..... 354, 355
- Dick v US 82 F. Supp. 326 (1949) ..... 28
- Dickinson v Abel [1969] 1 W.L.R. 295; [1969]
1 All E.R. 484; 45 T.C. 353; [1968] T.R.
419; 112 S.J. 967, Ch D ..... 72, 81
- Dickinson v Burrell (1866) L.R. 1 Eq. 337 ..... 697
- Dickinson v Dodds (1876) 2 Ch D. 463 ..... 41, 42, 44, 153, 154
- Dickinson v Jones Alexander & Co [1993] 2
F.L.R. 521; [1990] Fam. Law 137 ... 956, 957, 993
- Dickinson v Valpy (1829) 10 B. & C. 128 ..... 714
- Didymi and Leon, The See Atlantic Lines &
Navigation Co Inc v Didymi Corporation
- Didymi Corp v Atlantic Lines and Navigation
Co Inc (The Didymi) [1988] 2 Lloyd's
Rep. 108, CA ..... 58, 59
- Dies v British & International Mining and Finance Corp Ltd [1939] 1 K.B. 724,
KBD ..... 1007
- Diesen v Samson 1971 S.L.T. (Sh Ct) 49 ..... 990
- Dietman v Brent LBC [1987] I.C.R. 737 ..... 846, 847
- Diggle v Higgs (1876-77) L.R. 2 Ex. D. 422,
CA ..... 526, 527
- Dillon v Baltic Shipping Co (The Mikhail Lermontov) [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 155, CA
(NSW) ; affirming [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep.
579, Sup Ct (NSW) ..... 15, 218
- Dillon v Coppin (1839) 4 My. & Cr. 647 ..... 683, 685
- Dillwyn v Llewelyn (1862) 4 De G.F. & J.
517 ... 118, 135, 136, 137, 138, 142, 143, 147, 148
- Dimmock v Hallett (1866-67) L.R. 2 Ch. App.
21; (1866) 12 Jur. N.S. 953; (1866) 15 W.R.
93, CA in Chancery ..... 330, 336, 394
- Dimond v Lovell [2002] 1 A.C. 384; [2000] 2
W.L.R. 1121, HL ..... 606, 980, 981
- Dimsdal Shipping Co SA v International Transport Workers Federation (The Evia Luck) (No.2) [1992] 2 A.C. 152; [1991] 3
W.L.R. 875, HL ..... 405, 406
- Dingwall v Burnett 1912 S.C. 1097 ..... 1003
- Diocese of Southwark v Coker [1998] I.C.R.
140 ..... 170
- Dip Kaur v Chief Constable of Hampshire
[1981] 1 W.L.R. 578 ..... 304

Direct Line Insurance plc v Khan [2001] N.L.J. 485 .....	374
Director General of Fair Trading v First National Bank plc [2001] UKHL 52; [2002] 1 A.C. 481, HL .....	271, 272, 273, 285
Distillers Co (Biochemicals) Ltd v Times Newspapers Ltd; Distillers Co (Biochemicals) Ltd v Phillips [1975] Q.B. 613; [1974] 3 W.L.R. 728, QBD .....	436
Ditchburn v Goldsmith (1815) 4 Camp. 408 .....	519
Dixon v Clark (1847) 5 C.B. 365 .....	754
Dixon v London Small Arms Co (1876) 1 App.Cas. 632 .....	707
DO Ferguson & Associates v Sohl (1992) 62 Build.L.R. 95 .....	1050
Dobell v Hutchinson (1835) 3 A. & E. 355 .....	184
Dobell v Stevens (1825) 3 B. & C. 623 .....	339
Dobson v General Accident Fire and Life Assurance Corporation [1990] 1 Q.B. 274; [1989] 3 W.L.R. 1066, CA .....	304
Dodd Properties (Kent) Ltd v Canterbury City Council [1980] 1 W.L.R. 433; [1980] 1 All E.R. 928, CA .....	961, 975
Dods v Cooper's Creek Vineyards [1987] N.Z.L.R. 530 .....	996
Dodsworth v Dodsworth (1973) 228 E.G. 1115, CA .....	145, 146
Doe v Knight (1826) 5 B. & C. 671 .....	159
Doherty v Allman (1878) 3 App.Cas. 709 .....	992, 1040
Dole Dried Fruit & Nut Co v Trustin Kerwood Ltd [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 309, CA .....	788
Doleman & Sons v Ossett Corp [1912] 3 K.B. 257, CA .....	447
Dolphin Hellas Shipping SA v Itemslot (The Aegean Dolphin) [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 178, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	790, 804, 811
Domb v Isoz [1980] Ch. 548; [1980] 2 W.L.R. 565; [1980] 1 All E.R. 942, CA ...	20, 53, 962
Dominion Coal Co Ltd v Dominion Iron & Steel Co Ltd [1909] A.C. 293, PC (Can) ...	84, 1024, 1032, 1047
Dominion Mosaics & Tile Co v Trafalgar Trucking Co [1990] 2 All E.R. 246; 26 Con. L.R. 1, CA .....	933, 947, 982
Dominique, The See Bank of Boston Connecticut (formerly Colonial Bank) v European Grain & Shipping Ltd
Don King Productions Inc v Warren (No.1) [2000] Ch. 291; [1999] 3 W.L.R. 276, CA .....	693, 695, 701, 757
Donaldson v Donaldson (1854) Kay 711 .....	675, 684
Donnell v Bennett (1883) L.R. 22 Ch. D. 835, Ch D .....	84, 468, 1024, 1045
Donnelly v Joyce [1974] Q.B. 454; [1973] 3 W.L.R. 514, CA .....	166, 606
Donoghue v Stevenson; sub nom. McAlister v Stevenson [1932] A.C. 562; 1932 S.C. (H.L.) 31, HL .....	609, 615
Donwin Productions v EMI Films The Times , March 9, 1984 .....	62
Doobay (RP) v Mohabeer [1967] 2 A.C. 278; [1967] 2 W.L.R. 1395, PC (Guy) .....	1057
Dorset CC v Southern Felt Roofing Co 48 B.L.R. 96; (1990) 10 Tr. L.R. 96, CA .....	223
Dott's Lease, Re; sub nom. Miller v Dott [1920] 1 Ch. 281, Ch D .....	474
Dove v Banhams Patent Locks Ltd [1983] 1 W.L.R. 1436; [1983] 2 All E.R. 833, QBD .....	608, 609
Dowden & Pook Ltd v Pook [1904] 1 K.B. 45, CA .....	465
Downerry Construction Ltd v Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions [2002] EWHC 2; [2002] A.C.D. 62, QBD (Admin Ct) .....	403
Downs v Chappell; Downs v Stephenson Smart [1997] 1 W.L.R. 426; [1996] 3 All E.R. 344, CA .....	336, 338, 364, 365
Dowty Boulton Paul Ltd v Wolverhampton Corp (No.1) [1971] 1 W.L.R. 204; [1971] 2 All E.R. 277, Ch D .....	1032
Doyle v Olby (Ironmongers) Ltd [1969] 2 Q.B. 158; [1969] 2 W.L.R. 673, CA .....	362, 363, 455
Doyle v White City Stadium Ltd [1935] 1 K.B. 110, CA .....	544
DPP v Goodchild; sub nom. R. v Goodchild (Kevin John) (No.2); Attorney General's Reference (No.1 of 1977), Re [1977] 1 W.L.R. 1213; [1978] 1 All E.R. 649, CA (Crim Div) .....	85, 170
DPP v Holmes; sub nom. Phillips v Holmes (1989) 153 J.P. 44; [1988] R.P.C. 613, QBD .....	16
DPP v Newbury; DPP v Jones [1977] A.C. 500; [1976] 2 W.L.R. 918, HL .....	436
DPP v Withers (Ian Douglas) [1975] A.C. 842; [1974] 3 W.L.R. 751, HL .....	478
DR Insurance Co v Seguros America Banamex; DR Insurance Co v Imperio Compañia de Seguros [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 120, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	487
Dr Jaeger's Sanitary Woollen System Co Ltd v Walker & Sons (1897) 77 L.T. 180 .....	757
Dragon, The See Daly v General Steam Navigation Co
Drake & Scull Engineering Ltd v Higgs and Hill Northern Ltd (1995) 11 Const. L.J. 214, QBD (OR) .....	52
Drake v Whipp [1996] 1 F.L.R. 826; [1996] 2 F.C.R. 296, CA .....	136
Drakeford v Piercey (1866) 14 L.T. 403 .....	730
Drane v Evangelou [1978] 1 W.L.R. 455; [1978] 2 All E.R. 437, CA .....	936
Dranetz Anstalt v Hayek [2002] EWCA Civ 1729; (2002) 146 S.J.L.B. 273, CA .....	463
Drennan v Star paving Co 51 Cal. 2d. 409 .....	154
Dresser UK Ltd v Falcongate Freight Management (The Duke of Yare) Ltd [1992] Q.B. 502; [1992] 2 W.L.R. 319, CA .....	641
Drew v Nunn (1879) 4 Q.B.D. 661 .....	751

Drewery and Drewery v Ware-Lane [1960] 1 W.L.R. 1204; [1960] 3 All E.R. 529, CA ....	742
Drexel Burnham Lambert International BV v Nasr [1986] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 356, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	107, 108, 112
Drimmie v Davies [1899] I.T.R. 176 .....	647, 650
Drive Yourself Hire Co (London) Ltd v Strutt [1954] 1 Q.B. 250; [1953] 3 W.L.R. 1111, CA .....	589, 669
Driver v William Willett (Contractors), Ltd [1969] 1 All E.R. 665, Assizes (Sussex) .....	608
Druiff v Lord Parker (1867-68) L.R. 5 Eq. 131, Ct of Chancery .....	323
Drummond v S & U Stores (1980) 258 E.G. 1293 .....	945
D'Silva v Lister House Developments Ltd [1971] Ch. 17; [1970] 2 W.L.R. 563, Ch D .....	53, 159
DSV Silo und Verwaltungsgesellschaft mbH v Owners of the Sennar (The Sennar) (No.2) [1985] 1 W.L.R. 490; [1985] 2 All E.R. 104, HL .....	341
Dublin & Wicklow Railway v Black (1852) 8 Ex. 181 .....	546
Duck v Mayeu [1892] 2 Q.B. 511 .....	573
Duckwari plc (No.1), Re [1995] B.C.C. 89; [1997] 2 B.C.L.C. 713, CA .....	701
Duffen v FRA BO SpA (No.2) [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 180; [2000] E.C.C. 61, CC (Cenral London) .....	750, 1001
Duffy v Newcastle United Football Club Ltd The Times , July 7, 2000 .....	253
Dufour v Ackland (1830) 9 L.J. (O.S.) K.B. 3 .....	523
Duke of St Albans v Shore (1789) 1 Hy.Bl. 270 .....	770, 771
Duke of Westminster v Guild [1985] Q.B. 688; [1984] 3 W.L.R. 630, CA .....	203, 204, 210
Dunbar v A&B Painters Ltd and Economic Insurance Co Ltd and Whitehouse & Co [1986] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 38, CA .....	524, 983
Dunbar v Plant [1998] Ch. 412; [1997] 3 W.L.R. 1261, CA .....	437
Dunbar Bank plc v Nadeem [1998] 3 All E.R. 876; [1998] 2 F.L.R. 457, CA .....	423
Duncan Stevenson MacMillan v AW Knott Becker Scott Ltd [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 98 .....	668
Duncan v Dixon (1890) 44 Ch D. 211 .....	547
Duncuft v Albrecht (1841) 12 Sim. 189 .....	1020
Dunk v George Waller & Son [1970] 2 Q.B. 163; [1970] 2 W.L.R. 1241, CA .....	991
Dunkirk Colliery Co v Lever (1878) L.R. 9 Ch. D. 20, CA .....	948
Dunlop Pneumatic Tyre Co Ltd v New Garage & Motor Co Ltd [1915] A.C. 79, HL .....	999, 1000, 1002
Dunlop Pneumatic Tyre Co Ltd v Selfridge & Co Ltd [1915] A.C. 847, HL ....	70, 588, 651, 670
Dunlop Rubber Co Ltd v Longlife Battery Depot (A Firm) [1958] 1 W.L.R. 1033; [1958] 3 All E.R. 197, Ch D .....	620
Dunlop v Higgins (1848) 1 H.L. Cas. 381 ....	27
Dunlop v Lambert (1839) 2 Cl. & F. 626 .....	594
Dunmore v Alexander (1830) 8 Shaw 190 ...	28, 41
Dunn v Macdonald [1897] 1 Q.B. 555, CA .....	740
Durant v Heritage [1994] E.G.C.S. 134; [1994] N.P.C. 117 .....	136, 143, 147
Durham Bros v Robertson [1998] 1 Q.B. 765, CA .....	676, 677, 682, 687
Durham Fancy Goods Ltd v Michael Jackson (Fancy Goods) Ltd [1968] 2 Q.B. 839; [1968] 3 W.L.R. 225, QBD (Comm Ct) ....	106, 111
Durham v Legard (1835) 34 Beav. 611 .....	291, 772
Durrell v Evans (1862) 1 H. & C. 174 .....	183
Duthie v Hilton (1868) L.R. 4 C.P. 138 .....	785
Dutton v Bognor Regis Urban DC [1972] 1 Q.B. 373; [1972] 2 W.L.R. 299, CA .....	610
Dutton v Manchester Airport plc [2000] Q.B. 133; [1999] 3 W.L.R. 524, CA .....	624, 1021
Dutton v Poole (1678) 2 Lev. 210 .....	588, 651
DW Moore v Ferrier [1988] 1 W.L.R. 267; [1988] 1 All E.R. 400, CA .....	984
Dyer's Case (1414) Y.B. 2 Hen. V. Pasch. pl. 26 .....	453
Dymock v Todd [2002] UKPC 50; [2002] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 849 .....	809
Dyson v Forster [1909] A.C. 98, HL .....	669
Dyster v Randall & Sons [1926] Ch. 932, Ch D .....	729, 730
E & L Berg Homes v Gray (1979) 253 E.G. 473 .....	142
E (Enduring Power of Attorney), Re [2001] Ch. 364; [2000] 3 W.L.R. 1974, Ch D ....	752
E D & F Man Ltd v Nigerian Sweets & Confectionery Co [1977] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 50, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	754
E Johnson & Co (Barbados) Ltd v NSR Ltd [1997] A.C. 400; [1996] 3 W.L.R. 583, PC (Bar) .....	896, 962, 1021, 1037
E Pfeiffer Weinkellerei-Weineinkauf GmbH & Co v Arbuthnot Factors Ltd [1988] 1 W.L.R. 150; (1987) 3 B.C.C. 608, QBD .....	682
Eagle Star & British Dominions Insurance Co Ltd v Reiner (1927) 27 Ll. L. Rep. 173, KBD .....	324
Eagle Star Insurance Co v Provincial Insurance [1994] 1 A.C. 130; [1993] 3 W.L.R. 257, PC (Bah) .....	370, 668
Eagle Star Life Assurance Co Ltd v Griggs [1998] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 256, CA .....	208
Eagle, The See Hollingworth v Southern Ferries
Eaglehill Ltd v J Needham Builders Ltd [1973] A.C. 992; [1972] 3 W.L.R. 789, HL .....	42
Eaglesfield v Marquis of Londonderry (1876-77) L.R. 4 Ch. D. 693, CA ...	333, 335

- Ealing Hammersmith and Hounslow Family Health Services Authority v Shukla [1993] I.C.R. 710; [1994] 5 Med. L.R. 258, EAT ..... 4
- Earl v Hector Whaling [1961] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 459; (1961) 105 S.J. 321, CA ..... 324, 325
- Earl v Slater & Wheeler (Airlyne) Ltd [1973] 1 W.L.R. 51 ..... 836
- Earle v Peale (1712) 10 Mod. 67 ..... 543
- Earn Line SS Co v Sutherland SS Co Ltd 254 F. 126, 131 (1918) ..... 922
- East Ham Corp v Bernard Sunley & Sons [1966] A.C. 406; [1965] 3 W.L.R. 1096, HL ..... 961
- East v Maurer [1991] 1 W.L.R. 461; [1991] 2 All E.R. 733, CA ..... 332, 359, 361, 937
- Eastbourne BC v Foster (No.1) [2001] EWCA Civ 1091; [2002] I.C.R. 234, CA ..... 845, 847
- Eastern Airlines Inc v Gulf Oil 415 F.Supp. 429 (1975) ..... 868
- Eastern Counties Railway v Hawkes (1855) 5 H.L.C. 331 ..... 563
- Eastes v Russ [1914] 1 Ch. 468, CA ..... 456, 460
- Eastgate Ex p. Ward, Re [1905] 1 K.B. 465, KBD ..... 372
- Eastham v Leigh London and Provincial Properties Ltd [1971] Ch. 871; [1971] 2 W.L.R. 1149, CA ..... 762
- Eastham v Newcastle United Football Club [1964] Ch. 413; [1963] 3 W.L.R. 574, Ch D ..... 457, 466, 467, 1044
- Easton v Brown [1981] 3 All E.R. 278, Ch D ..... 1027
- Easton v Prachett (1835) 1 Cr.M. & R. 798 ..... 684, 692
- Eastwood v Kenyon (1840) 11 A. & E. 438 ..... 67, 77, 79, 80, 160, 181
- Ebbett's Case (1870) L.R. 5 Ch.App. 302 ..... 546
- Ebrahim Dawood Ltd v Heath (Est 1927) Ltd [1961] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 512, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 1051
- Ecay v Godfrey (1947) 80 Ll. L. Rep. 286, KBD ..... 353
- Eccles v Bryant [1948] Ch. 93; [1947] 2 All E.R. 865, CA ..... 53
- Ecclesiastical Commissioners v Merral (1868-69) L.R. 4 Ex. 162, Ex Ct ..... 566
- Ecclesiastical Commissioners' Conveyance, Re [1936] Ch. 430 ..... 670
- Economides v Commercial Union Assurance Co plc [1998] Q.B. 587; [1997] 3 W.L.R. 1066, CA ..... 332, 392
- ED & F Man (Sugar) Ltd v Haryanto Yani (No.1) [1986] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 44, CA ..... 172, 193
- Eden v Smyth (1800) 5 Ves. 341 ..... 130
- Edgar v Edgar [1980] 1 W.L.R. 1410; [1980] 3 All E.R. 887, CA ..... 422, 447
- Edgington v Fitzmaurice (1885) L.R. 29 Ch. D. 459, CA ..... 331, 341, 344
- Edler v Auerbach [1950] 1 K.B. 359; [1949] 2 All E.R. 692, KBD ..... 482, 483, 491, 493, 495
- Edm JM Mertens & Co PVBA v Veevoeder Import Export Vimex BV [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 372, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 108, 814
- Edmonds v Lawson [2000] Q.B. 501; [2000] 2 W.L.R. 1091, CA ..... 82, 172
- Edmund Murray v PSB Foundations (1992) 33 Con.L.R. 1 ..... 31
- Edmunds v Lloyds Italiano & l'Ancora Compagnia di Assicurazioni & Riassicurazione SpA [1986] 1 W.L.R. 492; [1986] 2 All E.R. 249, CA ..... 995
- Edward Lloyd Ltd v Sturgeon Falls Pulp Co (1901) 85 L.T. 162 ..... 197
- Edward Owen Engineering Ltd v Barclays Bank International Ltd [1978] Q.B. 159; [1977] 3 W.L.R. 764, CA ..... 1004
- Edwards v Aberayron Insurance Society Ltd (1876) 1 Q.B.D. 563 ..... 192, 450
- Edwards v Baugh (1843) 11 M. & W. 641 ... 88, 89, 480
- Edwards v British Athletic Federation; Edwards v International Amateur Athletic Federation [1998] 2 C.M.L.R. 363; (1997) 94(30) L.S.G. 29, Ch D ..... 477
- Edwards v Carter [1893] A.C. 360, HL; affirming [1892] 2 Ch. 278, CA ..... 547
- Edwards v Jones (1836) 1 My. & Cr. 226 ..... 686
- Edwards v Jones (1921) 124 L.T. 740 ..... 183
- Edwards v Newland [1950] 2 K.B. 534 ..... 757
- Edwards v Skyways [1964] 1 W.L.R. 349; [1964] 1 All E.R. 494, QBD ..... 164, 172, 174
- Edwards v SOGAT [1971] Ch. 354; [1971] 2 Q.B. 175, CA ..... 243, 450, 479, 978, 980, 992
- Edwards v Worboys [1984] A.C. 724; [1984] 2 W.L.R. 850, CA ..... 461, 463
- Edwin Hill & Partners v First National Finance Corp [1989] 1 W.L.R. 225; [1988] 3 All E.R. 801, CA ..... 623
- Edwin Shirley Productions Ltd v Workspace Management Ltd [2001] 2 E.G.L.R. 16; [2001] 23 E.G. 158, Ch D ..... 139
- EE Caledonia Ltd (formerly Occidental Petroleum (Caledonia)) v Orbit Valve Co Europe plc [1994] 1 W.L.R. 221; [1993] 4 All E.R. 165, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 223
- Ee v Kakar (1980) 40 P. & C.R. 223; (1979) 255 E.G. 879; 124 S.J. 327, Ch D ..... 64, 65
- Effort Shipping Co Ltd v Linden Management SA (The Giannis NK) [1998] A.C. 605; [1998] 2 W.L.R. 206, HL ..... 589
- Egham & Staines Electricity Co Ltd v Egham Urban DC [1944] 1 All E.R. 107 ..... 886
- Egyptian International Foreign Trade Co v Soplex Wholesale Supplies Ltd (The Raf-faella) [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 36, CA ..... 713, 714, 716
- Ehrman v Bartholomew [1898] 1 Ch. 671, Ch D ..... 1043
- Eisen und Metall AG v Ceres Stevedoring Co and Canadian Overseas Shipping [1977] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 665, CA (Que) ..... 635

El Ajou v Dollar Land Holdings plc (No.1) [1994] 2 All E.R. 685; [1994] B.C.C. 143, CA .....	338
El Awadi v Bank of Credit and Commerce International SA Ltd [1990] 1 Q.B. 606; [1989] 3 W.L.R. 220, QBD .....	64, 173, 987
El. Oldendorff & Co GmbH v Tradax Export SA (The Johanna Oldendorff) [1974] A.C. 479; [1973] 3 W.L.R. 382, HL .....	838
Elder Dempster Lines v Zaki Ishag (The Lycan) [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 548, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	605
Elder v Kelly [1919] 2 K.B. 179, KBD .....	496
Eldridge v Taylor; sub nom. Eldridge and Morris v Taylor [1931] 2 K.B. 416, CA .....	571
Electra Private Equity Partners v KPMG Peat Marwick [2000] B.C.C. 368; [2001] 1 B.C.I.C. 589, Ch D .....	347
Electricity Supply Nominees Ltd v IAF Group Ltd [1993] 1 W.L.R. 1059; [1993] 3 All E.R. 372, QBD .....	265
Elektronska Industrija Oour TVA v Transped Oour Kintinentalna Spedicna [1986] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 49, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	585, 707
Elena d'Amico, The See Koch Marine Inc v d'Amica Societa di Navigazione arl
Elena Shipping Ltd v Aidenfield Ltd (The Elena) [1986] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 425, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	788
Elena, The See Elena Shipping Ltd v Aidenfield Ltd
Eley v Positive etc., Assurance Co (1876) 1 Ex.D. 88 .....	586
Elias v George Sahely & Co (Barbados) [1983] 1 A.C. 646; [1982] 3 W.L.R. 956, PC (Bar) .....	52, 55, 184, 185
Elias v Pasmore [1934] 2 K.B. 164, KBD .....	501
Eliaison v Henshaw 4 Wheat. 225, US Ct .....	31
Elkington v Cooke-hill (1914) 30 T.L.R. 670 .....	90
Ellen v Topp (1851) 6 ex. 424 .....	770
Eller v Grovecrest Investments Ltd [1995] Q.B. 272; [1995] 2 W.L.R. 278, CA .....	788
Ellerman Lines Ltd v Lancaster Maritime Co Ltd (The Lancaster) [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 497, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	624, 682
Ellesmere v Wallace [1929] 2 Ch. 1, CA .....	515, 518, 527, 585
Elliott v Crutchley [1906] A.C. 7; [1904] 1 K.B. 565 .....	869
Elliott v Pierson [1948] Ch. 452; [1948] 1 All E.R. 939, Ch D .....	1022, 1029
Elliott v Richardson (1870) L.R. 5 C.P. 744 .....	446
Elliott v Turquand (1881-82) L.R. 7 App. Cas. 79, PC (Jam) .....	750
Ellis v Barker (1871) L.R. 7 Ch.App.104 .....	409, 412
Ellis v Chief Adjudication Officer [1998] 1 F.L.R. 184; [1998] 2 F.C.R. 51, CA .....	72, 166
Ellis v Ellis (1689) Comb. 482 .....	543
Ellis v Hodder & Tolley Ltd (1914) 33 N.Z.L.R. 362 .....	773
Ellis v Torrington [1920] 1 K.B. 399, CA .....	697
Ellison v Ellison (1802) 6 Ves. 656 .....	685
Elliston v Reacher [1908] 2 Ch. 665, CA .....	703
Ellsworth Dobbs Inc v Johnson 236 A. 2d. 843 (1967) .....	743
Elopak Italia Srl v Tetra Pak (No.2) (IV/31.043) [1992] 4 C.M.L.R. 551; [1992] F.S.R. 542, CEC .....	477
Elphinstone v Monkland Iron and Coal Co Ltd (1886) L.R. 11 App. Cas. 332, HL ...	1000, 1001
Elpis Maritime Co v Marti Chartering Co (The Maria D) [1992] 1 A.C. 21; [1991] 3 W.L.R. 330, HL .....	184, 733, 738
Else (1982) v Parkland Holdings [1994] 1 B.C.L.C. 130, CA
Elsley v JG Collins Insurance Agencies (1978) 3 D.L.R. (3d) 1 .....	1003
Eltham v Kingsman (1818) 1 B. & Ald. 683 .....	519
Elton Cop Dyeing Co v Broadbent & Son (1920) 89 L.J. K.B. 186 .....	100
Elton John v Richard Leon James [1991] F.S.R. 397 .....	414
Embiricos v Sydney Reid & Co [1914] 3 K.B. 45, KBD .....	863, 891
Emerald Construction Co v Lowthian [1966] 1 W.L.R. 691; [1966] 1 All E.R. 1013, CA ....	622
Emmanuel C, The See Industrie Chimiche Italiana Centrale v NEA Ninemia Shipping Co SA
Emmerson's Case See London Hamburg and Continental Exchange Bank, Re
Empire Meat Co Ltd v Patrick [1939] 2 All E.R. 85, CA .....	459
Empresa Cubana de Fletes v Lagonisi Shipping Co Ltd (The Georgios C) [1971] 1 Q.B. 488; [1971] 2 W.L.R. 221, CA .....	373
Empresa Cubana Importadora de Alimentos Alimport v Iasmos Shipping Co SA (The Good Friend) [1984] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 586, The Times, August 14, 1984, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	960, 976
Empresa Exportadora De Azucar (CUBAZUCAR) v Industria Azucarera Nacional SA (IANSa) (The Playa Larga and Marble Islands) [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 171; [1983] Com. L.R. 58, CA .....	754, 865, 884, 889, 899, 905, 960
Empresa Lineas Maritimas Argentinas v Oceanus Mutual Underwriting Association (Bermuda) Ltd [1984] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 517; (1984) 134 N.L.J. 724, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	582
Empress Engineering Co, Re (1880-81) L.R. 16 Ch. D. 125, CA .....	725
Enderby Town Football Club v Football Association [1971] Ch. 591; [1970] 3 W.L.R. 1021, CA .....	243, 478
Energy Progress, The See Orient Overseas Management and Finance Ltd v File Shipping Co Ltd
Enfield LBC v Arajah [1995] E.G.C.S. 164, CA .....	52, 178

- Enfield LBC v Mahoney [1983] 1 W.L.R. 749;
[1983] 2 All E.R. 901, CA ..... 1019
- Engelbach's Estate, Re [1924] 2 Ch. 348, Ch
D ..... 604, 647, 649, 666
- England v Curling (1844) 8 Beav. 129
- England v Davidson (1840) 11 A. & E. 856 ..... 92
- Englefield Holdings and Sinclair's Contract,
Re [1962] 1 W.L.R. 1119; [1962] 3 All E.R.
503, Ch D ..... 242
- English v Dedham Vale Properties [1978] 1
W.L.R. 93; [1978] 1 All E.R. 382, Ch D ... 393, 748
- English Hop Growers v Dering [1928] 2 K.B.
174, CA ..... 462, 465
- Enimont Overseas AG v RO Jugotanker Zadar
(The Olib) [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 108; The Financial Times, February 8, 1991, QBD
(Comm Ct) ..... 406, 719, 721
- Entores Ltd v Miles Far East Corp [1955] 2
Q.B. 327; [1955] 3 W.L.R. 48, CA ..... 23, 26
- EP Nelson & Co v Rolfe [1950] 1 K.B. 139;
[1949] 2 All E.R. 584, CA ..... 749
- Epaphus, The See Eurico SpA v Philipp Bros
- Epps v Rothnie [1945] K.B. 562, CA ..... 728
- Equitable Life Assurance Society v Ernst &
Young The Times, February 24, 2003 ..... 974
- Equitable Life Assurance Society v Hyman
[2002] 1 A.C. 408; [2000] 3 W.L.R. 529,
HL ..... 167, 207, 212, 213, 237
- ER Ives Investment Ltd v High [1967] 2 Q.B.
379; [1967] 2 W.L.R. 789, CA ..... 55, 136, 137,
143, 144, 703
- ERG Petroli SpA v Vitol SA (The Ballenita and The BP Energy) [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep.
455, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 799, 1063
- Eridania SpA (formerly Cereol Italia Srl) v
Oetker (The Fjord Wind) [2000] 2 All E.R.
(Comm) 108; [2000] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 191,
CA; affirming [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 307,
QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 892, 921
- Erie County Natural Gas and Fuel Co Ltd v
Carroll [1911] A.C. 105, PC (Can) ..... 980
- Erlanger v New Sombrero Phosphate Co; sub nom. New Sombrero Phosphate Co v Erlanger (1877-78) L.R. 3 App. Cas. 1218,
HL ..... 380, 385, 399, 423
- Ermoupolis, The See Ulysses Compania Nav-iera SA v Huntingdon Petroleum Services
(The Ermoupolis)
- Ernest Beck & Co v K Szymanowski & Co; sub
nom. Szymonowski & Co v Beck & Co
[1924] A.C. 43; (1923-24) 17 Ll. L. Rep.
97, HL ..... 221
- Ernest Scragg & Sons v Perseverance Banking and Trust Co [1973] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 101,
CA ..... 325
- Errington v Errington [1952] 1 K.B. 290;
[1952] 1 All E.R. 149, CA .... 39, 73, 137, 607
- Erskine Macdonald Ltd v Eyles [1921] 1 Ch.
631, Ch D ..... 620
- Ertel Bieber & Co v Rio Tinto Co Ltd [1918]
A.C. 260, HL ..... 888, 899
- Esanda Finance Corp Ltd v Peat Marwick
Hungerfords [2000] Lloyd's Rep. P.N. 684;
(1997) 142 A.L.R. 750, HC (Aus) ..... 347
- Eshelby v Federated European Bank Ltd
[1932] 1 K.B. 423, CA ..... 786, 1006
- Eshun v Moorgate Mercantile Co [1971] 1
W.L.R. 722; [1971] 2 All E.R. 402, CA ..... 773, 830
- Espley v Williams [1997] 1 E.G.L.R. 9; [1997]
08 E.G. 137, CA ..... 458
- Essenda Finance Corp Ltd v Plessnig (1989)
63 A.L.J.R. 238 ..... 1006
- Essex CC v Ellam (Inspector of Taxes) [1989]
2 All E.R. 494; [1989] S.T.C. 317, CA .... 199
- Esso Bernicia, The See Esso Petroleum Co Ltd
v Hall Russell & Co Ltd
- Esso Petroleum Co Ltd v Alstonbridge Properties Ltd [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1474; [1975] 3
All E.R. 358, Ch D ..... 753
- Esso Petroleum Co Ltd v Hall Russell & Co
Ltd (The Esso Bernicia) [1989] A.C. 643;
[1988] 3 W.L.R. 730, HL ..... 589, 591, 696
- Esso Petroleum Co Ltd v Harper's Garage
(Stourport) Ltd [1968] A.C. 269; [1967] 2
W.L.R. 871, HL ..... 453, 460, 466, 468, 469,
470, 471, 472, 473, 1044
- Esso Petroleum Co Ltd v Kingswood Motors
(Addlestone) Ltd [1974] Q.B. 142; [1973] 3
W.L.R. 780, QBD ..... 622
- Esso Petroleum Co Ltd v Mardon [1976] Q.B.
801; [1976] 2 W.L.R. 583, CA .... 330, 348, 349,
356, 360, 363, 983, 984, 993
- Esso Petroleum Co Ltd v Milton [1997] 1
W.L.R. 938; [1997] 2 All E.R. 593, CA ..... 237, 248, 257, 354, 691, 754
- Esso Petroleum Co v Customs and Excise
Commissioners [1976] 1 W.L.R. 1; [1976]
1 All E.R. 117, HL ..... 12, 173
- Essoldo v Ladbroke Group The Times, December 21, 1976 ..... 201
- Estate of Brocklehurst (Deceased), Re [1978]
Ch. 14; [1977] 3 W.L.R. 96, CA .... 243, 414, 419
- Estates Investment Co, Re; sub nom. Pawle's Case (1868-69) L.R. 4 Ch. App. 497, CA in Chancery ..... 383
- Esterhuizen v Allid Dunbar Assurance plc
[1998] 2 F.L.R. 668; [1998] Fam. Law 527;
The Times, June 10, 1998, QBD ..... 616
- Etablissement Biret et Cie SA v Yukeiteru Kaiun KK & Nissui Shipping Corp (The Sun Happiness) [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 381,
QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 733
- Etablissements Levy (Georges et Paul) v Adderley Navigation Co Panama SA (The Olympic Pride) [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 67,
QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 321, 322, 324, 325

Ethiopian Oilseeds and Pulses Export Corp v Rio del Mar Foods [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 86; The Times , August 11, 1989, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	324
Ets Soules & Cie. v International Trade Development Co Ltd [1980] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 129 .....	109, 116, 812
Eugenia, The See Ocean Tramp Tankers Corp v V/O Sovfracht .....
Eurico SpA v Philipp Bros (The Epaphus) [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 215; [1987] 2 F.T.L.R. 213, CA .....	924
Eurocopy v Teesdale [1992] B.C.L.C. 1067, CA .....	338
Euro-Diam Ltd v Bathurst [1990] 1 Q.B. 1; [1988] 2 W.L.R. 517, CA ....	438, 482, 484, 511
Eurometal, The See Cerealmangimi SpA v Alfired C Toepfer .....
Europa, The [1908] P. 84, PIDAD .....	229
Europe Mortgage Co v Halifax Estate Agencies [1996] E.G.C.S. 84; [1996] N.P.C. 68, QBD .....	981
European Asian Bank AG v Punjab & Sind Bank [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 356; [1982] Com. L.R. 76, CA .....	603
European Asian Bank AG v Punjab & Sind Bank (No.2) [1983] 1 W.L.R. 642; [1983] 2 All E.R. 508, CA .....	404, 710
European Enterprise, The See Browner International Ltd v Monarch Shipping Co Ltd .....
European Gas Turbines Ltd (formerly Ruston Gas Turbines Ltd) v MSAS Cargo International Inc [2001] C.L.C. 880, QBD .....	611
Eurus, The See Total Transport Corp v Arcadia Petroleum Ltd .....
Eurymedon, The See New Zealand Shipping Co Ltd v AM Satterthwaite & Co Ltd .....
Eustace v Kempe Roberts [1964] C.L.Y. 3280; The Times , December 10, 1964 .....	353
Evans v Hoare [1892] 1 Q.B. 593, QBD .....	183, 184
Evans v Hooper (1875) 1 Q.B.D. 45 .....	585
Evans v Jewellin (1787) 1 Cox CC 333 .....	312, 319, 420
Evans v Motor Insurers Bureau [1999] 1 C.M.L.R. 1251; [1999] Eu. L.R. 389, CA; affirming The Times , November 10, 1997, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	668
Evans v Powis (1847) 1 Ex. 601 .....	129
Evans v Souls Garages Ltd The Times , January 23, 2001 .....	483
Evans Marshall & Co v Bertola SA (No.1) [1973] 1 W.L.R. 349; [1973] 1 All E.R. 992, CA .....	1022, 1026, 1041, 1042, 1043, 1045
Evans Marshall & Co v Bertola SA (No.2) [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 17, HL .....	980
Evanturel v Evanturel (1874-75) L.R. 6 P.C. 1, PC (Can) .....	478
Evenenden v Guildford City Association Football Club [1975] Q.B. 917; [1975] 3 W.L.R. 251, CA .....	106, 113
Evening Standard Co Ltd v Henderson [1987] I.C.R. 588; [1987] I.R.L.R. 64, CA .....	464, 844, 845, 846, 1041, 1043, 1044
Everett v Hogg, Robinson & Gardner Mountain (Insurance) [1973] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 217, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	524
Everett v Wilkins (1874) 29 L.T. 846 .....	548
Eves v Eves [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1338; [1975] 3 All E.R. 768; 119 S.J. 394, CA .....	136, 137, 146, 147, 166, 444
Evia (No.2), The See Kodros Shipping Corp of Monrovia v Empresa Cubana de Fletes .....
Evia Luck (No.2), The See Dimskal Shipping Co SA v International Transport Workers Federation .....
EWA, Re [1901] 2 K.B. 642 .....	572
Excomm v Guan Guan Shipping Pte Ltd (The Golden Bear) [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 330; [1987] 1 F.T.L.R. 61, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	9, 10, 32, 35
Exercise Shipping Co Ltd v Bay Maritime Lines Ltd (The Fantasy) [1992] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 235, CA; affirming [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 391, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	223
Exmar NV v BP Shipping (The Gas Enterprise) [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 352, CA .....	32
Expert Clothing Service & Sales Ltd v Hillgate House Ltd [1986] Ch. 340; [1985] 3 W.L.R. 359, CA .....	812, 813
Export Credits Guarantee Department v Universal Oil Products Co & Procon Inc and Procon (Great Britain) Ltd [1983] 1 W.L.R. 399; [1983] 2 All E.R. 205, HL .....	1004
Exportelisa SA v Rocco Giuseppe & Figli Soc Coll [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 433, CA .....	882
Eyre v Johnson [1946] K.B. 481; [1946] 1 All E.R. 719, KBD .....	890, 895
Eyre v Measday [1986] 1 All E.R. 488; (1986) 136 N.L.J. 91, CA .....	191, 206, 841
F v West Berkshire HA; sub nom. F (Mental Patient: Sterilisation), Re [1990] 2 A.C. 1; [1989] 2 W.L.R. 1025, HL .....	559, 719, 721, 722
F & G Sykes (Wessex) Ltd v Fine Fare Ltd [1967] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 53, CA .....	56
F & H Entertainments v Leisure Enterprises (1976) 240 E.G. 455; 120 S.J. 331 .....	358, 360, 391
Faccenda Chicken Ltd v Fowler; Fowler v Faccenda Chicken Ltd [1987] Ch. 117; [1986] 3 W.L.R. 288, CA ....	206, 455, 456, 457, 464
Factortame Ltd v Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (Costs) (No.2) [2002] EWCA Civ 932; [2002] 3 W.L.R. 1104, CA .....	431
Fairchild v Glenhaven Funeral Services Ltd (t/a GH Dovener & Son) [2002] UKHL 22; [2003] 1 A.C. 32, HL .....	976
Fairclough Building v Port Talbot BC (1992) 62 B.L.R. 82 .....	15
Fairlie v Fenton (1870) L.R. 5 Ex. 169 .....	732

- Fairline Shipping Corp v Adamson [1975] Q.B. 180; [1974] 2 W.L.R. 824, QBD ..... 34
- Fairvale v Sabharwal [1992] 2 E.G.L.R. 27; [1992] 32 E.G. 51, CA ..... 741, 1061
- Faith v EIC (1821) 4 B. & ald. 630 ..... 607, 616
- Fal Bunkering of Sharjah v Grecale of Panama [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 369, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 204
- Falck v Williams [1900] A.C. 176, PC (Aus) .... 303
- Falcke v Gray (1859) 4 Drew. 651 ..... 421, 620, 1022, 1028
- Falcke v Scottish Imperial Insurance Co (1887) L.R. 34 Ch. D. 234, CA ..... 719
- Famosa Shipping Co Ltd v Armada Bulk Carriers Ltd (The Fanis) [1994] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 633, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 980
- Fanis, The See Famosa Shipping Co Ltd v Armada Bulk Carriers Ltd
- Fantasy, The See Exercise Shipping Co Ltd v Bay Maritime Lines Ltd
- Fanti and Padre Island, The See Firma C-Trade SA v Newcastle Protection and Indemnity Association
- Far Eastern Shipping plc v Scales Trading Ltd [2001] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 319; [2001] Lloyd's Rep. Bank. 29, PC (NZ) ..... 384
- Faraday v Tamworth Union (1917) 86 L.J.Ch. 436 ..... 315, 322
- Farley Health Products v Babylon Trading Co The Times, July 29, 1987 ..... 979
- Farley v Skinner (No.2) [2001] UKHL 49; [2002] 2 A.C. 732, HL .... 966, 988, 989, 990, 992, 993
- Farmer v Russell (1798) 1 B. & P. 296 ..... 502
- Farnham v Atkins (1670) 1 Sid. 446 ..... 549
- Farnworth Finance Facilities v Attridge [1970] 1 W.L.R. 1053; [1970] 2 All E.R. 774, CA ..... 232, 233, 1057
- Farquharson v Pearl Insurance Co Ltd [1937] 3 All E.R. 124 ..... 754
- Farr (AE) v Admiralty [1953] 1 W.L.R. 965; [1953] 2 All E.R. 512, QBD ..... 223
- Farr Smith & Co Ltd v Messers Ltd [1928] 1 K.B. 397, KBD ..... 184
- Farr v Hain SS Co (The Tregenna) 121 F. 2d. 940 ..... 229, 806
- Farrage v North Wiltshire DC (1992) 64 P. & C.R. 527; (1992) 156 L.G. Rev., CA ..... 153
- Faruqi v English Real Estates Ltd [1979] 1 W.L.R. 963; (1979) 38 P. & C.R. 318, Ch D ..... 391, 394
- Fawcett and Holmes Contract, Re (1889) L.R. 42 Ch. D. 150, CA ..... 772
- Fawcett v Smethurst (1941) 84 L.J.Ch. 473 .... 540, 551
- FC Shepherd & Co v Jerrom [1987] Q.B. 301; [1986] 3 W.L.R. 801, CA ... 858, 899, 905, 907, 908, 909, 910, 920
- Fearon v Aylesford (1884) 14 Q.B.D. 792 ..... 763
- Featherstone v Staples [1986] 1 W.L.R. 861; [1986] 2 All E.R. 461, CA ..... 479
- Federal Commerce & Navigation Co Ltd v Molena Alpha Inc (The Nanfri) [1979] A.C. 757; [1978] 3 W.L.R. 991, HL ..... 777, 778, 788, 795, 797, 800, 809
- Federal Commerce & Navigation Co Ltd v Tradax Export SA (The Maratha Envoy) [1978] A.C. 1; [1977] 3 W.L.R. 126, HL .... 215
- Fedora, The See Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co of Chicago v Papanicolaou
- Feise v Parkinson (1812) 4 Taunt. 639 ..... 373
- Felixstowe Dock & Railway Co v British Transport Docks Board [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 656; [1976] 2 C.M.L.R. 655, CA ..... 63
- Fellowes & Son v Fisher [1976] Q.B. 122; [1975] 3 W.L.R. 184, CA ..... 458, 460, 1041
- Fellowes v Clyde Helicopters Ltd [1997] A.C. 534; [1997] 2 W.L.R. 380, HL ..... 639
- Fellowes v Gwydyr (1829) 1 Russ. & My 83 ... 304, 734
- Fellows v Wood (1888) 59 L.T. 513 ..... 544
- Felthouse v Bindley (1862) 6 L.T. 157 .... 32, 33, 34, 304
- Fender v St John Mildmay [1938] A.C. 1, HL ..... 439, 440
- Fenner v Blake [1900] 1 Q.B. 426, QBD ..... 101
- Fenton Insurance Co v Gothaer Versicherungsbank VVaG [1991] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 172; The Times, July 4, 1990, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 10, 844
- Fenwick v Macdonald, Fraser & Co Ltd (1904) 6 F. (Ct of Sess.) 850 ..... 12
- Fercometal Sarl v MSC Mediterranean Shipping Co SA (The Simona) [1989] A.C. 788; [1988] 3 W.L.R. 200, HL ..... 766, 767, 768, 844, 865, 963, 964
- Feret v Hill (1854) 15 C.B. 207 ..... 498, 499
- Ferguson v Davies [1997] 1 All E.R. 315; The Independent, December 12, 1996, CA ..... 126
- Ferguson v John Dawson & Partners (Contractors) Ltd [1976] 1 W.L.R. 1213; [1976] 3 All E.R. 817, CA ..... 198
- Ferguson v Littlewoods Pools Ltd 1997 S.L.T. 309, OH ..... 163, 515
- Ferguson v Wilson (1866) L.R. 2 Ch.App. 77 ..... 732
- Fergusson v Norman (1838) 5 Bing.N.C. 76 .... 433
- FG Minter v Welsh health Technical Services Organization (1980) 13 Build L.R. 1 ..... 998
- Fibrosa Spolka Akcyjna v Fairbairn Lawson Combe Barbour Ltd [1943] A.C. 32; [1942] 2 All E.R. 122, HL ..... 868, 887, 899, 911, 912, 917, 919, 924, 1049
- Ficom SA v Sociedad Cadex Ltda [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 118, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 101, 105
- Fielding & Platt Ltd v Najjar [1969] 1 W.L.R. 357; [1969] 2 All E.R. 150, CA ..... 484, 486, 505, 850
- Fielding (Harold) v Mansi [1974] 1 All E.R. 1035; [1974] I.C.R. 347, NIRC ..... 750

- Figure Ltd v Mander [1999] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 193, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 826
- Filby v Hounsell [1896] 2 Ch. 737, Ch D ..... 55
- Filiatra Legacy, The See Anonima Petroli Italiana SpA and Neste Oy v Marluidez Armadora SA
- Filipinas I See R Pagnan & Fratelli v NGJ Schouten NV
- Finagrain SA Geneva v P Kruse Hamburg [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 508, CA ..... 107, 108, 117
- Financial Techniques (Planning Services) v Hughes [1981] I.R.L.R. 32, CA ..... 32, 172
- Financings Ltd v Baldock [1963] 2 Q.B. 104; [1963] 2 W.L.R. 359, CA ..... 773, 853, 854
- Financings v Stimson [1962] 1 W.L.R. 1184; [1962] 3 All E.R. 386, CA ..... 11, 31, 44
- Finch v Brook (1834) 1 Bing.N.C. 253 ..... 754
- Finchbourne Ltd v Rodrigues [1976] 3 All E.R. 581, CA ..... 50
- Finelli v Dee (1968) 67 D.L.R. (2d) 393 ..... 1016, 1035
- Finelvet AG v Vinava Shipping Co (The Chrysalis) [1983] 1 W.L.R. 1469; [1983] 2 All E.R. 658, QBD ..... 868, 874, 888, 891, 897, 898
- Finkelkraut v Monahan [1949] 2 All E.R. 234; [1949] W.N. 298, Ch D ..... 830
- Finland Steamship Co Ltd v Felixstowe Dock & Railway Co [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 287, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 96, 882
- Finley v Connell Associates (Application to Strike Out) [1999] Lloyd's Rep. P.N. 895; (1999) 96(26) L.S.G. 27, QBD ..... 573
- Fiona, The See Mediterranean Freight Services Ltd v BP Oil International Ltd
- Firebank's Executors v Humphreys (1887) L.R. 18 Q.B.D. 54, CA ..... 334, 565
- Fire, Auto and Marine Insurance Co v Greene [1964] 2 Q.B. 687; [1964] 3 W.L.R. 319, QBD ..... 373
- Firestone & Parson Inc v Union League of Philadelphia 672 F. Supp.819 (1987) ..... 293
- Firestone Tyre & Rubber Co Ltd v Vokins & Co Ltd [1951] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 32, KBD ..... 84, 236
- Firma C-Trade SA v Newcastle Protection and Indemnity Association (The Fanti); Socony Mobil Oil Co Inc v West of England Shipowners Mutual Insurance Association (London) Ltd (The Padre Island) (No.2) [1991] 2 A.C. 1; [1990] 3 W.L.R. 78, H.L. .... 668, 762, 1013
- First Energy (UK) v Hungarian International Bank [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 194; [1993] B.C.C. 533, CA ..... 8, 51, 713, 714, 716
- First Interstate Bank of California v Cohen Arnold & Co [1996] 5 Bank. L.R. 150; [1996] C.I.C. 174; [1995] E.G.C.S. 188, CA ..... 956
- First National Bank plc v Thompson [1996] Ch. 231; [1996] 2 W.L.R. 293, CA ..... 115
- First National Bank plc v Walker [2001] 1 F.L.R. 505; [2001] 1 F.C.R. 21, CA ..... 423
- First National Commercial Bank plc v Humberts [1995] 2 All E.R. 673; [1996] 5 Bank. L.R. 177, CA ..... 362, 983
- First National Commercial Bank plc v Loxleys [1997] P.N.L.R. 211; [1996] E.G.C.S. 174, CA ..... 258, 347
- First National Reinsurance Co Ltd v JH Greenfield [1921] 2 K.B. 260; (1920) 5 Ll. L. Rep. 402, KBD ..... 383
- First National Securities Ltd v Jones [1978] Ch. 109; [1978] 2 W.L.R. 475, CA ..... 159
- First Sport Ltd v Barclays Bank plc [1993] 1 W.L.R. 1229; [1993] 3 All E.R. 789, CA ..... 24, 583, 712, 713
- Firststeel Cold Rolled Products v Anaco Precision Pressings The Times, November 21, 1994 ..... 993
- Firstpost Homes Ltd v Johnson [1995] 1 W.L.R. 1567; [1995] 4 All E.R. 355; [1996] 1 E.G.L.R. 175, CA ..... 178, 833
- Fish v Kempton (1849) 7 C.B. 687 ..... 727
- Fisher & Co v Apollinaris Co (1874-75) L.R. 10 Ch. App. 297, CA in Chancery ..... 445
- Fisher v Bell [1961] 1 Q.B. 394; [1960] 3 W.L.R. 919; [1960] 3 All E.R. 731, DC ..... 12
- Fisher v Bridges (1854) 3 El. & Bl. 642 ..... 510
- Fisher v Tomatousos [1991] 2 E.G.L.R. 204 ..... 65
- Fishmongers' Co v Robertson (1843) 5 Man. & G. 131 ..... 150, 566
- Fitch v Dewes [1921] 2 A.C. 158, HL ..... 457, 458, 460
- Fitch v Jones (1855) 5 El. & Bl. 238 ..... 527
- Fitzgerald v Dressler (1859) 141 E.R. 861 ..... 182
- Fitzgerald v Leonard (1893) L.R. 33 Ir. 675 ..... 435
- Fitzmaurice v Bayley (1856) 6 E. & B. 868 ..... 723
- Fitzpatrick v Sterling Housing Association Ltd [2001] 1 A.C. 27; [1999] 3 W.L.R. 1113, HL ..... 444
- Fitzroy v Cave [1905] 2 K.B. 364, CA ..... 672, 677, 695, 696
- Fjord Wind, The See Eridania SpA (formerly Cereol Italia Srl) v Oetker
- Flamar InterOcean v Denmac (The Flamar Pride and The Flamar Progress) [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 434; Lloyd's List, January 5, 1990, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 253, 258, 260
- Flamar Pride and Flamar Progress, The See Flamar InterOcean v Denmac
- Flavell, Re; sub nom. Murray v Flavell (1884) L.R. 25 Ch. D. 89, CA ..... 647, 648, 650
- Fleet v Murton (1871) L.R. 7 Q.B. 126 ..... 734
- Fleetwood's Policy, Re [1926] Ch 48 ..... 648
- Fleming v Bank of New Zealand [1900] A.C. 577, PC (NZ) ..... 81, 726
- Flemyng v Hector (1836) 2 M. & W. 172 ..... 705
- Fletamentos Maritimos SA v Effjohn International BV (1994) [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 311; Lloyd's List, February 8, 1995, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 202, 203
- Fletcher v Fletcher (1844) 4 Hare 67 ..... 647, 1036

- Fletcher v Krell (1872) 42 L.J.Q.B. 55 ..... 390
 Fletcher v Tayleur (1855) 17 C.B. 21 .... 968, 996
 Flight v Boland (1828) 4 Russ. 298 ..... 549, 1037, 1038
 Flight v Booth (1834) 1 Bing. N.C. 370 ..... 391, 772, 807
 Flight v Reed (1863) 1 H. & C. 703 ..... 80
 Flint v Bradon (1808) 3 Ves. 159 ..... 1035
 Floating Dock Ltd v Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corp [1986] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 65,
 QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 9
 Flood v Shand Construction Ltd (1987) 81
 B.L.R. 31 ..... 693
 Floods of Queensferry Ltd v Shand Construction Ltd (No.3) [2000] B.L.R. 81, QBD
 (T&CC) ..... 359
 Florence Land & Public Works Co, Re; sub nom. Nicol's Case; Tufnell & Ponsonby's Case (1885) L.R. 29 Ch. D. 421, CA ..... 16
 Florida Power & Light Co v Westinghouse
 Electric Corporation F.2d 239 (1987) .... 879, 882
 Flower v London and North Western Railway
 Co [1894] 2 Q.B. 65, CA ..... 544
 Flower v Marten (1837) 2 My. & Cr. 459 ..... 130
 Flower v Sadler (1882) 10 Q.B.D. 572 ..... 409
 Foakes v Beer (1883-84) L.R. 9 App. Cas. 605,
 HL ..... 83, 125, 126, 127, 128, 131, 132
 Foley v Classique Coaches Ltd [1934] 2 K.B.
 1, CA ..... 56, 57, 468, 473
 Fontaine v Chesterton (1968) S.J. 690 ..... 243
 Fontana NV v Mautner (1979) 254 E.G.
 199 ..... 109, 110, 135
 Food Corp of India v Antclizo Shipping Corp
 (The Antclizo) [1988] 1 W.L.R. 603;
 [1988] 2 All E.R. 513, HL; affirming
 [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 130; [1987] 2
 F.T.L.R. 114, CA .... 8, 9, 10, 32, 108, 109, 306
 Foran v Wight (1989) 168 C.L.R. 385 ..... 766
 Ford & Sons (Oldham) Ltd v Henry Leatham
 & Sons Ltd (1915) 21 Com.Cas. 55 ..... 883
 Ford Hunt v Singh (Raghubir) [1973] 1 W.L.R.
 738; [1973] 2 All E.R. 700, Ch D ..... 1049
 Ford Motor Co (England) Ltd v Armstrong
 (1915) 31 T.L.R. 267 ..... 1002
 Ford Motor Co Ltd v Amalgamated Union of Engineering and Foundry Workers [1969]
 2 Q.B. 303; [1969] 1 W.L.R. 339, QBD ..... 168
 Ford v Clarksons Holidays [1971] 1 W.L.R.
 1412; [1971] 3 All E.R. 454, CA ..... 448
 Ford v White & Co [1964] 1 W.L.R. 885;
 [1964] 2 All E.R. 755 ..... 935
 Foresight Driller II, The See Zealand Navigation Co Ltd v Banque Worms
 Forman & Co Proprietary Ltd v Liddesdale,
 The [1900] A.C. 190, PC (Aus) ..... 723
 Formby Bros v Formby (1910) 102 L.T. 116 .... 728
 Formica Ltd v Export Credits Guarantee Department [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 692; The Times, October 19, 1994, QBD (Comm
 Ct) ..... 707
 Forrer v Nash (1865) 35 Beav. 167 ..... 1029
- Forsikringsaktieselskapet Vesta v Butcher
 [1989] A.C. 852; [1989] 2 W.L.R. 290,
 HL ..... 197, 794, 983, 984, 985, 986
 Forster v Baker [1910] 2 K.B. 636, CA ..... 677
 Forster v Elvett Colliery Co Ltd [1908] 1 K.B.
 629 ..... 669
 Forster v Silvermere Golf and Equestrian
 Centre 125 S.J. 397 ..... 593
 Fort Kip, The [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 168 ..... 782
 Fortescue v Barnett (1834) 3 My. & K. 36 ..... 685, 686
 Forth v Stanton (1681) 1 Wms.Saund. 210 ..... 672
 Forum Craftsman, The [1985] 1 Lloyd's Rep.
 291, CA; affirming [1984] 2 Lloyd's Rep.
 102, QBD (Adm Ct) ..... 589, 627, 630
 Forum Craftsman, The See Islamic Republic of Iran Shipping Lines v Ierax Shipping
 Co of Panama
 Fosbroke-Hobbes v Airwork Ltd (1936) 56 Ll.
 L. Rep. 209, KBD ..... 641
 Foskett v McKeown [2001] 1 A.C. 102; [2000]
 2 W.L.R. 1299, HL ..... 439, 746
 Foster Clark's Indenture Trust, Re; sub nom.
 Loveland v Horscroft [1966] 1 W.L.R. 125;
 [1966] 1 All E.R. 43, Ch D ..... 694
 Foster v Charles (1830) 6 Bing. 396 ..... 344
 Foster v Dawber (1861) 6 Ex. 839 ..... 85, 99
 Foster v Driscoll; Lindsay v Attfield; Lindsay v
 Driscoll [1929] 1 K.B. 470, CA ..... 433, 452
 Foster v London, Chatham and Dover Railway
 Co [1895] 1 Q.B. 711, CA ..... 564
 Foster v Mackinnon (1868-69) L.R. 4 C.P.
 704, CCP ..... 327, 328, 692
 Foster v Redgrave (1867) L.R. 4 Ex. 35n ..... 541
 Foster, Re; sub nom. Hudson v Foster [1938] 3
 All E.R. 357, Ch D ..... 647, 649, 670
 Foster's Policy, Re [1966] 1 W.L.R. 222; [1966]
 1 All E.R. 432, Ch D ..... 647, 648, 667
 Fothergill v Rowland (1873) L.R. 17 Eq.
 137 ..... 1020, 1024, 1045
 Fowkes v Manchester Assurance Association
 (1863) 3 B. & S. 917; (1863) 32 L.J. Q.B.
 153, KBD ..... 373
 Fowle v Freeman (1804) 9 Ves. 351 ..... 55
 Fowler v Fowler (1859) 4 De G. & J. 250 ..... 325
 Fox v Henderson Investment Fund Ltd [1999]
 2 Lloyd's Rep. 303, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 452
 Foxley v Olton [1965] 2 Q.B. 306; [1964] 3
 W.L.R. 1155, QBD ..... 981
 France v Gaudet (1870-71) L.R. 6 Q.B. 199,
 QB ..... 953
 Francis v Cowcliffe (1977) 33 P. & C.R. 368 ..... 838, 1027
 Francis v Municipal Councillors of Kuala
 Lumpur [1962] 1 W.L.R. 1411; [1962] 3
 All E.R. 633, PC (FMS) ..... 1030
 Franco v Bolton (1797) 3 Ves. 368 ..... 443
 Frank v Knight (1937) O.Q.P.D. 113 ..... 31
 Frank W Clifford Ltd v Garth [1956] 1 W.L.R.
 570; [1956] 2 All E.R. 323, CA ..... 433, 506

Fraser River Pile & Dredge Ltd v Can-Dive Services Ltd [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 199, Sup Ct (Can) .....	590
Fraser Shipping Ltd v Colton [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 586, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	395, 815
Fraser v BN Furman (Productions) Ltd [1967] 1 W.L.R. 898; [1967] 3 All E.R. 57, CA .....	524
Fraser v Thames Television Ltd [1984] Q.B. 44; [1983] 2 W.L.R. 917, QBD .....	58, 201, 733
Fratelli Moretti SpA v Nidera Handelscompagnie BV [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 47, CA .....	1004
Fratelli Sorrentino v Buerger [1915] 3 K.B. 367, CA .....	757
Fred Drughorn Ltd v Rederiaktiebolaget Transatlantic [1919] A.C. 203, HL .....	728
Fredenssen v Rothschild [1941] 1 All E.R. 430 .....	325
Frederick F. Rose (London) Ltd v William H Pim Junior & Co Ltd [1953] 2 Q.B. 450; [1953] 3 W.L.R. 497, QBD .....	291, 324, 375
Freedman (t/a John Freedman & Co) v Union Group plc [1997] E.G.C.S. 28, CA .....	89
Freedom Maritime Corp v International Bulk Carriers (Khian Captain, The (No.2)) [1986] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 429, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	788
Freeguard v Rogers (No.1) [1999] 1 W.L.R. 375; [1998] E.G.C.S. 145, CA .....	199, 975
Freeman v Cooke (1848) 2 Ex. 654 .....	116
Freeman v Niroomand (1996) 52 Con.L.R. 116 .....	948
Freeman v Taylor (1831) 8 Bing. 124 .....	795
Freeman & Lockyer v Buckhurst Park Properties (Mangal) Ltd [1964] 2 Q.B. 480; [1964] 2 W.L.R. 618, CA .....	714, 715
Freeth v Burr (1873-74) L.R. 9 C.P. 208, CCP .....	774, 807
French v Barclays Bank plc [1998] I.R.L.R. 646, CA .....	988
Frenkel v MacAndrews & Co Ltd [1929] A.C. 545; (1929) 33 Ll. L. Rep. 191, HL .....	230
Friends Provident Life Office v Hillier Parker May & Rowden [1997] Q.B. 85; [1996] 2 W.L.R. 123, CA .....	202, 203, 313, 1056
Frith v Frith [1906] A.C. 254, PC (TCl) .....	751
Frobisher (Second Investments) Ltd v Kiloran Trust Co Ltd [1980] 1 W.L.R. 425; [1980] 1 All E.R. 488, Ch D .....	204
Frost v Aylesbury Dairy Co Ltd [1905] 1 K.B. 608, CA .....	839
Frost v Knight (1872) L.R. 7 Ex. 111 .....	860
Fruta Oceanica Brasileira SA v Steamship Mutual Underwriting Association (Bermuda) Ltd (The Frota Norte) [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 461; [1997] C.L.C. 230, CA .....	17, 823
Frota Norte, The See Fruta Oceanica Brasileira SA v Steamship Mutual Underwriting Association (Bermuda) Ltd (The Frota Norte)
Fry v Lane (1888) 40 Ch D. 312 .....	420
Fry v Smellie [1912] 3 K.B. 282, CA .....	717
Fry, Re [1946] Ch. 312 .....	686
Fryer v Ewart [1902] A.C. 187, HL .....	691
FSS Travel & Leisure Systems Ltd v Johnson [1998] I.R.L.R. 382; [1999] I.T.C.L.R. 218, CA .....	456
Fuji Electronics and Machinery Enterprise v New Necca Shipping Corp (The Golden Lake) [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 632, HC (Sing) .....	627
Fuji Finance Inc v Aetna Life Insurance Co Ltd [1997] Ch. 173; [1996] 3 W.L.R. 871, CA .....	434, 486, 513, 514
Fulham Football Club Ltd v Cabra Estates plc [1992] B.C.C. 863; [1994] 1 B.C.L.C. 363, CA .....	446
Fullerton v Provincial Bank of Ireland [1903] A.C. 309, HL (UK-Irl) .....	91
Fullwood v Hurley [1928] 1 K.B. 498, CA .....	746
Furness Bridge, The See Seabridge Shipping Ltd v Antco Shipping Co
Furness Withy (Australia) Ltd v Metal Distributors (UK) Ltd (The Amazonia) [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 236; The Financial Times , November 15, 1989, CA .....	9, 124, 169, 286
Futures Index, The, Re [1985] P.C.C. 164; [1985] Fin. L.R. 147 .. CA ..	517, 524, 526
Fyffes Group Ltd v Templeman [2000] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 643; (2000) 97(25) L.S.G. 40, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	747
G (A) v G (T); sub nom. G v G [1970] 2 Q.B. 643; [1970] 3 W.L.R. 132, CA .....	550, 710
G & K Ladenbau (UK) Ltd v Crawley & de Rya [1978] 1 W.L.R. 266; [1978] 1 All E.R. 682, QBD .....	971
G & N Angelakis Shipping Co SA v Compagnie National Algerienne de Navigation (The Attika Hope) [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 439, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	87, 682, 683
G Percy Trentham Ltd v Archital Luxfer Ltd [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 25; 63 B.L.R. 44, CA .....	8, 17, 19, 47
G Scammell and Nephew Ltd v HC & JG Ouston [1941] A.C. 251, HL .....	49, 57
Gadd v Houghton (1876) 1 Ex.D. 357 .....	733, 734
Gadd v Thompson [1911] 1 K.B. 304, KBD .....	545
Gadsden Pty Ltd v Australian Coastal Shipping Commission [1977] 1 N.S.W.L.R. 575 .....	627
Gafford v Graham (1999) 77 P. & C.R. 73; [1999] 3 E.G.L.R. 75, CA .....	929, 1042
Gage v King (Quantum) [1961] 1 Q.B. 188; [1960] 3 W.L.R. 460, QBD .....	165, 711
Gala v Preston (1991) 172 C.L.R. 243, HC (Aus) .....	483
Galaxy Energy International Ltd v Bayoil SA (The Ama Ulgen) [2001] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 289; [2001] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 512, CA .....	210, 211

- Galaxy Energy International Ltd v Novoros-siysk Shipping Co (The Peter Schmidt)* [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 1; [1998] C.L.C. 894, CA ..... 23, 827
- Galbraith v Mitchenall Estates* [1965] 2 Q.B. 473; [1964] 3 W.L.R. 454, QBD ..... 1010
- Gallagher v BRS* [1974] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 440 .... 223, 231, 242
- Galliard Homes Ltd v J Jarvis & Sons plc See Jarvis Interiors Ltd v Galliard Homes Ltd*
- Gallie v Lee* [1969] 2 Ch 17 ..... 299, 321, 327, 328, 329
- Galloway v Galloway* (1914) 30 T.L.R. 531 ..... 287
- Galloway v Guardian Royal Exchange (UK) Ltd* [1999] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 209, CA ..... 395
- Galoo Ltd v Bright Grahame Murray* [1994] 1 W.L.R. 1360; [1994] 1 All E.R. 16, CA ..... 347, 974
- Gamerco SA v ICM/Fair Warning (Agency) Ltd* [1995] 1 W.L.R. 1126; [1995] E.M.L.R. 263, QBD ..... 65, 888, 901, 912
- Gandy v Gandy* (1884) 30 Ch D. 57 ..... 588, 647
- Gannon v JC Firth Ltd* [1976] I.R.L.R. 415; (1977) 11 I.T.R. 29, EAT ..... 845
- Garden Cottage Foods Ltd v Milk Marketing Board* [1984] A.C. 130; [1983] 3 W.L.R. 143; [1983] 2 All E.R. 770, HL ..... 4, 1020, 1047
- Garden Neptune Shipping v Occidental Worldwide Investment Corp and Concord Petroleum Corp* [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 330, CA ..... 242, 351, 352
- Gardiner v Moore* (No.2) [1969] 1 Q.B. 55; [1966] 3 W.L.R. 786, QBD ..... 573
- Gardner v Coutts & Co* [1968] 1 W.L.R. 173; [1967] 3 All E.R. 1064, Ch D ..... 201
- Gardner v Lachlan* (1836) 8 Sim. 123 ..... 669
- Gardner v Marsh & Parsons* [1997] 1 W.L.R. 489; [1997] 3 All E.R. 871, CA ..... 933, 981
- Gardner v Moore* [1984] A.C. 548; [1984] 2 W.L.R. 714, HL ..... 437, 668
- Gardner v Walsh* (1855) 5 E. & B. 83 ..... 571
- Garforth v Fearon* (1787) 1 H.B.L. 327 ..... 451
- Garnac Grain Co Inc v HMF Faure & Fairclough Ltd* [1968] A.C. 1130; [1967] 3 W.L.R. 143, HL ..... 705, 962
- Garners Motors Ltd, Re* [1937] Ch. 594, Ch D (Companies Ct) ..... 573
- Garnett, Re* (1885) 31 Ch D 1 ..... 311, 313
- Garnham, Harris & Elton v Ellis (Alfred W) (Transport)* [1967] 1 W.L.R. 940; [1967] 2 All E.R. 940; [1967] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 22; 111 S.J. 558, QBD ..... 229
- Garrard v Frankel* (1862) 30 Beav. 445 ..... 322, 326
- Garrard v James* [1925] Ch. 616, Ch D ..... 571
- Garrard v Woolner* (1832) 8 Bing. 258 ..... 130
- Gas Enterprise, The See Exmar NV v BP Shipping*
- Gas Light & Coke Co v Turner* (1839) 6 Bing.N.C. 324 ..... 433
- Gaskill v Preston* [1981] 3 All E.R. 427, QBD ..... 981
- Gatewhite Ltd v Iberia Lineas Aereas de Espana SA* [1990] 1 Q.B. 326; [1989] 3 W.L.R. 1080, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 639
- Gatoil Anstalt v Omenial Ltd (The Balder London) (No.1)* [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 489, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 677, 680, 779, 813, 814
- Gatoil International Inc v Tradax Petroleum Ltd (The Rio Sun)* [1985] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 350, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 1057
- Gator Shipping Corp v Trans-Asiatic Oil SA and Occidental Shipping Etablissement SA (The Odenfeld)* [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 357, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 765, 766, 844, 1017, 1018
- Gaumont-British Picture Corporation v Alexander* [1936] 2 All E.R. 1686 ..... 74, 452
- Gebr Van Weelde Scheepvaart Kantoor BV v Compania Naviera Sea Orient SA (The Agrable)* (No.2) [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 223, CA; reversing [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 496, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 9, 10, 32, 33
- Gebruder Metelmann GmbH & Co v NBR (London) Ltd* [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 614 ..... 977
- Gedge v Royal Exchange Assurance Corp* [1900] 2 Q.B. 214, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 513
- Gee v Lancs & Yorks Railway* (1860) H. & N. 211 ..... 971
- Gee v Lucas* (1867) 16 L.T. 357 ..... 355
- Gee v New Group Newspapers The Times*, June 8, 1990 ..... 286
- Geest plc v Fyffes plc* [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 672, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 336, 390, 398, 1028
- Geest plc v Lansiquot* [2002] UKPC 48; [2002] 1 W.L.R. 3111, PC (StL) ..... 963
- Geier v Kujawa, Weston and Warne Bros (Transport)* [1970] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 364, QBD ..... 219
- Geipel v Smith* (1871-72) L.R. 7 Q.B. 404, QB ..... 787
- Geismar v Sun Alliance and London Insurance Ltd* [1978] Q.B. 383; [1978] 2 W.L.R. 38, QBD ..... 438, 478
- General Accident Fire and Life Assurance Corp Ltd v Peter William Tanter (The Zephyr)* [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 529, CA; reversing [1984] 1 W.L.R. 100; [1984] 1 All E.R. 35, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 55, 157, 172, 332, 341, 609, 745, 983
- General Billposting Co Ltd v Atkinson* [1909] A.C. 118, HL ..... 461, 788, 849, 851, 852
- General Re-Insurance Corp v Forsakringsaktiebolaget Fennia Patria* [1983] Q.B. 856; [1983] 3 W.L.R. 318; [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 287, CA ..... 55, 154
- General Tire & Rubber Co v Firestone Tyre & Rubber Co Ltd* (No.2) [1975] 1 W.L.R. 819; [1975] 2 All E.R. 173, HL ..... 929

- Genral Foods Inc Panama v Slobodovna Plovidba Yougoslavia [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 688 ..... 979
- Genys v Matthews [1966] 1 W.L.R. 758; [1965] 3 All E.R. 24, Ct of Passage (Liverpool) ... 628, 631
- Geogas SA v Trammo Gas Ltd (The Balears) [1991] 1 W.L.R. 776; [1991] 3 All E.R. 554, HL; affirming [1991] 2 Q.B. 139, CA; reversing [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 130, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 933
- Geogas SA v Trammo Gas Ltd (The Balears) [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 215; The Times, December 1, 1992, CA ..... 791, 933, 971
- George Barker (Transport) Ltd v Eynon [1974] 1 W.L.R. 462; [1974] 1 All E.R. 900, CA ..... 845, 1016, 1017
- George Fischer (Great Britain) Ltd v Multi Construction Ltd [1995] 1 B.C.L.C. 260 ..... 593
- George Hunt Cranes Ltd v Scottish Boiler & General Insurance Co Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 1964; [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 366, CA ..... 790, 792, 800
- George Mitchell (Chesterhall) Ltd v Finney Lock Seeds Ltd [1983] 2 A.C. 803; [1983] 3 W.L.R. 163, HL ... 220, 222, 224, 225, 226, 228, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237, 242, 257, 258, 259, 260, 261, 272, 943, 968
- George v Clagett (1797) 7 T.R. 359 ..... 730
- George Wills & Sons Ltd v Thomas Brown & Sons (1922) 12 Ll. L. Rep. 292, KBD ..... 1057
- German v Yates (1915) 32 T.L.R. 52 ..... 687
- Gerrard v Lewis (1867) L.R. 2 C.P. 305 ..... 672, 683
- Getreide Import GmbH v Itoh & Co (America) Inc [1979] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 592, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 754
- Getreide Importgesellschaft mbH v Contimar SA Compania Industrial Commercial y Maritima SA [1953] 1 W.L.R. 793; [1953] 2 All E.R. 223, CA; affirming [1953] 1 W.L.R. 207, QBD ..... 27
- Gewa Chartering BV v Remco Shipping Lines (The Remco) [1984] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 205, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 735
- GF Sharp & Co Ltd v McMillan [1998] I.R.L.R. 632, EAT ..... 169, 909
- GFI Group Inc v Eaglestone [1994] I.R.L.R. 119; [1994] F.S.R. 535; The Times, October 29, 1993, QBD ..... 464, 1041
- GH Myers & Co v Brent Cross Service Co [1934] 1 K.B. 46, KBD ..... 839
- GH Renton & Co Ltd v Palmyra Trading Corp of Panama (The Caspiana) [1957] A.C. 149; [1957] 2 W.L.R. 45, HL ..... 230, 238
- Giannis K, The [1998] A.C. 605 ..... 838
- Giannis NK, The See Effort Shipping Co Ltd v Linden Management SA
- Gibaud v Great Eastern Railway Co [1921] 2 K.B. 426, CA ..... 224, 226, 230
- Gibbon v Mitchell [1990] 1 W.L.R. 1304; [1990] 3 All E.R. 338, Ch D ..... 314
- Gibbon v Pease [1905] 1 K.B. 810, CA ..... 708
- Gibbons v Associated British Ports [1985] I.R.L.R. 376 ..... 214
- Gibbons v Nelsons (A Firm) [2000] Lloyd's Rep. P.N. 603; [2000] P.N.L.R. 734, Ch D ..... 617
- Gibbons v Procter (1891) 64 L.T. 594 ..... 13, 36
- Gibbons v Westminster Bank Ltd [1939] 2 K.B. 882, KBD ..... 992
- Gibbs v David (1870) L.R. 20 Eq. 373 ..... 1033
- Gibson v Dickie (1815) 3 M. & S. 463 ..... 442
- Gibson v Holland (1865-66) L.R. 1 C.P. 1, CCP ..... 184
- Gibson v Lupton (1832) 9 Bing. 297 ..... 568
- Gibson v Manchester City Council [1979] 1 W.L.R. 294; [1979] 1 All E.R. 972, HL; reversing [1978] 1 W.L.R. 520, CA .... 11, 43, 47
- Gieve, Re [1899] 1 Q.B. 794, CA ..... 517
- Gilbert & Partners v Knight [1968] 2 All E.R. 248; (1968) 112 S.J. 155, CA ..... 1062
- Gilbert Ash (Northern) Ltd v Modern Engineering (Bristol) Ltd [1974] A.C. 689; [1973] 3 W.L.R. 421, HL ..... 782, 788, 1006
- Gilbert v Ruddeard (1608) 3 Dy. 227b (n) .... 85
- Gilbert v Sykes (1812) 16 East. 150 ..... 519
- Gilchester Properties Ltd v Gomm [1948] 1 All E.R. 493; 64 T.L.R. 235, Ch D ..... 355
- Giles v Thompson; Devlin v Baslington; Sanders v Templar [1994] 1 A.C. 142; [1993] 2 W.L.R. 908, HL .... 431, 479, 695, 982
- Giles, Re; [1972] Ch. 544; [1971] 3 W.L.R. 640, Ch D ..... 437
- Gill & Duffus Landauer Ltd v London Export Corp [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 627, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 26, 27
- Gill & Duffus SA v Berger & Co Inc Berger & Co v Gill & Duffus SA [1984] A.C. 382; [1984] 2 W.L.R. 95, HL .... 760, 765, 767, 768, 769, 791, 850, 851, 964
- Gill & Duffus SA v Rionda Futures Ltd [1994] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 67, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 68, 693
- Gill & Duffus SA v Societe pour l'Exportation des Sucres SA [1986] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 322, CA ..... 798
- Gillatt v Sky Television Ltd (formerly Sky Television plc) [2000] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 461; [2000] 2 B.C.L.C. 103, CA ..... 58, 59
- Gillespie Bros & Co Ltd v Roy Bowles Transport Ltd [1973] Q.B. 400; [1972] 3 W.L.R. 1003, CA ..... 222, 223, 224, 242
- Gillespie Bros & Co v Cheney Eggar & Co [1896] 2 Q.B. 59, QBD ..... 193, 195
- Gillespie v Great Atlantic & Pacific Stores 187 S.E. 2d. 441 (1972) ..... 13
- Gillet v Holt [2001] Ch. 210; [2000] 3 W.L.R. 815, CA ..... 47, 85, 138, 139, 141, 144, 145, 146, 166, 170
- Gillet v Peppercorne (1840) 3 Beav. 78 ... 380, 385

- Gillick v West Norfolk and Wisbech AHA* [1986] A.C. 112; [1985] 3 W.L.R. 830, HL ..... 542
- Gillman v Gillman* (1946) 174 L.T. 272 ..... 329, 412
- Gillow v Lillie* (1835) 1 Bing.N.C. 695 ..... 571
- Gisborne v Burton* [1989] Q.B. 390; [1988] 3 W.L.R. 921, CA ..... 479
- GKN Centrax Gears Ltd v Matbro Ltd* [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 555; 120 S.J. 401, CA ..... 969, 970, 972
- GKN Distributors, Ltd v Tyne Tees Fabrication, Ltd* (1985) 50 P. & C.R. 403; [1985] 2 E.G.L.R. 181, Ch D ..... 857
- Glacier Bay, The See West of England Ship-owners Mutual Insurance Association* (Luxembourg)
- Gladys, The See Metal Scrap Trade Corp Ltd v Kate Shipping Co Ltd (The Gladys)* (No.2)
- Glaer v Schwartz* 176 N.E. 616 (1913) ..... 945
- Glaflki Shipping Co SA v Pinios Shipping Co No.1 (The Maira)* (No.2) [1986] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 12, HL; reversing [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 660, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 516, 898, 920
- Glaholm v Hays* (1841) 2 Man. & G. 257 .... 789, 790, 791, 794, 826
- Glasbrook Bros Ltd v Glamorgan CC* [1925] A.C. 270, HL ..... 93
- Glastnost, The* [1991] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 483 ..... 496
- Glatzer v Bradston Ltd (The Ocean Enterprise)* [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 449, QBD (Adm Ct) ..... 169
- Glazebrook v Woodrow* (1799) 8 T.R. 366 .... 770
- Glebe Island Terminals Pty v Continental Seagram Pty (The Antwerpen)* [1994] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 213, CA (NSW) ..... 98, 234, 241, 633
- Gledhow Autoparts v Delaney* [1965] 1 W.L.R. 1366; [1965] 3 All E.R. 288, CA .... 454, 459, 1046
- Glegg v Bromley* [1912] 3 K.B. 474, CA ..... 683, 696
- Glencore Grain Ltd v Agros Trading Co Ltd* [1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 288; [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 410, CA ..... 689
- Glencore Grain Ltd v Flacker Shipping Ltd (The Happy Day)* [2002] EWCA Civ 1068; [2002] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 896, CA ..... 103, 117, 169, 812, 814, 815, 816
- Glencore Grain Ltd v Goldbeam Shipping Inc (The Mass Glory)* [2002] EWHC 27; [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 244, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 966
- Glencore Grain Rotterdam BV v Lebanese Organisation for International Commerce (The Loric)* [1997] 4 All E.R. 514; [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 386, QBD (Comm Ct) .... 766, 767, 836, 837, 848
- Glencore International AG v Metro Trading International Inc* (No.1 [1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 899; [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 632, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 689
- Glencore International AG v Ryan (The Beursgracht)* (No.1) [2001] EWCA Civ 2051; [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 574, CA ..... 800
- Glengate-KG Properties Ltd v Norwich Union Fire Insurance Society Ltd* [1996] 2 All E.R. 487; [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 614, CA ..... 667
- Glessing v Green* [1975] 1 W.L.R. 863; [1975] 2 All E.R. 696, CA ..... 159
- Glicksten & Son Ltd v State Assurance Co* (1992) 10 Ll.L.R. 604 ..... 57
- Glidden v Hellanic Lines Ltd* 275 F. 2d. 253 (1960) ..... 880, 902
- Global Container Lines Ltd v State Black Sea Shipping Co* [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 127, CA ..... 56
- Global Tankers Inc v Amercoat Europe* [1975] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 666, QBD ..... 19
- Glolite Ltd v Jasper Conran Ltd* The Times, January 28, 1998, Ch D ..... 792
- Glossop v Ashley* [1922] 1 K.B. 1, CA; affirming [1921] 2 K.B. 451, KBD ..... 24
- Gloucestershire CC v Richardson (t/a WJ Richardson & Son)* [1969] 1 A.C. 480; [1968] 3 W.L.R. 645, HL ..... 207
- Gloyne v Richardson* [2001] EWCA Civ 716; [2001] 2 B.C.L.C. 669, CA ..... 90, 121, 291
- Gluckstein v Barnes*; sub nom. Olympia Ltd, Re [1900] A.C. 240, HL ..... 243
- Glyn v Margetson* [1893] A.C. 351 ..... 230
- Glyn v Weston Feature Film Co* [1916] 1 Ch. 261, Ch D ..... 444
- GN Railway v Swaffield* (1874) L.R. 9 Ex. 132 ..... 719, 722, 751
- Godden v Merthyr Tydfil Housing Association* [1997] N.P.C. 1; (1997) 74 P. & C.R. D1, CA ..... 124, 180
- Godfrey Davis Ltd v Culling* [1962] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 349; (1962) 106 S.J. 918, CA ..... 584
- Godina v Patrick Operations Pty Ltd* [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 333, CA (NSW) ..... 634
- Godley v Perry* [1960] 1 W.L.R. 9; [1960] 1 All E.R. 36, QBD ..... 989
- Godson v Good* (1816) 6 Taunt. 587 ..... 570
- Godwin v Francis* (1869-70) L.R. 5 C.P. 295, CCP ..... 183, 979
- Godwin v Uzoigwe* [1993] Fam. Law 65; (1992) 136 S.J.L.B. 205; The Times, June 18, 1992, CA ..... 543
- Goff v Gauthier* (1991) 62 P. & C.R. 388, Ch D ..... 332
- Goker (Ali) v NWS Bank* [1990] C.C.L.R. 34; The Times, May 23, 1990, CA ..... 780, 1009
- Gold v Haringey HA* [1988] Q.B. 481; [1987] 3 W.L.R. 649, CA ..... 841
- Goldcorp Exchange Ltd (In Receivership), Re* [1995] 1 A.C. 74; [1994] 3 W.L.R. 199, PC (NZ) ..... 286, 372, 911, 1023, 1-49

- Golden Bay Realty Pte v Orchard Twelve Investments Pte [1991] 1 W.L.R. 981; (1991) 135 S.J.L.B. 92, PC (Sing) ..... 999
- Golden Bear, The See Excomm v Guan Guan Shipping Pte Ltd (The Golden Bear)
- Golden Lake, The See Fuji Electronics and Machinery Enterprise v New Necca Shipping Corp
- Golden Leader, The See Mineralimportexport v Eastern Mediterranean Maritime Ltd
- Goldshede v Swan (1847) 1 Ex. 154 ..... 78
- Goldsmith v Bruning (1700) 1 Eq.Ca.Abr. 89, pl.4 ..... 443
- Goldsmith v Rodger [1962] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 249, CA ..... 375
- Goldsoil v Goldman [1915] 1 Ch. 292, CA ..... 507, 508, 509
- Goldworthy v Brickell [1987] Ch. 378; [1987] 2 W.L.R. 133, CA ..... 107, 413, 414
- Gompertz v Bartlett (1853) 2 El. & Bl. 839 ..... 288
- Gooch's Case (1872) L.R. 8 Ch.App. 266 ..... 546
- Good Ex p. (1876) 5 Ch D. 46 ..... 573
- Good Friend, The See Empresa Cubana Importadora de Alimentos Alimport v Iasmos Shipping Co SA
- Good Helmsman, The See Harmony Shipping Co SA v Saudi Europe Line Ltd (The Good Helmsman)
- Good Luck, The See Bank of Nova Scotia v Hellenic Mutual War Risk Association (Bermuda) Ltd
- Good v Cheesman (1831) 2 B. & Ad. 328 .... 129, 130
- Good v Elliott (1790) 3 T.R. 693 ..... 519
- Goodchild, Re See DPP v Goodchild
- Goode Durrant Administration v Biddulph [1994] 2 F.L.R. 551; [1995] 1 F.C.R. 196, Ch D ..... 425
- Goode v Harrison (1821) 5 B. 8 Ald. 147 ..... 546
- Goodinson v Goodinson [1954] 2 Q.B. 118; [1954] 2 W.L.R. 1121; [1954] 2 All E.R. 255, CA ..... 150, 447, 505
- Goodison v Nunn (1792) 4 T.R. 761 ..... 763
- Goodman v Chase (1818) 1 B. & Ald. 297 .... 181
- Goodson v Baker (1908) 98 L.T. 415 ..... 88
- Goodwill v British Pregnancy Advisory Service [1996] 1 W.L.R. 1397; [1996] 2 All E.R. 161, CA ..... 338, 341, 618, 841
- Gordon Hill Trust Ltd v Segall [1941] 2 All E.R. 379, CA ..... 344
- Gordon v Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis [1910] 2 K.B. 1080, CA ..... 501
- Gordon v Gordon (1817) 3 Swan. 400 ..... 398
- Gordon v Selico Co (1986) 18 H.L.R. 219; [1986] 1 E.G.L.R. 71; (1986) 278 E.G. 53, CA ..... 339, 390, 1035
- Gordon v Street [1899] 2 Q.B. 641, CA ..... 299, 336, 695
- Gordon, Re; Lloyds Bank and Parratt v Lloyd and Gordon [1940] Ch. 851, Ch D ..... 647, 650
- Gore v Gibson (1843) 13 M. & W. 623 ..... 559
- Gore v Van der Lann [1967] 2 Q.B. 31; [1967] 2 W.L.R. 358, CA ..... 14, 68, 129, 157, 171, 603, 604, 628, 630, 637
- Gorham v British Telecommunications plc [2000] 1 W.L.R. 2129; [2000] 4 All E.R. 867, CA ..... 618
- Goring, The [1988] A.C. 831; [1988] 2 W.L.R. 460, HL ..... 719
- Gorringe v Irwell India Rubber, etc., Works (1886) 34 Ch D. 128 ..... 681
- Gorse v Durham CC [1971] 1 W.L.R. 775; [1971] 2 All E.R. 666, QBD ..... 810, 843
- Gosbell v Archer (1835) 1 A. & E. 500 ..... 184
- Gosling v Anderson (1972) 223 E.G. 1743; The Times, February 8, 1972, CA ..... 351
- Goss v Chilcott [1996] A.C. 788; [1996] 3 W.L.R. 180, PC (NZ) ..... 1049, 1051
- Goss v Nugent (1835) 5 B. & Ad. 58 .... 189, 196
- Gould v Gould [1970] 1 Q.B. 275; [1969] 3 W.L.R. 490, CA ..... 165, 170
- Goulden v Wilson Barca (A Firm) [2000] 1 W.L.R. 167; (1999) 96(31) L.S.G. 35, CA ..... 93
- Goulston Discount Co v Clark [1967] 2 Q.B. 493; [1966] 3 W.L.R. 1280, CA ..... 571
- Graanhandel T Vink BV v European Grain & Shipping Ltd [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 531, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 719
- Grace Rymer Investments v Waite [1958] Ch. 831; [1958] 3 W.L.R. 337, CA ..... 498
- Grace Shipping and Hai Nguan v CF Sharp (Malaya) Pte [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 207, PC (Sing) ..... 49
- Graham & Scott (Southgate) Ltd v Oxlade [1950] 2 K.B. 257; [1950] 1 All E.R. 856, CA ..... 742
- Graham v Johnson (1869) L.R. 8 Eq. 36, Ct of Chancery ..... 689
- Graham v Pitkin [1992] 1 W.L.R. 403; [1992] 2 All E.R. 235, PC (UK) ..... 64, 827, 830
- Grainger & Son v Gough (Surveyor of Taxes) [1896] A.C. 325, HL ..... 14
- Grains & Fougages SA v Huyton [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 628, QBD (Comm Ct) .... 90, 287, 924
- Gran Gelato Ltd v Richcliff (Group) Ltd [1992] Ch. 560; [1992] 2 W.L.R. 867, Ch D ..... 340, 349, 350, 359, 608
- Grand Metropolitan plc v William Hill Group Ltd [1997] 1 B.C.L.C. 390, Ch D ..... 324
- Grand Trunk Railway Co of Canada v Robinson [1915] A.C. 740, PC (Can) ..... 244
- Grandi v Le Sage 399 P.2d. 285 (1965) ..... 936
- Granit SA v Benship International Inc [1994] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 526, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 56
- Grant v Cigman [1996] B.C.C. 410; [1996] 2 B.C.L.C. 24, Ch D ..... 209, 766, 1020
- Grant v Dawkins [1973] 1 W.L.R. 1406; [1973] 3 All E.R. 897, Ch D ... 961, 978, 1048, 1049
- Grant v Edmondson [1931] 1 Ch. 1, CA ..... 669
- Grant v Edwards [1986] Ch. 638; [1986] 3 W.L.R. 114, CA ..... 136, 141, 166

- Grant v Secretary of State for India* (1877) 2 C.P.D. 445 ..... 4
- Grant v United Kingdom Switchback Railways Co* (1889) L.R. 40 Ch. D. 135, CA .... 563
- Graves v Legg* (1854) 9 Ex. 709 ..... 771
- Graves v Legg* (1857) 2 H. & N. 210 ..... 712
- Gray v Barr* [1971] 2 Q.B. 554; [1971] 2 W.L.R. 1334, CA ..... 436, 437, 439, 478
- Gray v Barton* N.Y. 68 (1873) ..... 130
- Gray v Mathias* (1800) 5 Ves. 286 ..... 443
- Gray v Peason* (1870) L.R. 5 C.P. 568 ..... 585
- Gray v Southouse* [1949] 2 All E.R. 1019, KBD ..... 491
- Greasley v Cooke* [1980] 1 W.L.R. 1306; [1980] 3 All E.R. 710, CA ..... 84, 135, 136, 141, 143
- Great Atlantic Insurance Co v Home Insurance Co* [1981] 1 W.L.R. 529; [1981] 2 All E.R. 485, CA; affirming [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 219, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 844
- Great Marine, The See Ateni Maritime Corp v Great Marine Ltd* (The Great Marine) (No.2)
- Great North Eastern Railway Ltd v Avon Insurance plc* [2001] EWCA Civ 780; [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 526, CA ..... 235
- Great Northern Railway v Witham* (1873) L.R. 9 C.P. 16 ..... 21, 22, 37
- Great Peace Shipping Ltd v Tsavliris Salvage (International) Ltd* (The Great Peace) [2002] EWCA Civ 1407; [2002] 3 W.L.R. 1617, CA .... 286, 287, 288, 289, 290, 292, 296, 298, 307, 311, 315, 316, 318, 319, 320, 321, 759, 886, 910, 920, 924, 925
- Great Peace, The See Great Peace Shipping Ltd v Tsavliris Salvage (International) Ltd*
- Great Western Railway Co v Sutton* (1869–70) L.R. 4 H.L. 226, HL ..... 408
- Greater London Council v Connolly* [1970] 2 Q.B. 100; [1970] 2 W.L.R. 658, CA ..... 50
- Greater Nottingham Cooperative Society v Cementation Piling and Foundations Ltd* [1989] Q.B. 71; [1988] 3 W.L.R. 396, CA ..... 583, 598, 608, 611, 616, 984
- Greaves & Co (Contractors) Ltd v Baynham Meikle & Partners* [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1095; [1975] 3 All E.R. 99, CA ..... 841
- Grébert-Borgnis v Nugent* (1885) 15 Q.B.D. 85 ..... 954
- Grecia Express, The See Strive Shipping Corp v Hellenic Mutual War Risks Association (Bermuda) Ltd*
- Green v Duckett* (1882–83) L.R. 11 Q.B.D. 275, QBD ..... 407
- Green v Horn* (1694) 1 Salk. 197; (1693) Comb. 219 ..... 588, 699
- Green v Paterson* (1886) L.R. 32 Ch. D. 95, CA ..... 651
- Green v Portsmouth Stadium* [1953] 2 Q.B. 190; [1953] 2 W.L.R. 1206, CA ..... 491
- Green v Russell, McCarthy* [1959] 2 Q.B. 226; [1959] 3 W.L.R. 17, CA; affirming [1959] 1 Q.B. 28, QBD ..... 589, 648, 649
- Green v Symons* (1897) 13 T.L.R. 301 ..... 353
- Green, Re* [1979] 1 W.L.R. 1211 ..... 678
- Greenalls Management Ltd v Canavan* (No.2) [1998] Eu. L.R. 507; [1997] N.P.C. 128; The Times, August 20, 1997, CA ..... 468
- Greenberg v Cooperstein* [1926] Ch. 657, Ch D ..... 482, 514
- Greene v Church Commissioners for England* [1974] Ch. 467; [1974] 3 W.L.R. 349, CA ..... 87, 153
- Greenhalgh v Mallard* [1947] 2 All E.R. 255, CA ..... 621
- Greenmast Shipping Co SA v Jean Lion et Cie* (The Saronikos) [1986] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 277, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 9, 18, 1061
- Greenspan v Slate* 12 N.J. 426; 97 A. 2d. 390 (1953) ..... 543
- Greenwich Marine Inc v Federal Commerce & Navigation Co Ltd* (The Mavro Vetrancic) [1985] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 580, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 791, 796, 798
- Greenwood v Bennett* [1973] Q.B. 195; [1972] 3 W.L.R. 691, CA ..... 720, 1057
- Greenwood v Greenwood* (1863) 1 D.J. & S. 28 ..... 398
- Greenwood v Martins Bank Ltd* [1933] A.C. 51, HL ..... 716, 724
- Greenwood v Turner* [1891] 2 Ch. 144, Ch D ..... 1021
- Greer v Downs Supply Co* [1927] 2 K.B. 28, CA ..... 729
- Gregory v Ford* [1951] 1 All E.R. 121, Assizes (Nottingham) ..... 206, 437
- Gregory v Wallace* [1998] I.R.L.R. 387, CA ..... 980
- Gregory v Williams* (1817) 3 Mer. 582 ..... 646
- Gregory v Wilson* (1851) 9 Hare 683 ..... 1036
- Gregos, The* [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 347, QBD (Adm Ct) ..... 1061
- Gregos, The See Torvald Klaveness A/S v Arni Maritime Corp*
- Greig v Insole World Series Cricket Pty v Insole* [1978] 1 W.L.R. 302; [1978] 3 All E.R. 449, Ch D ..... 457, 464, 466, 622
- Grey v Inland Revenue Commissioners* [1960] A.C. 1; [1959] 3 W.L.R. 759, HL; affirming [1958] Ch. 690, CA ..... 679, 685
- Griffin v Weatherby* (1868) L.R. 3 Q.B. 753 .... 673
- Griffin, Re; sub nom. Griffin v. Griffin* [1899] 1 Ch. 408, Ch D ..... 685
- Griffith v Brymer* (1903) 19 T.L.R. 434 ..... 288, 311, 924
- Griffith v Tower Publishing Co Ltd* [1897] 1 Ch. 21, Ch D ..... 694
- Griffith v Young* (1810) 12 East 513 ..... 502
- Griffiths v Fleming* [1909] 1 K.B. 805, CA ..... 516
- Griffiths v Secretary of State for Social Services* [1974] Q.B. 468; [1973] 3 W.L.R. 831, QBD ..... 693

- Griffiths v Williams [1978] E.G. Digest of Cases 919 ..... 136, 143, 145, 148
- Grimsdick v Sweetman [1909] 2 K.B. 740, KBD ..... 890
- Grindell v Bass [1920] 2 Ch. 487, Ch D ..... 184, 708
- Gripapion, The See Tharros Shipping Co Ltd v Bias Shipping Ltd
- Grist v Bailey [1967] Ch. 532; [1966] 3 W.L.R. 618, Ch D ..... 318
- Griswold v Haven 25 N.Y. 595 (1862) ..... 404
- Grizewood v Blane (1851) 11 C.B. 526 ..... 517
- Grogan v Robin Meredith Plant Hire [1996] C.L.C. 1127; 53 Con. L.R. 87, CA ..... 217
- Groom v Crocker [1939] 1 K.B. 194; (1938) 60 Ll. L. Rep. 393, CA ..... 984
- Gross v Lewis Hillman Ltd [1970] Ch. 445; [1969] 3 W.L.R. 787, CA ..... 335, 341
- Grossman v Hooper [2001] EWCA Civ 615; [2001] 3 F.C.R. 662, CA ..... 180
- Group Josi Re Co SA v Walbrook Insurance Co Ltd [1996] 1 All E.R. 791; [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 345, CA ..... 339, 481, 490, 511, 1041
- Grover & Grover Ltd v Matthews [1910] 2 K.B. 410 ..... 725
- Grovewood Holdings plc v James Capel & Co Ltd [1995] Ch. 80; [1995] 2 W.L.R. 70, Ch D ..... 431
- Guaranty Trust Co of New York v Hannay & Co [1918] 2 K.B. 623, CA ..... 152
- Guardian Ocean Cargoes Ltd v Banco do Brasil SA (The Golden Med) (No.1) [1994] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 152, CA; reversing in part [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 68, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 193, 756, 1007
- Guardians of Pontypridd Union v Drew [1927] 1 K.B. 214, CA ..... 542, 558
- Gudermes, The See Cedar Trading Co Ltd v Transworld Oil Ltd
- Gudermes, The See Mitsui & Co Ltd v Norvossysk Shipping Co
- Guest v Empire Pools (No.2) (1964) 108 S.J. 98; The Times, January 24, 1964, HC ..... 163
- Guild & Co v Conrad [1894] 2 Q.B. 885, CA ..... 182
- Guildford v Lockyer [1975] Crim. L.R. 235; (1975) 119 S.J. 353, DC ..... 14
- Guinea v Salomonsen [1948] 2 K.B. 42; 64 T.L.R. 306, KBD ..... 521
- Guinness Mahon & Co Ltd v Kensington and Chelsea R.L.B.C. [1999] Q.B. 215; [1998] 3 W.L.R. 829, CA ..... 68, 70, 567, 1058, 1060
- Guinness Peat Aviation (Belgium) NV v Hispania Lineas Aereas SA [1992] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 190, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 623
- Guinness plc v Saunders; Guinness v Ward [1990] 2 A.C. 663; [1990] 2 W.L.R. 324, HL ..... 381, 745, 1063
- Guiseppe di Vittorio, The See Bridge Oil Ltd v Owners and/or Demise Charterers of the Ship Guiseppe di Vittorio
- Gulf Azov Shipping Co Ltd v Chief Idisi (No.2) [2001] EWCA Civ 505; [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 673; [2001] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 727, CA ..... 405
- Gulf Shipping Lines Ltd v Jadranska Slobodna Plovidba (The Matija Gubec) [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 31, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 823
- Gulf Steel Co Ltd v Al Khalifa Shipping Co Ltd (The Anwar Al Sabar) [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 261, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 15
- Gunn's Case (1867) L.R. 3 Ch. App. 40 ..... 22
- Guntun v Richmond upon Thames LBC [1981] Ch. 448; [1980] 3 W.L.R. 714, CA ... 749, 760, 833, 845, 846, 847, 848, 860, 1030
- Guppys (Bridport) Ltd v Brookling (1984) 14 H.L.R. 1; (1984) 269 E.G. 846, CA ..... 936
- Gurney v Womersley (1854) 2 El. & Bl. 133 .... 288
- Gurtner v Beaton [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 369; The Times, March 26, 1992, CA ..... 712
- Gurtner v Circuit [1968] 2 Q.B. 587; [1968] 2 W.L.R. 668, CA .... 605, 668, 669, 1036, 1039
- GW Atkins Ltd v Scott (1996) 46 Con.L.R. 14 ..... 945, 947
- GW Plowman & Son Ltd v Ash [1964] 1 W.L.R. 568; [1964] 2 All E.R. 10, CA ... 457, 459, 461
- Gylbert v Fletcher (1630) Cro.Car. 179 ..... 545
- Gyllenhammar & Partners International Ltd v Sour Brodograđevna Industrija [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 403, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 62, 65, 844, 1023, 1035
- H (Deceased), Re [1990] 1 F.L.R. 441; [1990] Fam. Law 175 ..... 437
- H Glynn (Covent Garden) Ltd v Wittleder (t/a W Wittleder, KG) [1959] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 409, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 219
- H West & Son Ltd v Shephard [1964] A.C. 326; [1963] 2 W.L.R. 1359, HL ..... 989
- Habib Bank Ltd v Habib Bank AG [1981] 1 W.L.R. 1265; [1981] 2 All E.R. 650, CA .... 148
- Habton Farms v Nimmo [2003] EWCA Civ 68; (2003) 147 S.J.L.B. 176, CA ..... 960, 961
- Hackney LBC v Jackson [2001] L. & T. Rep. 7 ..... 50
- Hadenfayre v British National Insurance Society; Trident General Insurance Co v Lombard Elizabethan Insurance Co [1984] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 393; (1984) 134 N.L.J. 1017, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 55, 790
- Hadley v Baxendale (1854) 9 Ex. 341, Ex Ct ..... 950, 965, 966, 969, 970, 971, 996, 997
- Hadley v Kemp [1999] E.M.L.R. 589, Ch D ... 51, 72, 94, 165
- Hagedorn v Bazett (1813) 2 M. & S. 100 ..... 577
- Hagedorn v Oliverson (1814) 2 M. & S. 485 .... 723

Haggar v De Placido [1972] 1 W.L.R. 716; [1972] 2 All E.R. 1029, Crown Ct (Chester) ..... 166	Hammond v Allen [1994] 1 All E.R. 307; (1993) 65 P. & C.R. 18, QBD ..... 1035
Haig v Aitken [2001] Ch. 110; [2000] 3 W.L.R. 1117, Ch D ..... 700	Hammond v Mitchell [1991] 1 W.L.R. 1127; [1992] 2 All E.R. 109, Fam Div ..... 141
Haigh v Brooks (1840) 10 A. & E. 309 .... 74, 85, 89	Hammond v Osborn [2002] EWCA Civ 885; [2002] W.T.L.R. 1125, CA ..... 410, 419
Hair and Skin Trading Co v Norman Air- freight Carriers and World Transport Agencies [1974] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 443, QBD ..... 223, 224	Hammond &amp; Co v Bussey (1888) L.R. 20 Q.B.D. 79, CA ..... 979
Halbot v Lens [1901] 1 Ch. 344, Ch D ..... 739	Hampden v Walsh (1876) 1 Q.B.D. 189 ..... 514, 517, 526
Halcyon the Great, The See Court Line v Gotaverken AB	Hampstead &amp; Suburban Properties v Diome- dous (No.1) [1969] 1 Ch. 248; [1968] 3 W.L.R. 990, Ch D ..... 1041
Halifax Building Society v Edell [1992] Ch. 436; [1992] 3 W.L.R. 136, Ch D ..... 77, 169, 339, 586, 587	Hampton &amp; Sons Ltd v George [1939] 3 All E.R. 627, KBD ..... 40, 744
Halifax Building Society v Thomas [1996] Ch. 217; [1996] 2 W.L.R. 63, CA ..... 502	Hamzeh Malas &amp; Sons v British Imex In- dustries Ltd [1958] 2 Q.B. 127; [1958] 2 W.L.R. 100, CA ..... 152
Halifax Financial Services Ltd v Intuitive Sys- tems Ltd [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 303; (2000) 2 T.C.L.R. 35, QBD ..... 60, 447	Hancock Shipping Co Ltd v Deacon &amp; Trysail (Private) Ltd (The Casper Trader) [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 550, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 256
Halkett v Earl of Dudley [1907] 1 Ch. 590, Ch D ..... 1037	Hancock v BW Brazier (Anerley) Ltd [1966] 1 W.L.R. 1317; [1966] 2 All E.R. 901, CA .... 839
Halki Shipping Corp v Sopex Oils Ltd (The Halki) [1998] 1 W.L.R. 726; [1998] 2 All E.R. 23, CA ..... 447	Hands v Slaney (1800) 8 T.R. 578 ..... 540
Hall Ex p. (1878) 10 Ch D. 615 ..... 679	Hanjin Shipping Co Ltd v Zenith Chartering Corp (The Mercedes Envoy) [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 559, QBD (Comm Ct) .... 49, 164, 882
Hall v Conder (1857) 2 C.B. (N.S.) 22 ..... 288	Hanley v Pearson (1879) 13 Ch D. 545 ..... 325
Hall v Dyson (1852) 17 Q.B. 785 ..... 446	Hannah Blumenthal, The See Paal Wilson & Co A/S v Partenreederei Hannah Blu- menthal (The Hannah Blumenthal)
Hall v Meyrick [1957] 2 Q.B. 455; [1957] 3 W.L.R. 273, CA ..... 956	Hannam v Bradford Corporation [1970] 1 W.L.R. 937; [1970] 2 All E.R. 690, CA ..... 584
Hall v North East Railway (1875) L.R. 10 Q.B. 437 ..... 627	Hannington v Du-Chatel (1781) 1 Bro.C.C. 124 ..... 451
Hall v Palmer (1844) 3 Hare 532 ..... 158, 443	Hanover Insurance Brokers Ltd v Schapiro [1994] I.R.L.R. 82; The Times , November 17, 1993, CA ..... 459, 466
Hall v Woolston Hall Leisure Ltd [2001] 1 W.L.R. 225; [2000] 4 All E.R. 787, CA .... 480, 483, 484	Hansa Nord, The See Cehave NV v Bremer Handels GmbH
Hallsall v Brizell [1957] Ch. 169; [1957] 2 W.L.R. 123, Ch D ..... 703	Hanson v Royden (1867) L.R. 3 C.P. 47 ..... 96
Hamble Fisheries Ltd v L Gardner &amp; Sons Ltd (The Rebecca Elaine) [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 1; (1999) 15 Const. L.J. 152, CA ... 157, 612	Happy Day, The See Glencore Grain Ltd v Flacker Shipping Ltd (The Happy Day)
Hamburg Star, The [1994] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 399, QBD (Adm Ct) ..... 613	Happy Ranger, The See Parsons Corp v CV Scheepvaartonderneming Happy Ranger
Hamed el Chiatty &amp; Co v Thomas Cook Group Ltd (The Nile Rhapsody) [1994] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 382; [1994] I.L.Pr. 367, CA; affirming [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 399, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 124, 192, 200, 321	Harbinger UK Ltd v GE Information Services Ltd [2000] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 166; (2000) 2 T.C.L.R. 463, CA ..... 851, 884
Hamer v Sidway 124 N.Y. 538 (1881) ..... 37	Harbour Assurance Co (UK) Ltd v Kansa General International Assurance Co Ltd [1993] Q.B. 701; [1993] 3 W.L.R. 42, CA ..... 481, 482
Hamilton v Papakura DC [2002] UKPC 9; (2002) 146 S.J.L.B. 75; The Times , March 5, 2002, PC (NZ) ..... 6	Harburg India Rubber Comb Co v Martin [1902] 1 K.B. 778, CA ..... 182
Hamilton v Spottiswoode (1849) 4 Ex. 200 ..... 673	Harbutt's Plasticine Ltd v Wayne Tank &amp; Pump Co Ltd [1970] 1 Q.B. 447; [1970] 2 W.L.R. 198, CA ..... 225, 239, 844, 933
Hamilton, Re (1921) 124 L.T. 737 ..... 680	Harding v Harding (1886) L.R. 17 Q.B.D. 442, QBD ..... 677, 683, 685
Hamlyn &amp; Co v Wood &amp; Co [1891] 2 Q.B. 488, CA ..... 205	Harding v Metropolitan Railway (1872) L.R. 7 Ch App. 154 ..... 5
Hammersmith and Fulham LBC v Top Shop Centres Ltd; Hammersmith and Fulham LBC v Glassgrove [1990] Ch. 237; [1989] 2 W.L.R. 643, Ch D ..... 137, 141

Hardman v Booth (1863) 1 Hurl. & C. 803 .....	301, 302	Harris' Case (1872) L.R. 7 Ch. App. 587 ....	16, 24, 27
Hardwick Game Farm v Suffolk Agricultural and Poultry Producers Association Ltd See Henry Kendall & Sons v William Lillico & Sons Ltd		Harrison & Jones v Bunten & Lancaster [1953] 1 Q.B. 646; [1953] 2 W.L.R. 840, QBD .....	288, 319
Hardwick v Johnson [1978] 1 W.L.R. 683; [1978] 2 All E.R. 935, CA .....	132, 165	Harrison & Micks, Lambert & Co [1917] 1 K.B. 755 .....	375
Hardy v Elphick [1974] Ch. 65; [1973] 2 W.L.R. 824; [1973] 2 All E.R. 914, CA .....	184	Harrison v Battye [1975] 1 W.L.R. 58; [1974] 3 All E.R. 830, CA .....	19, 53
Hardy v Motor Insurers Bureau [1964] 2 Q.B. 745; [1964] 3 W.L.R. 433, CA .....	437, 668, 669	Harrison v Bloom Camillin (No.2) [2000] Lloyd's Rep. P.N. 89; [2001] P.N.L.R. 7, Ch D .....	956
Hare v Murphy Bros [1974] 3 All E.R. 940; [1974] I.C.R. 603, CA .....	845, 905	Harrison v Dodd (1914) 111 L.T. 47 .....	94
Hare v Nicoll [1966] 2 Q.B. 130; [1966] 2 W.L.R. 441, CA .....	811, 828, 829	Harrison v Harrison [1910] 1 K.B. 35, KBD .....	441
Hargreaves Transport v Lynch [1969] 1 W.L.R. 215; [1969] 1 All E.R. 455, CA .....	65, 828, 829	Harrison v Holland [1922] 1 K.B. 211, CA .....	1007
Harling v Eddy [1951] 2 K.B. 739; [1951] 2 All E.R. 212, CA .....	217, 221, 242, 792, 945, 1057	Harrison v Knowles & Foster [1918] 1 K.B. 608 .....	354
Harlingdon and Leinster Enterprises v Christopher Hull Fine Art [1991] 1 Q.B. 564; [1990] 3 W.L.R. 13, CA .....	248, 288, 290, 293, 294, 331, 353, 355, 790	Harrison v Norwest Holst Group Administration Ltd [1985] I.C.R. 668; [1985] I.R.L.R. 240, CA .....	859, 865
Harlow & Jones Ltd v Panex (International) Ltd [1967] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 509; (1967) 118 N.L.J. 38, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	959, 978	Harrods Ltd v Lemon [1931] 2 K.B. 157, CA .....	746
Harlow and Jones v American Express Bank and Creditanstalt-Bankverein [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 343, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	214	Harrop v Thompson [1975] 1 W.L.R. 545; [1975] 2 All E.R. 94, Ch D .....	474
Harmer v Armstrong [1934] Ch. 65 .....	649	Harry Parker Ltd v Mason [1940] 2 K.B. 590, CA .....	430, 494, 502
Harmer v Cornelius (1858) 5 C.B. N.S. 236 .....	206	Harse v Pearl Life Assurance Co [1904] 1 K.B. 558, CA .....	334, 493, 513
Harmony Shipping Co SA v Davis [1979] 1 W.L.R. 1380; [1979] 3 All E.R. 177, CA .....	446	Hart (RN) v AR Marshall & Sons (Bulwell) [1977] 1 W.L.R. 1067; [1978] 2 All E.R. 413, EAT .....	872, 875
Harmony Shipping Co SA v Saudi Europe Line Ltd (The Good Helmsman) [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 377; 123 S.J. 691, CA .....	18, 47, 55, 198	Hart v Hart (1881) 18 Ch D. 670 ....	49, 315, 441
Harold Wood Brick Co Ltd v Ferris [1935] 2 K.B. 198, CA; affirming [1935] 1 K.B. 613, KBD .....	828	Hart v Mills (1846) 15 L.J. Ex 200 .....	9, 18
Harper & Co v Viger Bros [1909] 2 K.B. 549 .....	734	Hart v O'Connor [1985] A.C. 1000; [1985] 3 W.L.R. 214, PC (NZ) .....	410, 421, 557
Harries v Edmonds (1845) 1 Car. & K. 686 .....	978	Hartle v Lacey [1997] C.L.Y. 3839 .....	993
Harrington v Kent CC [1980] I.R.L.R. 353, EAT .....	905	Hartley v Hymans [1920] 3 K.B. 475, KBD .....	104, 105, 114, 826
Harrington v Victoria Graving Dock Co (1877-78) L.R. 3 Q.B.D. 549, QBD .....	747	Hartley v Ponsonby (1857) 7 E. & B. 872 ....	97
Harris v Carter (1854) 3 E. & B. 559 .....	94	Hartley v Rice (1808) 10 East 22 .....	442
Harris v Fawcett (1873) L.R. 8 Ch.App. 866 ....	45	Hartog v Colin & Shields [1939] 3 All E.R. 566 .....	304, 307, 308, 309
Harris v GW Railway (1876) 1 Q.B.D. 515 ....	218	Harvela Investments Ltd v Royal Trust Co of Canada (CI) Ltd [1986] A.C. 207; [1985] 3 W.L.R. 276, HL ....	11, 15, 21, 22, 31, 38, 39, 152, 169, 858, 861, 1020
Harris v Nickerson (1873) L.R. 8 Q.B. 286 ...	12, 14, 155	Harvest Trucking Co Ltd v Davis [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 638; (1991) 135 S.J.L.B. 443, QBD .....	983
Harris v Pepperell (1867-68) L.R. 5 Eq. 1, Ct of Chancery .....	319, 322	Harvey v Facey [1893] A.C. 552, PC (Jam) ....	11, 14
Harris v Rickett (1859) 4 H. & N. 1 .....	193	Harvey v Johnston (1848) 6 C.B. 295 .....	18
Harris v Sheffield United Football Club [1988] Q.B. 77; [1987] 3 W.L.R. 305, CA .....	93	Harvey v O'Dell (RG), Galway [1958] 2 Q.B. 78; [1958] 2 W.L.R. 473, QBD .....	748
Harris v United Kingdom, etc., Society (1889) 87 L.T.J. 272 .....	604	Harvey v Pratt [1965] 1 W.L.R. 1025; [1965] 2 All E.R. 786, CA .....	51
Harris v Watson (1791) Peake 102 .....	94, 480	Harwood v Smith [1998] 1 E.G.L.R. 5; [1998] 11 E.G. 178, CA .....	741
		Haseldine v Daw & Son Ltd [1941] 2 K.B. 343, CA .....	641

- Haseldine v Hosken [1933] 1 K.B. 822; (1933) 45 Ll. L. Rep. 59, CA ..... 436, 437
- Haseler v Lemoyne (1858) 5 C.B. (N.S.) 530 ..... 723
- Hasham v Zenab (Executrix of Harji) [1960] A.C. 316; [1960] 2 W.L.R. 374, PC (EA) ..... 859, 1047
- Haslemere Estates v Baker [1982] 1 W.L.R. 1109; [1982] 3 All E.R. 525, Ch D ..... 148
- Hastelow v Jackson (1828) 8 B. & C. 221 .... 494, 526
- Hastingwood Property Ltd v Saunders Bearman Anselm [1991] Ch. 114; [1990] 3 W.L.R. 623, Ch D ..... 708
- Hatch v Hatch (1804) 9 Ves. 292 ..... 412
- Hatton Farms v Nimms [2003] EWCA Civ 68; [2003] 1 All E.R. 1136 ..... 738
- Hawkes v Saunders (1782) 1 Cowp. 289 ..... 79
- Hawkins (George) v Chrysler (UK) (1986) 38 Build.L.R. 36 ..... 841
- Hawkins v Price [1947] Ch. 645, Ch D ..... 183
- Hay v Ayling (1851) 16 Q.B. 423 ..... 528
- Hayes v James & Charles Dodd (A Firm) [1990] 2 All E.R. 815; (1988) 138 N.L.J. Rep. 259, CA ..... 935, 993
- Haywood v Cope (1858) 25 Beav. 140 ..... 1027
- Hazel v Akhtar [2001] EWCA Civ 1883; [2002] 2 P. & C.R. 17, CA ..... 104, 109, 111, 114
- Hazell v Hammersmith and Fulham LBC [1992] 2 A.C. 1; [1991] 2 W.L.R. 372, HL ..... 560, 564, 565, 1058
- Hazelmoor, The See Anchor Line v Keith Rowell
- HB Property Developments Ltd v Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1999) 78 P. & C.R. 108; [1998] L. & T.R. 238, CA ..... 815
- Head v Diggon (1828) 3 M. & Ry. 97 ..... 153
- Head v Tattersall (1871–72) L.R. 7 Ex. 7, Ex Ct ..... 379, 1052
- Heald v Kenworthy (1855) 10 Ex. 739 ..... 731
- Heald v O'Connor [1971] 1 W.L.R. 497; [1971] 2 All E.R. 1105, QBD ..... 571
- Healey v Francaise Rubastic SA [1917] 1 K.B. 946, KBD ..... 784, 824
- Heard v Pilley (1869) L.R. 4 Ch. 548 ..... 710
- Heartley v Nicholson (1874–75) L.R. 19 Eq. 233, Ct of Chancery ..... 685
- Heath v Keys (1984) 134 N.L.J. 888 ..... 946
- Heath v Tang; Stevens v Peacock [1993] 1 W.L.R. 1421; [1993] 4 All E.R. 694, CA .... 700
- Heatley v William H Brown [1992] 1 E.G.L.R. 289; [1991] E.G.C.S. 115 ..... 933, 946, 989
- Heaton v Axa Equity & Law Life Assurance Society plc [2002] UKHL 15; [2002] 2 A.C. 329, HL ..... 573, 574, 580, 604, 981
- Heaven and Kesterton v Etablissements Francois Albiac et Cie [1956] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 316, QBD ..... 788, 978
- Hebb's Case See National Savings Bank Association, Re
- Hector v Lyons (1989) 58 P. & C.R. 156; The Times, December 19, 1988, CA ..... 299, 300, 735
- Hedley Byrne & Co Ltd v Heller & Partners Ltd [1964] A.C. 465; [1963] 3 W.L.R. 101, HL ... 154, 157, 335, 337, 344, 345, 346, 347, 348, 349, 350, 366, 386, 392, 745, 975
- Heffield v Meadows (1868–69) L.R. 4 C.P. 595, CCP ..... 199
- Heglibiston Establishments v Heyman (1978) 36 P. & C.R. 351; (1977) 246 E.G. 567, CA ..... 443, 445
- Heilbut Symons & Co v Buckleton [1913] A.C. 30, HL ..... 163, 174, 342, 355, 356
- Heinemann v Cooper (1987) 19 H.L.R. 262; (1987) 284 E.G. 1237, CA ..... 360
- Heisler v Anglo Dal Ltd [1954] 1 W.L.R. 1273; [1954] 2 All E.R. 770, CA ..... 50, 836
- Helicopter Sales (Australia) Pty v Rotor Work Pty (1974) 48 A.L.J.R. 390, HC (Aus) .... 840
- Hellespont Ardent, The See Red Sea Tankers Ltd v Papachristidis
- Helps v Clayton (1864) 17 C.B. (N.S.) 553 ..... 541
- Helstan Securities Ltd v Hertfordshire CC [1978] 3 All E.R. 262; 76 L.G.R. 735, QBD ..... 693
- Hely-Hutchinson v Brayhead Ltd [1968] 1 Q.B. 549; [1967] 3 W.L.R. 1408, CA ..... 715
- Hemmens v Wilson Browne (A Firm) [1995] Ch. 223; [1994] 2 W.L.R. 323, Ch D ..... 340, 345, 617
- Henderson v Arthur [1907] 1 K.B. 10, CA ..... 200
- Henderson v Merrett Syndicates Ltd (No.1) [1995] 2 A.C. 145; [1994] 3 W.L.R. 761, HL ... 157, 222, 346, 347, 348, 585, 598, 608, 609, 611, 612, 642, 645, 747, 748, 841, 968, 983, 984
- Henderson v Stevenson (1870–75) L.R. 2 Sc. 470; (1875) 2 R. (H.L.) 71, HL ..... 218
- Henderson v Stobart (1850) 5 Ex. 99 ..... 100
- Hendry v Chartsearch Ltd [1998] C.I.C. 1382; (2000) 2 T.C.L.R. 115, CA ..... 693
- Henkel v Pope (1870) L.R. 6 Ex. 7 ..... 28
- Henkin v Gerss (1810) 2 Camp. 408 ..... 519
- Hennessy v Craigmyle & Co [1986] I.C.R. 461; [1986] I.R.L.R. 300, CA ..... 407
- Henrik Sif, The See Pacol Ltd v Trade Lines Ltd
- Henriksens Rederi A/S v Centrala Handlu Zagranicznego (CHZ) Rolimpex (The Brede) [1974] Q.B. 233; [1973] 3 W.L.R. 556, CA ..... 785, 788
- Henry Ansbacher & Co Ltd v Binks Stern [1998] Lloyd's Rep. Bank. 1; [1998] P.N.L.R. 221, CA ..... 336, 394
- Henry Dean & Sons (Sydney) Ltd v O'Day Pty Ltd (1929) 39 C.L.R. 330 ..... 769

Henry Kendall & Sons v William Lillico & Sons Ltd; sub nom. Hardwick Game Farm v Suffolk Agricultural and Poultry Producers Association Ltd [1969] 2 A.C. 31; [1968] 3 W.L.R. 110, HL ..... 220, 309	Hickman v Haynes (1875) L.R. 10 C.P. 598 ... 103, 190
Hensman v Traill 124 S.J. 776; The Times , October 22, 1980 ..... 463	Hickman v Kent or Romney Marsh Sheep-breeders Association [1915] 1 Ch. 881, Ch D ..... 586
Henson v London and North Eastern Railway Co [1946] 1 All E.R. 653; (1946) 62 T.L.R. 369 ..... 217	Higgins v Sargent (1823) 2 B & C 348 ..... 994
Henthorn v Fraser [1892] 2 Ch. 27, CA ..... 23, 24, 25, 27, 42	Higginson v Clowes (1808) 15 Ves. 516 ..... 317
Hepburn v A Tomlinson (Hauliers) Ltd [1966] A.C. 451; [1966] 2 W.L.R. 453, HL ..... 589, 667	Higginson v Simpson (1877) 2 C.P.D. 76 ..... 525
Hepworth Manufacturing Co Ltd v Ryott [1920] 1 Ch. 1, CA ..... 452	Higgins v Burton (1857) 26 L.J.Ex. 342 ..... 301
Herbert Clayton & Jack Waller Ltd v Oliver [1930] A.C. 209; [1930] All E.R. Rep. 414, HL ..... 833, 992	Higgs v Olivier [1952] Ch. 311; [1952] 1 T.L.R. 441, CA; affirming [1951] Ch. 899, Ch D ..... 457
Herbert Morris Ltd v Saxelby [1916] 1 A.C. 688, HL ..... 456, 457, 462, 464, 465	Highland Ins Co v Continental Ins Co [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 109 ..... 336
Herd v Clyde Helicopters Ltd See Fellowes v Clyde Helicopters Ltd	Highlands Insurance Co v Continental Insurance Co [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 109 (Note); The Times , May 6, 1986, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 332, 358
Hereford, etc., Engineering Co (1876) 2 Ch.D. 621 ..... 725	HIH Casualty & General Insurance Ltd v Chase Manhattan Bank [2001] EWCA Civ 1250; [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 483, CA ..... 350, 358, 397, 402, 480
Herkules Piling Ltd v Tilbury Construction Ltd 61 B.L.R. 107; 32 Con. L.R. 112, QBD ..... 678, 680, 681	HIH Casualty & General Insurance Ltd v New Hampshire Insurance Co [2001] EWCA Civ 735; [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 39; [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 161, CA ..... 55, 197, 216, 222, 223, 224, 242, 245, 350, 847
Herman v Jeuchner (1884-85) L.R. 15 Q.B.D. 561, CA ..... 446	Hilberly v Hatton (1864) 2 H. & C. 822 ..... 1056
Hermann v Charlesworth [1905] 2 K.B. 123, CA ..... 439, 443, 491, 494, 503	Hill v Barclay (1810) 16 Ves. Jun. 402 ..... 1034
Hermosa, The See Chilean Nitrate Sales Corp v Marine Transportation Co Ltd	Hill v CA Parsons & Co [1972] Ch. 305; [1971] 3 W.L.R. 995, CA ..... 1022, 1031, 1042
Herne Bay Steam Boat Co v Hutton [1903] 2 K.B. 683, CA ..... 886	Hill v Fox (1859) 4 Hurl. & N. 359 ..... 528
Heron Garage Properties Ltd v Moss [1974] 1 W.L.R. 148; [1974] 1 All E.R. 421, Ch D ..... 66	Hill v Gomme (1839) 5 My. & Cr. 250 ..... 648, 651
Heron II, The See Koufos v C Czarnikow Ltd	Hill v Gray (1816) 1 Stark. 434 ..... 390
Herrick v Leonnard and Dingley Ltd [1975] 2 N.Z.L.R. 566 ..... 633	Hill v Harris [1965] 2 Q.B. 601; [1965] 2 W.L.R. 1331, CA ..... 356
Herring v British Transport Commission (1958) 37 A.T.C. 382; [1958] T.R. 401 ..... 957	Hill v Spencer (1767) Amb. 641 ..... 443
Heskell v Continental Express Ltd [1950] 1 All E.R. 1033; (1949-50) 83 Ll. L. Rep. 438; [1950] W.N. 210, KBD ..... 14, 975	Hill v van Erp (1997) 142 A.L.R. 687 ..... 616
Heslop v Burns [1974] 1 W.L.R. 1241; [1974] 3 All E.R. 406, CA ..... 165	Hill v William Hill (Park Lane) Ltd [1949] A.C. 530; [1949] 2 All E.R. 452, HL ..... 520, 521, 525, 529, 531
Hewitt v Bonvin [1940] 1 K.B. 188, CA ..... 706	Hillel v Christoforides (1992) 63 P. & C.R. 301, Ch D ..... 819, 857, 1007
Hewlings v Graham (1901) 84 L.T. 497 ..... 540	Hillesden Securities Ltd v Ryjack Ltd [1983] 1 W.L.R. 959; [1983] 2 All E.R. 184, QBD ..... 1056
Hewson v Downs [1970] 1 Q.B. 73; [1969] 2 W.L.R. 1169, Assizes (Sheffield) ..... 981	Hillingdon Estates Co v Stonefield Estates Ltd [1952] Ch. 627; [1952] 1 All E.R. 853, Ch D ..... 896, 1021
Heyman v Darwins Ltd [1942] A.C. 356; [1942] 1 All E.R. 337, HL ... 57, 240, 760, 844, 851	Hillreed Lard v Beautridge [1994] E.G.C.S. 55 ..... 51
Heyman v European Central Railway (1868) L.R. 7 Eq. 154 ..... 399	Hills v Sughrue (1846) 15 M. & W. 252 ..... 838
Heywood v Wellers (A Firm) [1976] Q.B. 446; [1976] 2 W.L.R. 101, CA ..... 993, 1052	Hilti AG v Commission of the European Communities (C53/92P) [1991] E.C.R. II-1439; [1992] 4 C.M.L.R. 16, AGO ..... 477
Hickman v Berens [1895] 2 Ch. 638, CA ..... 307	Hilton v Barker Booth & Eastwood [2002] EWCA Civ 723; [2002] Lloyd's Rep. P.N. 500; The Times , June 6, 2002, CA ..... 975
	Hindle v Brown (1907) 98 L.T. 44 ..... 293
	Hindley & Co Ltd v General Fibre Co Ltd [1940] 2 K.B. 517; (1940) 67 Ll. L. Rep. 272, KBD ..... 485, 890

- Hinton v Sparkes (1868) L.R. 3 C.P. 161 .....1011
- Hipgrave v Case (1885) L.R. 28 Ch. D. 356;
(1885) 54 L.J. Ch. 399, CA .....1046
- Hirachand Punamchand v Temple [1911] 2
K.B. 330, CA ..... 129, 606, 755
- Hirji Mulji v Cheong Yue Steamship Co Ltd
[1926] A.C. 497; [1926] 1 W.W.R. 917, PC
(HK) ..... 873, 893, 909, 921, 922
- Hirst v Etherington [1999] Lloyd's Rep. P.N.
938; (1999) 96(31) L.S.G. 42, CA ... 713, 714
- Hiscox v Outhwaite (No.1) [1992] 1 A.C. 562;
[1991] 3 W.L.R. 297, HL ..... 120, 123
- Hiscox v Outhwaite (No.3) [1991] 2 Lloyd's
Rep. 524, QBD (Comm Ct) .... 107, 113, 114, 121
- Hispanica de Petroles SA v Vencedora Oceani-ca Navegacion SA (The Kapetan Markos NL) (No.2) [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 321, CA;
affirming [1986] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 238 (Note),
QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 47, 163, 171, 607, 627,
639, 641, 642
- Hitch v Stone [2001] EWCA Civ 63; [2001]
S.T.C. 214, CA ..... 169
- Hitchcock v Giddings (1817) 4 Price 135 .... 312, 319
- Hitchcock v Way (1837) 6 A. & E. 943 ..... 439
- Hitchens v General Guarantee Corp Ltd
[2001] EWCA Civ 359; The Times, March
13, 2001, CA ..... 31, 179
- Hitchman v Avery (1892) 8 T.L.R. 698 ..... 326
- Hitchman v Stewart (1855) 3 Drew. 271 ..... 574
- Hivac Ltd v Park Royal Scientific Instruments
Ltd [1946] Ch. 169, CA ..... 206, 1045
- Hizzett v Hargreaves [1987] C.L.Y. 1164 .....1056
- HO Brandt & Co v HN Morris & Co [1917] 2
K.B. 784, CA ..... 65, 733
- Hobbs v L & SW Railway (1875) L.R. 10 Q.B.
111 ..... 14, 989
- Hobbs v Marlowe [1978] A.C. 16; [1977] 2
W.L.R. 777, HL ..... 696
- Hobson v Pattenden & Co ..... 910
- Hochster v De La Tour (1853) 2 El. & Bl.
678 ..... 859, 860, 863
- Hodge v Clifford Cowling [1990] 46 E.G. 120,
CA ..... 980
- Hodgson v Temple (1813) 5 Taunt. 181 ..... 433
- Hodson, Re; sub nom. Williams v Knight
[1894] 2 Ch. 421, Ch D ..... 554
- Hoecheong Products Co Ltd v Cargill Hong Kong Ltd [1995] 1 W.L.R. 404; [1995] 1
Lloyd's Rep. 584, PC (HK) ..... 901
- Hoegh Anapa, The See Merkur Island Shipping Corp v Loughton Shaw and Lewis
- Hoenig v Isaacs [1952] 2 All E.R. 176; [1952] 1
T.L.R. 1360, CA ..... 786, 787, 945
- Hofflinghouse & Co v C-Trade SA (The Intra Transporter) [1986] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 132,
CA ..... 17, 52, 54, 57
- Hoffman v Red Owl Stores Inc 133 N.W. 2d.
267 (1965) ..... 60
- Hoggart v Scott (1830) 1 Russ. & My. 293 .....1037
- Hole v Bradbury (1879) L.R. 12 Ch. D. 886,
Ch D ..... 694
- Hole & Pugsley v Sumption [2002] Lloyd's
Rep. P.N. 419; [2002] P.N.L.R. 20, Ch
D ..... 876
- Hole & Son (Sayers Common) v Harrisons of Thurnscoe [1973] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 345;
(1972) 116 S.J. 922, QBD ..... 947
- Holiday Credit Ltd v Erol [1977] 1 W.L.R.
704; [1977] 2 All E.R. 696, HL ..... 184
- Holland Hannen & Cubitts (Northern) v
Welsh Health Technical Services Ltd
(1987) 7 Con.L.R. 14 ..... 583
- Holland v Eyre (1825) 2 Sim. & St. 194 ..... 19
- Hollier v Rambler Motors [1972] 2 Q.B. 71;
[1972] 2 W.L.R. 401, CA ..... 220, 224, 840
- Hollier & Co v Stocks [2000] U.K.C.L.R.
685 .....1040
- Hollingsworth v Southern Ferries (The Eagle)
[1977] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 70, QBD ... 15, 217, 219, 638
- Hollins v Davy (J) [1963] 1 Q.B. 844; [1963] 2
W.L.R. 201, QBD ..... 215, 231, 232
- Hollis & Co v Stocks [2000] U.K.C.L.R. 658;
[2000] I.R.L.R. 712, CA ..... 460, 461, 1022
- Hollman v Pullin (1884) Cab. & Ell. 254 ..... 735
- Holloway Bros Ltd v Hill [1902] 2 Ch. 612, Ch
D ..... 472
- Holman v Johnson (1775) 1 Cowp. 341 ..... 482
- Holman Construction v Delta Timber Co
[1972] N.Z.L.R. 1081 ..... 154
- Holsworthy Urban DC v Holsworthy Rural DC [1907] 2 Ch. 62, Ch D ..... 89
- Holt v Heatherfield Trust Ltd [1942] 2 K.B. 1,
KBD ..... 680, 681, 687
- Holt v Markham [1923] 1 K.B. 504, CA ..... 335
- Holt v Payne Skillington 77 B.L.R. 51; 49
Con. L.R. 99, CA ..... 609, 984
- Holt v Ward Clarencieux (1732) 2 Stra. 937 .... 149
- Holt (JS) & Moseley (London) Ltd v Sir
Charles Cunningham & Partners Ltd
(1949) 83 Ll.L.R. 141 ..... 733
- Holwell Securities Ltd v Hughes [1974] 1
W.L.R. 155; [1974] 1 All E.R. 161, CA .... 22, 26, 27, 31
- Homburg Houtimport BV v Agrosin Private Ltd (The Starsin) [2003] UKHL 12; The Times, March 17, 2003, HL; reversing
[2001] EWCA Civ 56, CA ..... 582, 614, 624,
628, 629, 632, 633, 635, 637, 641,
642, 728
- Home & Overseas Insurance Co v Mentor
Insurance Co (UK) [1990] 1 W.L.R. 153;
[1989] 3 All E.R. 74, CA ..... 164, 448
- Home Counties Dairies v Skilton [1970] 1
W.L.R. 526; [1970] 1 All E.R. 1227,
CA ..... 453, 461
- Home Insurance Co and St Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Co v Administratia Asi-gurarilor de Stat [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 674,
QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 164, 448, 507

Homes v Smith [2000] Lloyd's Rep. Bank. 139, CA .....	754	Houghton v Trafalgar Insurance Co Ltd [1954] 1 Q.B. 247; [1953] 3 W.L.R. 985, CA .....	221
Honam Jade, The See Phibro Energy AG v Nissho Iwai Corp .....		Houghton Main Colliery Co, Re [1956] 1 W.L.R. 1219; [1956] 3 All E.R. 300, Ch D .....	957
Honck v Muller (1880–81) L.R. 7 Q.B.D. 92, CA .....	783	Houlder Bros & Co Ltd v Public Works Commissioner; Public Works Commissioner v Houlder Bros & Co Ltd [1908] A.C. 276, PC (Cape) .....	198
Hone v Going Places Leisure Travel Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 947, The Times , August 6, 2001, CA .....	841	Houldsworth v Glasgow City Bank (1879–80) L.R. 5 App. Cas. 317, HL .....	343
Hong Kong Borneo Services Co v [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 593, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	1013	Hounslow LBC v Twickenham Garden Developments Ltd [1971] Ch. 233; [1970] 3 W.L.R. 538, Ch D .....	1016, 1035, 1045
Hongkong Fir Shipping Co Ltd v Kawasaki Kisen Kaisha Ltd (The Hongkong Fir) [1962] 2 Q.B. 26; [1962] 2 W.L.R. 474, CA ... 759, 773, 774, 777, 778, 791, 795, 797, 802, 808, 863		Household Fire & Carriage Accident Insurance Co Ltd v Grant (1878–79) L.R. 4 Ex. D. 216, CA .....	25, 27, 28
Hood v Anchor Line (Henderson Bros) Ltd [1918] A.C. 837; 1918 S.C. (H.L.) 143, HL .....	218	Household Machines Ltd v Cosmos Exporters Ltd [1947] K.B. 217; [1946] 2 All E.R. 622, KBD .....	954
Hood v West End Motor Car Packing Co [1917] 2 K.B. 38, CA .....	395	Howard v Jones (1988) 19 Fam. L. 231 .....	136
Hooker v Lange, Bell & Co [1937] 4 L.J.N.C.C.R. 199 .....	213	Howard v Odhams Press Ltd [1938] 1 K.B. 1, CA .....	436, 445
Hooper v Fynmores (A Firm) [2002] Lloyd's Rep. P.N. 18; [2001] W.T.L.R. 1019, Ch D .....	609	Howard v Pickford Tool Co [1951] 1 K.B. 417; 95 S.J. 44, CA .....	844
Hooper v Sherman [1995] C.L.Y. 840 .....	178	Howard v Sheward (1866) L.R. 2 C.P. 148 .....	711
Hope v Hope (1857) 8 D.M. & G. 731 .....	441	Howard v Shirlstar Container Transport [1990] 1 W.L.R. 1292; [1990] 3 All E.R. 366, CA .....	482, 483
Hopkins v Norcross [1994] I.C.R. 11 .....	981	Howard E Perry & Co Ltd v British Railways Board [1980] 1 W.L.R. 1375; [1980] 2 All E.R. 579, Ch D .....	1024, 1025, 1027
Hopkins v Tanqueray (1854) 15 C.B. 130 .....	354	Howard Houlder & Partners and Banchemo-Costa & Co SpA v Marine General Transporters Corp and Achilles Lauro Lines SRL (The Panaghia P) [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 653, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	646, 649
Hopkinson v Lee (1845) 6 Q.B. 964 .....	575	Howard Marine & Dredging Co Ltd v A Ogden & Sons (Excavations) Ltd [1978] Q.B. 574; [1978] 2 W.L.R. 515, CA .....	349, 350, 351, 353, 355, 356, 389
Hopkinson v Logan (1839) 5 M. & W. 241 .....	79	Howatson v Webb [1907] 1 Ch. 537, Ch D .....	328, 329
Hopper v Burness (1876) 1 C.P.D. 137 .....	820	Howe v Smith (1884) L.R. 27 Ch. D. 89, CA .....	1007
Horeal v Gatland [1984] I.R.L.R. 288, CA .....	400, 1052	Howell v Coupland (1876) 1 Q.B.D. 258 .....	835, 876, 877, 919
Horlock v Beal [1916] 1 A.C. 486, HL .....	881	Howes v Bishop [1909] 2 K.B. 390, CA ...	409, 412
Horn v Minister of Food [1948] 2 All E.R. 1036; 65 T.L.R. 1906, KBD .....	870	Howson v Hancock (1800) 8 T.R. 575 .....	522
Hornal v Neuberger Products [1957] 1 Q.B. 247; [1956] 3 W.L.R. 1034, CA .....	343, 362	Hoyle, Re; sub nom. Hoyle v Hoyle [1893] 1 Ch. 84, CA .....	182, 184
Horne v Midland Railway (1873) L.R. 8 C.P. 131 .....	970	Hubert v Treherne (1842) 3 Man. & G. 743 .....	184
Horrocks v Forray [1976] 1 W.L.R. 230; [1976] 1 All E.R. 737, CA ... 81, 160, 165, 166, 170, 445		Huddersfield Banking Co Ltd v Henry Lister & Son Ltd (No.2) [1895] 2 Ch. 273, CA ...	314
Horry v Tate & Lyle Refineries [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 416, QBD .....	241, 334, 341, 414, 419, 421, 423	Hudson, Re (1885) 54 L.J. Ch 811 .....	67, 160
Horsefall v Haywards [1999] 1 F.L.R. 1182; [1999] Lloyd's Rep. P.N. 332, CA .....	617	Hudson v Temple (1860) 29 Beav. 536 .....	828
Horsfall v Thomas (1862) 1 H. & C. 90 ... 339, 390		Huggins v Wiseman (1690) Carth. 110 .....	541
Horsler v Zorro [1975] Ch. 302; [1975] 2 W.L.R. 183, Ch D .....	852	Hughes v Asset Managers plc [1995] 3 All E.R. 669, CA .....	434, 481, 488
Horsley & Weight, Re [1982] Ch. 442; [1982] 3 W.L.R. 431, CA .....	561
Horton v Horton (No.2) [1961] 1 Q.B. 215; [1960] 3 W.L.R. 914, CA .....	89
Horwood v Millar's Timber & Trading Co Ltd [1917] 1 K.B. 305, CA .....	452, 479
Hotel Services Ltd v Hilton International Hotels (UK) Ltd [2000] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 750; [2000] B.L.R. 235, CA .....	944, 970

- Hughes v Clewley (The Siben) (No.2)* [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 35, QBD (Adm Ct) ... 332, 359, 360, 444, 483, 493, 501, 505
- Hughes v Graeme* (1864) 33 L.J.Q.B. 335 .... 979
- Hughes v Greenwich LBC* [1994] 1 A.C. 170; [1993] 3 W.L.R. 821, HL ..... 202, 204
- Hughes v Hall* [1981] R.T.R. 430; 125 S.J. 255, DC ..... 251, 284
- Hughes v Kingston upon Hull City Council* [1999] Q.B. 1193; [1999] 2 W.L.R. 1229, QBD ..... 430, 431
- Hughes v Liverpool Victoria Legal Friendly Society* [1916] 2 K.B. 482, CA ..... 492, 513
- Hughes v Metropolitan Railway* (1877) 2 App.-Cas. 439 ..... 106, 108, 111, 116, 117, 131, 132, 133, 134, 154
- Hughes v Pump House Hotel Co Ltd (No.1)* [1902] 2 K.B. 190, CA ..... 676, 683
- Hughes v Southwark LBC* [1988] I.R.L.R. 55 ..... 1031
- Hughes & Falconer v Newton* [1939] 2 All E.R. 869 ..... 129
- Huilierie L'Abeille v Societe des Huileries du Niger (The Kastellon)* [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 203, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 952
- Hulland v Sanders (William) & Son* [1945] K.B. 78, CA ..... 214
- Hulton v Hulton* [1917] 1 K.B. 813, CA ..... 379, 380
- Hulton (E) & Co v Chadwick Taylor Ltd* (1918) 34 T.L.R. 230 ..... 97
- Humble v Hunter* (1842) 12 Q.B. 316 ..... 728, 757
- Humfrey v Dale* (1858) E.B. & E. 1004, affirming; (1857) 7 E. & B. 266 ..... 196, 198
- Humming Bird Motors v Hobbs* [1986] R.T.R. 276; (1988) 85(1) L.S.G. 28, CA ..... 331, 351, 354, 356
- Humphery v Wilson* (1929) 141 L.T. 469 ..... 528
- Humphreys v Oxford University* [2000] 1 All E.R. 996; [2000] 1 C.M.L.R. 647; [2000] I.C.R. 405, CA ..... 694
- Hunt v Severs* [1994] 2 A.C. 350; [1994] 2 W.L.R. 602, HL ..... 594, 606
- Hunt v Silk* (1804) 5 East 449 ... 380, 1052, 1053
- Hunt & Winterbotham (West of England) v BRS Parcels* [1962] 1 Q.B. 617; [1962] 2 W.L.R. 172, CA ..... 241
- Hunter v Atkins* (1834) 3 My. & K. 113 ..... 414
- Hunter v Bradford Property Trust Ltd* 1970 S.L.T. 173, HL ..... 91
- Hunter v Walters* (1871) L.R. 7 Ch.App. 75 .... 329
- Huntoon Co v Kolynos (Inc)* [1930] 1 Ch. 528, CA ..... 764
- Hurley v Dyke* [1979] R.T.R. 265, HL ..... 391
- Hurst v Bryk* [2002] 1 A.C. 185; [2000] 2 W.L.R. 740, HL ..... 806, 849
- Hurst v Picture Theatres* [1915] 1 K.B.1, CA ..... 987
- Husband v Davies* (1851) 10 C.B. 645 ..... 577, 578
- Hussain v Brown* [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 627, CA ..... 846
- Hussain v New Taplow Paper Mills Ltd* [1988] A.C. 514; [1988] 2 W.L.R. 266, HL ..... 981
- Hussey v Crickitt* (1811) 3 Camp. 168 ..... 519
- Hussey v Eels* [1990] 2 Q.B. 227; [1990] 2 W.L.R. 234, CA ..... 360, 977, 978, 982
- Hussey v Horne-Payne* (1878-79) L.R. 4 App. Cas. 311, HL ..... 17
- Hussey v Palmer* [1972] 1 W.L.R. 1286; [1972] 3 All E.R. 744, CA ..... 136, 146, 166
- Hutchinson v Harris* (1978) 10 Build L.R. 19 ..... 992
- Hutton v Eyre* (1815) 6 Taunt. 289 ..... 573
- Hutton v Warren* (1836) 1 M. & W. 466 ..... 198
- Hutton v Watling* [1948] Ch. 398; [1948] 1 All E.R. 803, CA ..... 193, 194
- Huxford v Stoy Hayward* (1989) 5 B.C.C. 421 ..... 347
- Huyton SA v Peter Cremer GmbH & Co* [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 620; [1999] C.I.C. 230, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 126, 134, 405, 406, 1015
- Hyams v Coombes* (1912) 28 T.L.R. 413 ..... 88
- Hyams v Stuart King (A Firm)* [1908] 2 K.B. 696, CA ..... 520, 521, 531
- Hybart v Parker* (1858) 4 C.B. (N.S.) 209 ..... 585
- Hyde v Wrench* (1840) 3 Beav. 334 ..... 43
- Hydraulic Engineering Co Ltd v McHaffie, Goslett & Co* (1878) 4 Q.B.D. 670 ..... 970
- Hyeling v Hastings* (1699) 1 Ld. Raym. 389 ..... 79
- Hyland v JH Barker (North West)* [1985] I.C.R. 861; [1985] I.R.L.R. 403, EAT ..... 450, 507
- Hylton v Hylton* (1745) 2 Ves. Sen. 547 ..... 410, 412
- Hyman v Hyman; Hughes v Hughes* [1929] A.C. 601, HL ..... 447
- Hyundai Heavy Industries Co Ltd v Papadopoulos* [1980] 1 W.L.R. 1129; [1980] 2 All E.R. 29, HL ..... 760, 850, 851, 1011, 1012
- Hyundai Shipbuilding & Heavy Industries Co v Pournaras* [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 502, CA ..... 850, 853, 1010, 1012
- IBA v EMI (Electronics) Ltd* (1980) 14 Build.L.R. 1 ..... 356
- IBA v EMI Electronics Ltd and BICC Construction Ltd* See Independent Broadcasting Authority v EMI Electronics Ltd
- Ibberson v Neck* (1886) 2 T.L.R. 427 ..... 126
- IBL v Coussens* [1991] 2 All E.R. 133; The Financial Times, July 4, 1990, CA ..... 961
- Ichard v Frangoulis* [1977] 1 W.L.R. 556; [1977] 2 All E.R. 461, QBD ..... 989
- Ignazio Messina & Co v Polskie Linie Oceaniczne* [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 566, QBD (Comm Ct) ... 8, 9, 17, 52, 54, 56, 62, 163, 172, 733
- Ile Aux Moines, The* See Vanda Compania Limitada of Costa Rica v Societe Maritime Nationale of Paris
- IM Properties plc v Cape & Dalglish* [1999] Q.B. 297; [1998] 3 W.L.R. 457, CA ..... 996, 997

IMI Cornelius (UK) Ltd v Alan J Bloor 57 B.I.R. 108; 35 Con. L.R. 1, QBD .....	594
Imperial Bank of Canada v Begley [1936] 2 All E.R. 367 .....	724
Imperial Group Pension Trust Ltd v Imperial Tobacco Ltd [1991] 1 W.L.R. 589; [1991] 2 All E.R. 597, Ch D .....	209
Imperial Land Co of Marseilles, Re; sub nom. Wall's Case (1872-73) L.R. 15 Eq. 18, Ct of Chancery .....	16
Imperial Loan Co Ltd v Stone [1892] 1 Q.B. 599, CA .....	557
Imutran Ltd v Uncaged Campaigns Ltd [2001] 2 All E.R. 385; [2001] C.P. Rep. 28, Ch D .....	1029, 1041
Inchbald v Western Neilgherry Coffee Co (1864) 17 C.B. (N.S.) 733 .....	822
Inche Noriah v Shaik Allie bin Omar [1929] A.C. 127; [1928] All E.R. Rep. 189, PC (Sing) .....	414, 419
Independent Air Travel Ltd, Re [1961] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 604, Ch D .....	649
Independent Broadcasting Authority v EMI Electronics Ltd 14 B.I.R. 1; [1955-95] P.N.L.R. 179, HL .....	163, 584, 841
India v India Steamship Co Ltd (The Indian Endurance and The Indian Grace) (No.2) [1998] A.C. 878; [1997] 3 W.L.R. 818, HL .....	115, 119, 120, 121
Indian Endurance and Indian Grace, The See India v India Steamship Co Ltd
Indian Oil Corp Ltd v Greenstone Shipping Co SA (Panama) (The Ypatianna) [1988] Q.B. 345; [1987] 3 All E.R. 893, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	430, 927
Ind's Case See International Contract Co, Re
Industrial Properties (Barton Hill) Ltd v Asso- ciated Electrical Industries Ltd [1977] Q.B. 580; [1977] 2 W.L.R. 726, CA .....	336, 338
Industrie Chimiche Italia Centrale and Cer- calfin SA v Alexander G Tsavlis & Sons Maritime Co (The Choko Star) (1990 [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 516; The Independent , March 21, 1990, CA ....	202, 207, 211, 719, 721
Industrie Chimiche Italia Centrale v NEA Ninemia Shipping Co SA (The Emmanuel C) [1983] 1 All E.R. 686; [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 310; [1983] Com. L.R. 7, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	223
Industries and General Mortgage Co Ltd v Lewis [1949] 2 All E.R. 573; [1949] W.N. 333, KBD .....	746, 747
Ines, The See MB Pyramid Sound NV v Bri- ese Schifffahrts GmbH & Co KG MS Sina
Inglis v Cant [1987] C.L.Y. 1132 .....	990
Ingram v Little [1961] 1 Q.B. 31; [1960] 3 W.L.R. 504; [1960] 3 All E.R. 332, CA ....	301, 303, 310, 320
Initial Services v Putterill [1968] 1 Q.B. 396; [1967] 3 W.L.R. 1032, CA .....	455, 479
Inland Revenue Commissioners v Fry [2001] S.T.C. 1715; [2002] B.T.C. 3, Ch D .....	16, 100
Inland Revenue Commissioners v Mills [1975] A.C. 38; [1974] 2 W.L.R. 325, HL .....	539, 543
Inman v Ackroyd & Best Ltd [1901] 1 Q.B. 613, CA .....	824
Innisfail Laundry v Dawe 186 E.G. 879; (1963) 107 S.J. 437 .....	245
Inntrepreneur Pub Co (CPC) Ltd v Price [1999] E.C.C. 185; [1998] E.G.C.S. 167, Ch D .....	476
Inntrepreneur Pub Co (CPC) Ltd v Sweeney [2002] EWHC 1060; [2002] 2 E.G.L.R. 132, Ch D .....	383
Inntrepreneur Pub Co Ltd v East Crown Ltd [2000] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 611; [2000] 3 E.G.L.R. 31, Ch D .....	163, 356
Institution of Mechanical Engineers v Cane [1961] A.C. 696; [1960] 3 W.L.R. 978, HL .....	560
Insurance Co v Lloyd's Syndicate [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 273 .....	202, 203, 1026, 1040
Intelsec Systems Ltd v Grech Cini [2000] 1 W.L.R. 1190; [1999] 4 All E.R. 11, Ch D .....	457, 460
Interfoto Picture Library Ltd v Stiletto Visual Programmes Ltd [1989] Q.B. 433; [1988] 2 W.L.R. 615, CA ....	11, 18, 47, 219, 245, 273, 1004
International Consulting Services (UK) Ltd v Hart [2000] I.R.L.R. 227, QBD .....	461
International Contract Co Re; sub nom. Levi- ta's Case (1867-68) L.R. 3 Ch. App. 36, CA in Chancery .....	23
International Contract Co, Re; sub nom. Ind's Case (1871-72) L.R. 7 Ch. App. 485, CA in Chancery .....	306
International Leasing Corporation (Vic) Ltd v Aiken (1966) 85 W.N. (Pt.1) N.S.W. 766 ....	1002
International Minerals & Chemical Corp v Karl O Helm AG [1986] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 81, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	970, 996, 997
International Paper Co v Rockefeller 146 N.Y.S. 371 (1914) .....	877
International Pediatric Products Ltd v Cud- dle-King Products Ltd (1964) 46 D.L.R. (2d) 581 .....	475
International Petroleum Refining & Supply Sociedad LTDA v Caleb Brett & Son Ltd (The Busiris) [1980] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 569, CA .....	81, 584
International Sea Tankers Inc of Liberia v Hemisphere Shipping Co of Hong Kong (The Wenjiang) [1982] 2 All E.R. 437; [1982] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 128, CA .....	449, 897
International Sea Tankers Inc of Liberia v Hemisphere Shipping Co Ltd of Hong Kong (The Wenjiang) (No.2) [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 400; [1983] Com. L.R. 16, QBD (Comm Ct) ....	868, 874, 891, 897, 898, 909

International Society of Auctioneers and Valuers, Re; sub nom. Baillie's Case [1898] 1 Ch. 110 .....	298
International Terminal Operators Ltd v Miida Electronics Inc [1986] 1 S.C.R. 752 .....	633
Internationale Guano en Superphosphaat-Werken v Robert Macandrew & Co [1909] 2 K.B. 360, KBD .....	231
Internet Trading Clubs Ltd v Freeserve (Investments) Ltd [2001] E.B.L.R. 142, QBD .....	1032, 1035
Interoffice Telephones v Freeman (Robert) Co [1958] 1 Q.B. 190; [1957] 3 W.L.R. 971, CA .....	955
Intertradex SA v Lesieur-Tourteaux Sarl [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 509, CA .....	837, 838, 876, 878, 900
Intervention Board for Agricultural Produce v Leidig [2000] Lloyd's Rep. P.N. 144, CA .....	939
Intra Transporter, The See Hofflinghouse & Co v C-Trade SA
Introductions Ltd v National Provincial Bank See Introductions Ltd, Re
Introductions Ltd, Re (No.1) [1970] Ch. 199; [1969] 2 W.L.R. 791, CA .....	564, 565
Invercargill City Council v Hamlin [1996] A.C. 624; [1996] 2 W.L.R. 367, PC (NZ) .....	610
Inversiones Manria SA v Sphere Drake Insurance Co, Malvern Insurance Co and Niagara Fire Insurance Co (The Dora) [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 69, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	395
Investors Compensation Scheme Ltd v West Bromwich Building Society (No.1) [1998] 1 W.L.R. 896; [1998] 1 All E.R. 98, HL ...	197, 198, 674, 697
Investors in Industry Commercial Properties Ltd v South Bedfordshire DC [1986] Q.B. 1034; [1986] 2 W.L.R. 937; [1986] 1 All E.R. 787, CA .....	758, 841
Inwards v Baker [1965] 2 Q.B. 29; [1965] 2 W.L.R. 212, CA .....	136, 143, 145
Ion, The See Nippon Yusen Kaisha v Pacifica Navegacion SA (The Ion)
Ionides v Pacific Fire & Marine Insurance Co (1871-72) L.R. 7 Q.B. 517, Ex Chamber; affirming (1870-71) L.R. 6 Q.B. 674, QB .....	55
Ionides v Pender (1873-74) L.R. 9 Q.B. 531, QB .....	336, 369, 395
Irani v Southampton and South West Hampshire HA [1985] I.C.R. 590; [1985] I.R.L.R. 203, Ch D .....	1031
Ireland v Livingston (1871) L.R. 5 H.L. 395 .....	706, 710
Irvani v Irvani [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 412; [2000] C.L.C. 477, CA .....	414, 421, 557, 559
Irvine v Watson (1880) 5 Q.B.D. 414 .....	731
Islamic Republic of Iran Shipping Lines v Denby [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 367; The Financial Times , October 28, 1986 .....	746
Islamic Republic of Iran Shipping Lines v Ierax Shipping Co of Panama (The Forum Craftsman) [1991] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 81, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	970, 972
Islamic Republic of Iran Shipping Lines v Zannis Compania Naviera SA (The Tzelepi) [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 265, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	711
Island Records Ltd v Tring International plc [1996] 1 W.L.R. 1256; [1995] 3 All E.R. 444, Ch D .....	747
Islander Trucking Ltd (In Liquidation) Ltd v Robinson & Gardner Mountain (Marine) Ltd [1990] 1 All E.R. 826, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	610, 983
Islwyn BC v Newport BC (1994) 6 Admin. L.R. 386; (1994) 158 L.G. Rev. 501 .....	884
Ismail v Polish Ocean Lines (The Ciechocinek) [1976] Q.B. 893; [1976] 2 W.L.R. 477, CA .....	332
Israel v Douglas (1789) 1 H.Bl.239 .....	672
Italia Express (No.3), The See Ventouris v Mountain
Italian Flat Glass Case [1990] 4 C.M.L.R. 306 .....	475
Italmare Shipping Co v Ocean Tanker Co Inc (The Rio Sun) [1982] 1 W.L.R. 158; [1982] 1 All E.R. 517, CA .....	107, 449, 778
Itex Itagrani Export SA v Care Shipping Corp (The Cebu) (No.2) [1993] Q.B. 1; [1991] 3 W.L.R. 609, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	683
Itex Shipping Pte v China Ocean Shipping Co (The Jing Hong Hai) [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 522, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	60
J, Re [1909] 1 Ch. 574, CA .....	541
J D'Almeida Araujo LDA v Sir Frederick Becker & Co Ltd [1953] 2 Q.B. 329; [1953] 3 W.L.R. 57, QBD .....	973
J Dennis & Co Ltd v Munn [1949] 2 K.B. 327; [1949] 1 All E.R. 616, CA .....	435, 486, 506
J Evans & Son (Portsmouth) Ltd v Andrea Merzario Ltd [1976] 1 W.L.R. 1078; [1976] 2 All E.R. 930, CA .....	173, 193, 221, 229, 236, 242, 356
J Jarvis & Sons Ltd v Castle Wharf Developments Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 19; [2001] Lloyd's Rep. P.N. 308, CA .....	338, 346, 351
J Lauritzen A/S v Wijsmuller BV (The Super Servant Two) [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 1; The Times , October 17, 1989; The Financial Times , October 24, 1989, CA .....	224, 778, 857, 867, 876, 878, 879, 883, 892, 906, 907, 908, 909, 910, 920, 921
J Leavey & Co Ltd v George H Hirst & Co Ltd [1944] K.B. 24, CA .....	954
J Spurling Ltd v Bradshaw [1956] 1 W.L.R. 461; [1956] 2 All E.R. 121, CA .....	219, 220, 229, 230, 241

JA Mont (UK) Ltd v Mills [1993] I.R.L.R. 172; [1993] F.S.R. 577, CA .....	461
JT Sydenham & Co Ltd v Enichem Elastometers Ltd [1989] 1 E.G.L.R. 257 .....	132
Jack L Israel Ltd v Ocean Dynamic Lines SA and Ocean Victory Ltd (The Ocean Dynamic) [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 88, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	971
Jackson v Chrysler Acceptances [1978] R.T.R. 474, CA .....	990
Jackson v Horizon Holidays Ltd [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1468; [1975] 3 All E.R. 92, CA .....	585, 592, 593, 606, 989
Jackson v Royal Bank of Scotland [2000] C.L.C. 1457, CA .....	970
Jackson v Turquand (1869-70) L.R. 4 H.L. 305, HL .....	16, 19
Jackson v Union Marine Insurance Co Ltd (1874) L.R. 10 C.P. 125 .....	872, 873, 875, 897, 900
Jacob & Youngs v Kent 129 N.E. 889 (1921) ....	945
Jacobs v Batavia and General Plantations Trust Ltd [1924] 2 Ch. 329, CA; affirming [1924] 1 Ch. 287, Ch D .....	192
Jacobs v Morris [1902] 1 Ch. 816, CA .....	714
Jacobs v Revell [1900] 2 Ch. 858, Ch D .....	772
Jacoby v Whitmore (1883) 49 L.T. 335 .....	678
Jacovides v Constantinou The Times , October 27, 1986 .....	945
Jaggard v Sawyer [1995] 1 W.L.R. 269; [1995] 2 All E.R. 189, CA .....	929, 930, 1026, 1041, 1046, 1048
Jaglom v Excess Insurance Co Ltd [1972] 2 Q.B. 250; [1971] 3 W.L.R. 594, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	154
Jakeman v Cook (1878) 4 Ex.D. 26 .....	80
Jaks (UK) Ltd v Cera Investment Bank SA [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 89, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	152, 848, 857, 859
Jamal v Moolla Dawood Sons & Co [1916] 1 A.C. 175, PC (Burma) .....	953, 959, 977
James v British General Insurance Co Ltd [1927] 2 K.B. 311; (1927) 27 Ll. L. Rep. 328, KBD .....	437
James v Emery (1818) 5 Price 529 .....	575, 576
James v Heim Gallery (London) Ltd (1981) 41 P. & C.R. 269; (1980) 256 F.G. 819, CA .....	107, 110, 113
James v Hutton [1950] 1 K.B. 9; [1949] 2 All E.R. 243, CA .....	945
James & Co Scheepvaart en Handelsmij BV v Chinacrest Ltd [1979] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 126 .....	788
James Archdale & Co Ltd v Comservices Ltd [1954] 1 W.L.R. 459; [1954] 1 All E.R. 210; 98 S.J. 143, CA .....	224
James Baird Co v Gimbel Bros 64 F.2d. 344 (1933) .....	154
James Finlay & Co Ltd v NV Kwik Hoo Tung Handel Maatschappij [1929] 1 K.B. 400; [1928] All E.R. Rep. 110, CA .....	952, 978
James Lazenby & Co v McNicholas Construction Co Ltd [1995] 1 W.L.R. 615; [1995] 3 All E.R. 820, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	10
James McNaughton Paper Group Ltd v Hicks Anderson & Co [1991] 2 Q.B. 113; [1991] 2 W.L.R. 641, CA .....	346
James Talcott Ltd v JohnLewis & Co Ltd [1940] 3 All E.R. 592 .....	680
Jameson v Central Electricity Generating Board (No.1) [2000] 1 A.C. 455; [1999] 2 W.L.R. 141, HL .....	62, 100, 572, 754, 1056
Jameson v Kinnell Bay Land Co (1931) 47 T.L.R. 410 .....	356
Jameson v Midland Railway (1884) 50 L.T. 426 .....	970
Janmohammed v Hassam The Times , June 10, 1976 .....	64
Janos Paczy v Haendler & Natermann GmbH [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 302 .....	876
Janred Properties Ltd v Ente Nazionale Italiano per Il Turismo (ENIT) (No.2) [1989] 2 All E.R. 444; [1987] 2 F.T.L.R. 179, CA .....	404, 716, 954, 959, 994, 995
Janson v Driefontein Consolidated Mines Ltd; West Rand Central Gold Mines Co Ltd v De Rougemont [1902] A.C. 484, HL .....	478
Jaqes v Lloyd D George & Partners [1968] 1 W.L.R. 625; [1968] 2 All E.R. 187, CA .....	244, 742, 743
Jarvis Interiors Ltd v Galliard Homes Ltd [2000] C.L.C. 411; [2000] B.L.R. 33, CA .....	54, 55, 1061
Jarvis v Swans Tours Ltd [1973] Q.B. 233; [1972] 3 W.L.R. 954, CA .....	989
Jawara v Gambia Airways [1992] E.G.C.S. 54; [1992] N.P.C. 61, PC (Gamb) .....	708
Jayaar Impex Ltd v Toaken Group Ltd (t/a Hicks Brothers) [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 437, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	18, 19, 21, 32, 55, 218, 219
JEB Fasteners Ltd v Marks Bloom & Co [1983] 1 All E.R. 583, CA .....	338, 342, 346
Jebson v E & W India Dock Co (1875) L.R. 10 C.P. 300 .....	955
Jefferys v Jefferys (1841) Cr. & Ph. 138 .....	76
Jell v Douglas (1821) 4 B. & Ald. 374 .....	576
Jendwine v Slade (1797) 2 Esp. 571 .....	331, 355
Jenkin v Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain [1921] 1 Ch. 392, Ch D .....	560
Jenkins v Jenkins [1928] 2 K.B. 501, KBD .....	572, 573
Jenkins v Livesey [1985] A.C. 424; [1985] 2 W.L.R. 47, HL .....	304, 314, 393, 399
Jenkins v Reid See Jenkins Deed of Partnership
Jenkins Deed of Partnership, Re; sub nom. Jenkins v Reid [1948] 1 All E.R. 471; [1948] W.N. 9, Ch D .....	458
Jenks v Turpin (1883-84) L.R. 13 Q.B.D. 505, QBD .....	519
Jenner v Walker (1869) 19 L.T. 398 .....	540

Jennings v Broughton (1854) 5 D.M. & G. 126 .....	338	John Rigby (Haulage) v Reliance Marine Insurance Co [1956] 2 Q.B. 468; [1956] 3 W.L.R. 407, CA .....	302
Jennings v Brown (1842) 9 M. & W. 496 .....	165, 443	John S Darbyshire, The [1977] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 457 .....	64, 65
Jennings v Rice [2002] EWCA Civ 159; [2003] 1 P. & C.R. 8; [2002] W.T.L.R. 367, CA ...	136, 138, 141, 144, 145	John v James [1986] S.T.C. 352 .....	957
Jennings v Randall (1799) 8 Term Rep. 335 .....	551	John v Rees; Martin v Davis; Rees v John [1970] Ch. 345; [1969] 2 W.L.R. 1294, Ch D .....	210, 243
Jerome v Bentley & Co [1952] 2 All E.R. 114; [1952] 2 T.L.R. 58, QBD .....	717, 718	Johnsey Estates Ltd v Lewis & Manley (Engineering) Ltd (1987) 54 P. & C.R. 296; (1987) 284 E.G. 1240, CA .....	68, 87
Jervis v Harris [1996] Ch. 195; [1996] 2 W.L.R. 220, CA .....	1004, 1013, 1014	Johnson v Agnew [1980] A.C. 367; [1979] 2 W.L.R. 487, HL .....	364, 370, 760, 852, 853, 856, 930, 960, 962, 1011, 1048
Jervis v Howle and Talke Colliery Co Ltd [1937] Ch. 67, Ch D .....	323	Johnson v Bragge [1901] 1 Ch. 28, Ch D .....	322, 325
Jessel v Jessel [1979] 1 W.L.R. 1148; [1979] 3 All E.R. 645, CA .....	447	Johnson v CEBG [2000] 1 A.C. 455 .....	208
Jeune v Queen's Cross Properties Ltd [1974] Ch. 97; [1973] 3 W.L.R. 378, Ch D .....	1035	Johnson v Collings (1880) 1 East 98 .....	672
Jewsbury v Newbold (1857) 26 L.J.Ex. 247 .....	711	Johnson v Coventry Churchill International Ltd [1992] 3 All E.R. 14, QBD .....	984
JH Rayner (Mincing Lane) Ltd v Department of Trade and Industry [1990] 2 A.C. 418; [1989] 3 W.L.R. 969, HL; affirming [1989] Ch. 72, CA .....	586, 589, 705, 731	Johnson v Davies [1999] Ch. 117; [1998] 3 W.L.R. 1299, CA .....	100, 129, 203, 573, 575, 606
Jing Hong Hai, The See Itex Shipping Pte v China Ocean Shipping Co (The Jing Hong Hai)		Johnson v Gore Wood & Co (No.1 [2002] 2 A.C. 1; [2001] 2 W.L.R. 72; [2001] 1 All E.R. 481, HL .....	114, 115, 121, 124, 580, 988, 989, 990, 991, 992
JM Allan (Merchandising) v Cloke [1963] 2 Q.B. 340; [1963] 2 W.L.R. 899, CA .....	485	Johnson v Hudson (1805) 11 East 180 .....	433
Jobson v Johnson [1989] 1 W.L.R. 1026; [1989] 1 All E.R. 621, CA .....	996, 1002, 1003, 1008, 1009, 1010, 1020	Johnson v Moreton [1980] A.C. 37; [1978] 3 W.L.R. 538, HL .....	3, 478, 479, 488
Joel v Law Union and Crown Insurance Co [1908] 2 K.B. 863, CA .....	336, 392, 396	Johnson v Pye (1665) 1 Sid. 258 .....	551
Johanna Oldendorff, The See EL Oldendorff & Co GmbH v Tradax Export SA		Johnson v Raylton, Dixon & Co (1881) 7 Q.B.D. 438 .....	757
John Carter (Fine Worsted) Ltd v Hanson Haulage (Leeds) Ltd [1965] 2 Q.B. 495; [1965] 2 W.L.R. 553, CA .....	232	Johnson v Shrewsbury & Birmingham Railway (1853) 3 D.M. & G. 358 .....	1029
John D Wood & Co v Dantata [1985] 2 E.G.L.R. 44; (1985) 275 E.G. 1278 .....	741	Johnson v Stephens & Carter Ltd [1923] 2 K.B. 857, CA .....	576
John Fox (A Firm) v Bannister King & Rigbys [1988] Q.B. 925; [1987] 3 W.L.R. 480, CA .....	162	Johnson v Unisys Ltd [2001] UKHL 13; [2001] 2 W.L.R. 1076, HL .....	935, 988, 989, 991, 993, 1030
John George Leigh (t/a Moor Lane Video) v Customs and Excise Commissioners [1990] V.A.T.T.R. 59, VAT Tr (London) .....	1004	Johnson & Bloy (Holdings) Ltd v Wolstenholme Rink plc [1987] I.R.L.R. 499; [1987] 2 F.T.L.R. 502, CA .....	456
John Harris Partnership v Groveworld Ltd 75 Con. L.R. 7; [1999] P.N.L.R. 697, QBD (T&CC) .....	596, 606	Johnson Matthey & Co v Constantine Terminals and International Express Co [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 215, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	641, 642
John Lewis Properties plc v Viscount Chelsea (1994) 67 P. & C.R. 120; [1993] 34 E.G. 116, Ch D .....	812, 835, 890	Johnson Matthey Bankers Ltd v State Trading Corp of India Ltd [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 427, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	21, 220, 889, 899, 961
John McCann & Co v Pow [1974] 1 W.L.R. 1643; [1975] 1 All E.R. 129, CA .....	40, 708, 747, 757	Johnston v Boyes [1899] 2 Ch. 73, Ch D .....	12, 155
John Michael Design plc v Cooke [1987] 2 All E.R. 332; [1987] I.C.R. 445, CA .....	459	Johnston v Reading (1893) 9 T.L.R. 200 .....	717
John Munroe (Acrylics) Ltd v London Fire and Civil Defence Authority [1997] Q.B. 983; [1996] 3 W.L.R. 988, QBD .....	36	Johnstone v Bloomsbury HA [1992] Q.B. 333; [1991] 2 W.L.R. 1362, CA .....	204, 205, 208, 248, 478, 984
		Johnstone v Marks (1887) L.R. 19 Q.B.D. 509, QBD .....	541
		Johnstone v Milling (1886) 16 Q.B.D. 460 ...	763, 859

Jolley v Carmel Ltd [2000] 3 E.G.L.R. 68; [2000] 43 E.G. 185, CA; affirming [2000] 2 E.G.L.R. 153, Ch D .....	65
Jolly v Rees (1864) 15 C.B. (N.S.) 628 .....	711
Jon Beauforte (London) Ltd, Re; Grainger Smith & Co (Builders) Ltd's Application; John Wright & Son (Veneers) Ltd's Application; Lowell Baldwin Ltd's Application [1953] Ch. 131; [1953] 2 W.L.R. 465, Ch D .....	565
Jones Ex p. (1881) 18 Ch D.109 .....	545, 554
Jones v Ashburnham (1804) 4 East 455 ....	68, 88
Jones v Barkley (1781) 2 Dougl. 648 .....	764
Jones v Broadhurst (1850) 9 C.B. 173 .....	756
Jones v Clifford (1876) 1 R. 3 Ch. D. 779, Ch D .....	316
Jones v Daniel [1894] 2 Ch. 332, Ch D .....	19
Jones v European and General Express Co (1920) 25 Com.Cas. 296 .....	585, 707
Jones v Farrell (1857) 1 D. & J. 208 .....	682
Jones v Gardiner [1902] 1 Ch. 191, Ch D ....	831
Jones v Gooday (1841) 8 M. & W. 146 .....	945
Jones v Gwent CC [1992] 1 R.L.R. 521 .....	1031
Jones v Herbert (1817) 7 Taunt. 421 .....	577
Jones v Hope (1880) 3 T.L.R. 247n .....	739
Jones v Humphreys [1902] 1 K.B. 10 .....	676
Jones v Jones [1977] 1 W.L.R. 438; (1977) 33 P. & C.R. 147, CA .....	135, 136, 143
Jones v Lee (1979) 78 L.G.R. 213 .....	1030
Jones v Lock (1865) 1 R. 1 Ch.App. 25 .....	685
Jones v Padavatton [1969] 1 W.L.R. 328; [1969] 2 All E.R. 616, CA ....	81, 98, 165, 170
Jones v Rimmer (1880) 1 R. 14 Ch. D. 588, CA .....	313, 316
Jones v Roberts [1995] 2 F.L.R. 422; [1995] Fam. Law 673, Ch D .....	437
Jones v Robinson (1847) 1 Ex. 454 .....	81
Jones v Sherwood Computer Services plc [1992] 1 W.L.R. 277; [1992] 2 All E.R. 170, CA .....	313, 448
Jones v Society of Lloyd's The Times , February 2, 2000 .....	780, 1004
Jones v Star Credit Corporation 298 N.Y.S. 2d 264 (1969) .....	422
Jones v Still [1965] N.Z.L.R. 1071, Sup Ct (NZ) .....	349
Jones v Stones [1999] 1 W.L.R. 1739 .....	141
Jones v Waite (1839) 5 Bing. N.C. 341 .....	98
Jones & Sons Ltd v Tankerville [1909] 2 Ch. 440, Ch D .....	1045
Jones Brothers (Hunstanton) v Stevens [1955] 1 Q.B. 275; [1954] 3 W.L.R. 953, CA ....	619
Jordan v Money (1854) 5 H.L.C. 185 ....	116, 130
Jordan v Norton (1838) 4 M. & W. 155 .....	19
Joscelyne v Nissen [1970] 2 Q.B. 86; [1970] 2 W.L.R. 509, CA .....	324, 325
Joseph Constantine Steamship Line Ltd v Imperial Smelting Corp Ltd [1942] A.C. 154; [1941] 2 All E.R. 165, H.L. ....	870, 898, 906, 908, 910, 921, 924
Joseph Evans & Co v Heathcote [1918] 1 K.B. 418, CA .....	80, 465
Joseph Thorley Ltd v Orchis Steamship Co Ltd [1907] 1 K.B. 660, CA .....	229, 231
Joseph Travers & Sons Ltd v Cooper [1915] 1 K.B. 73, CA .....	223
Joseph v National Magazine Co [1959] Ch. 14; [1958] 3 W.L.R. 366, Ch D .....	992, 1032, 1034
Josselson v Borst [1938] 1 K.B. 723, CA .....	576
Joyce v Sengupta [1993] 1 W.L.R. 337; [1993] 1 All E.R. 897, CA .....	988
JS Bloor (Measham) Ltd v Calcott (No.2) The Times , December 12, 2001 .....	140
JT Developments v Quinn (1991) 62 P. & C.R. 33; [1991] 2 E.G.L.R. 257, CA .....	136, 143
JT Stratford & Son Ltd v Lindley (No.1) [1965] A.C. 269; [1964] 3 W.L.R. 541, H.L. ....	622
Jugoslavenska Linijska Plovidba v Holsman (t/a Brusse & Sippel Import-Export) (The Primorje) [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 74, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	733
Juliana, The (1822) 2 Dods. 504 .....	787
Junior Books Ltd v Veitchi Co Ltd [1983] 1 A.C. 520; [1982] 3 W.L.R. 477, H.L. ....	607, 608, 609, 610, 613, 615, 616, 637, 638, 643, 654, 937
Junior K, The See Star Steamship Society v Beogradska Plovidba (The Junior K)
K (Deceased), Re [1986] Ch. 180; [1985] 3 W.L.R. 234, CA .....	437
K (Enduring Powers of Attorney), Re; F, Re [1988] Ch. 310; [1988] 2 W.L.R. 781, Ch D .....	557, 752
K Chellaram & Sons (London) v Butlers Warehousing & Distribution [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 412, CA .....	607, 641
K Lokumal & Sons (London) Ltd v Lotte Shipping Co Pte Ltd (The August Leonhardt) [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 28; The Financial Times , April 23, 1985, CA .....	109, 121
K/S Merc-Scandia XXXXII v Lloyd's Underwriters (The Mercandian Continent) [2001] EWCA Civ 1275; [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 563, CA ....	336, 337, 392, 401, 790, 795, 796, 807
Kaines (UK) v Oesterreichische Warenhandels-gesellschaft Austrowaren GmbH [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 1, CA .....	963
Kaliningrad, The and Nadezhda Krupskaya, The [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 35, QBD (Adm Ct) .....	70, 304
Kall Kwik Printing (UK) Ltd v Bell [1994] F.S.R. 674, Ch D .....	459, 1022
Kall Kwik Printing (UK) Ltd v Rush [1996] F.S.R. 114, Ch D .....	458, 461, 507, 851
Kalsep Ltd v X-Flow BV (2001) 24(7) I.P.D. 24044; The Times , May 3, 2001 .....	296, 421, 853
Kammins Ballrooms Co Ltd v Zenith Investments (Torquay) Ltd (No.1) [1971] A.C. 850; [1970] 3 W.L.R. 287, H.L. ....	103, 813

- Kanchenjunga, The See Motor Oil Hellas (Corinth) Refineries SA v Shipping Corp of India
- Kapetan Georgis, The See Virgo Steamship Co SA v Skaarup Shipping Corp
- Kapetan Markos NL (No.2), The See Hispanica de Petroles SA v Vencedora Oceanica Navegacion SA (The Kapetan Markos NL) (No.2)
- Kapfunde v Abbey National plc [1998] E.C.C. 440; [1999] I.C.R. 1, CA ..... 612
- Kapur v JW Francis & Co (No.2) [2000] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 361; [1999] Lloyd's Rep. P.N. 834, CA ..... 986
- Karen Oltman, The [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 708 ..... 197
- Karflex Ltd v Poole [1933] 2 K.B. 251, KBD ..... 1055
- Karin Vatis, The See Vagres Compania Maritima SA v Nissho-Iwai American Corp
- Karsales (Harrow) Ltd v Wallis [1956] 1 W.L.R. 936; [1956] 2 All E.R. 866, CA ..... 225, 227
- Kastellon, The See Huilerie L'Abeille v Societe des Huileries du Niger
- Kasumu v Baba-Egbe [1956] A.C. 539; [1956] 3 W.L.R. 575, PC (West Africa) ..... 491
- Kathleen, The (1872-75) L.R. 4 A. & E. 269, Ct of Admiralty ..... 759, 783
- Kaufman v Gerson [1904] 1 K.B. 591, CA ..... 409
- Kaukomarkkinat O/Y v Elbe Transport-Union GmbH (The Kelo) [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 85, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 679, 697
- Kawasaki Steel Corp v Sardoil SpA (The Zuiho Maru) [1977] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 552, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 838, 866
- Kay, Re [1939] Ch. 239 ..... 1036
- Kaye Steam Navigation Co Ltd v Barnett Ltd (No.2) (1932) 43 Ll. L. Rep. 166, KBD ..... 958
- Kazakhstan Wool Processors (Europe) Ltd v Nederlandsche Credietverzekering Maatschappij NV [2000] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 708; [2000] C.L.C. 822, CA ..... 762, 1010
- KBC Bank v Industrial Steels (UK) Ltd [2001] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 409; [2001] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 370, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 340, 341, 344, 362
- KC Sethia (1944) Ltd v Partabmull Rameshwar See Partabmull Rameshwar v KC Sethia (1944) Ltd
- Kearley v Thomson (1890) L.R. 24 Q.B.D. 742, CA ..... 446, 494, 495
- Kearney v Whitehaven Colliery Co [1893] 1 Q.B. 700, CA ..... 505
- Kearsley v Cole (1846) 16 M. & W. 128 ..... 573
- Keates v Cadogan (1851) 10 C.B. 591 ..... 390
- Keeley v Guy McDonald (1984) 134 N.L.J. 522; (1984) 134 N.L.J. 706 ..... 945
- Keelwalk Properties Ltd v Waller [2002] EWCA Civ 1076; [2002] 48 E.G. 142, CA ..... 135
- Keen v Holland [1984] 1 W.L.R. 251; [1984] 1 All E.R. 75, CA ..... 124, 323
- Kehera, The [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 29 ..... 905
- Kehoe v Borough of Rutherford 27 A 912 (1893) ..... 1062
- Keighley Maxsted & Co v Durant (t/a Bryan Durant & Co) [1901] A.C. 240, HL ..... 588, 723, 728
- Keightley v Watson (1849) 3 Ex. 716 .... 575, 576
- Keir v Leeman (1846) 9 Q.B. 371 ..... 445
- Kekewich v Manning (1851) 1 D.M. & G. 176 ..... 651, 683, 684, 686
- Kelly v Cooper [1993] A.C. 205; [1992] 3 W.L.R. 936, PC (Ber) ..... 746
- Kelly v Liverpool Maritime Terminals Ltd [1988] I.L.R.L. 310, CA ..... 139
- Kelly v Lombard Banking Co [1959] 1 W.L.R. 41; [1958] 3 All E.R. 713, CA ..... 1055
- Kelly v Solari (1841) 9 M. & W. 54 ..... 1059
- Kelner v Baxter (1866-67) L.R. 2 C.P. 174, CCP ..... 566, 724, 725, 735
- Kelo, The See Kaukomarkkinat O/Y v Elbe Transport-Union GmbH
- Kelsey v Dodd (1883) 52 L.J. Ch. 34 ..... 671
- Kemble v Farren (1829) 6 Bing. 141 ..... 1000, 1001
- Kemp v Baerselman [1906] 2 K.B. 604, CA ... 694, 695
- Kemp v Balls (1854) 10 Ex. 607 ..... 756
- Kemp v Intasun Holidays [1987] 2 F.T.L.R. 234; (1988) 6 Tr. L. 161, CA ..... 969
- Kemp v Sober (1851) 1 Sim. (N.S.) 517 ..... 1040
- Kendall v Hamilton (1878-79) L.R. 4 App. Cas. 504, HL ..... 569, 570
- Keneric Tractor Sales Ltd v Langille [1987] 2 S.C.R. 440 ..... 854
- Kennard v Ashman (1894) 10 T.L.R. 213 .... 383
- Kennard v Cory Bros & Co Ltd (No.2) [1922] 2 Ch. 1, CA ..... 1033
- Kennaway v Thompson [1981] Q.B. 88; [1980] 3 W.L.R. 361, CA ..... 1040
- Kennedy v Broun (1863) 13 C.B. (N.S.) 677 .... 78, 480
- Kennedy v De Trafford [1897] A.C. 180, HL ..... 706
- Kennedy v Lee (1817) 3 Mer. 441 ..... 17
- Kennedy v Panama New Zealand & Australian Royal Mail Co (1866-67) L.R. 2 Q.B. 580, QB ..... 289, 369, 924
- Kennedy v Thomassen [1929] 1 Ch. 426, Ch D ..... 22, 23, 45
- Kenneth Allison (In Liquidation) v AE Limehouse & Co [1992] 2 A.C. 105; [1991] 3 W.L.R. 671, HL ..... 121
- Kenney v Wexham (1822) 6 Madd. 355 ..... 1021
- Kenny & Good Pty Ltd v MGICA [2000] Lloyd's Rep. 25 (HC of Australia) ..... 938
- Kenny v Preen [1963] 1 Q.B. 499; [1962] 3 W.L.R. 1233, CA ..... 988, 991
- Kenya Railways v Antares Co Pte Ltd (The Antares) (No.1) [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 424, CA; affirming [1986] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 626, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 225, 229, 236, 240

Kenyon v Darwen Cotton Manufacturing Co Ltd [1936] 2 K.B. 193, CA .....	507
Kenyon, Son & Craven v Baxter Hoare & Co [1971] 1 W.L.R. 519; [1971] 2 All E.R. 708, QBD .....	229, 233, 238
Kepong Prospecting Ltd v Schmidt; sub nom. Kepong Prospecting Ltd v Jagatheesan [1968] A.C. 810; [1968] 2 W.L.R. 55, PC (Mal) .....	587
Kerr v Morris [1987] Ch. 90; [1986] 3 W.L.R. 662, CA .....	454, 458, 459, 462, 463, 1041
Kerrick v Schoenberg 328 S.W. 2d 595, 602 (1959) .....	472
Keteley's Case See Kirton v Eliot
Ketley v Scott [1981] I.C.R. 241 .....	428
Kidderminster Corporation v Hardwick (1873) L.R. 9 Ex. 13 .....	150, 566
Kijowski v New Capital Properties 15 Con. L.R. 1, QBD .....	339, 679
Killick v Roberts [1991] 1 W.L.R. 1146; [1991] 4 All E.R. 289, CA .....	371
Kilmer v British Columbia Orchard Lands Ltd [1913] A.C. 319, PC (Can) .....	1009
Kinahan & Co Ltd v Parry [1911] 1 K.B. 459, CA .....	718
Kinch v Bullard [1999] 1 W.L.R. 423; [1998] 4 All E.R. 650, Ch D .....	28, 29
King v Hoare (1844) 3 M. & W. 494 .....	571
King v King (1981) 41 P. & C.R. 311; (1980) 255 E.G. 1205; The Times , June 26, 1980, Ch D .....	56
King v Michael Faraday & Partners Ltd [1939] 2 K.B. 753, KBD .....	452, 698, 707, 708
King v South Northamptonshire DC (1992) 24 H.L.R. 284; 90 L.G.R. 121, CA .....	210
King v Victor Parsons & Co [1973] 1 W.L.R. 29; [1973] 1 All E.R. 206, CA; affirming [1972] 1 W.L.R. 801 .....	961, 969
King v Victoria Insurance Co Ltd [1896] A.C. 250, PC (Aus) .....	678, 696
King, Re (1858) 3 D. & J. 63 .....	554
King, Re (1879) 14 Ch.D. 179 .....	685, 686
King's Motors (Oxford) v Iax [1970] 1 W.L.R. 426; [1969] 3 All E.R. 665; 114 S.J. 168, Chancery Ct of Lancaster .....	56
Kings North Trust v Bell [1986] 1 W.L.R. 119; [1986] 1 All E.R. 423, CA .....	412
King's Norton Metal Co v Edridge Merrett & Co (1897) 14 T.L.R. 98 .....	298, 302
Kingscroft Insurance Co Ltd v Nissan Fire & Marine Insurance Co Ltd (No.2) [2000] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 272; [1999] C.L.C. 1875, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	48
Kingscroft Insurance Co v HS Weavers (Underwriting) Agencies [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 187; The Times , August 21, 1992, Ch D ...	707, 745, 1021
Kingsley v Sterling Industrial Securities Ltd [1967] 2 Q.B. 747; [1966] 2 W.L.R. 1265, CA .....	496, 502
Kingsman v Kingsman (1880-81) L.R. 6 Q.B.D. 122, CA .....	547
Kingston v Ambrian Investment Co [1975] 1 W.L.R. 161; [1975] 1 All E.R. 120, CA .....	160
Kingston v Preston (1773) Lofft. 194 .....	764
Kingswood Estate Co v Anderson [1963] 2 Q.B. 169; [1962] 3 W.L.R. 1102; [1962] 3 All E.R. 593, CA .....	172
Kirby v Thorn EMI [1988] 1 W.L.R. 445; [1988] 2 All E.R. 947, CA .....	455
Kiriri Cotton Co Ltd v Dewani [1960] A.C. 192; [1960] 2 W.L.R. 127, PC (EA) ....	492, 495
Kirkham v Marter (1819) 2 B. & Ald. 613 ....	181
Kirklees MBC v Yorks Woollen District Transport Co (1978) 77 L.G.R. 448 .....	884
Kirkness, The [1957] P. 51 .....	627, 629
Kirton v Eliot (1613) 2 Bulst. 69; (1613) 1 Brownl. 120 .....	546, 545, 547
Kish v Charles Taylor & Sons & Co; sub nom. Kish v Taylor [1912] A.C. 604, HL .....	228, 229, 848
Kissavos Shipping Co SA v Empresa Cubana de Fletes (The Agathon) [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 211, CA .....	868, 874, 909
Kite, The [1933] P. 154; (1933) 46 Ll. L. Rep. 83, PDAD .....	638, 639
Kleinjan & Holst NV, Rotterdam v Bremer Handels GmbH, Hamburg [1972] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 11, QBD .....	952
Kleinwort Benson Ltd v Birmingham City Council [1997] Q.B. 380; [1996] 3 W.L.R. 1139, CA .....	980, 1058
Kleinwort Benson Ltd v Glasgow City Council (No.2) [1999] 1 A.C. 153; [1997] 3 W.L.R. 923, HL .....	1051, 1059
Kleinwort Benson Ltd v Lincoln City Council [1999] 2 A.C. 349; [1998] 3 W.L.R. 1095, HL ...	313, 314, 333, 493, 565, 567, 713, 739, 1059
Kleinwort Benson Ltd v Malaysia Mining Corp Bhd [1989] 1 W.L.R. 379; [1989] 1 All E.R. 785, CA .....	168, 195, 332, 351
Kleinwort Benson Ltd v South Tyneside MBC [1994] 4 All E.R. 972, QBD .....	1050, 1060
Kloeckner & Co AG v Gatoil Overseas Inc [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 177; [1990] I.L.Pr. 53, QBD .....	515, 517, 706
Knibb v National Coal Board [1987] Q.B. 906; [1986] 3 W.L.R. 895, CA .....	996
Knight v Burgess (1864) 33 L.J.Ch. 727 .....	700
Knight v Lawrence [1991] 1 E.G.L.R. 143 .....	608
Knott v Bolton 45 Con. L.R. 127; (1995) 11 Const. L.J. 375, CA .....	990
Knowles v Bovill (1870) 22 L.T. 70 .....	1053
Knye v Moore (1822) 1 S. & S. 61 .....	443
Koch Marine Inc v d'Amica Societa di Navigazione arl (The Elena d'Amico) [1980] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 75, QBD (Comm Ct) ....	948, 977
Kodros Shipping Corp of Monrovia v Empresa Cubana de Fletes (The Evia) (No.2) [1983] 1 A.C. 736; [1982] 3 W.L.R. 637, HL .....	790, 868, 874, 891, 900
Koenigsblatt v Sweet [1923] 2 Ch. 314, CA .....	726

- Kofi Sunkersette Obu v A Strauss & Co Ltd [1951] A.C. 243; 95 S.J. 137, PC (West Africa) ..... 740
- Kolatsis v Rockware Glass [1974] 3 All E.R. 555; [1974] I.C.R. 580, NIRC ..... 845
- Kollerich & Cie SA v State Trading Corp of India Ltd [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 32, CA ..... 757
- Koorang Investments Pty v Richardson & Wrench [1982] A.C. 462; [1981] 3 W.L.R. 493, PC (Aus) ..... 714, 716, 718
- Kores Manufacturing Co Ltd v Kolok Manufacturing Co Ltd [1959] Ch. 108; [1958] 2 W.L.R. 858, CA ..... 464, 466, 468
- Kostas Melas, The See SL Sethia Liners v Naviagro Maritime Corp
- Koufos v C Czarnikow Ltd (The Heron II) [1969] 1 A.C. 350; [1967] 3 W.L.R. 1491, HL ..... 362, 363, 966, 967, 968, 970, 971, 974
- Kpohraror v Woolwich Building Society [1996] 4 All E.R. 119; [1996] 5 Bank. L.R. 182, CA ..... 966, 970, 971, 992
- Krall v Burnett (1877) 25 W.R. 305 ..... 198
- Krasner v Dennison; Lawrence v Lesser [2001] Ch. 76; [2000] 3 W.L.R. 720, CA ..... 700
- Krell v Henry [1903] 2 K.B. 740, CA ..... 867, 885, 886, 892, 895, 901, 924
- Kriti Rex, The [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 171 ..... 208, 901, 967, 968, 980, 1018
- Krohn & Co v Mitsui & Co Europe GmbH [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 419, CA ..... 798
- Kuddus v Chief Constable of Leicestershire [2001] UKHL 29; [2002] 2 A.C. 122, HL ..... 927, 935, 936
- Kuenigl v Donnersmarck [1955] 1 Q.B. 515; [1955] 2 W.L.R. 82, QBD ..... 507, 509
- Kumar (A Bankrupt), Re; sub nom. Lewis v Kumar [1993] 1 W.L.R. 224; [1993] 2 All E.R. 700, Ch D ..... 87, 150, 165, 670
- Kumar v AGF Insurance Ltd [1999] 1 W.L.R. 1747; [1998] 4 All E.R. 788; [1999] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 147, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 202, 203, 205, 373
- Kurnia Dewi, The See Smit International Singapore Pte Ltd v Kurnia Dewi Shipping SA (The Kurnia Dewi)
- Kurt A Becher GmbH & Co KG v Roplak Enterprises SA (The World Navigator) [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 23, CA ..... 838, 958, 963, 975
- Kuwait Airways Corp v Iraqi Airways Co (No.6) [2002] UKHL 19; [2002] 2 A.C. 883; [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 843, HL ..... 362, 928
- Kuwait Maritime Transport Co v Rickmers Linie KG (The Danah) [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 351, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 223
- Kuwait Supply Co v Oyster Marine Management Inc (The Safer) [1994] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 637, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 892, 898
- Kwei Tek Chao (t/a Zung Fu Co) v British Traders & Shippers Ltd (No.1); sub nom. Chao v British Traders & Shippers Ltd (No.1) [1954] 2 Q.B. 459; [1954] 2 W.L.R. 365, QBD ... 760, 788, 811, 815, 949, 951, 952, 973
- Kydon Compania Naviera SA v National Westminster Bank Ltd (The Lena) [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 68; [1980] Com. L.R. 12, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 836
- Kynaston v Att-Gen. (1933) 49 T.L.R. 300 ..... 4
- Kyprianou (Phoebus D) Co v Wm H Pim Jnr & Co [1977] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 570, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 958, 959
- Kyriaki, The See Bank of America National Trust and Savings Association v Christmas
- L v L [1962] P. 101; [1961] 3 W.L.R. 1182, CA ..... 447
- L French & Co Ltd v Leeston Shipping Co Ltd [1922] 1 A.C. 451; (1922) 10 Ll. L. Rep. 448, HL ..... 743
- La Pintada, The See President of India v La Pintada Compania Navigacion SA
- Lacaussade v White (1798) 2 Esp. 629 ..... 519
- Lace v Chantler [1944] K.B. 368, CA ..... 498
- Laceys (Wholesale) Footwear Ltd v Bowler International Freight Ltd [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 369; The Times, May 12, 1997, CA ... 217, 221, 244, 245, 970
- Lacis v Cashmarts [1969] 2 Q.B. 400; [1969] 2 W.L.R. 329; 112 S.J. 1005, DC ..... 12
- Laconia, The See Mardorf Peach & Co v Attica Sea Carriers Corp of Liberia (The Laconia)
- Ladup Ltd v Shaikh [1983] Q.B. 225; [1982] 3 W.L.R. 172, QBD ..... 528, 530, 534
- Lady Cox's Case, The (1734) 3 P.Wms. 339 ..... 443
- Lagunas Nitrate Co v Lagunas Syndicate [1899] 2 Ch. 392, CA ..... 367, 378
- Lake v Bayliss [1974] 1 W.L.R. 1073; [1974] 2 All E.R. 1114, Ch D ..... 928
- Lake v Lake [1989] S.T.C. 865, Ch D ..... 323
- Lake v Simmons [1927] A.C. 487; (1927) 27 Ll. L. Rep. 377, HL ..... 300, 301, 302, 306
- Lakeport Navigation Co Panama SA v Anonima Petroli Italiana SpA (The Olympic Brilliance) [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 205, CA ..... 785
- Lakschmijit S/O Bhai Suchit v Sherani [1974] A.C. 605; [1974] 2 W.L.R. 232, PC (Fiji) ..... 844, 848, 851
- Lamare v Dixon (1873) L.R. 6 H.L. 414 ... 1026, 1028
- Lamb v Evans [1893] 1 Ch. 218, CA ..... 745
- Lamb v Vice (1840) 6 M. & W. 467 ..... 646
- Lambert v Cooperative Insurance Society Ltd [1975] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 485, CA ..... 395
- Lambert v HTV Cymru (Wales) Ltd [1998] E.M.L.R. 629; [1998] F.S.R. 874, CA ..... 61

Lambert v Lewis; sub nom. Lexmead (Basingstoke) Ltd v Lewis [1982] A.C. 225; [1981] 2 W.L.R. 713, H.L. ....	13, 162, 584, 790, 985
Lambourn v Cruden (1841) 2 M. & G. 253 ....	782, 819
Lamdon Trust Ltd v Hurrell [1955] 1 W.L.R. 391; [1955] 1 All E.R. 839, QBD .....	1005
Lampleigh v Brathwait (1615) Hob. 105 ....	78
Lamport & Holt Lines v Coubro & Scrutton (M&I) Ltd (The Raphael) [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 42, CA; affirming [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 659, QBD (Comm Ct) ....	220, 223, 224, 840
Lamson Pneumatic Tube Co v Phillips (1904) 91 L.T. 363 .....	455
Lancashire CC v Municipal Mutual Insurance Ltd [1997] Q.B. 897; [1996] 3 W.L.R. 493, CA .....	437, 478
Lancashire Loans Ltd v Black [1934] 1 K.B. 380, CA .....	412, 427
Landau (A Bankrupt), Re [1998] Ch. 223; [1997] 3 W.L.R. 225, Ch D .....	700
Langdale v Danby [1982] 1 W.L.R. 1123; [1982] 3 All E.R. 129, H.L. ....	74
Langen & Wind Ltd v Bell [1972] Ch. 685; [1972] 2 W.L.R. 170, Ch D .....	1020, 1038
Langridge v Levy (1837) 2 M. & W. 519 ....	341
Langston v Amalgamated Union of Engineering Workers (No.1) [1974] 1 W.L.R. 185; [1974] 1 All E.R. 980, CA .....	833, 834
Langton v Hughes (1813) 1 M. & S. 593 ....	433
Langton v Langton [1995] 2 F.L.R. 890; [1995] 3 F.C.R. 521, Ch D .....	420
Langton v Waite (1868–69) L.R. 4 Ch. App. 402, CA in Chancery; reversing (1868) L.R. 6 Eq. 165, Ct of Chancery .....	727
Lansing Linde Ltd v Kerr [1991] 1 W.L.R. 251; [1991] 1 All E.R. 418, CA .....	457, 460, 1041
Lanyon v Blanchard (1811) 2 Camp. 597 ....	713
Lapthorne v Eurofi Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 993; [2001] U.K.C.L.R. 996, CA .....	459
Larios v Gurety (1873–74) L.R. 5 P.C. 346, PC (Gib) .....	997, 1020
Larissa, The See Showa Oil Tanker Co of Japan Ltd v Maravan SA of Caracas
Lark v Outhwaite [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 132, QBD (Comm Ct) ...	19, 36, 37, 109, 114, 172
Larksworth Investments Ltd v Temple House Ltd (No.2) [1999] B.L.R. 297, CA .....	989
Larrinaga & Co Ltd v Societe Franco-Americaine des Phosphates de Medulla (1923) 14 Ll. L. Rep. 457, H.L. ....	886, 898
Lasky v Economic Grocery Stores 65 N.E. 2d. 305 (1946) .....	13
Latham v Latham 547 P.2d 144 (1975) .....	444
Latter v Bradell (1880) 50 L.J.C.P. 166; (1881) 50 L.J.Q.B. 448 .....	405
Laughton & Hawley v BAPP Industrial Supplies [1986] I.C.R. 634; [1986] I.R.L.R. 245, EAT .....	857
Laurence v Lexcourt Holdings [1978] 1 W.L.R. 1128; [1978] 2 All E.R., CA .....	318, 319, 340
Laurent v Sale & Co [1963] 1 W.L.R. 829; [1963] 2 All E.R. 63, QBD .....	695
Laurie & Morewood v Dudin & Sons; sub nom. Laurie v Dudin & Sons [1926] 1 K.B. 223; (1925) 23 Ll. L. Rep. 177, CA .....	403
Lavarack v Woods of Colchester [1967] 1 Q.B. 278; [1966] 3 W.L.R. 706, CA .....	955, 980
Lavery v Pursell (1888) L.R. 39 Ch. D. 508; (1888) 57 L.J. Ch. 570, Ch D .....	1046
Law v Coburn [1972] 1 W.L.R. 1238 .....	678
Law v Dearnley [1950] 1 K.B. 400; [1950] 1 All E.R. 124, CA .....	520, 525
Law v Jones [1974] Ch. 112; [1973] 2 W.L.R. 994, CA .....	53
Law v Law (1735) 3 P.Wms. 391 .....	451
Law v Wilkin (1837) 6 A. & E. 718 ....	540, 711
Law Debenture Trust Corp v Ural Caspian Oil Corp Ltd [1995] Ch. 152; [1994] 3 W.L.R. 1221, CA; reversing [1993] 1 W.L.R. 138, Ch D .....	584, 619, 622, 623, 703
Law Society v KPMG Peat Marwick [2000] 1 W.L.R. 1921; [2000] 4 All E.R. 540, CA .....	345, 346
Lawes v Purser (1856) 6 E. & E. 930 .....	1053
Lawford v Billericay Rural DC [1903] 1 K.B. 772, CA .....	1063
Lawlor v Gray [1984] 3 All E.R. 345, Ch D .....	1014
Lawrence David Ltd v Ashton [1991] 1 All E.R. 385; [1989] I.C.R. 123, CA ....	460, 849, 1022, 1034, 1041
Laws v London Chronicle (Indicator Newspapers) [1959] 1 W.L.R. 698; [1959] 2 All E.R. 285, CA .....	810
Lawson v Supasink (t/a Modern Homes) (1984) 3 Tr. L. 37, CA .....	787
Laythorp v Bryant (1836) 2 Bing.N.C. 735 ...	150, 184
Layton v Martin [1986] 2 F.L.R. 227; [1986] Fam. Law 212 .....	141
Layton v Morris The Times , December 11, 1985 .....	170
Lazarus v Cairn Line of Steamships (1912) 28 T.L.R. 244 .....	205, 743
Lazenby Garages v Wright [1976] 1 W.L.R. 459; [1976] 2 All E.R. 770, CA .....	955
LD Turner Ltd v RS Hatton (Bradford) Ltd [1952] 1 All E.R. 1286; [1952] 1 T.L.R. 1184, Assizes (Leeds) .....	183
Leadenhall Residential 2 Ltd v Stirling [2001] EWCA Civ 1011; [2002] 1 W.L.R. 499; [2001] 3 All E.R. 645, CA .....	169
Leaf v International Galleries [1950] 2 K.B. 86; [1950] 1 All E.R. 693, CA ....	290, 293, 355, 375, 384, 385
League, The [1984] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 259 .....	689
Leaman v King, The [1920] 3 K.B. 663, KBD .....	4

- Learoyd Bros & Co and Huddersfield Fine Worsteds v Pope & Sons (Dock Carriers) [1966] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 142, QBD ..... 641, 758
- Learoyd v Bracken [1894] 1 Q.B. 114, CA .... 433
- Lease Management Services v Purnell Secretarial Services [1994] C.C.L.R. 127; The Times, April 1, 1994, CA ..... 261
- Leather Cloth Co v Hieronimus (1874-75) L.R. 10 Q.B. 140, QBD ..... 104
- Leather Cloth Co v Lonsont (1869-70) L.R. 9 Eq. 345, Ct of Chancery ..... 456
- Ledingham v Bermejo Estancia Co Ltd; Agar v Bermejo Estancia Co Ltd [1947] 1 All E.R. 749, KBD ..... 127
- Leduc & Co v Ward (1888) L.R. 20 Q.B.D. 475, CA ..... 193
- Lee Cheung Wing v Queen, The; Lam Man Yau v Queen, The (1992) 94 Cr. App. R. 355; [1992] Crim. L.R. 440, PC (HK) ..... 747
- Lee v Muggridge (1813) 5 Taunt. 36 ..... 79
- Lee v Nixon (1834) 1 A. & E. 201 ..... 568
- Lee v Showmen's Guild of Great Britain [1952] 2 Q.B. 329; [1952] 1 All E.R. 1157; CA ..... 243, 450, 585
- Lee v Thompson [1989] 40 E.G. 89, CA ..... 984
- Lee Cooper Ltd v CH Jeakins & Sons Ltd [1967] 2 Q.B. 1; [1965] 3 W.L.R. 753; [1964] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 300, QBD ..... 641
- Leeds & Thirsk Railway v Fearnley (1849) 2 Ex. 26 ..... 546
- Leeds Industrial Cooperative Society Ltd v Slack [1924] A.C. 851; [1924] All E.R. Rep. 264, HL ..... 1047
- Leeds Shipping Co v Societe Francaise Bunge SA (The Eastern City) [1958] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 127, CA ..... 834
- Leeman v Stocks [1951] Ch. 941; [1951] 1 All E.R. 1043; [1951] 2 T.L.R. 622; 95 S.J. 368, Ch D ..... 184
- Lee-Parker v Izett (No.2) [1975] 1 W.L.R. 775 ..... 64
- Lefevre v White [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 569; The Times, November 1, 1989, QBD ..... 668, 858
- Lefkowitz v Great Minneapolis Surplus Stores 86 N.W. 2d. 689 (1957) ..... 14
- Legal & General Assurance Society Ltd v Drake Insurance Co [1992] Q.B. 887; [1992] 2 W.L.R. 157, CA ..... 574
- Legh v Legh (1799) 1 B. & P. 447 ..... 672
- Legione v Hateley (1983) 46 A.L.R. 1 ..... 1010
- Leigh and Sullivan Ltd v Aliakmon Shipping Co Ltd (The Aliakmon) [1986] A.C. 785; [1986] 2 W.L.R. 902, HL ..... 613, 614, 616, 637, 639, 640, 641, 643, 644, 1023
- Leigh v National Union of Railwaymen [1970] Ch. 326; [1970] 2 W.L.R. 60, Ch D ..... 450
- Leighton v Michael; Leighton v Charlabous [1995] I.C.R. 1091; [1996] I.R.L.R. 67, EAT ..... 483
- Leila, The See Swaziland Central Transport Administration and Alfko Aussenhandels GmbH v Leila Maritime Co Ltd and Mediterranean Shipping Co SA
- Leiston Gas Co v Leiston cum Sizewell Urban DC [1916] 2 K.B. 428 ..... 763, 886
- Leitner v TUI Deutschland GmbH & Co KG (C168/00) [2002] All E.R. (EC) 561; [2002] 2 C.M.L.R. 6, ECJ (6th Chamber) ..... 989
- Lemenda Trading Co Ltd v African Middle East Petroleum Co Ltd [1988] Q.B. 448; [1988] 2 W.L.R. 735, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 451
- Lempriere v Lange (1879) L.R. 12 Ch. D. 675, Ch D ..... 554
- Lens v Devonshire Club (1914) The Times, December 4 ..... 164
- Leonidas D, The See Allied Marine Transport v Vale do Rio Doce Navegacao SA
- Lep Air Services v Rolloswin Investments See Moschi v Lep Air Services Ltd
- Leppard v Excess Insurance Co Ltd [1979] 1 W.L.R. 512; [1979] 2 All E.R. 668, CA ..... 947
- Leroux v Brown (1852) 12 C.B. 801 ..... 185
- Les Affreteurs Reunis SA v Leopold Walford (London) Ltd [1919] A.C. 801, HL; affirming [1918] 2 K.B. 498, CA ..... 646, 650
- Leslie Shipping Co v Westead [1921] 3 K.B. 420; (1921) 7 Ll. L. Rep. 251, KBD ..... 851
- Leslie v Fitzpatrick (1877) 3 Q.B.D. 229 ..... 544
- Lesters Leather & Skin Co Ltd v Home and Overseas Brokers Ltd (1948-49) 82 Ll. L. Rep. 202; 64 T.L.R. 569, CA ..... 788, 953
- L'Estrange v F Graucob Ltd [1934] 2 K.B. 394, KBD ..... 216, 307
- Letts v Inland Revenue Commissioners [1957] 1 W.L.R. 201; [1956] 3 All E.R. 588, Ch D ..... 682
- Leven v Brougham (1909) 25 T.L.R. 265 ..... 554
- Lever v Koffler [1901] 1 Ch. 543, Ch D ..... 184
- Levett v Barclays Bank plc [1995] 1 W.L.R. 1260; [1995] 2 All E.R. 615, QBD ..... 398
- Levey & Co v Goldberg [1922] 1 K.B. 688, KBD ..... 103
- Levison v Farin [1978] 2 All E.R. 1149, QBD ..... 958, 980
- Levison v Patent Steam Carpet Cleaning Co [1978] Q.B. 69; [1977] 3 W.L.R. 90, CA ... 216, 224, 226, 232, 233, 241, 243, 422
- Levita's Case See International Contract Co Re
- Levy v Berk (1886) 2 T.L.R. 898 ..... 773
- Levy v Goldhill [1917] 2 Ch. 297, Ch D ..... 741
- Levy v Sale (1877) 37 L.T. 709 ..... 568
- Levy v Warburton (1901) 70 L.J.K.B. 708 ..... 525
- Lewis v Averay (No.1) [1972] 1 Q.B. 198; [1971] 3 W.L.R. 603; [1971] 3 All E.R. 907; 115 S.J. 755, CA ..... 299, 300, 301, 305, 310, 321
- Lewis v Clay (1897) 67 L.J.Q.B. 224 ..... 329
- Lewis v Lord Lechmere (1722) 10 Mod. 503 ..... 1021

Lewis v Read (1845) 13 M. & W. 834 .....	722	Lipkin Gorman v Karpnale Ltd [1991] 2 A.C. 548; [1991] 3 W.L.R. 10, HL .....	70, 85, 86, 133, 151, 520, 522, 523, 529, 535, 536, 537, 538, 1053
Lewis Emanuel & Son Ltd v Sammut [1959] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 629, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	838, 866, 870	Lips, The See President of India v Lips Maritime Corp .....
Leyland Daf Ltd, Re [1994] 4 All. E.R. 300 ....	18	Lipton Ltd v Ford [1917] 2 K.B. 647, KBD ....	876
Leyland DAF Ltd v Automotive Products plc [1993] B.C.C. 389; [1994] 1 B.C.L.C. 245, CA .....	406, 774	Lister Ex p. Pyke, Re; sub nom. Pyke, Ex p. (1878) L.R. 8 Ch. D. 754, CA .....	528
Libyan Arab Foreign Bank v Bankers Trust [1989] Q.B. 728; [1989] 3 W.L.R. 314, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	452, 753, 888, 890, 893	Lister v Romford Ice and Cold Storage Co Ltd [1957] A.C. 555; [1957] 2 W.L.R. 158, HL .....	206, 209, 210, 436, 744, 748
Libyaville, The See Oceanic Freighters Corp v Reederei und Schiffahrts GmbH .....		Liston v Owners of the SS Carpathian [1915] 2 K.B. 42, KBD .....	97
Licenses Insurance Corporation v Lawson (1896) 12 T.L.R. 501 .....	171	Litsian Pride, The [1985] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 437 .....	373
Liebman v Rosenthal 57 N.Y.S. 2d 875 (1945) .....	492	Litster v Forth Dry Dock and Engineering Co Ltd [1990] 1 A.C. 546; [1989] 2 W.L.R. 634, HL .....	267, 704, 845
Liesbosch, The [1933] A.C. 449; [1933] All E.R. Rep. 144, HL .....	975	Little v Courage Ltd (1995) 70 P. & C.R. 469; The Times , January 6, 1995, CA ...	38, 61, 66, 153, 205, 206, 811
Lilley v Rankin (1886) 56 L.J.Q.B. 248 .....	527	Little v Poole (1829) 9 B. & C. 192 .....	433
Lilly, Wilson & Co v Smales, Eeles & Co [1892] 1 Q.B. 456, QBD .....	739	Littlewood v Shee (1831) 2 B. & Ad. 811 ....	79
Lim Foo Yong v Collector of Land Revenue [1963] 1 W.L.R. 295; [1963] 1 All E.R. 186, PC (Mal) .....	957	Littlewoods Organisation Ltd v Harris [1977] 1 W.L.R. 1472; [1978] 1 All E.R. 1026, CA .....	457, 461, 508
Lim Teng Huan v Ang Swee Chuan [1992] 1 W.L.R. 113; (1992) 64 P. & C.R. 233, PC (HK) .....	143	Liverpool Borough Bank v Turner (1860) 2 D.F. & J. 502 .....	514
Limpus v London General Omnibus Co (1862) 1 Hurl. & C. 526 .....	717	Liverpool City Council v Irwin [1977] A.C. 239; [1976] 2 W.L.R. 562, HL ....	203, 208, 210
Linck, Moeller & Co v Jameson & Co (1885) 2 T.L.R. 206 .....	727	Liverpool Corporation v Wright (1859) 28 L.J.Ch. 868 .....	698
Lincoln v Hayman [1982] 1 W.L.R. 488; [1982] R.T.R. 336, CA, QBD .....	981	Liversidge v Broadbent (1859) 4 H. & N. 603 .....	672, 673
Linden Gardens Trust Ltd v Lenesta Sludge Disposals Ltd [1994] 1 A.C. 85; [1993] 3 W.L.R. 408, HL .....	591, 592, 594, 595, 596, 597, 598, 599, 600, 601, 602, 606, 654, 693, 694, 701, 839	Llanelly Railway & Dock Co v L & NW Railway (1875) L.R. 7 H.L. 550 .....	749
Lindenau v Desborough (1828) 8 B. & C. 586 .....	336	Lloyd v Johnson (1798) 1 B. & P. 340 .....	444
Lindrea, Re (1913) 1098 L.T. 623 .....	183	Lloyd v Murphy 153 P. 2d. 47 (1944) ...	895, 901
Lindsay Petroleum Co v Hurd (1874) L.R. 5 P.C. 221 .....	383, 385	Lloyd v Popely [2001] C.L.Y. 743 .....	485
Lingen v Simpson (1824) 1 S. & S. 600 .....	1023	Lloyd v Stanbury [1971] 1 W.L.R. 535; [1971] 2 All E.R. 267, Ch D .....	322, 940, 942, 969
Link Stores Ltd v Harrow LBC [2001] 1 W.L.R. 1479; (2001) 165 J.P. 575, QBD (Admin Ct) .....	13	Lloyd's v Harper (1880) 16 Ch.D. 290 ....	39, 40, 592, 646, 648
Linnett Bay Shipping Co Ltd v Patraicos Gulf Shipping Co SA ( The Al Tawfiq ) [1984] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 598, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	838, 852	Lloyds and Scottish Finance Ltd v Modern Cars and Caravans (Kingston) Ltd [1966] 1 Q.B. 764; [1964] 3 W.L.R. 859, CA .....	979
Linz v Electric Wire Co of Palestine [1948] A.C. 371; [1948] 1 All E.R. 604, PC (Pal) .....	1052	Lloyds Bank Ltd v Bundy [1975] Q.B. 326; [1974] 3 W.L.R. 501, CA .....	74, 407, 410, 414, 418, 420, 421, 422
Lion Laboratories Ltd v Evans [1985] Q.B. 526; [1984] 3 W.L.R. 539, CA .....	455	Lloyds Bank Ltd, Re; sub nom. Bomze v Bomze; Lederman v Bomze [1931] 1 Ch. 289, Ch D .....	412
Lion Nathan Ltd v CC Bottlers Ltd [1996] 1 W.L.R. 1438; [1996] 2 B.C.L.C. 371, PC (NZ) .....	361	Lloyds Bank plc v Burd Pearse [2001] EWCA Civ 366; [2001] Lloyd's Rep. P.N. 452, CA .....	939
Lion, The See Mayor (t/a Granville Coaches) v P&O Ferries Ltd .....		Lloyds Bank plc v Crosse & Crosse See Lloyds Bank plc v Burd Pearse .....
		Lloyds Bank plc v Egremont [1990] 2 F.L.R. 351; [1990] F.C.R. 770, CA .....	390, 413
		Lloyds Bank plc v Independent Insurance Ltd [2000] Q.B. 110 .....	756

- Lloyds Bank plc v Waterhouse* [1993] 2 F.L.R. 97; (1991) 10 Tr. L.R. 161, CA ..... 309, 326, 327, 328, 329
- Lloyds Bank plc v Carrick* [1996] 4 All E.R. 630; [1996] 2 F.L.R. 600, CA ..... 136, 140
- Lloyds Bank plc v Rosset* [1991] 1 A.C. 107; [1990] 2 W.L.R. 867, HL ..... 135, 141, 165, 166
- Lloyds Bank v Swiss Bankverein* (1912) 107 L.T. 309; 108 L.T. 143 ..... 717
- Load v Green* (1846) 15 M. & W. 216 ..... 382
- Locabail International Finance Ltd v Agroexport and Atlanta (UK) Ltd (The Sea Hawk)* [1986] 1 W.L.R. 657; [1986] 1 All E.R. 901, CA ..... 1029, 1041
- Lock International plc v Beswick* [1989] 1 W.L.R. 1268; [1989] 3 All E.R. 373, Ch D ..... 455, 1034, 1041
- Lock v Bell* [1931] 1 Ch. 35, Ch D ..... 828, 831
- Locker & Woolf Ltd v Western Australian Insurance Co Ltd* [1936] 1 K.B. 408; (1936) 54 Ll. L. Rep. 211, CA ..... 336
- Lockett v AM Charles Ltd* [1938] 4 All E.R. 170 ..... 585, 593, 839
- Lockwood v Cooper* [1903] 2 K.B. 428, KBD ..... 515
- Lodder v Slowey* (1901) 20 N.Z.L.R. 321 ..... 1062
- Lodge v National Union Investment Co Ltd* [1907] 1 Ch. 300, Ch D ..... 491
- L'Office Cherifien des Phosphates Unitramp SA v Yamashita-Shinnihon Steamship Co Ltd (The Boucraa)* [1994] 1 A.C. 486; [1994] 2 W.L.R. 39, HL ..... 10, 823
- Loftus v Roberts* (1902) 18 T.L.R. 532 ..... 57
- Logan v Le Mesurier* (1846) 6 Moo.P.C. 116 ..... 918
- Logicrose Ltd v Southend United Football Club Ltd (No.2)* [1988] 1 W.L.R. 1256; The Times, August 4, 1988, Ch D ..... 747
- Lombank Ltd v Excell* [1964] 1 Q.B. 415; [1963] 3 W.L.R. 700, CA ..... 1000, 1006
- Lombank v Kennedy and Lombank v Crossan* [1961] N.I. 192 ..... 1005
- Lombard North Central plc v Butterworth* [1987] Q.B. 527; [1987] 2 W.L.R. 7, CA ... 791, 854, 855
- Lombard North Central plc v Stobart* (1990) 9 Tr. L.R. 105; [1990] C.C.L.R. 53, CA ... 116, 403
- Lombard Tricity Finance v Paton* [1989] 1 All E.R. 918; (1989) 8 Tr. L.R. 129, CA ..... 58, 97
- London & Birmingham Railway v Winter* (1840) Cr. & Ph. 57 ..... 196
- London & Clydesbank Properties v HM Investment Co* [1993] E.G.C.S. 63 ..... 108
- London and Harrogate Securities Ltd v Pitts* [1976] 1 W.L.R. 1063; [1976] 3 All E.R. 809, CA ..... 429, 434
- London and North Western Railway Co v Neilson* [1922] 2 A.C. 263, HL ..... 229, 230
- London and Northern Bank Ex p. Jones, Re* [1900] 1 Ch. 220, Ch D ..... 24
- London and Northern Estates Co v Schlesinger* [1916] 1 K.B. 20, KBD ..... 894
- London and Regional Investments Ltd v TBI plc* [2002] EWCA Civ 355, CA .... 51, 55, 61, 139
- London and South of England Building Society v Stone* [1983] 1 W.L.R. 1242; [1983] 3 All E.R. 105, CA ..... 978
- London Assurance Co v Mansel* (1879) L.R. 11 Ch. D. 363, Ch D ... 337, 353, 369, 373, 395
- London Baggage Co (Charing Cross) Ltd v Railtrack plc (No.1)* [2000] L. & T.R. 439; [2000] E.G.C.S. 57; (2000) 80 P. & C.R. D38, Ch D ..... 172
- London CC v Allen* [1914] 3 K.B. 642, CA ..... 621
- London CC v Att-Gen* [1902] A.C. 165 ..... 564
- London Chatham and Dover Railway Co v South Eastern Railway Co* [1893] A.C. 429, HL ..... 994, 998
- London Congregational Union Inc v Hariss & Harriss* [1988] 1 All E.R. 15; 35 B.L.R. 58, CA; reversing in part [1985] 1 All E.R. 335, QBD ..... 611, 961
- London County Commercial Reinsurance Office Ltd, Re* [1922] 2 Ch. 67; (1922) 10 Ll. L. Rep. 370, Ch D ..... 513, 522, 1057
- London County Freehold and Leasehold Properties Ltd v Berkeley Property Investment Co* [1936] 2 All E.R. 1039, CA ..... 344
- London County Territorial and Auxiliary Forces Association v Nichols* [1949] 1 K.B. 35; [1948] 2 All E.R. 432; 64 T.L.R. 438; [1948] L.J.R. 1600; 92 S.J. 455, CA .... 334, 403
- London Drugs Ltd v Kuehne & Nagle International Ltd* [1992] 3 S.C.R. 299 ... 590, 630, 631, 655, 663
- London Export Corp v Jubilee Coffee Roasting Co* [1958] 1 W.L.R. 661; [1958] 2 All E.R. 411, CA ..... 243
- London General Omnibus Co Ltd (LGOC Ltd) v Halloway* [1912] 2 K.B. 72, CA ..... 398
- London Hamburg and Continental Exchange Bank, Re; sub nom. Emmerson's Case* (1865-66) L.R. 1 Ch. App. 433, CA in Chancery ..... 289
- London Holeproof Hosiery Co Ltd v Padmore* (1928) 44 T.L.R. 499 ..... 304
- London Line, The* [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 456 ..... 238
- London Regional Transport v Wimpey Group Services Ltd* (1987) 53 P. & C.R. 356; [1986] 2 E.G.L.R. 41, Ch D ..... 323
- London Transport Executive v Clark* [1981] I.C.R. 355 ..... 846
- London Wine Co (Shippers), Re* [1986] P.C.C. 121 ..... 1023, 1025
- Long v Lloyd* [1958] 1 W.L.R. 753; [1958] 2 All E.R. 402, CA ..... 375, 379, 383, 384
- Long v Millar* (1879) 4 C.P.D. 450 ..... 184
- Longden v British Coal Corp* [1998] A.C. 653; [1997] 3 W.L.R. 1336, HL ..... 980

Longlands Farm, Re; sub nom. Alford v Superior Developments Ltd [1968] 3 All E.R. 552; 20 P. & C.R. 25, Ch D .....	829	Lowe v Hope [1970] Ch. 94; [1969] 3 W.L.R. 582, Ch D .....	1011, 1012
Longman v Blount (1896) 12 T.L.R. 520 .....	353	Lowe v Peers (1768) 2 Burr. 2225 .....	442
Longmate v Ledger (1860) 2 Giff. 157 .....	420	Lowry v Bourdieu (1780) 2 Doug. K.B. 468 ....	513
Longstaff v Birtles [2001] EWCA Civ 1219; [2002] 1 W.L.R. 470, CA .....	412, 419, 423	Lowson v Coombes [1999] Ch. 373; [1999] 2 W.L.R. 720, CA .....	499
Lonrho Exports Ltd v Export Credits Guarantee Department [1999] Ch. 158; [1998] 3 W.L.R. 394, Ch D .....	696	Lowther v Lowther (1806) 3 Ves. 95 .....	1022
Lonrho Ltd v Shell Petroleum Co Ltd (No.2) [1982] A.C. 173; [1981] 3 W.L.R. 33, HL; affirming [1981] Com. L.R. 74, CA .....	205	Lucas v Beale (1851) 10 C.B. 739 .....	732
Lonrho plc v Al-Fayed (No.2) [1992] 1 W.L.R. 1; [1991] 4 All E.R. 961, Ch D .....	336, 371	Lucas v Dixon (1889) L.R. 22 Q.B.D. 357, CA .....	184
Lonsdale & Thompson Ltd v Black Arrow Group plc [1993] Ch. 361; [1993] 2 W.L.R. 815, Ch D .....	667	Lucas v Moncrieff (1905) 21 T.L.R. 683 .....	700
Looker v Law Union & Rock Insurance Co Ltd [1928] 1 K.B. 554, KBD .....	44	Lucas v Ogden [1988] 32 E.G. 45; [1988] 2 E.G.L.R. 176, CA .....	933
Lord Advocate v Scotsman Publications Ltd [1990] 1 A.C. 812; [1989] 3 W.L.R. 358, HL .....	456	Lucena v Craufurd (1806) 2 B. & P.N.R. 269 .....	516
Lord Strathcona Steamship Co Ltd v Dominion Coal Co Ltd [1926] A.C. 108; (1925) 23 Ll. L. Rep. 145, PC (Can) .....	621, 622, 624	Lucille, The See C-Trade of Geneva SA v Uni-Ocean Lines Pte of Singapore
Lord Strathcona, The (No.2); Old Colony Trust Co v Owners of Lord Strathcona; Dominion Coal Co v Lord Strathcona SS Co Ltd [1925] P. 143; (1925) 22 Ll. L. Rep. 368, PDAD .....	623	Luckett v Wood (1908) 24 T.L.R. 617 .....	520
Lordgate Properties v Balcombe (1985) 274 E.G. 493 .....	741	Lucy, The See Atlantic Lines & Navigation Co Inc v Hallam Ltd
Lordsvale Finance plc v Bank of Zambia [1996] Q.B. 752; [1996] 3 W.L.R. 688, QBD .....	1001	Ludditt v Ginger Coote Airways [1947] A.C. 233; [1947] 1 All E.R. 328, PC (Can) .....	244
Losinjaska Plovidba v Transco Overseas Ltd (The Orjula) [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 395; The Times , July 18, 1995, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	610, 613	Luganda v Services Hotels [1969] 2 Ch. 209; [1969] 2 W.L.R. 1056, CA .....	1034
Lotus Cars Ltd v Southampton Cargo Handling plc (The Rigoletto) [2000] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 705; [2000] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 532, CA .....	98, 629, 634, 635, 641	LUK Leamington Ltd v Whitnash plc [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 6, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	325
Lound v Grimwade (1888) L.R. 39 Ch. D. 605, Ch D .....	446, 504, 506	Lukoil-Kalingradmorneft plc v Tata Ltd (No.2) [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 129, CA; affirming [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 365, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	642, 707, 714
Love and Stewart Ltd v S Instone & Co Ltd (1917) 33 T.L.R. 457 .....	19, 49	Lumley v Gye (1853) 2 El. & Bl. 216 .....	619
Lovell and Christmas v Beauchamp [1894] A.C. 607, HL .....	546, 571	Lumley v Ravenscroft [1895] 1 Q.B. 683 .....	549, 1037
Lovell and Christmas v Wall (1911) 104 L.T. 84 .....	197, 324	Lumley v Wagner (1852) 1 De G.M. & G. 604 .....	544, 1042, 1043, 1044
Lovelock v Franklyn (1846) 8 Q.B. 371 .....	834	Lummus Co v East African Harbours Corporation [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 317, HC (Ken) .....	633
Lovelock (FJR) v Exportles [1968] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 163, CA .....	51	Lumsden's Case (1868) L.R. 4 Ch.App. 31 .....	546
Low v Bouverie [1891] 3 Ch. 82, CA .....	107, 112, 113, 119, 403	Luna, The [1920] P. 22; (1919) 1 Ll. L. Rep. 475, PDAD .....	217
Low v Fry (1935) 152 L.T. 585 .....		Lupton v Potts [1969] 1 W.L.R. 1749; [1969] 3 All E.R. 1083, Ch D .....	203
Lowe v Dixon (1885) 16 Q.B.D. 455 .....	574	Lusograin Comercio Internacional de Cereas Limitada v Bunge AG [1986] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 654, QBD (Comm Ct) ...	844, 960, 1004
Lowe v Griffith (1835) 4 L.J.C.P. 94 .....	546	Lusty v Finsbury Securities 58 B.L.R. 66, CA .....	1062
Lowe v Guise [2002] EWCA Civ 197; [2002] Q.B. 1369, CA .....	606	Lutetian, The See Tradax Export SA v Dorada Compania Naviera SA of Panama
		Luxmoore-May v Messenger May Baverstock [1990] 1 W.L.R. 1009; [1990] 1 All E.R. 1067, CA .....	293, 841, 953
		Luxmore v Clifton (1867) 17 L.T. 460 .....	130
		Luxor (Eastbourne) Ltd v Cooper [1941] A.C. 108, HL .....	40, 202, 205, 213, 742, 744
		Lyle-Meller v Lewis (A) & Co (Westminster) [1956] 1 W.L.R. 29; [1956] 1 All E.R. 247, CA .....	335
		Lyne-Pirkis v Jones [1969] 1 W.L.R. 1293; [1969] 3 All E.R. 738, CA .....	459, 461
		Lyth v Ault (1852) 7 Ex. 669 .....	156

- Lyus v Prowsa Developments Ltd* [1982] 1 W.L.R. 1044; [1982] 2 All E.R. 953, Ch D ..... 607, 623, 648, 670, 1038
- M Vatan and M Ceyhan, The See CT Bowring Reinsurance Ltd v Baxter*
- M & S Drapers (A Firm) v Reynolds* [1957] 1 W.L.R. 9; [1956] 3 All E.R. 814, CA .... 456, 460
- M/S Aswan Engineering Establishment Co v Lupdine Ltd* [1987] 1 W.L.R. 1; [1987] 1 All E.R. 135, CA ..... 553, 613, 616
- McAlpine Humberoak Ltd v McDermott International Inc (No.1)* 58 B.L.R. 1; 28 Con. L.R. 76, CA ..... 924
- MacAndrew v Chapple* (1886) L.R. 1 C.P. 643 ..... 795
- McArdle, Re* [1951] Ch. 669; [1951] 1 All E.R. 905, CA ..... 78, 688
- McAuley v Bristol City Council* [1992] Q.B. 134; [1991] 3 W.L.R. 968, CA .... 202, 203, 204, 207, 210, 321
- McCall v Abelesz* [1976] Q.B. 585; [1976] 2 W.L.R. 151, CA ..... 592, 926, 936, 988
- McCall v Australian Meat Co Ltd* (1870) 19 W.R. 188 ..... 750
- McCarmley v Cammell Laird Shipbuilders Ltd* [1990] 1 W.L.R. 963; [1990] 1 All E.R. 854, CA ..... 648, 981
- McCarey v Associated Newspapers Ltd* [1965] 2 Q.B. 86; [1965] 2 W.L.R. 45, CA ..... 988
- McCausland v Duncan Lawrie Ltd* [1997] 1 W.L.R. 38; [1996] 4 All E.R. 995, CA ... 188, 189, 190, 198
- McClaren v Home Office* [1990] I.C.R. 824; [1990] I.R.L.R. 338, CA ..... 170, 1030
- McCollom v Wrightson* [1968] A.C. 522; [1968] 2 W.L.R. 578, HL ..... 518
- McConnel v Wright* [1903] 1 Ch. 546, CA .... 360, 363
- McConnell's Claim, Re* [1901] 1 Ch. 728 ..... 824
- McConville v Barclays Bank plc* The Times, June 30, 1993, QBD ..... 993
- McCullagh v Lane Fox and Partners Ltd* 49 Con. L.R. 124; [1996] P.N.L.R. 205, CA ..... 260, 339, 340, 345, 348, 349, 740
- McCutcheon v David MacBrayne Ltd* [1964] 1 W.L.R. 125; [1964] 1 All E.R. 430, HL .... 204, 216, 220
- McDevitt v Stokes* 192 S.W. (1917) ..... 97
- McDonald v Denys Lascelles Ltd* (1933) 48 C.L.R. 457 ..... 850, 911, 1011, 1012
- Macdonald v Green* [1951] 1 K.B. 594; [1950] 2 All E.R. 1240, CA ..... 531
- Macdonald v Longbottom* (1859) 1 E. & E. 977 ..... 199
- McDougall v Aeromarine of Emsworth* [1958] 1 W.L.R. 1126; [1958] 3 All E.R. 431, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 754, 760, 799
- McDowell v Fraser* (1779) 1 Dougl. 247 ..... 336
- McEllistrim v Ballymacelligott Cooperative Agricultural and Dairy Society Ltd* [1919] A.C. 548, HL. (UK-Irl) ..... 439, 462, 465
- McEllistrim's Case* See McEllistrim v Ballymacelligott Cooperative Agricultural and Dairy Society Ltd
- McEvoy v Belfast Banking Co Ltd* [1935] A.C. 24, HL ..... 578, 652, 726
- McFarlane v Daniell* (1938) S.R. (N.S.W.) 337 ..... 505
- McFarlane v F.E. Caledonia Ltd* (No.2) [1995] 1 W.L.R. 366; [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 535, QBD ..... 431, 697
- McFarlane v Kent* [1965] 1 W.L.R. 1019; [1965] 2 All E.R. 376, Ch D ..... 459
- McFarlane v Tayside Health Board* [2000] 2 A.C. 59; [1999] 3 W.L.R. 1301, HL ..... 478
- MacFisheries Ltd v Harrison* (1924) 93 L.J.K.B. 811 ..... 718
- McGrath v Shah* (1989) 57 P. & C.R. 452; The Times, October 22, 1987, Ch D ..... 386
- McGregor v Randall* [1984] 1 All E.R. 1092; [1984] S.T.C. 223, Ch D ..... 957
- McGregor v McGregor* (1888) L.R. 21 Q.B.D. 424, CA ..... 445
- McGregor v Michael Taylor & Co* [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 468, QBD (Merc Ct) ..... 415
- McInerny v Lloyds Bank Ltd* [1974] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 246, CA ..... 335, 339, 340, 349
- McInnes v Onslow Fane* [1978] 1 W.L.R. 1520; [1978] 3 All E.R. 211, Ch D ..... 467
- MacJordan Construction Ltd v Bookmount Erostin Ltd* [1992] B.C.L.C. 350; 56 B.L.R. 1, CA ..... 620
- Mackender v Feldia AG* [1967] 2 Q.B. 590; [1967] 2 W.L.R. 119, CA ..... 481
- Mackenzie v Coulson* (1869) L.R. 8 Eq. 368, Ct of Chancery ..... 321, 324
- MacKenzie v Rees* (1941) 65 C.L.R. 1 ..... 860
- MacKenzie v Royal Bank of Canada* [1934] A.C. 468, PC (Can) .... 333, 335, 380, 398, 412
- McKillop v McMullan* [1979] N.I. 85 ..... 66
- McLaughlin v Gentles* (1919) 51 D.L.R. 383 ..... 706
- Maclean v Dunn* (1828) 4 Bing. 722 ..... 726, 826
- McLean v Workers Union* [1929] 1 Ch. 602, Ch D ..... 243
- McLeish v Amoo-Guttfried & Co* The Times, October 13, 1993 ..... 992
- Macloed v Ker* 1965 S.C. 253 ..... 372
- McLory v Post Office* [1993] 1 All E.R. 457; [1992] I.C.R. 758, Ch D .... 203, 204, 207, 833, 956
- Macmahon v Macmahon* [1913] 1 I.R. 428 ..... 441
- McManus v Bark* (1870) L.R. 5 Ex.65 ..... 125
- McManus v Cooke* (1887) L.R. 35 Ch. D. 681, Ch D ..... 185
- McManus v Fortescue* [1907] 2 K.B. 1, CA .... 11, 739
- McMaster v Byrne* [1952] 1 All E.R. 1362; [1952] W.N. 239, PC (Can) ..... 412

Macmillan v AW Knott Becker Scott Ltd; Abrahams v Macmillan [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 98, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	610, 983
McMillan v Singh (1984) 17 H.L.R. 120 .....	936
McNealy v Pennine Insurance Co [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 18; [1978] R.T.R. 285, CA .....	709, 841
McNerney v Lambeth LBC [1989] N.L.J.R. 114 .....	984
Macpherson v Lambeth LBC [1988] I.R.L.R. 470 .....	821
McPherson v Watt (1877) 3 App.Cas. 254 .....	745
McRae v Commonwealth Disposals Commis- sion (1951) 84 C.L.R. 377 .....	292, 295, 296, 297, 298, 940, 941, 942, 943
MacRobertson-Miller Airline Service v Com- missioner of State Taxation (1975) 8 A.L.R. 131 .....	14
Macara (James) Ltd v Barclay [1945] K.B. 148, CA; [1944] 2 All E.R. 31 .....	897, 1008
Macaura v Northern Assurance Co Ltd [1925] A.C. 619, HL .....	516
Mace v Rutland House Textiles Ltd (1999) 96(46) L.S.G. 37; (2000) 144 S.J.L.B. 7, Ch D .....	324
Macedo v Stroud [1922] 2 A.C. 330, PC (Trin) .....	158, 685
Macedonia Maritime Co, Alconis Maritime Co, Kozani Maritime Co and Vassiliki Maritime Co v Austin & Pickersgill (The Fayrouz I-IV) [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 73, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	198
Mack Trucks (Britain) Ltd, Re [1967] 1 W.L.R. 780; [1967] 1 All E.R. 977, Ch D .....	693
Mackay v Dick (1881) 6 App.Cas. 251 .....	63, 65, 66, 1016
Mackie v European Assurance Society (1869) 21 L.T. 102 .....	304
Macro v Thompson (No.2) [1996] B.C.C. 707; [1997] 1 B.C.L.C. 626, CA .....	313
Maddison v Alderson (1883) 8 App.Cas. 467 .....	116, 184, 186
Madeleine, The See Cheikh Boutros Selim El- Khouri v Ceylon Shipping Lines
Maersk Colombo, The See Southampton Con- tainer Terminals Ltd v Hansa Schiffahrts GmbH
Maes Finance Ltd v AI. Phillips & Co Tim- mes, March 25, 1997 .....	986
Mafo v Adams [1970] 1 Q.B. 548; [1970] 2 W.L.R. 72, CA .....	936, 989
Magee v Pennine Insurance Co [1969] 2 Q.B. 507; [1969] 2 W.L.R. 1278, CA .....	291, 318, 321
Maharaj v Chand [1986] A.C. 898; [1986] 3 W.L.R. 440, PC (Fiji) .....	106, 110, 112, 136
Mahesan S/O Thambiah v Malaysia Govern- ment Officers' Cooperative Housing Soci- ety [1979] A.C. 374; [1978] 2 W.L.R. 444, PC (Mal) .....	747
Mahkutai, The [1996] A.C. 650; [1996] 3 W.L.R. 1, PC (HK) .....	98, 589, 607, 628, 630, 631, 632, 633, 634, 642, 652
Mahmoud and Isphani, Re [1921] 2 K.B. 716; (1921) 6 Ll. L. Rep. 344, CA .....	434, 486, 489, 490, 493
Mahon v Ainscough [1952] 1 All E.R. 337; [1952] W.N. 68, CA .....	353
Mahoney v Purnell [1996] 3 All E.R. 61; [1997] 1 F.L.R. 612, QBD .....	414, 419, 960
Mahony v East Holyford Mining Co Ltd (1874-75) L.R. 7 H.L. 869, HL (UK- Irl) .....	714
Mahony v Kekulé (1854) 14 C.B. 390 .....	733
Maine Spinning Co v Sutcliffe & Co (1918) L.J.K.B. 382 .....	879
Maira (No.2), The See Glafki Shipping Co SA v Pinos Shipping Co No.1
Maira (No.3), The [1990] 1 A.C. 637; [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 126 .....	204, 213, 983, 984
Maitland v Irving (1846) 15 Sim. 437 .....	427
Major v Major (1852) 1 Drew. 165 .....	130
Maktoum v South Lodge Flats The Times , April 22, 1980 .....	1009
Malcolm v Chancellor, Masters and Scholars of the University of Oxford The Times , December 19, 1990 .....	50, 55, 56, 992, 1032
Malcolm-Ellis (Liverpool) v American Elec- tronic Laboratories (1984) 134 N.L.J. 500, DC .....	851
Malhotra v Choudhury [1980] Ch. 52; [1978] 3 W.L.R. 825, CA .....	1048
Malik v Bank of Credit and Commerce Inter- national SA (In Liquidation) [1998] A.C. 20; [1997] 3 W.L.R. 95, HL .....	88, 206, 207, 208, 851, 967, 991, 992
Malik Co v Central European Trading [1974] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 279, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	65
Malins v Freeman (1837) 2 Keen 25 .....	316, 1027
Mallalieu v Hodgson (1851) 16 Q.B. 689 .....	432
Malloch v Aberdeen Corp (No.1) [1971] 1 W.L.R. 1578; [1971] 2 All E.R. 1278, HL .....	1030
Mallozzi v Carapelli SpA [1976] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 407, CA .....	60
Maloco v Littlewoods Organisation Ltd; Smith v Littlewoods Organisation Ltd [1987] A.C. 241; [1987] 2 W.L.R. 480, HL .....	616
Malone v Commissioner of Police of the Me- tropolis (No.1) [1980] Q.B. 49; [1978] 3 W.L.R. 936, CA .....	501
Malone v Commissioner of Police of the Me- tropolis (No.2) [1979] Ch. 344; [1979] 2 W.L.R. 700, Ch D .....	455
Malpas, Re [1985] Ch 42 .....	59
Malpas v London and South Western Railway Co (1865-66) L.R. 1 C.P. 336, CCP .....	193
Mamidoil-Jetoil Greek Petroleum Co SA v Okta Crude Oil Refinery AD (No.1) [2001] EWCA Civ 406; [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 193, CA .....	52, 56, 58, 60, 172

- Marnidol-Jetoil Greek Petroleum Co SA v Oka Crude Oil Refinery AD (Costs) [2002] EWHC 2462; [2003] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 42, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 800
- Mammoth Pine, The See Netherlands Insurance Co Est 1845 Ltd v Karl Ljungberg & Co AB
- Manatee Towing Co Ltd v Oceanbulk Maritime SA (The Bay Ridge) [1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 306; [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 227, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 17, 54, 169, 172
- Manbre Saccharine Co Ltd v Corn Products Co Ltd [1919] 1 K.B. 198, KBD ..... 871
- Manches v Trimborn (1946) 115 L.J.K.B. 305 ..... 557
- Manchester Brewery Co v Coombs [1901] 2 Ch. 608, Ch D ..... 678
- Manchester Diocesan Council of Education v Commercial & General Investments, Ltd [1970] 1 W.L.R. 241; [1969] 3 All E.R. 1593, Ch D ..... 31, 44
- Manchester Ship Canal Co v Manchester Racecourse Co [1901] 2 Ch. 37, CA ..... 1045
- Manchester Trust v Furness [1895] 2 Q.B. 539, CA ..... 620
- Mander v Evans [2001] 1 W.L.R. 2378; [2001] 3 All E.R. 811, Ch D ..... 351
- Mandla v Dowell Lee [1983] 2 A.C. 548; [1983] 2 W.L.R. 620, HL; reversing [1983] Q.B. 1, CA ..... 479
- Manigataununaigaz Oil Production Association v United World Trading Inc [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 617; The Times, February 24, 1995, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 323, 325
- Mangles v Dixon (1852) 3 H.L.C. 702 ..... 689
- Manifest Lipkowsky, The See Marcan Shipping (London) v Polish Steamship Co
- Manifest Shipping Co Ltd v Uni-Polaris Insurance Co Ltd (The Star Sea) [2001] UKHL 1; [2001] 2 W.L.R. 170; [2001] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 193 ..... 370, 373, 392, 396, 397, 400, 401
- Manila, The [1988] 3 All E.R. 843 ..... 814, 815, 837
- Mann v Edinburgh Northern Tramways Co [1893] A.C. 69, HL ..... 724
- Mann v Forrester (1814) 4 Camp. 60 ..... 730
- Mann v Nunn (1874) 30 L.T. 526 ..... 199, 200
- Mannai Investment Co Ltd v Eagle Star Life Assurance Co Ltd [1997] A.C. 749; [1997] 2 W.L.R. 945, HL ..... 197, 198
- Manser v Back (1848) 6 Hare 433 ..... 312
- Mansouri v Singh [1986] 1 W.L.R. 1393; [1986] 2 All E.R. 619, CA ..... 510, 511
- Mansukhani v Sharkey (1992) 24 H.L.R. 600; [1992] 33 E.G. 65, CA ..... 83
- Mantovani v Carapelli SpA [1980] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 375; 123 S.J. 568, CA; affirming [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 63, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 808
- Manubens v Leon [1919] 1 K.B. 208, KBD ..... 956
- Maple Flock Co Ltd v Universal Furniture Products (Wembley) Ltd [1934] 1 K.B. 148, CA ..... 773, 774
- Maran Road Saw Mill v Austin Taylor & Co See Ng Chee Chong, Ng Weng Chong, Ng Cheng and Ng Yew (A Firm t/a Maran Road Saw Mill) v Austin Taylor & Co
- Maratha Envoy, The See Federal Commerce & Navigation Co Ltd v Tradax Export SA
- Marc Rich & Co AG v Bishop Rock Marine Co Ltd (The Nicholas H) [1996] A.C. 211; [1995] 3 W.L.R. 227, HL ..... 348, 608, 612, 613
- Marc Rich & Co AG v Portman [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 225, CA ..... 395, 396
- Marcan Shipping (London) v Polish Steamship Co (The Manifest Lipkowsky) [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 138; The Times, February 16, 1989, CA ..... 201, 202, 205, 646, 743
- March v Culpepper (1628) Cro.Car. 70 ..... 85
- March Cabaret Club & Casino v London Assurance; March Cabaret Club & Casino v Thompson & Bryan [1975] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 169, QBD ..... 397, 398
- Marchington v Vernon (1786) 1 B. & P. 101.n. .... 588
- Marcic v Thames Water Utilities Ltd (Damages) [2002] Q.B. 1003; [2001] 4 All E.R. 326, QBD (T&CC) ..... 1041, 1046
- Marco Productions Ltd v Pagola [1945] K.B. 111, KBD ..... 1040
- Mardorf Peach & Co v Attica Sea Carriers Corp of Liberia (The Laconia) [1977] A.C. 850; [1977] 2 W.L.R. 286, HL ..... 103, 107, 108, 373, 778, 779, 781, 812, 814, 825, 1022
- Maredelanto Compania Naviera SA v Bergbau-Handel GmbH (The Mihalis Angelos) [1971] 1 Q.B. 164; [1970] 3 W.L.R. 601, CA ..... 332, 769, 779, 791, 826, 857, 963, 964
- Margarine Union GmbH v Cambay Prince Steamship Co (The Wear Breeze) [1969] 1 Q.B. 219; [1967] 3 W.L.R. 1569, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 614
- Margaronis Navigation Agency Ltd v Henry W Peabody & Co of London Ltd [1965] 1 Q.B. 300; [1964] 3 W.L.R. 111, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 245
- Maria D, The See Elpis Maritime Co v Marti Chartering Co
- Marina Shipping v Laughton (The Antama) [1982] Q.B. 1127; [1982] 2 W.L.R. 569 ..... 585
- Marine Star, The See Coastal (Bermuda) Petroleum Ltd v VTT Vulcan Petroleum SA (No.2)
- Marinor, The See Noranda Inc v Barton (Time Charter) Ltd
- Mariola Marine Corp v Lloyd's Register of Shipping (The Morning Watch) [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 547; [1991] E.C.C. 103, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 338, 347, 348

Maritime National Fish Ltd v Ocean Trawlers Ltd [1935] A.C. 524; (1935) 51 Ll. L. Rep. 299, PC (Can) ..... 878, 886, 890, 906, 907, 908
Maritime Winner, The See Thai-Europe Tapiooca Service Ltd v Seine Navigation Co Inc
Mark Rowlands Ltd v Berni Inns Ltd [1986] Q.B. 211; [1985] 3 W.L.R. 964, CA .... 667, 981
Markappa Inc v NW Spratt & Son (The Arta) [1985] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 534, CA ..... 339
Marles v Philip Trant & Sons Ltd (No.2) [1954] 1 Q.B. 29; [1953] 2 W.L.R. 564, CA ..... 437
Marley v Forward Trust Group [1986] I.C.R. 891; [1986] I.R.L.R. 369, CA ..... 214
Marley Tile Co v Johnson [1982] I.R.L.R. 75 ..... 459
Marlow v Pitfield (1719) 1 P.Wms. 558 ..... 543
Marr v Tumulty 175 N.E. 356 (1931) ..... 378
Marriott v Oxford and District Cooperative Society (No.2) [1970] 1 Q.B. 186; [1969] 3 W.L.R. 984, CA ..... 842
Marrison v Bell [1939] 2 K.B. 187, CA ..... 875
Marseille Fret SA v D Oltmann Schiffahrts GmbH & Co KG (The Trado) [1982] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 157; [1981] Com. L.R. 277, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 99, 110
Marsh v National Autistic Society [1993] I.C.R. 453 ..... 749, 845, 846, 1030
Marshall, Re [1920] 1 Ch. 284 ..... 558
Marshall v Berridge (1881-82) L.R. 19 Ch. D. 233, CA ..... 183
Marshall v Glanvill [1917] 2 K.B. 87, KBD .... 888
Marshall v Harland & Wolff Ltd [1972] 1 W.L.R. 899; [1972] 2 All E.R. 715, NIRC ..... 875
Marshall v NM Financial Management Ltd [1997] 1 W.L.R. 1527; [1997] I.C.R. 1065, CA ..... 151, 458, 463, 504, 505, 741
Marshall v Rubypoint Ltd (1997) 29 H.L.R. 850; [1997] 1 E.G.L.R. 69, CA ..... 976
Marshall (Cambridge) v Hamblin [1994] I.C.R. 362; [1994] I.R.L.R. 260, EAT .... 833
Marston Construction Co Ltd v Kigass Ltd 46 B.I.R. 109; (1990) 15 Con. L.R. 116, QBD
Marston Excelsior Ltd v Arbuckle Smith & Co Ltd [1971] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 70, QBD ..... 215
Martell v Consett Iron Co Ltd [1955] Ch. 363; [1955] 2 W.L.R. 463, CA ..... 697
Martin v Gale (1876) 4 Ch D. 428 ..... 543
Martin v Hewson (1855) 10 Exch. 737 ..... 526
Martin v Pycroft (1852) 2 D.M. & G. 785 .... 183, 196, 1028
Martin-Baker Aircraft Co v Canadian Flight Equipment [1955] 2 Q.B. 556; [1955] 3 W.L.R. 212, QBD ..... 749
Martindale v Smith (1841) 1 Q.B. 389 ... 826, 1056
Martyn v Hind (1776) Cowp. 437 ..... 588
Marvin v Marvin 557 P.2d 106 (1976) ..... 444
Marwalt, Re [1992] B.C.C. 32 ..... 679
Maryland Casualty Co v Matthews 209 F.Supp. 822 (1962) ..... 92
Mascall v Mascall (1985) 50 P. & C.R. 119; (1984) 81 L.S.G. 2218, CA ..... 686
Maskell v Horner [1915] 3 K.B. 106, CA ..... 90, 407
Maskell v Ivory [1970] Ch. 502; [1970] 2 W.L.R. 844, Ch D ..... 1021
Mason v Burningham [1949] 2 K.B. 545; [1949] 2 All E.R. 134, CA ..... 969, 1057
Mason v Provident Clothing & Supply Co Ltd See Provident Clothing & Supply Co Ltd v Mason
Mason v Uxbridge Boat Centre [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 592, QBD ..... 631
Massalia, The [1961] 2 Q.B. 278 ..... 868, 1064
Massey v Midland Bank plc [1995] 1 All E.R. 929; [1994] 2 F.L.R. 342, CA ..... 426
Master Stelios, The See Monvia Motorship Corp v Keppel Shipyard (Private) Ltd
Master v Miller (1791) 4 T.R. 320 ..... 672
Mata K, The See Agrosin Pty Ltd v Highway Shipping Co Ltd
Mather Ex p. (1797) 3 Ves. 373 ..... 506
Mathew v Bobbins (1980) 41 P. & C.R. 1; (1980) 256 E.G. 603, CA ..... 412
Mathew v TM Sutton Ltd [1994] 1 W.L.R. 1455; [1994] 4 All E.R. 793, Ch D .... 928, 994
Matija Gubec, The See Gulf Shipping Lines Ltd v Jadranska Slobodna Plovidba
Matlock v Man [1993] R.T.R. 13 ..... 975
Matter of Doughboy Industries Inc 233 N.Y.S. 2d. 488 ..... 21
Matthews v Baxetr (1873) L.R. 8 Ex. 132 .... 559
Matthews v Kuwait Bechtel Corporation [1959] 2 Q.B. 57; [1959] 2 W.L.R. 702, CA ..... 206, 697, 984
Matthey v Curling [1922] 2 A.C. 180, HL .... 894
Mavro Vetranic, The See Greenwich Marine Inc v Federal Commerce & Navigation Co Ltd
Maxine Footwear Co v Canadian Government Merchant Marine [1959] A.C. 589; [1959] 3 W.L.R. 232, PC (Can) ..... 229
May v Lane (1894) 64 L.J.Q.B. 236 ..... 697
May v Platt [1900] 1 Ch. 616, Ch D .... 322, 325
May v Vincent (1990) 154 J.P. 997; [1991] 04 E.G. 144, DC ..... 293
May & Butcher Ltd v King, The [1934] 2 K.B. 17; [1929] All E.R. Rep. 679, HL .... 51, 55, 56, 57
Mayfair Photographic Supplies (London) v Baxter Hoare & Co and Stenbridge [1972] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 410, QBD ..... 229, 844
Mayfield Holdings v Moana Reef [1973] 1 N.Z.L.R. 309, Sup Ct (NZ) ..... 1035
Mayor (t/a Granville Coaches) v P&O Ferries Ltd (The Lion) [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 144, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 434
Mayson v Clouet [1924] A.C. 980; [1924] 3 W.W.R. 211, PC (Sing) ..... 1007

- MB (Caesarean Section), Re; sub nom. L (Patient: Non-Consensual Treatment), Re; L (An Adult: Non-Consensual Treatment), Re; MB (Medical Treatment), Re [1997] 2 F.L.R. 426; [1997] 2 F.C.R. 541, CA ..... 721
- MB Pyramid Sound NV v Briese Schiffahrts GmbH & Co KG MS Sina (The Ines) (No.2) [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 144, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 231, 233, 949, 978
- MCC Proceeds Inc v Lehman Brothers International (Europe) [1998] 4 All E.R. 675; [1998] 2 B.C.L.C. 659, CA ..... 372
- Mears v Safecar Securities Ltd [1983] Q.B. 54 ..... 198, 208, 875
- Mecca Leisure v London Residuary Body [1988] C.L.Y. 1375 ..... 141
- Medforth v Blake [2000] Ch. 86; [1999] 3 W.L.R. 922, CA ..... 705
- Medicaments Reference, Re [1970] 1 W.L.R. 1339; [1971] 1 All E.R. 12, RPC ..... 5
- Mediterranean Freight Services Ltd v BP Oil International Ltd (The Fiona) [1994] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 506; The Times, July 27, 1994, CA ..... 223, 986
- Meehan v Jones (1982) 149 C.L.R. 571 ..... 63
- Meek v Kettlewell (1843) 1 Ph. 342 ..... 683
- Meggesson v Burns [1972] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 223, MCLC ..... 585
- Melachrinio v Nickoll [1920] 1 K.B. 693; (1919) 1 Ll. L. Rep. 595, KBD (Comm Ct) ..... 962, 979
- Melanson v Dominion of Canada General Ins Co [1934] 2 D.L.R. 459 ..... 860
- Melhado v Porto Alegre Railway (1874) L.R. 9 C.P. 503 ..... 724
- Meling v Minos Shipping Co (The Oliva) [1972] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 458, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 917
- Mendelssohn v Normand [1970] 1 Q.B. 177; [1969] 3 W.L.R. 139, CA ... 215, 220, 232, 242, 714
- Meng Leong Development Pte v Jip Hong Trading Co Pte [1985] A.C. 511; [1984] 3 W.L.R. 1263, PC (Sing) .... 110, 132, 856, 962, 1021
- MEPC Ltd v Christian-Edwards [1981] A.C. 205; [1979] 3 W.L.R. 713, HL; affirming [1978] Ch. 281, CA ..... 1020
- Merak, The See Varverakis v Compagnia de Navigacion Artico SA (The Merak)
- Mercandian Continent, The See K/S Merc-Scandia XXXXII v Lloyd's Underwriters
- Mercantile Bank of London Ltd v Evans [1899] 2 Q.B. 613, CA ..... 676
- Mercantile Credit Co Ltd v Hamblin [1965] 2 Q.B. 242; [1964] 3 W.L.R. 798, CA ..... 328, 329, 707
- Mercantile Group (Europe) AG v Aiyela [1994] Q.B. 366; [1993] 3 W.L.R. 1116, CA ..... 1047
- Mercantile International Group plc v Chuan Soon Huat Industrial Group Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 288; [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 788, CA ..... 706
- Mercantile Union Guarantee Corp Ltd v Ball [1937] 2 K.B. 498, CA ..... 545, 548
- Mercedes Envoy, The See Hanjin Shipping Co Ltd v Zenith Chartering Corp (The Mercedes Envoy)
- Mercedes-Benz Finance Ltd v Clydesdale Bank plc 1997 S.L.T. 905; 1996 S.C.L.R. 1005, OH ..... 680
- Merchant Shipping Co v Armitage (1873) L.R. 9 Q.B. .... 785
- Meridian Global Funds Management Asia Ltd v Securities Commission [1995] 2 A.C. 500; [1995] 3 W.L.R. 413, PC (NZ) ..... 736
- Merkur Island Shipping Corp v Laughton Shaw and Lewis (The Hoegh Anapa) [1983] 2 A.C. 570; [1983] 2 W.L.R. 778, HL ..... 619, 622
- Merrett v Babb [2001] EWCA Civ 214; [2001] Q.B. 1174, CA ..... 346
- Merrett v Capitol Indemnity Corp [1991] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 169, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 980, 982
- Merritt v Merritt [1970] 1 W.L.R. 1211; [1970] 2 All E.R. 760; 114 S.J. 455, CA ..... 87, 165
- Mersey Shipping and Transport Co Ltd v Rea Ltd (1925) 21 Ll. L. Rep. 375, KBD ..... 628
- Mersey Steel and Iron Co Ltd v Naylor Benzon & Co (1883-84) L.R. 9 App. Cas. 434, HL; affirming (1881-82) L.R. 9 Q.B.D. 648, CA ..... 370, 809
- Mersey Steel and Iron Co v Naylor Benzon and Co (1884) 9 App. Cas. 434 ..... 774
- Mertens v Home Freeholds Co [1921] 2 K.B. 526, CA ..... 905, 945
- Messiniaki Bergen, The See Westfal-Larsen & Co A/S v Ikerigi Compania Naviers SA
- Messiniaki Tolmi (No.2), The Astro Exito Navegacion SA v Southland Enterprise Co
- Metaalhandel JA Magnus BV v Ardfields Transport [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 197; [1987] 2 F.T.L.R. 319, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 220
- Metal Scrap Trade Corp Ltd v Kate Shipping Co Ltd (The Gladys) (No.2) [1994] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 402, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 56
- Metall und Rohstoff AG v ACLI Metals (London) Ltd [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 598; [1985] E.C.C. 502, CA ..... 936
- Metcalfe v Britannia Ironworks (1877) 2 Q.B.D. 423 ..... 787, 819
- Methwold v Walbank (1750) 2 Ves. Sen. 238 .... 698
- Metro Meat v Fares Rural Co Pty [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 13, PC (Aus) ..... 760, 806, 861
- Metrolands Investments Ltd v JH Dewhurst Ltd [1986] 3 All E.R. 659; (1986) 52 P. & C.R. 232, CA ..... 828

- Metropolitan Asylums Board Managers v Kingham & Sons (1890) 6 T.L.R. 217 ..... 725
- Metropolitan Electric Supply Co Ltd v Ginder [1901] 2 Ch. 799, Ch D ..... 84, 468, 104
- Metropolitan Fire Insurance Co, Re; sub nom. Wallace's Case [1900] 2 Ch. 671, Ch D ..... 16
- Metropolitan Police Commissioner v Charles [1977] A.C. 177 ..... 583
- Metropolitan Water Board v Dick Kerr & Co Ltd [1918] A.C. 119, HL ..... 873, 882, 899, 909
- Metula, The See Shell International Petroleum Co Ltd v Seabridge Shipping
- Meyer v Haworth (1838) 8 A. & E. 467 ..... 79
- Meyer v Sullivan 181 P. 847 (1919) ..... 879
- Meyerstein v Eastern Agency (1885) 1 T.L.R. 595 ..... 748
- M'Fadden v Jenkins (1842) 1 Ph. 153 ..... 685
- MH Smith (Plant Hire) v DL Mainwaring (t/a Inshore) [1986] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 244; The Times, June 10, 1986, CA ..... 675, 696
- Michael Elliott & Partners v UK Land [1991] 08 E.G. 123 ..... 51, 722
- Michael Gerson (Leasing) Ltd v Wilkinson [2001] Q.B. 514; [2000] 3 W.L.R. 1645, CA ..... 11, 17
- Michael I Warde v Fedex International Inc (No.2) [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 289, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 798, 800
- Michael Richards Properties Ltd v Corp of Wardens of St Saviour's Parish (Southwark) [1975] 3 All E.R. 416, Ch D ..... 54, 324, 435, 763, 1008
- Michael Sallis & Co v ECA Call (1988) 4 Const. L.J. 125 ..... 612
- Michael v Hart & Co [1902] 1 K.B. 482, CA ..... 844, 858
- Michaels v Harley House (Marylebone) Ltd [2000] Ch. 104; [1999] 3 W.L.R. 229, CA; affirming [1997] 1 W.L.R. 967, Ch D ..... 762
- Micklefield v Hipgin (1760) 1 Anst. 33 ..... 519
- Micklefield v SAC Technology Ltd [1990] 1 W.L.R. 1002; [1991] 1 All E.R. 275, Ch D ..... 64, 265, 844, 845
- Microbeads AG v Vinhurst Road Markings [1975] 1 W.L.R. 218; [1975] 1 All E.R. 529, CA ..... 788
- Midgley Estates v Hand [1952] 2 Q.B. 432; [1952] 1 All E.R. 1394, CA ..... 742
- Midland Bank plc v Cox McQueen [1999] Lloyd's Rep. Bank. 78; [1999] 1 F.L.R. 1002, CA ..... 841
- Midland Bank plc v Shephard [1988] 3 All E.R. 17; [1987] 2 F.L.R. 175, CA ..... 412
- Midland Bank plc v Cooke [1995] 4 All E.R. 562; [1997] 6 Bank. L.R. 147, CA ..... 135
- Midland Bank Trust Co Ltd v Green (No.1) [1981] A.C. 513; [1981] 2 W.L.R. 28, HL ..... 68, 74, 75, 76
- Midland Bank Trust Co Ltd v Hett Stubbs & Kemp [1979] Ch. 384; [1978] 3 W.L.R. 167, Ch D ..... 984
- Midland Counties Motor Finance Co v Slade [1951] 1 K.B. 346; [1950] 2 All E.R. 821, CA ..... 810
- Midland Great Western Railway of Ireland v Johnson (1858) 6 H.L.C. 798 ..... 313, 315
- Mihalios Xilas, The See China National Foreign Trade Transportation Corp v Evlogia Shipping Co SA of Panama (The Mihalios Xilas)
- Mihalios Angelos, The See Maredelanto Compania Naviera SA v Bergbau-Handel GmbH
- Mike Trading and Transport v R Pagnan & Fratelli (The Lisboa) [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 546, CA ..... 1041
- Mikeover Ltd v Brady [1989] 3 All E.R. 618; (1989) 21 H.L.R. 513, CA ..... 195, 568
- Mikhail Lermontov, The See Dillon v Baltic Shipping Co
- Milan Tramways Co Ex p. Theys, Re (1884) L.R. 25 Ch. D. 587, CA ..... 691
- Mildred v Maspons (1882-83) L.R. 8 App. Cas. 874, HL ..... 727
- Miles International Corp v Federal Commerce & Navigation Co Ltd (The Federal Schelde) [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 285, Sup Ct (Que) ..... 633
- Miles v McIlwraith (1883) 8 App.Cas. 120 .... 717
- Miles v New Zealand Alford Estate Co (1886) L.R. 32 Ch. D. 266, CA ..... 90, 91
- Miles v Wakefield MDC [1987] A.C. 539; [1987] 2 W.L.R. 795, HL ..... 762, 785, 786, 788, 810, 821, 822, 843, 846, 855, 1057, 0163
- Miles v Williams (1714) 1 P.Wms. 249 ..... 672
- Miliangos v George Frank (Textiles) Ltd (No.1) [1976] A.C. 443; [1975] 3 W.L.R. 758, HL ..... 1019, 1021
- Millar's Machinery Co Ltd v David Way & Son (1935) 40 Com.Cas. 204 ..... 788
- Millar's Karri & Jarrah Co (1902) v Weddell, Turner & Co (1909) 100 L.T. 128 ..... 809
- Millar's Machinery Co v David Way & Son (1934) 40 Com. Cas. 204, CA ..... 852, 942
- Miller v Blankley (1878) 38 L.T. 527 ..... 554
- Miller v Cannon Hill Estates Ltd [1931] 2 K.B. 113, KBD ..... 353
- Miller v FA Sadd & Son [1981] 3 All E.R. 265, DC ..... 22, 58
- Miller v Karlinski (1945) 62 T.L.R. 85 .... 434, 450, 507
- Miller v Lakefield Estates [1989] 19 E.G. 67; The Times, May 16, 1988, CA ..... 58
- Miller Gibb & Co v Smith & Tyrer Ltd [1917] 2 K.B. 141, CA [1916] 1 K.B. 419, KBD ..... 733
- Miller International Schallplatten GmbH v Commission of the European Communities (C19/17) [1978] E.C.R. 131; [1978] 2 C.M.L.R. 334, ECJ ..... 477
- Miller's Case (1876) 3 Ch.D. 391 ..... 701

Miller's Agreement, Re; sub nom. Uniacke v Attorney General [1947] Ch. 615; [1947] 2 All E.R. 78, Ch D .....	647, 670
Millichamp v Jones [1982] 1 W.L.R. 1422; [1983] 1 All E.R. 267, Ch D .....	763, 774, 806, 811, 827, 852, 1009, 1011
Millington v Duffy (1985) 17 H.L.R. 232, CA .....	936
Mills v Fox (1887) 37 Ch D. 153 .....	326
Mills v IRC See Inland Revenue Commissioners v Mills
Millward v Littlewood (1850) 5 Ex. 775 .....	440
Milner (JH) & Son v Bilton (Percy) Ltd [1966] 1 W.L.R. 1582; [1966] 2 All E.R. 894, QBD .....	170
Milroy v Lord (1862) 4 De G.F. & J. 264 .....	75, 685, 686, 687, 688
Mineral Park Land Co v Howard 156 P. 458 (1916) .....	885
Mineral Transporter, The See Candlewood Navigation Corp v Mitsui Osk Lines
Mineral Water Bottle Exchange and Trade Protection Society v Booth (1887) L.R. 36 Ch. D. 465, CA .....	466
Mineralimportexport v Eastern Mediterranean Maritime Ltd (The Golden Leader) [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 573, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	223
Ministry of Defence v Ashman (1993) 66 P. & C.R. 195; [1993] 40 E.G. 144, CA .....	928
Ministry of Defence v Cannock [1995] I.C.R. 918 .....	987
Ministry of Defence v Country & Metropolitan Homes (Rissington) Ltd [2002] EWHC 2113; [2002] 44 E.G.C.S. 170, Ch D .....	202
Ministry of Defence v Thompson [1993] 40 E.G. 148, CA .....	928
Ministry of Defence v Wheeler [1998] 1 W.L.R. 637; [1998] 1 All E.R. 790, CA .....	956
Minnevit v Café de Paris (Londres) Ltd [1936] 1 All E.R. 884 .....	835
Minorities Finance v Afribank Nigeria Ltd [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 134, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	23, 33
Minscombe Properties v Sir Alfred McAlpine & Son [1986] 2 E.G.L.R. 15; (1986) 279 E.G. 759, CA .....	946
Mint Security v Blair [1982] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 188, QBD .....	986
Minton v Minton [1979] A.C. 593; [1979] 2 W.L.R. 31, HL .....	447
Mira v Aylmer Square Investments (1990) 22 H.L.R. 182; [1990] 22 E.G. 61, CA .....	968
Mirams, Re [1891] 1 Q.B. 594, QBD .....	698
Miss Gray Ltd v Cathcart (1922) 38 T.L.R. 562 .....	711
Mitas v Hyams [1951] 2 T.L.R. 1215, CA ...	104, 190
Mitchel v Reynolds (1711) 1 P. Wms. 181 ...	453
Mitchell v Darthez (1836) 2 Bing.N.C. 555 .....	819
Mitchell v Ealing LBC [1979] Q.B. 1; [1978] 2 W.L.R. 999, QBD .....	156
Mitchell v Ede (1840) 11 Ad. & El. 888 .....	605
Mitchell v Homfray (1881-82) L.R. 8 Q.B.D. 587, CA .....	423
Mitchell v Lath 160 N.E. 646 (1928) .....	200
Mitchell v Queen, The [1896] 1 Q.B. 121 (Note), CA .....	4
Mitsubishi Corp v Alafouzos [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 191; [1988] 1 F.T.L.R. 47, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	450
Mitsubishi Corp v Castletown Navigation (The Castle Alpha) [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 383, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	73
Mitsui & Co Ltd v Flota Mercante Grancolombiana SA (The Ciudad de Pasto and The Ciudad de Neiva) [1988] 1 W.L.R. 1145; [1989] 1 All E.R. 951, CA .....	613
Mitsui & Co Ltd v Novorossiysk Shipping Co (The Gudermes) [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 311, CA ....	169, 171, 202, 205, 238, 589, 613, 641
Mitsui & Co v Marpro Industrial and Gouker & Co NV [1974] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 386, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	740
Mitsui Babcock Energy Ltd v John Brown Engineering Ltd 51 Con. L.R. 129, QBD (OR) .....	56, 124
Mitton v Farrow (1980) 255 E.G. 449, CA .....	156
M'Iver v Richardson (1813) 1 M. & S. 557 .....	22
MJB Enterprises Ltd v Defence Construction (1951) Ltd (2000) 2 T.C.L.R. 235; (1999) 15 Const. I.J. 455, Sup Ct (Can) .....	15
M'Kinnell v Robinson (1838) 3 M. & W. 434 .....	510, 530
Mobil North Sea Ltd v PJ Pipe & Valve Co Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 741; [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 289, CA .....	949, 980
Modahl v British Athletic Federation Ltd (No.2) [2001] EWCA Civ 1447; [2002] 1 W.L.R. 1192, CA .....	68, 171
Modern Exhibition Services v Cardiff Corp 63 L.G.R. 316; (1965) 109 S.J. 470 .....	475
Modern Transport Co Ltd v Dunerich Steamship Co [1917] 1 K.B. 370, CA .....	812, 874
Mogul Steamship Co Ltd v McGregor Gow & Co [1892] A.C. 25; [1891-4] All E.R. Rep. 263, HL .....	439, 466
Mohamed v Alaga & Co; sub nom. Mohammed v Alaga & Co [2000] 1 W.L.R. 1815; [1999] 3 All E.R. 699, CA .....	430, 434, 484, 489, 504, 506
Molton v Camroux (1849) 4 Ex. 17 .....	557
Molyneux v Hawtrey [1903] 2 K.B. 487, CA .....	391
Monarch Airlines Ltd v London Luton Airport Ltd [1998] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 403; [1997] C.L.C. 698, QBD (Comm Ct) ....	222, 258, 260
Monarch Steamship Co Ltd v A/B Karlshamns Oljefabriker [1949] A.C. 196; [1949] 1 All E.R. 1, HL .....	905, 972, 974, 975
Monk Construction v Norwich Union Life Assurance Society .....	168

- Monkland v Jack Barclay Ltd [1951] 2 K.B. 252; [1951] 1 All E.R. 714, CA ..... 468, 478
- Monkman v Stephenson (1840) 11 A. & E. 411 ..... 80
- Monmouth BC v Marlog (1995) 27 H.L.R. 30; [1994] 44 E.G. 240, CA ..... 164, 172
- Montague v Forwood [1893] 2 Q.B. 350 ..... 730
- Monte Video Gas Co v Clan Line Steamers Ltd (1921) 37 T.L.R. 866 ..... 971
- Montedison SpA v Icrroma SpA (The Caspian Sea) [1980] 1 W.L.R. 48; [1979] 3 All E.R. 378, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 785, 817
- Montreal Gas Co v Vesey [1900] A.C. 595 ..... 168
- Monvia Motorship Corp v Keppel Shipyard (Private) Ltd (The Master Stellos) [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 356, PC (Sing) ..... 19
- Moody v Cox [1917] 2 Ch. 71, CA ..... 419
- Moon v Towers (1860) 8 C.B. (N.S.) 611 ..... 722
- Moonacre, The See Sharp v Sphere Drake Insurance
- Moorcock, The (1889) L.R. 14 P.D. 64; [1886-90] All E.R. Rep. 530, CA .... 211, 212
- Moore v Khan-Ghauri [1991] 2 E.G.L.R. 9; [1991] 32 E.G. 63, CA ..... 354
- Moore v Piretta PTA Ltd [1999] 1 All E.R. 174; [1998] C.L.C. 992, QBD ..... 750
- Moore & Co Ltd and Landauer Co [1921] 2 K.B. 519 ..... 793, 794
- Moorgate Mercantile Co Ltd v Twitchings [1977] A.C. 890; [1976] 3 W.L.R. 66, HL; reversing [1976] Q.B. 225, CA ..... 140, 403
- Moorgate Services Ltd v Kabir (t/a Shapla) [1995] C.C.I.R. 74; The Times, April 25, 1995, CA ..... 330
- Moran v University College Salford (No.2) The Times, November 23, 1993 ..... 8, 71
- Morel Bros & Co Ltd v Earl of Westmorland [1904] A.C. 11, HL; affirming [1903] 1 K.B. 64, CA ..... 711
- Moreton v Lamb (1797) 7 T.R. 125 ..... 762, 779
- Moreton v Moreton [1942] 1 All E.R. 273 .... 59
- Morgan Crucible Co plc v Hill Samuel Bank & Co Ltd [1991] Ch. 295; [1991] 2 W.L.R. 655, CA ..... 346
- Morgan Grenfell & Co Ltd v Welwyn Hatfield DC [1995] 1 All E.R. 1; The Times, June 1, 1993, QBD ..... 517, 518, 567, 1060
- Morgan v Ashcroft [1938] 1 K.B. 49, CA ..... 523
- Morgan v Fry [1968] 2 Q.B. 710; [1968] 3 W.L.R. 506, CA ..... 843
- Morgan v Manser [1948] 1 K.B. 184; [1947] 2 All E.R. 666, KBD ..... 868, 872, 874, 909
- Morgan v Palmer (1825) 2 B. & C. 729 ..... 92
- Morgans v Launchbury [1973] A.C. 127; [1972] 2 W.L.R. 1217, HL ..... 706
- Moriarty v Regent's Garage and Engineering Co Ltd [1921] 2 K.B. 766, CA; reversing [1921] 1 K.B. 423, KBD ..... 824
- Morning Star (No.2), The [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 383 ..... 883
- Morning Watch, The See Mariola Marine Corp v Lloyd's Register of Shipping
- Morris v Baron & Co [1918] A.C. 1, HL ..... 99, 100, 188, 189, 190, 196
- Morris v Burdett (1808) 1 Camp. 218 ..... 92
- Morris v CW Martin & Sons Ltd [1966] 1 Q.B. 716; [1965] 3 W.L.R. 276, CA ..... 156, 221, 607, 629, 641, 642
- Morris v Ford Motor Co [1973] Q.B. 792; [1973] 2 W.L.R. 843, CA ..... 209
- Morris v McCulloch (1763) Amb. 432 .... 451, 503
- Morris v Molesworth See Morris v Wentworth-Stanley
- Morris v Redland Bricks [1970] A.C. 652; [1969] 2 W.L.R. 1437, HL ..... 945, 1026
- Morris v Tarrant [1971] 2 Q.B. 143; [1971] 2 W.L.R. 630, QBD ..... 106, 165
- Morris v Wentworth-Stanley [1999] Q.B. 1004; [1999] 2 W.L.R. 470, CA ..... 570, 572
- Morris Angel & Son v Hollande [1993] 3 All E.R. 569; [1993] I.C.R. 71, CA ..... 459, 694
- Morrison & Co Ltd v Shaw Savill and Albion Co Ltd [1916] 2 K.B. 783, CA ..... 229, 230
- Morrison Shipping Co Ltd (In Liquidation) v King, The (1924) 20 Ll. L. Rep. 283, HL ..... 39
- Morrison v Thoeke 155 So. 2d. 889 (1963) .... 28
- Mortgage Express Ltd v Bowerman & Partners (No.1) [1996] 2 All E.R. 836; [1996] E.C.C. 228, CA ..... 400
- Mortgage Express v McDonnell [2001] EWCA Civ 887; [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 886, CA ..... 499
- Mortgage Express v Robson See Mortgage Express v McDonnell
- Mortimer v Beckett [1920] 1 Ch. 571, Ch D ..... 1031, 1045
- Mortimore v Wright (1840) 6 M. & W. 482 .... 540, 711
- Mortlock v Buller (1804) 10 Ves. 292 ... 1028, 1037
- Morton v Burn (1837) 7 A. & E. 19 ..... 98
- Morton v Lamb (1797) 7 T.R. 125 ..... 763
- Moschi v Lep Air Services Ltd [1973] A.C. 331; [1972] 2 W.L.R. 1175, HL ..... 850, 851, 860
- Moss v Smith (1859) 9 C.B. 94 ..... 881
- Mossop v Mossop [1989] Fam. 77; [1988] 2 W.L.R. 1255, CA ..... 440
- Mostcash plc (formerly UK Paper plc) v Fluor Ltd (No.1) [2002] EWCA Civ 975; [2002] B.L.R. 411, CA ..... 88
- Mosvolds Rederi A/S v Food Corp of India (The Arras and The Hoegh Rover) (No.2) [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 131, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 998
- Motis Exports Ltd v Dampskibsselskabet AF 1912 A/S (No.1) [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 571; [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 837, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 211, 231, 234
- Motor & General Insurance Co Ltd v Pavy [1994] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 607 ..... 668, 762

- Motor Oil Hellas (Corinth) Refineries SA v Shipping Corp of India (The Kanchenjunga) [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 391; The Times, February 19, 1990, HL ... 103, 104, 111, 116, 370, 402, 636, 811, 812, 813, 814, 815, 816
- Mouatt v Betts Motors Ltd [1959] A.C. 71 ..... 948
- Moukattaf v British Overseas Airways Corp [1967] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 396; The Times, March 18, 1967, QBD ..... 607
- Moulis v Owen [1907] 1 K.B. 746, CA ..... 532
- Mouldsle v Birchall (1772) 2 W.B.I. 820 ..... 672
- Moundreas & Co SA v Navimpex Centrala Navala [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 515, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 66, 744
- Mount Eden Land Ltd v Prudential Assurance Co Ltd (1997) 74 P. & C.R. 377; [1997] 1 E.G.L.R. 37, CA ..... 52
- Mount I, The See Raiffeisen Zentralbank Österreich AG v Five Star General Trading LLC
- Mount v Oldham Corporation [1973] Q.B. 309; [1973] 2 W.L.R. 22, CA ..... 875, 1014
- Mountford v Scott [1975] Ch. 258; [1975] 2 W.L.R. 114, CA ..... 1027, 1037
- Mountstephen v Lakeman (1874-75) L.R. 7 H.L. 17, HL ..... 181
- Mousaka Inc v Golden Seagull Maritime Inc (Application for Summary Judgment) [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 797, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 89, 212
- Mowbray Robinson & Co v Rosser (1922) 91 L.J.K.B. 524 ..... 198
- Mozley v Tinkler (1835) C.M. & R. 692 ..... 22
- MP Services Ltd v Lawyer (1996) 72 P. & C.R. D49, CA ..... 183
- MRS Environmental Services Ltd v Dyke The Times, March 25, 1997, EAT ..... 704
- MSC Mediterranean Shipping Co SA v BRE-Metro [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 239, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 10, 109, 767
- Muhammed Issa el sheik Ahmed v Ali [1947] A.C. 414 ..... 972
- Muirhead v Industrial Tank Specialities Ltd [1986] Q.B. 507; [1985] 3 W.L.R. 993, CA ..... 20, 615, 616, 638, 972
- Mullett v Mason (1866) L.R. 1 C.P. 559 ..... 362, 363
- Multiservice Bookbinding Ltd v Marden [1979] Ch. 84; [1978] 2 W.L.R. 535, Ch D ..... 439, 478, 867, 881, 885
- Multitank Holsatia, The See Tankreederei Ahrenkeil GmbH v Frahuil SA (The Multitank Holsatia)
- Munro v Butt (1858) 8 E. & B. 738 ..... 783
- Munro v Wilmott [1949] 1 K.B. 295 ..... 719, 720
- Munt v Stokes (1792) 4 T.R. 561 ..... 503
- Munton v Greater London Council [1976] 1 W.L.R. 649; [1976] 2 All E.R. 815, CA ..... 5, 54
- Murphy v Brentwood DC [1991] 1 A.C. 398; [1990] 3 W.L.R. 414, HL ..... 345, 608, 610, 612, 613, 615, 983
- Murphy v Wood [1941] 4 D.L.R. 454 ..... 824
- Murray v Goodhews [1978] 1 W.L.R. 499; [1978] 2 All E.R. 40, CA ..... 77
- Murray v Lloyd [1989] 1 W.L.R. 1060; [1990] 2 All E.R. 92, Ch D ..... 948
- Murray v Parker (1854) 19 Beav. 305 ... 321, 323, 325
- Murray v Reeves (1828) 8 B. & C. 421 ..... 446
- Murray v Yorkshire Fund Managers Ltd [1998] 1 W.L.R. 951; [1998] 2 All E.R. 1015, CA ..... 455
- Murray v Young & Co's Brewery Co [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 236 ..... 697
- Museprime Properties, Ltd v Adhill Properties, Ltd (1991) 61 P. & C.R. 111; [1990] 36 E.G. 114, Ch D ..... 337, 386
- Mushkam Finance v Howard [1963] 1 Q.B. 904; [1963] 2 W.L.R. 87, CA ..... 328
- Mussen v Van Diemen's Land Co [1938] Ch. 253, Ch D ..... 1009
- Mutual Finance Ltd v John Wetton & Sons Ltd [1937] 2 K.B. 389, KBD ..... 409
- Mutual Life & Citizens Assurance Co v Evatt [1971] A.C. 793; [1971] 2 W.L.R. 23, HC (Aus) ..... 345, 348, 349
- Mutual Life Assurance Society v Langley (1886) L.R. 32 Ch. D. 460, CA ..... 682
- Mynn v Jolliffe (1834) 1 M. & Rob. 326 ..... 711
- Myrto, The [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 11, CA; reversing [1977] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 243, QBD (Adm Ct) ..... 623
- Myton Ltd v Schwab Morris [1974] 1 W.L.R. 331; [1974] 1 All E.R. 326, Ch D ... 763, 774
- N & J Vlassopoulos Ltd v Ney Shipping Ltd (The Santa Carina) [1977] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 478; (1976) 121 S.J. 10 ..... 732, 734
- N v N (Divorce: Agreement Not to Defend) [1992] 1 F.L.R. 266; [1991] F.C.R. 690 .... 441
- N v N (Jurisdiction: Pre Nuptial Agreement [1999] 2 F.L.R. 745; [1999] 2 F.C.R. 583, Fam Div ..... 441
- Nabi v British Leyland (UK) Ltd [1980] 1 W.L.R. 529; [1980] 1 All E.R. 667, CA ..... 981
- Nagle v Fielden [1966] 2 Q.B. 633; [1966] 2 W.L.R. 1027; [1966] 1 All E.R. 689; 110 S.J. 286, CA ..... 5, 467, 479, 1031
- Nahun v Royal Holloway and Bedford New Colleges Ltd The Times, November 19, 1998 ..... 741
- Nai Genova and Nai Superba, The See Agip SpA v Navigazione Alta Italia SpA
- Naidoo v Naidu The Times, November 1, 2000, Ch D ..... 419, 424
- Nanney v Morgan (1887) 37 Ch.D. 346 ... 684, 686
- Napier v National Business Agency [1951] 2 All E.R. 264; 44 R. & I.T. 413, CA ..... 434, 450, 507
- Napier v Williams [1911] 1 Ch. 361, Ch D ..... 326
- Napier and Ettrick v Hunter [1993] A.C. 713; [1993] 2 W.L.R. 42, HL ..... 1021

Napier and Ettrick v RF Kershaw Ltd (No.1) [1993] A.C. 713; [1993] 2 W.L.R. 42, HL ..... 696	National Westminster Bank plc v Inland Revenue Commissioners [1995] 1 A.C. 119; [1994] 3 W.L.R. 159, HL ..... 16
Nash v Dix (1898) 78 L.T. 445 ..... 729, 730	National Westminster Bank plc v Leggatt [2001] 1 F.L.R. 563; [2001] 1 F.C.R. 523; 417 The Times , November 16, 2000, CA ..... 16
Nash v Halifax Building Society [1979] Ch. 584; [1979] 2 W.L.R. 184, Ch D ..... 488, 492	National Westminster Bank plc v Morgan [1985] A.C. 686; [1985] 2 W.L.R. 588, HL ..... 334, 410, 412, 413, 414, 422
Nash v Inman [1908] 2 K.B. 1, CA ..... 541, 552, 554	National Westminster Bank plc v Somer International (UK) Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 970; [2002] Q.B. 1286, CA ..... 115
Nash v Stevenson Transport Ltd [1936] 2 K.B. 128, CA ..... 484	National Westminster Bank plc v Utrecht-America Finance Co [2001] EWCA Civ 658; [2001] 3 All E.R. 733; [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 7, CA ..... 388, 403
National Carriers Ltd v Panalpina (Northern) Ltd [1981] A.C. 675; [1981] 2 W.L.R. 45, HL ... 867, 868, 885, 887, 891, 894, 895, 897, 920, 921, 922, 923	Nationwide Anglia Building Society v Lewis [1998] Ch. 482, CA ..... 714
National Coal Board v Galley [1958] 1 W.L.R. 16; [1958] 1 All E.R. 91, CA ..... 213	Nationwide Building Society v JR Jones (A Firm) [1999] Lloyd's Rep. P.N. 414, Ch D ..... 986
National Coal Board v National Union of Mineworkers [1986] I.C.R. 736; [1986] I.R.L.R. 439, Ch D ..... 169, 214	Nationwide Building Society v Registry of Friendly Societies [1983] 1 W.L.R. 1226; [1983] 3 All E.R. 296, Ch D ..... 478, 885
National Coffee Palace Co Ex p. Panmure, Re (1883) L.R. 24 Ch. D. 367, CA ..... 973, 975	Naughton v O'Callaghan [1990] 3 All E.R. 191, QBD ..... 291, 360, 362, 363, 942
National Guardian Mortgage Corporation v Wilks [1993] CCLR 1 ..... 179	Naviera Mogor SA v Societe Metallurgique de Normandie (The Nogar Marin) [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 412; [1988] 1 F.T.L.R. 349 ... 436, 982
National Home Loans Corp plc v Giffen Couch & Archer [1998] 1 W.L.R. 207; [1997] 3 All E.R. 808, CA ..... 400	Naxos, The See Cie Commerciale Sucres et Denrees v C Czarnikow Ltd
National Panasonic (UK) Ltd v Commission of the European Communities (C136/79) [1981] 2 All E.R. 1; [1980] E.C.R. 2033, ECJ ..... 475	Naylor Benzon & Co Ltd v Krainsche Industrie Gesellschaft [1918] 1 K.B. 331, KBD ..... 478
National Pari-Mutuel Association v R. (1930) 47 T.L.R. 110 ..... 334	Nea Agrex SA v Baltic Shipping Co Ltd (The Agios Lazarus) [1976] Q.B. 933; [1976] 2 W.L.R. 925, CA ..... 49
National Permanent Benefit Building Society Ex p. Williamson, Re (1869-70) L.R. 5 Ch. App. 309, CA in Chancery ..... 543	Neal-Cooper Grain Co v Texs Gulf Sulphur Co 508 F. 2d. 283, 293 (1974) ..... 881
National Provincial Bank Ltd v Ainsworth [1965] A.C. 1175; [1965] 3 W.L.R. 1, HL ..... 39	Neary v Dean of Westminster [1999] I.R.L.R. 288, Visitor (Westminster) ..... 747
National Provincial Bank of England Ltd v Glanusk [1913] 3 K.B. 335, KBD ..... 398	Needler Financial Services Ltd v Taber [2002] 3 All E.R. 501; [2002] Lloyd's Rep. P.N. 32, Ch D ..... 982
National Provincial Bank of England v Jackson (1886) L.R. 33 Ch. D. 1, CA ..... 329	Nelson Pine Industries Ltd v Seatrans New Zealand Ltd (The Pembroke) [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 290, HC (NZ) ..... 236
National Provincial Building Society v British Waterways Board [1992] E.G.C.S. 149, CA ..... 1038	Nelson v Nelson (1995) 185 C.L.R. 538 ..... 501
National Savings Bank Association, Re; sub nom. Hebb's Case (1867) L.R. 4 Eq. 9, Ct of Chancery ..... 16, 23	Nelson v Nelson [1997] 1 W.L.R. 233; [1997] 1 All E.R. 970, CA ..... 738
National Trust for Places of Historic Interest or Natural Beauty v Haden Young Ltd 72 B.L.R. 1; The Times , August 11, 1994, CA ..... 583	Nelson v Stewart (1991) S.L.R. 523 ..... 57
National Westminster Bank Ltd v Cullinane The Times , October 27, 1982, CA ..... 77	Nema (No.2), The See Pioneer Shipping Ltd v BTP Tioxide Ltd
National Westminster Bank Ltd v Hart [1983] Q.B. 773; [1983] 2 W.L.R. 693, CA ..... 816	Nema, The See Pioneer Shipping Ltd v BTP Tioxide Ltd
National Westminster Bank plc v Amin [2002] UKHL 9; [2002] 1 F.L.R. 735, HL ..... 426	Neptune Maritime Co of Monrovia v Koninklijke Bunge BV (The Argonaut) [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 214; [1982] Com. L.R. 160, CA ..... 905
National Westminster Bank plc v Breeds [2001] Lloyd's Rep. Bank. 98; (2001) 151 N.L.J. 170, Ch D ..... 427

- Neptune Orient Lines Ltd v JVC (UK) Ltd*
(The Chevalier Roze) [1983] 2 Lloyd's
Rep. 438, QBD (Comm Ct) .... 249, 262, 603, 637
- Nerano, The* [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 1 .... 109, 117
- Nerot v Wallace* (1789) 3 T.R. 17 ..... 149
- Netherlands Insurance Co Est 1845 Ltd v Karl Ljungberg & Co AB* (The Mammoth Pine)
[1986] 3 All E.R. 767; [1986] 2 Lloyd's
Rep. 19, PC (Sing) ..... 203
- Netherlands v Youell; Netherlands v Hayward*
[1998] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 236; [1998] C.L.C.
44, CA; affirming [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep.
440, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 577, 707
- Nevill v Snelling* (1880) L.R. 15 Ch. D. 679,
Ch D ..... 420, 427
- Neville v Dominion of Canada News Co Ltd*
[1915] 3 K.B. 556, CA ..... 479
- Neville v Kelly* (1862) 12 C.B. (N.S.) 740 .... 92
- Neville v London Express Newspaper Ltd*
[1919] A.C. 368, HL ..... 672
- Neville v Wilkinson* (1782) 1 Bro.C.C. 547 ..... 503
- Neville v Wilson* [1997] Ch. 144; [1996] 3
W.L.R. 460, CA ..... 679
- New Brunswick Co v Muggeridge* (1859) 4
Drew. 686 ..... 336, 394
- New England Reinsurance Corp and First State Insurance Co v Messoghios Insurance Co SA* [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 251,
CA ..... 54
- New Hampshire Insurance Co Ltd v MGN
Ltd* (1995); Maxwell Communication Corp plc (In Administration) v *New Hampshire
Insurance Co Ltd* [1996] 5 Re. L.R. 103;
The Times, July 25, 1995, CA ..... 198
- New Hart Builders Ltd v Brindley* [1975] Ch.
342; [1975] 2 W.L.R. 595, Ch D ..... 26
- New India Assurance Co v Yeo Beng Chow*
[1972] 1 W.L.R. 786; [1972] 3 All E.R. 293,
PC (Mal) ..... 788
- New Prosper, The See Richco International
Ltd v Bunge & Co Ltd*
- New Vanguard and Pacifica, The See Aectra Refining and Manufacturing Inc v Exmar NV*
- New York Star, The See New Zealand Government Property Corp v HM & S Ltd*
- New York Star, The See Port Jackson Stevedoring Pty v Salmond & Spraggon (Australia) Pty*
- New Zealand & Australian Land Co v Watson*
(1881) 7 Q.B.D. 374 ..... 747
- New Zealand Government Property Corp v
HM & S Ltd* (The New York Star) [1982]
Q.B. 1145; [1982] 2 W.L.R. 837, CA .... 589, 633, 634
- New Zealand Guardian Trust Co Ltd v Brooks*
[1995] 1 W.L.R. 96; [1995] B.C.C. 407, PC
(NZ) ..... 572
- New Zealand Shipping Co Ltd v AM Satterthwaite & Co Ltd* (The Eurymedon)
[1975] A.C. 154; [1974] 2 W.L.R. 865;
[1974] 1 All E.R. 1015, PC (NZ) ..... 38, 47, 98,
169, 589, 631, 632, 633, 634, 635,
637, 640, 650
- New Zealand Shipping Co Ltd v Societe des
Ateliers et Chantiers de France* [1919] A.C.
1; [1918-19] All E.R. Rep. 552, HL ..... 844
- Newbigging v Adam See Adam v Newbig-ging*
- Newbold v Leicester City Council* [1999]
I.C.R. 1182; (2000) 2 L.G.L.R. 303, CA .... 74
- Newborne v Sensolid (Great Britain) Ltd*
[1954] 1 Q.B. 45; [1953] 2 W.L.R. 596,
CA ..... 736
- Newbury International Ltd v Reliance National Insurance Co (UK) and Tyser Special Risks* [1994] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 83, QBD
(Comm Ct) ..... 516
- Newell v Radford* (1867) L.R. 3 C.P. 52 ... 183, 196
- Newfoundland v Newfoundland Railway Co*
(1888) L.R. 13 App. Cas. 199, PC (Can) .... 690
- Newland v Simons and Willer* (Hairdressers)
[1981] I.C.R. 521; [1981] I.R.L.R. 359, EAT ..... 451, 485
- Newman v Rogers* (1793) 4 Bro.C.C. 391 ..... 828
- Newns v British Airways plc* [1992] I.R.L.R.
575, CA ..... 694, 704
- Newport Association Football Club Ltd v
Football Association of Wales Ltd* [1995] 2
All E.R. 87; (1994) 144 N.L.J. 1351, Ch
D ..... 466, 467, 481, 1041, 1047
- Newry v Enniskillen Railway v Combe* (1849)
3 ex. 565 ..... 547
- Newsholme Bros v Road Transport & General
Insurance Co Ltd* [1929] 2 K.B. 356;
(1929) 34 Ll. L. Rep. 247, CA ..... 339, 709
- Newsome v Graham* (1829) 10 B. & C. 234 .... 1056
- Newton Abbott Cooperative Society Ltd v
Williamson & Treadgold Ltd* [1952] Ch.
286; [1952] 1 All E.R. 279, Ch D ..... 472
- Newtons of Wembley Ltd v Williams* [1965] 1
Q.B. 560; [1964] 3 W.L.R. 888, CA ..... 372
- Ng Chee Chong, Ng Weng Chong, Ng Cheng and Ng Yew* (A Firm t/a Maran Road Saw Mill) v Austin Taylor & Co [1975] 1
Lloyd's Rep. 156, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 754
- Nichimen Corp v Gatoil Overseas Inc* [1987] 2
Lloyd's Rep. 46, CA ..... 105, 779, 798, 829
- Nichol v Godts* (1854) 10 Ex. 191 ..... 227
- Nicholas H, The See Marc Rich & Co AG v
Bishop Rock Marine Co Ltd*
- Nicholls Ex p.* (1883) 22 Ch.D. 782 ..... 682
- Nichols Advance Vehicle Systems Inc v De
Angelis*, unreported, 1979 ..... 1043
- Nicholson v Chapman* (1793) 2 H.Bl. 254 .... 719
- Nicholson v Markham* (1998) 75 P. & C.R.
428; [1997] N.P.C. 53, CA ..... 201, 204
- Nicholson v Revill* (1836) 4 Ad. & El. 675 ..... 572, 573

- Nicholson and Venn v Smith-Marriott (1947) 177 L.T. 189 ..... 291, 292, 298
- Nickerson v Barroughclough [1981] Ch. 426; [1981] 2 W.L.R. 773, CA ..... 478
- Nickoll & Knight v Ashton Edridge & Co [1901] 2 K.B. 126 ..... 879, 910
- Nicolene Ltd v Simmonds [1953] 1 Q.B. 543; [1953] 2 W.L.R. 717, CA ..... 50
- Nicoll v Cutts [1985] P.C.C. 311, CA ..... 693
- Nicol's Case See Florence Land & Public Works Co, Re
- Nigel Upchurch Associates v Aldridge Estates Investment Co [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 535, QBD ..... 668
- Niizura, The [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 66 .... 754, 789, 798
- Nile Co for the Export of Agricultural Crops v H & JM Bennett (Commodities) [1986] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 555, QBD (Comm Ct) .... 60, 881, 890, 903
- Nile Rhapsody, The See Hamed el Chiaty & Co (t/a Travco Nile Cruise Lines) v Thomas Cook Group Ltd (The Nile Rhapsody)
- Nippon Yusen Kaisha v International Import and Export Co (The Elbe Maru) [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 206, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 637
- Nippon Yusen Kaisha v Pacifica Navegacion SA (The Ion) [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 245, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 80, 103, 111, 114, 116, 117
- Niru Battery Manufacturing Co v Milestone Trading Ltd [2002] EWHC 1425; [2002] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 705, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 344, 608
- Nissho Iwai Petroleum Co v Cargill International SA [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 80, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 61, 209
- Nissos Samos, The See Samos Shipping Enterprises v Eckhardt and Co KG (The Nissos Samos)
- Nitedals Taendstikfabrik v Bruster [1906] 2 Ch. 671, Ch D ..... 746
- Nitrigin Eircann Teoranta v Inco Alloys Ltd [1992] 1 W.L.R. 498; [1992] 1 All E.R. 854, QBD ..... 349, 609, 610, 613, 985
- Nitrax (UK) v Solent Steel Fabrications [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 633; The Times, October 24, 1980, CA ..... 323
- Nixon v Furphy (1925) 25 S.R. (N.S.W.) 151 ..... 406
- Nizura, The [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 66 ..... 624
- Nocton v Lord Ashburton [1914] A.C. 932; [1914-15] All E.R. Rep. 45, HL ..... 344, 554
- Noel Bay, The See SIB International Srl v Metallgesellschaft Corp
- Nogar Marin, The See Naviera Mogor SA v Societe Metallurgique de Normandie
- Nokes v Doncaster Amalgamated Collieries Ltd; Donoghue v Doncaster Amalgamated Collieries Ltd [1940] A.C. 1014, HL; reversing [1939] 2 K.B. 578, CA ..... 693
- Nora Springs Cooperative Co v Brandau 247 N.W. 2d. 744 ..... 881
- Noranda Inc v Barton (Time Charter) Ltd (The Mariner) [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 301; [1996] C.L.C. 337, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 191
- Norbury Natzio & Co Ltd v Griffiths [1918] 2 K.B. 369, CA ..... 569
- Norden Steam Co v Dempsey (1876) 1 C.P.D. 654 ..... 199
- Nordenfelt v Maxim Nordenfelt Guns & Ammunition Co Ltd [1894] A.C. 535, HL ..... 453, 455, 459, 463, 478, 1044
- Nordman v Rayner & Sturges (1916) 33 T.L.R. 87 ..... 875
- Norglen Ltd (In Liquidation) v Reeds Rains Prudential Ltd [1999] 2 A.C. 1; [1997] 3 W.L.R. 1177, HL; affirming [1996] 1 W.L.R. 864, CA ..... 431, 696, 698
- Norman v Cole (1800) 3 Esp. 253 ..... 446
- Norman v Commissioner of Taxation (1963) 109 C.L.R. 9 ..... 683
- Normid Housing Association Ltd v Ralphs & Mansell (Third Party Rights: Mareva Injunction) [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 265; 21 Con. L.R. 98; The Times, November 15, 1988, CA ..... 74, 668
- Norris v Southampton City Council [1982] 1 C.R. 177; [1982] 1 R.L.R. 141, EAT ..... 905
- North v GN Railway (1860) 2 Giff. 64 ..... 1023
- North v Loomes [1919] 1 Ch. 378, Ch D ..... 183
- North & South Trust Co v Berkeley [1971] 1 W.L.R. 470; [1971] 1 All E.R. 980, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 712, 746
- North General Wagon and Finance Co Ltd v Graham [1950] 2 K.B. 7; [1950] 1 All E.R. 780, CA ..... 497
- North Ocean Shipping Co v Hyundai Construction Co (The Atlantic Baron) [1979] Q.B. 705; [1979] 3 W.L.R. 419, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 94, 96, 405, 406, 407, 423
- North Sea Energy Holdings NV v Petroleum Authority of Thailand [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm.) 173; [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 483, CA; affirming [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 418, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 63, 201, 767, 955, 963, 966, 969, 972
- North West Leicestershire DC v East Midlands Housing Association [1981] 1 W.L.R. 1396; [1981] 3 All E.R. 364, CA ..... 19
- North Western Railway v M'Michael (1850) 5 Ex. 114 ..... 546, 547
- North Western Salt Co Ltd v Electrolytic Alkali Co Ltd [1914] A.C. 461, HL ..... 462, 465
- Northern Construction Co v Gloge Heating and Plumbing [1986] 2 W.W.R. 649; (1984) 1 Const. L.J. 144, CA (Alta) ..... 154
- Northern Europe-USA Freight Lines Agreement, Re [1990] 4 C.M.L.R. 518 ..... 475
- Northgrain Finance v Ashley (Betta Cars, Third Party) [1963] 1 Q.B. 476; [1962] 3 W.L.R. 1360, CA ..... 707

- Northland Airlines v Dennis Ferranti Meters* (1970) 114 S.J. 845; The Times, October 23, 1970, CA ..... 19
- Norton Tool Co Ltd v Tewson* [1973] 1 W.L.R. 45; [1973] 1 All E.R. 183, NIRC .... 987
- Norweb plc v Dixon* [1995] 1 W.L.R. 636; [1995] 3 All E.R. 952; The Times, February 24, 1995, QBD ..... 6
- Norwegian American Cruises A/S v Paul Mundy (The Vistafjord)* [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 343; The Times, April 22, 1988, CA ..... 119, 120, 121, 123, 124
- Norwich and Peterborough Building Society v Steed (No.2)* [1993] Ch. 116; [1992] 3 W.L.R. 669, CA ..... 327, 329
- Norwich City Council v Harvey* [1989] 1 W.L.R. 828; [1989] 1 All E.R. 1180, CA .... 638
- Norwich Union Fire Insurance Society Ltd v WMH Price* [1934] A.C. 455; (1934) 49 Ll. L. Rep. 55, PC (Aus) ..... 1, 287, 294
- Norwich Union Life Insurance Co Ltd v Qureshi; Aldrich v Norwich Union Life Insurance Co Ltd* [1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 707; [1999] C.L.C. 1963, CA ..... 390, 396, 397, 496
- Notara v Henderson* (1871-72) L.R. 7 Q.B. 225, Ex Chamber ..... 719
- Notcutt v Universal Equipment Co (London)* [1986] 1 W.L.R. 641; [1986] 3 All E.R. 582, CA ..... 875, 892, 899
- Nottidge v Prince* (1860) 2 Giff. 246 ..... 412
- Nottingham Building Society v Eurodynamics Systems plc* [1995] F.S.R. 605, CA ..... 808
- Nottingham Permanent Benefit Building Society v Thurstan* [1903] A.C. 6, HL ..... 547
- Nottingham University v Fischel* [2000] I.C.R. 1462 ..... 400, 928
- Notts Patent Brick and Tile Co v Butler* (1886) 16 Q.B.D. 778 ..... 394
- Nova Petroleum International Establishment v Tricon Trading* [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 312, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 760, 813, 851
- Novorossisk Shipping Co of the USSR v Neopetro Co Ltd (The Ulyanovsk)* [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 425; The Times, November 22, 1989, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 214
- NOW v DOL* [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 587 ..... 725
- Nsubuga v Commercial Union Assurance Co plc* [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 682, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 343
- Nunan v Southern Railway Co* [1924] 1 K.B. 223, CA; affirming [1923] 2 K.B. 703, KBD ..... 217
- Nunn v Dalrymple* (1989) 21 H.L.R. 569; (1990) 59 P. & C.R. 231; [1990] Fam. Law 65, CA ..... 166
- Nurdin & Peacock Plc v DB Ramsden & Co Ltd* [1999] 1 W.L.R. 1249; [1999] 1 All E.R. 941, Ch D ..... 1059
- Nutbrown v Thornton* (18104) 10 Ves. 159 ..... 1023
- Nutt v Read* (2000) 32 H.L.R. 761; (1999) 96(42) L.S.G. 44, CA ..... 291, 318
- Nutting v Baldwin* [1995] 1 W.L.R. 201; [1995] 2 All E.R. 321, Ch D ..... 204, 245, 585, 780, 1006
- NV Handel My J Smits Import-Export v English Exporters (London) Ltd* [1955] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 317, CA; affirming [1955] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 69, QBD ..... 973
- Nykredit Mortgage Bank plc v Edward Erdman Group Ltd (Interest on Damages)* [1997] 1 W.L.R. 1627; [1998] 1 All E.R. 305, HL ..... 938, 939, 984, 997
- Nynehead Developments Ltd v RH Fibreboard Containers Ltd* [1999] 1 E.G.J.R. 7; [1999] 02 E.G. 139, Ch D ..... 797, 807
- Oades v Spafford* [1948] 2 K.B. 74; [1948] 1 All E.R. 607, CA ..... 403
- Oakacre Ltd v Claire Cleaners (Holdings) Ltd* [1982] Ch. 197; [1981] 3 W.L.R. 761, Ch D ..... 1047, 1049
- Oakdown Ltd v Bernstein & Co* (1985) 49 P. & C.R. 282, Ch D ..... 830
- Oakes v Turquand; sub nom. Overend Gurney & Co, Re; Overend Gurney & Co Ex p. Oakes and Peek, Re; Peek v Turquand* (1867) L.R. 2 H.L. 325, HL ..... 394
- Oakworth, The* [1975] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 531 ..... 1022, 1045
- Oasis Merchandising Services Ltd (In Liquidation), Re* [1998] Ch. 170; [1997] 2 W.L.R. 765, CA ..... 431, 672
- Oates v Hudson* (1851) 6 Ex. 346 ..... 407
- Obagi v Stanborough (Developments) Ltd* CHANF 94/0094/B, CA; affirming (1995) 69 P. & C.R. 573, Ch D ..... 956
- Obestain Inc v National Mineral Development Corp Ltd (The Sanix Ace)* [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 465, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 594
- O'Brien (Inspector of Taxes) v Benson's Hosiery (Holdings) Ltd* [1980] A.C. 562; [1979] 3 W.L.R. 572, HL ..... 693
- O'Brien v Associated Fire Alarms* [1968] 1 W.L.R. 1916; [1969] 1 All E.R. 93; 3 K.I.R. 223, CA ..... 207
- O'Brien v MGN Ltd* [2001] EWCA Civ 1279; [2002] C.L.C. 33; The Times, August 8, 2001, CA ..... 219
- Occidental Worldwide Investment Corp v Skibs A/S Avanti (The Siboen and The Sibotre)* [1976] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 293, QBD (Comm Ct) ... 88, 336, 341, 344, 378, 405, 406, 836, 886, 922, 927
- Ocean Chemical Transport Inc v Enxor Craggs Ltd* [2000] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 519; [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 446, CA ..... 217, 219, 222, 266
- Ocean Dynamic, The See Jack L Israel Ltd v Ocean Dynamic Lines SA and Ocean Victory Ltd*
- Ocean Enterprise, The See Glatzer v Bradston Ltd*

- Ocean Frost, The See Armagas Ltd v Mundo-gas SA
- Ocean Tramp Tankers Corp v V/O Sovfracht (The Eugenia) [1964] 2 Q.B. 226; [1964] 2 W.L.R. 114, CA ..... 868, 880, 903, 904, 905, 922, 1064
- Oceanic Amity, The See Seven Seas Transportation Ltd v Pacifico Union Marina Corporation
- Oceanic Freighters Corp v Reederei und Schiffahrts GmbH (The Libyaville) [1975] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 537, QBD (Comm Ct) .... 778, 812
- Oceanic Sun Line Special Shipping Co v Fay (1988) 165 C.L.R. 197, HC (Aus) .... 15, 219
- Ockerby & Co Ltd v Murdock (1916) 19 W.A.R. 1 ..... 876
- O'Connor v BDB Kirby & Co [1972] 1 Q.B. 90; [1971] 2 W.L.R. 1233, CA ..... 841, 986
- O'Dea v Allstates Leasing Systems (WA) Pty Ltd (1983) 57 A.L.J.R. 172 ..... 1001
- Odenfeld, The See Gator Shipping Corp v Trans-Asiatic Oil SA and Occidental Shipping Etablissement SA
- Odessa Tramways Co v Mendel (1878) L.R. 8 Ch. D. 235, CA ..... 1020, 1035
- Office Angels v Rainer-Thomas [1991] I.R.L.R. 214; The Times, April 15, 1991, CA ..... 459
- Offord v Davies (1862) 12 C.B.N.S. 748 .... 38, 40, 41, 71
- Offshore International SA v Banco Central SA [1977] 1 W.L.R. 399; [1976] 3 All E.R. 749, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 152
- Ogden v Fossick (1862) D. F. & J. 426 ..... 1037
- Ogdens Ltd v Nelson; Ogdens Ltd v Telford [1905] A.C. 109, HL ..... 205
- Ogilvie v Foljambe (1817) 3 Mer. 53 ..... 183
- Ogilvy v Hope Davies [1976] 1 All E.R. 683; (1975) 31 P. & C.R. 268, Ch D .... 111, 116, 117
- Ogle v Earl Vane (1867-68) L.R. 3 Q.B. 272, Ex Chamber ..... 104
- O'Grady v M Saper Ltd [1940] 2 K.B. 469, CA ..... 875
- O'Grady v Westminster Scaffolding [1962] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 238, QBD ..... 978
- Ogwr BC v Dykes [1989] 1 W.L.R. 295; [1989] 2 All E.R. 880, CA ..... 172
- O'Hanlon v GW Railway (1865) 6 B. & S. 484 ..... 953
- Ojelay v Neosale [1987] 2 F.G.L.R. 167 ..... 708
- Ojich v Waller; Ojich v Galerie Moderne Ltd, unreported, December 14, 1998, QBD .... 733
- Okura & Co v Navara Shipping Corp SA [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 537, CA ..... 54
- Oldershaw v King (1857) 2 H. & N. 517 ..... 87
- Olearia Tirrena SpA v NV Algemeene Oliehandel (The Osterbek) [1973] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 86, CA ..... 827
- Oleificio Zucchi SpA v Northern Sales [1965] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 496, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 349
- Olib, The See Enimont Overseas AG v RO Jugotanker Zadar
- Olipant v Wadling (1875) 1 Q.B.D. 145 ..... 700
- Oliva, The See Meling v Minos Shipping Co
- Oliver v Bank of England See Starkey v Bank of England
- Olley v Fisher (1887) L.R. 34 Ch. D. 367, Ch D ..... 322
- Olley v Marlborough Court Ltd [1949] 1 K.B. 532; [1949] 1 All E.R. 127, CA ..... 219, 224
- Olsen v Corry and Gravesend Aviation Ltd [1936] 3 All E.R. 241 ..... 543
- Olsson v Dyson (1969) 120 C.L.R. 365 ..... 687
- Olympia & York Canary Wharf (No.2), Re Bear Stearns International v Adamson [1993] B.C.C. 159 ..... 830
- Olympia Sauna Shipping Co SA v Shinwa Kaiun Kaisha Ltd (The Ypatia Halloussi) [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 364, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 322, 324
- Olympic Brilliance, The See Lakeport Navigation Co Panama SA v Anonima Petroli Italiana SpA
- Olympic Pride, The See Etablissements Levy (Georges et Paul) v Adderley Navigation Co Panama SA
- Omar v El Wakil [2001] EWCA Civ 1090 .... 1007, 1009
- Omnium de Traitement et de Valorisation SA v Hilmarton Ltd [1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 146; [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 222, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 450
- Omnium d'Enterprises v Sutherland [1919] 1 K.B. 618, CA ..... 834
- On Demand Information plc (In Administrative Receivership) v Michael Gerson (Finance) plc [2002] UKHL 13; [2002] 2 W.L.R. 919, HL ..... 779, 780
- One Life Ltd (In Liquidation) v Roy [1996] 2 B.C.L.C. 608; The Times, July 12, 1996, Ch D ..... 491, 518
- O'Neil v Armstrong Mitchell & Co [1895] 2 Q.B. 418, CA ..... 97
- Oocl Bravery, The [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 394, US Ct ..... 229, 638
- Oom v Bruce (1810) 12 East 225 ..... 493
- Opera Co of Boston v Wolf Trap Foundation for the Performing Arts 817 F.2d. 1094 ..... 904
- Orakpo v Manson Investments Ltd [1978] A.C. 95; [1977] 3 W.L.R. 229, HL ..... 545
- Ord v Upton [2000] Ch. 352; [2000] 2 W.L.R. 755, CA ..... 700
- Ord v White (1840) 3 Beav. 357 ..... 689
- Oresundsvarvet AB v Lemos (The Angelic Star) [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 122; [1988] 1 F.T.L.R. 94, CA ..... 480, 1001
- Orient Overseas Management and Finance Ltd v File Shipping Co Ltd (The Energy Progress) [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 355, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 66, 209, 744, 767
- Orion Finance Ltd v JD Williams & Co Ltd [1997] C.L.Y. 986 ..... 107, 403

- Orion Insurance Co plc v Sphere Drake Insurance plc [1992] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 239, CA; affirming [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 465; The Independent, February 1, 1990, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 56, 124, 169, 172, 192, 195
- Orjula, The See Losinjska Plovidba v Transco Overseas Ltd
- Orman v Saville Sportswear [1960] 1 W.L.R. 1055; [1960] 3 All E.R. 105, QBD ..... 875
- Ormrod v Crosville Motor Services Ltd [1953] 1 W.L.R. 1120; [1953] 2 All E.R. 753, CA ..... 706
- Oro Chef, The [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 509 .... 778, 779, 1022, 1023
- O'Rorke v Bolingbroke (1876-77) L.R. 2 App. Cas. 814, HL (UK-Irl) ..... 420
- Orphanos v Queen Mary College [1985] A.C. 761; [1985] 2 All E.R. 233, HL ..... 513
- Osborne v Williams (1811) 18 Ves. 379 ..... 492
- Oscar Chess v Williams [1957] 1 W.L.R. 370; [1957] 1 All E.R. 325, CA ... 119, 291, 351, 354
- O'Shea Ex p. Lancaster, Re [1911] 2 K.B. 981, CA ..... 531
- Osman v Moss [1970] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 313, CA ..... 435
- Osterbek, The See Olearia Tirrena SpA v NV Algemeene Oliehandel
- O'Sullivan v Management Agency and Music Ltd [1985] Q.B. 428; [1984] 3 W.L.R. 448, CA ..... 414, 423, 424, 439, 470, 481
- O'Sullivan v Management Agency and Music Ltd [1985] Q.B. 428; [1984] 3 W.L.R. 448, CA ..... 68
- O'Sullivan v Thomas [1895] 1 Q.B. 698, QBD ..... 498, 526
- O'Sullivan v Williams [1992] 3 All E.R. 385; [1992] R.T.R. 402, CA ..... 606
- Oswald Hickson Collier & Co v Carter-Ruck [1984] A.C. 720; [1984] 2 W.L.R. 847, CA ..... 463
- OT Africa Line Ltd v Vickers plc [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 700; [1996] C.L.C. 722, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 8, 9, 303, 306, 318
- OTM v Hydranautics [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 211, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 17, 19, 20
- Otter v Church, Adams, Tatham & Co [1953] Ch. 280; [1953] 1 W.L.R. 156, Ch D ..... 699, 957
- Otto v Bolton; Otto v Norris [1936] 2 K.B. 46, KBD ..... 354
- OTV Birwelco Ltd v Technical & General Guarantee Co Ltd [2002] EWHC 2240; [2002] 4 All E.R. 668, QBD (T&CC) .... 158, 196, 321, 434, 670
- Oughtred v Inland Revenue Commissioners [1960] A.C. 206; [1959] 3 W.L.R. 898, HL ..... 679
- Outram v Academy Plastics Ltd [2001] I.C.R. 367; [2000] I.R.L.R. 499, CA ..... 157
- Overbrooke Estates Ltd v Glencombe Properties Ltd [1974] 1 W.L.R. 1335; [1974] 3 All E.R. 511, Ch D ..... 386, 714
- Overland Shoes Ltd v Schenkers Ltd; Overland Shoes Ltd v Schenkers International Deutschland GmbH [1998] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 498; (1998) 95(11) L.S.G. 36, CA ..... 248, 259, 260, 261
- Overmark Smith Warden Ltd, Re [1982] 1 W.L.R. 1195; [1982] 3 All E.R. 513, Ch D ..... 80
- Overseas Buyers v Granadex SA [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 608, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 65
- Overseas Medical Supplies Ltd v Orient Transport Services Ltd [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 981; [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 273, CA ..... 259, 260, 261
- Overseas Tankship (UK) Ltd v Morts Dock & Engineering Co (The Wagon Mound [1961] A.C. 388; [1961] 2 W.L.R. 126, PC (Aus) ..... 363, 939
- Overseas Union Insurance v AA Mutual International Insurance [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 63; [1988] F.T.L.R. 421, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 164, 448
- Overseas Union Insurance v Incorporated General Insurance [1992] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 439; The Times, December 11, 1991, CA ..... 434, 487
- Overstone v Shipway [1962] 1 W.L.R. 117; [1962] 1 All E.R. 52, CA ..... 851, 997, 1014
- Owner of Dredger Liesbosch v Owners of SS Edison; Liesbosch Dredger v SS Edison See Liesbosch, The
- Owners of Cargo Laden on Board the Albacruz v Owners of the Albazero; sub nom. Concord Petroleum Corp v Gosford Marine Panama SA [1977] A.C. 774; [1976] 3 W.L.R. 419, HL ..... 592, 594, 595, 597, 603, 606
- Owners of Cargo Lately Laden on Board the Ardennes v Owners of the Ardennes (The Ardennes) [1951] 1 K.B. 55; [1950] 2 All E.R. 517, KBD
- Owners of SS Matheos v Louis Dreyfus & Co [1925] A.C. 654, HL ..... 883
- Owners of SS Raphael v Brandy; sub nom. Brandy v Owners of SS Raphael [1911] A.C. 413, HL ..... 4
- Owners of Steamship Ballyalton v Preston Corp (The Ballyalton) [1961] 1 W.L.R. 929; [1961] 1 All E.R. 459, PDAID ..... 224
- Owners of the Cap Palos v Alder [1921] P. 458; (1921) 8 Ll. L. Rep. 309, CA ..... 84, 231, 232
- Owners of the Borvigiant v Owners of the Romina G [2002] EWHC 1759; [2003] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 129, QBD (Adm Ct) ..... 627
- Oxendale v Wetherell (1829) 9 B. & C. 386 ..... 783
- Ozalid Group (Export) Ltd v African Continental Bank Ltd [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 231, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 962, 997
- P, The [1992] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 470 ..... 858, 1047

- P & B (Run-Off) Ltd v Woolley [2002] EWCA Civ 65; [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 577, CA ..... 434
- P & M Kaye Ltd v Hosier & Dickinson Ltd [1972] 1 W.L.R. 146; [1972] 1 All E.R. 121, HL ..... 448
- P & O Steam Navigation Co v Youell [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 136; The Times, April 1, 1997, CA ..... 941, 943, 989, 1050, 1057
- P S Chellaram & Co Ltd v China Ocean Shipping Co (The Zhi Jiang Kou) [1991] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 493, CA (NSW) ..... 403, 633
- P Samuel & Co Ltd v Dumas [1924] A.C. 431; (1924) 18 Ll. L. Rep. 211, HL ..... 577, 585
- Paal Wilson & Co A/S v Partenreederei Hannah Blumenthal (The Hannah Blumenthal) [1983] 1 A.C. 854; [1982] 3 W.L.R. 1149; [1983] 1 All E.R. 34, HL ..... 1, 8, 9, 10, 306, 823, 901, 905
- Pacific & General Insurance Co Ltd v Hazell; Pacific & General Insurance Co Ltd v Home & Overseas Insurance Co Ltd [1997] 1 L.R.L.R. 65; [1997] B.C.C. 400, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 726
- Pacific Associates v Baxter [1990] 1 Q.B. 993; [1989] 3 W.L.R. 1150, CA ..... 637, 638, 756
- Pacific Colocotronis, The See UBAF Ltd v European American Banking Corp
- Pacific Phosphate Co Ltd v Empire Transport Co Ltd (1920) 4 Ll. L. Rep. 189, KBD ..... 899
- Pacol Ltd v Trade Lines Ltd (The Henrik Sif) [1982] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 456; [1982] Com. L.R. 92, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 106, 107, 113, 115, 399
- Page One Records, Ltd v Britton [1968] 1 W.L.R. 157; [1967] 3 All E.R. 822, Ch D ..... 1037, 1043
- Page v Combined Shipping & Trading Co Ltd [1997] 3 All E.R. 656; [1996] C.L.C. 1952, CA ..... 743, 750, 958
- Page v Cox (1852) 10 Hare 163 ..... 647, 648, 651
- Paget v Marshall (1885) L.R. 28 Ch. D. 255, Ch D ..... 319, 322
- Pagnan & Fratelli v Coprosol SA [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 283, CA ..... 1000
- Pagnan SpA v Feed Products Ltd [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 601, CA ..... 17, 48, 50, 52, 56, 57
- Pagnan SpA v Granaria BV [1986] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 547, CA ..... 17, 57, 60
- Pagnan SpA v Tradax Ocean Transportation SA [1987] 3 All E.R. 565; [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 342, CA ..... 65, 889
- Pain, Re; sub nom. Gustavon v Haviland [1919] 1 Ch. 38, Ch D ..... 678
- Paine v Meller (1801) 6 Ves. 349 ..... 896
- Palace Shipping Co Ltd v Caine [1907] A.C. 386, HL ..... 97
- Palgrave Brown & Son Ltd v Owners of SS Turid [1922] 1 A.C. 397; (1922) 10 Ll. L. Rep. 375, HL ..... 198
- Palmco Shipping Inc v Continental Ore Corp (The Captain George K) [1970] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 21, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 797, 880, 897, 903
- Palmer v Carey [1926] A.C. 703, PC (Aus) ..... 679
- Palmer v Johnson (1884) 13 Q.B.D. 351 ..... 772
- Palmer v Mallet (1887) L.R. 36 Ch. D. 411, CA ..... 575, 576
- Palmer v Temple (1839) 9 A. & E. 508 ..... 1007
- Palmolive Co (England) Ltd v Freedman [1928] Ch. 264, CA ..... 474
- Pamela, The See Schelde Delta Shipping BV v Astarte Shipping BV (The Pamela)
- Pan Atlantic Insurance Co Ltd v Pine Top Insurance Co Ltd [1995] 1 A.C. 501; [1994] 3 W.L.R. 677, HL ..... 336, 338, 342, 392, 395
- Pan Ocean Shipping Co v Creditcorp (The Trident Beauty) [1994] 1 W.L.R. 161; [1994] 1 All E.R. 470, HL ..... 690, 702, 850, 1051
- Panaghia P, The See Howard Houlder & Partners and Banchero-Costa & Co SpA v Marine General Transporters Corp and Achille Lauro Lines SRL
- Panalpina International Transport v Densil Underwear [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 187, QBD ..... 970, 971
- Panayiotou v Sony Music Entertainment (UK) Ltd (1994) [1994] E.C.C. 395; [1994] E.M.L.R. 229; The Times, June 30, 1994 ..... 421, 464, 471
- Panchaud Freres SA v Etablissements General Grain Co [1970] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 53, CA ..... 815, 837
- Panchaud Freres SA v Pagnan (R) & Fratelli [1974] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 394, CA ..... 809
- Pancommerce SA v Veccheema BV [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 304; [1983] Com. L.R. 230, CA ..... 55, 220, 878
- Panorama Developments (Guildford) Ltd v Fidelis Furnishing Fabrics Ltd [1971] 2 Q.B. 711; [1971] 3 W.L.R. 440, CA ..... 192, 712
- Panoutsos v Raymond Hadley Corp of New York [1917] 2 K.B. 473, CA ..... 104
- Pao On v Lau Yiu Long [1980] A.C. 614; [1979] 3 W.L.R. 435, PC (HK) ..... 78, 94, 95, 98, 134, 153, 161, 197, 201, 405, 407, 422, 439
- Pappadakis v Pappadakis [2000] W.T.L.R. 719; The Times, January 19, 2000, Ch D ..... 325, 685
- Paradine v Jane (1647) Aleyn 26 ..... 866
- Paradise Motor Co, Re [1968] 1 W.L.R. 1125; [1968] 2 All E.R. 625, CA ..... 686
- Paragon Finance plc (formerly National Home Loans Corp) v Nash [2001] EWCA Civ 1466; [2002] 1 W.L.R. 685, CA ..... 58, 203, 253, 254, 428
- Paragon Finance plc v Staunton See Paragon Finance plc (formerly National Home Loans Corp) v Nash
- Parana, The (1876-77) L.R. 2 P.D. 118, CA ..... 966

- Paris Oldham & Gijlstra v Staffordshire Building Society [1988] 27 E.G. 71, CA ..... 935
- Park Air Services plc, Re; sub nom. Christopher Moran Holdings Ltd v Bairstow [2000] 2 A.C. 172; [1999] 2 W.L.R. 396, HL ..... 704, 860, 1013
- Parker v Alcock (1831) You. 361 ..... 528
- Parker v Arthur Murray Inc 295 N.E. 2d 487 (1973) ..... 872
- Parker v Bristol & Exeter Railway (1851) 6 Ex. 702 ..... 407, 408
- Parker v Clark [1960] 1 W.L.R. 286; [1960] 1 All E.R. 93, Assizes (Exeter) ..... 166, 184
- Parker v South Eastern Railway (1877) 2 C.P.D. 416 ..... 217, 218, 246
- Parker v Winlow (1857) 7 E. & B. 942 ..... 733
- Parker-Tweedale v Dunbar Bank plc (No.1) [1991] Ch. 12; [1990] 3 W.L.R. 767, CA ..... 616, 984
- Parkin v Thorold (1852) 16 Beav. 59 ..... 827
- Parkin, Re [1892] 3 Ch. 510 ..... 1036
- Parkinson v College of Ambulance Ltd [1925] 2 K.B. 1, KBD ..... 451, 495
- Parkinson v St James and Seacroft University Hospital NHS Trust [2001] EWCA Civ 530; [2002] Q.B. 266, CA ..... 348, 611
- Parks v Esso Petroleum Co Ltd [2000] E.C.C. 45; [2000] Eu. L.R. 25, CA; affirming [1999] 1 C.M.L.R. 455, Ch D .... 330, 486, 498, 709
- Parry v Cleaver [1970] A.C. 1; [1969] 2 W.L.R. 821, HL ..... 981
- Parson v Alexander (1855) 5 E. & B. 263 ..... 527
- Parsons (Livestock) Ltd v Uttley Ingham & Co Ltd [1978] Q.B. 791; [1977] 3 W.L.R. 990, CA ..... 839, 840, 967, 968, 973
- Parsons v BNM Laboratories Ltd [1964] 1 Q.B. 95; [1963] 2 W.L.R. 1273, CA .... 957, 981
- Parsons v Thompson (1790) 1 H.B. 322 ..... 451
- Parsons Bros Ltd v Shea (1966) 53 D.L.R. 2d. 36 ..... 915
- Parsons Corp v CV Scheepvaartonderneming Happy Ranger (The Happy Ranger) [2002] EWCA Civ 694; [2002] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 24, CA ..... 229, 237
- Partabmull Rameshar v KC Sethia (1944) Ltd [1951] 2 All E.R. 352 (Note); [1951] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 89, HL ..... 203, 204
- Partridge v Crittenden [1968] 1 W.L.R. 1204; [1968] 2 All E.R. 421, DC ..... 14
- Partridge v Morris [1995] E.G.C.S. 158, QBD ..... 976
- Pascoe v Turner [1979] 1 W.L.R. 431; [1979] 2 All E.R. 945, CA .... 135, 136, 142, 145, 149
- Passmore v Morland plc [1999] 3 All E.R. 1005; [1999] 1 C.M.L.R. 1129, CA; affirming [1998] 4 All E.R. 468, Ch D ..... 476
- Patel v Ali [1984] Ch. 283; [1984] 2 W.L.R. 960, Ch D ..... 882, 1027
- Patel v Hooper & Jackson [1999] 1 W.L.R. 1792; [1999] 1 All E.R. 992, CA .... 933, 989
- Pateman v Pay (1974) 232 E.G. 457 ..... 316
- Patent Floor Cloth Co, Re (1872) 26 L.T. 467 ..... 744
- Paterson v Murphy (1853) 11 Hare 88 ..... 685
- Paterson Zochonis & Co Ltd v Elder Dempster & Co Ltd [1924] A.C. 522; (1924) 18 Ll. L. Rep. 319, HL ... 627, 628, 629, 630, 635, 640, 656
- Patrick, Re; sub nom. Bills v Tatham [1891] 1 Ch. 82, CA ..... 685, 686
- Patrick v Milner (1877) 2 C.P.D. 342 ..... 828
- Patrick & Co Ltd v Russo-British Grain Export Co Ltd [1927] 2 K.B. 535; (1927) 28 Ll. L. Rep. 358, KBD ..... 954
- Paul v Constance [1977] 1 W.L.R. 527; [1977] 1 All E.R. 195, CA ..... 444, 650, 685
- Paul Smith v H&S International Holding Inc [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 127, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 60, 205
- Paula Lee Ltd v Zehil & Co Ltd [1983] 2 All E.R. 390, QBD ..... 203, 245, 958
- Pauling's Settlement Trusts, Re [1964] Ch. 303; [1963] 3 W.L.R. 742, CA ..... 412
- Pawle's Case See Estates Investment Co, Re
- Payne v Cave (1789) 3 T.R. 148 ..... 11
- Payne v Wilson (1827) 7 B. & C. 423 ..... 87
- Paynter v James (1867) L.R. 2 C.P. 348 ..... 763
- Paynter v Williams (1833) 1 C. & M. 810 ..... 1061
- Payzu Ltd v Saunders [1919] 2 K.B. 581 .... 809, 978
- PB Leasing Ltd v Patel and Patel (t/a Plankhouse Stores) [1995] C.C.L.R. 82, CC .... 329
- PC Producers v Dalton [1957] R.P.C. 199 ..... 957
- PCW Syndicates v PCW Reinsurers [1996] 1 W.L.R. 1136; [1996] 1 All E.R. 774, CA .... 396
- Peace v Edinburgh City Council 1999 S.L.T. 712; 1999 S.C.L.R. 593, OH ..... 1031
- Peach Publishing Ltd v Slater & Co; Slater & Co v Sheil Land Associates Ltd [1998] B.C.C. 139; [1998] P.N.L.R. 364, CA ..... 347
- Pearce v Brain [1929] 2 K.B. 310 ..... 549
- Pearce v Brooks (1866) L.R. 1 Ex. 213 .... 443, 482
- Pearce v Gardner [1899] 1 Q.B. 688 ..... 185
- Pearce v Merriman [1904] 1 K.B. 80, KBD ..... 165
- Pearce v University of Aston in Birmingham (No.1) [1991] 2 All E.R. 461, CA .... 450, 1031
- Pearl Carriers Inc v Japan Line Ltd (The Chemical Venture) [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 508, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 81, 117
- Pearson v Scott (1878) 9 Ch.D. 198 ..... 727
- Peck v Lateu (1973) 117 S.J. 185; The Times, January 18, 1973 ..... 515
- Peco Arts Inc v Hazlitt Gallery Ltd [1983] 1 W.L.R. 1315; [1983] 3 All E.R. 193, QBD ..... 293
- Peck v Gurney (1873) L.R. 6 H.L. 377; [1861-1873] All E.R. Rep. 116, HL ..... 341
- Peeyhouse v Garland Coal Co 382 P. 2d 109 (1862) ..... 944
- Pegase, The See Satef-Huttenes Albernus SpA v Paloma Tercera Shipping Co SA
- Pellecat v Angell (1835) 2 Cr.M. & R. 311 .... 433

- Penarth Dock Engineering Co v Pounds [1963] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 359, QBD ..... 928
- Pendrecht, The See Stoomv Maats De Maas NV v Nippon Yusen Kaisha
- Penelope, The See Clevees Western Valleys Anthracite Collieries Ltd v Owners of The Penelope
- Penn v Bristol and West Building Society; sub nom. Brill & Co v Penn [1997] 1 W.L.R. 1356; [1997] 3 All E.R. 470, CA ..... 584, 739
- Pennington v Waine [2002] EWCA Civ 227; [2002] 1 W.L.R. 2075, CA ..... 77, 686, 1037
- Pennsylvania Shipping Co v Cie Nationale de Navigation (1936) 155 L.T. 294 ..... 375
- Pepper v Hart [1993] A.C. 593; [1992] 3 W.L.R. 1032, HL ..... 263, 363, 553
- Pepper v Webb [1969] 1 W.L.R. 514; [1969] 2 All E.R. 216, CA ..... 810
- Pepper & Hope v Daish [1980] I.R.L.R. 13, EAT ..... 97
- Percival v London County Council Asylum etc. Committee (1918) 87 L.J.K.B. 677 .... 21, 22
- Perera v Vandiyar [1953] 1 W.L.R. 672; [1953] 1 All E.R. 1109, CA ..... 935, 936
- Performing Right Society Ltd v London Theatre of Varieties Ltd [1924] A.C. 1, HL; affirming [1922] 2 K.B. 433, CA ..... 649
- Performing Rights Society v Rowland [1997] 3 All E.R. 336 ..... 681, 683, 700
- Perrett v Collins [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 255; [1999] P.N.L.R. 77; The Times, June 23, 1998, CA ..... 613
- Perry v Barnett (1885) 15 Q.B.D. 388 ..... 712
- Perry v Sidney Phillips & Son [1982] 1 W.L.R. 1297; [1982] 3 All E.R. 705, CA; reversing [1982] 1 All E.R. 1005, QBD ..... 841, 933, 947, 972, 975, 989
- Perry v Suffields Ltd [1916] 2 Ch. 187, CA ..... 18, 52
- Perrylease Ltd v Imccar AG [1988] 1 W.L.R. 463; [1987] 2 All E.R. 373, QBD ..... 199
- Persson v London Country Buses [1974] 1 W.L.R. 569; [1974] 1 All E.R. 1251, CA ..... 447, 669
- Peruvian Guano Co Ltd v Dreyfus Bros & Co Ltd [1892] A.C. 166, HL ..... 720
- Peskin v Anderson [2001] B.C.C. 874; [2001] 1 B.C.L.C. 372, CA; affirming [2000] 2 585 B.C.L.C. 1, Ch D
- Peter Cassidy Seed Co v Osuustukkukauppa II. [1957] 1 W.L.R. 273; [1957] 1 All E.R. 484, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 65, 435, 889
- Peter Cremer GmbH & Co v Granaria BV; Granaria BV v C. Schwarze [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 583, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 108, 116, 814
- Peter Dumenil & Co Ltd v James Ruddin Ltd [1953] 1 W.L.R. 815; [1953] 2 All E.R. 294, CA ..... 809
- Peter Lind & Co Ltd v Constable Hart & Co Ltd [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 248; 9 B.L.R. 1, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 809, 897
- Peter Lind & Co Ltd v Mersey Docks and Harbour Board [1972] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 234, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 17, 21, 1061
- Peter Long & Partners v Burns [1956] 1 W.L.R. 1083; [1956] 3 All E.R. 207, CA; affirming [1956] 1 W.L.R. 413, QBD ..... 742
- Peter Pan Manufacturing Corp v Corsets Silhouette Ltd [1964] 1 W.L.R. 96; [1963] 3 All E.R. 402, Ch D ..... 928
- Peter Schmidt, The See Galaxy Energy International Ltd v Novorossiysk Shipping Co
- Peters v Batchelor (1950) 100 L.J. 718, CA ..... 318
- Peters v Fleming (1840) 6 M. & W. 42 ..... 540
- Peters v General Accident Fire and Life Assurance Corp Ltd [1937] 4 All E.R. 628 .... 694
- Petrofina (Great Britain) Ltd v Martin [1966] Ch. 146; [1966] 2 W.L.R. 318, CA ..... 473, 474
- Petrofina (UK) Ltd v Magnaload Ltd [1984] Q.B. 127; [1983] 3 W.L.R. 805, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 667
- Petrograde Inc v Stinnes Handel GmbH [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 142; The Times, July 27, 1994, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 109, 800
- Petrotrade Inc v Smith [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 486; [2000] C.L.C. 916, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 747
- Petrou v Woodstead Finance [1986] F.L.R. 158, CA ..... 428
- Pettitt v Pettitt; sub nom. P v P [1970] A.C. 777; [1969] 2 W.L.R. 966, HL ..... 165
- Peyman v Lanjani [1985] Ch. 457; [1985] 2 W.L.R. 154, CA ..... 391, 760, 813, 814, 815, 816
- Peyton v Mindham [1972] 1 W.L.R. 8; [1971] 3 All E.R. 1215, Ch D ..... 459, 461
- Pfizer Corp v Ministry of Health [1965] A.C. 512; [1965] 2 W.L.R. 387, HL ..... 5, 97
- Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain v Boots Cash Chemists (Southern) Ltd [1953] 1 Q.B. 401; [1953] 2 W.L.R. 427, CA; affirming [1952] 2 Q.B. 795, QBD .... 12, 13
- Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain v Dickson [1970] A.C. 403; [1968] 3 W.L.R. 286, HL ..... 474, 560
- Phibro Energy AG v Nissho Iwai Corp (The Honam Jade) [1991] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 38, CA ..... 795, 799, 949
- Philip & Co v Knoblauch 1907 S.C. 994 ..... 14
- Philip Collins Ltd v Davis [2000] 3 All E.R. 808; [2001] E.C.D.R. 17, Ch D ..... 119, 123, 198, 403
- Philips Hong Kong Ltd v Attorney General of Hong Kong 61 B.L.R. 41; (1993) 9 Const. L.J. 202, PC (HK) .... 1000, 1001, 1002, 1003
- Phillips v Alhambra Palace Co [1901] 1 Q.B. 59, QBD ..... 756
- Phillips v Brooks Ltd [1919] 2 K.B. 243, KBD ..... 300, 301

- Phillips v Foxall (1871-72) L.R. 7 Q.B. 666, QB ..... 392
 Phillips v Homfray (No.1); Fothergill v Phillips (1870-71) L.R. 6 Ch. App. 770, Lord Chancellor ..... 391
 Phillips v Lamdin [1949] 2 K.B. 33; [1949] 1 All E.R. 770, KBD ..... 831, 1023
 Phillips v Ward [1956] 1 W.L.R. 471; [1956] 1 All E.R. 874, CA ..... 934, 959
 Phillips Products v Hyland [1987] 1 W.L.R. 659; [1987] 2 All E.R. 620, CA ..... 248, 249, 256, 261
 Phillipson v Hayter (1870-71) L.R. 6 C.P. 38, CCP ..... 711
 Phillipson v Kerry (1863) 32 Beav. 628 ..... 326
 Philpot v Gruninger (1872) 14 Wall. 570 ..... 71
 Phipps v Jackson (1887) 56 L.J.Ch. 350 ..... 1032
 Phipps v Orthodox Unit Trusts [1958] 1 Q.B. 314; [1957] 3 W.L.R. 856, CA ..... 957
 Phoenix General Insurance Co of Greece SA v Administratia Asiguratorilor de [1988] Q.B. 216; [1987] 2 W.L.R. 512, CA ..... 434, 481, 484, 486, 487, 1013
 Phonogram Ltd v Lane [1982] Q.B. 938; [1981] 3 W.L.R. 736, CA ..... 735, 736
 Phonographic Equipment (1958) v Muslu [1961] 1 W.L.R. 1379; [1961] 3 All E.R. 626, CA ..... 1000, 1006
 Photo Production Ltd v Securicor Transport Ltd [1980] A.C. 827; [1980] 2 W.L.R. 283, HL ... 215, 225, 226, 227, 229, 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237, 239, 240, 760, 791, 792, 796, 806, 844, 849, 850, 851, 861, 933
 Pickering v Sogex Services (UK) 20 B.L.R. 66; (1982) 262 E.G. 770 ..... 431
 Pickersgill & Sons Ltd v London and Provincial Marine & General Insurance Co Ltd [1912] 3 K.B. 614, KBD ..... 371, 397, 689
 Picton Jones v Arcadia Developments [1989] 1 E.G.L.R. 43; [1989] 03 E.G. 85, DC ..... 431
 Pigott v Stratton (1859) 1 D.F. & J. 33 ..... 116
 Pilbrow v Peerless De Rougemont & Co [1999] 3 All E.R. 355 ..... 806, 817, 821, 834, 1053
 Pilgram v Rice-Smith [1977] 1 W.L.R. 671; [1977] 2 All E.R. 658, DC ..... 371
 Pilkington v Wood [1953] Ch. 770; [1953] 3 W.L.R. 522, Ch D ..... 972, 978
 Pillans v Van Mierop (1765) 3 Burr. 1663 ..... 67
 Pilmore v Hood (1838) 5 Bing. N.C. 97 ..... 341
 Pina, The See Atlantic Marine Transport Corp v Coscol Petroleum Corp
 Pinnock Bros v Lewis & Peat Ltd [1923] 1 K.B. 690; (1923) 14 I.L. L. Rep. 277, KBD ..... 227, 968
 Pioneer Concrete (UK) Ltd v National Employers Mutual General Insurance Association Ltd [1985] 2 All E.R. 395; [1985] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 274, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 762
 Pioneer Container, The [1994] 2 A.C. 324; [1994] 3 W.L.R. 1, PC (HK) ..... 589, 607, 628, 630, 633, 634, 641, 642, 645
 Pioneer Shipping Ltd v BTP Tioxide Ltd (The Nema) (No.1) [1980] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 519 (Note); The Times, November 16, 1979, CA ..... 867
 Pioneer Shipping Ltd v BTP Tioxide Ltd (The Nema) (No.2) [1982] A.C. 724; [1981] 3 W.L.R. 292, HL ..... 238, 449, 796, 867, 872, 874, 891, 899
 Pirie v Richardson [1927] 1 K.B. 448, CA .... 571
 Pitt v PHH Asset Management Ltd [1994] 1 W.L.R. 327; [1993] 4 All E.R. 961, CA .... 54, 89, 154, 178
 Pitts v Hunt [1991] 1 Q.B. 24; [1990] 3 W.L.R. 542, QBD ..... 432, 437, 482, 483
 PJ Van der Zijden Wildhandel NV v Tucker & Cross Ltd (No.1) [1975] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 240, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 838, 883
 Planché v Colburn (1831) 8 Bing. 14 .... 822, 944
 Plasticmoda Societa Per Azioni v Davidsons (Manchester) [1952] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 527, CA ..... 104
 Platform Home Loans Ltd v Oyston Shipways Ltd [2000] 2 A.C. 190; [1999] 2 W.L.R. 518, HL ..... 939, 986
 Platt v London Underground Ltd [2001] 2 E.G.L.R. 121; [2001] 20 E.G.C.S. 227; The Times, March 13, 2001, Ch D ..... 980
 Playa Larga and Marble Islands, The See Empresa Exportadora De Azucar (CUBAZUCAR) v Industria Azucarera Nacional SA (IANSAs)
 Pleasurama v Sun Alliance and London Insurance [1979] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 389, QBD ..... 945
 Plevins v Downing (1876) 1 C.P.D.220 ..... 104, 105
 Plimmer v Wellington Corporation (1883-84) L.R. 9 App. Cas. 699, PC (NZ) ..... 136, 137, 146
 Plummer v PW Wilkins & Son Ltd [1981] 1 W.L.R. 831; [1981] 1 All E.R. 91, QBD ..... 981
 Plumpton v Burkinshaw [1908] 2 K.B. 572, CA ..... 705
 Plumtress Marriage Settlement, Re [1910] 1 Ch. 609, Ch D ..... 651
 Plymouth Corp v Harvey [1971] 1 W.L.R. 549; [1971] 1 All E.R. 623, Ch D ..... 190
 Pole v Leask (1862) 33 L.J.Ch. 155 ..... 712
 Polemis and Furness Withy & Co Ltd, Re [1921] 3 K.B. 560; (1921) 8 I.L. L. Rep. 351, CA ..... 224
 Polhill v Walter (1832) 3 B. & Ad. 114 .... 344, 374, 738
 Policy of the Equitable Life Assurance of the United States and Mitchell (1911) 27 T.L.R. 213 ..... 648
 Polish Steamship Co v AJ Williams Fuels (Overseas Sales) (The Suwalki) [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 511, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 713
 Polkey v AE Dayton Services Ltd [1988] A.C. 344; [1987] 3 W.L.R. 1153, HL ..... 836
 Pollard v Clayton (1885) 1 K. & J. 462 ..... 1024
 Pollock v Stables (1848) 12 Q.B. 765 ..... 712

- Pollway v Abdullah [1974] 1 W.L.R. 493;
[1974] 2 All E.R. 381, CA ..... 71, 81
- Poly Lina Ltd v Finch [1995] F.S.R. 751,
QBD ..... 455, 458, 459
- Polyduke, The See Bahamas Oil Refining Co v
Kristiansands Tank Rederie
- Pool v Pool (1889) 58 L.J.P. 67 ..... 750
- Pope & Pearson v Buenos Ayres New Gas Co
(1892) 8 T.L.R. 758 ..... 288
- Pople v Evans [1969] 2 Ch. 255; [1968] 3
W.L.R. 97, Ch D ..... 728
- Pordage v Cole (1669) 1 Wms. Saund. 319 ..... 763
- Port Caledonia, The; Anna, The [1903] P. 184,
P.D.A.D. .... 405
- Port Huron Machinery Co v Wohlers 221
N.W. 843 (1928) ..... 24
- Port Jackson Stevedoring Pty v Salmond &
Spraggon (Australia) Pty (The New York Star) [1981] 1 W.L.R. 138; [1980] 3 All
E.R. 257, PC (Aus) ..... 98, 231, 240
- Port Line v Ben Line Steamers [1958] 2 Q.B.
146; [1958] 2 W.L.R. 551, QBD ..... 621, 622,
624, 874, 909
- Port Sudan Cotton Co v Govindaswamy Chettiar & Sons [1977] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 5, CA ..... 17, 47
- Port Swettenham Authority v T.W. Wu & Co
Sdn Bhd [1979] A.C. 580; [1978] 3 W.L.R.
530, PC (Mal) ..... 156, 641
- Portaria Shipping Co v Gulf Pacific Navigation
Co Ltd (The Selene G) [1981] 2 Lloyd's
Rep. 180; [1981] Com. L.R. 111, QBD
(Comm Ct) ..... 763, 798, 827, 1007
- Portavon Cinema Co Ltd v Price [1939] 4 All
E.R. 601; (1939) 65 Ll. L. Rep. 161,
KBD ..... 667
- Porter v Addo; sub nom. Porter v Motor Insurers Bureau [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 463;
[1978] R.T.R. 503, QBD ..... 669
- Porter v Chief Constable of Merseyside See
Webb v Chief Constable of Merseyside
- Porter v Freudenberg; sub nom. Merten's Patents, Re; Kreglinger v S Samuel & Rosenfeld [1915] 1 K.B. 857, CA ..... 452
- Porter v Harris (1663) 1 Lev. 63 ..... 571
- Porteus v Element Books Ltd [1996] C.L.Y.
1029 ..... 198, 323
- Portman Building Society v Hamlyn Taylor
Neck [1998] 4 All E.R. 202; [1998]
P.N.J.R. 664, CA ..... 941
- Portuguese Consolidated Copper Mines Ltd
Ex p. Badman, Re (1890) L.R. 45 Ch. D.
16, CA ..... 725, 726
- Poscidon Freight Forwarding Co Ltd v Davies
'Turner Southern Ltd [1996] 2 Lloyd's
Rep. 388; [1996] C.I.L.C. 1264, CA ..... 218, 707
- Posidon, The [2001] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 697 ..... 763
- Posner v Scott-Lewis [1987] Ch. 25; [1986] 3
W.L.R. 531, Ch D ..... 1032, 1033, 1035
- Possfund Custodian Trustee Ltd v Diamond;
Parr v Diamond [1996] 1 W.L.R. 1351;
[1996] 2 B.C.L.C. 665; The Times, April
18, 1996, Ch D ..... 341, 347
- Post Chaser, The See Vegetable Oils (Malaysia)
Sdn Bhd (The Post Chaser)
- Poteliakhoff v Teakle [1938] 2 K.B. 816, CA .... 88, 480, 521
- Potter v Codrington (1892) 9 T.L.R. 54 ..... 525
- Potter & Sanders (1846) 6 Hare 1 ..... 24, 27
- Potters v Loppert [1973] Ch. 399; [1973] 2
W.L.R. 469, Ch D ..... 708
- Poussard v Speirs & Pond (1875-76) L.R. 1
Q.B.D. 410, QBD ..... 759, 775, 776
- Pow v Davies (1861) 1 B. & S. 220 ..... 979
- Powdrill v Watson [1995] 2 A.C. 394; [1995] 2
W.L.R. 312, HL ..... 18, 704, 737
- Powell v Braun [1954] 1 W.L.R. 401; [1954] 1
All E.R. 484, CC ..... 740
- Powell v Brent LBC [1988] I.C.R. 176; [1987]
I.R.L.R. 446, CA ..... 1031
- Powell v Broadhurst [1901] 2 Ch. 160 ..... 577, 578
- Powell v Evan Jones & Co [1905] 1 K.B. 11,
CA ..... 747
- Powell v Lee (1908) 99 L.T. 284 ..... 23
- Powell v Powell [1900] 1 Ch. 243, Ch D ..... 412, 419
- Powell v Smith (1872) L.R. 14 Eq. 85, Ct of Chancery ..... 315
- Powell Duffryn Steam Coal Co v Taff Vale
Railway (1874) L.R. 9 Ch. 331 ..... 1032
- Power v Barham (1836) 4 A. & E. 473 ..... 353, 355
- Power v Wells (1778) 2 Cowp. 818 ..... 552
- Power Packing Casemakers Ltd v Faust [1983]
Q.B. 471; [1983] 2 W.L.R. 439, CA .... 834, 843
- Practice Direction (Fam Div: Ancillary Relief: Payment of School Fees) [1980] 1 W.L.R.
1441; [1980] 3 All E.R. 832, Fam Div ..... 541
- Practice Direction (Fam Div: Minors: Maintenance: School Fees) [1983] 1 W.L.R. 800;
[1983] 2 All E.R. 679, Fam Div ..... 541
- Prager v Blatspiel Stamp and Heacock Ltd
[1924] 1 K.B. 566, KBD ..... 720, 721
- Pratt v Willey (1826) 2 C. & P. 350 ..... 727
- Preece & Co v Lewis (1963) 186 E.G. 1 ..... 180
- Prehn v Royal Bank of Liverpool (1869-70)
L.R. 5 Ex. 92, Ex Ct ..... 997
- Prenn v Simmonds [1971] 1 W.L.R. 1381;
[1971] 3 All E.R. 237, HL ..... 197, 198, 654
- Prentis Donegan & Partners Ltd v Leeds &
Leeds Co Inc [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 326;
[1998] C.L.C. 1132, QBD (Comm Ct) .... 747
- Presentaciones Musicales SA v Secunda [1994]
Ch. 271; [1994] 2 W.L.R. 660, CA ..... 725, 726
- President of India v La Pintada Compania
Navegacion SA (The La Pintada) (No.1)
[1985] A.C. 104; [1984] 3 W.L.R. 10,
HL ..... 479, 994, 996, 998
- President of India v Lips Maritime Corp (The Lips) [1988] A.C. 395; [1987] 3 W.L.R.
572, HL ..... 994, 996, 997, 998, 1004

President of the Methodist Conference v Parfitt [1984] Q.B. 368; [1984] 2 W.L.R. 84, CA .....	169, 174
Preston v Luck (1884) L.R. 27 Ch. D. 497, CA .....	317
Preston v Markheath Securities [1988] 31 E.G. 57 .....	52
Preston v Torfaen BC 65 B.L.R. 1; 36 Con. L.R. 48, CA .....	611
Price v Barker (1855) 4 E. & B. 760 .....	573
Price v Dyer (1810) 17 Ves. 356 .....	103
Price v Easton (1833) B. & Ad. 433 .....	587, 588
Price v Jenkins (1877) L.R. 5 Ch. D. 619, CA .....	87
Price v Nixon (1813) 5 Taunt. 338 .....	755
Price v Strange [1978] Ch. 337; [1977] 3 W.L.R. 943, CA .....	1035, 1037, 1046
Pridean Ltd v Forest Taverns Ltd (1998) 75 P. & C.R. 447, CA .....	139
Primorje, The See Jugoslavenska Linijska Plovidba v Holsman (t/a Brusse & Sippel Import-Export)
Printers & Finishers Ltd v Holloway (No.2) [1965] 1 W.L.R. 1; [1964] 3 All E.R. 731, Ch D .....	455, 928
Printing & Numerical Registering Co v Sampson (1875) L.R. 19 Eq. 462 .....	478
Pritchard v Briggs [1980] Ch. 338; [1979] 3 W.L.R. 868, CA .....	57, 198, 607
Procter v Bayley (1889) L.R. 42 Ch. D. 390; (1889) 6 R.P.C. 538, CA .....	1047
Procter & Gamble Phillipine Manufacturing Corp v Becher [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 21; [1988] F.T.L.R. 450, CA .....	952
Prodexpot State Co for Foreign Trade v ED&F Man Ltd [1973] Q.B. 389; [1972] 3 W.L.R. 845, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	482
Produce Brokers Co Ltd v Olympia Oil and Cake Co Ltd [1916] 1 A.C. 314, HL .....	213
Producers Meats Ltd v Shaw Savill & Albion Co Ltd (The Arawa) [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 135, CA .....	190
Product Star, The (No.2) See Abu Dhabi National Tanker Co v Product Star Shipping
Production Technology Consultants v Bartlett [1986] 1 E.G.L.R. 82 .....	352
Progressive Mailing House Pty Ltd v Tabali Pty Ltd (1985) A.L.J.R. 373 .....	860
Proodos C, The See Syros Shipping Co SA v Elaghill Trading Co (The Proodos C)
Property & Bloodstock Ltd v Emerton; Bush v Property & Bloodstock Ltd [1968] Ch. 94; [1967] 3 W.L.R. 973, CA .....	62
Property Choice Ltd v Fronda [1991] 2 E.G.L.R. 249, CA .....	743
Property Discount Corp v Lyon Group Ltd [1981] 1 W.L.R. 300; [1981] 1 All E.R. 379, CA .....	895
Prosper Homes Ltd v Hambros Bank Executor and Trustee Co Ltd (1980) 39 P. & C.R. 395, Ch D .....	107, 117, 813
Protector Endowment Loan & Annuity Co v Grice (1879-80) L.R. 5 Q.B.D. 592, CA .....	1001
Proudfoot v Montefiore (1866-67) L.R. 2 Q.B. 511, QB .....	392, 395
Provident Clothing & Supply Co Ltd v Mason [1913] A.C. 724, HL .....	456, 459, 507, 508
Provident Financial Group and Whitegates Estate Agency v Hayward [1989] 3 All E.R. 298; [1989] I.C.R. 160, CA .....	464, 833, 1041, 1044, 1046
Prudential Assurance Co Ltd v London Residential Body [1992] 2 A.C. 386; [1992] 3 W.L.R. 279, HL .....	39, 50, 498, 607, 1021
Prudential Staff Union v Hall [1947] K.B. 685; (1947) 80 Ll. L. Rep. 410, KBD .....	646
Pryce, Re [1917] 1 Ch. 234, Ch D .....	1036
Pryke (John W) v Gibbs Hartley Cooper Ltd [1991] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 602, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	348, 397, 398, 709, 937
PSM International Ltd v Whitehouse; PSM International Ltd v Willenhall Automation [1992] I.R.L.R. 279; [1992] F.S.R. 489, CA .....	455, 619, 712
Pugh v Jenkins (1841) 1 Q.B. 631 .....	514
Punjab National Bank v De Boinville [1992] 1 W.L.R. 1138; [1992] 3 All E.R. 104, CA .....	608, 733, 734, 983
Pusey v Pusey (1684) 1 Vern. 273 .....	1022
Putsman v Taylor [1927] 1 K.B. 741, CA; affirming [1927] 1 K.B. 637, KBD .....	507, 508, 509
Pye Ex p. (1811) Ves. 140 .....	685
Pye v British Automobile Commercial Syndicate Ltd [1906] 1 K.B. 425, KBD .....	1008
Pye Ltd v BG Transport Service Ltd [1966] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 300; 116 N.L.J. 1713, QBD .....	502
Pyke Ex p. See Lister Ex p. Pyke, Re
Pym v Campbell (1856) 6 E. & B. 370 .....	59, 63
Pyrene Co Ltd v Scindia Steam Navigation Co Ltd [1954] 2 Q.B. 402; [1954] 2 W.L.R. 1005, QBD .....	19, 169, 589, 628, 639
Pyxis Special Shipping Co Ltd v Dritsas & Kagiis Bros (The Scaplake) [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 380, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	737
Quadrangle Development and Construction Co v Jenner [1974] 1 W.L.R. 68; [1974] 1 All E.R. 729, CA .....	830
Quadrant Telephon Communications v Hutchison Telephone (UK) [1993] B.C.I.L.C. 442; (1992) 89(3) L.S.G. 31 .....	1026, 1027
Quantum Corp Inc v Plane Trucking Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 350; [2002] 1 W.L.R. 2678, CA; reversing [2001] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 916, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	633
Quarrier v Colston (1842) 1 Ph. 147 .....	532
Queensland Electricity Generating Board v New Hope Collieries [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 205, PC (Aus) .....	56, 57, 59, 884
Quernerduane v Cole (1883) 32 W.R. 185 .....	26, 43

- Quinn v Burch Bros (Builders) Ltd [1966] 2 Q.B. 370; [1966] 2 W.L.R. 1017, CA ..... 983, 985, 986
- Quinn v Calder Industrial Materials Ltd [1996] I.R.L.R. 126, EAT ..... 204
- Quorum A/S v Schramm (Damage) [2002] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 147; [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 249, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 953
- R. v Ali [1993] Crim. L.R. 396, CA ..... 445
- R. v Andrews [1973] Q.B. 422; [1973] 2 W.L.R. 116, CA (Crim Div) ..... 445
- R. v Avon CC Ex p. Terry Adams Ltd [1994] Env. L.R. 442; [1994] N.P.C. 2; The Times, January 20, 1994, CA ..... 15
- R. v Baxter [1972] 1 Q.B. 1; [1971] 2 W.L.R. 1138, CA (Crim Div) ..... 24
- R. v Benjafield; R. v Leal; R. v Milford; R. v Rezvi [2002] UKHL 2; [2002] 2 W.L.R. 235, HL ..... 502
- R. v Braithwaite (Frank Wilson); R. v Girdham (Ralph) [1983] 1 W.L.R. 385; [1983] 2 All E.R. 87, CA (Crim Div) ..... 68
- R. v Bullock [1955] 1 W.L.R. 1; [1955] 1 All E.R. 15, CCA ..... 501
- R. v Burke (Alisdair David) [1991] 1 A.C. 135; [1990] 2 W.L.R. 1313, HL ..... 926
- R. v Chappell The Times, May 26, 1986 ..... 369
- R. v Chief National Insurance Commissioner Ex p. Connor [1981] Q.B. 758; [1981] 2 W.L.R. 412, QBD ..... 436, 437
- R. v Civil Service Appeal Board Ex p. Bruce [1987] 2 All E.R. 907; [1989] I.C.R. 171, CA; affirming [1988] 3 All E.R. 686, DC ..... 170, 174, 1030
- R. v Clarke (1927) 40 C.L.R. 227 ..... 36, 37
- R. v Clear (Thomas Walter) [1968] 1 Q.B. 670; [1968] 2 W.L.R. 122; [1968] 1 All E.R. 74; (1968) 52 Cr. App. R. 58; (1968) 132 J.P. 103; 112 S.J. 67, CA (Crim Div) ..... 93
- R. v Cooke; R. v Sutcliffe [1986] A.C. 909; [1986] 3 W.L.R. 327, HL ..... 747
- R. v Crown Prosecution Service Ex p. Hogg (1994) 6 Admin. L.R. 778; The Times, April 14, 1994, CA ..... 4, 1030
- R. v Cullum (1872-75) L.R. 2 C.C.R. 28, Crown Cases Reserved ..... 747
- R. v Davies [1982] 1 All E.R. 513; (1982) 74 Cr. App. R. 94, CA (Crim Div) ..... 327
- R. v Demers [1900] A.C. 103, PC (Can) ..... 833
- R. v Derbyshire CC Ex p. Noble [1990] I.C.R. 808; [1990] I.R.L.R. 332; The Independent, February 20, 1990, CA ..... 4, 1030
- R. v Disciplinary Committee of the Jockey Club Ex p. The Aga Khan [1993] 1 W.L.R. 909; [1993] 2 All E.R. 853, CA ..... 5, 467, 1031
- R. v East Berkshire HA Ex p. Walsh [1985] Q.B. 152; [1984] 3 W.L.R. 818, CA ... 4, 749, 845, 1030
- R. v Fernhill Manor School Ex p. [1993] 1 F.L.R. 620; [1994] 1 F.C.R. 146, QBD ..... 1031
- R. v Ford [1977] 1 W.L.R. 1083; [1978] 1 All E.R. 1129, CA (Crim Div) ..... 439
- R. v General Medical Council Ex p. Colman [1990] 1 All E.R. 489; (1990) 2 Admin. L.R. 469, CA ..... 474
- R. v Gilks [1972] 1 W.L.R. 1341; [1972] 3 All E.R. 280, CA (Crim Div) ..... 523
- R. v Gilmartin [1983] Q.B. 953; [1983] 2 W.L.R. 547, CA (Crim Div) ..... 331
- R. v Grantham (Paul Reginald) [1984] Q.B. 675; [1984] 2 W.L.R. 815, CA (Crim Div) ..... 331
- R. v Hull University Visitor Ex p. Page [1993] A.C. 682; [1993] 3 W.L.R. 1112, HL ..... 1031
- R. v Incorporated Froebel Educational Institute Ex p. L [1999] E.L.R. 488, QBD ..... 1031
- R. v Investors Compensation Scheme Ltd Ex p. Bowden [1996] A.C. 261; [1995] 3 W.L.R. 289, HL; reversing [1995] Q.B. 107, CA ..... 934, 993
- R. v Ivens (1835) 7 C. & P. 213 ..... 4
- R. v Jockey Club Ex p. RAM Racecourses Ltd [1993] 2 All E.R. 225; (1991) 5 Admin. L.R. 265, QBD ..... 341, 466, 467
- R. v Knightsbridge Crown Court Ex p. Marccrest Properties [1983] 1 W.L.R. 300; [1983] 1 All E.R. 1148, CA ..... 532, 534, 535
- R. v Lambie [1982] A.C. 449; [1981] 3 W.L.R. 88, HL ..... 81, 583
- R. v Loms (1913) 110 L.T. 239 ..... 501
- R. v Lord Chancellor's Department Ex p. Nangle [1992] 1 All E.R. 897; [1991] I.C.R. 743, QBD ..... 163, 170, 172
- R. v Lord Kylsant [1932] 1 K.B. 442, CCA ..... 394
- R. v Lord President of the Privy Council Ex p. Page [1993] A.C. 682; [1993] 3 W.L.R. 1112, HL ..... 450, 1031
- R. v Millward [1985] Q.B. 519; [1985] 2 W.L.R. 532, CA (Crim Div) ..... 336
- R. v Modupe (1992) 11 Tr. L.R. 59; [1991] C.C.L.R. 29, CA ..... 179
- R. v Morris (David Alan) [1984] A.C. 320; [1983] 3 W.L.R. 697, HL; affirming [1983] Q.B. 587, CA (Crim Div) ..... 13, 304
- R. v Oldham MBC Ex p. Garlick [1993] A.C. 509; [1993] 2 W.L.R. 609, HL ..... 542
- R. v Panayiotou; R. v Antoniadis [1973] 1 W.L.R. 1032; [1973] 3 All E.R. 112, CA (Crim Div) ..... 445
- R. v Portsmouth City Council, Ex p. Coles The Times, November 13, 1996 ..... 15
- R. v Preddy; R. v Slade; R. v Dhillon [1996] A.C. 815; [1996] 3 W.L.R. 255, HL ..... 680
- R. v Registrar of Companies Ex p. Att-Gen [1991] B.C.L.C. 476, DC ..... 444
- R. v Rezvi [2002] UKHL 1; [2002] 2 W.L.R. 235, HL ..... 502
- R. v Royal Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain Ex p. Association of Pharmaceutical Importers [1990] 1 Q.B. 534; [1990] 2 W.L.R. 445; [1989] 2 All E.R. 758, ECJ ..... 477

R. v Secretary of State for the Environment Ex p. Harrow LBC [1997] 3 C.M.L.R. 870; (1997) 29 H.L.R. 1, QBD .....	15
R. v Secretary of State for the Home Department Ex p. Broom [1986] Q.B. 198; [1985] 3 W.L.R. 778, QBD .....	1030
R. v Sevenoaks DC Ex p. Terry [1985] 3 All E.R. 226; [1984] J.P.L. 420, QBD .....	54
R. v Sunair Holidays Ltd [1973] 1 W.L.R. 1105; [1973] 2 All E.R. 1233, CA (Crim Div) .....	331
R. v Warwickshire CC Ex p. Johnson [1993] A.C. 583; [1993] 2 W.L.R. 1, HL .....	13
R. v Weisz Ex p. Hector MacDonald Ltd [1951] 2 K.B. 611; [1951] 2 All E.R. 408, KBD .....	521
R & B Customs Brokers Co Ltd v United Dominions Trust Ltd [1988] 1 W.L.R. 321; [1988] 1 All E.R. 847, CA .....	247, 260
R & H Hall Ltd v WH Pim Junr & Co Ltd (1928) 30 Ll. L. Rep. 159, HL .....	934, 949
R Leslie Ltd v Reliable Advertising and Addressing Agency Ltd [1915] 1 K.B. 652, KBD .....	435
R Leslie Ltd v Sheill [1914] 3 K.B. 607, CA .....	551, 553, 555, 556
R Pagnan & Fratelli v Corbisa Industrial Agro-pacuaria Ltd [1970] 1 W.L.R. 1306; [1970] 1 All E.R. 165, CA .....	982
R Pagnan & Fratelli v NGJ Schouten NV (The Filipinas I) [1973] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 349, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	517
Rabin v Gerson Berger Association Ltd [1986] 1 W.L.R. 526; [1986] 1 All E.R. 374, CA .....	192, 194, 197, 198, 199, 322
Rabone v Williams .....	730
Racal Group Services Ltd v Ashmore [1995] S.T.C. 1151; 68 T.C. 86, CA .....	322
Radcliffe v Price (1902) 18 T.L.R. 466 .....	412
Radford v De Froberville [1977] 1 W.L.R. 1262; [1978] 1 All E.R. 33, Ch D .....	592, 945, 946, 961, 962, 1048
Radstock Cooperative & Industrial Society v Norton-Radstock Urban DC [1968] Ch. 605; [1968] 2 W.L.R. 1214, CA; affirming [1967] Ch. 1094, Ch D .....	702
Rae v Yorkshire Bank plc [1988] F.L.R. 1; [1988] B.C.L.C. 35, CA .....	988, 989
Raffaele v Raffaele [1962] W.A.R. 29 .....	73
Raffaella, The See Egyptian International Foreign Trade Co v Soplex Wholesale Supplies Ltd .....
Raffles v Wichelhaus (1864) 2 Hurl. & C. 906 .....	303, 306, 307, 310
Raflatac Ltd v Eade [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 506; [1999] B.L.R. 261, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	758, 985, 987
Rafsanjan Pistachio Producers Cooperative v Bank Leumi (UK) Ltd [1992] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 513, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	32, 109, 336, 343, 399
Rahcassi Shipping Co SA v Blue Star Line (The Bede) [1969] 1 Q.B. 173; [1967] 3 W.L.R. 1382, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	49
Raiffeisen Hauptgenossenschaft AG v Louis Dreyfus & Co Ltd [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 345; [1980] Com. L.R. 13, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	109, 837
Raiffeisen Zentralbank Österreich AG v Five Star General Trading LLC (The Mount I) [2001] EWCA Civ 68; [2001] Q.B. 825, CA .....	676, 677, 678, 680, 683
Railton v Matthews (1844) 10 Cl. & F. 934 .....	398
Rainbow v Howkins [1904] 2 K.B. 322, KBD .....	739
Rainbow Estates Ltd v Tokenhold [1999] Ch. 64; [1998] 3 W.L.R. 980, Ch D .....	1026, 1033, 1035, 1038
Raineri v Miles [1981] A.C. 1050; [1980] 2 W.L.R. 847, HL .....	831, 838
Raingold v Bromley [1931] 2 Ch. 307, Ch D .....	53
Raja's Commercial College v Gian Singh & Co Ltd [1977] A.C. 312 .....	957
Rajbenback v Mamon [1955] 1 Q.B. 283; [1955] 2 W.L.R. 21, QBD .....	150
Ralli Bros v Compania Naviera Sota y Aznar (1921) 8 Ll. L. Rep. 139, HL; [1920] 2 K.B. 287, CA .....	452
Rama Corp Ltd v Proved Tin & General Investments Ltd [1952] 2 Q.B. 147; [1952] 1 All E.R. 554, QBD .....	714
Ramdath v Daley (t/a D&E Auto Spares) (1993) 25 H.L.R. 273; [1993] 20 E.G. 123, CA .....	936
Ramsden v Dyson; Ramsden v Thornton (1866) L.R. 1 H.L. 129, HL .....	135, 148
Ramsey v Hartley [1977] 1 W.L.R. 686; [1977] 2 All E.R. 673, CA .....	677
Ramsgate Victoria Hotel Co Ltd v Montifiore (1866) L.R. 1 Ex. 109 .....	43
Ramwade v WJ Emson & Co [1987] R.T.R. 72; (1986) 83 L.S.G. 2996, CA .....	972, 975, 998
Randall v Motor Insurers Bureau [1968] 1 W.L.R. 1900; [1969] 1 All E.R. 21, QBD .....	669
Rank Xerox Ltd v Lane (Inspector of Taxes) [1981] A.C. 629; [1979] 3 W.L.R. 594, HL .....	576
Rann v Hughes (1778) 7 T.R. 350 .....	67
Raphael, The See Lampart & Holt Lines v Coubro & Scrutton (M&I) Ltd .....
Rasbora Ltd v JCI Marine Ltd [1977] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 645 .....	673
Rashdall v Ford (1866) L.R. 2 Eq. 750, Ct of Chancery .....	333, 565
Rasool v Hepworth Pipe Co (No.1) [1980] I.C.R. 494; [1980] I.R.L.R. 88, EAT .....	846
Raven, The See Banco Central SA v Lingoss & Falce Ltd .....
Ravenseft Properties Ltd v Director General of Fair Trading [1978] Q.B. 52; [1977] 2 W.L.R. 432, RPC .....	472

Ravenseft Properties Ltd's Application, Re See Ravenseft Properties Ltd v Director Gen- eral of Fair Trading
Rawlings v Coal Consumers' Association (1874) 43 L.J.M.C. 111	445
Rawlings v General Trading Co [1921] 1 K.B. 635, CA	474, 1023
Rayfield v Hands [1960] Ch. 1; [1958] 2 W.L.R. 851, Ch D	586, 589
Raymond Burke Motors Ltd v Mersey Docks and Harbour Co [1986] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 155, QBD (Comm Ct)	629, 634
Rayner v Grote (1846) 15 M. & W. 359	734
Rayner v Preston (1881) 18 Ch D. 1	667
Rayner v Stone (1762) 2 Eden 128	103
RC Taylor (Wholesale) Ltd v Hepworth Ltd [1977] 1 W.L.R. 659	945
Read v Anderson (1884) 13 Q.B.D. 779	524, 744
Read v Price [1909] 2 K.B. 724, CA; affirming [1909] 1 K.B. 577, KBD	570, 571
Readhead v Midland Railway Co (1868-69) L.R. 4 Q.B. 379, Ex Chamber	249
Reading Trust Ltd v Spero; Spero v Reading Trust Ltd [1930] 1 K.B. 492, CA	184
Reading v Attorney General [1951] A.C. 507; [1951] 1 All E.R. 617, HL	745, 746
Reardon Smith Line Ltd v Hansen-Tangen (The Diana Prosperity [1976] 1 W.L.R. 989; [1976] 3 All E.R. 570, HL	197, 794, 797, 825
Reardon Smith Line Ltd v Ministry of Agri- culture, Fisheries and Food [1963] A.C. 691; [1963] 2 W.L.R. 439, HL	892, 893
Rebecca Elaine, The See Hamble Fisheries Ltd v L. Gardner & Sons Ltd
Record v Bell [1991] 1 W.L.R. 853; [1991] 4 All E.R. 471, Ch D	178, 180, 1023
Red Sea Tankers Ltd v Papachristidis (The Hellasport Ardent) [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 547, QBD (Comm Ct)	339, 608, 631, 984
Red Sea, The See Trasimex Holding SA v Addax BV
Rederiaktiebolaget Amphitrite v King, The [1921] 3 K.B. 500; (1921) 8 Ll. L. Rep. 443, KBD	169
Redgrave v Hurd (1881-82) L.R. 20 Ch. D. 1, CA	339, 340, 355, 357, 367, 369, 371, 380, 373
Redler Grain Silos v BICC [1982] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 435, CA	1025
Redmond v Dainton [1920] 2 K.B. 256, KBD	894
Reed Ex p. Barnett, Re (1876) L.R. 3 Ch. D. 123, Ch D	307
Reed v Kilburn Co-operative Society (1875) L.R. 10 Q.B. 264	755
Reed v Madon [1989] Ch. 408; [1989] 2 W.L.R. 553, Ch D	935, 990, 992, 1041
Reeman v Department of Transport [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 648; [1997] P.N.L.R. 618, CA	612
Rees v Darlington Memorial Hospital NHS Trust [2002] EWCA Civ 88; [2003] Q.B. 20, CA	611
Rees v De Bernardy [1896] 2 Ch. 437, Ch D	695
Reese River Silver Mining Co Ltd v Smith (1869-70) L.R. 4 H.L. 64, HL	372
Reeves v Bryner (1801) 6 Ves. 516	130
Reeves v Commissioner of Police of the Met- ropolis [2000] 1 A.C. 360; [1999] 3 W.L.R. 363, HL	438
Regalian Properties plc v London Docklands Development Corporation [1995] 1 W.L.R. 212; [1995] 1 All E.R. 1005, Ch D	52, 119, 1062
Regazzoni v KC Sethia (1944) Ltd; sub nom. Regazzoni v Sethia (KC) (1944) [1958] A.C. 301; [1957] 3 W.L.R. 752, HL	452
Regent International Hotels v Pageguide The Times , May 13 1985	1032
Regent OHG Aisenstadt und Barig v Frances- co of Jermyn Street [1983] 3 All E.R. 327	768, 784, 796, 964, 1015, 1018
Regier v Campbell Stuart [1939] Ch. 766, Ch D	708, 745, 928
Regis Property Co Ltd v Dudley [1959] A.C. 370; [1958] 3 W.L.R. 647, HL	763
Reid v Rush & Tompkins Group [1990] 1 W.L.R. 212; [1989] 3 All E.R. 228; [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 167, CA	157, 208, 210, 348, 613, 984
Reigate v Union Manufacturing Co (Ramsbot- tom) Ltd [1918] 1 K.B. 592, CA	203, 205
Reilly v King, The [1932] S.C.R. 597; [1934] A.C. 176, PC (Can)	880
Reliance Industries Ltd v Enron Oil and Gas India Ltd [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 59; [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 645, QBD (Comm Ct)	449
Remco, The See Gewa Chartering BV v Remco Shipping Lines
Repetto v Millar's Karri and Jarrah Forests Ltd [1901] 2 K.B. 306, KBD (Comm Ct)	733
Resolute Maritime Inc v Nippon Kaiji Kyokai (The Skopas) [1983] 1 W.L.R. 857; [1983] 2 All E.R. 1, QBD (Comm Ct)	350, 351
Reuss v Picksley (1865-66) L.R. 1 Ex. 342, Ex Chamber	184
Reuter Hufeland & Co v Sala & Co (1878-79) L.R. 4 C.P.D. 239, CA	783, 787
Reynell v Sprye (1852) 1 De G.M. & G. 660	339, 492
Reynolds v Atherton (1921) 125 L.T. 690; af- firmed (1992) 127 L.T. 189	45
Reynolds v Smith (1893) 9 T.L.R. 494	213, 712
RH & D International Ltd v IAS Animal Air Services Ltd [1984] 1 W.L.R. 573; [1984] 2 All E.R. 203, QBD	788
Rheinoel GmbH v Huron Liberian Co (The Concordia C) [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 55, QBD (Comm Ct)	980

Rhode Island Tool Co v US 130 Ct.Cl. 698, 128 F. Supp. 417 (1955) .....	27
Rhodes v Forwood (1876) 1 App.Cas. 256 ....	205, 743
Rhodes, Re (1889) 44 Ch D. 94 .....	558
Rhodian River and Rhodian Sailor, The See Rhodian River Shipping Co SA v Halla Maritime Corporation
Rhodian River Shipping Co SA v Halla Mar- itime Corp (The Rhodian River and The Rhodian Sailor) [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 373, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	321, 713, 717
Rhone v Stephens [1994] 2 A.C. 310; [1994] 2 W.L.R. 429, HL .....	589, 703
Rhymney Railway v Brecon & Methyr Tydfil Junction Railway (1900) 69 L.J.Ch. 813 .....	807
Rialto, The See Yukong Line Ltd of Korea v Rendsburg Investments Corp of Liberia
Rice v Great Yarmouth BC The Times , July 26, 2000 .....	774, 779
Rice v Shute (1770) 5 Burr. 2611 .....	570
Richard Adler (t/a Argo Rederei) v Sutos (Hellas) Maritime Corp (The Argo Hellas) [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 296; (1984) 134 N.L.J. 203, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	403, 568, 570
Richard West and Partners (Inverness), Ltd v Dick [1969] 2 Ch. 424; [1969] 2 W.L.R. 1190, CA .....	65
Richards, Re (1887) 36 Ch.D. 541 .....	685
Richards v Delbridge (1874) L.R. 18 Eq. 11 .....	649, 685
Richards v Heather (1817) 1 B. & Ald. 29 ....	569
Richards v Starck [1911] 1 K.B. 296, KBD ....	515, 523
Richards v Syms (1740) 2 Eq.Ca.Abr. 617 ....	130
Richardson, Re (1882) 47 L.T. 514 .....	647
Richardson v Koefod [1969] 1 W.L.R. 1812; [1969] 3 All E.R. 1264, CA .....	749
Richardson v Mellish (1824) 2 Bing. 229 ....	478
Richardson v Moncrieffe (1926) 43 T.L.R. 32 .....	527
Richardson v Richardson (1867) L.R. 3 Eq. 686 .....	685
Richardson v Williamson (1871) L.R. 6 Q.B. 276 .....	975
Richardson v Worrall; Westall v McDonald [1985] S.T.C. 693; 58 T.C. 642 .....	12, 755
Richardson v Worrel [1985] S.T.C. 693 .....	583
Richardson Spence & Co Ltd v Rowntree [1894] A.C. 217, HL .....	218, 219
Richco International Ltd v Alfred C Toepfer International GmbH (The Bonde) [1991] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 136; The Times , June 4, 1990, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	201, 203, 844, 1004
Richco International Ltd v Bunge & Co Ltd (The New Prosper) [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 93, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	790, 924
Richmond Gate Property Co, Re [1965] 1 W.L.R. 335; [1964] 3 All E.R. 936, Ch D .....	167, 740
Richmond Hill Hotel Co (No.2), Re; sub nom. Pellatt's Case (1866-67) L.R. 2 Ch. App. 527, CA in Chancery .....	566
Rickless v United Artists Corp [1988] Q.B. 40; [1987] 2 W.L.R. 945, CA .....	622
Riddiford v Warren (1901) 20 N.Z.L.R. 572 ....	374
Ridge v Baldwin (No.1) [1964] A.C. 40; [1963] 2 W.L.R. 935, HL .....	1030
Ridge Nominees, Ltd v Inland Revenue Com- missioners [1962] Ch. 376; [1962] 2 W.L.R. 3, CA .....	5
Ridgway v Hungerford Market Co (1835) 3 A. & E. 171 .....	784, 822, 836
Rigby v Connol (1880) L.R. 14 Ch. D. 482, Ch D .....	1029
Rigby v Ferodo Ltd [1988] I.C.R. 29; [1987] I.R.L.R. 516, HL .....	845
Rightside Properties Ltd v Gray [1975] Ch. 72; [1974] 3 W.L.R. 484, Ch D .....	767, 827, 831
Rignall Developments Ltd v Halil [1988] Ch. 190; [1987] 3 W.L.R. 394, Ch D ....	339, 344, 391
Rigoletto, The See Lotus Cars Ltd v South- ampton Cargo Handling plc
Rijn, The See Santa Martha Baay Scheepvaart and Handelsmaatschappij NV v Scanbulk A/S
Riley v Cogan [1967] 1 W.L.R. 1300; [1968] 1 All E.R. 314, Ch D .....	1044
Rio Assu, The See C Itoh & Co Ltd v Com- panhia De Navegacao Lloyd Brasileiro
Rio Claro, The See Transworld Oil v North Bay Shipping Corp
Rio Sun, The See Gatoil International Inc v Tradax Petroleum Ltd
Rio Sun, The See Italmare Shipping Co v Ocean Tanker Co Inc
Rio Tinto Co Ltd v Seed Shipping Co Ltd (1926) 24 Ll. L. Rep. 316, KBD .....	231
Ritchie v Atkinson (1809) 10 East 530; (1808) 10 East 295 .....	785, 785, 866
Riverlate Properties Ltd v Paul [1975] Ch. 133; [1974] 3 W.L.R. 564, CA .....	318, 319, 322
Riza Sun, The [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 314 ....	193, 196, 199, 733
RM Turton & Co Ltd (In Liquidation) v Ker- slake & Partners [2000] Lloyd's Rep. P.N. 967, CA (NZ) .....	598, 612
Roadworks (1952) Ltd v Charman [1994] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 99, QBD (Comm Ct) ....	62, 392
Robb v Hammersmith and Fulham I.B.C. [1991] I.C.R. 514; [1991] I.R.L.R. 72, QBD .....	1031
Robbins of Putney v Meek [1971] R.T.R. 345 .....	972
Robbins v Fennell (1847) 11 Q.B. 248 .....	585, 708
Robert A Munro & Co v Meyer [1930] 2 K.B. 312, KBD .....	290, 809
Robert Bruce & Partners v Winyard Develop- ments [1987] 1 E.G.L.R. 20; (1987) 282 E.G. 1255 .....	741

Robert C. Herd v Krawill Machinery Corporation 359 U.S. 297 .....	630
Robert H Dahl v Nelson Donkin (1881) 6 App.Cas. 38 .....	881
Robert Stewart & Sons v Carapanayoti & Co [1962] 1 W.L.R. 34; [1962] 1 All E.R. 418, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	943
Roberts, Re [1900] 1 Q.B. 122, CA .....	701
Roberts v Berry (1858) 3 D.M. & G. 284 .....	828
Roberts v Elwells Engineers [1972] 2 Q.B. 586; [1972] 3 W.L.R. 1, CA .....	749, 1016
Roberts v Gray [1913] 1 K.B. 520, CA .....	541, 542
Roberts v Havelock (1832) 3 B. & Ad. 404 .....	786
Roberts v Hayward (1828) 3 C. & P. 432 .....	24, 35
Roberts v J Hampson & Co [1990] 1 W.L.R. 94; [1989] 2 All E.R. 504, QBD .....	346, 360
Roberts v Plaisted [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 341; The Times , July 19, 1989, CA .....	396, 709
Roberts v Smith (1859) 28 L.J.Ex. 164 .....	167
Robertson v British Gas Corporation [1983] 1 C.R. 351; [1983] 1 R.L.R. 302, CA .....	214
Robertson v Jackson (1845) 2 C.B. 412 .....	197, 199
Robertson v Wait (1853) 8 Ex. 299 .....	646
Robins v Bridge (1837) 3 M. & W. 114 .....	732
Robinson v Bland 97 E.R. 717; (1760) 2 Burr. 1077 .....	531
Robinson v Commissioner of Customs & Excise The Times , April 28, 2000 .....	167
Robinson v Cook (1815) 6 Taunt. 336 .....	754
Robinson v Davison (1871) L.R. 6 Ex. 269 .....	873
Robinson v Geisel [1894] 2 Q.B. 685, CA .....	569
Robinson v Harman [1843-60] All E.R. Rep. 383; (1848) 1 Ex. 850, Ex Ct .....	937, 944, 1048
Robinson v Mearns (1825) 6 D. & R.K.B. 26 .....	519
Robinson v Page (1826) 3 Russ. 114 .....	189
Robinson Fisher & Harding v Behar [1927] 1 K.B. 513, KBD .....	307
Robophone Facilities Ltd v Blank [1966] 1 W.L.R. 1428; [1966] 3 All E.R. 128, CA .....	31, 480, 95, 970, 999, 1002
Robson v Drummond (1831) 2 B. & Ad. 303 .....	757
Roche v Sherrington [1982] 1 W.L.R. 599; [1982] 2 All E.R. 426, Ch D .....	412
Rock Refrigeration Ltd v Jones [1997] 1 All E.R. 1; [1997] 1 C.R. 938, CA .....	454, 461, 481, 851
Rockeagle Ltd v Alsop Wilkinson (A Firm) [1992] Ch. 47; [1991] 3 W.L.R. 573; [1991] 4 All E.R. 659; The Independent , September 27, 1991, CA .....	210, 526, 568
Rodocanachi v Milburn (1887) L.R. 18 Q.B.D. 67, CA .....	948
Rodriguez v Speyer Bros [1919] A.C. 59, HL .....	452, 478
Roe v RA Naylor Ltd; sub nom. Roe v Naylor [1917] 1 K.B. 712; [1918] 87 L.J. K.B. 958, KBD .....	193, 195
Roebuck v Mungovin [1994] 2 A.C. 224; [1994] 2 W.L.R. 290; [1994] 1 All E.R. 568, HL .....	111, 116, 144
Roger v Comptoir d'Escompte de Paris (1869) L.R. 2 C.P. 393 .....	79
Roger Bullivant Ltd v Ellis [1987] I.C.R. 464; [1987] 1 R.L.R. 491, CA .....	456
Rogers v Challis (1859) 27 Beav. 175 .....	1020
Rogers v Snow (1573) Dalison 94 .....	37
Rolin v Steward (1854) 14 C.B. 595 .....	992, 997
Rolled Steel Products (Holdings) Ltd v British Steel Corporation [1986] Ch. 246; [1985] 2 W.L.R. 908, CA .....	561, 564, 714, 724
Rolling Stock Co of Ireland, Re; sub nom. Shackelford's Case (1865-66) L.R. 1 Ch. App. 567, CA in Chancery .....	57
Rolls Razor Ltd v Cox [1967] 1 Q.B. 552; [1967] 2 W.L.R. 241, CA .....	744
Rom Securities Ltd v Rogers (Holdings) Ltd (1968) 205 E.G. 427 .....	895
Romer & Haslam, Re [1893] 2 Q.B. 286, CA .....	754
Romina, The See Owners of the Borvigilant v Owners of the Romina G
Ronbar Enterprises Ltd v Green [1954] 1 W.L.R. 815; [1954] 2 All E.R. 266, CA .....	508
Rondel v Worsley [1969] 1 A.C. 191; [1967] 3 W.L.R. 1666; [1967] 3 All E.R. 993, HL .....	78, 480
Rooke v Dawson [1895] 1 Ch. 480, Ch D .....	14
Rookes v Barnard (No.1) [1964] A.C. 1129; [1964] 2 W.L.R. 269, HL; reversing [1963] 1 Q.B. 623, CA .....	589, 625, 843, 935
Rooks Rider v JR Steel [1994] 1 W.L.R. 818 .....	511
Roper v Johnson (1873) L.R. 8 C.P. 167 .....	962, 963, 1018
Roscorla v Thomas (1842) 3 Q.B. 234 .....	77, 80
Rose & Frank Co v JR Crompton & Bros Ltd [1925] A.C. 445; (1924) 20 Ll. L. Rep. 249, HL .....	163, 164
Rose v Stravron The Times , June 23 .....	1029
Rose, Re; sub nom. Midland Bank Executor & Trustee Co Ltd v Rose [1949] Ch. 78; [1948] 2 All E.R. 971, Ch D .....	686
Rose (Deceased), Re [1952] Ch. 499; [1952] 1 All E.R. 1217, CA .....	682, 686
Rosgill Group Ltd v Customs and Excise Commissioners [1997] 3 All E.R. 1012; [1997] S.T.C. 811, CA .....	73
Ross T Smyth & Co (Liverpool) Ltd v WN Lindsay (Leith) Ltd [1953] 1 W.L.R. 1280; [1953] 2 All E.R. 1064, QBD .....	892
Ross v Caunters [1980] Ch. 297; [1979] 3 W.L.R. 605, Ch D .....	608
Rossiter v Miller (1877-78) L.R. 3 App. Cas. 1124, HL .....	55
Roth & Co v Taysen Townsend & Co (1895) 1 Com.Cas. 240 .....	963
Rother v Colchester Corporation [1969] 1 W.L.R. 720; [1969] 2 All E.R. 600, Ch D .....	472
Rotherham Alum & Chemical Co (1883) 25 Ch.D. 103 .....	725
Rourke v Short (1856) 5 E. & B. 904 .....	514, 517

- Routh v Jones [1947] 1 All E.R. 758; [1947] W.N. 205, CA; affirming [1947] 1 All E.R. 179, Ch D ..... 462
- Routledge v Grant (1828) 4 Bing 653 ..... 41, 153
- Routledge v McKay, Nugent (Third Party), Ashgrove (Fourth Party), Mawson (Fifth Party) [1954] 1 W.L.R. 615; [1954] 1 All E.R. 855, CA ..... 354
- Rover International Ltd v Cannon Film Sales Ltd (No.1) The Financial Times, June 10, 1988, CA; reversing [1987] 1 W.L.R. 670, Ch D ..... 762, 1034, 1041
- Rover International Ltd v Cannon Film Sales Ltd (No.2) [1987] 1 W.L.R. 1597; [1987] 3 All E.R. 986, Ch D ..... 119, 735, 736
- Rover International Ltd v Cannon Film Sales Ltd (No.3) [1989] 1 W.L.R. 912; [1989] 3 All E.R. 423, CA; reversing [1987] B.C.L.C. 540, Ch D ..... 736, 1012, 1034, 1049, 1058, 1063
- Row v Dawson (1749) 1 Ves.Sen. 331 ..... 674
- Rowan Companies Inc v Lambert Eggink Off-shore Transport Consultants vof (The Gilbert Rowe) (No.2) [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 443; [1999] C.L.C. 1461, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 107, 109
- Rowe Ex p. Derenburg & Co, Re [1904] 2 K.B. 483, CA ..... 756
- Rowe v Turner Hopkins & Co [1980] N.Z.L.R. 550 ..... 984, 985
- Rowland v Divall [1923] 2 K.B. 500, CA ..... 817, 1052, 1053, 1054, 1055, 1056, 1059
- Roxburgh v Cox (1881) L.R. 17 Ch. D. 520, CA ..... 689, 690
- Roy v Kensington and Chelsea and Westminster Family Practitioner Committee [1992] 1 A.C. 624; [1992] 2 W.L.R. 239, HL ..... 4, 1030
- Royal Bank of Scotland plc v Etridge (No.2); Barclays Bank plc v Coleman [2001] UKHL 44; [2002] 2 A.C. 773, HL ..... 383, 398, 405, 408, 409, 410, 411, 412, 413, 414, 415, 416, 417, 418, 419, 424, 425, 426, 427, 445
- Royal Bank Trust Co (Trinidad) v Pampellone [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 218; [1987] 1 F.T.L.R. 90, PC (Trin) ..... 349
- Royal Boskalis Westminster NV v Mountain [1999] Q.B. 674; [1998] 2 W.L.R. 538; [1997] 2 All E.R. 929; [1997] L.R.L.R. 523, CA ..... 103, 407, 452, 482, 507, 509
- Royal Brompton Hospital NHS Trust v Hammond (No.1) [1999] B.L.R. 162; (2000) 2 T.C.L.R. 92; (1999) 149 N.I.J. 89, QBD (T & CC) ..... 979
- Royal Brompton Hospital NHS Trust v Hammond (No.3) [2002] UKHL 14; [2002] 1 W.L.R. 1397, HL ..... 1056
- Royal Brunei Airlines Sdn Bhd v Tan [1995] 2 A.C. 378; [1995] 3 W.L.R. 64, PC (Bru) ..... 619
- Royal Exchange Assurance v Hope [1928] Ch. 179, CA ..... 647
- Royal Products v Midland Bank [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 194; [1981] Com. L.R. 93 QBD ..... 747
- Royscot Trust Ltd v Rogerson [1991] 2 Q.B. 297; [1991] 3 W.L.R. 57, CA ... 351, 363, 366
- Royse (Deceased), Re [1985] Ch. 22; [1984] 3 W.L.R. 784, CA ..... 437
- Rozanes v Bowen (1928) 32 I.L. L. Rep. 98, CA ..... 395
- Rozel, The See Channel Island Ferries Ltd v Cenargo Navigation Ltd
- RSP Architects Planners and Engineers v Ocean Front Pte Ltd (1998) 14 Const. L.J. 139, CA (Sing) ..... 610
- RSPCA v Attorney General; sub nom. Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals v Attorney General [2002] 1 W.L.R. 448; [2001] 3 All E.R. 530; [2001] U.K.H.R.R. 905, Ch D ..... 4, 1031
- Ruben v Great Fingall Consolidated [1906] A.C. 439, HL ..... 715
- Rubicon Computer Systems Ltd v United Paints Ltd (2000) 2 T.C.L.R. 453, CA ... 808, 1053
- Rudd v Lascelles [1900] 1 Ch. 815, Ch D ..... 772
- Russell v Duke of Norfolk [1949] 1 All E.R. 109; 65 T.L.R. 225, CA ..... 243
- Russell v Northern Bank Development Corp Ltd [1992] 1 W.L.R. 588; [1992] 3 All E.R. 161; [1992] B.C.L.C. 1016, HL ..... 586
- Russell Brothers (Paddington) Ltd v John Lelliott Management Ltd (1995) 11 Const. L.J. 377, QBD (OR) ..... 51, 124
- Rust v Abbey Life Insurance Co Ltd [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 334, CA ..... 16, 33, 35
- Rustenburger Platinum Mines Ltd v South African Airways and Pan American World Airways Inc [1979] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 19, CA ..... 126, 127
- Rutter v Palmer [1922] 2 K.B. 87, CA ..... 223, 224
- Ruxley Electronics and Construction Ltd v Forsyth [1996] A.C. 344; [1995] 3 W.L.R. 118, HL ... 601, 934, 935, 946, 947, 954, 990, 994
- RW Green Ltd v Cade Bros Farms [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 602, QBD .... 227, 257, 259, 261
- Ryall v Rowles (1750) 1 Ves.Sen. 348 .... 672, 674
- Ryan v Mutual Tontine Westminster Chambers [1893] 1 Ch. 116, CA ... 1032, 1033, 1035
- Ryan v Pilkington [1959] 1 W.L.R. 403; [1959] 1 All E.R. 689, CA ..... 708
- Ryan v Ridley & Co (1902) 8 Com.Cas. 105 ..... 826
- Ryder v Wombwell (1868) L.R. 4 Ex. 32 ..... 539, 540, 541
- S v S (Ancillary Relief: Consent Order) [2002] EWHC 223; [2003] Fam. 1; (2002) 152 N.L.J. 398, Fam Div ..... 901
- S Pearson & Son Ltd v Dublin Corp [1907] A.C. 351, HL (UK-Irl) .... 242, 339, 344, 352
- Sachs v Miklos [1948] 2 K.B. 23; [1948] 1 All E.R. 67, CA ..... 719, 721

- Sadler v Imperial Life Assurance Co of Canada Ltd [1988] I.R.L.R. 388; The Times, January 8, 1988, QBD ..... 463, 505
- Saefer, The See Kuwait Supply Co v Oyster Marine Management Inc
- Safhaven Investments Inc v Springbok Ltd (1996) 71 P. & C.R. 59; [1995] E.G.C.S. 96, Ch D ..... 391, 398, 856, 1009
- Saffron Walden Second Benefit Building Society v Rayner (1880) L.R. 14 Ch. D. 406, CA ..... 739
- Said v Butt [1920] 3 K.B. 497, KBD ..... 729, 730, 735
- Sainsbury (HR and S) v Street [1972] 1 W.L.R. 834; [1972] 3 All E.R. 1127, Assizes (Bristol) ..... 835, 877
- Saipem SpA v Dredging VO2 BV (The Volvox Hollandia) (No.2) [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 315, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 609, 610
- Sale Continuation Ltd v Austin Taylor & Co Ltd [1968] 2 Q.B. 849; [1967] 3 W.L.R. 1427, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 834
- Saleslease Ltd v Davis [1999] 1 W.L.R. 1664; [2000] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 883, CA ..... 966, 967
- Salford Corp v Lever (No.2) [1891] 1 Q.B. 168, CA ..... 747, 747
- Salisbury v Hatcher (1842) 2 Y. & C.C.C. 54 ..... 1037
- Salomon v Akiens See Akiens v Salomon
- Salsi v Jetspeed Air Services [1977] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 57, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 214
- Salton v New Beeston Cycle Co [1900] 1 Ch. 43, Ch D ..... 738, 750, 824
- Salvage Association v CAP Financial Services Ltd [1995] F.S.R. 654, QBD ..... 258, 265, 943, 1050
- Salvation Army Trustee Co Ltd v West Yorkshire CC (1981) 41 P. & C.R. 179, QBD ..... 140
- Samick Lines Co v Owners of the Antonis P Lemos [1985] A.C. 711; [1985] 2 W.L.R. 468, HL ..... 607
- Samos Shipping Enterprises v Eckhardt and Co KG (The Nissos Samos) [1985] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 378, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 52, 54, 64
- Sampson v Floyd [1989] 33 E.G. 41; [1989] 2 E.G.I.R. 49, CA ..... 991, 1057
- Sampson v Wilson [1996] Ch. 39; [1995] 3 W.L.R. 455, CA ..... 928
- Samson & Samson v Proctor [1975] 1 N.Z.L.R. 655, Sup Ct (NZ) ..... 928
- Samuels v Davis [1943] K.B. 526, CA ..... 841
- Sandeman Coprimar SA v Transitos y Transportes Integrales SL [2003] EWCA Civ 113; The Times, February 13, 2003, CA ..... 628, 641, 966
- Sanders v Ernest A Neale Ltd [1974] 3 All E.R. 327; [1974] I.C.R. 565, NIRC ..... 845
- Sanders v Parry [1967] 1 W.L.R. 753; [1967] 2 All E.R. 803; 111 S.J. 296, Assizes ..... 206, 455
- Sandwell Park Colliery Co, Re [1929] 1 Ch. 277, Ch D ..... 829
- Sanix Ace, The See Obestain Inc v National Mineral Development Corp Ltd
- Sanko Iris and Sanko Venus, The See Sanko Steamship Co Ltd v Eacom Timber Sales
- Sanko Steamship Co Ltd v Eacom Timber Sales (The Sanko Iris and Sanko Venus) [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 487, Sup Ct (BC) ... 774, 862
- Sanko Steamship Co Ltd v Kano Trading Ltd [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 156, CA ..... 794
- Santa Carina, The See N & J Vlassopoulos Ltd v Ney Shipping Ltd
- Santa Fé Land Co Ltd v Forestal Land Co Ltd (1910) 26 T.L.R. 534 ..... 53
- Santa Martha Baay Scheepvaart and Handelsmaatschappij NV v Scanbulk A/S (The Rijn) The Times, March 12, 1984, CA [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 267, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 851, 958, 959
- Sapwell v Bass [1910] 2 K.B. 486, KBD ..... 956
- Saragasso, The [1994] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 412 ..... 979
- Sard v Rhodes (1836) 1 M. & W. 153 ..... 754
- Saronikos, The See Greenmast Shipping Co SA v Jean Lion et Cie
- Sasea Finance Ltd (In Liquidation) v KPMG (formerly KPMG Peat Marwick McLintock) (No.2) [2000] 1 All E.R. 676; [2000] B.C.C. 989, CA ..... 976
- Satanita, The See Clarke v Earl of Dunraven
- Satef-Huttenes Albernus SpA v Paloma Tercera Shipping Co SA (The Pegase) [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 175; [1980] Com. L.R. 9, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 953, 968, 970, 971
- Saudi Prince, The (No.2) [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 1, CA ..... 238
- Saunders v Edwards [1987] 1 W.L.R. 1116; [1987] 2 All E.R. 651; (1987) 137 N.L.J. 389; (1987) 131 S.J. 1039, CA ..... 360, 483, 489
- Sauter Automation Ltd v HC Goodman (Mechanical Services) Ltd (In Liquidation) (1986) 34 B.L.R. 81; The Financial Times, May 14, 1986, Ch D ..... 20
- Savage v Madder (1867) 36 L.J.Ex. 178 ..... 526
- Savage v Uwechia [1961] 1 W.L.R. 455; [1961] 1 All E.R. 830, PC (Nig) ..... 78
- Saxby v Fulton [1909] 2 K.B. 208, CA ..... 532, 533
- Saxon Life Assurance Soc, Re (1862) 2 J. & H. 408 ..... 314
- Sayer v Wagstaff (1844) 14 L.J.Ch. 116 ..... 754
- Sayers v Harlow Urban DC [1958] 1 W.L.R. 623; [1958] 2 All E.R. 342, CA ..... 984, 985
- Scala House & District Property Co v Forbes [1974] Q.B. 575; [1973] 3 W.L.R. 14, CA ..... 780
- Scally v Southern Health and Social Services Board [1992] 1 A.C. 294; [1991] 3 W.L.R. 778, HL ..... 207, 208, 209, 211, 956, 984
- Scammell v Dicker [2001] 1 W.L.R. 631; [2001] C.P. Rep. 64, CA ..... 41

- Scancarriers A/S v Aotearoa International
(The Barranduna and The Tarago) [1985]
2 Lloyd's Rep. 419; (1985) 135 N.L.J. 799,
PC (NZ) ..... 11
- Scandinavian Trading Tanker Co AB v Flota
Petrolera Ecuatoriana (The Scaptrade)
[1983] 2 A.C. 694; [1983] 3 W.L.R. 203,
HL; [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 425, QBD
(Comm Ct) .... 50, 60, 61, 104, 107, 108, 109,
198, 624, 760, 779, 780, 781, 813,
814, 826, 1011, 1029, 1032, 1033,
1046
- Scanlan's New Neon Ltd v Toohey's Ltd
(1943) 67 C.L.R. 169 ..... 886, 893
- Scaplake, The See Pyxis Special Shipping Co
Ltd v Dritsas & Kaglis Bros
- Scaptrade, See Scandinavian Trading Tanker Co AB v Flota Petrolera Ecuatoriana (The Scaptrade)
- Scarf v Jardine (1881-82) L.R. 7 App. Cas.
345; [1881-5] All E.R. Rep. 651, HL ..... 713, 737
- Scarfe v Adams [1981] 1 All E.R. 843; 125 S.J.
32, CA ..... 197, 199
- Scarfe v Morgan (1838) 4 M. & W. 270 ..... 496
- Schaefer v Schuhmann [1972] A.C. 572;
[1972] 2 W.L.R. 481, PC (Aus) ..... 166, 184
- Schebsman (Deceased) Ex p. Official Receiver, Re; sub nom. Trustee v Cargo Superintentends (London) Ltd [1944] Ch. 83;
[1943] 2 All E.R. 768, CA ..... 626, 647, 649,
651, 657
- Scheggia v Gradwell; sub nom. Sheggia v
Gradwell [1963] 1 W.L.R. 1049; [1963] 3
All E.R. 114, CA ..... 742
- Schelde Delta Shipping BV v Astarte Shipping BV (The Pamela) [1995] 2 Lloyd's
Rep. 249, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 23, 26, 42
- Schering Chemicals Ltd v Falkman Ltd [1982]
Q.B. 1; [1981] 2 W.L.R. 848, CA ..... 455
- Schiffahrtsgesellschaft Detlev Von Appen
GmbH v Voest Alpine Intertrading
GmbH; Schiffahrtsgesellschaft Detlev Von Appen GmbH v Weiner Allianz Versiche-rungs AG [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 279,
CA ..... 668, 702
- Schindler v Pigault (1975) 30 P. & C.R. 328;
119 S.J. 273, Ch D ..... 1009
- Schmaltz v Avery (1851) 16 Q.B. 655 ..... 734
- Schneider v Heath (1813) 3 Camp. 506 ..... 242, 390
- Schneider v Norris (1814) 2 M. & S. 286 .... 183, 184
- Scholefield v Templer (1859) 4 D. & J. 429 ..... 371
- Scholefield Goodman & Sons v Zyngier [1986]
A.C. 562; [1985] 3 W.L.R. 953, PC
(Aus) ..... 574
- Scholey v Central Railway Co of Venezuela (1869-70) L.R. 9 Eq. 266, Lord Chancellor; affirming ..... 383, 384
- Schroeder v Central Bank of London Ltd
(1876) 34 L.T. 735 ..... 680
- Schuldenfrei v Hilton (Inspector of Taxes)
[1998] S.T.C. 404; [1998] B.T.C. 156, Ch
D ..... 8, 47
- Schuler AG v Wickman Machine Tool Sales
Ltd [1974] A.C. 235; [1973] 2 W.L.R. 683,
HL ..... 198, 779, 792, 825
- Schulze & Co v Great Eastern Railway Co
(1887) L.R. 19 Q.B.D. 30, CA ..... 953, 954
- Schwabacher, Re (1907) 98 L.T. 127 ..... 1020
- Schwartzreich v Bauman-Basch Inc 131 N.E.
887 ..... 97
- Schwawel v Reade [1913] 2 I.R. 64, HI ..... 354
- SCI (Sales Curve Interactive) Ltd v Titus Sarl
(A Firm) [2001] EWCA Civ 591; [2001] 2
All E.R. (Comm) 416, CA ..... 780, 849, 850, 854, 1006
- Scorer v Seymour Jones [1966] 1 W.L.R. 1419;
[1966] 3 All E.R. 347, CA ..... 458, 508
- Scotson v Pegg (1861) 6 H. & N. 295 ..... 94, 97, 98
- Scott v Avery (1855) 5 H.L.C. 811 ..... 447
- Scott v Bradley [1971] Ch. 850; [1971] 2
W.L.R. 731, Ch D ..... 183, 185, 196, 1028
- Scott v Brown [1892] 2 Q.B. 724, CA ..... 430, 491
- Scott v Coulson [1903] 2 Ch. 249, CA .... 291, 292, 312
- Scott v Frank F Scott (London) Ltd [1904]
Ch. 794 ..... 326
- Scott v Littledale (1858) 8 E. & B. 815 ..... 288
- Scott v Scott [1913] P. 52, PDAD ..... 441
- Scott v Scott [1959] P. 103 (Note); [1959] 2
W.L.R. 497 (Note), PDAD ..... 441
- Scott and Alvarez's Contract, Re [1895] 2 Ch.
603, CA ..... 1008
- Scottish Equitable plc v Derby [2001] EWCA
Civ 369; [2001] 3 All E.R. 818, CA ..... 115
- Scottish Petroleum Co (No.2), Re (1883) L.R.
23 Ch. D. 413, CA ..... 382
- Scottish Power plc v Britoil (Exploration) Ltd
(1997) 94(47) L.S.G. 30; (1997) 141
S.J.L.B. 246; The Times, December 2,
1997, CA ..... 197, 198
- Scottish Special Housing Association v Wim-pey Construction (UK) Ltd [1986] 1
W.L.R. 995, HL ..... 224
- Scrase v Whittington (1823) 2 B. & C. 11 .... 734
- Scriven Bros & Co v Hindley & Co [1913] 3
K.B. 564, KBD ..... 303, 309
- Scruttons Ltd v Midland Silicones Ltd [1962]
A.C. 446; [1962] 2 W.L.R. 186, HL ..... 203,
589, 627, 628, 630, 631, 633, 637,
638, 639, 640, 642, 655
- Scudamore v Vandensene (1587) 2 Co Inst.
673 ..... 669
- Scully UK Ltd v Lee [1998] I.R.L.R. 259,
CA ..... 455, 460, 508
- SE Regional Health Authority v Lovell (1985)
33 Build L.R. 127 ..... 697
- Sea Calm Shipping Co SA v Chantiers Navals de l'Esterel SA (The Uhenbels) [1986] 2
Lloyd's Rep. 294, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 404,
814

- Sea Hawk, The See Locabail International Finance Ltd v Agroexport and Atlanta (UK) Ltd
- Seabridge Shipping Ltd v Antco Shipping Co (The Furness Bridge) [1977] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 367; 121 S.J. 491, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 881, 892
- Seaflower, The (No.1) See BS & N Ltd (BVI) v Micado Shipping Ltd (Malta)
- Sealace Shipping Co Ltd v Oceanvoice Ltd (The Alecos M) [1991] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 120; The Times, September 25, 1990, CA; reversing [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 82, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 937, 953, 976
- Seaton v Benedict (1828) 5 Bing. 28 ..... 711
- Seaton v Burnard; sub nom. Seaton v Heath [1900] A.C. 135, HL; reversing [1899] 1 Q.B. 782, CA ..... 396
- Secretary of State for Employment v Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen (No.2); sub nom. Secretary of State for Employment v ASLEF (No.2) [1972] 2 Q.B. 455; [1972] 2 W.L.R. 1370, CA ..... 206, 834
- Secretary of State for Employment v Globe Elastic Thread Co Ltd [1980] A.C. 506; [1979] 3 W.L.R. 143, HL ..... 106, 113
- Secretary of State for Employment v Wilson [1978] 1 W.L.R. 568; [1978] 3 All E.R. 137, EAT ..... 980
- Secured Residential Funding plc v Douglas Goldberg Hendeles & Co (2000) 97(18) L.S.G. 38; (2000) 97(21) L.S.G. 40, CA .... 723
- Seddington v Coley Professional Services The Times, June 2, 1995 ..... 974
- Seddon v North Eastern Salt Co Ltd [1905] 1 Ch. 326, Ch D ..... 377
- Seechurn v Ace Insurance SA NV [2002] EWCA Civ 67; [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 390; [2002] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 489, CA .... 108, 110
- Sefton v Tophams Ltd (No.2); Earl of Sefton v Capital and Counties Property Co Ltd [1967] 1 A.C. 50; [1966] 2 W.L.R. 814, HL ..... 622
- Segap Garages v Gulf Oil (Great Britain) The Times, October 24, 1988, CA ..... 855
- Selda, The See Bem Dis A Turk Ticaret S/A TR v International Agri Trade Co Ltd Selectmove, Re [1995] 1 W.L.R. 474; [1995] 2 All E.R. 531, CA ..... 33, 126, 134, 713
- Selene G, The See Portaria Shipping Co v Gulf Pacific Navigation Co Ltd
- Selkirk v Romar Investments [1963] 1 W.L.R. 1415; [1963] 3 All E.R. 994, PC (Bah) ... 167, 391
- Sellers v London Counties Newspapers [1951] 1 K.B. 784; [1951] 1 All E.R. 544, CA ..... 741, 749
- Sen v Headley [1991] Ch. 425; [1991] 2 W.L.R. 1308, CA ..... 136, 137, 685
- Senate Electrical Wholesalers Ltd v Alcatel Submarine Networks Ltd (formerly STC Submarine Systems Ltd) [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 423; The Times, June 26, 1998, CA .... 937
- Senator Hanseatische Verwaltungsgesellschaft mbH, Re; sub nom. Titan Marketing Gesellschaft, Re; Company (No.002613 of 1996), Re [1997] 1 W.L.R. 515; [1996] 4 All E.R. 933, CA ..... 535
- Sennar (No.2), The See DSV Silo und Verwaltungsgesellschaft mbH v Owners of the Sennar
- Sepong Engineering Construction Co v Formula One Management Ltd [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 602 ..... 85, 150
- Series 5 Software Ltd v Clarke [1996] 1 All E.R. 853; [1996] C.L.C. 631, Ch D ..... 1041
- Seven Pioneer, The [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 57, HC (NZ) ..... 614
- Seven Seas Properties Ltd v Al-Essa (No.1) [1988] 1 W.L.R. 1272; [1989] 1 All E.R. 164, Ch D ..... 949, 966, 971, 978
- Seven Seas Properties Ltd v Al-Essa (No.2) [1993] 1 W.L.R. 1083; [1993] 3 All E.R. 577, Ch D ..... 971
- Seven Seas Transportation Ltd v Pacifico Union Marina Corp (The Satya Kailash and The Oceanic Amity) [1984] 2 All E.R. 140; [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 588, CA .... 191, 223
- Sevin v Deslandes (1860) 30 L.J. (Ch.) 457 ..... 1045
- Seymour v Bridge (1885) 14 Q.B.D. 460 ..... 712
- Seymour v Seymour The Times, February 16, 1989, Ch D ..... 323
- Shackelford, The See Surrey Shipping Co v Compagnie Continentale (France) SA
- Shackelford's Case See Rolling Stock Co of Ireland, Re
- Shadwell v Shadwell (1860) 9 C.B. (N.S.) 159 ..... 71, 97, 165
- Shaffer (James) v Findlay Durham & Brodie [1953] 1 W.L.R. 106; 97 S.J. 26, CA ..... 808
- Shah v Shah [2001] EWCA Civ 527; [2002] Q.B. 35, CA ..... 114, 124, 158, 403
- Shahnaz v Rizwan [1965] 1 Q.B. 390; [1964] 3 W.L.R. 759, QBD ..... 441
- Shallcross v Wright (1850) 12 Beav. 558 ..... 167
- Shamah, The [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 40 ..... 55, 712
- Shamia v Joory [1958] 1 Q.B. 448 ..... 673
- Shamrock SS Co v Storey & Co (1899) 81 L.T. 413 ..... 49
- Shamsher Jute Mills v Sethia London [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 388; The Financial Times, July 2, 1986, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 103
- Shanklin Pier Ltd v Detel Products Ltd [1951] 2 K.B. 854; [1951] 2 All E.R. 471, KBD ..... 582, 583, 584
- Shanshal v Al-Kishtaini [2001] EWCA Civ 264; [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 601, CA .... 482
- Sharif v Azad [1967] 1 Q.B. 605; [1966] 3 W.L.R. 1285, CA ..... 510
- Sharneyford Supplies Ltd v Edge [1987] Ch. 305; [1987] 2 W.L.R. 363, CA ..... 360

Sharp v Christmas (1892) 8 T.L.R. 687 .....	827
Sharp v Harrison [1922] 1 Ch 502 .....	1041
Sharp v Sphere Drake Insurance (The Moon-acre) [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 501, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	395, 516, 723, 986
Sharpe Ex p. Trustee of the Bankrupt's Property, Re; sub nom. Sharpe Re, Ex p. Trustee of the Bankrupt v Sharpe [1980] 1 W.L.R. 219; [1980] 1 All E.R. 198, Ch D .....	135, 137, 138, 143, 145, 166, 607
Shaw v Benson (1883) 11 Q.B.D. 563 ...	482, 514
Shaw v Fitzgerald [1992] 1 F.L.R. 357; [1992] F.C.R. 162 .....	440
Shaw v Fraser Southwell [1999] Lloyd's Rep. P.N. 633, CA .....	933
Shaw v Groom [1970] 2 Q.B. 504; [1970] 2 W.L.R. 299, CA .....	429, 434, 484, 503
Shaw v Shaw [1954] 2 Q.B. 429; [1954] 3 W.L.R. 265, CA .....	440
Shaw v Shaw [1965] 1 W.L.R. 537; [1965] 1 All E.R. 638 .....	491, 495
Shayler v Woolf [1946] Ch. 320; [1946] 2 All E.R. 54, CA .....	695
Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc v MacLaine Watson & Co Ltd (Application for discovery) [1988] 1 W.L.R. 946; [1989] 1 All E.R. 1056, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	107, 119, 121, 124, 191, 197, 219, 347, 475, 881, 947, 953, 961
Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc v MacLaine Watson & Co Ltd (Damages & Interest) [1990] 3 All E.R. 723; [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 441, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	960
Sheers v Thimbleby (1897) 13 T.L.R. 452 ....	185
Sheeskin v Giant Food Inc 318 A.2d. 874 (1974) .....	13
Sheffield v Gonran (1987) 22 Con.L.R. 108 ....	769
Sheffield v Pickfords Ltd [1997] C.L.C. 648; (1997) 16 Tr. L.R. 337, CA .....	252
Sheffield Gas Co v Harrison (1853) 17 Beav. 294 .....	1036
Sheffield Nickel Co Ltd v Unwin (1877) 2 Q.B.D. 215 .....	378
Sheikh Bros v Ochsner [1957] A.C. 136; [1957] 2 W.L.R. 254, PC (EA) .....	287
Shelfer v City of London Electric Lighting Co (No.1) [1895] 1 Ch. 287, CA .....	1041
Shell Chemical UK Ltd v P & O Tankers Ltd [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 297 .....	223
Shell International Petroleum Co Ltd v Seabridge Shipping (The Metula) [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 5, CA .....	785
Shell Tankers (UK) Ltd v Astro Comino Armadora SA (The Pacific Colocotronis) [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 40, CA .....	197, 199
Shell (UK) Ltd v Lostock Garage Ltd [1976] 1 W.L.R. 1187; [1977] 1 All E.R. 481, CA ...	204, 205, 421, 454, 490, 759, 843, 920, 1028
Shelley v Paddock [1980] Q.B. 348; [1980] 2 W.L.R. 647, CA .....	489
Shell-Mex Ltd v Elton Copy Dyeing Co (1928) 34 Com Cas. 39 .....	1022
Shephard v Cartwright [1953] Ch. 728; [1953] 3 W.L.R. 378, CA .....	710
Shepherd v Broome [1904] A.C. 342, HL; affirming [1903] 1 Ch. 586, CA .....	360, 364
Shepherd v Commissioner of Taxation [1966] A.L.R. 969 .....	683
Shepherd v Croft [1911] 1 Ch. 521, Ch D .....	391, 807
Shepherd Homes Ltd v Sandham (No.1) [1971] Ch. 340; [1970] 3 W.L.R. 348, Ch D .....	1041
Sheppard & Cooper Ltd v TSB Bank plc [1996] B.C.C. 653; [1997] 2 B.C.L.C. 222, CA .....	753
Sherdley v Sherdley [1988] A.C. 213; [1987] 2 W.L.R. 1071, CA .....	322, 541, 542
Sherwood v Walker 66 Mich. 568; 33 N.W. 919 (1887) .....	291
Shield, Re (1885) 53 L.T. 5 .....	685
Shiloh Spinners Ltd v Harding (No.1) [1973] A.C. 691; [1973] 2 W.L.R. 28, HL .....	1034
Shindler v Northern Raincoat Co [1960] 1 W.L.R. 1038; [1960] 2 All E.R. 239, Asizes (Manchester) .....	978
Shine Ex p. [1892] 1 Q.B. 522 .....	700
Shine v General Guarantee Corp [1988] 1 All E.R. 911; [1988] C.C.L.R. 14, CA .....	760, 817
Shinjitsu Maru No.5, The See AB Marintrans v Comet Shipping Co Ltd
Shipley Urban DC v Bradford Corp [1936] Ch. 375, Ch D .....	324
Shipping Corp of India v Naviera Letasa, SA [1976] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 132, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	63, 959
Shipping Developments Corp v V/O Sojuzneftexport (The Delian Spirit) [1972] 1 Q.B. 103; [1971] 2 W.L.R. 1434, CA .....	959
Shipton Anderson & Co v Weil Bros & Co [1912] 1 K.B. 574, KBD .....	783
Shipton, Re; sub nom. Arbitration between Anderson & Co and Harrison Brothers & Co, Re [1915] 3 K.B. 676, KBD .....	872
Shires v Brock (1977) 247 F.E.G. 127, CA ....	65, 810
Shizelle, The [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 444, QBD (Adm Ct) .....	620
Shogun Finance Ltd v Hudson [2001] E.W.C.A. Civ 1000; [2002] Q.B. 834, CA .....	298, 299, 301, 302, 707, 735
Short v Spackman (1831) 2 B. & Ad. 962 ....	733
Shove v Downs Surgical plc [1984] 1 All E.R. 7; [1984] 1 C.R. 532, QBD .....	957, 988
Showa Oil Tanker Co of Japan Ltd v Maravan SA of Caracas (The Larissa) [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 325, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	353, 354
Shuey v US 92 U.S. 73 (1875) .....	42
SIAT di del Ferro v Tradax Overseas SA [1980] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 53, CA; affirming [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 470, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	220

SIB International Srl v Metallgesellschaft Corp (The Noel Bay) [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 361, CA .....	954, 963
Siben, The See Hughes v Clewley (The Siben) (No.2)
Siboen, The and Sibotre, The See Occidental Worldwide Investment Corp v Skibs A/S Avanti (The Siboen and The Sibotre)
Sichel v Mosenthal (1862) 30 Beav. 371 .....	1020
Sidaway v Board of Governors of the Bethlem Royal Hospital [1985] A.C. 871; [1985] 2 W.L.R. 480, HL .....	400
Sidhu v British Airways plc; Abnett (known as Sykes) v British Airways plc [1997] A.C. 430; [1997] 2 W.L.R. 26, HL .....	639
Siebe Gorman & Co Ltd v Pnuepac Ltd [1982] 1 W.L.R. 185; [1982] 1 All E.R. 377; 125 S.J. 725, CA .....	314
Siew Soon Wah (alias Siew Pooi Yong) v Yong Tong Hong [1973] A.C. 836; [1973] 2 W.L.R. 713, PC (Mal) .....	50
Sig Bergesen DY & Co v Mobil Shipping and Transportation Co (The Berge Sund) [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 453; The Times , May 5, 1993, CA .....	207
Sika Contracts Ltd v Bl. Gill and Closeglen Properties Ltd (1978) 9 B.L.R. 11, QBD .....	733
Silva Plana, The [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 371 .....	800
Silver Coast Shipping Co v Union Nationale des Cooperatives Agricoles des Cereales (The Silver Sky) [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 95, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	905, 976
Silver Sky, The See Silver Coast Shipping Co v Union Nationale des Cooperatives Agricoles des Cereales
Silverman Ltd v Silverman The Times , July 7, 1969 .....	458
Silverstone Records v Mountfield [1993] E.M.L.R. 152 .....	461, 464, 507
Silverwood v Silverwood (1997) 74 P. & C.R. D9, CA .....	499
Silvester, Re; sub nom. Midland Railway Co v Silvester [1895] 1 Ch. 573, Ch D .....	45
Silvey v Pendragon plc [2001] EWCA Civ 784; [2001] I.R.L.R. 685, CA .....	846
Sim v Rotherham MBC [1987] Ch. 216; [1986] 3 W.L.R. 851, Ch D ... 210, 785, 786, 787, 788, 821, 825, 835, 855
Simaan General Contracting Co v Pilkington Glass Ltd [1988] Q.B. 758; [1988] 2 W.L.R. 761, CA .....	347, 583, 610, 611, 612, 614, 616, 643
Simmons v Hoover [1977] Q.B. 284; [1976] 3 W.L.R. 901, EAT .....	843, 846
Simms v Simms; sub nom. A v A; PA v JA [2002] EWHC 2734; [2003] 1 All E.R. 669, Fam Div .....	559
Simner v New India Assurance Co Ltd [1995] L.R.L.R. 240; The Times , July 21, 1994, QBD .....	392
Simon v Pawsons & Leafs Ltd (1932) 38 Co.Cas. 151 .....	435
Simon Container Machinery Ltd v Embla Machinery AB [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 429, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	95, 197, 667
Simona, The See Fercometal Sarl v MSC Mediterranean Shipping Co SA
Simonds v US 308 F. 2d. 160 (1962) .....	37
Simpkins v Pays [1955] 1 W.L.R. 975; [1955] 3 All E.R. 10, Assizes (Chester) .....	167
Simpson v Bloss (1816) 7 taunt. 246 .....	526
Simpson v Crippin (1872-73) L.R. 8 Q.B. 14, QB .....	773
Simpson v Hughes (1897) 66 L.J. Ch. 334 ....	19
Simpson v John Reynolds & Co (Insurances) Ltd [1975] 1 W.L.R. 617; [1975] 2 All E.R. 88, CA .....	77
Simpson v L & NW Railway (1876) 1 Q.B.D. 274 .....	956, 970
Simpson v Nichols (1838) 3 M. & W. 240 ....	496
Sims v Bond (1833) 5 B. & Ad. 389 .....	734
Sims & Co v Midland Railway Co [1913] 1 K.B. 103, KBD .....	719
Simon v Jones (1831) 2 Russ & MY. 365 ....	547
Sinclair v Bowles (1829) 9 B. & C. 92 .....	771
Sinclair v British Telecommunications plc [2001] 1 W.L.R. 38; [2000] 2 All E.R. 461, CA .....	689
Sinclair v Brougham; sub nom. Birkbeck Permanent Benefit Building Society, Re [1914] A.C. 398; [1914-15] All E.R. Rep. 622, HL .....	565
Sinclair's Life Policy, Re [1938] Ch. 799, Ch D .....	604, 626, 647, 648, 651, 670
Sindel v Georgio (1984) 154 C.L.R. 611, HC (Aus) .....	53
Singer Co (UK) Ltd v Tees and Hartlepool Port Authority [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 164; [1988] 1 F.T.L.R. 442, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	216, 233, 258, 260, 589, 641
Singh v Ali [1960] A.C. 167; [1960] 2 W.L.R. 180, PC (FMS) .....	496, 501
Singh v Beggs (1996) 71 P. & C.R. 120, CA .....	185
Singh v Guru Nanak Gurdwara [1990] I.C.R. 309, CA .....	170
Singh v Nazeer [1979] Ch. 474; [1978] 3 W.L.R. 785, Ch D .....	856
Sir Lindsay Parkinson & Co v Commissioners of Works and Public Buildings [1949] 2 K.B. 632; [1950] 1 All E.R. 208, CA .....	887, 900, 1061
Sirius International Insurance Corp v Oriental Assurance Corporation [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm.) 699; [1999] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 343, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	331
Siu Yin Kwan v Eastern Insurance Co Ltd [1994] 2 A.C. 199; [1994] 2 W.L.R. 370, PC (HK) .....	589, 723, 728, 729, 730, 734
Siveyer v Allison [1935] 2 K.B. 403, KBD .....	440
Skeate v Beale (1841) 11 A. & E. 983 .....	407
Skelly Oil Co v Ashmore 365 S.W. 2d. 582 (1963) .....	896

- Skilton v Sullivan The Times, March 25, 1994,
 CA ..... 434, 451, 484
 Skipp v Kelly (1926) 42 T.L.R. 258 ..... 440
 Skips A/S Nordheim v Syrian Petroleum Co and Petrofina SA (The Varenna) [1984]
 Q.B. 599; [1983] 3 All E.R. 645, CA ..... 62
 Skipskreditforeningen v Emperor Navigation
 [1998] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 66; [1997] 2
 B.C.L.C. 398; [1997] C.L.C. 1151, QBD
 (Comm Ct) ..... 242, 257, 260, 267, 338, 383,
 385, 388
 Skopas, The See Resolute Maritime Inc v Nip-pon Kaiji Kyokai
 Sky Petroleum v VIP Petroleum [1974] 1
 W.L.R. 576; [1974] 1 All E.R. 954, Ch
 D ..... 868, 1025
 SL Sethia Liners v Naviagro Maritime Corp
 (The Kostas Melas) [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep.
 18; [1980] Com. L.R. 3, QBD (Comm
 Ct) ..... 788
 Slade v Metrodent [1953] 2 Q.B. 112; [1953] 2
 W.L.R. 1202, QBD ..... 543, 545
 Slater v Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis The Times, January 23, 1996 ..... 501
 Slater v Hoyle & Smith Ltd [1920] 2 K.B. 11,
 CA ..... 949, 950, 951
 Slater v Raw The Times, October 15, 1977 ..... 50, 479
 Slater v Trimble (1861) 14 Ir.C.L.R. 342 ..... 546, 547
 Sledmore v Dalby (1996) 72 P. & C.R. 196;
 [1996] N.P.C. 16, CA ..... 146
 Slingsby Case (1588) 5 Co. Rep. 18B ..... 575
 Slocock's Will Trusts, Re [1979] 1 All E.R.
 358, Ch D ..... 323, 326
 Smallman v Smallman [1972] Fam. 25; [1971]
 3 W.L.R. 588, CA ..... 65
 Smart v Sandars (1848) 5 C.B. 895 ..... 751
 Smeaton Hanscomb & Co v Sassoon I Setty
 Son & Co (No.1) [1953] 1 W.L.R. 1468;
 [1953] 2 All E.R. 1471, QBD ..... 227, 229
 Smeed v Foord (1859) 1 E. & E. 602 ..... 974
 Smethurst v Mitchell (1859) 1 E. & E. 622 ..... 737
 Smidt v Tiden (1873-74) L.R. 9 Q.B. 446,
 QB ..... 304, 307
 Smit International Singapore Pte Ltd v Kurnia
 Dewi Shipping SA (The Kurnia Dewi)
 [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 552, QBD (Adm
 Ct) ..... 18, 24, 38, 55, 202, 737, 1061
 Smith and Snipes Hall Farm Ltd v River Douglas Catchment Board [1949] 2 K.B.
 500 ..... 589, 669
 Smith Hogg & Co Ltd v Black Sea & Baltic
 General Insurance Co Ltd [1940] A.C.
 997; (1940) 67 Ll. L. Rep. 253, HL ..... 975
 Smith Kline & French Laboratories Ltd v
 Long [1989] 1 W.L.R. 1; [1988] 3 All E.R.
 887; (1988) 132 S.J. 1553, CA ..... 332, 359, 360,
 936
 Smith New Court Securities Ltd v Scrim-geour Vickers (Asset Management) Ltd;
 Smith New Court Securities Ltd v Citibank NA [1997] A.C. 254; [1996] 3
 W.L.R. 1051, HL ..... 360, 362, 363, 364, 365,
 374, 378
 Smith v Anderson (1880) L.R. 15 Ch. D. 247,
 CA ..... 482, 514
 Smith v Blandford Gee Cementation Ltd
 [1970] 3 All E.R. 154; 8 K.I.R. 1107,
 DC ..... 693
 Smith v Bromley (1760) 2 Dougl. 696 ..... 492
 Smith v Butler [1900] 1 Q.B. 694, CA ..... 63
 Smith v Chadwick (1884) 9 App.Cas. 187 ..... 84,
 335, 342, 343
 Smith v Charlick (1923-24) 34 C.L.R. 38 ..... 406
 Smith v Claremont Haynes & Co The Times,
 September 3, 1991 ..... 608
 Smith v Cuff (1817) 6 M. & S. 160 ..... 492
 Smith v Eric S Bush (A Firm); Harris v Wyre
 Forest DC [1990] 1 A.C. 831; [1989] 2
 W.L.R. 790, HL ..... 249, 260, 339, 340, 341,
 345, 346, 348, 354, 360, 386, 553,
 586, 840
 Smith v Green (1875) 1 C.P.D. 92 ..... 362, 944
 Smith v Harrison (1857) 26 L.J. Ch 412 ... 83, 295,
 608
 Smith v Hughes (1870-71) L.R. 6 Q.B. 597;
 [1861-73] All E.R. Rep. 632, QB ..... 1, 303, 304, 306, 308, 310, 339, 391
 Smith v Jones [1954] 1 W.L.R. 1089; [1954] 2
 All E.R. 823, Ch D ..... 326
 Smith v Kay (1859) 7 H.L.C. 750 ..... 336
 Smith v Land & House Property Corp (1885)
 L.R. 28 Ch. D. 7, CA ..... 331, 339, 342
 Smith v Lawson (1998) 75 P. & C.R. 466;
 [1997] E.G.C.S. 85, CA ..... 106, 110, 111, 115
 Smith v Leech Brain & Co [1962] 2 Q.B. 405;
 [1962] 2 W.L.R. 148, QBD ..... 972
 Smith v Mansi [1963] 1 W.L.R. 26; [1962] 3
 All E.R. 857, CA ..... 53
 Smith v Mawhood (1845) 14 M. & W. 452 ..... 433
 Smith v Monteith (1844) 13 M. & W. 427 ..... 405
 Smith v Morgan [1971] 1 W.L.R. 803; [1971] 2
 All E.R. 1500; (1971) 22 P. & C.R. 618; 115
 S.J. 288, Ch D ..... 56, 58
 Smith v Owners of the SS Zigurds [1934] A.C.
 209; (1933) 47 Ll. L. Rep. 267, HL ..... 680
 Smith v Smith [2001] 1 W.L.R. 1937; [2001] 3
 All E.R. 552, Ch D ..... 683
 Smith v South Wales Switchgear Co Ltd
 [1978] 1 W.L.R. 165; [1978] 1 All E.R. 18,
 HL ..... 191, 218, 221
 Smith v Taylor [1966] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 231 ..... 220
 Smith v UMB Chrysler (Scotland) 1978 S.C.
 (H.L.) 1 ..... 223
 Smith v Warde (1845) 15 Sim. 56 ..... 685
 Smith v Wheatcroft (1878) L.R. 9 Ch. D. 223,
 Ch D ..... 729
 Smith v Wilson (1832) 3 B. & Ad. 728 ..... 199, 223
 Smith v Zimbalist 2 Cal.App. 2d 234; 38 P. 2d
 170 (9134) ..... 290

Smithies v National Association of Operative Plasterers [1909] 1 K.B. 310, CA .....	623
Smoker v London Fire and Civil Defence Authority [1991] 2 A.C. 502; [1991] 2 W.L.R. 1052, HL .....	981
Smout v Ibery (1842) 10 M. & W. 1 .....	738, 739
Smyth v Anderson (1849) 7 C.B. 21 .....	731
Smyth & Co Ltd v TD Bailey & Co [1940] 3 All E.R. 60, HL .....	809
SN Kurkjan (Commodity) Brokers Ltd v Marketing Exchange for Africa Ltd [1986] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 614 .....	812
Snell v Unity Finance Co [1964] 2 Q.B. 203; [1963] 3 W.L.R. 559, CA .....	481
Snelling v John G Snelling Ltd [1973] Q.B. 87; [1972] 2 W.L.R. 588, QBD .....	56, 58, 129, 130, 168, 603, 604, 637
Snia v Suzuki & Co (1929) 29 Com.Cas. 284 .....	863
Snia Societa di Navigazione Industriale et Commercio v Suzuki & Co (1924) 18 Ll. L. Rep. 333, CA .....	942
Soames, Re (1897) 13 T.L.R. 439 .....	73
Sociedad Financiera de Bienes Raices SA v Agrimpex Hungarian Trading Co for Agricultural Products (The Aello) [1961] A.C. 135; [1960] 3 W.L.R. 145, HL .....	838
Sociedad Iberica de Molturacion SA v Tradax Export SA [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 545, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	892
Societe Anonyme des Grands Etablissements de Touquet Paris-Plage v Baumgart [1927] All E.R. Rep. 280; (1927) 96 L.J.K.B. 789 .....	532, 533
Societe Commerciale de Reassurance v Eras International Ltd (formerly Eras (UK)) [1992] 2 All E.R. 82 (Note); [1992] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 570, CA .....	610, 701, 758, 983
Societe des Hotels Reunis (SA) v Hawker (1913) 29 T.L.R. 578 .....	409, 520
Societe des Industries Metallurgiques SA v Bronx Engineering Co [1975] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 465, CA .....	1021, 1023
Société Générale de Paris v Milders (1883) 49 L.T. 55 .....	762, 858
Societe Italo-Belge Pour le Commerce et L'Industrie SA (Antwerp) v Palm and Society of Lloyd's v Lyon The Times , August 11, 1997 .....	382
Society of Lloyd's v Twinn (Geoffrey George); Society of Lloyd's v Twinn (Gail Sally) (2000) 97(15) L.S.G. 40; The Times , April 4, 2000, CA .....	19
Soden v British & Commonwealth Holdings plc (In Administration) [1998] A.C. 298; [1997] 3 W.L.R. 840, HL .....	343, 586, 662
Sole v WJ Hall Ltd [1973] Q.B. 574; [1973] 2 W.L.R. 171, QBD .....	986
Soleimany v Soleimany [1999] Q.B. 785; [1998] 3 W.L.R. 811, CA .....	448, 450, 452, 482
Solholt, The See Sotiros Shipping Inc v Shmeiet Solholt
Solle v Butcher [1950] 1 K.B. 671; [1949] 2 All E.R. 1107, CA .....	291, 311, 314, 315, 316, 318, 319, 320, 321, 334
Soloman v Pender (1865) 3 H. & C. 639 .....	746
Somerset v Cookson (1735) 3 P.Wms. 390 .....	1022
Somma v Hazelhurst; Somma v Savelli [1978] 1 W.L.R. 1014; [1978] 2 All E.R. 1011, CA .....	444
Sonat Offshore SA v Amerada Hess Development and Texaco (Britain) [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 145; 39 B.L.R. 1, CA .....	222, 245, 608, 984
Sonicare International Ltd v East Anglia Freight Terminal Ltd; Sonicare International Ltd v Neptune Orient Lines Ltd [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 48, CC (Central London) .....	641
Soon Hua Seng Co Ltd v Glencore Grain Ltd [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 398; [1996] C.L.C. 729, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	789, 794
Soper v Arnold (1889) L.R. 14 App. Cas. 429, HL; affirming (1888) L.R. 37 Ch. D. 96, CA .....	318
Sorrell v Finch [1977] A.C. 728; [1976] 2 W.L.R. 833, HL .....	708
Sorsbie v Park (1843) 12 M. & W. 146 .....	575, 576
Sotiros Shipping Inc v Shmeiet Solholt (The Solholt) [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 605; [1983] Com. L.R. 114, CA .....	778, 848, 853, 927, 976, 978
South African Territories Ltd v Wallington [1898] A.C. 309, HL .....	1020
South Australia Asset Management Corp v York Montague Ltd; United Bank of Kuwait plc v Prudential Property Services Ltd; Nykredit Mortgage Bank plc v Edward Erdman Group Ltd [1997] A.C. 191; [1996] 3 W.L.R. 87, HL .....	7, 350, 359, 360, 362, 363, 365, 374, 938, 939, 952, 960, 983
South Australian Management Corp v Sheahan [1995] A.L.M.D. 3577, Sup Ct (SAus) (Sgl judge) .....	629, 696
South Ex p. (1818) 3 Swanst. 392 .....	674
South of England Natural Gas and Petroleum Co Ltd, Re [1911] 1 Ch. 573, Ch D .....	399
South Tyneside MBC v Svenska International plc [1995] 1 All E.R. 545, QBD .....	567, 1058
South Wales Miners Federation v Glamorgan Coal Co Ltd [1905] A.C. 239, HL; affirming [1903] 2 K.B. 545, CA .....	623
South West Trains Ltd v Wightman The Times , January 14, 1998 .....	63, 129
South West Water Authority v Palmer (1982) 263 E.G. 438 .....	172
South West Water Services Ltd v International Computers Ltd [1999] B.L.R. 420; [1999-2000] Info. T.L.R. 1, QBD (T & CC) .....	389, 1053
South Western General Property Co v Marton (1982) 263 E.G. 1090; (1983) 2 Tr. L. 14 .....	386, 773

- South Western Mineral Water Co Ltd v Ashmore [1967] 1 W.L.R. 1110; [1967] 2 All E.R. 953, Ch D ..... 511
- Southampton v Brown (1827) 6 B. & C. 718 .... 669
- Southern Container Terminal Ltd v Hansa Schiffahrts GmbH (The Maersk Colombo) [2001] EWCA Civ 717; [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 275, CA ..... 946
- Southern Foundries (1926) Ltd v Shirlaw [1940] A.C. 701; [1940] 2 All E.R. 445, HL; affirming [1939] 2 K.B. 206, CA .... 201, 209
- Southern Water Authority v Carey [1985] 2 All E.R. 1077, QBD ..... 589, 633, 637, 638, 650, 670, 723
- Southwark LBC v Logan (1997) 29 H.L.R. 40; (1996) 8 Admin. L.R. 315, CA ... 51, 78, 111
- Southway Group Ltd v Wolff 57 B.L.R. 33; 28 Con. L.R. 109, CA ..... 757
- Sovfracht (V/O) v Van Udens Scheepvaart en Agentuur Maatschappij (NV Gebr) [1943] A.C. 203; (1942) 74 Ll. L. Rep. 59, HL ..... 452
- Sovmots Investments Ltd v Secretary of State for the Environment [1979] A.C. 144; [1977] 2 W.L.R. 951, CA ..... 5
- Sowler v Potter [1939] 4 All E.R. 478, KBD ..... 299, 305
- Spafax Ltd v Harrison; Spafax Ltd v Taylor [1980] I.R.L.R. 442, CA ..... 459
- Span Terza (No.2) See Stellar Chartering and Brokerage Inc v Efibanca-Ente Finanziario Interbancario SpA (The Span Terza) (No.2)
- Spector v Ageda [1973] Ch. 30; [1971] 3 W.L.R. 498, Ch D ..... 482, 507, 510
- Spectra International plc v Hayesoak Ltd [1998] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 162, CA; reversing [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 153, CC (Central London) ..... 641
- Spellman v Spellman [1961] 1 W.L.R. 921; [1961] 2 All E.R. 498, CA ..... 165, 679, 693
- Spennorth Urban DC's Agreement, Re [1968] Ch. 139; [1967] 2 W.L.R. 1403, Ch D ..... 749
- Spence v Cosmos Air Holidays Ltd The Times, December 6, 1989 ..... 204
- Spence v Crawford [1939] 3 All E.R. 271; 1939 S.L.T. 305, HL ..... 377, 379, 381, 382
- Spence v Healey (1853) 8 Ex. 668 ..... 189
- Spence v Shell UK (1980) 256 E.G. 55, CA .... 107, 108, 116
- Spencer v Cosmos Air Holidays Ltd The Times, December 6, 1989 ..... 989
- Spencer v Harding (1870) L.R. 5 C.P. 561 .... 11, 15
- Spencer v MacMillan's Trustees (No.1) 1958 S.C. 300; 1959 S.L.T. 41, 2 Div ..... 957
- Spencer v Marchington [1988] I.R.L.R. 392; The Times, February 1, 1988, Ch D .... 459, 808
- Spettabile Consorzio Veneziano di Armamento e Navigazione v Northumberland Shipbuilding Co (1919) 121 L.T. 628 ..... 808
- Spice Girls Ltd v Aprilia World Service BV; sub nom. Spice Girls Ltd v Aprilia World Service BV [2002] EWCA Civ 15; [2002] E.M.L.R. 27, CA ..... 335, 338, 341, 390, 393
- Spiers v Hunt [1908] 1 K.B. 720, KBD ..... 439
- Spiller v Paris Skating Rink Co (1878) 7 Ch.D. 368 ..... 725
- Spiro v Glencrown Properties Ltd [1991] Ch. 537; [1991] 2 W.L.R. 931, Ch D ..... 153, 178
- Spiro v Lintern [1973] 1 W.L.R. 1002; [1973] 3 All E.R. 319, CA ..... 33, 399, 708, 716
- Spiros C, The See Tradigrain SA v King Diamond Marine Ltd
- Splendid Sun, The See Andre et Cie SA v Marine Transocean Ltd (The Splendid Sun)
- Sport International Bussum BV v Inter-Footwear [1984] 1 W.L.R. 776; [1984] 2 All E.R. 321, HL ..... 314, 780, 1001
- Spottiswood v Barrow (1850) 5 Ex. 110 ..... 836
- Spriggs v Sotheby Parke Bernet & Co [1986] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 487; [1986] 1 E.G.L.R. 13, CA ..... 222, 2
- Spring v Guardian Assurance plc [1995] 2 A.C. 296; [1994] 3 W.L.R. 354, HL ..... 209, 338, 345, 347, 348, 984
- Spring v National Amalgamated Stevedores and Dockers Society (No.2) [1956] 1 W.L.R. 585; [1956] 2 All E.R. 221, Chancery Ct of Lancaster ..... 204, 211
- Springer v Great Western Railway Co [1921] 1 K.B. 257; (1920) 4 Ll. L. Rep. 211, CA .... 719, 720
- Squire v Campbell (1836) 1 My. & Cr. 459 ..... 322
- Sri Lanka Omnibus Co v Perera [1952] A.C. 76; [1951] 2 T.L.R. 1184, PC (Cey) ..... 1020
- St Albans City and District Council v International Computers Ltd [1996] 4 All E.R. 481; [1997-98] Info. T.L.R. 58, CA ..... 210, 253, 258, 261, 279, 593, 977
- St Enoch Shipping Co Ltd v Phosphate Mining Co [1916] 2 K.B. 624, KBD ..... 782, 917
- St John Shipping Corp v Joseph Rank Ltd [1957] 1 Q.B. 267; [1956] 3 W.L.R. 870, QBD ..... 429, 434, 438, 483, 484, 514
- St Paul Fire & Marine Insurance Co (UK) Ltd v McConnell Dowell Constructors Ltd [1996] 1 All E.R. 96; [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 116, CA ..... 332, 336, 341, 395
- Stabilad Ltd v Stephens & Carter Ltd (No.2) [1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 651, CA .... 49, 64, 65, 84, 85, 167
- Stafford v Conti Commodity Services Ltd [1981] 1 All E.R. 691; [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 466, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 841
- Staffordshire Area Health Authority v South Staffordshire Waterworks [1978] 1 W.L.R. 1387 ..... 867, 883
- Stag Line Ltd v Foscolo Mango & Co Ltd [1932] A.C. 328; (1931) 41 Ll. L. Rep. 165, HL ..... 229

Stag Line Ltd v Tyne Ship Repair Group Ltd (The Zinnia) [1984] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 211; (1985) 4 Tr. L. 33, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 259, 400, 582, 634, 839	Starside Properties v Mustapha [1974] 1 W.L.R. 816; [1974] 2 All E.R. 567, CA ..... 1008, 1009
Stait v Fenner [1912] 2 Ch. 504, Ch D ..... 325	State Bank of India v Kaur [1996] 5 Bank. L.R. 158; [1995] N.P.C. 43; The Times , April 24, 1995, CA ..... 183
Standard Bank of London Ltd v Abelowolakis [2000] 1 L.Pr. 766 ..... 270	State Trading Corp of India Ltd v Cie Francaise d'Importation et de Distribution [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 679, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 105, 813
Standard Chartered Bank Ltd v Walker [1982] 1 W.L.R. 1410; [1982] 3 All E.R. 938, CA ..... 243	State Trading Corp of India Ltd v M Golodetz & Co Inc Ltd [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 277, CA ... 229, 240, 789, 790, 799, 800, 823, 848, 850, 851, 858
Standard Chartered Bank v Pakistan National Shipping Corp (Assessment of Damages) [2001] EWCA Civ 55; [2001] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 822, CA ..... 339, 364, 949, 1018	Stead v Dawber (1839) 10 A. & E. 57 ..... 101, 105
Standard Chartered Bank v Pakistan National Shipping Corp (No.1) [1998] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 656, CA; reversing [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 365, QBD (Adm Ct) ..... 341, 344	Steedman v Drinkle [1916] 1 A.C. 275, PC (Can) ..... 828, 1009
Standard Chartered Bank v Pakistan National Shipping Corp (No.2); Standard Chartered Bank v Mehra [2002] UKHL 43; [2002] 3 W.L.R. 1547, CA ..... 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 495, 986	Steeds v Steeds (1889) L.R. 22 Q.B.D. 537, QBD ..... 576, 577
Standing v Bowring (1886) L.R. 31 Ch. D. 282, CA ..... 680	Steel v State Line SS Co (1877) 3 App.Cas. 72 ..... 838
Staniforth v Lyall (1830) 7 Bing. 169 ..... 934	Steel Wing Co Ltd, Re [1921] 1 Ch. 349, Ch D ..... 677
Stanlake Holdings v Tropical Capital Investment The Financial Times , June 25, 1991, CA ..... 370	Stein Forbes & Co Ltd v County Tailoring Co Ltd (1916) 115 L.T. 215 ..... 1015
Stanley v English Fibres Industrie Ltd (1889) 68 L.J.Q.B. 839 ..... 681	Steinberg v Scala (Leeds) Ltd [1923] 2 Ch. 452, CA ..... 546, 547, 548, 549
Stansbie v Troman [1948] 2 K.B. 48; [1948] 1 All E.R. 599, CA ..... 976	Stellar Chartering and Brokerage Inc v Efi-banca-Ente Finanziario Interbancario SpA (The Span Terza) (No.2) [1984] 1 W.L.R. 27; [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 119, HL ..... 778
Stanton v Richardson (1872) L.R. 7 C.P. 421 ..... 763, 808	Stena Nautica, The See CN Marine Inc v Stena Line A/B
Stapleton-Bretherton, Re; sub nom. Weld-Blundell v Stapleton-Bretherton [1941] Ch. 482, Ch D ..... 605, 647, 649	Stenhouse Australia v Phillips [1974] A.C. 391; [1974] 2 W.L.R. 134, PC (Aus) ..... 454, 459, 463, 508
Stapylton Fletcher Ltd (In Administrative Receivership), Re [1994] 1 W.L.R. 1181; [1995] 1 All E.R. 192, Ch D ..... 1023	Stephen v International Sleeping Car Co Ltd (1903) 19 T.L.R. 620 ..... 218
Star Gazer and Star Delta, The See Allseas International Management v Panroy Bulk Transport SA	Stevens v Avery [1988] Ch. 449; [1988] 2 W.L.R. 1280, Ch D ..... 444, 455
Star Sea, The See Manifest Shipping Co Ltd v Uni-Polaris Insurance Co Ltd	Stevens v Dudbridge Ironworks Co Ltd [1904] 2 K.B. 225, CA ..... 544
Star Shipping AG v China National Foreign Trade Transportation Corp (The Star Texas) [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 445, CA ..... 49, 51, 58, 202, 207, 211	Stevens v Venables (1862) 30 Beav. 625 ..... 690
Star Steamship Society v Beogradska Plovidba (The Junior K) [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 583, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 52, 60, 64, 403	Sterling Engineering Co v Patchett (No.1); sub nom. Patchett v Sterling Engineering Co (No.1) [1955] A.C. 534; [1955] 2 W.L.R. 424, HL ..... 207
Star Texas, The See Star Shipping AG v China National Foreign Trade Transportation Corporation	Steven v Benning (1854) 1 K. & J. 168; 6 D.M. & G. 223 ..... 694
Stark Ex p. [1897] 1 Ch 575 ..... 22	Steven v Bromley & Son [1919] 2 K.B. 722, CA ..... 9, 18, 1061
Starkey v Bank of England; sub nom. Oliver v Bank of England [1903] A.C. 114, HL .... 738	Stevens v Hoare (1904) 20 T.L.R. 407 ..... 360
Starmark Enterprises Ltd v CPL Distribution Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 1252; [2002] Ch. 306, CA ..... 828	Stevenson v Hardie (1773) 2 Wm.Bl. 872 ..... 709
	Stevenson v Newnham (1853) 13 C.B. 285 ..... 371
	Stevenson v Rogers [1991] 1 All E.R. 613 ..... 247
	Stevenson v Snow (1761) 3 Burr. 1237 ..... 1050
	Stevenson v United Road Transport Union [1977] 2 All E.R. 941; [1977] I.C.R. 893, CA ..... 1030
	Stevenson, Jacques & Co v McLean (1880) 5 Q.B.D. 346 ..... 24, 41, 43, 153

Steward v Rapley [1955-95] P.N.L.R. 451; [1989] 15 E.G. 198 .....	933, 947
Stewart v Aberdein (1838) 4 M. & W. 211 ....	727
Stewart v Glentagart Ltd 1963 S.C. 300; 1963 S.L.T. 119, OH .....	957
Stewart v Kennedy (No.1) (1890) L.R. 15 App. Cas. 75, HL .....	317
Stewart v Kennedy (No.2) (1890) L.R. 15 App. Cas. 108; (1890) 17 R. (H.L.) 25, HL .....	315
Stewart v Oriental Fire & Marine Insurance Co Ltd [1986] 1 Q.B. 988 .....	434, 487
Stewart v Reavell's Garage [1952] 2 Q.B. 545; [1952] 1 All E.R. 1191, QBD .....	748, 758
Stewart Gill Ltd v Horatio Myer & Co Ltd [1992] Q.B. 600; [1992] 2 W.L.R. 721, CA .....	248, 255, 257
Stickney v Keeble [1915] A.C. 386, HL .....	830, 831, 1026
Stikeman v Dawson (1847) 1 De G. & Sm. 90 .....	554
Stilk v Myrick (1809) 2 Camp. 317 .... 94, 95, 96, 113, 480
Stimson v Smith [1999] 2 All E.R. 833 ....	574, 753
Stinnes Interoil GmbH v A Halcoussis & Co (The Yanxilas) [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 445, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	728, 733
Stinnes Interoil GmbH v A Halcoussis & Co (The Yanxilas) (No.2) [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 676, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	969, 976
Stirling v Leadenhall Residential 2 Ltd See Leadenhall Residential 2 Ltd v Stirling
Stirling v Maitland (1864) 5 B. & S. 840 .....	209
Stockloser v Johnson [1954] 1 Q.B. 476; [1954] 2 W.L.R. 439, CA .....	1009, 1010
Stockport MBC v O'Reilly (No.2) [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 70; [1983] Com. L.R. 32, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	905
Stocks v Dobson (1853) 4 D.M. & G. 11 .....	681, 682
Stocks v Wilson [1913] 2 K.B. 235, KBD ...	540, 550, 551, 553, 555
Stockton v Mason [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 430; [1979] R.T.R. 130, CA .....	709
Stocznia Gdanska SA v Latvian Shipping Co (Leave to Amend Pleadings) [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 228, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	864
Stocznia Gdanska SA v Latvian Shipping Co (Reputation) [2002] EWCA Civ 889; [2002] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 768, CA .....	836, 851, 854, 856, 864
Stocznia Gdanska SA v Latvian Shipping Co [1999] 3 All E.R. 822; [1999] C.L.C. 1451, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	697, 760, 857
Stocznia Gdanska SA v Latvian Shipping; sub nom. Stocznia Gdanska SA v Latreefers Inc [1998] 1 W.L.R. 574; [1998] 1 All E.R. 883, HL; reversing in part [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 132 .....	850, 888, 1012, 1017, 1049
Stoddart v Union Trust Ltd [1912] 1 K.B. 181, CA .....	690
Stoke on Trent City Council v W & J Wass Ltd (No.1) [1988] 1 W.L.R. 1406; [1988] 3 All E.R. 394, CA .....	929, 935
Stokes v Whicher [1920] 1 Ch. 411, Ch D .....	185
Stolt Loyalty, The [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 598, CA; affirming [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 281, QBD (Adm Ct) .....	34, 107, 109, 399, 728
Stone v Godfrey (1854) 5 D.M. & G. 76 .....	314
Stone v Reliance Mutual Insurance Society [1972] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 469, CA .....	708
Stone Vickers Ltd v Appledore Ferguson Shipbuilders Ltd [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 578, CA .....	667
Stoomv Maats De Maas NV v Nippon Yusen Kaisha (The Pendrecht) [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 56, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	26, 42
Storer v Gordon (1814) 3 M. & S. 308 .....	669
Storer v Great Western Railway (1842) 2 Y & C.C.C. 48 .....	1033
Storer v Manchester City Council [1974] 1 W.L.R. 1403; [1974] 3 All E.R. 824, CA ....	8, 52, 172
Stork, The [1955] 2 Q.B. 68 .....	834
Stour Valley Builders v Stuart The Times , Feb- ruary 23, 1993 .....	100
Stovin v Wise and Norfolk CC [1996] A.C. 923; [1996] 3 W.L.R. 388, HL .....	610
Stovold v Barlows [1996] C.L.C. 228; [1996] E.C.C. 101, CA .....	956
Strachan v Universal Stock Exchange Ltd (No.1) [1896] A.C. 166, HL ....	517, 523, 524
Strachan & Henshaw Ltd v Stein Industrie (UK) Ltd (No.2) (1998) 87 B.L.R. 52 ....	331
Strand Electric and Engineering Co Ltd v Brisford Entertainments Ltd [1952] 2 Q.B. 246; [1952] 1 All E.R. 796, CA ....	928, 1056
Strange (SW) v Mann [1965] 1 W.L.R. 629; [1965] 1 All E.R. 1069, Ch D .....	459
Strass v Spillers & Bakers Ltd [1911] 2 K.B. 759, KBD .....	516
Strathford East Kilbride Ltd v HLM Design Ltd 1999 S.L.T. 121; 1997 S.C.L.R. 877, OH .....	610
Stratton Ltd v Weston The Financial Times , April 11, 1990 .....	975
Stray v Russell (1859) 1 E. & E. 889 .....	1053
Street v Mountford [1985] A.C. 809; [1985] 2 W.L.R. 877, HL .....	172, 444
Strickland v Turner (1852) 7 Ex. 208 .....	287
Strive Shipping Corp v Hellenic Mutual War Risks Association (Bermuda) Ltd (The Grecia Express) [2002] EWHC 203; [2002] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 213, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	343, 397, 401
Stromdale & Ball Ltd v Burden [1952] Ch. 223; [1952] 1 All E.R. 59, Ch D .....	670
Strongman (1945) v Sincok [1955] 2 Q.B. 525; [1955] 3 W.L.R. 360, CA .....	489
Stroud v Austin & Co (1883) Cab. & Fl. 119 ....	953
Strover v Harrington [1988] Ch. 390; [1988] 2 W.L.R. 572, Ch D .....	163, 338, 339, 360, 712, 772

Strutt v Whitnell [1975] 1 W.L.R. 870; [1975] 2 All E.R. 510, CA .....	848, 978
Stuart v Stephen (1940) 56 T.L.R. 571 .....	529
Stubbs v Trower, Still & Keeling [1987] I.R.L.R. 321; (1987) 137 N.L.J. 520, CA .....	202
Stubbs v Holywell Railway (1867) L.R. 2 Ex. 311 .....	699, 916
Sturcke v Edwards (SW) (1971) 23 P. & C.R. 185, Ch D .....	890
Sturlyn v Albany (1587) Cro.Eliz. 67 .....	85
Sudatlantic Navegacion SA v Devamar Shipping Corp (The Ionio) [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 271, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	197
Sudbrook Trading Estate Ltd v Eggleton [1983] 1 A.C. 444; [1982] 3 W.L.R. 315, HL .....	49, 59, 905
Sugar v London, Midland & Scottish Railway [1941] 1 All E.R. 172 .....	218
Suiker Unie UA v Commission of the European Communities (40/73) [1975] E.C.R. 1663; [1976] 1 C.M.L.R. 295, ECJ .....	476
Suisse Atlantique Societe d'Armement SA v NV Rotterdamsche Kolen Centrale [1967] 1 A.C. 361; [1966] 2 W.L.R. 944, HL .....	84, 225, 226, 230, 231, 232, 233, 234, 236, 237, 238, 239, 241, 798, 806, 807, 817
Suleman v Shahsavari [1988] 1 W.L.R. 1181; [1989] 2 All E.R. 460 Ch D .....	962
Suleyman Stalskiy, The [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 609, Sup Ct (BC) .....	633
Sullivan v Constable (1932) 43 Ll. L. Rep. 10, CA; affirming (1932) 42 Ll. L. Rep. 99, KBD .....	304
Sullivan v Henderson [1973] 1 W.L.R. 333; [1973] 1 All E.R. 48, Ch D .....	1026, 1029
Sumitomo Bank Ltd v Banque Bruxelles Lambert SA [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 487; [1996] E.G.C.S. 150, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	347, 396, 609, 667, 986
Summers v Solomon (1857) 7 E. & B. 879 .....	712
Summit Invest Inc v British Steel Corp (The Sounion) [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 230; [1987] 1 F.T.L.R. 169, CA .....	197
Sumnall v Statt (1985) 49 P. & C.R. 367; (1984) 271 E.G. 628, CA .....	906
Sumpter v Hedges [1898] 1 Q.B. 673, CA .....	783, 784, 786, 816, 819, 820, 822, 824, 825
Sun Alliance Pensions Life & Investments Services Ltd v RJL; Sun Alliance Pensions Life & Investments Services Ltd v Anthony Webster [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 410, QBD .....	196, 205
Sun Happiness, The See Etablissement Biret et Cie SA v Yukeiteru Kaiun KK & Nissui Shipping Corp
Suncorp Insurance and Finance v Milano Assicurazioni SpA [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 225, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	714, 722, 723
Sundance Cruises Corp v American Bureau of Shipping (The Sundancer) [1994] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 183, US Ct .....	347
Sundancer, The See Sundance Cruises Corp v American Bureau of Shipping
Sundell (TA) & Sons Pty Ltd v Emm Yannoulatos (Overseas) Pty Ltd [1956] 56 S.R. (N.S.W.) 323 .....	94, 406
Sunderland Association Football Club v Uruguay Montevideo FC [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 828, QBD .....	302
Sunderland Marine Insurance Co v Kearney (1851) 16 Q.B. 925 .....	669
Sunley (B) & Co Ltd v Cunard White Star Ltd [1940] 1 K.B. 740; (1940) 66 Ll. L. Rep. 134, CA .....	969
Sunshine Exploration Ltd v Dolly Varden Mines Ltd (1969) 8 D.L.R. (3d) 441 .....	946
Super Servant Two, The See J Lauritzen A/S v Wijsmuller BV
Superhulls Cover Case, The (No.2) [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 431 .....	108, 109, 110, 117, 758, 815, 977, 983, 986
Superior Overseas Development Corp v British Gas Corp [1982] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 262, CA .....	884
Suriya & Douglas v Midland Bank plc [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm.) 612; [1999] Lloyd's Rep. Bank. 103, CA .....	202, 203, 205, 390, 400
Surrendra Overseas Ltd v Sri Lanka (The Apj Akash) [1977] 1 W.L.R. 565; [1977] 2 All E.R. 481, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	80
Surrey CC and Mole DC v Bredero Homes Ltd [1993] 1 W.L.R. 1361; [1993] 3 All E.R. 705, CA .....	60, 929, 930, 932, 1046, 1048
Surrey Shipping Co v Compagnie Continentale (France) SA (The Shackleford) [1978] 1 W.L.R. 1080; [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 154, CA .....	107, 403
Sutcliffe v Thackrah [1974] A.C. 727; [1974] 2 W.L.R. 295, HL .....	346
Sutton & Co v Grey [1894] 1 Q.B. 285, CA .....	182
Sutton Housing Trust v Lawrence (1987) 19 H.L.R. 520; (1988) 55 P. & C.R. 320, CA .....	1034, 1041
Sutton LBC v Morgan Grenfell & Co Ltd [1997] 6 Bank. L.R. 156; (1997) 29 H.L.R. 608, CA .....	564
Sutton v Sutton [1984] Ch. 184; [1984] 2 W.L.R. 146, Ch D .....	441, 447
Suwalki, The See Polish Steamship Co v AJ Williams Fuels (Overseas Sales)
Swain v Law Society [1983] 1 A.C. 598; [1982] 3 W.L.R. 261, HL ...	431, 504, 589, 647, 649, 650, 668
Swain v West (Butchers) Ltd [1936] 3 All E.R. 261 .....	94
Swaissland v Dearsley (1861) Beav. 430 .....	309
Swan v Bank of Scotland (1836) 10 Bli. N.S. 627 .....	571
Swan, The See Bridges & Salmon Ltd v Owner of The Swan

- Swaziland Central Transport Administration and Alfko Aussenhandels GmbH v Leila Maritime Co Ltd and Mediterranean Shipping Co SA (The Leila) [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 172, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 121
- Sweet & Maxwell v Universal News Services [1964] 2 Q.B. 699; [1964] 3 W.L.R. 356, CA ..... 50, 809, 1034
- Swift v MacBean [1942] 1 K.B. 375, KBD ..... 894
- Swindle v Harrison [1997] 4 All E.R. 705; [1997] P.N.L.R. 641; [1997] N.P.C. 50; The Times, April 17, 1997, CA ..... 338, 975
- Swingcastle Ltd v Alastair Gibson (A Firm) [1991] 2 A.C. 223; [1991] 2 W.L.R. 1091, HL ..... 362
- Swiss Bank Corp v Brink's-MAT Ltd [1986] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 79, QBD (Comm Ct) ... 234, 641
- Swiss Bank Corp v Lloyds Bank Ltd [1982] A.C. 584; [1981] 2 W.L.R. 893, HL; affirming [1979] Ch. 548, Ch D .... 620, 622, 623, 679, 1021
- Swordheath Properties Ltd v Tabet [1979] 1 W.L.R. 285; [1979] 1 All E.R. 240, CA ..... 928
- Sybron Corp v Rochem Ltd [1984] Ch. 112; [1983] 3 W.L.R. 713; [1983] 2 All E.R. 707, CA ..... 94, 390, 400
- Sykes v Beadon (1879) L.R. 11 Ch. D. 170, Ch D ..... 482, 502, 514
- Sykes v DPP [1962] A.C. 528; [1961] 3 W.L.R. 371; [1961] 3 All E.R. 33, HL ..... 92
- Sykes v Midland Bank Executor & Trustee Co Ltd [1971] 1 Q.B. 113; [1970] 3 W.L.R. 273, CA ..... 935, 975
- Sylan Crest Sand & Gravel Co v US 150 F.2d. 642 (1945) ..... 21
- Symbian Ltd v Christensen [2000] U.K.C.L.R. 879; [2001] I.R.L.R. 77, CA ..... 454, 464, 1044, 1046
- Symes v Hughes (1870) L.R. 9 Eq. 475 ..... 494
- Symington & Co v Union Insurance Society of Canton Ltd (1928) 34 Comm.Cas. 233 .... 324
- Symon's Case (1870) L.R. 5 Ch.App. 298 .... 546
- Synge v Synge [1894] 1 Q.B. 466, CA ..... 165, 860, 865
- Syrett v Egerton [1957] 1 W.L.R. 1130; [1957] 3 All E.R. 331, DC ..... 452
- Syros Shipping Co SA v Elaghill Trading Co (The Proodos C) [1981] 3 All E.R. 189; [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 390, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 90, 94, 113, 114, 405, 837
- System Controls plc v Munro Corporate plc; sub nom. Systems Controls v Munro Corporate [1990] B.C.C. 386; [1990] B.C.L.C. 659 ..... 856
- Systems Reliability Holdings v Smith [1990] I.R.L.R. 377 ..... 456, 458, 459, 462
- Sze Hai Tong Bank v Rambler Cycle Co [1959] A.C. 576; [1959] 3 W.L.R. 214, PC (Sing) ..... 231, 232, 234
- T & N Ltd v Royal & Sun Alliance plc [2002] EWHC 2420; [2002] C.L.C. 1342, Ch D ..... 447
- T (A Minor) v Surrey CC; Harrison v Surrey CC [1994] 4 All E.R. 577; [1994] 2 F.C.R. 1269, QBD ..... 345, 976
- T (Adult: Refusal of Treatment), Re; sub nom. T (Consent to Medical Treatment) (Adult Patient), Re [1993] Fam. 95; [1992] 3 W.L.R. 782, CA ..... 219, 412, 721
- T Choithram International SA v Pagarani; sub nom. Pagarani, Re [2001] 1 W.L.R. 1; [2001] 2 All E.R. 492, PC (BVI) ..... 77, 684, 686, 1037
- T Lucas & Co Ltd v Mitchell [1974] Ch. 129; [1972] 3 W.L.R. 934, CA ..... 459, 507, 508
- Tadd v Eastwood [1985] I.C.R. 132; [1985] I.R.L.R. 119, CA ..... 204
- Taddy & Co v Sterious & Co [1904] 1 Ch. 354, Ch D ..... 631
- Tagro v Cafane [1991] 1 W.L.R. 378; [1991] 2 All E.R. 235, CA ..... 928
- Tai Hing Cotton Mill Ltd v Kamsing Knitting Factory [1979] A.C. 91; [1978] 2 W.L.R. 62, PC (HK) ..... 927, 962
- Tai Hing Cotton Mill Ltd v Liu Chong Hing Bank Ltd (No.1) [1986] A.C. 80; [1985] 3 W.L.R. 317, PC (HK) ..... 208, 403, 984
- Tailby v Official Receiver; sub nom. Official Receiver as Trustee of the Estate of Izon (a Bankrupt) v Tailby (1888) L.R. 13 App. Cas. 523, HL ..... 452, 683, 1023
- Tallis v Tallis (1853) 1 E. & B. 391 ..... 453
- Tameside MBC v Barlow Securities Group Services Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 1; [2001] B.L.R. 113, CA ..... 107
- Tamplin v James (1880) L.R. 15 Ch. D. 215; [1874-80] All E.R. Rep. 562, CA ..... 317
- Tamplin Steamship Co Ltd v Anglo Mexican Petroleum Products Co Ltd [1916] 2 A.C. 397, HL ..... 874, 901, 920, 921, 922
- Tamvaco v Lucas (1859) 1 E. & E. 581 ..... 783
- Tamvaco v Simpson (1865-66) L.R. 1 C.P. 363, Ex Ct ..... 407
- Tancred v Delagoa Bay & East Africa Railway (1889) L.R. 23 Q.B.D. 239, QBD ..... 676
- Tang Man Sit (Deceased) v Capacious Investments Ltd [1996] A.C. 514; The Times, December 26, 1995, PC (HK) .... 343, 928, 943
- Tankexpress A/S v Compagnie Financiere Belge des Petroles SA [1949] A.C. 76; [1948] 2 All E.R. 939, HL ..... 104
- Tankreederei Ahrenkeil GmbH v Frahuil SA (The Multitank Holsatia) [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 486, QBD (Comm Ct) .... 8, 9, 10, 35, 47, 109
- Tanner v Clerical Medical & General Life Insurance Society [1992] 1 F.L.R. 262 ..... 444
- Tanner v Moore (1846) 9 Q.B. 1 ..... 77
- Tanner v Tanner (No.1) [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1346; [1975] 3 All E.R. 776, CA .... 81, 136, 137, 143, 146, 165, 166, 444

- Tapp v Lee (1803) 3 B. & p.367 ..... 394
- Tappenden v Artus [1964] 2 Q.B. 185; [1963] 3 W.L.R. 685, CA ..... 607
- Tappenden v Randall (1801) 2 B. & P. 467 ..... 523
- Target Holdings Ltd v Priestley [1999] Lloyd's Rep. Bank. 175; (2000) 79 P. & C.R. 305, Ch D ..... 178
- Target Holdings Ltd v Redferns [1996] A.C. 421; [1995] 3 W.L.R. 352, HL ..... 838, 975
- Targett v Torfaen BC [1992] 3 All E.R. 27; (1992) 24 H.L.R. 164, CA ..... 985
- Tasker v Scott (1815) 6 Taunt. 234 ..... 513
- Taram v Haslar (1889) L.R. 23 Q.B.D. 345, QBD ..... 528
- Taram v Reeve [1893] 1 Q.B. 44, QBD ..... 531
- Tate v Williamson (1866) L.R. 2 Ch.App. 55 ..... 414, 417
- Tate & Lyle Industries Ltd v CIA Usina Bulhoes and Cargill Inc [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 355, The Times, October 25, 1996, CA ..... 1041
- Tate & Lyle Industries v Greater London Council [1983] 2 A.C. 509; [1983] 2 W.L.R. 649, HL ..... 611, 616
- Tate & Lyle Ltd v Hain Steamship Co Ltd [1936] 2 All E.R. 597; (1936) 55 Ll. L. Rep. 159, HL ..... 229, 806, 821, 1063
- Tatlock v Harris (1789) 3 T.R. 174 ..... 673
- Tatra, The See Arctic Shipping Co Ltd v Mobililia AB
- Tattersal v Drysdale [1935] 2 K.B. 174 ..... 667
- Tay Salmon Fisheries Co v Speedie 1929 S.C. 593 ..... 895
- Taylor Ex p. (1856) 8 D.M. & G. 254 ..... 549
- Taylor v Allon [1966] 1 Q.B. 304; [1965] 2 W.L.R. 598, DC ..... 18
- Taylor v Bhail [1996] C.L.C. 377; 50 Con. L.R. 70, CA ..... 432, 504
- Taylor v Bowers (1876) 1 Q.B.D. 291 ..... 494, 495
- Taylor v Brewer (1813) 1 M. & S. 290 ..... 167, 740
- Taylor v Caldwell (1863) 3 B. & S. 826 ..... 759, 866, 867, 869, 870, 880, 893, 895, 906, 910, 914, 922, 924
- Taylor v Chester (1869) L.R. 4 Q.B. 309 ..... 496, 497, 510
- Taylor v Dickens [1998] 1 F.L.R. 806; [1998] 3 F.C.R. 455, Ch D ..... 47, 85, 139, 166, 170
- Taylor v Hare (1805) 1 B. & P.N.R. 260 ..... 1053
- Taylor v Jones (1871) 1 C.P.D. 87 ..... 16
- Taylor v Laird (1856) 25 L.J.Ex. 329 ..... 784
- Taylor v National Union of Seamen [1967] 1 W.L.R. 532; [1967] 1 All E.R. 767, Ch D ..... 1029
- Taylor v Neville, unreported ..... 1024
- Taylor v Oakes Roncoroni & Co (1922) 127 L.T. 267 ..... 767, 836
- Taylor v Waters (1816) 7 Taunt. 374 ..... 138
- Taylor v Webb [1937] 2 K.B. 283, CA ..... 763
- Taylor & Sons v Bank of Athens; Pennoid Bros v Bank of Athens (1922) 10 Ll. L. Rep. 88; (1922) 27 Com. Cas. 142, KBD ..... 935, 951, 993
- Taylor Fashions Ltd v Liverpool Victoria Trustees Co Ltd; Old & Campbell Ltd v Liverpool Victoria Friendly Society [1982] Q.B. 133; [1981] 2 W.L.R. 576, Ch D ..... 113, 135, 141, 147, 148, 335
- TC Industrial Plant Pty Ltd v Robert's Queensland Pty Ltd [1964] A.L.R. 1083; (1964) 37 A.L.J.R. 239, HC (Aus) ..... 943
- TCB Ltd v Gray [1986] Ch. 621; [1986] 2 W.L.R. 517; [1986] 1 All E.R. 587, Ch D ..... 116, 120, 159
- TD Keegan Ltd v Palmer [1961] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 449 ..... 407
- Teacher v Calder (1889) 1 F.(H.L.) 39 ..... 927
- Techno Land Improvements v British Leyland (UK) Ltd (1979) 252 E.G. 805 ..... 960, 980
- Teheran-Europe Co Ltd v ST Belton (Tractors) Ltd (No.1) [1968] 2 Q.B. 545; [1968] 3 W.L.R. 205, CA ..... 727, 737
- Telephone Rentals v Burgess Salmon & Co The Independent, April 22, 1987, CA ..... 856
- Telfair Shipping Corp v Athos Shipping Co SA (The Athos) [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 127, CA ..... 107, 109, 814
- Temperance Loan Fund v Rose [1932] 2 K.B. 522, CA ..... 571
- Tenant v Elliott (1791) 1 B. & P.3 ..... 502
- Tenax Steamship Co v Owners of the Motor Vessel Brimnes (The Brimnes [1975] Q.B. 929; [1974] 3 W.L.R. 613, CA ..... 23, 42, 778, 812
- Tennant Radiant Heat v Warrington Development Corp [1988] 1 E.G.L.R. 41; [1988] 11 E.G. 71, CA ..... 985, 987
- Tennants (Lancashire) Ltd v CS Wilson & Co Ltd [1917] A.C. 495, HL ..... 877, 878, 881
- Tennent v Tennents (1870-75) L.R. 2 Sc. 6, HL ..... 76, 398
- Terence Ltd v Nelson (1937) 157 L.T. 254 ..... 353
- Terkol Rederierne v Petroleo Brasileiro SA and Frota Nacional de Petroleiros (The Badagry) [1985] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 395, CA ..... 870, 881, 892
- Termagent, The (1914) 1 Com.Cas. 239 ..... 641
- Terrapin International Ltd v Inland Revenue Commissioners [1976] 1 W.L.R. 665; [1976] 2 All E.R. 461, Ch D ..... 159
- Territorial and Auxiliary Forces Association v Nichols See London County Territorial and Auxiliary Forces Association v Nichols
- Terry and White's Contract, Re (1886) L.R. 32 Ch. D. 14, CA ..... 807
- Tesco Stores v Gibson (William) & Son (1970) 214 E.G. 835 ..... 65
- Tetley & Co v British Trade Corp (1922) 10 Ll. L. Rep. 678, KBD ..... 719
- Tetley v Shand (1871) 25 L.T. 658 ..... 745, 754
- Texaco v Mulberry Filling Station [1972] 1 W.L.R. 814; [1972] 1 All E.R. 513, Ch D ..... 463, 473, 478, 1041

- Texaco Ltd v Eurogulf Shipping Co Ltd* [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 541, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 767, 857, 953
- Texaco Melbourne, The See Att-Gen of Ghana v Texaco Overseas Tankships Ltd*
- Texas Instruments Ltd v Nason (Europe) Ltd* [1991] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 146, QBD ..... 627, 629
- TFL Prosperity, The See Tor Line A/B v Alltrans Group of Canada Ltd*
- Thacker v Hardy (1878-79) L.R. 4 Q.B.D.* 685, CA ..... 516, 518, 744
- Thackwell v Barclays Bank plc* [1986] 1 All E.R. 676, QBD ..... 482, 503
- Thai Trading Co v Taylor* [1998] Q.B. 781; [1998] 2 W.L.R. 893, CA ..... 431, 478
- Thai-Europe Tapioca Service Ltd v Seine Navigation Co Inc (The Maritime Winner)* [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 506, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 9, 10, 47
- Thake v Maurice* [1986] Q.B. 644; [1986] 2 W.L.R. 337, CA ..... 191, 206, 400, 841
- Thames Sack & Bag Co Ltd v Knowles (1981)* 88 L.J.K.B. 585 ..... 1022
- Thames Tideway Properties Ltd v Serfaty & Partners* [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 110, CC (Central London) ..... 84, 241, 259
- Thames Water Utilities Ltd v Reynolds* [1996] I.R.L.R. 186, EAT ..... 824
- Tharros Shipping Co Ltd v Bias Shipping Ltd (The Griparion) (No.2)* [1994] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 533, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 978
- Tharros Shipping Co Ltd v Bias Shipping Ltd (The Griparion) (No.3)* [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 246; [1997] C.L.C. 546, CA; affirming [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 541, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 697
- Thavorn v Bank of Credit and Commerce International SA* [1985] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 259, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 578, 605
- Themehelp Ltd v West* [1996] Q.B. 84; [1995] 3 W.L.R. 751, CA ..... 1022, 1041
- Thiis v Byers (1875-76) L.R. 1 Q.B.D.* 244, QBD ..... 898
- Thirkell v Cambi* [1919] 2 K.B. 590, CA ..... 184
- Thomas, Re; sub nom. Jaquess v Thomas* [1894] 1 Q.B. 747, CA ..... 431
- Thomas v Cook* (1828) 8 B. & C. 728 ..... 182, 185
- Thomas v Thomas* (1655) Sty. 461 ..... 588
- Thomas v Thomas* (1842) 2 Q.B. 851 ... 67, 68, 72, 81, 83, 87, 442
- Thomas v University of Bradford* [1987] A.C. 795; [1987] 2 W.L.R. 677, HL ..... 450, 1030
- Thomas v University of Bradford* [1992] 1 All E.R. 964 ..... 450, 1030
- Thomas Bates & Son Ltd v Wyndham's (Lingerie) Ltd* [1981] 1 W.L.R. 505; [1981] 1 All E.R. 1077, CA ..... 56, 59, 322, 325
- Thomas Cheshire & Co v Vaughan Bros & Co* [1920] 3 K.B. 240; (1920) 3 Ll. L. Rep. 213, CA ..... 524
- Thomas Marshall (Exports) Ltd v Guinle* [1979] Ch. 227; [1978] 3 W.L.R. 116, Ch D ..... 844, 846
- Thomas P Gonzalez Corp v FR Waring (International) Pty Ltd* [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 160, CA ..... 1000, 1004
- Thomas Wilson Sons & Co v Owners of Cargo of the Xantho (The Xantho)* (1887) L.R. 12 App.Cas. 503, HL ..... 842
- Thomas Witter Ltd v TBP Industries Ltd* [1996] 2 All E.R. 573, Ch D ..... 221, 242, 322, 330, 343, 357, 359, 362, 366, 378, 389, 393
- Thompson v ASDA-MFI Group plc* [1988] Ch. 241; [1988] 2 W.L.R. 1093, Ch D ..... 64, 66, 844, 852
- Thompson v Coroon* (1993) 66 P. & C.R. 445 ..... 807, 849
- Thompson v Hakewill* (1865) 19 C.B.N.S. 713 ..... 575, 576
- Thompson v Hickman* [1907] 1 Ch. 550, Ch D ..... 325
- Thompson v London Midland and Scottish Railway Co* [1930] 1 K.B. 41, CA ..... 14, 217, 218, 219, 243
- Thompson v Percival* (1834) 5 B. & Ad. 925 .... 156
- Thompson v T Lohan (Plant Hire) and Hurdiss (JW)* [1987] 1 W.L.R. 649; [1987] 2 All E.R. 631, CA ..... 224, 256
- Thomson v Davenport* (1829) 9 B. & C. 78 ..... 737
- Thomson v Eastwood* (1877) 2 App.Cas. 215 ..... 412, 419
- Thorensen Car Ferries v Weymouth Portland BC* [1977] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 614, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 17, 70, 93
- Thorn v Deas 4 Johns.* 84 (1809) ..... 156
- Thornbury v Bevil* (1842) 1 Y. & C.C.C. 554 ..... 1034
- Thorner v Field* (1612) 1 Bulst. 120 ..... 77
- Thornett v Yuills Ltd; sub nom. Arbitration between Thornett and Fehr & Yuills Ltd, Re* [1921] 1 K.B. 219; (1920) 5 Ll. L. Rep. 47, KBD ..... 783, 958
- Thornton v Abbey National plc The Times*, March 4, 1993 ..... 844
- Thornton v Jenkyns* (1840) 1 Man. & G. 166 ..... 77
- Thornton v Kempster* (1814) 5 Taunt. 786 ..... 309
- Thornton v Shoe Lane Parking* [1971] 2 Q.B. 163; [1971] 2 W.L.R. 585, CA ..... 14, 219, 243
- Thornton Springer v NEM Insurance Co Ltd* [2000] 2 All E.R. 489; [2000] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 486, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 90, 113, 121, 124
- Thoroughgood's Case* (1584) 2 Co.Rep. 9a .... 326
- Thorp v Thorp* (1702) 12 Mod. 445 ..... 71
- Thorp v Fasey* [1949] Ch. 649; [1949] 2 All E.R. 393, Ch D ..... 816, 831, 1053
- Thorpe v Jackson* (1837) 2 Y. & C. Ex. 553 ..... 570
- Thorpe (Bernard) & Partners v Flannery* (1977) 244 E.G. 129, CA ..... 742

- Three Rivers DC v Bank of England (No.1) [1996] Q.B. 292; [1995] 3 W.L.R. 650 ..... 696
- Three Rivers DC v Bank of England (No.2) [1996] 2 All E.R. 363; The Times, January 8, 1996, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 267, 675, 682
- Thurstan v Notts PBBS [1902] 1 Ch. 1 ..... 545
- Thwaite v Thwaite [1982] Fam. 1; [1981] 3 W.L.R. 96; [1981] 2 All E.R. 789, CA ..... 314
- Tiechurst v British Telecommunications plc See British Telecommunications plc v Tiechurst
- Tiedemann and Ledermann Freres Arbitration, Re [1899] 2 Q.B. 66, QBD ..... 723
- Tilson Ltd v Land and Real Estate Investments Ltd [1987] 1 W.L.R. 46; [1987] 1 All E.R. 615, CA ..... 848, 856
- Tilney Engineering v Admos Knitting Machinery [1987] 2 C.L. 21 ..... 125
- Timber Shipping Co SA v London and Overseas Freighters [1972] A.C. 1; [1971] 2 W.L.R. 1360, HL ..... 844
- Timeload Ltd v British Telecommunications plc [1995] E.M.L.R. 459, CA ..... 207, 208, 245, 253, 254, 781
- Times Newspaper Ltd v George Weidenfeld & Nicolson Ltd [2002] F.S.R. 29, QBD ..... 203, 204
- Timmins v Moreland Street Property Co Ltd [1958] Ch. 110; [1957] 3 W.L.R. 678, CA ..... 185
- Timothy v Simpson (1834) 6 C. & P. 499 ..... 12
- Timpson's Executors v Yerbury [1936] 1 K.B. 645, CA ..... 679, 680
- Tingley v Muller [1917] 2 Ch. 144, CA ..... 452
- Tinline v White Cross Insurance Association Ltd [1921] 3 K.B. 327, KBD ..... 437
- Tinn v Hoffman (1873) 29 L.T. 271 ..... 19, 31, 37, 43
- Tinsley v Milligan [1994] 1 A.C. 340; [1993] 3 W.L.R. 126, HL ..... 483, 496, 499, 501
- Tippens v Coates (1853) 18 Beav. 401 ..... 568
- Tipping v Eckersley (1855) 2 K & J 254 ..... 992, 1040
- Tito v Waddell (No.2); Tito v Att-Gen [1977] Ch. 106; [1977] 3 W.L.R. 972, Ch D ..... 49, 59, 621, 702, 703, 763, 927, 946, 1026, 1034
- Tiverton Estates Ltd v Wearwell Ltd [1975] Ch. 146; [1974] 2 W.L.R. 176, CA ..... 53
- Toepfer v Cremer [1975] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 118; (1975) 119 S.J. 506, CA ..... 809
- Toepfer v Kruse; Toepfer v Sosimage SpA; Fribesco SA v Mantovani; Kruse v Toepfer [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 397, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 1004
- Toepfer v Sosimage SpA See Toepfer v Kruse
- Toepfer v Warinco AG [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 569, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 105
- Toepfer (Hamburg) v Lenersan-Poortman NV (Rotterdam) [1980] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 143, CA ..... 798, 799, 800, 826
- Tolhurst v Associated Portland Cement Manufacturers (1900) Ltd [1903] A.C. 414, HL; affirming [1902] 2 K.B. 660, CA ..... 695
- Tomlinson v Gill (1756) Amd. 330 ..... 646
- Toms v Wilson (1862) 122 E.R. 524 ..... 753
- Tool Metal Manufacture Co Ltd v Tungsten Electric Co Ltd See Tungsten Electric Co Ltd v Tool Metal Manufacturing Co Ltd (No.3)
- Toomey v Eagle Star Insurance Co Ltd (No.2) [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 88; [1995] 4 Re. L.R. 314, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 221, 223, 238, 242, 385
- Tootal Clothing Ltd v Guinea Properties Management Ltd (1992) 64 P. & C.R. 452; [1992] 41 E.G. 117, CA ..... 179
- Tooth v Hallett (1869) L.R. 4 Ch.App. 242 ..... 689
- Topfell Ltd v Galley Properties Ltd [1979] 1 W.L.R. 446; [1979] 2 All E.R. 388, Ch D ..... 227
- Toprak Mahsulleri Ofisi v Finagrain Compagnie Commerciale Agricole et Financiere SA [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 98, CA ..... 959, 962
- Tor Line A/B v Alltrans Group of Canada Ltd (The TFL Prosperity) [1984] 1 W.L.R. 48; [1984] 1 All E.R. 103, HL ..... 235, 236, 760, 844
- Torenia, The See Aktieselskabet de Danske Sukkerfabrikker v Bajamar Compania Naviera SA
- Torkington v Magee [1903] 1 K.B. 644, CA; reversing [1902] 2 K.B. 427, KBD ..... 678, 697
- Torrance v Bolton (1872-73) L.R. 8 Ch. App. 118, CA in Chancery ..... 311, 312, 319
- Torrenia [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 210 ..... 908
- Torvald Klaveness A/S v Arni Maritime Corp (The Gregos) [1994] 1 W.L.R. 1465; [1994] 4 All E.R. 998, HL ..... 777, 795, 797, 799, 800, 808, 853, 857
- Total Gas Marketing Ltd v Arco British Ltd [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 209; [1998] C.L.C. 1275; The Times, June 8, 1998, HL ..... 62, 63, 891
- Total Graphics Ltd v AGF Insurance Ltd [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 599, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 668
- Total Liban SA v Vitol Energy SA [2001] Q.B. 643; [2000] 3 W.L.R. 1142, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 697, 954
- Total Oil Great Britain Ltd v Thompson Garages (Biggin Hill) Ltd [1972] 1 Q.B. 318; [1971] 3 W.L.R. 979, CA ..... 808, 849, 1025
- Total Transport Corp v Arcadia Petroleum Ltd (The Eurys) [1998] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 351; [1998] C.L.C. 90, CA ..... 971, 976
- Tote Investors v Smoker [1968] 1 Q.B. 509; [1967] 3 W.L.R. 1239, CA ..... 515
- Touche v Metropolitan Railway Warehousing Co (1870-71) L.R. 6 Ch. App. 671, Lord Chancellor ..... 725

- Touche Ross & Co v Baker* [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 207; (1992) 89(28) L.S.G. 31, HL ..... 568, 585
- Toulmin v Anderson* (1808) 1 Taunt. 227 ..... 510
- Toulmin v Millar* (1887) L.R. 12 App. Cas. 746, HL ..... 741
- Tower Hamlets LBC v British Gas Corporation* The Times, December 14, 1983, CA; affirming (1982) 79 L.S.G. 1025 ..... 884
- Townend v Toker* (1866) L.R. 1 Ch. App. 446 ..... 76
- Townsend's Case* (1871) L.R. 13 Eq. 148 ..... 28
- Tracomin SA v Anton C Neilson A/S* [1984] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 195; (1984) 134 N.L.J. 705, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 10, 35, 36
- Tradax Export SA v Andre et Cie SA* [1976] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 416; The Times, November 26, 1975, CA ..... 883
- Tradax Export SA v Dorada Compania Naviera SA of Panama (The Lutetian)* [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 140; [1982] Com. L.R. 130, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 109, 399, 754, 778, 808
- Tradax Export SA v European Grain & Shipping Ltd* [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 100, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 790, 797, 800
- Tradax Export SA v Italgrani di Francesco Ambrosio* [1986] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 112, CA ..... 799
- Tradax Internacional SA v Goldschmidt SA* [1977] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 604, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 797, 800, 1015
- Trade and Transport Inc v Iino Kaiun Kaisha Ltd (The Angelia)* [1973] 1 W.L.R. 210, QBD ..... 238, 771, 795, 835, 842, 857, 898
- Trade Indemnity Co Ltd v Workington Harbour and Dock Board (No.1)* [1937] A.C. 1; (1936) 54 Ll. L. Rep. 103, HL ..... 396, 398
- Tradigrain SA v King Diamond Marine Ltd (The Spiros C)* [2000] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 542; [2000] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 319, CA ..... 207, 211, 591, 605
- Trado, The See Marseille Fret SA v D Oltmann Schiffahrts GmbH & Co KG (The Trado)*
- Trafalgar House Construction (Regions) Ltd v General Surety & Guarantee Co Ltd* [1996] A.C. 199; [1995] 3 W.L.R. 204, HL ..... 396
- Traill v Baring* (1864) 4 D.J. & S. 318 ..... 336, 393, 394
- Tramp Shipping Corp v Greenwich Marine Inc (The New Horizon)* [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1042; [1975] 2 All E.R. 989, CA ..... 843
- Trans Trust SPRL v Danubian Trading Co Ltd* [1952] 2 Q.B. 297; [1952] 1 All E.R. 970, CA ..... 762, 764, 833, 953, 972, 997
- Transatlantic Finance Corporation v USA* 363 F.2d. 312 (1966) ..... 880, 904
- Transcatilana de Commercio SA v INCOBRASA Industrial e Commercial Brasileira SA (The Vera)* [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 215, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 110, 815, 816, 817
- Transcontainer Express v Custodian Security* [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 128; [1988] 1 F.T.L.R. 54, CA ..... 613
- Transcontinental Underwriting Agency v Grand Union Insurance Co* [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 409; [1987] 1 F.T.L.R. 35, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 733
- Transocean Maritime Agencies SA Monegasque v Pettit* 1997 S.C.L.R. 534, Sh Ct ..... 927
- Transpetrol Ltd v Transol Olieprodukten BV* [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 309, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 198
- Transworld Oil v North Bay Shipping Corp (The Rio Claro)* [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 173, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 966, 971, 972
- Trasimex Holding SA v Addax BV (The Red Sea)* [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 28, CA ..... 198
- Treacy v Corcorran* (1874) I.R. 8 C.L. 40 ..... 824
- Treacy v DPP* [1971] A.C. 537; [1971] 2 W.L.R. 112; [1971] 1 All E.R. 110, HL ..... 24
- Tredegar Iron and Coal Co v Hawthorne & Co* (1902) 18 T.L.R. 716 ..... 962
- Tregenna, The See Farr v Hain SS Co (The Tregenna)*
- Trego v Hunt* [1896] A.C. 7, HL ..... 454, 1034
- Treml v Ernest W Gibson & Partners* [1955-95] P.N.L.R. 228; (1984) 272 E.G. 68, QBD ..... 933
- Trendtex Trading Corp v Central Bank of Nigeria* [1977] Q.B. 529; [1977] 2 W.L.R. 356, CA ..... 152
- Trendtex Trading Corp v Credit Suisse* [1982] A.C. 679; [1981] 3 W.L.R. 766, HL ..... 431, 480, 695, 696, 697, 698
- Trepca Mines Ltd (No.2), Re; sub nom. Radomir Nicola Pachitch (Pasic)'s Application, Re* [1963] Ch. 199; [1962] 3 W.L.R. 955, CA ..... 511
- Triad Shipping Co v Stellar Chartering and Brokerage Inc (The Island Archon)* [1995] 1 All E.R. 595; [1994] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 227, CA ..... 203, 210, 211
- Triangle Steel & Supply Co v Korean United Lines Inc* (1985) 63 B.C.L.R. 66, Sup Ct (BC) ..... 614
- Tribe v Taylor* (1876) 1 C.P.D. 505 ..... 741
- Tribe v Tribe* [1996] Ch. 107; [1995] 3 W.L.R. 913, CA ..... 494, 499, 500, 501
- Trident Beauty, The See Pan Ocean Shipping Co v Creditcorp*
- Trident Insurance Co Ltd v McNiece Bros Pty Ltd* (1988) 165 C.L.R. 107 ..... 589, 625, 647, 666
- Triffitt Nurseries v Salads Etcetera Ltd* [2000] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 737; [2000] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 74, CA ..... 706
- Triggs v Staines Urban DC; sub nom. Staines Urban DC's Agreement, Re* [1969] 1 Ch. 10; [1968] 2 W.L.R. 1433, Ch D ..... 505, 566
- Trimble v Hill* (1879-80) L.R. 5 App. Cas. 342, PC (Aus) ..... 526

Trollope & Colls Ltd v North West Metropolitan Regional Hospital Board [1973] 1 W.L.R. 601; [1973] 2 All E.R. 260, HL ....	203, 205
Troop v Gibson [1986] 1 E.G.L.R. 1; (1986) 277 E.G. 1134, CA .....	120, 123
Tropwind, The [1982] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 232 ....	49, 50, 51, 56, 780
Trueman v Fenton (1772) 2 Cowp. 544 .....	79
Trusted v Clifford Chance [2000] W.T.L.R. 1219, Ch D .....	644
Trustees of Chippenham Golf Club v North Wiltshire DC. See Farrage v North Wiltshire DC.
Trustees of Henry Smith's Charity v Willson [1983] Q.B. 316; [1983] 2 W.L.R. 77, CA .....	815
Trytel, Re [1952] 2 T.L.R. 32 .....	681
TS Hayprins, The See Chevron International Oil Co Ltd v A/S Sea Team
Tsakiroglou & Co Ltd v Nobile Thorl GmbH [1962] A.C. 93; [1961] 2 W.L.R. 633, HL ...	867, 868, 879, 880, 882, 897, 899, 901, 909
TSB Bank v Camfield [1995] 1 W.L.R. 430; [1995] 1 All E.R. 951, CA .....	358, 359, 370, 377, 380, 384
TSC Europe (UK) Ltd v Massey [1999] I.R.L.R. 22, Ch D .....	454, 455, 458, 466
Tuck v Baker [1990] 2 E.G.L.R. 195; [1990] 32 E.G. 46, CA .....	41
Tucker v Bennett (1888) L.R. 38 Ch. D. 1, CA .....	323, 325
Tuck's Settlement Trusts, Re [1978] Ch. 49; [1978] 2 W.L.R. 411, CA; affirming [1976] Ch. 99, Ch D .....	450, 479
Tudor Grange Holdings Ltd v Citibank NA [1992] Ch. 53; [1991] 3 W.L.R. 750, Ch D .....	262, 263, 332
Tudor Jones v Crowley Colosso Ltd [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 619, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	986
Tudor Marine Ltd v Tradax Export SA (The Virgo) [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 135, CA .....	733
Tudor v Hamid [1988] 1 E.G.L.R. 251; (1987) 137 N.L.J. 79, CA .....	708
Tufton Associates Ltd v Dilmun Shipping [1992] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 71, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	812
Tufton v Sporni [1952] 2 T.L.R. 516; [1952] W.N. 439, CA .....	412, 414
Tulk v Moxhay (1848) 2 Ph. 774; (1848) 18 L.J. Ch. 83 .....	621, 624
Tullis v Jacson [1892] 3 Ch. 441, Ch D .....	242
Tungsten Electric Co Ltd v Tool Metal Manufacturing Co Ltd (No.3 [1955] 1 W.L.R. 761; [1955] 2 All E.R. 657, HL .....	111, 112, 132
Tunstall v Condon [1980] I.C.R. 786, EAT .....	750
Turcan, Re (1889) L.R. 40 Ch. D. 5, CA .....	693
Turridu, The See Cil v Owners of the Turridu
Turnbull & Co v Duval [1902] A.C. 429 .....	408
Turner, Re; sub nom. Skelton, Re (1879-80) L.R. 13 Ch. D. 130, Ch D .....	772
Turner v Commonwealth & British Minerals Ltd [2000] I.R.L.R. 114, CA .....	453, 461
Turner v Forwood [1951] 1 All E.R. 746; [1951] W.N. 189, CA .....	75, 201
Turner v Goldsmith [1891] 1 Q.B. 544, CA ...	744, 871, 876
Turner v Green [1895] 2 Ch. 205, Ch D .....	393
Turner v Mason (1845) 14 M. & W. 112 .....	810
Turner v Owen (1862) 3 F. & F. 176 .....	96
Turner v Royal Bank of Scotland [1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 664 .....	213
Turner v Sawdon & Co [1901] 2 K.B. 653, CA .....	833
Turner v Stevenage BC [1998] Ch. 28; [1997] 3 W.L.R. 309, CA .....	204
Turner v Vaughan (1767) 2 Wils.K.B. 339 ....	443
Turriff Construction Ltd v Regalia Knitting Mills Ltd 9 B.L.R. 20; (1971) 222 E.G. 169, QBD .....	168
Tustian v Johnston (Note) [1993] 3 All E.R. 534; [1993] 47 E.G. 139, CA .....	1035
Tweddell v Henderson [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1496; [1975] 2 All E.R. 1096, Ch D .....	52, 172, 183, 184
Tweddle v Atkinson (1861) 1 B. & S. 393 .....	81, 587, 588, 652
Twins Transport Ltd v Patrick & Brocklehurst (t/a HV&C Patrick Estates Developers) 25 B.L.R. 65, QBD .....	638, 643
Twinsectra Ltd v Yardley [2002] UKHL 12; [2002] 2 A.C. 164, HL .....	619
Twycross v Grant (1877) 2 C.P.D. 496 ....	360, 363
Twyford v Manchester Corp [1946] Ch. 236; [1946] 1 All E.R. 621, Ch D .....	408
Tye v House (1998) 76 P. & C.R. 188; [1997] 2 E.G.L.R. 171, Ch D .....	54, 58, 1021
Tyers v Rosedale and Ferryhill Iron Co Ltd (1874-75) L.R. 10 Ex. 195, Ex Chamber .....	104, 189
Tyler v Horne (1785) .....	373
Tyrer & Co v Hessler & Co (1902) 7 Com. Cas. 166 .....	813
Tyrie v Fletcher (1777) 2 Cowp. 666 ...	916, 918, 1049
Tzelepi, The See Islamic Republic of Iran Shipping Lines v Zannis Compania Naviera SA
UBAF Ltd v European American Banking Corp (The Pacific Colocotronis) [1984] Q.B. 713; [1984] 2 W.L.R. 508, CA .....	352
UCB Corporate Services Ltd (formerly UCB Bank plc) v Clyde & Co [2000] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 257; [2000] Lloyd's Rep. P.N. 653, CA .....	183, 841, 985, 986
UCB Corporate Services Ltd v Williams [2002] EWCA Civ 555; [2002] 3 F.C.R. 448, CA .....	338, 341

- UCB Leasing v Holtom (t/a David Holtom & Co) [1987] R.T.R. 362; (1987) 137 N.L.J. 614, CA ..... 788, 853, 1013
- Uddin v Ahmed [2001] EWCA Civ 204; [2001] 3 F.C.R. 300, CA ..... 441, 582, 587
- UGS Finance v National Mortgage Bank of Greece and National Bank of Greece SA [1964] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 446; 107 S.J. 552, CA ..... 226
- Uhenbels, The See Sea Calm Shipping Co SA v Chantiers Navals de l'Esterel SA
- UK Safety Group Ltd v Heane [1998] 2 B.C.L.C. 208, Ch D ..... 19
- Ulysses Compania Naviera SA v Huntingdon Petroleum Services (The Ermoupolis) [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 160, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 10
- Unchained Growth III plc v Granby Village (Manchester) Management Co Ltd [2000] 1 W.L.R. 739; [2000] L. & T.R. 186, CA ..... 265
- Underwood v Underwood [1894] P. 204, CA ..... 125
- Unger v Preston Corporation [1942] 1 All E.R. 200 ..... 874
- Ungurian v Lesnoff [1990] Ch. 206; [1989] 3 W.L.R. 840, Ch D ..... 136
- Union Amsterdam, The See Blue Anchor Line Ltd v Alfred C Toepfer International GmbH
- Union Eagle Ltd v Golden Achievement Ltd [1997] A.C. 514; [1997] 2 W.L.R. 341, PC (HK) ..... 117, 779, 781, 802, 828, 829, 1007, 1009
- Union Royale Belge des Societes de Football Association (ASBL) v Bosman (C415/93) [1996] All E.R. (EC) 97; [1995] E.C.R. I-4921, ECJ ..... 466, 477
- Union Transport Finance v British Car Auctions [1978] 2 All E.R. 385; (1977) 246 E.G. 131, CA ..... 497
- Unique Mariner, The (No.2) [1979] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 37, QBD (Adm Ct) ..... 38, 833, 938, 943
- Unique Mariner, The [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 438, QBD (Adm Ct) ..... 308, 390, 712
- Unisys International Services Ltd (formerly Sperry Rand) v Eastern Counties Newspapers Ltd [1991] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 538, CA ..... 10
- Unit Construction Co Ltd v Liverpool Corporation (1972) 221 E.G. 459 ..... 163
- United Bank of Kuwait plc v Sahib [1997] Ch. 107; [1996] 3 W.L.R. 372, CA ..... 178
- United Bank of Kuwait v Hammoud; City Trust Ltd v Levy [1988] 1 W.L.R. 1051; [1988] 3 All E.R. 418, CA ..... 712, 714
- United Carriers Ltd v Heritage Food Group (UK) Ltd [1996] 1 W.L.R. 371; [1995] 4 All E.R. 95, QBD ..... 788
- United City Merchants (Investments) Ltd v Royal Bank of Canada (The American Accord) [1983] 1 A.C. 168; [1982] 2 W.L.R. 1039, HL ..... 152, 506, 511
- United Dominions Corp (Jamaica) v Shoucair (Michael Mitri) [1969] 1 A.C. 340; [1968] 3 W.L.R. 893; [1968] 2 All E.R. 904, PC (Jam) ..... 190
- United Dominions Trust (Commercial) Ltd v Parkway Motors Ltd [1955] 1 W.L.R. 719; [1955] 2 All E.R. 557, QBD ..... 693
- United Dominions Trust (Commercial) v Ennis [1968] 1 Q.B. 54; [1967] 3 W.L.R. 1, CA ..... 842, 849, 1005
- United Dominions Trust v Eagle Aircraft Services [1968] 1 W.L.R. 74; [1968] 1 All E.R. 104, CA ..... 810, 829
- United Dominions Trust v Western [1976] Q.B. 513; [1976] 2 W.L.R. 64, CA ..... 329, 583
- United Fresh Meat Co v Charterhouse Cold Storage [1974] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 286, QBD ..... 229, 230, 232, 241
- United Scientific Holdings v Burnley BC; Cheapside Land Development Co v Messels Service Co [1978] A.C. 904; [1977] 2 W.L.R. 806, HL ..... 153, 232, 788, 791, 796, 810, 827, 828, 829, 831
- United Shoe Machinery Co of Canada v Brunet [1909] A.C. 330, PC (Can) ..... 383, 468
- United States v Motor Trucks Ltd [1924] A.C. 196, PC (Can) ..... 322
- Unitel Film und Fernseh Produktionsgesellschaft mbH & Co, Re [1978] 3 C.M.L.R. 306; [1978] F.S.R. 627, CEC ..... 475
- Unitel, Re See Unitel Film und Fernseh Produktionsgesellschaft mbH & Co, Re
- Unity Finance v Woodcock [1963] 1 W.L.R. 455; [1963] 2 All E.R. 270, CA ..... 571
- Universal Bulk Carriers Pte Ltd v Andre et Cie SA [2001] EWCA Civ 588; [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 510; [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 65, CA ..... 789, 798, 799, 800, 893
- Universal Cargo Carriers Corp v Citati (No.1) [1957] 1 W.L.R. 979; [1957] 3 All E.R. 234, CA; affirming [1957] 2 Q.B. 401, QBD ..... 767, 795, 826, 830, 857, 858, 861, 862, 863
- Universal Corp v Five Ways Properties [1979] 1 All E.R. 552; (1979) 38 P. & C.R. 687, CA ..... 838, 876, 1009
- Universal Petroleum Co v Handels und Transport GmbH [1987] 1 W.L.R. 1178; [1987] 2 All E.R. 737; [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 517, CA ..... 897
- Universal Steam Navigation Co Ltd v James McKelvie & Co [1923] A.C. 492; (1923) 15 Ll. L. Rep. 99, HL ..... 733, 734
- Universal Thermosensors Ltd v Hibben [1992] 1 W.L.R. 840; [1992] 3 All E.R. 257, Ch D ..... 456
- Universe Sentinel, The See Universe Tankships Inc of Monrovia v International Transport Workers Federation (The Universe Sentinel)

Universe Tankships Inc of Monrovia v International Transport Workers Federation (The Universe Sentinel) [1983] 1 A.C. 366; [1982] 2 W.L.R. 803, HL ..... 94, 168, 405, 407
University of Nottingham v Eyett (No.1) [1999] 2 All E.R. 437; [1999] I.C.R. 721, Ch D ..... 206
Upfill v Wright [1911] 1 K.B. 506, KBD ..... 443
Upton v Henderson (1912) 28 T.L.R. 398 .... 453
Upton-on-Severn Rural DC v Powell [1942] 1 All E.R. 220, CA ..... 36
Urquhart Lindsay & Co Ltd v Eastern Bank Ltd [1922] 1 K.B. 318; (1921) 9 Ll. L. Rep. 572, KBD ..... 152, 153, 997
Urquhart v Macpherson (1877-78) L.R. 3 App. Cas. 831, PC (Aus) ..... 371, 383
Uxbridge Permanent Benefit Building Society v Pickard [1939] 2 K.B. 248, CA ..... 715
V Berg & Son v Vanden Avenue-Izegem PVBA [1977] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 499, CA .... 108, 837, 838
Vadasz v Pioneer Concrete (SA) Pty Ltd (1995) 184 C.L.R. 182 ..... 384
Vagres Compania Maritima SA v Nissho-Iwai American Corp (The Karin Vatis) [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 330, CA ..... 763, 783
Vainqueur Jose, The See CVG Siderurgica del Orinoco SA v London Steamship Owners Mutual Insurance Association Ltd
Valentini v Canali (1890) L.R. 24 Q.B.D. 166, QBD ..... 549
Valpy v Manley (1845) 1 C.B. 594 ..... 407
Van Den Hurk v R Martens & Co Ltd [1920] 1 K.B. 850; (1920) 2 Ll. L. Rep. 281, KBD (Comm Ct) ..... 960
Van der Linde v Van der Linde [1947] Ch. 306; [1947] L.J.R. 592; 176 L.T. 297, Ch D ..... 322
Van Lynn Developments v Pelias Construction Co (formerly Jason Construction Co) [1969] 1 Q.B. 607; [1968] 3 W.L.R. 1141, CA ..... 681
Van Oppen v Bedford Charity Trustees [1990] 1 W.L.R. 235; [1989] 3 All E.R. 389, CA ..... 157, 608, 610
Van Praagh v Everidge [1903] 1 Ch. 434, CA; reversing [1902] 2 Ch. 266, Ch D ... 303, 307
Van Toll v South Eastern Railway (1862) 12 C.B.N.S. 75 ..... 244
Vanbergen v St Edmunds Properties Ltd [1933] 2 K.B. 223, CA ..... 94, 101
Vancouver Malt & Sake Brewing Co Ltd v Vancouver Breweries Ltd [1934] A.C. 181, PC (Can) ..... 454
Vanda Compania Limitada of Costa Rica v Societe Maritime Nationale of Paris (The Ile Aux Moines) [1974] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 263, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 940, 959
Vandenbergh v Spooner (1865-66) L.R. 1 Ex. 316, Ex Ct ..... 183
Vandepitte v Preferred Accident Insurance Corp of New York; sub nom. Vandepitte v Preferred Accident Insurance Co of New York [1933] A.C. 70; (1932) 44 Ll. L. Rep. 41, PC (Can) ..... 648
Vandervell v Inland Revenue Commissioners [1967] 2 A.C. 291; [1967] 2 W.L.R. 87 .... 679
Vandyke v Fender; sub nom. Vandyke v Fender and Reddington Foundries [1970] 2 Q.B. 292; [1970] 2 W.L.R. 929, CA ..... 706
Vandyke v Hewitt (1800) 1 East 96 ..... 519, 522
Vansittart v Vansittart (1858) D. & J. 249 ..... 441
Vantage Navigation Corp v Suhail and Saud Bahwan Building Materials (The Aleve) [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 138, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 94, 176, 406, 407
Vargas Pena Apezteguia y Cia SAIC v Peter Cremer GmbH & Co [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 394, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 951, 952
Varney v Hickman (1847) 5 C.B. 271 ... 522, 526
Varverakis v Compagnia de Navegacion Artico SA (The Merak) [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 250, CA ..... 64, 65
Vasso, The See Bruns v Colocotronis
Vaswani v Italian Motors (Sales and Services) Ltd [1996] 1 W.L.R. 270; [1996] R.T.R. 115, PC (Hk) ..... 809
Vaughan v Vaughan [1953] 1 Q.B. 762; [1953] 1 W.L.R. 236; [1953] 1 All E.R. 209, CA ..... 112, 170
Vaughan-Neil v Inland Revenue Commissioners [1979] 1 W.L.R. 1283; [1979] 3 All E.R. 481, Ch D ..... 457
Vegetable Oils (Malaysia) Sdn Bhd (The Post Chaser) [1982] 1 All E.R. 19; [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 695, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 107, 108, 110, 111, 116, 799, 800, 814
Venezuela Central Railway Co v Kisch (1867) L.R. 2 H.L. 99, HL ..... 339, 384, 394
Venning, Re; sub nom. Halifax Building Society Appeal, Re 63 T.L.R. 394; [1947] W.N. 196, CA ..... 131
Ventouris v Mountain (The Italia Express) (No.3) [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 281, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 988, 998, 1013
Veracruz Transportation v VC Shipping Co Inc and Den Norske Bank A/S (The Veracruz) [1992] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 353, The Times , November 14, 1991, CA ..... 858, 1047
Veracruz, The See Veracruz Transportation v VC Shipping Co Inc and Den Norske Bank A/S
Verderame v Commercial Union Assurance Co plc [1992] B.C.L.C. 793; [2000] Lloyd's Rep. P.N. 557, CA ..... 611
Verrall v Farnes [1966] 1 W.L.R. 1254; [1966] 2 All E.R. 808, Ch D ..... 156
Verrall v Great Yarmouth BC [1981] Q.B. 202; [1980] 3 W.L.R. 258, CA ..... 1021, 1029
Vic Mill Ltd, Re [1913] 1 Ch. 465, CA ..... 955

Victor Chandler International Ltd v Customs and Excise Commissioners [2000] 1 W.L.R. 1296; [2000] 2 All E.R. 315, CA ....	186
Victoria Fur Traders Ltd v Roadline (UK) Ltd [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 570, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	221
Victoria Laundry (Windsor) v Newman Industries [1949] 2 K.B. 528; [1949] 1 All E.R. 997, CA ....	956, 965, 966, 969, 970, 971, 972
Victoria Seats Agency v Paget (1902) 19 T.L.R. 16 .....	869, 902
Victorian Daylesford Syndicate Ltd v Dott [1905] 2 Ch. 624, Ch D .....	433, 482
Viduyodaya University of Ceylon v Silva [1965] 1 W.L.R. 77; [1964] 3 All E.R. 865, PC (Cey) .....	1030
Vigers v Cook [1919] 2 K.B. 475, CA .....	771
Vigers v Pike (1842) 8 Cl. & F. 562 .....	383
Villella v MFI Furniture Centres Ltd [1999] I.R.L.R. 468, QBD .....	219, 845
Vimar International Ltd v Theresa Navigation Co Ltd [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 1 .....	975
Vincent v Premo Enterprises (Voucher Sales) [1969] 2 Q.B. 609; [1969] 2 W.L.R. 1256, CA .....	53, 159, 160
Vincentilli v Rowlett (1911) 16 Com.Cas. 310 .....	229
Vinmar International Ltd v Theresa Navigation SA [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 243; [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 1, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	950
Virgo Steamship Co SA v Skaarup Shipping Corp (The Kapetan Georgis) [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 352; [1988] F.T.L.R. 180, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	614
Vistafjord, The See Norwegian American Cruises A/S v Paul Mundy (The Vistafjord) .....
Vitol SA v Esso Australia Ltd (The Wise) [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 451; The Financial Times , July 18, 1989, CA .....	813, 814, 815
Vitol SA v Norelf Ltd (The Santa Clara) [1996] A.C. 800; [1996] 3 W.L.R. 105, HL .....	32, 33, 35, 848, 858, 859
Vlierboom v Chapman (1844) 13 M. & W. 230 .....	782
Voest Alpine Intertrading GmbH v Chevron International Oil Co Ltd [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 547, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	56, 111
Volk v Ets Vervaecke SPRL (C5/69) [1969] E.C.R. 295; [1969] C.M.L.R. 273, ECJ ....	476
Volvox Hollandia, The See Saipem SpA v Dredging VO2 BV .....
Von Colson v Land Nordrhein-Westfalen (C14/83); Harz v Deutsche Tradax GmbH (C79/83) [1984] E.C.R. 1891; [1986] 2 C.M.L.R. 430, ECJ .....	278
Von Hatzfeldt Wildenburg v Alexander [1912] 1 Ch. 284, Ch D .....	19, 55, 60
Von Lindenau v Desborough (1828) 3 C. & P. 353 .....	516
Vorley v Cooke (1857) 1 Giff. 230 .....	329
Vosper Thornycroft v Ministry of Defence [1976] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 58, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	57, 201
Voyce v Voyce (1991) 62 P. & C.R. 290, CA ....	136, 143
Voyle v Hughes (1854) 2 Sm. & G. 18 .....	684
W (Enduring Power of Attorney), Re [2001] Ch. 609; [2001] 2 W.L.R. 957, CA .....	752
W v Edgell [1990] Ch. 359 .....	455
W & J Investments Ltd v Bunting [1984] 1 N.S.W.R. 331 .....	1003
W & J Lane v Spratt [1970] 2 Q.B. 480; [1969] 3 W.L.R. 950, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	232
W Higgins Ltd v Northampton Corp [1927] 1 Ch. 128, Ch D .....	322
WJ Alan & Co Ltd v El Nasr Export & Import Co [1972] 2 Q.B. 189; [1972] 2 W.L.R. 800, CA .....	101, 110, 112, 117, 132, 152
WJ Tatem Ltd v Gamboa [1939] 1 K.B. 132; (1938) 61 Ll. L. Rep. 149, KBD ....	899, 903, 921, 923
WL Thompson Ltd v R Robinson (Gunmakers) Ltd [1955] Ch. 177; [1955] 2 W.L.R. 185, Ch D .....	948, 955
W Lamb Ltd v J Jarvis & Sons plc [1999] 60 Con.L.R. 1 .....	987
WN Hillas & Co Ltd v Arcos Ltd; WN Hillas & Co Ltd v Arcos Ltd (Quantum) (1932) 43 Ll. L. Rep. 359; (1932) 147 L.T. 503, HL .....	50, 58, 59
WPM Retail Ltd v Lang [1978] I.C.R. 787; [1978] I.R.L.R. 243, EAT .....	844
Wade v Simeon (1846) 2 C.B. 548 .....	89, 480
Wadham Stringer Finance Ltd v Meaney [1981] 1 W.L.R. 39; [1980] 3 All E.R. 789, QBD .....	1001
Wadi v Cornwall and Isles of Scilly Family Practitioner Committee [1985] I.C.R. 492; (1985) 82 L.S.G. 2009, EAT .....	4
Wadsworth v Lydell [1981] 1 W.L.R. 598; [1981] 2 All E.R. 401, CA .....	996, 997, 998
Wagon Mound, The See Overseas Tankship (UK) Ltd v Morts Dock & Engineering Co .....
Wahda Bank v Arab Bank plc (Preliminary Issue) (1993) 90(4) L.S.G. 38; (1993) 137 S.J.L.B. 24, QBD .....	888
Wainwright v Bland (1836) 1 M. & W. 32; (1835) 1 Moo. & Rob. 481 .....	516
Wait, Re [1927] 1 Ch. 606, CA .....	374, 919, 1022, 1023, 1024
Waithman v Wakefield (1807) 1 Camp. 120 .....	722
Wake v Harrop (1861) 6 H. & N. 768 .....	196
Wake v Renault (UK) Ltd (1996) 15 Tr. L.R. 514; The Times , August 1, 1996, Ch D ....	356, 1025, 1043, 1046
Wakeham v Wood (1982) 43 P. & C.R. 40; [1982] J.P.L. 242, CA .....	1041

- Wale, Re; sub nom. Wale v Harris [1956] 1 W.L.R. 1346; [1956] 3 All E.R. 280, Ch D ..... 685
- Wales v Wadham* [1977] 1 W.L.R. 199; [1977] 1 All E.R. 125, Fam Div ..... 304, 393, 394, 398
- Walford v Miles* [1992] 2 A.C. 128; [1992] 2 W.L.R. 174, HL ..... 54, 60, 61, 62, 205
- Walker, Re* [1905] 1 Ch. 160, CA ..... 558
- Walker v Boyle* [1982] 1 W.L.R. 495; [1982] 1 All E.R. 634, Ch D ..... 242, 336, 350, 386, 389, 772, 773
- Walker v Bradford Old Bank* (1884) 12 Q.B.D. 511 ..... 678, 680, 682
- Walker v Eastern Counties Railway* (1848) 6 Hare 594 ..... 1021
- Walker v Galt* 171 F.2d 613 (1948) ..... 382
- Walker v Geo H Medicott & Son* [1999] 1 W.L.R. 727; [1999] 1 All E.R. 685, CA ..... 617
- Walker v Perkins* (1764) 3 Burr. 1568 ..... 443
- Walker v Standard Chartered Bank* [1992] B.C.L.C. 535, CA ..... 850
- Walker Property Investments (Brighton) v Walker* (1947) 177 L.T. 204, CA ..... 199
- Walkinshaw v Diniz* [2002] EWCA Civ 180; [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 165, CA; affirming [2001] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 632, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 245, 963
- Wall v Rederi ABet Luggude* [1915] 3 K.B. 66, KBD ..... 1003
- Wallace v Kelsall* (1840) 7 M. & W. 264 ..... 577
- Wallace v Manchester City Council* (1998) 30 H.L.R. 1111; [1998] L. & T.R. 279, CA ..... 989
- Wallace Bogan & Co v Cove* [1997] I.R.L.R. 453, CA ..... 455
- Wallace's Case* See Metropolitan Fire Insurance Co, Re
- Wallersteiner v Moir* (No.2) [1975] Q.B. 373; [1975] Q.B. 508 (Note), CA ..... 431
- Wallingford v Mutual Society* (1879–80) L.R. 5 App. Cas. 685, HL ..... 343, 1001
- Wallis Ex p. Jenks, Re* [1902] 1 K.B. 719, KBD ..... 701
- Wallis v Smith* (1882) L.R. 21 Ch. D. 243, CA ..... 996, 1000
- Wallis Chlorine Syndicate Ltd v American Alkali Co Ltd* (1901) 17 T.L.R. 565 ..... 997
- Wallis Son & Wells v Pratt & Haynes* [1911] A.C. 394, HL ..... 221
- Wall's Case* See Imperial Land Co of Mar-silles, Re
- Walrond v Walrond* (1858) Johns 18 ..... 441, 504
- Walsh v Lonsdale* (1882) L.R. 21 Ch. D. 9, CA ..... 177, 499
- Walsh v Whitcomb* (1797) 2 Esp. 565 ..... 751
- Walter v Everard* [1891] 2 Q.B. 369, CA ..... 541, 545
- Walter v James* (1871) L.R. 6 Ex. 124 ..... 726, 756
- Walter & Sullivan v J Murphy & Sons* [1955] 2 Q.B. 584; [1955] 2 W.L.R. 919, CA ..... 677
- Walters v Morgan* (1861) 3 D.F. & J. 718 ..... 312, 390, 1027
- Walton v Mascall* (1844) 13 M. & W. 452 ..... 753
- Walton (Grain and Shipping) Ltd v British Italian Trading Co Ltd* [1959] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 223, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 435, 889, 890
- Walton Harvey Ltd v Walker & Homfrays Ltd* [1931] 1 Ch. 274, CA ..... 902
- Waltons Stores (Interstate) Ltd v Maher* (1988) 164 C.L.R. 387 ..... 106, 118, 137, 139
- Warburton v Heyworth* (1880–81) L.R. 6 Q.B.D. 1, CA ..... 784
- Ward v Audland* (1845) 8 Beav. 201 ..... 684
- Ward v Byham* [1956] 1 W.L.R. 496; [1956] 2 All E.R. 318, CA ..... 92, 93
- Ward v Cannock Chase DC* [1986] Ch. 546; [1986] 2 W.L.R. 660, Ch D ..... 946
- Ward v Hobbs* (1878–79) L.R. 4 App. Cas. 13, HL ..... 390, 391
- Ward (RV) v Bignall* [1967] 1 Q.B. 534; [1967] 2 W.L.R. 1050, CA ..... 550, 826, 830, 851
- Wardens and Commonalty of the Mystery of Mercers of the City of London v New Hampshire Insurance Co Ltd* [1992] 1 W.L.R. 792; [1992] 3 All E.R. 57, CA ..... 202
- Warehousing and Forwarding Co of East Africa Ltd v Jafferalli & Sons Ltd* [1964] A.C. 1; [1963] 3 W.L.R. 489, PC (EA) ..... 726
- Waren Import Gesellschaft Krohn & Co v Alfred C Toepfer (The Vladimir Ilich)* [1975] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 322, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 834
- Warinco v Mauthner (Fritz)* [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 151, CA ..... 892
- Warinco v Samor SpA* [1979] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 450, CA ..... 773, 807
- Waring v Favenck* (1807) 2 Camp. 85 ..... 731
- Waring & Gillow v Thompson* (1912) 29 T.L.R. 154 ..... 1034
- Warlow v Harrison* (1859) 1 E. & E. 309 ..... 12, 155
- Warman v Southern Counties Car Finance Corp Ltd* [1949] 2 K.B. 576; [1949] 1 All E.R. 711, KBD ..... 1055, 1056, 1057
- Warrington v Miller* [1973] Q.B. 877; [1973] 2 W.L.R. 654, CA ..... 1029
- Warner v Basildon Development Corp* (1991) 7 Const. L.J. 146, CA ..... 613
- Warner Bros Pictures Inc v Nelson* [1937] 1 K.B. 209, KBD ..... 1040, 1043, 1044, 1046
- Warner Bros Records Inc v Rollgreen Ltd* [1976] Q.B. 430; [1975] 2 W.L.R. 816, CA ..... 681, 682
- Warren, Re* (1884) 53 L.J. Ch. 1016 ..... 126, 131
- Warren v Mendy* [1989] 1 W.L.R. 853; [1989] 3 All E.R. 103, CA ..... 1037, 1043
- Washington Trader, The* See American Trading and Production Corp v Shell International Marine Ltd
- Waterman v Fryer* [1922] 1 K.B. 499, KBD ..... 544
- Waters v Commissioner of Police to the Metropolis* [2000] 1 W.L.R. 1607 ..... 170
- Waters v Monarch Assurance Co* (1856) 5 E. & B. 870 ..... 647, 667
- Wates Ltd v Greater London Council* [1983] 25 B.L.R. 1, CA ..... 884, 885, 898

- Watford BC v Watford Rural DC 86 L.G.R.
524; The Times, December 18, 1987 ..... 205,
867, 884
- Watford Electronics Ltd v Sanderson CFL
Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 317; [2001] 1 All
E.R. (Comm) 696, CA ..... 61, 222, 259, 261, 944
- Wathan v Sandys (1811) 2 Camp. 640 ..... 92
- Wathes (Western) Ltd v Austins (Menswear)
Ltd [1976] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 14; 9 B.L.R.
113; 119 S.J. 527, CA ..... 225
- Watkin v Watson-Smith The Times, July 3, 1986 ..... 309, 420
- Watkins v Carrig 21 A 2d. 591 (1941) ..... 96
- Watkins v Rymill (1882-83) L.R. 10 Q.B.D.
178, QBD ..... 217, 243
- Watkins v Watkins [1896] P. 222, CA ..... 698
- Watson v Ambergate etc. Railway (1851) 15
Jur. 448 ..... 956
- Watson v British Boxing Board of Control Ltd
[2001] Q.B. 1134; [2001] 2 W.L.R. 1256,
CA ..... 613
- Watson v Burton [1957] 1 W.L.R. 19; [1956] 3
All E.R. 929, Ch D ..... 772
- Watson v Davies [1931] 1 Ch. 455 ..... 726
- Watson v King (1815) 4 Camp. 272 ..... 751
- Watson v Lucas [1980] 1 W.L.R. 1493; [1980]
3 All E.R. 647, CA ..... 444
- Watson v Marston (1853) 4 D.M. & G. 230 ..... 315
- Watson v Mid Wales Railway (1867) L.R. 2
C.P. 593 ..... 690
- Watson v Prager [1991] 1 W.L.R. 726; [1991] 3
All E.R. 487, Ch D ..... 439, 454, 469, 470, 471
- Watson v Swann (1862) 11 C.B. (N.S.) 756 ..... 723
- Watt v Westhoven [1933] V.L.R. 458 ..... 374
- Watteau v Fenwick [1893] 1 Q.B. 346,
QBD ..... 646, 717, 718
- Watts v Aldington; Tolstoy v Aldington [1999]
L. & T.R. 578; The Times, December 16,
1993, CA ..... 573
- Watts v Cresswell (1714) 2 Eq.Ca.Abr. 515 ..... 556
- Watts v Morrow [1991] 1 W.L.R. 1421; [1991]
4 All E.R. 937, CA ..... 933, 945, 946, 947, 988, 989, 990, 992
- Watts v Seymour [1967] 2 Q.B. 647; [1967] 2
W.L.R. 1072, DC ..... 550
- Watts v Spence [1976] Ch. 165; [1975] 2
W.L.R. 1039, Ch D ..... 344, 360, 1026, 1029
- Watts Watts & Co Ltd v Mitsui & Co Ltd
[1917] A.C. 227, HL ..... 891, 948
- Waugh v HB Clifford & Sons Ltd [1982] Ch.
374; [1982] 2 W.L.R. 679, CA ..... 711, 712
- Waugh v Morris (1873) L.R. 8 Q.B. 202 ..... 485
- Wauton v Coppard [1899] 1 Ch. 92, Ch D ..... 333, 334
- Way v Latilla [1937] 3 All E.R. 759, HL ..... 51, 1061
- Way's Trust, Re (1864) 2 D.J. & S. 365 ..... 684, 686
- Waying v Jones [1995] 2 F.L.R. 1029; [1996] 2
F.C.R. 41, CA ..... 136, 141
- WB Anderson & Sons Ltd v Rhodes (Liverpool) Ltd [1967] 2 All E.R. 850, Assizes (Liverpool) ..... 348, 349
- WC Leng & Co Ltd v Andrews [1909] 1 Ch.
763, CA ..... 457, 544
- WEA (A Debtor), Re [1901] 2 K.B. 642,
CA ..... 571
- Wear Breeze, The See Margarine Union
GmbH v Cambay Prince Steamship Co
- Weatherby v Banham (1832) 5 C. & P. 228 .... 18, 23
- Webb v Chief Constable of Merseyside; sub nom. Porter v Chief Constable of Merseyside; Chief Constable of Merseyside v Porter [2000] Q.B. 427; [2000] 2 W.L.R. 546,
CA ..... 483, 501
- Webb v Hewitt (1857) 3 K. & J. 438 ..... 573
- Webb, Re [1941] Ch. 225 ..... 647, 648
- Webster v Bosanquet [1912] A.C. 394, PC
(Cey) ..... 1002
- Webster v Cecil (1861) 30 Beav. 62 ..... 316, 1028
- Webster v Higgin [1948] 2 All E.R. 127; 92 S.J.
454, CA ..... 221
- Weddell v JA Pearce & Major (A Firm) [1988]
Ch. 26; [1987] 3 W.L.R. 592, Ch D ..... 675, 697
- Weddle Beck & Co v Hackett [1929] 1 K.B.
321, KBD ..... 518
- Wedgwood v Adams (1843) 6 Beav. 600 ..... 1026
- Weeks v Propert (1872-73) L.R. 8 C.P. 427,
CCP ..... 565, 739, 975
- Weeks v Tybald (1605) Noy 11 ..... 162
- Wegg Prosser v Evans [1895] 1 Q.B. 108,
CA ..... 569
- Weigall v Runciman (1916) 85 L.J.K.B.
1187 ..... 710
- Wekett v Raby (1724) 2 Bro.P.C. 386 ..... 130
- Welby v Drake (1825) 1 C. & p.557 ..... 128
- Weld-Blundell v Stephens [1920] A.C. 956, HL; affirming [1919] 1 K.B. 520, CA ..... 436, 970, 976
- Weldon v GRE Linked Life Assurance Ltd
[2000] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 914, QBD ..... 202, 203, 348, 609, 701
- Wells v Barnsley MBC Times November 12, 1999 ..... 431
- Wells v Smith [1914] 3 K.B. 722, KBD ..... 339
- Wells (Merstham) v Buckland Sand and Silica
Co [1965] 2 Q.B. 170; [1964] 2 W.L.R. 453,
QBD ..... 582, 630, 634
- Welsh Development Agency v Export Finance
Co [1992] B.C.C. 270; [1992] B.C.L.C.
148, CA ..... 59, 723, 728
- Welsh Health Technical Services Organisation
v Haden Young Ltd 37 B.L.R. 130,
QBD ..... 583, 608, 984
- Wenckheim v Arndt (N.Z.) 1 J.R. (1873) ..... 28
- Wenjiang (No.2), The See International Sea Tankers Inc of Liberia v Hemisphere Shipping Co Ltd of Hong Kong
- Wenjiang, The See International Sea Tankers
Inc of Liberia v Hemisphere Shipping Co of Hong Kong

Wenlock v River Dee Co (1885) 36 Ch D 374 .....	560	Westfal-Larsen & Co A/S v Ikerigi Compania Naviers SA (The Messiniaki Bergen) [1983] 1 All E.R. 382; [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 424, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	59
Werderman v Societe Generale d'Electricite (1881-82) 1 L.R. 19 Ch. D. 246, CA .....	702	Westgate v Bracknell DC (1987) 19 H.L.R. 735 .....	360
Wertheim v Chicoutimi Pulp Co [1911] A.C. 301, PC. (Can) .....	949	Westhoughton Urban DC v Wigan Coal and Iron Co Ltd [1919] 1 Ch. 159, CA .....	671
Wessex Dairies Ltd v Smith [1935] 2 K.B. 80; [1935] All E.R. Rep. 75, CA .....	206, 455	Westlake v Adams (1858) 5 C.B. (N.S.) 248 .....	74, 85
West v Blakely (1841) 2 Man. & G. 729 .....	189	Westlake v Bracknell DC (1987) 19 H.L.R. 375; [1987] 1 E.G.L.R. 161 .....	933
West v Houghton (1879) 4 C.P.D. 197 .....	648	Westminster City Council v Duke of Westminster (1992) 24 H.L.R. 572; The Times , April 15, 1992, CA; reversing [1991] 4 All E.R. 136, Ch D .....	72, 76, 77, 87
West v National Motor and Accident Insurance Union [1955] 1 W.L.R. 343; [1955] 1 All E.R. 800, CA .....	383, 396	Westminster City Council v Reema Construction (No.2) 24 Con. L.R. 26, QBD .....	305
West Country Cleaners (Falmouth) Ltd v Saly [1966] 1 W.L.R. 1485; [1966] 3 All E.R. 210, CA .....	811	Westway Homes Ltd v Moores (1992) 63 P. & C.R. 480; [1991] 2 E.G.L.R. 193, CA .....	54
West London Commercial Bank Ltd v Kitson; West London Commercial Bank Ltd v Porter; West London Commercial Bank Ltd v Woodward (1883-84) L.R. 13 Q.B.D. 360, CA .....	333, 334	Westwood v Secretary of State for Employment [1985] A.C. 20; [1984] 2 W.L.R. 418, HL .....	981
West of England Shipowners Mutual Insurance Association (Luxembourg) v Cristal Ltd (The Glacier Bay) [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 370; [1996] C.L.C. 240, CA ...	446, 447, 607	Wetherall v Jones (1832) 3 B. & Ad. 221 .....	430, 433
West Sussex Properties Ltd v Chichester DC; sub nom. Chichester DC v West Sussex Properties Ltd [2000] N.P.C. 74 .....	318	Wettenham v Wood (1793) 1 Esp. 18 .....	531
West Yorkshire Darracq Agency Ltd (In Liquidation) v Coleridge [1911] 2 K.B. 326, KBD .....	82, 130	Wettern Electric Ltd v Welsh Development Agency [1983] Q.B. 796; [1983] 2 W.L.R. 897, QBD .....	31, 35, 839
Westacre Investments Inc v Jugoinport SPDR Holding Co Ltd [2000] Q.B. 288; [1999] 3 W.L.R. 811; [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 65, CA .....	450	WF Harrison & Co v Burke [1956] 1 W.L.R. 419; [1956] 2 All E.R. 169, CA .....	681
Westdeutsche Landesbank Girozentrale v Islington LBC; Kleinwort Benson Ltd v Sandwell BC [1996] A.C. 669; [1996] 2 W.L.R. 802, HL; reversing [1994] 1 W.L.R. 938; [1994] 4 All E.R. 890, CA .....	555, 565, 567, 620, 1049, 1058, 1059	WF Trustees Ltd v Expo Safety Systems Ltd; The Times , May 24, 1993, Ch D .....	192
Western Bank of Scotland v Addie; Addie v Western Bank of Scotland (1866-69) L.R. 1 Sc. 145, HL .....	378, 383	WH Smith & Sons v Clinton (1909) 99 L.T. 840 .....	436
Western Digital Corp v British Airways plc [2001] Q.B. 733; [2000] 3 W.L.R. 1855, CA .....	639	Whaley v Norton (1687) 1 Vern. 483 .....	443
Western Excavating (FCC) Ltd v Sharp [1978] Q.B. 761; [1978] 2 W.L.R. 344, CA .....	759, 846	Wharton v Mackenzie (1844) 5 Q.B. 606 .....	540, 541
Western Fish Products Ltd v Penwith DC [1981] 2 All E.R. 204; 77 L.G.R. 185, CA .....	140, 141	Wharton v Walker (1825) 4 B. & C. 163 .....	673
Western v Russell (1814) 3V & B. 187 .....	421, 1027	Whincup v Hughes (1870-71) L.R. 6 C.P. 78, CCP .....	872, 911, 1050, 1051
Western Web Offset Printers Ltd v Independent Media Ltd [1996] C.L.C. 77; (1995) 139 S.J.L.B. 212, CA .....	955, 977	Whitaker v Dunn (1887) 3 T.L.R. 602 .....	822
Westerton, Re; sub nom. Public Trustee v Gray [1919] 2 Ch. 104, Ch D .....	680, 683, 684	White & Carter (Councils) Ltd v McGregor [1962] A.C. 413; [1962] 2 W.L.R. 17, HL .....	41, 1001, 1016, 1017, 1018, 1019
Westfälische Genossenschaft GmbH v Seabright Ltd, unreported .....	878	White Arrow Express Ltd v Lamey's Distribution Ltd (1996) 15 Tr. L.R. 69; (1995) 145 N.L.J. 1504, CA .....	928, 931, 1050, 1057
		White v Bijou Mansions Ltd [1938] Ch. 351, CA; affirming [1937] Ch. 610, Ch D .....	670, 671
		White v Blackmore [1972] 2 Q.B. 651; [1972] 3 W.L.R. 296, CA .....	164, 224, 585, 641
		White v Bluett (1853) 23 L.J.Ex. 36 .....	83, 93
		White v Bristol Rugby Ltd [2002] I.R.L.R. 204, QBD (Merc Ct) .....	163, 386
		White v British Empire etc. Assurance Co (1868) L.R. 7 Eq. 394 .....	438
		White v Chief Constable of the South Yorkshire Police [1999] 2 A.C. 455; [1998] 3 W.L.R. 1509, HL .....	170

- White v Francis [1972] 1 W.L.R. 1423; [1972] 3 All E.R. 857, CA ..... 457, 461
- White v Garden (1851) 10 C.B. 919 ..... 371
- White v John Warwick & Co [1953] 1 W.L.R. 1285; [1953] 2 All E.R. 1021, CA ..... 223, 629, 638
- White v Jones [1995] 2 A.C. 207; [1995] 2 W.L.R. 187 ..... 157, 345, 347, 360, 589, 592, 608, 609, 614, 616, 617, 618, 644, 654, 663, 937
- White v London Transport Executive [1971] 2 Q.B. 721; [1971] 3 W.L.R. 169, CA .... 668, 669
- White v Reflecting Roadstuds [1991] I.C.R. 733; [1991] I.R.L.R. 331, EAT ..... 203
- White v Tyndall (1888) L.R. 13 App. Cas. 263, HL ..... 568
- White v White [2001] UKHL 9; [2001] 1 W.L.R. 481, HL ..... 668
- Whitehall Court Ltd v Ettlinger [1920] 1 K.B. 680, KBD ..... 894
- Whitehead v Taylor (1839) 10 A. & E. 210 ..... 726
- Whitehead v Tuckett (1812) 15 East. 400 ..... 714
- Whitehill v Bradford [1952] Ch. 236; [1952] 1 All E.R. 115, CA ..... 454, 458
- Whiteley Ltd v Hilt [1918] 2 K.B. 808, CA .... 693, 1020
- Whiteside v Whiteside [1950] Ch. 65; [1949] 2 All E.R. 913, CA ..... 322
- Whitfield v Lord le Despencer (1778) 2 Comp. 754 ..... 5
- Whitmore v Farley (1881) 45 L.T. 99 ..... 445
- Whittaker v Campbell [1984] Q.B. 318; [1983] 3 W.L.R. 676, DC ..... 8, 300, 306, 309, 371
- Whittingham v Murdy (1889) 60 L.T. 956 ..... 545, 548
- Whittington v Seale-Hayne (1900) 82 L.T. 49; 16 T.L.R. 181 ..... 367, 368
- Whitwood Chemical Co v Hardman [1891] 2 Ch. 416, CA ..... 1042, 1046
- Whitworth Street Estates (Manchester) Ltd v James Miller & Partners Ltd [1970] A.C. 583; [1970] 2 W.L.R. 728, HL ..... 198
- Whurr v Devenish (1904) 20 T.L.R. 385 ..... 336
- Whywall v Campion (1738) 2 Stra. 1083 ..... 545
- Wibau Maschnefabrik Hartman SA v Mackinnon Mackenzie (The Chanda) [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 494; The Independent, April 28, 1989, QBD (Comm Ct) ..... 229, 236, 594
- Wickham and Burton Coal Co v Farmer's Lumber Co 189, 179 N.W. 417 (1923) .... 84
- Wickham Holdings v Brooke House Motors [1967] 1 W.L.R. 295; [1967] 1 All E.R. 117, CA ..... 693, 1054
- Wieler v Schilizzi (1856) 17 C.B. 619 ..... 227
- Wigan v English and Scottish Law Life Assurance Association [1909] 1 Ch. 291, Ch D ... 79, 91
- Wigglesworth v Dallinson (1779) 1 Doug. 201 ..... 198
- Wigzell v School for Indigent Blind (1882) 8 Q.B.D. 357 ..... 946
- Wilander v Tobin (No.2) [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 293; [1997] 2 C.M.L.R. 346, CA ..... 474, 477
- Wild v Civil Aviation Authority, unreported, 1987 ..... 193
- Wild v Harris (1849) 7 C.B. 999 ..... 440
- Wild v Tucker [1914] 3 K.B. 36, KBD ..... 74, 80
- Wildes v Dudlow (1874-75) L.R. 19 Eq. 198, Ct of Chancery ..... 182
- Wilding v Sanderson [1897] 2 Ch. 534, CA ..... 315
- Wiles v Maddison [1943] 1 All E.R. 315, KBD ..... 12
- Wilkes v Wood (1763) Lofft 1 ..... 987
- Wilkie v London Passenger Transport Board [1947] 1 All E.R. 258; 63 T.L.R. 115, CA ..... 14, 171
- Wilkinson v Brown [1966] 1 W.L.R. 194; [1966] 1 All E.R. 509, CA ..... 742
- Wilkinson v Byers (1834) 1 A. & E. 106 ..... 126
- Wilkinson v Clements (1872) L.R. 8 Ch.App. 96 ..... 1037
- Wilkinson v Coverdale (1793) 1 Esp. 75 ... 157, 745
- Wilkinson v Lloyd (1845) 7 Q.B. 27 ..... 1053
- William Brandt's Sons & Co v Dunlop Rubber Co [1905] A.C. 454 ..... 650, 679
- William Cory & Son Ltd v London Corp [1951] 2 K.B. 476; [1951] 2 All E.R. 85, CA ..... 882
- William Cory & Son Ltd v Wingate Investments (London Colney) Ltd 17 B.L.R. 104; (1978) 248 E.G. 687, CA ..... 945
- William Hill (Park Lane) Ltd v Hofman [1950] 1 All E.R. 1013; 66 T.L.R. (Pt. 1) 915, Ch D ..... 529
- William Hill Organisation Ltd v Tucker [1999] I.C.R. 291; [1998] I.R.L.R. 313, CA ..... 464, 833, 1044
- William Lacey (Hounslow) Ltd v Davis [1954] 1 Q.B. 428 ..... 118, 1062
- William Lacey (Hounslow) Ltd v Davis [1957] 1 W.L.R. 932; [1957] 2 All E.R. 712; 101 S.J. 629, QBD ..... 15
- William Porter & Co Ltd, Re [1937] 2 All E.R. 361, Ch D ..... 127
- William Robinson & Co Ltd v Hever [1898] 2 Ch. 451 ..... 1046
- William Sindall plc v Cambridgeshire CC [1994] 1 W.L.R. 1016; [1994] 3 All E.R. 932, CA .... 288, 295, 312, 318, 331, 351, 358, 363, 366, 391, 392, 924
- William Thomas & Sons v Harrowing Steamship Co [1915] A.C. 58, HL ..... 785
- William Whiteley Ltd v R. (1910) 101 L.T. 741 ..... 408
- Williams, Re; sub nom. Williams v Ball [1917] 1 Ch. 1, CA ..... 679
- Williams v Atlantic Assurance Co Ltd [1933] 1 K.B. 81; (1932) 43 Ll. L. Rep. 177, CA ..... 677
- Williams v Baltic Insurance Co [1924] 2 K.B. 282 ..... 647, 648, 667
- Williams v Bayley (1866) L.R. 1 H.L. 200, HL ..... 409

Williams v BOC Gases Ltd [2000] I.C.R. 1181; [2000] P.I.Q.R. Q253, CA .....	982
Williams v Carwardine (1833) 5 C. & P. 566; 4B. & Ad. 621 .....	13, 37
Williams v Commissioner of Inland Revenue [1965] N.Z.I.R. 395 .....	683
Williams v Greatex [1957] 1 W.L.R. 31 ....	827, 828
Williams v Jordan (1877) L.R. 6 Ch. D. 517, Ch D .....	183
Williams v Logue 122 So. 490 (1929) .....	382
Williams v Mercer [1940] 3 All E.R. 293 .....	886
Williams v Moor (1843) 11 M. & W. 256 .....	549
Williams v N China Insurance Co (1876) 1 C.P.D. 757 .....	725
Williams v Natural Life Health Foods Ltd [1998] 1 W.L.R. 830; [1998] 2 All E.R. 577, HL .....	347, 348, 351, 589
Williams v Protheroe (1829) 5 Bing. 309 .....	697
Williams v Reynolds (1865) 6 B. & S. 495 ....	996
Williams v Roffey Bros & Nicholls (Contractors) Ltd [1991] 1 Q.B. 1; [1990] 2 W.L.R. 1153, CA .....	67, 69, 82, 93, 95, 96, 102, 113, 123, 126, 128, 161, 357, 406, 786, 787
Williams v Stern (1879) 5 Q.B.D. 409 .....	110, 114
Williams v Watson Luxury Coaches [1991] I.C.R. 536; [1990] I.R.L.R. 164, EAT .....	875
Williams v Williams (Enforceability of Agreement) [1957] 1 W.L.R. 148; [1957] 1 All E.R. 305, CA .....	92
Williams Bros v Ed T Agius Ltd [1914] A.C. 510, HL .....	948, 949
Willis v Peckham (1820) 1 Br. & B. 515 .....	93
Willson v Love [1896] 1 Q.B. 626, CA .....	1001
Wilmott v Barber (1880) 15 Ch D. 96 .....	135, 147, 1029
Wilson v Best Travel Ltd [1993] 1 All E.R. 353, QBD .....	204, 585, 840
Wilson v Carnley [1908] 1 K.B. 729, CA .....	439
Wilson v Coupland (1821) 5 B. & Ald. 228 .....	672, 673
Wilson v Darling Island Stevedoring and Lighterage Co Ltd [1956] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 346, HC (Aus) .....	630
Wilson v First County Trust Ltd (No.2) [2001] EWCA Civ 633; [2002] Q.B. 74, CA .....	179, 606
Wilson v General Iron Screw Colliery Co Ltd (1887) 47 L.J.Q.B. 239 .....	968
Wilson v Housing Corporation [1998] I.C.R. 151; [1997] I.R.L.R. 346, QBD .....	619
Wilson v Jones (1867) L.R. 2 Ex. 139 .....	515, 516
Wilson v Kears (1800) Peake Add.Cas. 196 ....	549
Wilson v Kingsgate Mining Industries Ltd [1973] 2 N.S.W.L.R. 713 .....	1009
Wilson v Maynard Shipbuilding Consultants AB [1978] Q.B. 665; [1978] 2 W.L.R. 466, CA .....	198
Wilson v St Helens BC; sub nom. British Fuels Ltd v Baxendale; Meade v British Fuels Ltd; Baxendale v British Fuels Ltd [1999] 2 A.C. 52; [1998] 3 W.L.R. 1070, HL .....	704, 845, 1029
Wilson v Tumman (1843) 6 Man. & G. 236 ....	723
Wilson v United Counties Bank Ltd [1920] A.C. 102, HL .....	699, 992
Wilson v Wilson (1848) 1 H.L.C. 538 .....	441
Wilson v Wilson (1857) 3 Jur. (N.S.) 810 .....	1037
Wilson v Wilson (Rectification of Deed) [1969] 1 W.L.R. 1470; [1969] 3 All E.R. 945, Ch D .....	324
Wilson & Sons v Pike [1949] 1 K.B. 176; [1948] 2 All E.R. 267, CA .....	738
Wilson Bowden Properties Ltd v Milner [1997] N.P.C. 187, CA; affirming [1995] N.P.C. 182, QBD .....	124
Wilson Smithett & Cape (Sugar) v Bangladesh Sugar and Food Industries Corporation [1986] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 378, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	57, 168
Wilson Smithett & Cope Ltd v Terruzzi [1976] Q.B. 683; [1976] 2 W.L.R. 418, CA .....	517
Wilson Sons & Co v Balcarres Brook Steamship Co Ltd [1893] 1 Q.B. 422, CA .....	569
Wilton Group v Abrahams [1990] BCC 310 .....	1028
Wiluszynski v Tower Hamlets LBC [1989] I.C.R. 493; [1989] I.R.L.R. 259, CA .....	762, 766, 787, 810, 821, 843, 849, 1062
Wimpey Construction (UK) Ltd v Poole (DV) [1984] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 499; 27 B.L.R. 58, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	841
Winch v Keely (1787) 1 T.R. 619 .....	672
Winder v Whitehall (1990) 154 J.P. 29; [1990] 2 F.L.R. 505; [1990] F.C.R. 268, CA .....	170
Windhill Local Board of Health v Vint (1890) L.R. 45 Ch. D. 351, CA .....	445
Windle (A Bankrupt), Re; sub nom. Trustee Ex p. v Windle [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1628; [1975] 3 All E.R. 987, Ch D .....	165, 670
Windschuegl (Charles H) v Alexander Pickering & Co (1950) 84 Ll. L. Rep. 89, KBD .....	65
Windsor Refrigerator Co v Branch Nominees [1961] Ch. 375; [1961] 2 W.L.R. 196, CA; reversing [1961] Ch. 88, Ch D .....	160
Windsor Securities Ltd v Loreldal Ltd The Times , September 10, 1975 .....	1008
Wings v Ellis [1985] A.C. 272; [1984] 3 W.L.R. 965, HL .....	989
Winkfield, The [1902] P. 42; [1900-03] All E.R. Rep. 346, CA .....	606
Winn v Bull (1877) 7 Ch D 29 .....	52
Winnipeg Condominium Corp No.36 v Bird Construction Co Ltd 74 B.L.R. 1; 50 Con. L.R. 124, Sup Ct (Can) .....	610
Winson, The See China-Pacific SA v Food Corp of India
Winter v Irish Life Assurance plc [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 274; Lloyd's List , May 18, 1995 (I.D.), QBD .....	395, 709

- Wintle v Nye (No.2); sub nom. Wells, In the Estate of [1959] 1 W.L.R. 284; [1959] 1 All E.R. 552, HL ..... 412
- Wise, The See Vitrol SA v Ezzo Australia Ltd
- Wishart v National Association of Citizens Advice Bureaux [1990] I.C.R. 794; [1990] I.R.L.R. 393, CA ..... 64, 1029
- With v O'Flanagan [1936] Ch. 575, CA ..... 393
- Withers v Bircham (1824) 3 B. & C. 254 ..... 575, 576
- Withers v General Theatre Co Ltd [1933] 2 K.B. 536, CA ..... 958, 992
- Withers v Reynolds (1831) 2 B. & Ad. 882 ..... 774, 807
- Wolmerhausen, Re (1890) 62 L.T. 541 ..... 573
- Wolverhampton Corp v Emmons 1901] 1 Q.B. 515, CA ..... 1035
- Wong Lai Ying v Chinachem Investment Co (1979) 13 Build.L.R. 81 ..... 891, 896, 899
- Wong Mee Wan v Kwan Kin Travel Services Ltd [1996] 1 W.L.R. 38; [1995] 4 All E.R. 745, PC (HK) ..... 758
- Wood v Baxter (1883) 49 L.T. 45 ..... 738
- Wood v Boynton 64 Wis. 265; 25 N.W. 42 (1885) ..... 291
- Wood v Lucy (Lady Duff-Gordon) 118 N.E. 214 (1917) ..... 40
- Wood v Roberts (1818) 2 Stark. 417 ..... 129
- Wood v Scarth (1855) 2 K. & J. 33 ..... 316
- Wood Preservation v Prior [1969] 1 W.L.R. 1077; [1969] 1 All E.R. 364, CA ..... 66
- Woodar Investment Development Ltd v Wimpey Construction UK Ltd [1980] 1 W.L.R. 277; [1980] 1 All E.R. 571, HL ..... 592, 593, 599, 600, 602, 606, 760, 808, 860
- Woodchester Equipment (Leasing) Ltd v British Association of Canned and Preserved Foods Importers and Distributors Ltd [1995] C.C.L.R. 51, CA ..... 707
- Woodhouse AC Israel Cocoa SA v Nigerian Produce Marketing Co Ltd [1972] A.C. 741; [1972] 2 W.L.R. 1090, HL ..... 101, 107, 116, 117, 132, 304, 403, 710
- Woods v Mackenzie Hill, Ltd [1975] 1 W.L.R. 613; [1975] 2 All E.R. 170, Ch D ... 830, 831
- Woodward v Wolferstans [1997] N.P.C. 51; The Times, April 8, 1997, Ch D ..... 610
- Woodward v Woodward [1995] 3 All E.R. 980 ..... 685
- Woolcott v Excess Insurance Co Ltd and Miles, Smith Anderson & Game Ltd (No.1) [1979] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 231, CA ..... 395
- Woolcott v Sun Alliance and London Insurance Ltd [1978] 1 W.L.R. 493; [1978] 1 All E.R. 1253, QBD ..... 395
- Woolf v Collis Removal Service [1948] 1 K.B. 11; [1947] 2 All E.R. 260, CA ..... 229, 237
- Woolf v Freeman [1937] 1 All E.R. 178 ..... 531
- Woolf v Hamilton [1898] 2 Q.B. 337, CA ..... 528
- Woolfe v Horne (1877) 2 Q.B.D. 355 ..... 738, 827
- Woollam v Hearn (1802) 7 Ves. 211 ..... 322
- Woolmer v Delmer Price [1955] 1 Q.B. 291; [1955] 2 W.L.R. 329; [1955] 1 All E.R. 377; 99 S.J. 112, QBD ..... 241
- Woolwich Building Society (formerly Woolwich Equitable Building Society) v Inland Revenue Commissioners [1993] A.C. 70; [1992] 3 W.L.R. 366, HL .... 90, 92, 313, 406, 408
- Worboys v Carter [1987] 2 F.G.L.R. 1 ..... 716
- Worby v Rosser [1999] Lloyd's Rep. P.N. 972; [2000] P.N.L.R. 140, CA ..... 608
- Workers Trust & Merchant Bank Ltd v Dojap Investments Ltd [1993] A.C. 573; [1993] 2 W.L.R. 702, PC (Jam) ..... 1008, 1009, 1010
- Working Men's Mutual Society, Re (1882) L.R. 21 Ch. D. 831, Ch D ..... 93
- Workman Clark & Co Ltd v Lloyd Brazilenio [1908] 1 K.B. 968, CA ..... 1015
- World Symphony and World Renown, The See Chiswell Shipping and Liberian Jaguar Transports Inc v National Iranian Tankers Co
- World Wide Fund for Nature (formerly World Wildlife Fund) v World Wrestling Federation Entertainment Inc [2002] EWCA Civ 196; [2002] U.K.C.I.L.R. 388, CA .... 462, 464, 465, 474
- Wormell v RHM Agricultural (East) Ltd [1987] 1 W.L.R. 1091; [1987] 3 All E.R. 75, CA ..... 248, 249
- Wragg v Lovett [1948] 2 All E.R. 968; [1948] W.N. 455, CA ..... 708
- Wright v Carter [1903] 1 Ch. 27, CA ... 412, 419
- Wright v Cherrytree Finance Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 449; [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 877, CA ..... 426
- Wright v Colls (1848) 8 C.B. 149 ..... 1052
- Wright v Stavert (1860) 2 E. & E. 721 ..... 138
- Wright v Wright (1750) 1 Ves.Sen. 409 ..... 674
- Wright v Wright [1970] 1 W.L.R. 1219; [1970] 3 All E.R. 209, CA ..... 447
- Wroth v Tyler [1974] Ch. 30; [1973] 2 W.L.R. 405, Ch D .... 961, 962, 972, 973, 1026, 1046, 1048
- Wrotham Park Estate Co Ltd v Parkside Homes Ltd [1974] 1 W.L.R. 798; [1974] 2 All E.R. 321, Ch D ..... 929, 930, 935
- WT Lamb & Sons v Goring Brick Co Ltd [1932] 1 K.B. 710 ..... 744
- Wu Koon Tai v Wu Yau Loi [1997] A.C. 179; [1996] 3 W.L.R. 778, PC (HK) ..... 683, 1036
- Wyatt v Hertford (1802) 3 East 147 ..... 731
- Wyatt v Kreglinger [1933] 1 K.B. 793, CA .... 77, 149, 150, 164, 462, 463, 464, 505, 1045
- Wylson v Dunn (1887) L.R. 34 Ch. D. 569, Ch D ..... 1037
- Wyvern Developments, Re [1974] 1 W.L.R. 1097; [1974] 2 All E.R. 535, Ch D .... 81, 90, 113

X (Minors) v Bedfordshire CC [1995] 2 A.C. 633; [1995] 3 W.L.R. 152, HL .....	612
Xantho, The See Thomas Wilson Sons & Co v Owners of Cargo of the Xantho
Xenos v Wickham (1867) L.R. 2 H.L. 296, HL .....	159
Xydhias v Xydhias [1999] 2 All E.R. 386; [1999] 1 F.L.R. 683, CA .....	441
Yammouni v Conditorio [1975] V.R. 479 .....	1009
Yango Pastoral Co Pty v First Chicago Australia (1978) 139 C.L.R. 41 .....	434, 484
Yangtze Insurance Association v Lukmanjee [1918] A.C. 585 .....	666
Yani Haryanto v ED & F Man (Sugar) Ltd See ED & F Man (Sugar) Ltd v Haryanto Yani (No.1)
Yanxilas, The See Stinnes Interoil GmbH v A Halcoussis & Co
Yasin, The [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 45, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	981
Yasuda Fire & Marine Insurance Co of Europe Ltd v Orion Marine Insurance Underwriting Agency [1995] Q.B. 174; [1995] 2 W.L.R. 49, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	850, 851
Yates v Freckleton (1781) 2 Dougl. 623 .....	727
Yaxley v Gotts [2000] Ch. 162; [1999] 3 W.L.R. 1217; [2000] 1 All E.R. 711, CA .....	124, 136, 137, 143, 180
Yeoman Credit v Apps [1962] 2 Q.B. 508; [1961] 3 W.L.R. 94; [1961] 2 All E.R. 281, CA .....	207, 232, 233, 818, 947, 1055
Yeoman Credit v Latter [1961] 1 W.L.R. 828; [1961] 2 All E.R. 294, CA .....	181, 182
Yeoman Credit v Odgers Vospers Motor House (Plymouth) [1962] 1 W.L.R. 215; [1962] 1 All E.R. 789, CA .....	583
Yeoman Credit v Waragowski [1961] 1 W.L.R. 1124; [1961] 3 All E.R. 145, CA ....	851, 853, 958, 997
Yetton v Eastwood Froy Ltd [1967] 1 W.L.R. 104; [1966] 3 All E.R. 353, QBD .....	978
Yeung Kai Yung v Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corp [1981] A.C. 787; [1980] 3 W.L.R. 950, PC (HK) .....	436, 733
Yianni v Edwin Evans & Sons [1982] Q.B. 438; [1981] 3 W.L.R. 843, QBD .....	341, 346
Yin v Sam [1962] A.C. 304; [1962] 2 W.L.R. 765, PC (FMS) .....	486
Ymnos, The See Compagnie Generale Maritime v Diakan Spirit SA
Yona International Ltd v La Reunion Francaise SA D'Assurances et de Reassurances [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 84, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	33, 35
Yonge v Toynbee [1910] 1 K.B. 215, CA ....	738, 740, 749, 751
Yorkbrook Investments v Batten (1986) 18 H.L.R. 25; (1986) 52 P. & C.R. 51, CA ....	763
Yorks Railway & Wagon Co v McLure (1882) 21 Ch D. 309 .....	571
Yorkshire Water Services Ltd v Sun Alliance and London Insurance plc (No.1) [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 21; [1997] C.L.C. 213, CA .....	204, 205
Youell v Bland Welch & Co Ltd (No.1) [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 127, CA .....	55, 193, 197, 221
Young v Canadian Northern Railway Co [1931] A.C. 83, PC (Can) .....	214
Young v DS Dalglish & Son (Hawick) 1994 S.C.L.R. 696, Sh Pr .....	372
Young v Evans-Jones [2001] EWCA Civ 732; [2002] 1 P. & C.R. 14, CA .....	454
Young v Kitchin (1878) 3 Ex.D. 127 ....	690, 702
Young v Ladies Imperial Club Ltd [1920] 2 K.B. 523, CA .....	1031
Young v Moore (1757) 2 Wils.K.B. 67 .....	531
Young v Purdy [1996] 2 F.L.R. 795; [1997] 1 F.C.R. 632, CA .....	985
Young v Robson Rhodes (A Firm) [1999] 3 All E.R. 524; [1999] Lloyd's Rep. P.N. 641, Ch D .....	1029, 1031, 1043
Young v Timmins (1831) 1 C. & J. 331 .....	468, 1044
Young & Marten Ltd v McManus Childs Ltd [1969] 1 A.C. 454; [1968] 3 W.L.R. 630, HL .....	207, 839, 840
Youngmin v Heath [1974] 1 W.L.R. 135; [1974] 1 All E.R. 461, CA .....	895
Ypatia Halloussi, The See Olympia Sauna Shipping Co SA v Shinwa Kaiun Kaisha Ltd
Ypatianna, The See Indian Oil Corp Ltd v Greenstone Shipping Co SA (Panama)
Yuen Kun Yeu v Attorney General of Hong Kong [1988] A.C. 175; [1987] 3 W.L.R. 776, PC (HK) .....	345, 347, 616
Yukong Line Ltd of Korea v Rendsburg Investments Corp of Liberia (The Rialto) [1998] 1 W.L.R. 294; [1998] 4 All E.R. 82, QBD (Comm Ct) ....	733, 813, 815, 856, 864
Zakhem International Construction Ltd v Nippon Kokkan KK (No.1) [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 596, CA .....	171, 195
Zambia Steel & Building Supplies Ltd v James Clark & Eaton Ltd [1986] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 225; The Financial Times , August 15, 1986, CA .....	20
Zamet v Hyman [1961] 1 W.L.R. 1442; [1961] 3 All E.R. 933, CA .....	412
Zamir v Secretary of State for the Home Department [1980] A.C. 930; [1980] 3 W.L.R. 249, HL .....	393
Zang Tumb Tuum Records Ltd v Johnson [1993] E.M.I.L.R. 61; The Independent , August 2, 1989, CA .....	464
Zanzibar v British Aerospace (Lancaster House) Ltd [2000] 1 W.L.R. 2333; [2000] C.L.C. 735, QBD (Comm Ct) ....	359, 386, 389
Zeeland Navigation Co Ltd v Banque Worms (The Foresight Driller II) [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 251, QBD (Comm Ct) .....	208

Zephyr, The See General Accident Fire and Life Assurance Corp Ltd v Peter William Tanter (The Zephyr)
Zeus Tradition Marine Ltd v Bell (The Zeus V) [2000] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 769; [2000] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 587, CA	797
Zeus V, The See Zeus Tradition Marine Ltd v Bell
Zhi Jiang Kou, The See P S Chellaram & Co Ltd v China Ocean Shipping Co
Zieme v Gregory [1963] V.R. 214	1008
Zinnia, The See Stag Line Ltd v Tyne Ship Repair Group Ltd
Zoan v Rouamba [2000] 1 W.L.R. 1509; [2000] 2 All E.R. 620, CA	198
Zokoll Group Ltd v Mercury Communications Ltd [1999] E.M.L.R. 385	253
Zouch d Abbot and Hallet v Parsons (1765) 3 Burr. 1794	539
Zucker v Tyndall Holdings Plc [1992] 1 W.L.R. 1127; [1993] 1 All E.R. 124, CA	1047
Zuhal K, The and Selin, The [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 151; [1987] 1 F.T.L.R. 76, QBD (Adm Ct)	397
Zuiho Maru, The See Kawasaki Steel Corp v Sardoil SpA
ZYX Music GmbH v King [1997] 2 All E.R. 129; [1997] E.C.C. 477, CA; affirming [1995] 3 All E.R. 1, Ch D	433, 444, 503

TABLE OF STATUTES

1551	Sale of Offices Act (5 & 6 Edw. 6 c.16) .....	451	1867	Sale of Land by Auction Act (30 & 31 Vict. c.48)—
1677	Statute of Frauds (29 Car. 2 c.3) .....	181		s.5 .....	11
	s.4 .... 138, 150, 178, 180, 181, 513, 1028		1867	Policies of Assurance Act (30 & 31 Vict. c.86) .....	675
	s.9 .....	679	1868	Marine Insurance Act (31 & 32 Vict. c.86) .....	675
1677	Sunday Observance Act (29 Car. 2 c.7) .....	485	1869	Debtors Act (32 & 33 Vict. c.62)—
1710	Gaming Act (9 Ann c.19) .....	518		s.4 .....	1019
	s.1 .....	527, 529		s.5 .....	1019
1730	Landlord and Tenant Act (4 Geo. 2 c.28)—		1870	Apportionment Act (33 & 34 Vict. c.35) .....	811, 822, 823
	s.1 .....	936		s.2 .....	784, 823
1737	Distress for Rent Act (11 Geo. 2 c.19) .....	936		s.5 .....	823
1745	Marine Insurance Act (19 Geo.2 c.28)—			s.7 .....	823
	s.1 .....	513	1870	Married Women's Property Act (33 & 34 Vict. c.93)—
1774	Fire Prevention (Metropolis) Act (14 Geo. 3 c.78)—			s.10 .....	666
	s.83 .....	667	1871	Trade Union Act (34 & 35 Vict. c.31)—
1774	Life Assurance Act (14 Geo. 3 c.126)—			s.3 .....	467
	s.1 .....	492, 513	1873	Judicature Act (36 & 37 Vict. c.66) ...	369, 650, 651, 675, 684, 687
1777	Grants of Life Annuities Act (17 Geo.3 c.26)—			s.24(7) .....	322
	s.1 .....	1058		s.25(6) .....	676
1809	Sale of Offices Act (49 Geo. 3 c.126) ....	451		s.25(7) .....	830
1828	Statute of Frauds Amendment Act (9 Geo.4 c.14)—			s.25(11) .....	570, 650
	s.6 .....	352	1874	Infants Relief Act (37 & 38 Vict. c.62)—
1835	Gaming Act (5 & 6 Will. 4 c.41) .....	527		s.1 .....	549
	s.1 .....	533		s.2 .....	549
	s.2 .....	533	1875	Judicature Act .....	369
1845	Real Property Act (8 & 9 Vict. c.106)—		1880	Employers' Liability Act .....	543
	s.5 .....	669, 670, 671	1881	Conveyancing Act (44 & 45 Vict. c.41)—
1845	Gaming Act (8 & 9 Vict. c.109)—			s.60 .....	575, 576
	s.18 ... 150, 151, 518, 520, 521, 522, 524, 525, 526, 527, 529, 536		1882	Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act (44 & 45 Vict. c. 43) .....	177
1854	Usury Laws Repeal Act (17 & 18 Vict. c.90) .....	427	1882	Bills Of Exchange Act (45 & 46 Vict. c.61) .....	177
1855	Bills of Lading Act (18 & 19 Vict. c.111)—			s.3 .....	691
	s.1 .....	640, 675		s.3(1) .....	177
1856	Mercantile Law Amendment Act (19 & 20 Vict. c.97)—			s.17(2) .....	177
	s.2 .....	1022		s.27(1)(b) .....	80, 692
	s.3 .....	183		s.27(2) .....	527, 692
1858	Chancery Amendment Act (Lord Cairns' Act) (21 & 22 Vict. c.97)—			s.29 .....	527, 692
	s.2 .....	1046		s.29(1) .....	528, 692
1867	Sales of Reversions Act (31 & 32 Vict. c.4) .....	420		s.29(2) .....	528
				s.29(3) .....	528
				s.30(2) .....	527, 528, 692
				s.38(2) .....	528, 692
				s.40(1) .....	753
				s.41(1)(a) .....	753
				s.53(1) .....	680
				s.62 .....	101

1882	Bills of Exchange Act— cont.
	ss.65–68 .....	718
	s.73 .....	691
	s.81A .....	527, 691
	s.83(1) .....	691
	s.85(1) .....	568
	s.85(2) .....	569
	s.90 .....	528
1882	Married Women's Property Act (45 & 46 Vict. c.75)—
	s.11 .....	650, 666, 667
1889	Interpretation Act (52 & 53 Vict. c.63)—
	s.9 .....	334
1890	Partnership Act (53 & 54 Vict. c.39)—
	s.9 .....	569
	s.14(1) .....	713
	s.17(3) .....	155
	s.41 .....	368
1890	Directors Liability Act (53 & 54 Vict. c.64) .....	343
1892	Gaming Act (55 & 56 Vict. c.9) .....	744
	s.1 .....	524, 526
1894	Merchant Shipping Act (57 & 58 Vict. c.60)—
	s.57 .....	514
1900	Moneylenders Act (63 & 64 Vict. c.51) .....	427
1906	Marine Insurance Act (6 Edw. 7 c.41) .....	332
	s.4 .....	522
	s.4(1) .....	513
	s.4(2) .....	516
	s.14(2) .....	667
	s.17 .....	394, 396, 401
	s.18(1) .....	392
	s.18(2) .....	395
	s.20(1) .....	332
	s.20(2) .....	336
	s.20(3) .....	332
	s.20(4) .....	338
	s.20(5) .....	332
	s.22 .....	55, 181
	s.24 .....	181
	s.31(2) .....	57, 229
	s.33(3) .....	240, 846, 847
	s.46(1) .....	240
	s.50 .....	678, 680
	s.50(1) .....	675
	s.50(2) .....	371
	s.79 .....	696
	s.84(1) .....	373
	s.84(2) .....	916
	s.84(3) .....	373
	Sch.1 .....	295
1909	Marine Insurance (Gambling Policies) Act (9 Edw. 7 c.12) .....	516
1914	Deeds of Arrangement Act (4 & 5 Geo. 5 c.47) .....	129
1914	Bankruptcy Act (4 & 5 Geo.5 c.59)—
	s.42 .....	647
1924	Carriage of Goods by Sea Act (14 & 15 Geo.5 c. 22) .....	614
	Sch .....	614
1925	Trustee Act (15 & 16 Geo.5 c.19)—
	s.13 .....	75
1925	Law of Property Act (15 & 16 Geo. 5 c.20)—
	s.1(b) .....	545
	s.40 .....	138, 178, 180, 1028
	s.41 .....	830, 831
	s.46 .....	215
	s.47 .....	667, 896
	s.49(2) .....	1007, 1008, 1009, 1012
	s.52 .....	177
	s.53(1)(b) .....	647
	s.53(1)(c) .....	184, 679
	s.53(2) .....	679
	s.54(2) .....	177
	s.56 .....	589, 669
	s.56(1) .....	669, 670, 671
	s.56(2) .....	669
	s.63(1) .....	326
	s.74(1) .....	159
	s.81 .....	575, 576
	s.82 .....	326
	s.84 .....	473
	s.84(7) .....	76
	s.101 .....	1033
	s.108 .....	667
	s.109 .....	705
	s.119 .....	569
	s.136 .....	678, 680
	s.136(1) ....	658, 676, 677, 678, 681, 689
	s.146 .....	780
	s.172 .....	75
	s.174 .....	420
	s.196(3) .....	28
	s.199(1)(I) .....	177
	s.205(1)(ii) .....	188
	s.205(1)(xx) .....	669
	s.205(1)(xxi) .....	75
1925	Land Registration Act (15 & 16 Geo.5 c.21) —
	s.70(1)(g) .....	177
1925	Land Charges Act (15 & 16 Geo. 5 c.22)—
	s.10(1) .....	177
	s.13(2) .....	177
1925	Supreme Court of Judicature (Consolidation) Act (15 & 16 Geo. 5 c.49)—
	s.41 .....	603
1925	Honours (Prevention of Abuses) Act (15 & 16 Geo.5 c.72) .....	451
1926	Fertilisers and Feeding Stuffs Act (16 & 17 Geo. 5 c.36)—
	s.1(2) .....	433
1927	Auctions (Bidding Agreements) Act (17 & 18 Geo. 5 c.12) .....	474
1927	Moneylenders Act (17 & 18 Geo. 5 c.21) .....	427

1927	Landlord and Tenant Act (17 & 18 Geo.5 c.36)—		1960	Corporate Bodies Contracts Act (8 & 9 Eliz.2 c.46) .....	150, 1063
	s.18 .....	945	1961	Carriage by Air Act (9 & 10 Eliz.2 c.27)—
	s.18(1) .....	934		Sch.1 .....	266
1930	Third Parties (Rights Against Insurers) Act (20 & 21 Geo.5 c.25) .....	729		Sch.1, para.25A .....	631
	s.1 .....	668	1961	Suicide Act (9 & 10 Eliz.2 c.60) .....	439
1930	Road Traffic Act (20 & 21 Geo. 5 c.43) —		1961	Offensive Weapons Act —
	s.36(4) .....	667		s.1 .....	12
1933	Children and Young Persons Act (23 & 24 Geo. 5 c.12)—		1962	Transport Act (c.46)—
	s.18 .....	543		s.43(7) .....	249
1934	Law Reform (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act (24 & 25 Geo. 5 c.41)—		1963	Betting, Gaming and Lotteries Act (c.2)— s.1(2)(a)(i) .....	699		s.32(1) .....	519
	s.3 .....	914	1963	British Museum Act (c.24)—
1943	Law Reform (Frustrated Contracts) Act (6 & 7 Geo. 6 c.40) .....	44, 320, 782, 901		s.3(4) .....	567
	s.1(1) .....	925	1963	Children and Young Persons Act (c.37)—
	s.1(2) .....	911, 912, 913, 915, 916		s.34 .....	543
	s.1(3) .....	913, 915, 916, 917, 1064		s.37 .....	543
	s.1(3)(a) .....	911, 915	1964	Hire-Purchase Act (c.53)—
	s.1(3)(b) .....	914, 915		s.27 .....	299
	s.1(5) .....	912, 913	1965	Carriage of Goods by Road Act (c.37)—
	s.2(3) .....	917		Sch. ....	266, 719
	s.2(4) .....	916	1965	Rent Act (c.75)—
	s.2(5)(a) .....	917		s.30 .....	988
	s.2(5)(c) .....	917, 918, 919	1967	Misrepresentation Act (c.7) .....	333, 489
1945	Law Reform (Contributory Negligence) Act (8 & 9 Geo. 6 c.28) ....	340, 982, 983		Pt VI .....	375
1945	Bretton Woods Agreement Act (9 & 10 Geo. 6 c.19) .....	511		s.1(a) .....	195, 375, 376, 384, 387, 817, 805
1946	Statutory Instruments Act (9 & 10 Geo. 6 c.36) .....	334		s.1(b) .....	377
1947	Crown Proceedings Act (10 & 11 Geo. 6 c.44) .....	698		s.2 .....	163, 356, 358
	s.21(1)(a) .....	717		s.2(1) .....	297, 325, 335, 349, 350, 351, 352, 357, 358, 359, 360, 363, 366, 367, 382, 392, 402, 565
1950	Arbitration Act (14 Geo. 6 c.27)—			s.2(2) .....	357, 358, 359, 366, 368, 370, 376, 377, 402, 554, 804, 817
	s.13A .....	10		s.2(3) .....	366
1952	Defamation Act (15 & 16 Geo. 6 & 1 Eliz 2)—			s.3 .....	242, 256, 257, 259, 260, 266, 385, 386, 387, 388, 389, 402, 403, 999
	s.11 .....	436		s.49 .....	375
1954	Law Reform (Enforcement of Contracts) Act (2 & 3 Eliz 2 c.34) .....	181, 183, 189		s.51 .....	375
1955	Army Act (3 & 4 Eliz. 2 c.18)—		1967	Criminal Law Act (c.58)—
	s.203(1) .....	698		s.1 .....	92, 445
1957	Occupiers' Liability Act (5 & 6 Eliz. 2 c.31)—			s.5(1) .....	92, 432, 445
	s.3 .....	607, 641		s.10 .....	451
1958	Variation of Trusts Act (6 & 7 Eliz. 2 c.53) .....	314		s.13(1) .....	431, 695
1959	Restriction of Offensive Weapons Act (7 & 8 Eliz.2 c.37)—			s.13(2) .....	695
	s.1(1)(a) .....	432		s.14(1) .....	431
1960	Road Traffic Act (8 & 9 Eliz. 2 c.16)—			s.14(2) .....	431, 438, 439, 695
	s.151 .....	158		Sch.3 .....	451
			1967	Sexual Offences Act (c.60) .....	439
			1967	Criminal Justice Act (c.80)—
				s.13(1) .....	672
				s.14(1) .....	672
				s.14(2) .....	672
			1967	Abortion Act (c.87) .....	439
			1967	Leasehold Reform Act (c.88)—
				s.23 .....	3
			1968	Trade Descriptions Act (c.29) .....	331
				s.1 .....	369

1968	Trade Descriptions Act— cont.
	s.14 .....	369
	s.35 .....	488
1968	Theft Act (c.60)—
	s.3(1) .....	13
	s.4(1) .....	552
	s.5(3) .....	747
	s.15 .....	369, 556
	s.15(4) .....	331, 333, 369
	s.16 .....	369
	s.21 .....	93, 521
	s.34(2)(b) .....	280
	s.35 .....	434
1968	Gaming Act (c.65) .....	518
	Pt 1 .....	518
	Pt 2 .....	518
	s.1 .....	518
	s.2(1) .....	518
	s.3(1) .....	518
	s.4 .....	518
	s.6 .....	519
	s.11 .....	518
	s.13(1) .....	518
	s.13(2) .....	519
	ss.13–15 .....	518
	s.14(1) .....	518
	s.14(2) .....	519
	s.15(1) .....	518
	s.15(2) .....	519
	s.16 .....	529, 535
	s.16(1) .....	530, 531, 534
	s.16(2) .....	534, 535
	s.16(2A) .....	530, 535
	s.16(4) .....	530, 534, 535
	s.52(1) .....	518
	s.52(6) .....	518
	s.53(1) .....	519
	Sch.3 .....	518
	Sch.4 .....	518
1969	Employers' Liability (Defective Equip- ment) Act (c.37) .....	206
1969	Family Law Reform Act (c.46)—
	s.1 .....	539
	s.8(1) .....	542
	s.9 .....	539
	s.11 .....	547
	s.12 .....	539
	s.19(1) .....	666
1969	Statute Law (Repeals) Act (c.52)—
	Sch. ....	485
1969	Law of Property Act (c.59)—
	s.28 .....	473
1969	Auctions (Bidding Agreements) Act ....	474
1970	Administration of Justice Act (c.31)—
	s.11 .....	1019
1970	Law Reform (Miscellaneous Provi- sions) Act (c.33)—
	s.1 .....	98, 440, 860
	s.2 .....	440, 860
	s.6 .....	440
1970	Equal Pay Act (c.41) .....	479
	s.1 .....	3
1970	Matrimonial Proceedings and Property Act (c.45)—
	s.41 .....	718
1971	Carriage of Goods by Sea Act (c.19) ...	229, 614
	s.1(2) .....	612
	s.3 .....	191, 839
	Sch. ....	191, 215, 228, 266, 612
	Sch., art.4 .....	631, 639
	Sch., art.5 .....	639
1971	Powers of Attorney Act (c.27) .....	751
	s.4 .....	752
	s.5(1) .....	738
	s.5(3) .....	752
	s.6 .....	752
	s.7(1) .....	736
1971	Unsolicited Goods and Services Act (c.30) .....	9
1971	Policyholders Protection Act (c.75)—
	s.7 .....	668
1972	Superannuation Act (c.11)—
	s.5(1) .....	698
1972	Defective Premises Act (c.35)—
	s.1(1) .....	250
	s.1(1)(a) .....	839
	s.1(1)(b) .....	607
	s.4 .....	607, 641
	s.6(3) .....	250
	s.11(b) .....	641
1972	European Communities Act (c.68)—
	s.2 .....	475
	s.9(2) .....	735
1972	Local Government Act (c.70)—
	s.123(2) .....	75
1972	Carriage by Railway Act—
	Sch. ....	266
1973	Supply of Goods (Implied Terms) Act (c.13)—
	s.8 .....	251
	ss.8–11 .....	206, 792
	ss.9–11 .....	251
	s.10 .....	792, 839
	s.10(2) .....	251, 255
	s.10(3) .....	251, 255
	s.11A .....	801
	s.11A(4) .....	247
1973	Matrimonial Causes Act (c.18) .....	718
	s.12(c) .....	405
	s.23 .....	422
	ss.23–25 .....	393
	s.34 .....	150, 447, 505, 513
1973	Employment of Children Act (c.24) ....	543
1973	Fair Trading Act (c.41) .....	283
	Pt XI .....	419
	s.26 .....	284, 434, 487, 510
	s.123(3) .....	284
1974	Carriage of Passengers by Road Act (c.35)—
	Sch. ....	266
1974	Consumer Credit Act (c.39) .....	171, 571
	Pt VIII .....	183
	s.8 .....	178

1974 Consumer Credit Act—cont.

s.9	178
s.15	178
s.16	178
s.40(1)	491, 513
s.55(1)	178
s.56	195
s.56(2)	583, 707
s.56(3)	707
s.57(3)	707
s.59	59
s.60	177
s.61(1)	178
s.61(1)(a)	178, 711
s.61(1)(b)	178
s.61(1)(c)	178
s.62	178
s.63	178
s.63(3)	187
s.64(2)	187
s.64(5)	178
s.65(1)	179
s.67	285, 330
ss.67–68	428
s.69(1)(ii)	41
s.69(6)	707
s.69(7)	41
s.74	178
s.86	285, 1005
s.87	285, 498, 1005
s.88	780
s.89	780
s.90	498
s.94	285
s.95	285
s.99	285
s.100	285
s.100(1)	277, 1005
s.100(3)	277, 1005
s.102(1)	707
s.105	178
s.112	206
s.113(1)	571
s.113(2)	571
s.113(7)	572
s.114(2)	550
s.125	692
s.127	183
s.127(1)(i)	179
s.127(1)(ii)	179
s.127(2)	179
s.127(3)	179, 606
s.127(4)	179
s.127(5)	179
s.132(1)	1010
s.137(1)	427, 428
s.138(1)	428
s.138(2)–(4)	428
s.138(3)(b)	422
s.138(4)(b)	422
s.139(2)	428
s.170(1)	550

1974 Consumer Credit Act—cont.

s.171(7)	428
s.173	285
s.175	707
s.189(1)	280
s.192	251, 255, 839
Sch.4, para.35	206, 251, 255, 839
1974 Solicitors Act (c.47)—
s.37	667
s.56	419
s.57	419
1974 British Columbia Frustrated Contracts Act—
s.5(3)	912
1975 Social Security Act (c.14)	437
1975 Inheritance (Provision for Family and Dependants) Act (c.63)—
s.1(3)	76
s.10(2)(b)	75
s.10(5)(b)	75
s.11(2)(c)	75
1975 Sex Discrimination Act (c.65)	467
Pt I	479
Pt II	4, 479
Pt III	4, 479
Pt IV	479
s.8	3
s.43(1)	479
s.43(2)	479
s.62(1)	487
s.65	4, 1047
s.65(1)(c)	1030
s.65(3)(a)	1030
s.66	4, 1047
s.66(4)	987
s.67(1)(a)	926
s.71	4
s.71(1)	1030, 1031
s.77	430, 487
s.77(1)	513
s.77(2)	513
s.77(5)	510
1975 Employment Protection Act (c.71)—
s.125	479
Sch.16, para.13	479
1976 Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Act (c.25)—
s.16	479
1976 Congenital Disabilities (Civil Liability) Act (c.28)—
s.1(6)	638
1976 Fatal Accidents Act (c.30)—
s.1A	987
1976 Lotteries and Amusements Act (c.32)	518
1976 Police Pensions Act (c.35)—
s.9	698
1976 Adoption Act (c.36)—
s.57	441
s.57A	441
s.58	441

1976	Resale Prices Act (c.53)—
	Pt I .....	374
	s.26 .....	666
1976	Bail Act (c.63)—
	s.9 .....	432, 446
1976	Race Relations Act (c.74)—
	Pt I .....	479
	Pt II .....	4, 479
	Pt III .....	4, 479
	Pt IV .....	479
	s.34(2) .....	479
	s.34(3) .....	479
	s.53(1) .....	487
	s.56 .....	4, 1047
	s.56(1)(c) .....	1030
	s.56(4) .....	1030
	s.57 .....	4, 1047
	s.57(4) .....	987
	s.62 .....	4, 1031
	s.72 .....	430, 487
	s.72(1) .....	513
	s.72(2) .....	513
	s.72(5) .....	510
1977	Torts (Interference with Goods) Act (c.32)—
	s.3(7) .....	720
	s.6 .....	720
	s.6(1) .....	720
	s.6(3) .....	1053
	s.12 .....	719, 720
	s.12(5) .....	720
	s.13 .....	719, 720
	s.13(1)(a) .....	720
	Sch.1 .....	719, 720
1977	Patents Act (c.37)—
	s.44 .....	620
1977	Rent Act (c.42) .....	3, 444, 479, 491
	s.44(2) .....	3
	s.57 .....	491
	s.95 .....	491
	s.125 .....	491
	s.154 .....	334
1977	Protection from Eviction Act (c.43)—
	s.1 .....	988
1977	Criminal Law Act (c.45)—
	s.1(2) .....	432
1977	Unfair Contract Terms Act (c.50) .....	215, 244, 246, 337, 339, 387, 627, 742, 901, 1003
	Pt I .....	262, 385
	s.1(a) .....	772
	s.1(b) .....	772
	s.1(c) .....	247
	s.1(1) .....	249, 252
	s.1(1)(a) .....	664
	s.1(2) .....	264
	s.1(3) .....	247, 249, 251, 252, 255, 256, 265, 999
	s.2 .....	222, 246, 248, 249, 263, 264, 265, 268, 543, 631, 664
	s.2(1) .....	249, 256, 265, 266, 267, 282, 345, 664, 995
1977	Unfair Contract Terms Act— cont.
	s.2(2) .....	256, 257, 265, 266, 386, 388, 664, 665, 772
	s.2(5) .....	995
	ss.2 to 4 .....	772
	ss.2 to 7 .....	266
	s.3 .....	259, 263, 264, 265, 268, 270, 275, 282, 543, 664, 772
	s.3(1) .....	264, 267
	s.3(2) .....	257, 262, 386, 388
	s.3(2)(b) .....	266, 995
	s.3(2)(b)(i) .....	238, 274, 275
	s.3(2)(b)(ii) .....	167, 248, 274, 778, 782, 917
	s.4 .....	209, 264, 265, 266
	s.4(1) .....	257
	s.5 .....	248
	s.5(1) .....	267
	s.6 .....	248, 256, 257, 259, 264
	s.6(1) .....	248, 257, 264, 282
	s.6(2) .....	248, 263
	s.6(3) .....	257, 259
	s.6(4) .....	264
	s.7 .....	248, 255, 256, 259, 264, 265
	s.7(2) .....	252
	s.7(3) .....	257
	s.7(3A) .....	252, 255
	s.7(4) .....	252, 257
	s.8 .....	256, 264, 772, 999
	s.8(1) .....	385, 386
	s.9(1) .....	261
	s.9(2) .....	239, 261
	s.10 .....	262, 263
	s.11 .....	283
	s.11(1) .....	257, 258, 271, 385, 388
	s.11(2) .....	259, 388
	s.11(3) .....	246, 258, 267
	s.11(4) .....	258, 267, 282, 388, 389
	s.11(5) .....	252, 271
	s.12 .....	247
	s.12(1)(a) .....	247, 270
	s.12(1)(b) .....	247
	s.12(1)(c) .....	247, 269
	s.12(2) .....	247, 269, 803
	s.12(3) .....	271
	s.13 .....	275, 385
	s.13(1) .....	248, 249, 262, 274, 345, 386
	s.13(2) .....	237, 248, 262, 274
	s.14 .....	247, 249, 280
	s.25 .....	280
	s.26 .....	266, 277
	s.26(1) .....	266
	s.26(2) .....	266
	s.26(3) .....	266
	s.26(4) .....	266
	s.27(1) .....	266, 283
	s.27(2) .....	263, 283
	s.28 .....	266
	s.29 .....	250, 265, 266
	s.29(1)(a) .....	277, 917
	s.29(1)(b) .....	277
	Sch.1 .....	264

1977	Unfair Contract Terms Act— cont.
	Sch.1, para.1(a) .....	272, 279
	Sch.1, para.1(b) .....	278
	Sch.1, para.1(c) .....	278, 772
	Sch.1, para.1(d) .....	278
	Sch.1, para.2(c) .....	266
	Sch.1, para.4 .....	278, 543
	Sch.2 .....	259, 273, 274, 275, 422
1977	New Zealand Contractual Mistakes Act .....	286
1978	Interpretation Act (c.30)—
	s.3 .....	334
	s.15 .....	519, 718
	s.16 .....	519, 718
	Sch.1 .....	186
1978	Theft Act (c.31)—
	s.1 .....	369
	s.2 .....	125
	s.5 .....	369
	s.5(1) .....	331, 333, 369
1978	Civil Liability (Contribution) Act (c.47)—
	s.1 .....	1056
	s.1(1) .....	697, 1056
	s.2 .....	574
	s.2(1) .....	697
	s.2(2) .....	1056
	s.3 .....	570, 737
	s.6 .....	1056
	s.7(1) .....	570
1978	New South Wales Frustrated Contracts Act—
	s.11(2)(b)(ii) .....	912
	s.13 .....	912
	s.15 .....	912
1979	Estate Agents Act (c.38)—
	s.1(1) .....	708
	s.3 .....	746
	s.13(1)(a) .....	708
	s.15 .....	708
	s.18 .....	176, 244
	s.18(2)(a) .....	743
	s.21 .....	746, 928
1979	Sale of Goods Act (c.54) .....	56, 796, 800
	Pt 5A .....	803, 1054
	s.2(1) .....	553
	s.3 .....	539
	s.3(2) .....	542, 558, 559
	s.3(3) .....	542
	s.6 .....	296, 297
	s.7 .....	870, 918
	s.8(2) .....	18, 51, 1061
	s.9(1) .....	59
	s.10(1) .....	766, 826
	s.11 .....	309, 1054
	s.11(2) .....	812
	s.11(3) .....	760, 790, 804, 847
	s.11(4) .....	760, 816
	s.12 .....	251, 433, 1053, 1055
	s.12(1) .....	793, 801
	s.12(1)(b) .....	251
	s.12(2) .....	793

1979	Sale of Goods Act— cont.
	s.12(3) .....	793
	ss.12 to 15 .....	206, 792
	ss.13 to 15 .....	251
	s.13 .....	793, 801
	ss.13 to 14 .....	805
	s.14 .....	251, 793, 801, 839
	s.14(2) .....	247, 251, 255
	s.14(2D) .....	162
	s.14(2E)(a) .....	839
	s.14(3) .....	208, 255
	s.15 .....	793, 801
	s.15(2) .....	227
	s.15(3) .....	227
	s.15A .....	801, 802, 825
	s.15A(1) .....	801
	s.15A(1)(b) .....	801
	s.15A(2) .....	801
	s.15A(3) .....	801
	s.16 .....	1023
	s.17 .....	612
	s.18 .....	64, 550, 871, 1017
	s.20(1) .....	871
	s.20(4) .....	871
	s.20A .....	1023
	s.20A(1) .....	1024
	s.20A(2) .....	1024
	s.25 .....	372, 802
	s.27 .....	1015
	s.28 .....	763, 1015
	s.29(5) .....	754
	s.30(1) .....	773, 783, 784, 793, 820, 877
	s.30(2) .....	783, 793
	s.30(2A) .....	773, 783, 784, 825
	s.30(5) .....	783, 784
	s.31(1) .....	787
	s.31(2) .....	773, 784
	s.35(1) .....	384
	s.35(2) .....	384
	s.35(4) .....	384, 817
	s.35(5) .....	384, 817
	s.35A .....	817
	s.48(3) .....	803, 826, 830
	s.48(4) .....	760, 803, 852
	s.48A .....	805, 818, 945, 952, 1053
	ss.48A–48C .....	803, 1053
	ss.48A–48D .....	251
	ss.48A–48F .....	376
	s.48A(1)(a) .....	1053
	s.48A(1)(b) .....	803
	s.48A(2) .....	1053
	s.48A(2)(a) .....	803, 1025
	s.48A(2)(b)(ii) .....	760, 805
	s.48B .....	803, 818, 1025
	s.48B(2)(a) .....	818
	s.48C .....	360, 760, 803, 804, 805, 945, 1025, 1053, 1055
	s.48C(1) .....	952
	s.48C(1)(a) .....	788
	s.48C(1)(b) .....	803, 805, 819
	s.48C(2) .....	803, 952
	s.48C(2)(b) .....	819

1979 Sale of Goods Act—cont.

s.48D(1) .....	803, 819
s.48D(2)(a) .....	803, 819
s.48E .....	803
s.48E(2) .....	1025
s.48E(3) .....	805, 1025
s.48E(3)(a) .....	1025
s.48E(4) .....	805, 1025
s.48E(5) .....	1053, 1054, 1055
s.48F .....	760, 803, 805, 818, 1055
s.49 .....	1022
s.49(1) .....	802, 1016, 1017
s.50(3) .....	953, 959
s.51(3) .....	947, 948, 959
s.52 .....	1022, 1023, 1024, 1025
s.53(1)(a) .....	788
s.53(2) .....	950, 951, 973
s.53(3) .....	788, 945, 950, 952, 960, 973
s.55(1) .....	297
s.55(3) .....	360
s.57(2) .....	11
s.61(1) .....	297, 760, 788, 804, 805, 919, 1022, 1024
s.61(5A) .....	247, 788, 803, 871, 1025
s.62(1) .....	280
s.62(2) .....	374, 375, 805
s.63 .....	918
Sch.2, para.2 .....	918
Sch.4 .....	612

1980 Limitation Act (c.58)—

s.27(5) .....	80
s.29(5)(a) .....	127
s.29(7) .....	80
s.30(1) .....	80
s.31(1) .....	1059
s.32(1) .....	351

1981 Public Passenger Vehicles Act (c.14)—

s.29 .....	158, 249
------------	----------

1981 Energy Conservation Act (c.17)—

s.18 .....	487
------------	-----

1981 Supreme Court Act (c.54)—

s.35A .....	995
s.35A(1) .....	914, 995
s.35A(3) .....	995
s.36(4) .....	93
s.49 .....	322, 1046, 1047
s.49(1) .....	570, 650
s.49(3) .....	603
s.50 .....	1046

1982 Supply of Goods and Services Act

(c.29) .....	206, 760
s.1(2)(c) .....	255
ss.2–5 .....	206, 251, 792, 795
s.4 .....	792, 839
s.4(2B) .....	162
s.5A .....	801
ss.7–10 .....	206, 251, 792, 795
s.9 .....	792, 839
s.9(4) .....	805
s.12(3)(a) .....	840
s.13 .....	795, 840
ss.13–14 .....	207

1982 Supply of Goods and Services Act—cont.

s.14 .....	795
s.15(1) .....	18, 51, 1061
s.16(3)(a) .....	840
s.17(2) .....	252
s.17(3) .....	252, 255
s.18 .....	280
s.18(4) .....	247

1982 Forfeiture Act (c.34)—

s.2 .....	437
s.4 .....	437

1982 Administration of Justice Act (c.53)—

s.3 .....	987
s.4 .....	699
s.5 .....	981
s.15 .....	995, 998
s.21 .....	195
Sch.1 .....	995, 998

1982 Lloyd's Act (c.xiv)—

s.8 .....	568
-----------	-----

1983 International Transport Conventions Act (c.14)—

s.1 .....	266
-----------	-----

1983 Mental Health Act (c.20) .....

557
-----

1983 Mobile Homes Act (c.34)—

s.1 .....	179
-----------	-----

1984 Occupiers' Liability Act (c.3)—

s.2 .....	247
-----------	-----

1984 Food Act (c.30)—

s.102(1)(a) .....	790
-------------------	-----

1984 Police and Criminal Evidence Act (c.60)—

s.19 .....	501
s.22 .....	501
s.24 .....	92
s.24(1) .....	432
s.119 .....	432
Sch.6, para.17 .....	432

1985 Companies Act (c.6)—

s.2(1)(c) .....	560
s.3A .....	561
s.3A(b) .....	564
s.4 .....	560, 561
s.8 .....	824
s.14 .....	662
s.14(1) .....	586
s.34 .....	503
s.35(1) .....	46, 561, 571, 724
s.35(2) .....	46
s.35(3) .....	562, 724
s.35(4) .....	561, 572
s.35A .....	715
s.35A(1) ...	46, 561, 562, 563, 572, 715, 724, 739
s.35A(2)(b) .....	562, 572, 715
s.35A(2)(c) .....	562
s.35A(3) .....	46, 562
s.35A(4) .....	46, 563
s.35A(6) .....	572
s.35B .....	562, 715
s.36(4) .....	735

1985 Companies Act—cont.

s.36A(3) .....	158
s.36A(4) .....	158, 159
s.36A(5) .....	159, 562
s.36A(6) .....	159, 562
s.36C .....	732
s.36C(1) .....	725, 735, 736
s.80(1) .....	16
s.82(7) .....	41
s.103 .....	75
s.116 .....	446
s.111A .....	343
s.182(1) .....	678
s.195 .....	1020
s.282 .....	705
s.317 .....	745
s.320 .....	75
s.341 .....	434
s.341(1) .....	513
s.395 .....	679
s.396 .....	679
s.396(2)(g) .....	683
s.711A .....	562
s.711A(1) .....	715
s.711A(2) .....	715
s.742A .....	16
s.744 .....	16

1985 Reserve Forces (Safeguard of Employment) Act (c.17)—

s.10 .....	1030
s.17 .....	1030
s.18 .....	1030

1985 Enduring Powers of Attorney Act (c.29)—

s.1(1)(a) .....	752
s.1(1)(b) .....	752
s.1(1)(c) .....	752
s.6 .....	752
s.7(1)(a) .....	752
s.8(3) .....	752
s.9 .....	752

1985 Insolvency Act (c.65)—

s.235 .....	129
Sch.10 .....	129

1985 Housing Act (c.68)—

Pt V .....	5
s.609 .....	621

1985 Landlord and Tenant Act (c.70)—

s.4 .....	176
s.7 .....	176
s.12 .....	283

1986 Agricultural Holdings Act (c.5)—

s.24 .....	1001
------------	------

1986 Gaming (Amendment) Act (c.11) .....

s.1(2) .....	518, 519, 527, 529
s.1(6) .....	530
s.1(6) .....	530

1986 Latent Damage Act (c.37)—

s.3 .....	614
-----------	-----

1986 Gas Act (c.44)—

s.10(2) .....	6
---------------	---

1986 Insolvency Act (c.45)—

Pt I .....	129
Pt VIII .....	100, 129
s.5(2) .....	129
s.14(5) .....	705
s.44 .....	704, 1033
s.44(1)(a) .....	705, 736
s.44(1)(b) .....	737
s.44(1)(c) .....	744
s.44(3) .....	744
s.45 .....	737
s.165 .....	431
s.166 .....	431
s.178 .....	704
s.238 .....	75, 87
s.244 .....	427
s.260(2) .....	129
s.283(1) .....	699
s.283(1)(a) .....	700
s.306 .....	700
s.307 .....	699
s.310(1) .....	700
s.310(2) .....	700
s.310(3) .....	700
s.310(7) .....	700
s.311 .....	699
s.311(4) .....	701
s.315 .....	704
s.339 .....	75, 87, 150, 647
s.343 .....	427
s.345(1) .....	774, 835
s.345(2) .....	774, 835
s.423 .....	75
s.436 .....	700
s.439(2) .....	129

1986 Social Security Act (c.50)—

s.76 .....	437
------------	-----

1986 Sex Discrimination Act (c.59) .....

s.6 .....	430, 487
-----------	----------

1986 Financial Services Act (c.60)—

s.132 .....	488
-------------	-----

1987 Minors' Contracts Act (c.13) .....

s.1(a) .....	549
s.2 .....	572
s.3 .....	552
s.4 .....	572
s.3(1) .....	550, 551, 552, 553, 554, 555, 557
s.3(2) .....	551, 554, 556
s.4(2) .....	549

1987 Landlord and Tenant Act (c.31)—

Pt I .....	5
Pt III .....	5

1987 Consumer Protection Act (c.43) .....

Pt I .....	252, 609
Pt II .....	252
s.1(3) .....	250, 254, 255
s.2 .....	256
s.2(1) .....	253, 256
s.2(2) .....	252
s.3 .....	253, 254, 255, 840
s.3(1) .....	253

1987	Consumer Protection Act— cont.
	s.3(2) .....	253, 254
	s.3(2)(a) .....	253
	s.3(2)(b)(i) .....	253, 254
	s.3(2)(b)(ii) .....	254
	s.4 .....	255, 256, 840
	s.5 .....	250, 253, 840
	s.5(1) .....	250
	s.5(2)(b) .....	250
	s.5(3) .....	250
	s.6 .....	255, 983
	s.6(1) .....	251, 255
	s.6(2) .....	251
	s.6(3) .....	251, 254, 255
	s.6(4) .....	251, 255
	s.7 .....	250, 251, 252, 254, 255
	s.7(1) .....	250, 253
	s.7(3) .....	254
	s.7(4) .....	255
	s.10 .....	252
	s.13(1) .....	254
	s.20(1) .....	13
	s.41 .....	926
	s.41(1) .....	252
	s.41(4) .....	252
1988	Income and Corporation Taxes Act (c.1)—
	s.148 .....	957
	s.188(4) .....	957
1988	Criminal Justice Act (c.33)—
	s.14A(1) .....	12, 550
1988	Legal Aid Act (c.34)—
	Pt I .....	5
	s.9(7) .....	5
	s.16(10) .....	5
	s.24 .....	5
	Sch.3 .....	5
1988	Finance Act (c.39)—
	s.74 .....	957
1988	Education Reform Act (c.40)—
	s.206 .....	450
1988	Housing Act (c.50)—
	Pt I .....	3
	s.16 .....	283
	s.27 .....	928, 988
	s.28(1) .....	928
1988	Road Traffic Act (c.52)—
	s.48 .....	668
	s.65(1) .....	487
	s.65(4) .....	487
	s.75(7) .....	487
	s.83 .....	668
	s.148(7) .....	667
	ss.145 to 149 .....	164
	s.149 .....	218, 219
	s.150 .....	164, 218
	ss.151–153 .....	668
	s.152 .....	395
	s.158 .....	721
	s.159 .....	721
	Sch.4, para.66 .....	668
	Sch.8 .....	668
1988	South Australian Frustrated Contracts Act—
	s.3(3) .....	912
	s.7(2)(c) .....	912
	s.7(d) .....	912
1989	Electricity Act (c.29)—
	s.16 .....	6
	s.17 .....	6
	s.18 .....	6
	Sch.6 .....	6
1989	Human Organ Transplants Act (c.31)—
	s.1 .....	432
1989	Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Act (c.32)—
	s.20 .....	479
	s.49 .....	479
1989	Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provi- sions) Act (c.34)—
	s.1 .....	586
	s.1(1)(b) .....	158
	s.1(2) .....	158, 999
	s.1(3)(a) .....	158
	s.1(3)(b) .....	158
	s.1(4) .....	158
	s.1(7) .....	575
	s.1(8) .....	575, 736, 1028
	s.2 .....	136, 178, 179, 180, 189
	s.2(1) ...	53, 178, 180, 185, 188, 189, 196, 1028
	s.2(1)–(3) .....	138
	s.2(2) .....	178
	s.2(3) .....	53, 178
	s.2(4) .....	180
	s.2(5) .....	178, 180
	s.2(5)(b) .....	183
	s.2(6) .....	138, 178, 188
	s.2(8) .....	181
	s.3 .....	360, 978, 999
	s.4 .....	181, 736, 1028
	Sch.1 .....	575, 736, 999
	Sch.2 .....	181, 736, 1028
1989	Employment Act (c.38) .....	479, 543
	ss.1–9 .....	4
1989	Companies Act (c.40) .....	561, 714
	s.93 .....	683
	s.108 .....	46
	s.108(1) ....	561, 562, 571, 715, 724, 739
	s.110(1) .....	561, 564
	s.110(2) .....	561
	s.130(1) .....	158, 159
	s.130(4) .....	725, 735
	s.131 .....	343
	s.142 .....	715
	s.142(1) .....	562
	s.164 .....	704
1989	Children Act (c.41) .....	543
	s.1(1) .....	442
	s.2(1) .....	442
	s.2(4) .....	442
	s.2(9) .....	442
	s.3 .....	442

1989	Children Act— cont.		1992	Taxation of Chargeable Gains Act
	s.4(1) .....	442		(c.12)—
	s.4(1)(b) .....	442		s.51(1) .....	517
	s.4(3) .....	442		s.51(2) .....	958
	s.15 .....	543	1992	Access to Neighbouring Land Act
	s.88(1) .....	441		(c.23) .....	5
	s.108(7) .....	441		s.2(5)(a) .....	928
	Sch.5 .....	543		s.3(2) .....	5
1990	National Health Service and Commu- nity Care Act (c.19)—		1992	Cheques Act (c.32) .....	691
	s.4(3) .....	5		s.1 .....	527
1990	Contracts (Applicable Law) Act		1992	Timeshare Act (c.35)—
	(c.36)—			ss.2–4 .....	428
	s.2 .....	264		s.4(2) .....	487
	s.5 .....	266	1992	Museums and Galleries Act (c.44)—
	Sch.1 .....	264		s.11(2) .....	567
	Sch.4 .....	266		Sch.8, para.5 .....	567
1990	Courts and Legal Services Act		1992	Pension Schemes Act (c.48)—
	(c.41)—			s.159 .....	698
	s.2 .....	438	1992	Carriage of Goods by Sea Act (c.50) ...	661, 704
	s.58 .....	431		s.2 .....	171, 614, 629, 640, 684
	s.58(1) .....	431		s.2(1)(a) .....	704
	s.58(2)(a) .....	431		s.2(4) .....	594, 606
	s.58(3)(a) .....	431		s.3 .....	171, 629
	s.58(4)(c) .....	431		s.3(1)(a) .....	704
	s.58A .....	431, 438	1992	Trade Union and Labour Relations
	s.58A(1) .....	431		(Consolidation) Act (c.52) .....	168
	s.58A(3) .....	431		s.1 .....	468
	s.58A(4) .....	431		s.11 .....	468
	s.61 .....	5, 78, 480		s.62(7) .....	170
	s.64 .....	4		s.63 .....	450
	s.64(1) .....	479		s.117 .....	468
	s.64(2) .....	479		s.122 .....	468
1990	Environmental Protection Act			s.122(1) .....	468
	(c.43)—			s.128 .....	468
	Sch.2 .....	15		s.137(1)(a) .....	4
1990	Gaming Act .....	518		s.138(1)(a) .....	4
1991	New Roads and Street Works Act			s.140 .....	4
	(c.22)—			s.149(2) .....	987
	s.15 .....	5		ss.152–167 .....	1030
1991	Property Misdescriptions Act (c.29)—			s.174 .....	204
	s.1(4) .....	487, 740		s.174(3) .....	468
1991	Road Traffic Act (c.40)—			ss.174–177 .....	5, 468, 1030
	s.48 .....	395		s.178(1) .....	168
	Sch.4 .....	395		s.178(2) .....	168
1991	Coal Mining Subsidence Act (c.45)—			s.179(1) .....	168
	s.2 .....	944		s.179(2) .....	168
	s.10 .....	944		s.180(1) .....	213
	s.22 .....	944		s.219 .....	625
	s.26 .....	944		s.226 .....	1029
1991	Child Support Act (c.48)—			s.234A .....	843
	s.1(1) .....	543		s.235A .....	625, 1029
	s.9 .....	442, 447		s.236 .....	1029
1991	Water Industry Act (c.56)—			s.245 .....	170
	s.53 .....	6	1993	Judicial Pensions and Retirement Act
	s.54 .....	6		(c.8)—
	s.55 .....	6		s.160(1)(a) .....	513
	s.56 .....	6		s.160(1)(b) .....	513
1992	Social Security Administration Act		1993	Charities Act (c.10)—
	(c.5)—			s.50 .....	159
	s.82 .....	981		s.60 .....	159
	s.187 .....	698		s.60(7) .....	159

1993	Charities Act— cont.
	s.60(8) .....	159
	s.64 .....	561
	s.65 .....	46, 561, 562, 572
	s.98(1) .....	561, 562, 572
	Sch.6, para.20 .....	561, 562, 572
1993	Trade Union Reform and Employment Rights Act (c.19)—
	s.14 .....	5, 204, 468, 1030
	s.21 .....	843
	s.22 .....	625, 1029
	s.32 .....	487, 510
	s.33 .....	694
	s.39(2) .....	430, 487, 510
	s.49 .....	1030
	s.49(1) .....	625
	Sch.2 .....	430
	Sch.6 .....	430, 487, 510
	Sch.7 .....	1030
	Sch.8 .....	1030
	Sch.8, para.72 .....	625
1993	Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act (c.28)—
	Pt I .....	5
	s.24(3) .....	5
	s.85 .....	5
	s.93 .....	3
1993	European Communities (Amendment) Act (c.32) .....	475
1993	Criminal Justice Act (c.36)—
	Pt V .....	391
	s.63(2) .....	391, 487
1993	National Lottery etc. Act (c.39) .....	518
1993	Railways Act (c.43)—
	s.123 .....	14
1994	Insolvency Act (c.7)—
	s.2 .....	737, 1033
1994	Race Relations (Remedies) Act (c.10) .....	1047
1994	Coal Industry Act (c.21)—
	s.42 .....	944
1994	Trade Marks Act (c.26)—
	s.106(1) .....	265
	Sch.1, para.4 .....	265
	Sch.4, para.1 .....	265
1994	Criminal Justice and Public Order Act (c.33)—
	s.44 .....	446
	Sch.4, para.25 .....	446
1994	Sale and Supply of Goods Act (c.35)—
	s.1 .....	206, 251, 792, 839
	s.2 .....	384
	s.2(1) .....	817
	s.3(1) .....	817
	s.3(2) .....	816
	s.4 .....	825
	s.4(1) .....	801
	s.4(2) .....	773, 783
	s.7 .....	206, 227, 251, 255
1994	Sale and Supply of Goods Act— cont.
	s.7(1) .....	433, 792, 801, 839
	Sch.2 .....	206, 227, 251, 255, 433, 792, 801, 839
1994	Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act (c.36)—
	Pt I .....	391
1995	Merchant Shipping Act (c.21)—
	s.25 .....	96
	s.34(1)(c) .....	698
	s.183 .....	266, 631
	s.184 .....	266
	s.185 .....	612
	s.186(2) .....	631
	s.186(3) .....	631
	Sch.6 .....	266, 631
	Sch.7 .....	612
1995	Pensions Act (c.26)—
	s.91 .....	698
1995	Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act (c.30)—
	s.1(6) .....	57
	s.2(1)(b) .....	208
	s.3 .....	702
	s.5 .....	701
	s.6 .....	701
	s.13(1) .....	569
	s.13(2) .....	572
	s.25(1)(a) .....	275
	s.38(1) .....	787
	s.185 .....	215
	s.186 .....	215
	Sch.7 .....	215
1995	Child Support Act (c.34)—
	s.18 .....	447
1995	Disability Discrimination Act (c.50) .....	479
	s.4 .....	4, 1047
	s.5 .....	4, 1047
	s.8(4) .....	987
	s.8(5) .....	1030
	s.12 .....	4, 1047
	s.13 .....	5, 468
	s.19 .....	4, 1047
	s.25(2) .....	987
	s.26 .....	487
	s.26(1) .....	513
	s.26(3) .....	510
	Sch.3, para.2(1) .....	1030
1995	Sale of Goods (Amendment) Act .....	1024
	s.1(3) .....	1024
	s.2(a) .....	1024
	s.2(d) .....	919
1996	Police Act (c.16)—
	s.25(1) .....	93
1996	Employment Rights Act (c.18)—
	Pt II .....	786
	Pt VIII .....	1030
	Pt X .....	988, 1029
	s.1 .....	176
	ss.2–4 .....	176
	s.11 .....	176
	s.14(4) .....	698

1996	Employment Rights Act— cont.
	s.64 .....	875
	s.86 .....	3
	s.94 .....	843
	ss.113–117 .....	1030
	s.123(1) .....	987
	s.129(9) .....	1030
	s.130 .....	1030
1996	Arbitration Act (c.23) .....	447, 448, 656
	s.1(b) .....	448
	s.4 .....	447
	s.5(1) .....	447, 449
	s.7 .....	851
	s.9(4) .....	447
	s.30(1)(a) .....	482
	s.40(2)(b) .....	823
	s.41 .....	823
	s.41(2) .....	10, 32, 35
	s.41(3) .....	10, 32, 33, 35
	s.45 .....	449
	s.45(1) .....	449
	s.69 .....	449
	s.69(1) .....	449
	s.69(2) .....	449
	s.69(3) .....	449
	s.81(1)(c) .....	448
	s.82(1) .....	449
	s.87 .....	274
	ss.89–91 .....	269
	s.91 .....	448
	Sch.1 .....	447
1996	Offensive Weapons Act (c.26)—
	s.6 .....	12
	s.6(1) .....	550
1996	Family Law Act (c.27)—
	Pt II .....	441
	s.3(1)(c) .....	441
	s.3(20) .....	643
	s.9 .....	441
	s.9(2)(b) .....	441
	s.15 .....	393
	s.33(1)(b)(i) .....	440
	s.36 .....	444
	s.38 .....	444
	s.62(1)(a) .....	444
	s.62(3)(e) .....	440
	Sch.2 .....	393
	Sch.2, para.4 .....	422
1996	Defamation Act (c.31)—
	s.2(6) .....	41
1996	Trading Schemes Act (c.32) .....	429
1996	Trusts of Land and Appointment of Trustees Act (c.47)—
	s.2(6) .....	545
	Sch.2 .....	545
1997	Local Government (Contracts) Act .....	563
1998	Late Payment of Commercial Debts (Interest) Act (c.20)—
	s.1(1) .....	994, 995
	s.1(2) .....	994
	s.2(1) .....	994
	s.2(2) .....	994
1998	Late Payment of Commercial Debts (Interest) Act— cont.
	s.2(3) .....	994
	s.2(4) .....	994
	s.2(7) .....	994
	s.3 .....	994, 995
	s.4 .....	994, 1039
	s.4(2) .....	994
	s.4(3) .....	994
	s.4(5) .....	994
	s.5 .....	995
	s.5A .....	996
	s.7(2) .....	995
	s.8(1) .....	995
	s.8(3) .....	995
	s.8(4) .....	995
	s.9 .....	995
	s.9(1)(b) .....	258
	s.9(3)(a) .....	258
	s.10(1) .....	995
	s.14 .....	995
	s.14(2) .....	253
	s.14(3) .....	995
1998	European Communities (Amendment) Act (c.21) .....	4
1998	National Minimum Wage Act (c.39) ....	3
	s.20 .....	283
	s.21(3) .....	936
	s.49 .....	3
1998	Competition Act (c.41) .....	475
	Pt I .....	475, 477
	s.1 .....	374, 666
	s.2 .....	476, 666
	s.2(1) .....	475, 513
	s.2(2)(a) .....	476
	s.2(4) .....	475, 513
	s.2(8) .....	475
	s.4 .....	476, 620
	ss.4 to 9 .....	666
	s.6 .....	476
	s.18 .....	4, 477
	s.39 .....	477
	s.47A .....	476
	s.47B .....	476
	s.50 .....	694
	s.50(1) .....	476
	s.50(2) .....	476
	s.50(5) .....	476
	s.60 .....	475
	Sch.3, para.7(1) .....	620
1998	Human Rights Act (c.42) .....	480
	Pt I .....	4, 5
	s.1 .....	4, 5, 452, 480
	s.1(1) .....	179
	s.4 .....	179
	s.6 .....	467, 480
	s.12 .....	1029
	Sch.1 .....	4, 5, 452, 467, 480, 482, 606, 1019
1999	Road Traffic (NHS Charges) Act (c.3)—
	s.1 .....	721

1999	Road Traffic (NHS Charges) Act— cont.
	s.18(2) .....	721
1999	Water Industry Act (c.9) .....	6
1999	Access to Justice Act (c.22)—
	s.27 .....	431
1999	Employment Relations Act (c.26)—
	s.4 .....	843
	s.7 .....	1030
	s.8 .....	1030
	s.9 .....	1030
	Sch.3, para.11 .....	843
	Sch.4 .....	1030
1999	Welfare Reform and Pensions Act (c.30)—
	s.11 .....	700
1999	Contracts (Rights of Third Parties) Act (c.31) ....	83, 129, 130, 153, 263, 578, 580, 620, 637, 643, 651, 682, 730, 748, 756, 839, 1022, 1036, 1038
	s.1 .....	612, 656, 657, 662, 665
	s.1(1) .....	130, 612, 627, 651, 653, 655, 656, 662, 670, 673, 730
	s.1(1)(a) .....	602, 630, 651, 652, 674
	s.1(1)(b) .....	630, 649, 651, 653, 654, 674
	s.1(2) .....	612, 627, 649, 653, 654, 655, 659, 670, 674, 730, 732
	s.1(3) .....	602, 612, 627, 655, 671, 723, 731
	s.1(4) .....	653, 732
	s.1(5) .....	656, 664, 1036, 1040
	s.1(6) .....	638, 652, 653, 655, 661
	s.1(7) .....	651, 673
	s.2 ....	581, 588, 627, 648, 649, 652, 653, 654, 663, 667
	s.2(1) .....	153, 659, 663
	s.2(1)(a) .....	658
	s.2(1)(b) .....	658
	s.2(1)(c) .....	658
	s.2(2)(a) .....	658
	s.2(2)(b) .....	658
	s.2(3)(a) .....	659
	s.2(3)(b) .....	659
	s.2(6) .....	660
	s.3 .....	581, 627, 652, 653, 660
	s.3(1) .....	660, 663
	s.3(2) .....	153, 636, 660, 663, 732
	s.3(2)(b) .....	673
	s.3(3) .....	660
	s.3(4) .....	603, 656, 664
	s.3(5) .....	660
	s.3(6) .....	636, 656, 657, 664
	s.4 .....	186, 581
	s.5 .....	666
	s.5(2) .....	732
	s.6(1) .....	581, 661
	s.6(2) .....	581, 586
	s.6(3) .....	581, 586, 662
	s.6(4) .....	662
	s.6(5) .....	581, 630, 661, 662
	s.6(5)(b) .....	661

1999	Contracts (Rights of Third Parties) Act— cont.
	s.7(1) .....	581, 582, 627, 643, 645, 652, 653, 662, 663, 674
	s.7(3) .....	664
	s.7(4) .....	656, 664
	s.8 .....	656, 661, 664
	s.8(1) .....	656
	s.8(2) .....	657
	s.10(2) .....	581
	s.10(3) .....	581
1999	Carriage of Goods by Sea Act—
	s.3(3) .....	704
2000	Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act (c.6)—
	s.73 .....	369
	s.130 .....	523, 926
	s.130(1)(a) .....	369
	s.134 .....	369
	s.143 .....	501, 502
	s.148 .....	369
2000	Electronic Communications Act (c.7)—
	s.7 .....	186
	s.8 .....	186
	s.8(2)(c) .....	187
2000	Financial Services and Markets Act (c.8)—
	s.20 .....	150
	s.20(2)(b) .....	513
	ss.26–30 .....	150
	s.26(1) .....	434, 486, 488, 491, 513
	s.26(2) .....	488, 491, 495
	s.27(1) .....	434, 488, 491, 513
	s.27(2) .....	491, 495
	s.28(3)–(6) .....	488, 491
	s.28(7) .....	488
	s.32 .....	486
	s.81 .....	393
	s.86 .....	341, 343, 347, 393, 399
	s.90 .....	341, 343, 347, 351, 399
	s.103(4) .....	16
	s.118 .....	391
	s.123 .....	391
	s.253 .....	249
	s.272(2) .....	488
	s.397 .....	369
	s.412 .....	521, 526, 527
	Sch.2 .....	521
2000	Limited Liability Partnerships Act (c.12)—
	s.1 .....	546
	s.1(2) .....	47, 563, 705
	s.1(3) .....	47, 563
	s.1(5) .....	563
	s.1–3 .....	155
	s.2 .....	47, 563
	s.3 .....	47
	s.4 .....	546
	s.5 .....	546
	s.5(1)(a) .....	586
	s.5(1)(c) .....	586

2000	Limited Liability Partnerships Act— cont.		2001	Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act (c.24)—
	s.5(2) .....	1063		s.1 .....	502
	s.6(1) .....	705		Sch.1 .....	502
	s.6(2) .....	714	2002	Land Registration Act (c.9) .....	53, 187
	s.6(3) .....	155		Pt 8 .....	178
	s.6(3)(a) .....	713		s.91(5) .....	159
	s.6(3)(b) .....	715		s.91(9) .....	159
2000	Learning and Skills Act (c.21)—			Sch.3, para.2 .....	177
	s.95 .....	694	2002	Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act (c.15)—
2000	Postal Services Act (c.26)—			s.166 .....	753
	s.89 .....	5, 6	2002	Employment Act (c.22) .....	3
	s.90 .....	5		s.1 .....	1030
	s.91 .....	5	2002	Police Reform Act (c.30)—
2000	Utilities Act (c.27)—			s.48 .....	92
	s.44 .....	6	2002	Education Act (c.32)—
	s.45 .....	6		s.122 .....	4
	s.51 .....	6	2002	Enterprise Act (c.40)—
	s.108 .....	6		s.2(2) .....	284
	Sch.4 .....	6		s.2(3) .....	284
	Sch.7, para.23(2) .....	6		s.8 .....	283
2000	Freedom of Information Act (c.36)—			s.8(1) .....	283
	s.2 .....	457		s.8(2) .....	283
	s.43 .....	457		s.10 .....	283
2000	Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act (c.44)—			s.18 .....	476
	s.1 .....	439		s.19 .....	476
2000	Police Reform Act—			s.232(2)(a) .....	279
	s.48 .....	432

TABLE OF STATUTORY INSTRUMENTS

1976	Consumer Transactions (Restrictions on Statements) Order (SI 1976/1813) .....	284	1993	Commercial Agents (Council Directive) Regulations— cont.
1978	Consumer Transactions (Restrictions on Statements) (Amendment) Order (SI 1978/127) .....	284		reg.10(4) .....	743
1981	Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations (SI 1981/1794)—			reg.13(1) .....	710
	reg.5(1) .....	694, 704		reg.15 .....	750
	reg.5(2) .....	704		reg.16 .....	746, 919
1983	Licensed Dealers (Conduct of Business) Rules (SI 1983/585)—			reg.17 .....	750, 919
	r.18(2) .....	517		reg.17(3)(a) .....	920
1983	Consumer Credit (Agreements) Regulations (SI 1983/1553) .....	171		reg.17(4) .....	920
	Sch.5 .....	177		reg.17(7) .....	920, 958
1985	Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations (SI 1985/805) .....	215, 824		reg.17(8) .....	750
1985	Companies Table A-F (Amendment) Regulations (SI 1985/1052) .....	215		reg.18 .....	919
1987	Consumer Protection (Cancellation of Contracts Concluded away from Business Premises) Regulations (SI 1987/2117) .....	285, 428		reg.18(a) .....	750
1989	Supply of Beer (Loan Ties, Licensed Premises and Wholesale Prices) Order (SI 1989/2258) .....	468		reg.18(b) .....	750
1989	Supply of Beer (Tied Estate) Order (SI 1989/2390) .....	468		reg.19 .....	920
1991	Public Supply Contracts Regulations (SI 1991/2679) .....	15		reg.20(2) .....	460
1991	Public Works Contracts Regulations (SI 1991/2680) .....	15	1993	Commercial Agents (Council Directive) (Amendment) Regulations (SI 1993/3173) .....	709, 750, 919
1992	Utilities Supply and Works Contracts Regulations (SI 1992/3279) .....	15	1993	Public Services Contracts Regulations (SI 1993/3228) .....	15
1992	Package Travel, Package Holidays and Package Tours Regulations (SI 1992/3288) .....	285	1994	Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations (SI 1994/3159) .....	216, 1003
	reg.10(1) .....	872		reg.2(1) .....	268, 278
	reg.12 .....	253		reg.3(1) .....	267, 277
	reg.15(1) .....	758		reg.3(2)(b) .....	273
1993	Estate Agents (Provision of Information) Regulations (SI 1993/859) .....	743		reg.4(2) .....	273
1993	Commercial Agents (Council Directive) Regulations (SI 1993/3053) .....	709, 919		Sch.1(a) to (e) .....	277
	reg.3(1) .....	745		Sch.2 .....	273
	reg.3(2)(a) .....	745		Sch.3, para.1(c) .....	254
	reg.7(1)(b) .....	741		Sch.3, para.1(q) .....	237
	reg.7(2) .....	741, 1043	1995	Public Offers of Securities Regulations (SI 1995/1537) .....	399
	reg.9 .....	741	1995	Collective Redundancies and Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) (Amendment) Regulations (SI 1995/2587) .....	694
	reg.10(1) .....	743	1996	Sex Discrimination and Equal Pay (Miscellaneous Amendments) Regulations (SI 1996/438) .....	4
	reg.10(2) .....	743	1996	Insider Dealing (Securities and Regulated Markets) (Amendment) Order (SI 1996/1561) .....	391
			1997	Supply of Beer (Tied Estate) (Amendment) Order (SI 1997/1740) .....	468
			1998	Commercial Agents (Council Directive) (Amendment) Regulations (SI 1998/2868) .....	709, 919
			1999	Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations (SI 1999/2083) .....	209, 246, 248, 249, 253, 264, 267, 337, 345, 373, 386, 422, 543, 627, 631, 742, 917, 999, 1005

1999 Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts

Regulations—cont.

reg.3(1) .....	267, 268, 269, 270, 277, 278, 279, 283
reg.3(2) .....	280
reg.4(1) .....	268, 269, 1013
reg.4(2)(a) .....	244, 276, 428
reg.4(2)(b) .....	277
reg.5(1) .....	267, 268, 271, 804, 1013
reg.5(1)(a) .....	279
reg.5(2) .....	270, 271, 272, 1006
reg.5(3) .....	270
reg.5(4) .....	270
reg.5(5) ....	58, 274, 389, 743, 764, 781, 1013
reg.6(1) .....	269, 271, 273, 278
reg.6(2) .....	271, 272, 273
reg.6(2)(a) .....	428, 1007
reg.6(2)(b) .....	74, 269, 273, 278
reg.7 .....	283
reg.7(2) .....	222, 280
reg.8 .....	282
reg.8(1) ....	281, 389, 764, 781, 782, 1013
reg.8(2) .....	281
reg.10 .....	284
reg.10(3) .....	284
reg.11 .....	284
reg.11(2) .....	284
reg.12 .....	280, 284
reg.13(2) .....	284
reg.13(3) .....	284
Sch.1, para.1(c) .....	269
Sch.1, para.1(e) .....	269
Sch.1, para.1(f) .....	269
Sch.1, para.1(k) .....	269
Sch.1, para.1(m) .....	269
Sch.2 .....	268, 273, 279, 389, 743
Sch.2, para.1(a) .....	222, 274, 281, 282
Sch.2, para.1(b) ....	222, 237, 274, 281, 282
Sch.2, para.1(c) .....	84, 167, 275
Sch.2, para.1(d) ...	268, 275, 281, 1012, 1013
Sch.2, para.1(e) ....	237, 268, 275, 1006
Sch.2, para.1(f) .....	84, 274
Sch.2, para.1(g) .....	274, 781, 901
Sch.2, para.1(h) ....	268, 273, 275, 281
Sch.2, para.1(i) .....	216, 218, 281
Sch.2, para.1(j) .....	275
Sch.2, para.1(k) .....	272, 274
Sch.2, para.1(l) .....	268, 275, 282
Sch.2, para.1(m) .....	275
Sch.2, para.1(n) .....	274, 275
Sch.2, para.1(o) .....	254, 276, 764
Sch.2, para.1(p) .....	276
Sch.2, para.1(q) .....	272, 274
Sch.2, para.2(b) .....	58
Sch.2, para.2(c) .....	276, 280
Sch.2, para.2(d) .....	276
Sch.2, para.3(g) .....	281
Sch.3, para.1(b) .....	804

1999 Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts

Regulations—cont.

Sch.3, para.1(i) .....	276
Sch.3, para.1(q) .....	804
1999 Unfair Arbitration Agreements (Speci- fied Amount) Order (SI 1999/2167) .....	269, 274, 448
1999 Occupational Pensions (Revaluation) Order (SI 1999/3159)—
reg.4(1) .....	267, 268
reg.8(1) .....	267, 268
1999 Maternity and Parental Leave etc Reg- ulations (SI 1999/3312)—
reg.18 .....	1030
2000 Competition Act 1998 (Land and Verti- cal Agreements Exclusion) Order (SI 2000/310) .....	476
2000 Competition Act 1998 (Transitional, Consequential and Supplemental Provisions) Order (SI 2000/311)—
Art.3 .....	620
2000 Conditional Fee Agreements Regula- tions (SI 2000/692) .....	431
2000 Conditional Fee Agreements Order (SI 2000/823)—
reg.4 .....	431
2000 Railways (Interoperability) (Notified Bodies) Regulations (SI 2000/1674)—
reg.2(4) .....	996
2000 Public Contracts (Works, Services and Supply) (Amendment) Regula- tions (SI 2000/2009) .....	15
2000 Consumer Protection (Distance Sell- ing) Regulations (SI 2000/2334) ....	9, 29, 30
reg.3 .....	30
reg.3(1) .....	252
reg.6 .....	30
reg.7 .....	176
regs 7–18 .....	252
reg.8 .....	176
reg.10 .....	285, 428, 522
reg.13(f) .....	522
reg.13(1)(b) .....	29
reg.14 .....	522
reg.19 .....	252
reg.20 .....	252
reg.22 .....	9
reg.24 .....	9, 783, 820
reg.25 .....	252
reg.27 .....	284
2000 Collective Conditional Fee Agreements Regulations (SI 2000/2988) .....	431
2000 Companies Act 1985 (Electronic Com- munications) Order (SI 2000/3373) .....	215
2001 Limited Liability Partnerships Regula- tions (SI 2001/1090)—
reg.4(1) .....	732
Sch.2 .....	732

2001	Stop Now Orders (EC Directive) Regulations (SI 2001/1422) .....	284	2002	Electronic Commerce (EC Directive) Regulations— cont.
2001	Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Gaming Contracts) Order (SI 2001/2251) .....	521		reg.11(1)(b) .....	285
2001	Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Offers of Securities) Order (SI 2001/2958) .....	399		reg.11(2) .....	30
2001	Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Consequential Amendments and Repeals) Order (SI 2001/3649) .....	16		reg.11(2)(a) .....	26, 30
2002	Damages for Bereavement (Variation of Sum) (England and Wales) Order (SI 2002/644) .....	987		reg.11(3) .....	26, 30
2002	Late Payment of Commercial Debts (Interest) Act 1998 (Commencement No.5) Order (SI 2002/1673) .....	994		reg.12 .....	11
2002	Late Payment of Commercial Debts Regulations (SI 2002/1674)—			reg.13 .....	30
	reg.3 .....	284		reg.15 .....	285
2002	Late Payment of Commercial Debts (Rate of Interest) (No.3) Order (SI 2002/1675) .....	994		reg.16 .....	284
2002	Electronic Commerce (EC Directive) Regulations (SI 2002/2013) ...	17, 26, 30, 187, 285, 520	2002	Sale and Supply of Goods to Consumers Regulations (SI 2002/3045) .....	255
	reg.3(1)(d)(iii) .....	520		reg.2 .....	247, 250
	reg.9 .....	26, 176		reg.3 .....	162, 206, 247, 251, 792
	reg.9(1) .....	285		reg.4 .....	871
	reg.9(4) .....	26, 176		reg.5 .....	247, 251, 360, 376, 760, 788, 803, 945, 952, 1025, 1053
	reg.10 .....	30		reg.6 .....	1053
	reg.10(2) .....	30		reg.7 .....	162, 247, 251, 792
	reg.11 .....	26		reg.8 .....	206
	reg.11(1) .....	285		reg.9 .....	247, 251
				reg.10 .....	247, 251, 792
				reg.13 .....	247, 251, 792
				reg.14 .....	206
				reg.14(2) .....	247
				reg.14(3) .....	247, 269
				reg.15 .....	583, 706
				reg.15(1) .....	163, 250
				reg.15(2) .....	250
				reg.16 .....	77, 250
			2002	Regulatory Reform (Removal of 20 Member Limit in Partnerships etc.) Order (SI 2002/3203) .....	514

MISCELLANEOUS

Council Directive 68/151 .....	561	European Community Treaty— cont.
77/187 .....	694	Art. 85(2) .....	475
85/577 .....	287	(3) .....	475
86/653 .....	655	Art. 86 .....	4, 477
89/592 .....	391	German Civil Code
91/533 .....	176	§ 321 .....	863
93/13 .....	284, 285	Vienna Convention on Contracts for the Inter-
97/7 .....	29, 30, 284, 285	national Sale of Goods
00/7 .....	29, 30, 176	Art. 1 .....	283
00/31 .....	30, 285	Art. 2(a) .....	283
00/35 .....	284	(d) .....	284
European Community Treaty		Art. 6 .....	283
Art. 28 .....	477	Art. 15(1) .....	29
Art. 30 .....	477	Art. 16(1) .....	30
Art. 39 .....	477	(2) .....	41
Art. 43 .....	477	Art. 18(2) .....	29, 41
Art. 48 .....	477	Art. 19(2) .....	19
Art. 52 .....	477	Art. 21(2) .....	30
Art. 81 .....	477	Art. 22 .....	30
Art. 82 .....	4	Art. 24 .....	30, 41
Art. 85 .....	475, 476	Art. 25 .....	803
(1) .....	475	Art. 49(1) .....	803
(a) .....	476	(b) .....	864
		Art. 63 .....	864
		Art. 64(1)(b) .....	864

CHAPTER ONE

INTRODUCTION<sup>1</sup>

A CONTRACT is an agreement giving rise to obligations which are enforced or recognised by law. The factor which distinguishes contractual from other legal obligations is that they are based on the agreement of the contracting parties. This proposition remains generally true, even though it is subject to a number of important qualifications.

The first such qualification is that the law is often concerned with the objective appearance, rather than with the actual fact, of agreement: a person is bound “whatever [his] real intention may be”, if “a reasonable man would believe that he was assenting to the terms proposed by the other party and that other party upon that belief enters into a contract with him”.<sup>2</sup> This objective principle is based on the needs of commercial convenience. Considerable uncertainty would result if A, after inducing B reasonably to believe that he (A) had agreed to certain terms, could then escape liability merely by showing that he had no “real intention” to enter into that agreement. The principle is an important one; but it would be wrong to say that the law of contract has no concern at all with actual agreement. This would put too much emphasis on the exceptional situation; for in most cases, the appearance corresponds with the fact of agreement. And the principle is not purely objective: A is not bound merely because “a reasonable man would believe that he was assenting to the terms proposed by the other party”. In particular, there will be no contract if (in spite of the objective appearance of agreement) B actually knows that A in fact has no intention to contract with him, or to contract on the terms alleged.<sup>3</sup> A subjective element thus qualifies the objective principle; and this follows from the purpose of that principle, which is to protect B from the prejudice which he might suffer as a result of relying on a false appearance of agreement. There is clearly no need in this way to protect a party who knows that the objective appearance does not correspond with reality.<sup>4</sup> It also follows from the purpose of the objective principle that it will not apply where A’s apparent assent is based on a mistake induced by B’s negligence.<sup>5</sup> More generally, it may be said that the objective principle applies only where serious inconvenience would be caused by allowing a party to rely on his “real intention”. In the interests of convenience the law may sometimes hold that there is a contract although there was not even the objective appearance of an agreement.<sup>6</sup> It does not follow that the law is not concerned with any sort of agreement at all: to allege that this was the position “would introduce into the law of contract a novel heresy”.<sup>7</sup>

---

<sup>1</sup> See Hughes Parry, The Sanctity of Contracts in English Law.

<sup>2</sup> Smith v Hughes (1871) L.R. 6 Q.B. 597 at 607; see below, p.303 Cambridge Nutrition Ltd v BBC [1990] 3 All E.R. 523 at 542. Howarth, 100 L.Q.R. 265; Vorster, 103 L.Q.R. 274; Howarth, 103 L.Q.R. 527; Goddard, 7 Legal Studies 263; de Moor, 106 L.Q.R. 632.

<sup>3</sup> e.g. below, pp.8–9, 198, 307.

<sup>4</sup> For the further question whether the objective principle protects the “other party” where he has no view on the question whether the objective appearance corresponded with reality, see below, p.9.

<sup>5</sup> e.g., below pp.309, 322; cf. Normich Union Fire Insurance Society Ltd v Price [1934] A.C. 455 at 463.

<sup>6</sup> See below, p.41.

<sup>7</sup> The Hannah Blumenthal [1983] 1 A.C. 854 at 916–917.

The idea that contractual obligations are based on agreement must, secondly, be qualified because contracting parties are normally expected to observe certain standards of behaviour. These are the result of terms implied by law<sup>8</sup> into certain types of contract, for example, into contracts for the sale of goods or of employment. The parties may be able to vary or exclude some such terms by contrary agreement; but unless they do so they are bound by many duties to which they have not expressly agreed and of which they may have never thought. Agreement is not the sole factor which determines the legal effects of a contract once it is shown to exist. But it remains an important factor. For example, the intention of the parties determines whether a statement made at the time of contracting has contractual force or is a mere representation<sup>9</sup>; and it determines whether a term which is not expressly stated in the contract should be implied in fact, i.e. because the parties must have intended to incorporate it.<sup>10</sup> It has been suggested that in such cases the courts only say that the intention of the parties is the determining factor, but really apply rules based on various considerations of policy unconnected with that intention.<sup>11</sup> But a bare assertion that the relevant judgments do not mean what they say should not be accepted unless it is supported by argument. Such an argument can, perhaps, be based on the history of the doctrine of frustration, under which contracting parties may be discharged from liability by supervening events<sup>12</sup>: e.g. where such events make performance impossible. The doctrine was at one time justified by saying that the parties had impliedly agreed to be discharged in such circumstances; but many lawyers now prefer to say that the parties are discharged by operation of law, whether they would have agreed to discharge or not. This may be true; but the intention of the parties cannot for that reason be wholly disregarded. Before holding that parties are discharged, the court must find out what they contracted about: they may have deliberately taken the risk of supervening impossibility. The court must decide whether the parties contracted about a certainty or about a possibility; and it does so by ascertaining, as best it can, their intentions in the matter.

The idea that contractual obligations are based on agreement must, thirdly, be qualified in relation to the scope of the principle of freedom of contract.<sup>13</sup> In the nineteenth century, judges took the view that persons of full capacity should in general be allowed to make what contracts they liked: the law only interfered on fairly specific grounds such as misrepresentation, undue influence or illegality.<sup>14</sup> It did not interfere merely because one party was economically more powerful than the other and so able to drive a hard bargain. This attitude became particularly important when the courts recognised the validity of standard form contracts<sup>15</sup> drawn up by one party on terms designed to protect its interests at the expense of those of the other. This practice of contracting on standard terms is now very common; and it is arguable that a customer who contracts on such standard terms has them imposed on him, and does not really “agree” to them at all. This argument is particularly strong where standard terms are used by a monopoly supplier, or where all suppliers in a particular field use the same

---

<sup>8</sup> See below, pp.206 et seq.

<sup>9</sup> See below, p.353.

<sup>10</sup> See below, p.201.

<sup>11</sup> Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract (5th ed.), pp.20–21. (The point was more emphatically put in the 1st ed. at pp.13, 103).

<sup>12</sup> See below, Chap.20.

<sup>13</sup> For an historical account, see Atiyah, The Rise and Fall of Freedom of Contract.

<sup>14</sup> See below, Chaps 9, 10, 11.

<sup>15</sup> See below, Chap.7.

standard terms. The customer's only choice may then be between accepting those terms or doing without the goods or services in question; and often he cannot in practice do without. On the other hand, exact equality of bargaining power is probably rare; and there can be much dispute as to the precise degree of pressure which makes the difference between consent reluctantly given and a state of mind which cannot properly be described as consent at all. The amount of pressure which can be brought to bear on the customer does not depend solely on the respective wealth and power of the parties, but also on market conditions. In a buyer's market, an insistent private customer may be able to induce a normally powerful supplier to modify his standard terms, rather than lose a sale; while in a seller's market a customer may be ready to agree to any terms which the seller puts forward, or be willing to take his chance of the contents of any document put forward by the seller. A person may also agree to contract on a set of terms although he does not know in detail what they provide, e.g. where parties contract on terms settled by a trade association, or where a person takes employment on terms negotiated between employers and a trade union.<sup>16</sup> In such cases the parties would not deny that they had agreed to the terms whatever they might be.

Important inroads on the principle of freedom of contract have been made by legislation passed to redress some real or supposed imbalance of bargaining power. The contents of many contracts of employment are now regulated in some detail by legislation<sup>17</sup>; and many important aspects of the relationship of landlord and tenant are in the case of some tenancies controlled by legislation.<sup>18</sup> Under other statutes, terms are compulsorily implied into contracts and cannot be excluded by contrary agreement<sup>19</sup>; while the validity of standard form contracts is subject to severe legislative restrictions, especially in contracts between a commercial supplier of goods or services and a consumer.<sup>20</sup> In all these cases the main relationship between the parties is still based on agreement, but many of the obligations arising out of it are imposed or regulated by law.

But there are other cases in which the law plays so large, and the agreement of parties so small, a part that it becomes doubtful whether the relationship can still be called contractual. The agreement of the parties may create a status, such as marriage, the main legal incidents of which are fixed by law and cannot be varied by the parties at all.<sup>21</sup> Sometimes, the terms on which a person is employed (especially in the public service) are governed in part by legislation; and in one such case it was said that a claim under the "statutory scheme of employment"<sup>22</sup> could not "be dealt with as though it were an ordinary master and servant claim in which the rights of the parties were regulated solely by contract".<sup>23</sup> Similarly, a member of the armed forces is not in any contractual

---

<sup>16</sup> See below, p.213.

<sup>17</sup> See, e.g. Employment Rights Act 1996, s.86; National Minimum Wage Act 1998; Employment Relations Act 1999; Employment Act 2002.

<sup>18</sup> Rent Act 1977. It is, in general, impossible to "contract out" of the provisions of the Act: see, e.g. s.44(2). cf. Leasehold Reform Act 1967, s.23; Johnson v Moreton [1980] A.C. 37. Housing Act 1988, Pt I indicates some return to freedom of contract, but contrast Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993, s.93.

<sup>19</sup> e.g. Sex Discrimination Act 1975, s.8, amending Equal Pay Act 1970, s.1; cf. National Minimum Wage Act 1998, s.49.

<sup>20</sup> See below, pp.246 et seq.

<sup>21</sup> Bellinger v Bellinger [2001] EWCA Civ 1140; [2002] Fam. 150 at [99] ("marriage . . . is a matter of status and not for the parties alone to decide").

<sup>22</sup> Barber v Manchester Regional Hospital Board [1958] 1 W.L.R. 181 at 196.

<sup>23</sup> Barber's Case, above; for the effect of this distinction on remedies, see below, p.1030.

relationship with the Crown, even if he enlists voluntarily.<sup>24</sup> In a number of further borderline cases, the fact that many of the terms of the relationship are settled by law has not of itself been regarded as decisive. Thus on the one hand the relationship between a general medical practitioner and the health authority in whose area he worked under the National Health Service is not a contractual one.<sup>25</sup> On the other hand, it has been said that a consultant appointed to a post at a hospital under the National Health Service, works under “an ordinary contract between master and servant,” although it is one with a “strong statutory flavour”,<sup>26</sup> as it is governed by regulations made under statutory powers and having the force of law. Similarly, the relationship between the Crown and a lawyer employed in the Crown Prosecution Service is governed by contract in spite of the fact that such a lawyer has considerable independence (which the law would protect) in the exercise of his functions as a member of the Service.<sup>27</sup>

In the cases so far considered the parties are free to decide whether or not to enter into the relationship (though the law may fix some or all of its incidents); but there are other cases in which the law to some extent restricts even this freedom. For example, at common law a common innkeeper may be liable criminally<sup>28</sup> or in tort<sup>29</sup> for refusing, without sufficient excuse, to accommodate a guest. Injunctions may be granted and damages awarded against persons whose withholding of supplies from, for example, distributors amounts to an abuse of dominant position, contrary to European Community or United Kingdom competition law<sup>30</sup>; such remedies are also available against persons whose refusal to make certain contracts amounts to unlawful discrimination on grounds of race, sex or disability<sup>31</sup>; it is unlawful to refuse a person employment “because he is, or is not, a member of a trade union”<sup>32</sup>; and compensation is payable to a person who is excluded from a trade union (except on one of a number of specified

<sup>24</sup> See Grant v S of S for India (1877) 2 C.P.D. 445; Mitchell v R [1896] 1 Q.B. 121n.; Leaman v R [1920] 3 K.B. 663; Kynaston v Attorney-General (1933) 49 T.L.R. 300; dicta in Owners of SS Raphael v Brandy [1911] A.C. 413 at 415 perhaps suggest the contrary: cf. Mitchell, Contracts of Public Authorities, p.41. And see below, p.170.

<sup>25</sup> Roy v Kensington and Chelsea and Westminster Family Practice Committee [1992] 1 A.C. 624; Wadi v Cornwall, etc. Family Practice Committee [1985] I.C.R. 492 at 498; Ealing, Hammersmith and Hounslow Family Health Services Authority v Shukla [1993] I.C.R. 710.

<sup>26</sup> Barber's Case, above; cf. R. v E Berkshire Health Authority, Ex p. Walsh [1985] Q.B. 152; R. v Derbyshire CC, Ex p. Noble [1990] I.C.R. 808; Associated British Ports v T & GWU [1989] 1 W.L.R. 939; cf. the position of school teachers under Education Act 2002, s.122.

<sup>27</sup> R. v Crown Prosecution Service, Ex p. Hogg, The Times, April 14, 1994.

<sup>28</sup> See R. v Ivens (1835) 7 C. & P. 213.

<sup>29</sup> Constantine v Imperial Hotels Ltd [1944] K.B. 693.

<sup>30</sup> Garden Cottage Foods Ltd v Milk Marketing Board [1984] A.C. 130, where the prohibition in question was that contained in Art.86 of the European Community Treaty (now renumbered Art.82 in pursuance of European Communities (Amendment) Act 1998); for a similar prohibition in UK law, see Competition Act 1998, s.18, below, p.477.

<sup>31</sup> See Sex Discrimination Act 1975, Pts II and III and ss.65, 66 and 71 (as amended by Employment Act 1989, ss.1–9); Race Relations Act 1976, Pts II and III and ss.56, 57 and 62. Disability Discrimination Act 1995, ss.4, 5, 12 and 19; Sex Discrimination and Equal Pay (Miscellaneous Amendments) Regulations 1996 (SI 1996/438). Injunctions are not available under these Acts in the employment field: below, p.997. See also Courts and Legal Services Act 1990, s.64; Human Rights Act 1998, s.1 and Sch.1, Pt I, Art.14. By virtue of s.6, this prohibition makes unlawful only the activities of a “public authority” (including a court: s.6(3)(a)) and the question to what extent the Act gives rise to rights between private persons (the question of so-called “horizontal effect”) remains as yet unresolved: see, e.g. Buxton, 116 L.Q.R. 48; Wade, ibid. 217; Hunt, ibid. 423; Bamforth, 117 L.Q.R. 34; [1999] C.L.J. 159; RSPCA v Attorney-General [2002] 1 W.L.R. 448. Such rights could also be affected in consequence of judicial declarations of incompatibility of other legislation with the Convention (to which the Act gives the force of law) under s.4 of the Act. For another suggestion as to possible effects of the Act on private contracts, see below, p.441.

<sup>32</sup> Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992, s.137(1)(a); cf. ibid. s.138(1)(a); under s.140 the remedy (in the last resort) is by way of compensation. cf. Human Rights Act 1998, s.1 and Sch.1, Pt I, Art.11; but see above, n.31.

grounds).<sup>33</sup> Even at common law, a withholding of supplies may, in exceptional circumstances, be restrained by injunction<sup>34</sup>; and it is possible that a refusal to enter into a contract might similarly be restrained where it gave effect to a policy of discrimination even though it was not unlawful by statute; e.g. where a person was excluded from an association (and so deprived of the opportunity to do work available only to its members) on religious or political grounds that had no bearing on his competence to do the type of work in question.<sup>35</sup> In all these cases a relationship which results from some degree of legal compulsion is nevertheless regarded as contractual, because the parties still have considerable freedom to regulate its incidents. But there are other cases in which a relationship created by legal compulsion is clearly not contractual. A person whose property is compulsorily acquired against his will does not make a contract with the acquiring authority even though he receives compensation<sup>36</sup>; a patient who is treated in a hospital under the National Health Service is not considered to make a contract with the hospital authority<sup>37</sup>; nor does one to whom medicines are supplied under the Service make a contract to buy them, even if he pays a prescription charge<sup>38</sup>; and at common law, a person who posted a letter or parcel did not make a contract with the Post Office<sup>39</sup>; and the relations that now arise between such a person and a "universal [postal] service provider" appears similarly to be governed, not by contract, but by a scheme made under statute.<sup>40</sup> The borderline between the two classes of cases is by no means clearly defined: it is, for example, doubtful whether there is a contract between a patient and his doctor or dentist under the National Health Service, or between a client and his lawyer under the Legal Aid Scheme.<sup>41</sup> In the case of arrangements for the supply of gas, electricity or water, there may be a contract even though the supplier is bound by statute to make the supply, so long as the terms on which the supply is made are not also determined by

<sup>33</sup> Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992, ss.174–177, as inserted by Trade Union and Employment Rights Act 1993, s.14; cf. Disability Discrimination Act 1995, s.13.

<sup>34</sup> Acrow (Automation) Ltd v Rex Chainbelt Inc [1971] 1 W.L.R. 1676.

<sup>35</sup> A suggestion based on Nagle v Feilden [1966] 2 Q.B. 633 (where the refusal was based on sex discrimination before that was made unlawful by statute); see below, p.474. Some support for this view may be given by Human Rights Act 1998, s.1 and Sch.1, Pt I, Arts 9 and 14; but see above, n.31. The availability of injunctive relief (apart from statute) against such refusal has been doubted: R. v Disciplinary Committee of the Jockey Club, Ex p. Aga Khan [1993] 1 W.L.R. 909 at 933.

<sup>36</sup> See Sovmots Investments Ltd v S of S for the Environment [1977] Q.B. 411 at 443, affirmed but without reference to this point [1979] A.C. 144. If a price is agreed after notice to treat, there is said to be a "statutory contract": Munton v GLC [1976] 1 W.L.R. 649; cf. Harding v Metropolitan Ry (1872) L.R. 7 Ch.App. 154 at 158. Even where this is not the case, the transaction may be regarded as a contract for the purpose of a particular statute: Ridge Nominees v IRC [1962] Ch. 376. A variety of techniques is used by legislation which entitles tenants to acquire the premises: contractual concepts are used by Landlord and Tenant Act 1987, Pt I and Leasehold Reform and Urban Development Act 1993, Pt I (see especially s.24(3)), while Pt III of the 1987 Act (above) (as amended by Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993, s.85) (above) and Housing Act 1985, Pt V use the concepts of compulsory purchase. Other statutes using non-contractual techniques are Access to Neighbouring Land Act 1992, s.3(2) (compensation for grant of access to land "without the consent" of the owner); New Roads and Street Works Act 1991, s.15 (liability for tolls).

<sup>37</sup> Allen v Bloomsbury Health Authority [1993] 1 All E.R. 651; see below, p.814; cf. also National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990, s.4(3), denying contractual status to arrangements for the provision of goods or services by one "health service body" to another under an "NHS contract".

<sup>38</sup> See Pfizer Corp v Ministry of Health [1965] A.C. 512; Appleby v Sleep [1968] 1 W.L.R. 948; Re Medicaments Reference [1970] 1 W.L.R. 1339.

<sup>39</sup> Whitfield v Lord Le Despencer (1778) Cowp. 754 at 764.

<sup>40</sup> Postal Services Act 2000, s.89; for exclusion and limitation of liability, see ibid. ss.90, 91.

<sup>41</sup> cf. Legal Aid Act 1988, ss.9(7), 24 and Sch.3, Pt 1, para.2(1); s.16(10) refers to a contract between the legally assisted person and the Board (not to one between that person and the legal adviser). For the power of barristers to make contracts for the provision of services as such, and for the power of the General Council of the Bar to prohibit or restrict such contracts, see Courts and Legal Services Act 1990, s.61.

legislation so as to leave no scope for bargaining between the supplier and the customer.<sup>42</sup>

In spite of the above qualifications, it remains broadly true that the law of contract is concerned with the circumstances in which agreements are legally binding. Thus it deals mainly with the two questions of agreement and legal effects or enforceability. The rules relating to offer and acceptance,<sup>43</sup> for instance, deal with the process of reaching agreement. Those relating to consideration and contractual intention<sup>44</sup> concern the requirements which must normally be satisfied before an agreement will be legally enforced; while the rules relating to misrepresentation and illegality<sup>45</sup> deal with the effect of special factors on account of which the law may refuse to enforce agreements which would, apart from such factors, be binding. The rules which limit the contractual capacity of certain individuals<sup>46</sup> are based partly on the view that certain classes of persons cannot form the requisite contractual intention, and partly on the view that it is undesirable to enforce agreements against them. The rules relating to mistake are based partly on the view that there is no agreement when the parties are at cross-purposes on a fundamental point,<sup>47</sup> and partly on the view that an agreement has no legal effect if both parties were under a fundamental mistake as to the subject-matter.<sup>48</sup> The rules relating to the contents of a contract, performance, breach and frustration<sup>49</sup> are again partly based on the agreement between the parties, and partly on rules of law which determine the precise legal effect of that agreement.

The bulk of the law of contract is concerned with the questions of agreement and legal enforceability; but a number of other topics also call for discussion. Thus the rules relating to plurality, third parties, assignment and agency<sup>50</sup> determine who is bound by, and entitled to the benefit of, a contract. The rules relating to remedies<sup>51</sup> assume the existence of an enforceable agreement, and deal with the methods of, and limits on, enforcement. These are in principle determined by law. Thus the agreement of the parties does not determine whether a contract is to be enforced specifically, or only by an award of damages; though that agreement may be relevant in determining the precise amount of damages which will be awarded for a breach of contract.

---

<sup>42</sup> See, for example, Electricity Act 1989, ss.16 and 17 (as substituted by Utilities Act 2000, s.44) and ibid. Sch.6 (as substituted by Utilities Act 2000, s.51 and Sch.4). The repeal of s.18 of the 1989 Act by s.45 of the 2000 Act, abolishing charges by reference to tariffs, appears to undermine the reasoning of Norweb plc v Dixon [1995] 1 W.L.R. 635, that there was no contract between the supplier and a "tariff" customer; see also the 2000 Act, s.108 and Sch.7, para.23(2): supplier deemed to have contracted with former tariff customers. The position appears to be the same with regard to the supply of gas: see the repeal by s.89 of the 2000 Act of Gas Act 1986, s.10(2), which appears to have assumed that there was no contract between the supplier and a domestic customer. In the case of water supplies, the relations between suppliers and domestic consumers appear to remain non-contractual as even the terms of such supply are regulated by legislation: see Water Industry Act 1991, ss.53, 54; contrast ibid. ss.55, 56 (terms of bulk supply to be determined by agreement or by the Director); see also Water Industry Act 1999; and cf. Competition and Services (Utilities) Act, ss.1, 44, also using non-contractual language in relation to the supply of water, gas and telephone services. In Hamilton v Papkura DC [2002] UKPC 9; The Times, March 5, 2002 the Privy Council regarded the relationship between a New Zealand local authority (which was under a statutory duty to supply water) and a person to whom the supply was made as contractual, but held there was no breach.

<sup>43</sup> See below, Chap.2.

<sup>44</sup> See below, Chaps 3, 4.

<sup>45</sup> See below, Chaps 9, 11; see also Chaps 10, 12.

<sup>46</sup> See below, Chap.13.

<sup>47</sup> See below, Chap.8, s.2.

<sup>48</sup> See below, Chap.8, s.1.

<sup>49</sup> See below, Chaps 6, 18, 19, 20.

<sup>50</sup> See below, Chaps 14 to 17.

<sup>51</sup> See below, Chap.21.

Remedies for breach of contract are discussed in Chapter 21; but one fundamental point relating to them must be made at this stage. Such remedies might attempt to do one of two things. First, they might attempt to put the injured party into the position in which he would have been if the contract had never been made. This would require the party in breach to restore anything that he had received under the contract, and also to compensate the injured party for any loss that he had suffered by acting in reliance on the contract. Such remedies are said to protect the injured party's restitution and reliance interests.<sup>52</sup> But remedies for breach of contract go beyond the pursuit of these objectives. Their distinguishing feature is that they seek to put the injured party into the position in which he would have been if the contract had been performed.<sup>53</sup> If, for example a seller agrees to sell goods for less than they are worth, and then fails to deliver them, he must compensate the buyer for not having received goods which are worth more than he had agreed to pay for them. Conversely, if a buyer contracts to buy goods for more than they are worth, and then fails to pay for them, he is liable for the agreed price<sup>54</sup>: it is quite immaterial that the value of the goods with which the seller has parted was lower than that price. What the law does in these cases is to protect the injured party's expectation interest.<sup>55</sup> Sometimes it does so directly, by actually ordering the party in breach to perform his part of the contract.<sup>56</sup> Sometimes it does so indirectly by ordering him to pay the injured party damages for loss of his bargain.

The result of awarding damages on this basis is to compensate the injured party, not because he is worse off than he was before the contract was made, but because the other party has failed to make him better off.<sup>57</sup> The law of contract takes this position in response to the needs of commercial certainty. It is probably going too far to say that business could not be carried on at all if the law did not protect the injured party's expectation interest. Some industries (such as the credit betting industry) are carried on without this, or indeed any other legally recognised, sanction.<sup>58</sup> But in relation to other spheres of commercial activity, such as share and commodity markets and the insurance industry (to take a few random examples)<sup>59</sup> the protection of expectations is of crucial importance. In these cases, that protection promotes stability and furthers one of the central purposes of the law of contract in providing the legal framework required for commercial relations.

---

<sup>52</sup> See below, pp.940–942.

<sup>53</sup> See below, pp.936–940.

<sup>54</sup> Assuming that the conditions stated on pp.1013–1019, below are satisfied.

<sup>55</sup> See below, pp.936–940.

<sup>56</sup> See below, pp.1019–1046.

<sup>57</sup> South Australian Asset Management Corp v York Montague Ltd [1997] A.C. 191 at 216.

<sup>58</sup> See below, pp.520–521.

<sup>59</sup> Another may be the sale of houses, where the fact that agreements “subject to contract” have no binding force has been strongly criticised: see below, p.52.

CHAPTER TWO

AGREEMENT<sup>1</sup>

THE first requisite of a contract is that the parties should have reached agreement. Generally speaking, an agreement is made when one party accepts an offer made by the other. Further requirements are that the agreement must be certain and final; and special problems arise from conditional agreements.

SECTION 1. OFFER

1. Offer Defined

(1) The objective test

An offer is an expression of willingness to contract on specified terms, made with the intention that it is to become binding as soon as it is accepted by the person to whom it is addressed.<sup>2</sup> Under the objective test of agreement,<sup>3</sup> an apparent intention to be bound may suffice, i.e. the alleged offeror (A) may be bound if his words or conduct<sup>4</sup> are such as to induce a reasonable person to believe that he intends to be bound, even though in fact he has no such intention. This was, for example, held to be the case where a university offered a place to an intending student as a result of a clerical error<sup>5</sup>; and where a solicitor who had been instructed by his client to settle a claim for $155,000 by mistake offered to settle it for the higher sum of £150,000.<sup>6</sup> Similarly, if A offers to sell a book to B for £10 and B accepts the offer, A cannot escape liability merely by showing that his actual intention was to offer the book to B for £20, or that he intended the offer to relate to a book different from that specified in the offer.<sup>7</sup>

Whether A is actually bound by an acceptance of his apparent offer depends on the state of mind of the alleged offeree (B); to this extent, the test is not purely objective.<sup>8</sup> With regard to B's state of mind, there are three possibilities. First, B actually believes that A intends to be bound: here the objective test is satisfied so that B can hold A to his apparent offer even though A did not, subjectively, have the requisite intention.<sup>9</sup> The general view is that there is no further requirement that A must also be aware of B's state

---

<sup>1</sup> Winfield, 55 L.Q.R. 499; Kahn, 72 S.A.I.J. 246; Nussbaum, 36 Col.L.Rev. 920.

<sup>2</sup> e.g. Storer v Manchester CC [1974] 1 W.L.R. 1403; contrast André & Cie v Cook Industries Inc [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 463; Schuldenfrei v Hilton (Inspector of Taxes) [1998] S.T.C. 404.

<sup>3</sup> See above, p.1; First Energy (UK) Ltd v Hungarian International Bank Ltd [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 195 at 201; Ignazio Messina & Co v Polskie Linie Oceaniczne [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 566 at 571; Bowerman v Association of British Travel Agents Ltd [1995] N.I.J. 1815.

<sup>4</sup> For offers made by conduct, see below, at nn.15 to 25; The Aramis [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 213 (where the objective test was not satisfied) G Percy Trentham Ltd v Archital Luxfer Ltd [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 25 at 27.

<sup>5</sup> Moran v University College Salford (No.2), The Times, November 23, 1993.

<sup>6</sup> OT Africa Line Ltd v Vickers plc [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 700.

<sup>7</sup> cf. Centrovincial Estates plc v Merchant Investors Assurance Co Ltd [1983] Com.L.R. 158; cited with approval in Whittaker v Campbell [1984] Q.B. 318 at 327, in The Antelizo [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 130 at 146, affirmed [1988] 1 W.L.R. 603, and in OT Africa Line Ltd v Vickers plc [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 700 at 702.

<sup>8</sup> The Hannah Blumenthal [1983] 1 A.C. 854 at 924.

<sup>9</sup> The Splendid Sun [1981] 1 Q.B. 694, as explained in The Hannah Blumenthal, above; Challoner v Bower (1984) 269 F.G. 725; The Multibank Holsatia [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 486 at 493.

of mind.<sup>10</sup> Secondly, B knows that, in spite of the objective appearance, A does not have the requisite intention: here A is not bound; the objective test does not apply in favour of B as he knows the truth about A's actual intention.<sup>11</sup> Thirdly, B has simply not formed any view about A's intention, so that B neither believes that A has the requisite intention nor knows that A does not have this intention: this situation has given rise to a conflict of judicial opinion. One view is that A is not bound: in other words, the objective test is satisfied only if A's conduct is such as to induce a reasonable person to believe that A had the requisite intention and if B actually held that belief.<sup>12</sup> The opposing view is that (in our third situation) A is bound: in other words, the objective test is satisfied if A's words or conduct would induce a reasonable person to believe that A had the requisite intention, so long as B does not actually know that A does not have any such intention.<sup>13</sup> This latter view no doubt facilitates proof of agreement, but it is hard to see why B should be protected in the situation to which it refers. Where B has no positive belief in A's (apparent) intention to be bound, he cannot be prejudiced by acting in reliance on it; and the purpose of the objective test is simply to protect B from the risk of suffering such prejudice.<sup>14</sup> The test embodies a principle of convenience; it is not based on any inherent superiority of objective over subjective criteria. It is therefore submitted that the objective test should not apply to our third situation since in it B's state of mind is such that there is no risk of his suffering any prejudice as a result of the objective appearance of A's intention.

(2) Conduct as an offer

An offer may be addressed either to an individual, or to a group of persons, or to the world at large; and it may be made expressly or by conduct. At common law, a person who had contracted to sell goods and tendered different goods (or a different quantity) might be considered to make an offer by conduct to sell the goods which he had tendered.<sup>15</sup> It seems that an offer to sell can still be made in this way, though by legislation against "inertia selling" the dispatch of goods without any prior request from the recipient may amount to a gift to him, rather than to an offer to sell.<sup>16</sup>

<sup>10</sup> The suggestion that A must be aware of B's state of mind was made by Lord Diplock in The Hannah Blumenthal [1983] 1 A.C. 854 at 916 but Lord Brightman's contrary view, expressed ibid. at 924 has been generally preferred: see The Multibank Holsatia, above, at 492.

<sup>11</sup> See above, p.1, Ignazio Messina & Co v Polskie Linie Oceaniczne [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 566 at 571 ("not communicated to or otherwise apparent to the other party [B]"); OT Africa Line Ltd v Vickers plc [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 700 at 703; and see the authorities cited in n.13, below.

<sup>12</sup> The Hannah Blumenthal, above, as interpreted in The Leonidas D [1985] 1 W.L.R. 925; Beatson, 102 L.Q.R. 19; Atiyah, ibid. p.392; The Agrabele [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 223, esp. at 235; cf. Cie. Française d'Importation, etc. SA v Deutsche Continental Handelsgesellschaft [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 592 at 597; Amherst v James Walker Goldsmith and Silversmith Ltd [1983] Ch.305.

<sup>13</sup> The Golden Bear [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 330 at 341 (doubted on another point at p.32, below); this view was approved in The Antclizo [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 130 at 143 but doubted ibid. at 147 (affirmed [1988] 1 W.L.R. 603 without reference to the point); and semble in Floating Dock Ltd v Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank Ltd [1986] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 65 at 77; The Multibank Holsatia [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 486 at 492 ("at least did not conflict with [B's] subjective understanding"); The Maritime Winner [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 506 at 515 (using similar language). A dictum in The Amazonia [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 238 at 242 goes even further in suggesting that there may be a contract even though "neither [party] intended to make a contract".

<sup>14</sup> See above, p.1.

<sup>15</sup> Hart v Mills (1846) 15 L.J.Ex. 200; below, p.17; cf. Steven v Bromley & Son [1919] 2 K.B. 722; The Saronikos [1986] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 277.

<sup>16</sup> Consumer Protection (Distance Selling) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/2334 (implementing Dir.97/7 ([1997] O.J. L144/19)), regs 22 (amending Unsolicited Goods and Services Act 1971) and 24; quære whether these provisions would apply where an order had been placed but the quantity sent grossly exceeded that ordered.

A number of cases raise the further question whether the "conduct" from which an offer may be inferred can take the form of inactivity. The issue in these cases was whether an agreement to submit a dispute to arbitration could be said to have been "abandoned" where, over a long period of time, neither party had taken any steps in the arbitration proceedings. In cases of "inordinate and inexcusable delay" of this kind, arbitrators now have a statutory power to dismiss the claim for want of prosecution<sup>17</sup>; and it is also open to the parties expressly to provide for "lapse" of the claim if steps in the proceedings are not taken within a specified period.<sup>18</sup> But, conversely, the statutory power to dismiss the claim for want of prosecution may be excluded by agreement,<sup>19</sup> and where it is so excluded the question of abandonment can still arise in the present context. Such a question could also arise in the context of the alleged abandonment of some other type of right or remedy,<sup>20</sup> to which no similar legislative provision extends. The arbitration cases indicate that, when inactivity is combined with other circumstances (such as destruction of relevant files),<sup>21</sup> it may, on the objective test, amount to an offer of abandonment, even though those other circumstances would not, of themselves, constitute evidence from which an offer could be inferred. But when inactivity stands alone, it is unlikely<sup>22</sup> to have this effect, for it is equivocal and explicable on other grounds, such as inertia or forgetfulness, or the simple tactical consideration that the party alleged to have made the offer does not wish to re-activate his opponent's counter-claims.<sup>23</sup> Consequently, it will not normally suffice to induce a reasonable person in the position of the other party to believe that an offer is being made<sup>24</sup>; and the mere fact that the other party nevertheless had this belief cannot suffice to turn the former party's inactivity into such an offer.<sup>25</sup>

2. Offer Distinguished from Invitation to Treat

When parties negotiate with a view to making a contract, many preliminary communications may pass between them before a definite offer is made. One party may simply respond to a request for information (e.g. by stating the price at which he might be <sup>17</sup> Arbitration Act 1996, s.41(3), replacing Arbitration Act 1950, s.13A. Under s.13A it had been held that the court could take into account delay occurring before the section came into force: The Boucraa [1994] 1 A.C. 486; and that the court would (mutatis mutandis) apply the same principles to the power to dismiss arbitration proceedings as those which govern the dismissal of an action for want of prosecution: James Lazenby & Co v McNicholas Construction Co Ltd [1995] 1 W.L.R. 615.

<sup>18</sup> See the GAFTA arbitration rules referred to in Cargill SpA v Kadinopoulos [1992] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 1.

<sup>19</sup> Arbitration Act 1996, s.41(2) so provides.

<sup>20</sup> cf. Amherst Ltd v James Walker Goldsmith & Silversmith Ltd [1983] Ch.305; Collin v Duke of Westminster [1985] Q.B. 581; MSC Mediterranean Shipping Co SA v BRE Metro Ltd [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 239; Fenton Ins Ltd v Gothaer Versicherungsbank VVaG [1991] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 172 at 180.

<sup>21</sup> The Splendid Sun [1981] Q.B. 694, as explained in The Hannah Blumenthal [1983] 1 A.C. 854 (though this explanation was doubted in Cie. Française d'Importation, etc. SA v Deutsche Conti Handelsgesellschaft [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 592 at 599); Tracom SA v Anton C Nielsen [1984] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 195 (as to which see below, p.33 n.64); The Multibank Holsatia [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 486; for the question whether such an offer can be accepted by inactivity, see below, p.31.

<sup>22</sup> Unisys International Services Ltd v Eastern Counties Newspapers Group Ltd [1991] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 538 at 553 suggests (with some scepticism) that the possibility cannot be wholly ruled out; cf. The Boucraa [1994] 1 A.C. 486 at 521, describing the "abandonment" approach as "largely useless in practice".

<sup>23</sup> Unisys case, above, at 553.

<sup>24</sup> The Leonidas D [1985] 1 W.L.R. 925; Cie. Française d'Importation, etc. SA v Deutsche Conti Handelsgesellschaft [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 592; The Antelizo [1988] 1 W.L.R. 603; The Agrabele [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 223; The Maritime Winner [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 506; contra, The Golden Bear [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 330 (sed quare: the decision was in part based on the decision at first instance in The Agrabele [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 496, but this was reversed on appeal: [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 223); The Ermoupolis [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 161 at 166; see also below, p.35.

<sup>25</sup> The Antelizo [1988] 1 W.L.R. 603; Davenport, 104 L.Q.R. 493.

prepared to sell a house<sup>26</sup>), or he may make such a request (e.g. where he asks a prospective supplier whether he can supply goods suitable for his purpose).<sup>27</sup> That party is then said to make an “invitation to treat”: he does not make an offer but, invites the other party to do so. The question whether a statement is an offer or an invitation to treat depends primarily on the intention with which it was made. It follows from the nature of an offer as described above<sup>28</sup> that a statement is not an offer if it in terms negatives the maker’s intention to be bound on acceptance: for example, if it expressly provides that he is not to be bound merely by the other party’s notification of assent, but only when he himself has signed the document in which the statement is contained.<sup>29</sup> Apart from this type of case, the wording is not conclusive: a statement may be an invitation to treat, although it contains the word “offer”.<sup>30</sup> Conversely, a statement may be an offer although it is expressed to be an “acceptance,”<sup>31</sup> or although it requests the person to whom it is addressed to make an “offer”.<sup>32</sup>

The distinction between an offer and an invitation to treat is often hard to draw as it depends on the elusive criterion of intention. But there are certain stereotyped situations in which the distinction is determined, at least prima facie, by rules of law. It may be possible to displace these rules by evidence of contrary intention, but in the absence of such evidence they will determine the distinction between offer and invitation to treat, and they will do so without reference to the intention (actual or even objectively ascertained) of the maker of the statement. This is true, for example, in cases of auction sales and shop displays. These and other illustrations of the distinction will be discussed in the following paragraphs.

(1) Auction sales

At an auction sale, the general rule is that the offer is made by the bidder and accepted by the auctioneer when he signifies his acceptance in the customary manner, e.g. by fall of the hammer.<sup>33</sup> Before acceptance the bidder may withdraw his bid and the auctioneer may withdraw the goods. It seems, moreover, that the offer made by each bidder lapses<sup>34</sup> as soon as a higher bid is made. Thus if a higher bid is made and withdrawn the auctioneer can no longer accept the next highest.

When property is put up for auction subject to a reserve price, there is no contract if the auctioneer by mistake purports to accept a bid lower than the reserve price.<sup>35</sup> Where the auction is without reserve, there is no contract of sale between the highest bidder and the owner of the property if the auctioneer refuses to accept the highest bid.

<sup>26</sup> Harvey v Facey [1893] A.C. 552; Gibson v Manchester CC [1979] 1 W.L.R. 294; cf. The Barranduna [1985] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 419 (quotation of freight rates by carrier not an offer); Michael Gerson (Leasing) Ltd v Wilkinson [2000] Q.B. 514 at 530 (“I am willing to make an outright sale” for a specified price not an offer and, even if it was, it had not been accepted: see below, p.17).

<sup>27</sup> Interfoto Picture Library Ltd v Stiletto Visual Programmes Ltd [1989] Q.B. 433 at 436; cf. Electronic Commerce (EC Directive) Regulations 2002 (SI 2002/2013), reg.12: in electronic trading (e.g. on a website) an “order” may be, but need not be, the contractual offer. . . .” for certain purposes specified in those Regulations.

<sup>28</sup> See above, p.8 at n.2.

<sup>29</sup> Financings Ltd v Stimson [1962] 1 W.L.R. 1184.

<sup>30</sup> Spencer v Harding (1870) 1 L.R. 5 C.P. 561; Clifton v Palumbo [1944] 2 All E.R. 497.

<sup>31</sup> Bigg v Boyd Gibbins Ltd [1971] 1 W.L.R. 913.

<sup>32</sup> Harvela Investments Ltd v Royal Trust Co of Canada (CI) Ltd [1986] A.C. 207.

<sup>33</sup> Sale of Goods Act 1979, s.57(2); Payne v Cave (1789) 3 T.R. 148; British Car Auctions Ltd v Wright [1972] 1 W.L.R. 1519.

<sup>34</sup> See below, p.43.

<sup>35</sup> McManus v Fortescue [1907] 2 K.B. 1; on a sale of land, it must be expressly stated whether the sale is with reserve or not: Sale of Land by Auction Act 1867, s.5.

But it has been held that the auctioneer is in such a case liable on a separate, or collateral, contract between him and the highest bidder that the sale will be without reserve.<sup>36</sup> Although a mere advertisement of an auction is not an offer to hold it,<sup>37</sup> the actual request for bids seems to be an offer by the auctioneer that he will on the owner's behalf accept the highest bid; and this offer is accepted by the bidding.<sup>38</sup>

(2) Display of goods for sale

The general rule is that a display of price-marked goods in a shop window is not an offer to sell goods but is an invitation to a customer to make an offer to buy.<sup>39</sup> Similarly, the display of goods on the shelves of a self-service shop is merely an invitation to treat; the customer makes an offer to buy when he presents the goods for payment; at this stage, the retailer may accept or reject it.<sup>40</sup> Similar principles would seem to apply where a supplier of goods or services indicates their availability on a website: that is, the offer would seem to come from the customer (e.g. when he clicks the appropriate "button") and it is then open to the supplier to accept or reject that offer.<sup>41</sup> There is judicial support for the view that an indication of the price at which petrol is to be sold at a filling station is likewise an invitation to treat,<sup>42</sup> the offer to buy being made by the customer and accepted by the seller's conduct in putting the petrol into the tank.<sup>43</sup> But this analysis hardly fits the now more common situation in which the station operates a self-service system<sup>44</sup>; for once the customer has put petrol into his tank, the seller has no effective choice of refusing to deal with him.

The general rule relating to shop and similar displays is well established, but the reasons given for it are not entirely convincing. One reason is that "a shop is a place for bargaining, not for compulsory sales".<sup>45</sup> But the modern English shop, in which goods are generally bought on the retailer's terms, is scarcely a place for bargaining; and even if the display of goods were an offer, any resulting sale would not be compulsory: the shopkeeper need not display goods which he does not want to sell. Another argument is that if the display were regarded as an offer, the retailer might be exposed to many actions for damages if more customers purported to accept than his stock could satisfy.<sup>46</sup> But such an offer could be construed as one which automatically expired when the retailer's stock was exhausted: this would probably be in keeping with the common

<sup>36</sup> Harlow v Harrison (1859) 1 E. & E. 309; cf. Johnston v Boyes [1899] 2 Ch.73 at 77; Barry v Davies [2001] 1 W.L.R. 1962. Contra, Fenwick v Macdonald, Fraser & Co Ltd (1904) 6 F. (Ct. of Sess.) 850; Slade, 68 L.Q.R. 238; Gower, 68 L.Q.R. 457; Slade, 69 L.Q.R. 21. Under the American Uniform Commercial Code (hereinafter referred to as U.C.C.) the goods may not be withdrawn once they have been put up, if the auction is without reserve: s.2-328(3).

<sup>37</sup> Harris v Nickerson (1873) L.R. 8 Q.B. 286.

<sup>38</sup> The question whether there is any consideration for the auctioneer's undertaking is discussed below, p.155.

<sup>39</sup> Timothy v Simpson (1834) 6 C.&P. 499; Fisher v Bell [1961] 1 Q.B. 394; (the actual decision has been reversed: Restriction of Offensive Weapons Act 1961, s.1; contrast Criminal Justice Act 1988, s.14A(1), as inserted by Offensive Weapons Act 1996, s.6, which refers only to selling); dicta in Wiles v Maddison [1943] 1 All E.R. 315 at 317, may perhaps suggest the contrary.

<sup>40</sup> Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain v Boots Cash Chemists Ltd [1952] 2 Q.B. 795; [1953] 1 Q.B. 401; Unger, 16 M.L.R. 369; D.C.W., 10 N.I.L.Q. 117; Montrose, 10 N.I.L.Q. 178; and cf. Lavis v Cashmarts Ltd [1969] 2 Q.B. 400; Davies v Leighton [1978] Crim.L.R. 575.

<sup>41</sup> See below, p.17 for what constitutes an acceptance, and p.26, n.93 for the time of acceptance, in such cases.

<sup>42</sup> Esso Petroleum v Commissioners of Customs & Excise [1976] 1 W.L.R. 1 at 5, 6, 11; Richardson v Worrall [1985] S.T.C. 693 at 717.

<sup>43</sup> Re Charge Card Services [1989] Ch.497 at 512; for acceptance by conduct, see below, p.18.

<sup>44</sup> cf. below, p.14 at n.63.

<sup>45</sup> Winfield, 55 L.Q.R. 518.

<sup>46</sup> Esso Petroleum case above, n.42, at 11.

expectation of both retailer and customer. It has also been said that, if a display in a self-service shop were an offer, the undesirable result would follow that the customer would be bound to buy as soon as he picked up the goods to examine them.<sup>47</sup> But if the display were an offer, it could be argued that there was no acceptance until the customer did some less equivocal act, such as presenting the goods for payment.<sup>48</sup> Finally, it may be asked whether the general rule does not sometimes cause injustice. Customers may be induced by a window display to believe that they will be able to buy goods at exceptionally low prices and to wait outside the shop for many hours in reliance on that belief. Is it right to allow the retailer to go back on such a statement at the very moment when the customer demands the goods? It seems that the special terms of a display, or the circumstances in which it is made, may be evidence of intention to be bound and so displace the prima facie rule that the display is not an offer: thus in one case a notice in a shop window stating that "We will beat any TV . . . price by £20 on the spot" was described as "a continuing offer".<sup>49</sup> The customer might, indeed, still lose his bargain since the offer could be withdrawn at any time before it was accepted<sup>50</sup>; but if it is so withdrawn the person displaying the notice may incur criminal liability under legislation passed for the protection of consumers.<sup>51</sup>

(3) Advertisements and other displays

Advertisements of rewards for the return of lost or stolen property, or for information leading to the arrest or conviction of the perpetrator of a crime,<sup>52</sup> are invariably treated as offers: the intention to be bound is inferred from the fact that no further bargaining is expected to result from them. The same is true of other advertisements of unilateral contracts.<sup>53</sup> Thus in Carlill v Carbolic Smoke Ball Co,<sup>54</sup> an advertisement promising to pay £100 to any user of a carbolic smoke ball who caught influenza was held to be an offer. The intention to be bound<sup>55</sup> was made particularly clear by the statement that the advertisers had deposited £1,000 in their bank "shewing our sincerity". A case nearer the borderline was Bowerman v Association of British Travel Agents Ltd<sup>56</sup> where a package holiday had been booked with a tour operator who was a member of the defendant association (ABTA). A notice displayed on the tour operator's premises stated, inter alia, that in the event of the financial failure of an ABTA member before commencement of the holiday, "ABTA arranges for you to be reimbursed the money you have paid for your

<sup>47</sup> Boots Case [1952] 2 Q.B. 795 at 802.

<sup>48</sup> See Lasky v Economic Grocery Stores, 65 N.E. 2d 305 (1946). In Gillespie v Great Atlantic & Pacific Stores, 187 S.E. 2d. 441 (1972) and Sheeskin v Giant Food Inc, 318 A 2d. 874 (1974) acceptance was said to take place before the customer presented the goods for payment, but subject to his power to cancel before that point. In R. v Morris [1984] A.C. 320 taking goods off the shelf of a self-service store and changing the price-labels was held to be an "appropriation" within Theft Act 1968, s.3(1); but it does not follow that at this stage there would for the purpose of the law of contract be an acceptance even if the shelf-display amounted to an offer: see, ibid. at 334.

<sup>49</sup> R. v Warwickshire CC, ex p. Johnson [1993] A.C. 583 at 588.

<sup>50</sup> See below, p.41.

<sup>51</sup> Consumer Protection Act 1987, s.20(1): see R. v Warwickshire CC, ex p. Johnson, above; contrast Link Stores Ltd v Harrow BC [2001] 1 W.L.R. 1479. The section applies also to misleading price indications relating to the supply of services, accommodation and other facilities. Such misleading indications could conceivably amount to deceit.

<sup>52</sup> e.g. Gibbons v Proctor (1891) 64 L.T. 594; Williams v Carmardine (1833) 5 C. & P. 566; 4 B. & Ad. 621, below, p.35.

<sup>53</sup> See below, p.37, for the meaning of "unilateral contracts".

<sup>54</sup> [1893] 1 Q.B. 256.

<sup>55</sup> Contrast Lambert v Lewis [1982] A.C. 225 at 262, per Stephenson L.J. (affirmed without reference to this point [1982] A.C. 271).

<sup>56</sup> [1995] N.L.J. 1815.

holiday". A majority of the Court of Appeal held that these words constituted an offer from ABTA since, on the objective test,<sup>57</sup> they would reasonably be regarded as such by a member of the public booking a holiday with an ABTA member.

Advertisements of bilateral contracts are not often held to be offers since such advertisements do often lead to further bargaining, and since the advertiser may legitimately wish, before becoming bound, to assure himself that the other party is able to perform his part of any contract which may result. Thus a newspaper advertisement that goods are for sale is not an offer,<sup>58</sup> an advertisement that an auction sale will be held is not an offer to a person who comes to bid<sup>59</sup>; an advertisement that a scholarship examination will be held is not an offer to a candidate<sup>60</sup>; and the circulation of a price-list by a wine merchant is only an invitation to treat.<sup>61</sup> The same is probably true of a menu displayed, or handed to a customer, in a restaurant.<sup>62</sup> On the other hand, a notice at the entrance to an automatic car park may be an offer which can be accepted by driving in<sup>63</sup> and a display of deck chairs for hire has been held to be an offer.<sup>64</sup> No useful purpose is served by attempting to reconcile all the cases on this subject, since the question is one of intention in each case.<sup>65</sup>

(4) Timetables and passenger tickets

There is a remarkable diversity of views on the question just when a contract is made between a carrier and an intending passenger. It has been said that rail carriers made offers by issuing advertisements stating the times at and conditions under which trains would run<sup>66</sup>; and that a road carrier made offers to intending passengers by the act of running buses.<sup>67</sup> Such offers could be accepted by an indication on the part of the passenger that he wished to travel, e.g. by applying for a ticket or getting on the bus. Another view is that the carrier makes the offer at a later stage, by issuing the ticket; and that this offer is accepted by the passenger's retention of the ticket without objection,<sup>68</sup> or (even later) by claiming the accommodation offered in the ticket.<sup>69</sup> On this view the passenger makes no more than an invitation to treat when he asks for the ticket to be issued to him; and the offer contained in the ticket may be made to, and accepted by, the passenger even though the fare is paid by a third party (e.g. the passenger's employer<sup>70</sup>). Where the booking is made in advance, through a travel agent, yet a third view has been

<sup>57</sup> See above, p.8.

<sup>58</sup> Partridge v Crittenden [1968] 1 W.L.R. 1204; contrast Lefkowitz v Great Minneapolis Surplus Stores 86 N.W. 2d 689 (1957).

<sup>59</sup> Harris v Nickerson (1873) L.R. 8 Q.B. 286.

<sup>60</sup> Rouke v Dawson [1895] 1 Ch.480.

<sup>61</sup> Grainger & Sons v Gough [1896] A.C. 325; quaere whether a price-list sent on request to a single customer could be an offer.

<sup>62</sup> cf. Guildford v Lockyer [1975] Crim.L.R. 236.

<sup>63</sup> Thornton v Shoe Lane Parking Ltd [1971] 2 Q.B. 163 at 169.

<sup>64</sup> Chapelon v Barry Urban DC [1940] 1 K.B. 532.

<sup>65</sup> Contrast Harvey v Facey [1893] A.C. 552 with Philp & Co v Knoblauch, 1907 S.C. 994.

<sup>66</sup> Denton v GN Ry (1856) 5 F. & B. 860; Thompson v LM&S Ry [1930] 1 K.B. 41 at 47; perhaps because such carriers could not refuse to carry? See now Railways Act 1993, s.123.

<sup>67</sup> Wilkie v LPTB [1947] 1 All E.R. 258 at 259.

<sup>68</sup> Thornton v Shoe Lane Parking Ltd [1971] 2 Q.B. 163 at 169; Cockerton v Naviera Aznar SA [1960] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 450. Such acceptance would be by conduct rather than by silence: cf. below, p.35.

<sup>69</sup> MacRobertson-Miller Airline Service v Commissioner of State Taxation (1975) 8 A.L.R. 131; the principle resembles that stated in Heskell v Continental Express Ltd [1950] 1 All E.R. 1033 at 1037 in relation to carriage of goods by sea.

<sup>70</sup> Hobbs v L&SW Ry (1875) L.R. 10 Q.B. 111 at 119, as explained in the MacRobertson-Miller case above at 147; consideration for the promises of both parties would be provided on the principle of Gore v Van der Lann [1967] 2 Q.B. 31, below, p.157.

expressed: that the contract is concluded when the carrier indicates, even before issuing the ticket, that he "accepts" the booking<sup>71</sup> or when he issues the ticket.<sup>72</sup> On this view, it is the passenger who makes the offer. The authorities yield no single rule: one can only say that the exact time of contracting depends in each case on the wording of the relevant document and on the circumstances in which it was issued.

(5) Tenders

At common law, a statement that goods are to be sold by tender is not normally an offer, so that the person making the statement is not bound to sell to the person making the highest tender.<sup>73</sup> Similarly a statement inviting tenders for the supply of goods or for the execution of works is not normally an offer.<sup>74</sup> The offer comes from the person who submits the tender and there is no contract until the person asking for the tenders accepts<sup>75</sup> one of them. The preparation of a tender may involve considerable expense; but the tenderer normally incurs this at his own risk. The position is different where the person who invites the tenders states in the invitation that he binds himself to accept the highest offer to buy<sup>76</sup> (or, as the case may be, the lowest offer to sell or to provide the specified services).<sup>77</sup> In such cases, the invitation may be regarded either as itself an offer or as an invitation to submit offers coupled with an undertaking to accept the highest (or, as the case may be, the lowest) offer; and the contract is concluded as soon as the highest offer to buy (or lowest offer to sell, etc.) is communicated.<sup>78</sup> There is also an intermediate possibility. This is illustrated by a case<sup>79</sup> in which an invitation to submit tenders was sent by a local authority to seven selected parties; the invitation stated that tenders submitted after a specified deadline would not be considered. It was held that the authority was contractually bound to consider (though not to accept<sup>80</sup>) a tender submitted before the deadline.

The common law position stated above is in some situations modified by legislation, for example by regulations<sup>81</sup> which give effect to EC Council directives, the object of which is to prevent discrimination in the award of major contracts for public works, supplies and services in one Member State against nationals of another Member State. These regulations restrict the freedom of the body seeking tenders to decide which tender it will accept and provide a remedy in damages for a person who has made a tender and is prejudiced by breach of the rules.

<sup>71</sup> The Eagle [1977] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 70; The Dragon [1979] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 257 (affirmed [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 415) Oceanic Sun Line Special Shipping Co v Fay (1988) 165 C.L.R. 97; cf. The Annar al Sabar [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 261 at 263 (carriage of goods by sea).

<sup>72</sup> The Mikhail Lermontov [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 155 at 159, reversed on other grounds: Baltic Shipping Co v Dillon (1993) 176 C.L.R. 344.

<sup>73</sup> Spencer v Harding (1870) L.R. 5 C.P. 561.

<sup>74</sup> ibid. at 564.

<sup>75</sup> See below, p.21.

<sup>76</sup> Spencer v Harding, above, at 563.

<sup>77</sup> See William Lucey (Hounslow) Ltd v Davis [1957] 1 W.L.R. 932 at 939; cf. MJB Enterprises Ltd v Defence Construction Ltd (1999) 15 Const.L.J. 455: promise to accept lowest compliant tender broken by accepting lowest non-compliant one (Supreme Court of Canada).

<sup>78</sup> Harvela Investments Ltd v Royal Trust of Canada (CI) Ltd [1986] A.C. 207 at 224-225.

<sup>79</sup> Blackpool and Fylde Aero Club Ltd v Blackpool BC [1990] 1 W.L.R. 1195. No decision was reached on the quantum of damages: as to this, see below, p.955.

<sup>80</sup> cf. Fairclough Building v Port Talbot BC (1992) 62 B.L.R. 82.

<sup>81</sup> SI 1991/2679; SI 1991/2680, applied in R. v Portsmouth CC, Ex p. Coles, The Times, November 13, 1996; SI 1992/3279; SI 1993/3228 (as amended by SI 2000/2009), applied in R. v S of S for the Environment, Ex p. Harrow LBC [1996] E.G.C.S. 2; Craig in Consensus ad Idem, Essays in the Law of Contract in Honour of Guenter Treitel (Rose ed.), pp.148-151. See also Environmental Protection Act 1990, Sch.2, Pt II, applied in R. v Avon CC, Ex p. Terry Adams Ltd, The Times, January 20, 1994.

(6) Sales of shares

A company which, in commercial language,<sup>82</sup> makes an “offer to the public”, asking them to subscribe for shares in it, does not in law offer to sell the shares. It invites members of the public to apply for them, reserving the right to decide how many (if any) to allot to each applicant.<sup>83</sup> But where a company makes a “rights” issue of shares to its existing shareholders, entitling each shareholder to buy a number of new shares in proportion to the shares he already holds, the letter informing the shareholder of his rights is regarded as an offer.<sup>84</sup> This letter will set out the precise rights of each shareholder, thus showing an intention on the part of the company to be bound, if the shareholder takes up his rights.

3. Where and When an Offer Takes Effect

In one sense an offer cannot take effect until it is received, for until the offeree knows about it he can take no action in reliance on it. But for the purpose of determining whether a contract can be sued on in a particular court it has been held that an offer sent through the post was made where it was posted.<sup>85</sup> The question when such an offer was made may also arise for the purpose of determining whether the offer has expired by lapse of time<sup>86</sup> before it was accepted. In Adams v Lindsell<sup>87</sup> an offer to sell wool was made by a letter which was misdirected. The letter reached the offerees two days late; and they immediately posted an acceptance which was held binding because the delay arose “entirely from the mistake of the [offerors]”.<sup>88</sup> From this emphasis on the offerors’ fault, it seems that the decision might have gone the other way if the delay had been due to some other factor, e.g. to an accident in the post. In such a case the time for acceptance probably runs from the moment at which the letter would, but for such accident, have reached the offeree’s address. Even where the delay is due to the offeror’s fault, the offer may have lapsed before its receipt by the offeree. Obviously, the offer could not be accepted if it reached the offeree only after the date expressly specified in it as the last date for acceptance. The position is probably the same where it is clear to the offeree that there has been such a long delay in the transmission of the offer as to make it obvious to the offeree that the offer was “stale” when it reached him.

SECTION 2. ACCEPTANCE

1. Acceptance Defined

An acceptance is a final and unqualified expression of assent to the terms of an offer. The objective test of agreement applies to an acceptance no less than to an offer.<sup>89</sup> On this test, a mere acknowledgment of an offer would not be an acceptance; nor would a person to whom an offer to sell goods had been made accept it merely by replying that it was <sup>82</sup> And in the terminology of Companies Act 1985, ss.80(1), 742A (as inserted by Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Consequential Amendments and Repeals) Order 2001 (SI 2001/3649), para.29) and 744 and of Financial Services and Markets Act 2000, s.103(4).

<sup>83</sup> e.g. Hebb's Case (1867) L.R. 4 Eq. 9; Harris' Case (1872) L.R. 7 Ch.App. 587; Wall's Case (1872) 42 L.J.Ch. 372; Nicol's Case (1883) 29 Ch.D. 421 at 426; National Westminster Bank plc v IRC [1995] 1 A.C. 119 at 126; cf. Wallace's Case [1900] 2 Ch.671; Rust v Abbey Life Ins Co [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 335.

<sup>84</sup> Jackson v Turquand (1869) L.R. 4 H.L. 305.

<sup>85</sup> Taylor v Jones (1871) 1 C.P.D. 87.

<sup>86</sup> See below, p.43.

<sup>87</sup> (1818) 1 B. & Ald. 681.

<sup>88</sup> ibid. at 683.

<sup>89</sup> See above, p.8; Inland Revenue Commissioners v Fry [2001] S.T.C. 1715 at [6, 7]; cf. in criminal law, DPP v Holmes, 152 J.P.N. 738.

his “intention to place an order”<sup>90</sup> or by asking for an invoice.<sup>91</sup> The mere acknowledgment of an offer, in the sense of a communication stating simply that the offer had been received, would likewise not be an acceptance. But an “acknowledgment” may by its express terms or, in a particular context by implication, contain a statement that the sender agreed to the terms of the offer and that he was therefore accepting it: this might, for example, be the effect of an “acknowledgment” of a customer’s order in website trading.<sup>92</sup> Where the offer makes alternative proposals, the reply must make it clear to which of them the assent is directed. In one case an offer to build a freight terminal was made by a tender quoting in the alternative a fixed price and a price varying with the cost of labour and materials. The offeree purported to accept “your tender” and it was held that there was no contract as there was no way of telling which price term had been accepted.<sup>93</sup>

(1) Continuing negotiations

When parties carry on lengthy negotiations, it may be hard to say exactly when an offer has been made and accepted. As negotiations progress, each party may make concessions or new demands and the parties may in the end disagree as to whether they had ever agreed at all. The court must then look at the whole correspondence and decide whether, on its true construction, the parties had agreed to the same terms. If so, there is a contract even though both parties, or one of them, had reservations not expressed in the correspondence.<sup>94</sup> The court will be particularly anxious to reach such a conclusion where the performance which was the subject-matter of the negotiations has actually been rendered. In one such case, a building sub-contract was held to have come into existence (even though the parties had not yet reached agreement when the contractor began the work) as during its progress outstanding matters were resolved by further negotiations.<sup>95</sup> The contract may then be given retrospective effect so as to cover acts done before the final agreement was reached.<sup>96</sup>

Businessmen do not, any more than the courts, find it easy to say precisely when they have reached agreement, and may continue to negotiate after they appear to have agreed to the same terms. The court will then look at the entire course of the negotiations to decide whether an apparently unqualified acceptance did in fact conclude the agreement.<sup>97</sup> If it did, the fact that the parties continued negotiations after this point will not

<sup>90</sup> OTM Ltd v Hydranautics [1981] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 211 at 214.

<sup>91</sup> Michael Gerson (Leasing) Ltd v Wilkinson [2000] Q.B. 514 at 530 (where there was probably no offer: see above, p.11).

<sup>92</sup> In the Electronic Commerce (EC Directive) Regulations 2002, SI 2002/2013 (implementing most of the EC Directive 2000/31 on Electronic Commerce ([2000] O.J. L178/1)), reg.11, the words “acknowledge” and “acknowledgement” seem to be used in this sense.

<sup>93</sup> Peter Lind & Co Ltd v Mersey Docks & Harbour Board [1972] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 234.

<sup>94</sup> Kennedy v Lee (1817) 3 Mer. 441; cf. Cie de Commerce, etc., v Parkinson Stove Co [1953] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 487; B.S.E., 17 M.L.R. 476; Port Sudan Cotton Co v Govindaswamy Chettiar & Sons [1977] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 5; Thoresen Car Ferries Ltd v Weymouth Portland BC [1977] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 614; OTM Ltd v Hydranautics [1981] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 211 at 215; The Bay Ridge [1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 306.

<sup>95</sup> G Percy Trentham Ltd v Archital Luxfer Ltd [1993] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 25. The Peter Lind case, above, n.93, shows that the factor of performance of the work is not decisive, though it may (as in that case) give rise to a restitutionary claim: see below, p.1062.

<sup>96</sup> G Percy Trentham case, above at 27.

<sup>97</sup> Hussey v Horne-Payne (1878) 4 App.Cas. 311; Bristol, Cardiff & Swansea Aerated Bread Co v Maggs (1890) 44 Ch.D. 616; British Guiana Credit Corporation v Da Silva [1965] 1 W.L.R. 248; Container Transport International Inc v Oceanus Mutual, etc. Association [1984] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 476; The Astyanax [1985] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 109 at 112; The Intra Transporter [1986] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 132; Pagnan SpA v Granaria BV [1986] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 547; Pagnan SpA v Feed Products Ltd [1987] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 601 at 619; Ignazio Messina & Co v Polskie Linie Oceaniczne [1995] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 566; The Frotanorte [1996] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 461.

normally affect the existence of the contract<sup>98</sup>; it will do so only if the continuation of the negotiations can be construed as an agreement to rescind the contract. A fortiori, the binding force of an oral contract is not affected or altered merely by the fact that, after its conclusion, one party sends to the other a document containing terms significantly different from those which had been orally agreed.<sup>99</sup>

(2) Acceptance by conduct

An offer may be accepted by conduct, e.g. by supplying or despatching goods in response to an offer to buy them,<sup>1</sup> or by beginning to render services in response to an offer in the form of a request for them.<sup>2</sup> Similarly, an offer to supply goods (made by sending them to the offeree) can be accepted by using them.<sup>3</sup> Conduct will, however, only have this effect if the offeree did the act with the intention (ascertained in accordance with the objective principle<sup>4</sup>) of accepting the offer. Thus a buyer's taking delivery of goods after the conclusion of an oral contract of sale will not amount to his acceptance of written terms which differ significantly from those orally agreed and which are sent to him by the seller after the making of that contract but before taking delivery.<sup>5</sup> That conduct is then referable to the oral contract rather than to the attempted later variation. Nor is a company's offer to insure a car accepted by taking the car out on the road, if there is evidence that the driver intended to insure with another company.<sup>6</sup> A fortiori, there is no acceptance where the offeree's conduct clearly indicates an intention to reject the offer. This was the position in a Scottish case where a notice on a package containing computer software stated that opening the package would indicate acceptance of the terms on which the supply was made, and the customer returned the package unopened.<sup>7</sup>

Where it is alleged that an offer has been made, or accepted, by conduct it is often hard to say exactly what terms have been agreed. The difficulty may be so great as to lead to the conclusion that no agreement was reached at all.<sup>8</sup> But the court has considerable power to resolve uncertainties. If the offer is silent as to the rate of payment the court may imply a term that a reasonable amount should be paid.<sup>9</sup> Or the court may import into the contract the terms of another contract between the parties, or of a draft

<sup>98</sup> Perry v. Suffields Ltd [1916] 2 Ch.187; Davies v. Smeeth [1962] 2 Q.B. 300; Cranleigh Precision Engineering Ltd v. Bryant [1965] 1 W.L.R. 1293 The Good Helmsman [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 377 at 409, 416.

<sup>99</sup> Jayaar Impex Ltd v. Toaken Group Ltd [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 437.

<sup>1</sup> Harvey v. Johnston (1848) 6 C.B. 295 at 305; cf. Steven v. Bromley & Son [1919] 2 K.B. 722 at 728; The Saronikos [1986] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 277; Interfoto Picture Library Ltd v. Stiletto Visual Programmes Ltd [1989] Q.B. 433 at 436; Re Charge Card Services [1989] Ch.497 at 512; Carlyle Finance Ltd v. Pallas Industrial Finance Ltd [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 659 at 670; and see below, p.23.

<sup>2</sup> The Kurnia Dewi [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 533.

<sup>3</sup> Wetherby v. Banham (1832) 5 C. & P. 228; or even by using part of the goods: cf. Hart v. Mills (1846) 15 L.J.Ex. 200. It is assumed that the goods are not "unsolicited" within legislation against "inertia selling".

<sup>4</sup> See above, p.8.

<sup>5</sup> Jayaar Impex Ltd v. Toaken Group Ltd [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 437.

<sup>6</sup> Taylor v. Allon [1966] 1 Q.B. 304. The objective principle could not apply as the conduct alleged to constitute the acceptance had not come to the notice of the offeror; cf., in another context, Re Leyland Daf Ltd [1994] 4 All E.R. 300, affirmed sub nom. Pomdrill v. Watson [1995] 2 A.C. 394.

<sup>7</sup> Beta Computers (Europe) v. Adobe Systems (Europe) 1996 S.L.T. 604; even opening the package would not necessarily be an acceptance so as to incorporate the printed terms: see Tapper in Consensus ad Idem, Essays in the Law of Contract in Honour of Guenter Treitel (Rose ed.), pp.287-288.

<sup>8</sup> Capital Finance Co Ltd v. Bray [1964] 1 W.L.R. 323.

<sup>9</sup> Sale of Goods Act 1979, s.8(2); Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982, s.15(1); cf. Steven v. Bromley & Son, above; see below, p.52.

agreement between them,<sup>10</sup> or even of a contract between one of them and a third party.<sup>11</sup>

(3) Acceptance must be unqualified

A communication may fail to take effect as an acceptance because it attempts to vary the terms of the offer. Thus an offer to sell 1,200 tons of iron is not accepted by a reply asking for 800 tons<sup>12</sup>; an offer to pay a fixed price for building work is not accepted by a promise to do the work for a variable price<sup>13</sup>; an offer to supply goods is not accepted by an "order" for their "supply and installation".<sup>14</sup> Nor, generally, is an offer accepted by a reply which varies one of its other terms (e.g. that specifying the time of performance)<sup>15</sup> or by a reply which is intended to introduce an entirely new term.<sup>16</sup> Such replies are not acceptances but counter-offers<sup>17</sup> which the original offeror can accept or reject.

The requirement that the acceptance must be unqualified does not, however, mean that there must be precise verbal correspondence between offer and acceptance. An acceptance could be effective even though it departed from the wording of the offer by making express some term which the law would in any case imply.<sup>18</sup> And a reply which adds some new provision by way of indulgence to the offeror (e.g. one allowing him to postpone payment) may be an acceptance. Conversely, an acceptance in which the acceptor asks for extra time to pay may be effective, so long as he makes it clear that he is prepared to perform in accordance with the terms of the offer even if his request is refused.<sup>19</sup> It is also possible for a communication which introduces a new term to amount at the same time to a firm acceptance and also to a further offer relating to the same subject-matter but emanating from the original offeree. In such a case, there will be a contract on the terms of the original offer, but none on the terms of the new offer unless that is, in turn, accepted.<sup>20</sup>

After parties have reached agreement, the offer and acceptance may be set out in formal documents. The purpose of such documents may be merely to record the agreed terms<sup>21</sup>; and where one of the documents performs this function accurately while the other fails to do so, the discrepancy between them will not prevent the formation of a

<sup>10</sup> e.g. Brogden v Metropolitan Ry (1877) 2 App.Cas. 666; contrast D&M Trailers (Halifax) Ltd v Stirling [1978] R.T.R. 468, Jayaar Impex Ltd v Taaken Ltd [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 437, where the conduct of the buyer was referable to the earlier oral contract (above, n.5) rather than to the document sent by the seller, and UK Safety Group Ltd v Heane [1998] 2 B.C.L.C. 208.

<sup>11</sup> e.g. Pyrene Co Ltd v Scindia Navigation Co Ltd [1954] 2 Q.B. 402, see below, p.638.

<sup>12</sup> Tinn v Hoffmann & Co (1873) 29 L.T. 271; cf. Holland v Eyre (1825) 2 Sim. & St. 194; Jordan v Norton (1838) 4 M. & W. 155; Harrison v Batty [1975] 1 W.L.R. 58.

<sup>13</sup> North West Leicestershire DC v East Midlands Housing Association [1981] 1 W.L.R. 1396.

<sup>14</sup> Butler Machine Tool Co Ltd v Ex-Cell-O Corp (England) Ltd [1979] 1 W.L.R. 401.

<sup>15</sup> ibid.; North West Leicestershire DC v East Midlands Housing Association [1981] 1 W.L.R. 1396; cf. Brinkibon Ltd v Stahag Stahl und Stahlwarenhandels-gesellschaft mbH [1983] 2 A.C. 34.

<sup>16</sup> Jackson v Turquand (1869) L.R. 4 H.L. 305; Northland Aircraft Ltd v Dennis Ferranti Meters Ltd (1970) 114 S.J. 845; Bircham & Co Nominees (No.2) Ltd v Worrell Holdings Ltd [2001] F.W.C.A. Civ 725; (2001) 82 P. & C.R. 427 at [11]. Statements which are not intended to add new terms do not vitiate the acceptance: Clive v Beaumont (1847) 1 De G. & Sm. 397; Simpson v Hughes (1897) 66 L.J.Ch. 334; Butler Machine Tool Co Ltd v Ex-Cell-O Corp (England) Ltd [1979] 1 W.L.R. 401.

<sup>17</sup> Jones v Daniel [1894] 2 Ch.332; Von Hartzfeld-Wildenburg v Alexander [1912] 1 Ch.284; Love & Stewart Ltd v S Instone & Co Ltd (1917) 33 T.L.R. 457; Lark v Outhwaite [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 132 at 139. For an exception, see Vienna Convention (below, p.29), Art.19(2).

<sup>18</sup> Lark v Outhwaite, above at 139.

<sup>19</sup> cf. Global Tankers Inc v Amercoat Europa NV [1975] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 666 at 671; G Percy Trentham Ltd v Archital Luxfer Ltd [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 25 at 28.

<sup>20</sup> The Master Stelios [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 356; Society of Lloyd's v Twinn, The Times, April 4, 2000.

<sup>21</sup> e.g. OTM Ltd v Hydranautics [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 211 at 215; cf. below, p.54.

contract. In such a case, the court can rectify<sup>22</sup> the document which fails to record the agreed terms, and a contract will be on those terms.<sup>23</sup>

(4) The battle of forms

The growing use of printed contract forms by one or both parties has given rise to problems with regard to the rule that the acceptance must correspond to the offer. Two situations call for discussion.

First, A may make an offer to B by asking for a supply of goods or services. B may reply that he is willing to supply the goods or services on his “usual conditions”. Prima facie, B’s statement is a counter-offer which A is free to accept or reject, and he may accept it by accepting the goods or services. If he does so, there is a contract between A and B, though the question whether B’s “usual conditions” form part of it may depend on a number of further factors which will be discussed in Chapter 7.<sup>24</sup>

Secondly, each party may purport to contract with reference to his own set of standard terms and these terms may conflict. In BRS v Arthur V Crutchley Ltd<sup>25</sup> the claimants delivered a consignment of whisky to the defendants for storage. Their driver handed the defendants a delivery note purporting to incorporate the claimants’ “conditions of carriage”. The note was stamped by the defendants: “Received under [the defendants’] conditions”. It was held that this amounted to a counter-offer which the claimants had accepted by handing over the goods, and the contract therefore incorporated the defendants’ and not the claimants’ conditions.

This case gave some support to the so-called “last shot” doctrine: i.e. to the view that, where conflicting communications are exchanged, each is a counter-offer so that if a contract results at all (e.g. from an acceptance by conduct) it must be on the terms of the final document in the series leading to the conclusion of the contract.<sup>26</sup> But this view requires some modification in the light of Butler Machine Tool Co Ltd v Ex-Cell-O Corporation (England) Ltd.<sup>27</sup> In that case sellers offered to supply a machine for a specified sum. The offer was expressed to be subject to certain terms and conditions, including a “price escalation clause”, by which the amount payable by the buyers was to depend on “prices ruling upon date of delivery”. In reply, the buyers placed an order for the machine on a form setting out their own terms and conditions, which differed from those of the sellers in containing no price-escalation clause and in various other respects.<sup>28</sup> It also contained a tear-off slip to be signed by the sellers and returned to the buyers, stating that the sellers accepted the order “on the terms and conditions stated therein”. The sellers did so sign the slip and returned it with a letter saying that they were “entering” the order “in accordance with” their offer. This communication from the sellers was held to be an acceptance of the buyers’ counter-offer<sup>29</sup> so that the resulting contract was on the buyers’ terms, and the sellers were not entitled to the benefit of the price escalation clause. The sellers’ reply to the buyers’ order did not prevail (though it was the “last shot” in the series) because the reference in it to the

<sup>22</sup> See below, p.321.

<sup>23</sup> Domb v Isoz [1980] Ch.548.

<sup>24</sup> See below, pp.216–221.

<sup>25</sup> [1967] 2 All E.R. 285 at 287; [1968] 1 W.L.R. 811 at 817; cf. OTM Ltd v Hydranautics [1981] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 211; Muirhead v Industrial Tank Specialities Ltd [1986] Q.B. 507 at 530; Sauter Automation v Goodman (Mechanical Services) (1984) 34 Build.L.R. 81.

<sup>26</sup> As in Zambia Steel & Building Supplies Ltd v James Clark & Eaton Ltd [1986] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 225.

<sup>27</sup> [1979] 1 W.L.R. 401, esp. at 405; Adams, 95 L.Q.R. 481; Rawlings, 42 M.L.R. 715.

<sup>28</sup> See above, p.19 at n.14 and 15.

<sup>29</sup> per Lawton and Buckley L.J.J.; Lord Denning M.R. also uses this analysis, but prefers the alternative approach of considering “the documents . . . as a whole”: see at 405 and cf. below, p.47.

original offer was not made for the purpose of reiterating all the terms of that offer, but only for the purpose of identifying the subject-matter. It would, however, have been possible for the sellers to have turned their final communication into a counter-offer by explicitly referring in it, not only to the subject-matter of the original offer, but also to all its other terms. In that case no contract would have been concluded, since the buyers had made it clear before the machine was delivered that they did not agree to the "price escalation" clause.<sup>30</sup>

Thus it is possible by careful draftsmanship to avoid losing the battle of forms, but not (if the other party is equally careful) to win it. In the Butler Machine Tool case, for example, sellers' conditions included one by which their terms were to "prevail over any terms and conditions in Buyer's order"; but this failed (in consequence of the terms of the buyers' counter-offer) to produce the effect desired by the sellers.<sup>31</sup> The most that the draftsman can be certain of achieving is the stalemate situation in which there is no contract at all. Such a conclusion will often be inconvenient,<sup>32</sup> though where the goods are nevertheless delivered it may lead to a liability on the part of the buyers to pay a reasonable price.<sup>33</sup>

The above discussion is concerned with the effect of the submission of a document or documents containing terms before the alleged contract is made. The submission of such a document by one party after the making of the contract will not affect the existence of the contract,<sup>34</sup> nor will the terms of the document form part of the contract unless they are in turn accepted as variations of the contract, either expressly or by conduct.

(5) Acceptance of tenders

The submission of a tender normally amounts to an offer,<sup>35</sup> and the effect of an "acceptance" of the tender depends on the interpretation of the documents. Where, for example, a tender is submitted for the construction of a building, acceptance will normally create a binding contract unless it is expressly stipulated that there is to be no contract until certain formal documents have been executed.<sup>36</sup> But where a tender is made for an indefinite amount, e.g. for the supply of "such quantities (not exceeding 1,000 tons) as you may order" the person to whom the tender is submitted does not incur any liability merely by "accepting" it. He becomes liable only when he places an order for the goods<sup>37</sup>; and he is not bound to place any order at all (unless he has expressly or by necessary implication<sup>38</sup> indicated in his invitation for tenders that he would do so).<sup>39</sup> Once an order has been placed, the party who has submitted the tender is bound to fulfil it.<sup>40</sup> Whether he can withdraw before an order has been placed, or avoid liability with regard to future orders, depends on the interpretation of the tender. If it

<sup>30</sup> At 406, per Lawton L.J.

<sup>31</sup> cf. Matter of Doughboy Industries Inc 233 N.Y.S. 2d. 488 at 490 (1962): "The buyer and seller accomplished a legal equivalent to the irresistible force colliding with the immoveable object".

<sup>32</sup> It seems to have been rejected for this reason in Johnson Matthey Bankers Ltd v State Trading Corp of India [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 427.

<sup>33</sup> cf. Peter Lind & Co Ltd v Mersey Docks & Harbour Board [1972] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 234, above, p.17; McKendrick, 8 O.J.L.S. 197.

<sup>34</sup> Jayaar Impex Ltd v Toaken Group Ltd [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 437; cf. below, pp.52, 200.

<sup>35</sup> See above, p.15.

<sup>36</sup> See below, p.54.

<sup>37</sup> Percival v London County Council Asylum, etc. Committee (1918) 87 L.J.K.B. 677.

<sup>38</sup> e.g. Sylvan Crest Sand & Gravel Co v US, 150 F. 2d. 642 (1945).

<sup>39</sup> cf. Harvela Investments Ltd v Royal Trust Co of Canada (CI) Ltd [1986] A.C. 207.

<sup>40</sup> Great Northern Ry v Witham (1873) L.R. 9 C.P. 16; cf. a similar rule applied to "declarations" under an "open cover" insurance in Citadel Insurance Co v Atlantic Union Insurance Co [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 543.

merely means “I will supply such quantities as you may order” he can withdraw before a definite order is placed.<sup>41</sup> But he will not be entitled to withdraw if the tender means “I hereby bind myself to execute any orders which you may place”, and if there is some consideration for this undertaking.<sup>42</sup>

(6) Acceptance by tender

An invitation for tenders may, exceptionally, amount to an offer, e.g. where the person issuing the invitation binds himself to accept the highest tender to buy (or the lowest tender to sell).<sup>43</sup> The acceptance then takes the form of the submission of a tender; but difficulties can arise where several tenders are made and one (or more) of them takes the form of a so-called “referential bid”. In Harvela Investments Ltd v Royal Trust Co of Canada (CI) Ltd<sup>44</sup> an invitation for the submission of “offers” to buy shares was addressed to two persons; it stated that the prospective sellers bound themselves to accept the “highest offer”. One of the persons to whom the invitation was addressed made a bid of a fixed sum while the other submitted a “referential bid” undertaking to pay either a fixed sum or a specified amount in excess of the bid made by the other, whichever was the higher amount. It was held that this “referential bid” was ineffective and that the submission of the other bid had concluded the contract. The House of Lords stressed that the bids were, by the terms of the invitation, to be confidential, so that neither bidder would know the amount bid by the other. In these circumstances the object of the invitation, which was to ascertain the highest amount which each of the persons to whom it was addressed was willing to pay, would have been defeated by allowing it to be accepted by a “referential bid”.

2. Communication of Acceptance

(1) General rule

The general rule is that an acceptance has no effect until it is communicated to the offeror.<sup>45</sup> One reason for this rule is the difficulty of proving an uncommunicated decision to accept “for the Devil himself knows not the intent of a man”.<sup>46</sup> But this is not the sole reason for the rule, which applies even where the fact of acceptance could be proved with perfect certainty, e.g. where a person writes his acceptance on a piece of paper which he simply keeps<sup>47</sup>; where a company resolves to accept an application for shares, records the resolution, but does not communicate it to the applicant<sup>48</sup>; where a person decides to accept an offer to sell goods to him and instructs his bank to pay the seller, but neither he nor the bank gives notice of this fact to the seller<sup>49</sup>; or where a

<sup>41</sup> Great Northern Ry v Witham, above, at 19.

<sup>42</sup> Percival v London County Council Asylum etc. Committee (1918) 87 L.J.K.B. 677; cf. Miller v F A Sadd & Son Ltd [1981] 3 All E.R. 265. For an exception to the requirement of consideration in the law of insurance, see the Citadel case (above n.40) 546; see below, p.154.

<sup>43</sup> See above, p.15.

<sup>44</sup> [1986] A.C. 207.

<sup>45</sup> M'Iver v Richardson (1813) 1 M. & S. 557; Mozley v Tinkler (1835) C.M. & R. 692; Ex p. Stark [1897] 1 Ch.575; Holwell Securities Ltd v Hughes [1974] 1 W.L.R. 155 at 157; The Leonidas D [1985] 1 W.L.R. 925 at 937.

<sup>46</sup> Anon. (1478) Y.B. 17 Edw. IV Pasch. f.1–pl.2, cited in Fifoot, History & Sources of the Common Law, p.253.

<sup>47</sup> Kennedy v Thomassen [1929] 1 Ch.426; Brogden v Metropolitan Ry (1877) 2 App.Cas. 666 at 692.

<sup>48</sup> Best's Case (1865) 2 D.J. & S. 650; cf. Gunn's Case (1867) L.R. 3 Ch.App. 40.

<sup>49</sup> Brinkibon v Stahag Stahl und Stahlwarenhandels-gesellschaft mbH [1983] 2 A.C. 34.

person communicates the acceptance only to his own agent.<sup>50</sup> The main reason for the rule is that it could cause hardship to an offeror if he were bound without knowing that his offer had been accepted. It follows that there can be a contract if the offeror knows of the acceptance although it was not brought to his notice by the offeree.<sup>51</sup> However, there will be no contract if the communication is made by a third party without the authority of the offeree in circumstances indicating that the offeree's decision to accept was not yet regarded by him as irrevocable.<sup>52</sup>

For an acceptance to be "communicated" it must normally be brought to the notice of the offeror. Thus if an oral acceptance is "drowned by an aircraft flying overhead" or is spoken into a telephone after the line has gone dead, or is so indistinct that the offeror does not hear it, there is no contract.<sup>53</sup> The requirement of "communication" may, however, sometimes be satisfied even though the acceptance has not actually come to the notice of the offeror: e.g. where a written notice of acceptance is left at his address.<sup>54</sup>

(2) Exceptional cases

In a number of cases, an acceptance is, or may be, effective although it is not communicated to the offeror.

(a) COMMUNICATION TO OFFEROR'S AGENT. The effect of giving an acceptance to the agent of the offeror depends on the nature of the agent's authority.<sup>55</sup> If the agent has authority to receive the acceptance, it takes effect as soon as it is communicated to him, e.g. if acceptance of an offer made by a company is communicated to its managing director. But if the agent is only authorised to transmit the acceptance to the offeror, it may not take effect until the offeror receives it, e.g. if a written acceptance is given to a messenger.

(b) CONDUCT OF OFFEROR. An offeror may be precluded from denying that he received the acceptance if "it is his own fault that he did not get it", e.g. "if the listener on the telephone does not catch the words of acceptance, but nevertheless does not . . . ask for them to be repeated"<sup>56</sup>; or if the acceptance is sent during business hours by telex but is simply not read by anyone in the offeror's office when it is there transcribed on his machine.<sup>57</sup> If such a message is received out of business hours, it probably takes effect at the beginning of the next business day.<sup>58</sup>

(c) TERMS OF OFFER. An offer may expressly or impliedly waive the requirement that acceptance must be communicated. This is often the case where an offer invites acceptance by conduct. Thus where an offer to sell goods is made by sending them to the offeree, it may be accepted by simply using them without communicating this fact to the offeror.<sup>59</sup> Similarly, it seems that, where an offer to buy goods is made by asking the seller to supply them, it may be accepted by simply despatching the goods to the

<sup>50</sup> Hebb's Case (1867) L.R. 4 Eq. 9; Kennedy v Thomassen [1929] 1 Ch.426.

<sup>51</sup> Blaxham's Case (1864) 33 Beav. 529; (1864) 4 D.J. & S. 447; Levita's Case (1867) L.R. 3 Ch.App. 36.

<sup>52</sup> This seems to be the best explanation of Powell v Lee (1908) 99 L.T. 284.

<sup>53</sup> Entores Ltd v Miles Fur East Corp [1955] 2 Q.B. 327 at 332.

<sup>54</sup> cf. below, p.41.

<sup>55</sup> Henthorn v Fraser [1892] 2 Ch.27 at 33.

<sup>56</sup> Entores case [1955] 2 Q.B. 327 at 333.

<sup>57</sup> cf. The Brimnes [1975] Q.B. 929.

<sup>58</sup> The Pamela [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 249 at 252; The Peter Schmidt [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 1.

<sup>59</sup> Weatherby v Banham (1832) 5 C. & P. 228; cf. Minorities Finance Ltd v Afrirbank Nigeria Ltd [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 134 at 140; and see above, p.9, n.15.

buyer.<sup>60</sup> And a tenant can accept an offer of a new tenancy by simply staying on the premises.<sup>61</sup>

Communication of acceptance is scarcely ever required in the case of an offer of a unilateral contract.<sup>62</sup> Thus in Carlill v Carbolic Smoke Ball Co,<sup>63</sup> the court rejected the argument that the claimant should have notified the defendants of her acceptance of their offer before starting to use the smoke ball. Similarly, where a reward is offered for the return of lost property the finder need not notify the owner in advance of his acceptance: he can accept by finding and returning the thing; and once he has found it the owner probably cannot withdraw.<sup>64</sup> Again, the contract which arises<sup>65</sup> between a bank which has issued a credit card to one of its customers and the retailer to whom the customer presents the card has been described as unilateral,<sup>66</sup> so that the bank's offer can be accepted by the retailer's dealing with the customer even before that acceptance is communicated to the bank.<sup>67</sup>

(d) ACCEPTANCE BY POST.<sup>68</sup> There are many possible solutions to the problem: when does a posted acceptance take effect? Such an acceptance could take effect when it is actually communicated to the offeror, when it arrives at his address, when it should, in the ordinary course of post, have reached him, or when it is posted. As the following discussion will show, each of these solutions is open to objections on the grounds of convenience or justice. This is particularly true where the acceptance is lost or delayed in the post.<sup>69</sup>

(i) The posting rule. What is usually<sup>70</sup> called the general rule is that a postal acceptance takes effect when the letter of acceptance is posted.<sup>71</sup> For this purpose a letter is posted when it is in the control of the Post Office,<sup>72</sup> or of one of its employees authorised to receive letters: handing a letter to a postman authorised to deliver letters is not posting.<sup>73</sup>

(ii) Reasons for the rule. Various reasons for the rule have been suggested. One is that the offeror must be considered as making the offer all the time that his offer is in the post, and that therefore the agreement between the parties is complete as soon as the acceptance is posted.<sup>74</sup> But this does not explain why posting has any significance at all:

<sup>60</sup> cf. UCC, s.2-206(1)(b); Port Huron Machinery Co v Wohlers, 221 N.W. 843 (1928); The Kurnia Dewi [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 553 at 559.

<sup>61</sup> Roberts v Haymard (1828) 3 C. & P. 432; but not if the tenant disclaims the intention to accept: Glossop v Ashley [1921] 2 K.B. 451.

<sup>62</sup> For the meaning of "unilateral contract," see below, p.37.

<sup>63</sup> [1893] 1 Q.B. 256; see above, p.13.

<sup>64</sup> See below, pp.38-41.

<sup>65</sup> See below, p.81.

<sup>66</sup> First Sport Ltd v Barclays Bank plc [1993] 1 W.L.R. 1229 at 1234 (where the card had been stolen and been presented to the retailer by the thief).

<sup>67</sup> ibid. at 1234-1235.

<sup>68</sup> Gardner, 12 O.J.L.S. 170.

<sup>69</sup> See, for example below, after n.79.

<sup>70</sup> But see below, p.26.

<sup>71</sup> Henthorn v Fraser [1892] 2 Ch.27 33; Adams v Lindsell (1818) 1 B. & Ald. 681; Potter & Sanders (1846) 6 Hare 1; Harris' Case (1872) L.R. 7 Ch.App. 587; cf. in criminal law, Treacy v DPP [1971] A.C. 537 (blackmail); contrast R. v Baxter [1972] 1 Q.B. 1 (attempt to obtain by deception). For an application of the same principle to the now uncommon situation where the acceptance is contained in a telegram, see Bruner v Moore [1904] 1 Ch.305; cf. Stevenson, Jacques & Co v McLean (1880) 5 Q.B.D. 346; Cowan v O'Connor (1888) 20 Q.B.D. 640 (place of acceptance).

<sup>72</sup> Brinkibon Ltd v Stahag Stahl und Stahlwarenhandels-gesellschaft mbH [1983] 2 A.C. 34 at 41; the "Post Office" here refers to the provider of the universal postal service under the Postal Services Act 2000, by whatever name that provider may from time to time be known.

<sup>73</sup> Re London & Northern Bank [1900] 1 Ch.220.

<sup>74</sup> Henthorn v Fraser [1892] 2 Ch.27 at 31.

any other proof of intention to accept would equally well show that the parties were in agreement. Another suggested reason for the rule is that, if it did not exist "no contract could ever be completed by the post. For if the [offerors] were not bound by their offer when accepted by the [offerees] till the answer was received, then the [offerees] ought not to be bound till after they had received the notification that the [offerors] had received their answer and assented to it. And so it might go on ad infinitum".<sup>75</sup> But it would be perfectly possible to hold that the acceptance took effect when it came to the notice of the offeror, whether the offeree knew of this or not. Such a rule would not result in an infinity of letters. Yet another suggested reason for the rule is that the Post Office is the common agent of both parties, and that communication to this agent immediately completes the contract.<sup>76</sup> But the contents of a sealed letter cannot realistically be said to have been communicated to the Post Office, which in any case is at most an agent to transmit the acceptance, and not to receive it.<sup>77</sup> A mere delivery of the acceptance to such an agent does not of itself complete a contract.<sup>78</sup> Finally, it has been suggested that the rule minimises difficulties of proof: it is said to be easier to prove that a letter has been posted than that it has been received. But this depends in each case on the efficiency with which the parties keep records of incoming and outgoing letters.<sup>79</sup>

The rule is in truth an arbitrary one, little better or worse than its competitors. When negotiations are conducted by post, one of the parties may be prejudiced if a posted acceptance is lost or delayed; for the offeree may believe that there is a contract and the offeror that there is none, and each may act in reliance on his belief. The posting rule favours the offeree, and is sometimes justified on the ground that an offeror who chooses to start negotiations by post takes the risk of delay and accidents in the post; or on the ground that the offeror can protect himself by expressly stipulating that he is not to be bound until actual receipt of the acceptance.<sup>80</sup> Neither justification is wholly satisfactory, for the negotiations may have been started by the offeree<sup>81</sup>; and the offer may be made on a form provided by the offeree,<sup>82</sup> in which case he, and not the offeror, will for practical purposes be in control of its terms. The rule does, however, serve a possibly useful function in limiting the offeror's power to withdraw his offer at will<sup>83</sup>; it makes a posted acceptance binding although that acceptance only reaches the offeror after a previously posted withdrawal reaches the offeree.<sup>84</sup>

(iii) Must be reasonable to use post. The posting rule only applies when it is reasonable to use the post as a means of communicating acceptance. Generally an offer made in a letter sent by post may be so accepted; but it may be reasonable to accept by post even though the offer was not sent in this way. In Henthorn v Fraser<sup>85</sup> the mere fact that the parties lived at a distance justified acceptance by post of an oral offer. It would not

<sup>75</sup> Adams v Lindsell (1818) 1 B. & Ald. 681 at 683. This case is usually considered to be one of the early leading authorities in support of the "general rule"; but in fact the court does not mention the posting of the acceptance at all.

<sup>76</sup> Household, etc. Insurance Co Ltd v Grant (1879) 4 Ex.D. 216 at 220.

<sup>77</sup> Henthorn v Fraser [1892] 2 Ch.27 at 33.

<sup>78</sup> See above, p.23.

<sup>79</sup> See Winfield, 55 L.Q.R. 509.

<sup>80</sup> Household, etc. Insurance Co Ltd v Grant (1879) 4 Ex.D. 216 at 223.

<sup>81</sup> It is often hard to tell which party is offeror and which is offeree, especially if the final offer was a counter-offer (see above, p.19).

<sup>82</sup> See below, p.30.

<sup>83</sup> See below, p.41. In countries in which the acceptance is only effective when communicated a similar result is often reached by legally limiting the offeror's power to withdraw his offer.

<sup>84</sup> See below, p.41.

<sup>85</sup> [1892] 2 Ch.27.

normally be reasonable to reply by a posted letter to an offer made by telex<sup>86</sup> email or telephone. Nor would it be reasonable to accept by post if the acceptor knew that the postal service was disrupted.<sup>87</sup>

(iv) Terms of the offer. The posting rule can be excluded by the terms of the offer. This may be so even though the offer does not expressly provide when the acceptance is to take effect. In Holmell Securities Ltd v Hughes<sup>88</sup> an offer to sell a house was made in the form of an option expressed “to be exercisable by notice in writing to the Intending Vendor . . .” Such a notice was posted but did not arrive. It was held that there was no contract of sale as the terms of the offer, on their true construction, required the acceptance to be actually communicated.

(v) Instantaneous and electronic communications. The posting rule does not apply to acceptances made by some instantaneous mode of communication, e.g. by telephone or by telex.<sup>89</sup> The reason why the rule does not apply in such cases is that the acceptor will often know at once that his attempt to communicate was unsuccessful,<sup>90</sup> so that it is up to him to make a proper communication. But a person who accepts by letter which goes astray may not know of the loss or delay until it is too late to make another communication.<sup>91</sup> Fax messages seem to occupy an intermediate position. The sender will know at once if his message has not been received at all, and where this is the position the message should not amount to an effective acceptance. But if the message is received in such a form that it is wholly or partly illegible, the sender is unlikely to know this at once, and it is suggested an acceptance sent by fax might well be effective in such circumstances. The same principles should apply to other forms of electronic communication such as e-mail<sup>92</sup> or web-site trading<sup>93</sup>: here again the effects of unsuccessful attempts to communicate should depend on whether the sender of the message knows (or has the means of knowing) at once of any failure in communication.

(vi) Applications of the posting rule. Discussions of this subject sometimes start by stating the “general rule” that an acceptance takes effect when posted, and then proceed

<sup>86</sup> cf. Quenerduaine v Cole (1883) 32 W.R. 185 (telegram).

<sup>87</sup> Bal v Van Staden [1902] T.S. 128.

<sup>88</sup> [1974] 1 W.L.R. 155; cf. New Hart Builders Ltd v Brindley [1975] Ch.342.

<sup>89</sup> Entores Ltd v Miles Far East Corp [1955] 2 Q.B. 327; Brinkibon Ltd v Stahag Stahl und Stahlwarenhandels-gesellschaft mbH [1983] 2 A.C. 34; cf. The Pendrecht [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 55 at 66; Gill & Duffus Landauer Ltd v London Export Corp GmbH [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 627; cf. The Pamela [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 249 at 252 (telexed notice withdrawing ship from charterparty). Such acceptances are therefore governed by the general rule stated at p.22, above, subject to exceptions (a) to (c) stated at pp.22–23, above. cf. (in tort) Diamond v Bank of London and Montreal [1979] Q.B. 333.

<sup>90</sup> See the Entores case, above, at 333 and the Brinkibon case, above, at 43.

<sup>91</sup> This would also be the position in the now uncommon case in which an acceptance by telegram or telex was dictated over the telephone and then went astray. It is submitted that the acceptance should therefore take effect when so dictated; for the contrary view, see Winfield, 55 L.Q.R. 449 at 455.

<sup>92</sup> For various possible times at which an email can be said to have been received, see Law Commission, Electronic Commerce: Formal Requirements in Electronic Communications (December 2001) §3.56; the present question is whether such a message may be effective before it is received. The Electronic Commerce (EC Directive) Regulations 2002 (SI 2002/2013), which implement most of EC Directive 2000/31 on Electronic Commerce [2000] O.J. L178/1, provide that the formal requirements contained in regs.9 and 11 do not apply to “contracts concluded exclusively by electronic mail or by equivalent individual communications”: regs.9(4) and 11(3).

<sup>93</sup> The Law Commission paper (above, n.92) §3.37 regards “clicking on a website button” as satisfying the requirement of signature but does not state whether it is an offer or an acceptance, or specify when it takes effect. Art.11.1 of the Directive on Electronic Commerce (above) states that “the order and acknowledgement are deemed to be received when the parties to whom they are addressed are able to access them”; and almost identical language is used in reg.11(2)(a) of the Regulations cited in n.92, above. But this form of words does not of itself answer the question whether the contract may not be concluded even before that time.

to deduce various "consequences" from this rule. In fact few, if any, judges or writers have been prepared to follow all these deductions to their logical conclusions; and it would be more accurate to admit that there is no single or universal rule which determines the effect of a posted acceptance.<sup>94</sup> The effect of such an acceptance has to be considered as against various competing factors, such as withdrawal of the offer, loss or delay of the acceptance, subsequent revocation of the acceptance, previous rejection of the offer and so forth. Obviously, a rule laid down in a case concerning the effect of a posted acceptance as against a withdrawal of the offer is no real guide to the solution of the problem whether such an acceptance is effective as against a subsequent revocation of the acceptance. The English cases in fact only support three "consequences" of the posting rule. The first (and probably the most important<sup>95</sup>) is that a posted acceptance prevails over a previously posted withdrawal of the offer which had not yet reached the offeree when the acceptance was posted.<sup>96</sup> A second, and more controversial,<sup>97</sup> application of the rule is that an acceptance takes effect on posting even though it never reaches the offeror because it is lost through an accident in the post,<sup>98</sup> and the same rule probably applies where the acceptance is merely delayed through such an accident.<sup>99</sup> Thirdly, the contract is taken to have been made at the time of posting so as to take priority over another contract affecting the subject-matter made after the original acceptance had been posted but before it had reached the offeror.<sup>1</sup> Whether a posted acceptance should take effect against other competing factors is a question of policy and convenience.<sup>2</sup> The posting rule will not apply where it would lead to "manifest inconvenience and absurdity".<sup>3</sup> Its scope is determined by practical considerations rather than by "deductions" from a "general" rule.

(vii) Misdirected acceptance. A letter of acceptance may be lost or delayed because it bears a wrong, or an incomplete, address. Normally, such misdirection will be due to the carelessness of the offeree. Although there is no authority precisely in point,<sup>4</sup> it is submitted that the posting rule should not apply to such cases. Even if an offeror can be said to take the risk of accidents in the post, it would be unreasonable to impose on him the further risk of the offeree's carelessness.

It does not follow that a misdirected acceptance should necessarily take effect when received. For such a rule may actually favour the careless acceptor, e.g. when an offer is made to sell "at the market price prevailing when this offer is accepted," and the market falls after the misdirected acceptance has been posted. Moreover, the misdirection may be due to the fault of the offeror himself, e.g. if he makes the offer in a letter on which his own address is incompletely or illegibly written, or if he uses an out-of-date letter-

<sup>94</sup> See Evans, 15 I.C.L.Q. 553.

<sup>95</sup> See above, p.25 at n.83.

<sup>96</sup> Harris' Case (1872) L.R. 7 Ch.App. 587; Byrne & Co v Leon van Tienhoven (1880) 5 C.P.D. 344; Henthorn v Fraser [1892] 2 Ch.27; Re London & Northern Bank [1990] 1 Ch.200; for the contrary view, see Rhode Island Tool Co v US, 130 Ct.Cl. 698, 128 F.Supp. 417 (1955).

<sup>97</sup> See above, p.24.

<sup>98</sup> Household, etc. Insurance v Grant (1879) 4 Ex.D. 216, overruling British and American Telegraph Co v Colson (1871) L.R. 6 Ex. 108.

<sup>99</sup> See Dunlop v Higgins (1848) 1 H.L.C. 381, which would probably be followed in England though it is expressly restricted (at 402) to Scots law.

<sup>1</sup> Potter v Sanders (1846) 6 Hare 1. This application of the rule can perhaps be explained as a reward for the superior diligence of the first acceptor.

<sup>2</sup> Brinkibon Ltd v Stahag Stahl und Stahlwarenhandels-gesellschaft mbH [1983] 2 A.C. 34 at 41; Gill & Duffus Landauer Ltd v London Export Corp GmbH [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 627 at 631.

<sup>3</sup> Holwell Securities Ltd v Hughes [1974] 1 W.L.R. 157 at 161.

<sup>4</sup> See, by way of analogy, Getreide-Import Gesellschaft v Contimar, etc. [1953] 1 W.L.R. 207 and 793.

head.<sup>5</sup> The better rule, therefore, seems to be that a misdirected acceptance takes effect (if at all) at the time which is least favourable to the party responsible for the misdirection.

(viii) Garbled messages. A message may be garbled as a result of some inaccuracy in transmission for which the sender is not responsible. This problem used to arise in the case of telegraphed messages and could still arise from the use of now more common modes of communication: e.g. where a telex or electronic message was corrupted in transmission without any fault on the part of the sender; and the discussion of garbled telegraphic messages in (and arising from) the older authorities may provide some guidance to the solution of such problems. In one such case, it was held that an offeror was not bound by a telegraphed offer which was garbled so as to indicate that he was placing an order for a different quantity of goods from that which he wished to buy.<sup>6</sup> But there is no English authority on the question whether an offeror would be bound where it was the acceptance rather than the offer which was garbled in this way. It is submitted that if the offeree sends a telegraphed message of acceptance in words corresponding to the offer, then (so long as it was reasonable for the offeree to accept in this way), the offeror would be bound by the acceptance and would not be entitled to treat it as a counter-offer. If an offeror takes the risk of such accidents in the post as loss or delay, he should similarly take the risk of errors in the transmission of a telegraphed message; for in each case the offeree will have no means of knowing that something has gone wrong until it is too late to make another, proper, communication.<sup>7</sup>

(ix) Revocation of posted acceptance. An offeree may, after posting an acceptance, attempt to revoke it by a later communication which reaches the offeror before, or at the same time as, the acceptance. There is no English authority on the effectiveness of such a revocation. One view is that the revocation has no effect, since, once a contract has been concluded by posting of the acceptance, it cannot be dissolved by the unilateral act of one party.<sup>8</sup> But this argument has little to commend it if (as has been suggested above) it is undesirable to resolve what are really issues of policy by making "logical" deductions from some "general" rule as to the effect of posted acceptances. As a matter of policy, the issue is whether the offeror would be unjustly prejudiced by allowing the offeree to rely on the subsequent revocation. On the one hand, it can be argued that the offeror cannot be prejudiced by such revocation as he had no right to have his offer accepted and as he cannot have relied on its having been accepted before he knew of the acceptance. Against this, it can be argued that, once the acceptance has been posted, the offeror can no longer withdraw his offer,<sup>9</sup> and that reciprocity demands that the offeree should likewise be held to his acceptance. For if the offeree could revoke the acceptance

<sup>5</sup> cf. Townsend's Case (1871) L.R. 13 Eq. 148, where the offeror gave his address as "36 Westland Row," omitting "Dublin." The actual reasoning of the case is obsolete since Household, etc. Insurance v Grant (1879) 4 Ex.1D. 216. Fault of one party may not be the effective cause of the misdirection if the resulting error is obvious to the other party.

<sup>6</sup> Henkel v Pape (1870) L.R. 6 Ex. 7.

<sup>7</sup> cf. above, p.26.

<sup>8</sup> This view is sometimes said to be supported by Wenckheim v Arndt (N.Z.) 1 J.R. 73 (1873), where the defendant by letter accepted an offer of marriage; her mother sent a telegram purporting to cancel it. The actual decision was that the mother had no authority to act on behalf of her daughter in this way. The view stated in the text is supported by Morrison v Thoeke, 155 So. 2d 889 (1963) and by A to Z Bazaars (Pty) Ltd v Minister of Agriculture 1974 (4) S.A. 392(C) (discussed by Turpin, [1975] C.L.J. 25) but contradicted by Dick v U.S., 82 F.Supp. 326 (1949). It is also sometimes said to be contradicted by Dunmore v Alexander (1830) 9 Shaw 190, but there the first letter was probably an offer; only the dissenting judge regarded it as an acceptance. See generally Hudson, 82 L.Q.R. 169. cf. Kinch v Bullard [1999] 1 W.L.R. 423 (notice which, by virtue of Law of Property Act 1925, s.196(3), had taken effect on being left at a person's place of abode, but without having been actually communicated to him, could not thereafter be withdrawn by sender).

<sup>9</sup> See above, p.26.

he would be able, without risk to himself, to speculate at the expense of the offeror. He could post his acceptance early in the morning of a working day and could, if the market moved against him, revoke his acceptance the same afternoon, while the offeror had no similar freedom of action. It has been suggested<sup>10</sup> that the offeror should take this risk just as much as he takes the risk of loss or delay; but here again it is submitted that while the offeror may take the risk of accidents in the post, he should not have to take risks due entirely to the conduct of the offeree.

So far, it has been assumed that it is in the offeror's interest to uphold the contract. But to hold the acceptance binding as soon as it was posted, in spite of an overtaking communication purporting to revoke it, might cause hardship to the offeror. This is particularly true where he had acted in reliance on the revocation. Suppose that A offers to sell B a car. After posting a letter of acceptance, B sends an overtaking telex, telling A to ignore that letter. On receipt of the telex, A sells the car to C. Could B change his mind yet again, and claim damages from A? There are several ways of avoiding such an unjust result. The first is to say that there had once been a contract but that it was later rescinded by mutual consent: B's telex was an offer to release A, which A accepted by conduct; communication of such acceptance could be deemed to have been waived. The second is to regard B's telex as a repudiation amounting to a breach of contract; and to say that, by "accepting" the breach, A has put an end to his obligations under the contract.<sup>11</sup> This analysis is preferable from A's point of view if the sale to C is for a lower price than that to B, for it would enable A to claim the difference from B as damages.<sup>12</sup>

An offeree who is bound by a contract made by an exchange of letters under the common law rules stated above may nevertheless have the "right to cancel" the contract under the Consumer Protection (Distance Selling) Regulations 2000 in circumstances to be more fully described below.<sup>13</sup> The legal consequences of the exercise of this right to cancel are, however, not entirely the same as those that would follow at common law if legal effect were given to the revocation of a posted acceptance.<sup>14</sup> For the purpose of the argument put forward above (that, if the revocation were effective, the offeree could speculate without risk to himself at the offeror's expense), it is also significant that the "right to cancel" under the Regulations does not (unless otherwise agreed) extend to contracts "for the supply of goods or services the price of which is dependent on fluctuations in the financial market which cannot be controlled by the supplier."<sup>15</sup>

(x) International sales. The Vienna Convention on Contracts for the International Sale of Goods, (which has not yet been ratified by the United Kingdom) governs not only the rights and duties of the parties to, but also the formation of, such contracts. Under the Convention, an offer takes effect when it "reaches" the offeree<sup>16</sup> and an acceptance when it "reaches" the offeror,<sup>17</sup> i.e. (in both cases) when it is communicated <sup>10</sup> Hudson, 82 L.Q.R. 169, who also argues that the offeror can protect himself by stipulating that he is not to be bound till the acceptance reaches him, or that the offeree is to be bound as soon as he posts the acceptance.

<sup>11</sup> See below, p.849.

<sup>12</sup> See below, pp.859 et seq. cf. Kinch v Bullard [1999] 1 W.L.R. 423 at 430: purported withdrawal by sender of a notice after it had taken effect held ineffective against addressee (above, n.8) but said (at 430–431) to be effective against sender.

<sup>13</sup> See below, p.30.

<sup>14</sup> See below, p.30, n.21.

<sup>15</sup> Consumer Protection (Distance Selling) Regulations 2000 (SI 2000/2334 implementing Dir.97/7 ([1997] O.J. L144/19)), reg.13(1)(b).

<sup>16</sup> Art.15(1).

<sup>17</sup> Art.18(2).

to the addressee or delivered to his address.<sup>18</sup> Thus there is no contract if the acceptance is lost in the post; but if the acceptance is delayed in transmission, it is effective, unless the offeror informs the offeree promptly on its receipt that he regards the offer as having lapsed.<sup>19</sup> Once an offer has become effective, it cannot be revoked after the offeree has dispatched his acceptance<sup>20</sup>; this preserves the English position that a posted acceptance prevails over a previously posted withdrawal (referred to in the Convention as a revocation). An acceptance may be withdrawn by a communication which reaches the offeror before (or at the same time as) the acceptance would have become effective<sup>21</sup> if there had been no such withdrawal.

(xi) Consumer's right to cancel distance contracts. A contract made by (for example) exchange of letters, faxes or emails or by website trading falls within the definition of a "distance contract" within the Consumer Protection (Distance Selling) Regulations 2000 if it is one for the supply of goods or services by a commercial supplier to a consumer.<sup>22</sup> The Regulations do not specify when such a contract is made<sup>23</sup>; but if it has been made, they give the consumer the right to cancel it<sup>24</sup> by notice within a cancellation period specified in the Regulations (e.g. of seven working days from the consumer's receipt of the goods which have been supplied under it).<sup>25</sup> The contract, if so cancelled, is as a general rule "treated as if it had not been made"<sup>26</sup> but this general rule is qualified in various ways.<sup>27</sup> The effect of the exercise of the right to cancel is therefore not the same as the effect of saying that no contract has been concluded by (e.g.) exchange of letters under the common law rules of offer and acceptance discussed in above; on the contrary, the very concept of the consumer's "right to cancel" is based on the assumption that, as a matter of common law, a contract has come into the existence. Moreover, the supplier has no right to cancel under the Regulations, so that the question whether he has entered into the contract continues to be governed by the common law rules.

3. Prescribed Method of Acceptance

(1) Compulsory method

Where an offer states that it can only be accepted in a specified way, the offeror is not, in general, bound unless acceptance is made in that way. Thus if the offeror asks for the acceptance to be sent to a particular place an acceptance sent elsewhere will not bind

<sup>18</sup> Art.24.

<sup>19</sup> Art.21(2).

<sup>20</sup> Art.16(1); "dispatch" is not defined.

<sup>21</sup> Art.22.

<sup>22</sup> SI 2000/2334 (implementing Dir.97/7 ([1997] O.J. L144/19)); for definitions of "distance contract", "consumer" and "supplier", see reg.3; for a list of methods of communication by which such a contract may be made, see ibid. Sch.1. For contracts to which only part of the Regulations apply, see reg.6.

<sup>23</sup> This is also true of the Electronic Commerce (EC Directive) Regulations 2002 (implementing Dir.2000/31 ([2000] O.J. L178/1), below, p.187) which merely provide that in the case of, for example, a contract made on a web-site, "the order and the acknowledgement of receipt [of the order] will be deemed to be received when the parties to whom the are addressed are able to access them" (reg.11(2)(a)). The effect of acknowledgement of receipt of an order falls to be determined as a matter of common law: see the definition of acceptance at p.17, above. The provision of reg.11(2)(a) quoted in this note does not, in any event apply to "contracts concluded exclusively by exchange of electronic mail or by equivalent individual communications": reg.11(3).

<sup>24</sup> reg.10.

<sup>25</sup> reg.11(2).

<sup>26</sup> reg.10(2).

<sup>27</sup> See, e.g. reg.13 (exceptions to right to cancel); reg.17 (dealing with restoration of goods to the supplier after cancellation).

him<sup>28</sup>; nor, if he asks for an acceptance in writing, will he be bound by one that is oral.<sup>29</sup> The rule is particularly strict where the offer is contained in an option.<sup>30</sup> The offeror will, however, be bound if he acquiesces in the different mode of acceptance and so waives the stipulated mode. Alternatively, a contract may be concluded if the purported acceptance (which is ineffective as such for failure to comply with the stipulated method) can be regarded as a counter-offer and if that counter-offer is then accepted by the counter-offeree.<sup>31</sup> Since such acceptance may be effected by conduct,<sup>32</sup> the contract may be concluded without any further communication between the parties after the original, ineffective, acceptance.

Where the offeror prescribes a method of acceptance, he usually does so with some particular object in view, e.g. to secure a speedy acceptance, or one which will prevent disputes from arising as to the terms of the agreement. An acceptance which accomplishes that object just as well as, or better than, the stipulated method may, by way of exception to the general rule, bind the offeror.<sup>33</sup> For the purpose of this exception, it must first be determined what object the offeror had in view. If he says "reply by letter sent by return of post" this may simply mean "reply quickly": the words may "fix the time for acceptance and not the manner of accepting."<sup>34</sup> If so, a reply by telex would suffice. But such a reply would not suffice if the offer meant "reply quickly and by letter, I do not like telexes as they are often obscure".

The rules on this subject are based on two assumptions: that the offer is drawn up by the offeror and that stipulations as to the mode of acceptance are put into it for his benefit. In modern conditions, these assumptions are often untrue, for it is increasingly common for an offer to be made on a form provided or drafted by the offeree: e.g. where a customer submits a proposal to enter into a hire-purchase agreement; or where an offer is made on a form of tender provided by the offeree. Stipulations as to the mode of acceptance in such documents are usually intended for the protection and benefit of the offeree. If the offeree accepts in some other way, this will often be evidence that he has waived the stipulation; and it is submitted that the acceptance ought to be treated as effective unless it can be shown that failure to use the stipulated mode has prejudiced the offeror.<sup>35</sup>

(2) Alternative method: silence

An offer may specify, not that it must, but that it may, be accepted in a particular way. In cases of this kind, particular difficulty arises from provisions to the effect that the offeree may accept by silence.

<sup>28</sup> Frank v Knight (1937) O.Q.P.D. 113; cf. Eliason v Henshaw (1819) 4 Wheat. 225.

<sup>29</sup> Financings Ltd v Stimson [1962] 1 W.L.R. 1184 at 1186. Contrast Hitchens v General Guarantee Corp [2001] EWCA Civ 359, The Times, March 13, 2001 (where there was no requirement that the acceptance must be in writing).

<sup>30</sup> Holmell Securities Ltd v Hughes [1974] 1 W.L.R. 157.

<sup>31</sup> Wettern Electric Ltd v Welsh Development Agency [1983] Q.B. 796.

<sup>32</sup> As in the Wettern Electricity case, above; provided, however, that such conduct is accompanied by the requisite contractual intention: see Harvela Investments Ltd v Royal Trust Co of Canada (CI) Ltd [1986] A.C. 207; and below, p.171.

<sup>33</sup> Manchester Diocesan Council for Education v Commercial and General Investments Ltd [1970] 1 W.L.R. 242.

<sup>34</sup> Tinn v Hoffmann & Co (1873) 29 L.T. 271 at 278; Manchester Diocesan Council for Education v Commercial & General Investments Ltd, above; cf. Edmund Murray v PSB Foundations (1992) 33 Con.L.R. 1.

<sup>35</sup> See Robophone Facilities v Blank [1966] 1 W.L.R. 1423; Carlyle Finance Ltd v Pallas Industrial Finance Ltd [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 659 at 670 (approving reasoning identical with that in the text above); cf. the Manchester Diocesan case, above, n.33. From this point of view, these cases are, it is submitted, to be preferred to Financings Ltd v Stimson [1962] 1 W.L.R. 1184.

(a) OFFEREE GENERALLY NOT BOUND. As a general rule, an offeree who simply does nothing on receipt of an offer which states that it may be accepted by silence is not bound. In Felthouse v Bindley<sup>36</sup> an uncle offered to buy his nephew's horse by a letter in which he said: "If I hear no more about him, I shall consider the horse mine." Later, the horse was, by mistake, included in an auction sale of the nephew's property. The uncle sued the auctioneer for damages for the conversion of the horse. It was held that, at the time of the auction, there was no contract for the sale of the horse to the uncle because "The uncle had no right to impose upon the nephew the sale of his horse . . . unless he chose to comply with the condition of writing to repudiate the offer . . ."<sup>37</sup> The reason for the rule is that it is, in general, undesirable to impose the trouble and expense of rejecting an offer on an offeree who does not wish to accept it. But in Felthouse v Bindley this was not the position. Before the auction, the nephew had told the auctioneer that he "intended to reserve" the horse for his uncle; and later correspondence showed that, at the time of the auction, the nephew did in fact wish to sell the horse to the uncle. In spite of this it was held that there was no contract because the nephew "had not communicated his intention to the uncle".<sup>38</sup> But the need to communicate an acceptance can be waived<sup>39</sup>; and it seems clear that the uncle's letter did waive it. In view of these facts, the actual decision is hard to support, but this is no criticism of the general rule laid down in the case.

The question whether silence can amount to an acceptance binding the offeree has also arisen in the cases, already discussed, in which the issue was whether an agreement to abandon an earlier agreement to submit a claim to arbitration could be inferred from inactivity, in the form of long delay in prosecuting the claim. Such a delay is now in certain circumstances a statutory ground for dismissing the claim for want of prosecution<sup>40</sup> but the statutory power to dismiss a claim on this ground can be excluded by agreement,<sup>41</sup> and similar questions of agreement to abandon other types of claim or remedy could still be governed by the common law principles developed in the arbitration cases. In these cases, it had been held that, even if one party's inactivity could be regarded as an offer to abandon the arbitration,<sup>42</sup> the mere silence or inactivity<sup>43</sup> of the other did not normally amount to an acceptance. For one thing, such inactivity was often<sup>44</sup> equivocal,<sup>45</sup> being explicable on other grounds (such as forgetfulness). For another, acceptance could not, as a matter of law, be inferred from silence alone<sup>46</sup> "save in the most exceptional circumstances".<sup>47</sup>

<sup>36</sup> (1862) 11 C.B.(N.S.) 869; affirmed (1863) New Rep. 401; Miller, 35 M.L.R. 489. cf. Financial Techniques (Planning Services) v Hughes [1981] I.R.L.R. 32 at 35.

<sup>37</sup> At 875.

<sup>38</sup> At 876.

<sup>39</sup> See above, p.24.

<sup>40</sup> Arbitration Act 1996, s.41(3).

<sup>41</sup> ibid. s.41(2).

<sup>42</sup> See above, p.10.

<sup>43</sup> For acceptance by silence and conduct, see below, p.33.

<sup>44</sup> But not always: see below, p.33 at n.52.

<sup>45</sup> e.g. Jayaar Impex Ltd v Toaken Group Ltd [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 437 at 445.

<sup>46</sup> The Leonidas D [1985] 1 W.L.R. 925 at 927; Rafsanjan Pistachio Producers Co-operative v Bank Leumi (UK) plc [1992] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 513 at 542; The Gas Enterprise [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 352 at 357 (affirmed without reference to this point ibid. at 364).

<sup>47</sup> The Leonidas D, above at 927; Vitol S.A v Norelf Ltd [1996] A.C. 800 at 812. Such "exceptional circumstances" may be illustrated by The Splendid Sun [1981] Q.B. 694 (where acceptance may have been by conduct: below, p.35) though this case is hard to reconcile with The Leonidas D, above: see The Antclizo [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 130 at 149 (affirmed [1988] 1 W.L.R. 603). cf. Cie. Française d'Importation etc. v Deutsche Continental Handelsgesellschaft [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 592 at 598; The Agrabele [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 223 at 224, 235. The Golden Bear [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 330 is hard to reconcile with these cases and was apparently doubted in The Antclizo, above: see [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 130 at 147.

(b) OFFEREE EXCEPTIONALLY BOUND? As the above reference to “exceptional circumstances” suggests, there may be exceptions to the general rule that an offeree is not bound by silence. If the offer has been solicited by the offeree, the argument that he should not be put to the trouble of rejecting it loses much of its force,<sup>48</sup> especially if the offer is made on a form provided by the offeree<sup>49</sup> and that form stipulates that silence may amount to acceptance.<sup>50</sup> Again, if there is a course of dealing between the parties, the offeror may be led to suppose that silence amounts to acceptance: e.g. where a retailer’s offers to buy goods from a wholesaler have in the past been accepted as a matter of course by the despatch of the goods in question.<sup>51</sup> In such a case it may not be unreasonable to require the offeree to give notice of his rejection of the offer, especially if the offeror, in reliance on his belief that the goods would be delivered in the usual way, had forborne from seeking an alternative supply. On a somewhat similar principle, one party’s wrongful repudiation of a contract may be accepted by the other party’s failure to take such further steps in the performance of that contract as he would have been expected to take, if he were treating the contract as still in force.<sup>52</sup> There may also be “an express undertaking or implied obligation to speak”<sup>53</sup> arising out of the course of negotiations between the parties, e.g. “where the offeree himself indicates that an offer is to be taken as accepted if he does not indicate the contrary by an ascertainable time.”<sup>54</sup> Failure to perform such an “obligation to speak” could be held to amount to an acceptance by silence. There is also the possibility that silence may constitute an acceptance by virtue of the custom of the trade or business in question.<sup>55</sup>

Where the offeree is under a “duty to speak”, his failure to perform that duty may thus enable the offeror to treat that failure as an acceptance by silence. But it is not normally open to the offeree in such cases to treat his own silence (in breach of his duty to speak) as an acceptance.<sup>56</sup> This course would be open to him only in situations such as that in Felthouse v Bindley,<sup>57</sup> in which the offeror had indicated (usually in the terms of the offer) that he would treat silence as an acceptance.

Even where silence of the offeree does not amount to an acceptance, it is arguable that he might be liable on a different basis. In Spiro v Lintern it was said that “If A sees B acting in the mistaken belief that A is under some binding obligation to him and in a manner consistent only with such an obligation, which would be to B’s disadvantage if A were thereafter to deny the obligation, A is under a duty to B to disclose the non-existence of the supposed obligation.”<sup>58</sup> Although this statement was made with reference to wholly different circumstances,<sup>59</sup> it could also be applied to certain cases in which an offeror had, to the offeree’s knowledge,<sup>60</sup> acted in reliance on the belief that his

<sup>48</sup> cf. Rust v Abbey Life Ins Co [1979] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 335.

<sup>49</sup> cf. above, p.30.

<sup>50</sup> As in Alexander Hamilton Institute v Jones, 234 Ill. App. (1924).

<sup>51</sup> As in Cole-McIntyre-Norfleet Co v Holloway, 141 Tenn. 679; 214 S.W. 87 (1919).

<sup>52</sup> Vitol SA v Norelf Ltd [1996] A.C. 800; see below, p.849.

<sup>53</sup> The Agrale [1985] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 496, 509, per Evans J., whose statement of the relevant legal principles was approved on appeal, though the actual decision was reversed on the facts: [1987] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 223 at 225. The case concerned an alleged “abandonment” by delay of an agreement to submit a claim to arbitration; this situation would now be governed by Arbitration Act 1996, s.41(3).

<sup>54</sup> Re Selectmove [1995] 1 W.L.R. 474 at 478 (where the point was left open).

<sup>55</sup> Minorities Finance Ltd v Afribank Nigeria Ltd [1995] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 134.

<sup>56</sup> Yona International Ltd v La Réunion Française, etc. [1996] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 84 at 110.

<sup>57</sup> See above, p.32, further discussed below.

<sup>58</sup> [1973] 1 W.L.R. 1002 at 1011.

<sup>59</sup> See below, p.716.

<sup>60</sup> See Yona International Ltd v La Réunion Française, etc. [1996] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 84 at 107 (where this requirement was not satisfied).

offer had been accepted by silence. The liability of the offeree would then be based on a kind of estoppel.<sup>61</sup> The application of this doctrine to cases of alleged acceptance by silence indeed gives rise to the difficulty that an estoppel can only arise out of a “clear and unequivocal”<sup>62</sup> representation, and that such a representation cannot generally be inferred from mere inactivity.<sup>63</sup> But this general rule does not preclude the application of the doctrine of estoppel to exceptional cases of the kind here under discussion, in which there are special circumstances which give rise to a “duty to speak”, and in which it would be unconscionable for the party under that duty to deny that a contract had come into existence.

It is finally possible for the offeree to be bound by silence if the offeror, to the offeree’s knowledge, actually performs in accordance with his offer and so confers a benefit on the offeree; though the better solution in this type of case would be to make the offeree restore the benefit rather than to hold him to an obligation to perform his part of a contract to which he had never agreed.

(c) OFFEROR BOUND? There is some authority for saying that the offeror cannot, any more than the offeree, be bound where the offeree simply remains silent in response to the offer,<sup>64</sup> and the case is not one of the exceptional ones discussed above<sup>65</sup> in which an offer can be accepted by silence. But it is submitted that the general rule laid down in Felthouse v Bindley<sup>66</sup> does not invariably lead to such a conclusion. For the object of this rule is to protect the offeree from having to incur the trouble and expense of rejecting the offer so as to avoid being bound. No such argument can normally be advanced for protecting the offeror. He may indeed be left in doubt on the question whether his offer has been accepted; but this is not a matter about which he can legitimately complain where he has drawn up his offer in terms which permit (and even encourage) acceptance by silence.<sup>67</sup> Thus it is submitted that the uncle in Felthouse v Bindley might have been bound if the nephew had resolved to accept the offer and had, in reliance on its terms, forbore from attempting to dispose of the horse elsewhere. This possibility has, indeed, been judicially doubted,<sup>68</sup> but in the case in which the doubt was raised it was not an express term of the offer that silence would be regarded as acceptance. Where the offeror has expressly formulated his offer in such terms, it is submitted that the offeree’s silence in response to the offer should be capable of binding the offeror.

It is settled that a creditor can accept his debtor’s offer to give additional security for a debt by simply forbearing to sue for the debt.<sup>69</sup> If such forbearance can be regarded as silence, this rule supports the view that acceptance by silence can bind the offeror. Another possible explanation of the rule is that a creditor who forbears accepts by conduct<sup>70</sup> rather than by silence.

<sup>61</sup> See below, pp.115, 403; cf. (in another context) The Stolt Loyalty [1993] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 281 at 289–291, affirmed without reference to this point, [1995] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 598. The case would not be one of estoppel by convention (below, p.119); for such estoppel is based on an agreed assumption of fact, while in cases of the present kind the question is whether there was any agreement.

<sup>62</sup> See below, pp.107, 403.

<sup>63</sup> See below, p.133.

<sup>64</sup> Fairline Shipping Corp v Adamson [1975] Q.B. 180 at 189.

<sup>65</sup> At nn.49–55.

<sup>66</sup> See above, p.31.

<sup>67</sup> This reasoning would, however, not apply where the terms of the offer had been drawn up by the offeree: cf. above, p.30.

<sup>68</sup> Fairline Shipping Corp v Adamson [1975] Q.B. 180 at 189.

<sup>69</sup> See below, p.90.

<sup>70</sup> See above, p.18.

(d) SILENCE AND CONDUCT. In Roberts v Hayward<sup>71</sup> a tenant accepted his landlord's offer of a new tenancy at an increased rent by simply staying on the premises. It was held that he had accepted the landlord's offer by silence; but it seems better to say that he accepted by conduct and that the landlord waived notice of acceptance.<sup>72</sup> Similarly an offer made to a landowner to occupy land under a licence containing specified terms may be accepted by the landowner's permitting the offeror to occupy the land.<sup>73</sup> An offeree is not, for the present purpose, "silent" merely because his acceptance is not expressed in words. The possibility of acceptance by conduct is, yet again, illustrated by the arbitration cases already mentioned, in which an agreement to abandon the proceedings was alleged to have arisen from delay in prosecuting them. As already noted, legislation has now dealt with the practical problems which used to arise from delay in the pursuit of arbitration claims,<sup>74</sup> but the reasoning of the arbitration cases could still apply where the legislative provisions have been excluded by agreement,<sup>75</sup> or where it was alleged that some other type of claim or remedy had been abandoned by tacit agreement. According to those cases, an offer of abandonment can be accepted by reacting to it, not merely by inactivity,<sup>76</sup> but also by some further conduct: e.g. by closing or disposing of relevant files.<sup>77</sup>

In Rust v Abbey Life Ins Co<sup>78</sup> the plaintiff applied and paid for a "property bond" which was allocated to her on the terms of the defendants' usual policy of insurance. After having retained this document for some seven months, she claimed the return of her payment, alleging that no contract had been concluded. The claim was rejected on the ground that her application was an offer which had been accepted by issue of the policy. But it was further held that, even if the policy constituted a counter-offer, this counter-offer had been accepted by "the conduct of the plaintiff in doing and saying nothing for seven months. . . ."<sup>79</sup> Thus mere inaction was said to be sufficient to constitute acceptance; and it seems to have amounted to no more than silence in spite of having been described as "conduct". The conclusion that it amounted to acceptance can, however, be justified in the circumstances. The negotiations had been started by the plaintiff<sup>80</sup> (the counter-offeree), and in view of this fact it was reasonable for the defendants to infer from her long silence that she had accepted the terms of the policy which had been sent to her and which she must be "taken to have examined".<sup>81</sup> The case thus falls within one of the suggested exceptions<sup>82</sup> to the general rule that an offeree is not bound by silence.

<sup>71</sup> (1828) 3 C. & P. 432.

<sup>72</sup> cf. above, p.23.

<sup>73</sup> Wettern Electric Ltd v Welsh Development Agency [1983] Q.B. 796.

<sup>74</sup> Arbitration Act 1996, s.41(3); above, p.31.

<sup>75</sup> ibid. s.41(2).

<sup>76</sup> See above, p.31; cf. Collin v Duke of Westminster [1985] Q.B. 581.

<sup>77</sup> See The Splendid Sun [1981] Q.B. 694 at 712, 713 ("closed their files"); cf. ibid. 706 ("did so act"); The Multibank Holsatia [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 486 at 493 (where the offeree had destroyed relevant files, so that the case was not one of mere inaction). Tracomini S.A v Anton C Nielsen A/S [1984] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 195 can be supported on the same ground even though it was based on the decision at first instance in The Leonidas D which was reversed on appeal: [1985] 1 W.L.R. 925, above, p.10. There seems to have been no "conduct" amounting to acceptance in The Golden Bear [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 300.

<sup>78</sup> [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 355.

<sup>79</sup> [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 335 at 340, affirming [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 386 at 393.

<sup>80</sup> cf. above, p.29 and Vitol SA v Norelf Ltd [1996] A.C. 800, above, p.33.

<sup>81</sup> Yona International Ltd v La Réunion Française [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 84 at 110 (where no inference of assent could be drawn from silence).

<sup>82</sup> See above, pp.33–34.

4. Acceptance in Ignorance of Offer

(1) Generally ineffective

The general view is that acceptance in ignorance of an offer cannot create a contract since the parties must reach agreement: it is not enough that their wishes happen to coincide: the act or promise constituting the acceptance must be “given in exchange for the offer”.<sup>83</sup> The same reasoning applies where a person once knew of the offer but had at the time of the alleged acceptance forgotten it.<sup>84</sup> Thus it has been held in other jurisdictions that a person who gives information for which a reward has been offered cannot claim the reward unless at the time of giving it he knew of the offer of reward.<sup>85</sup> The English case of Gibbons v Proctor<sup>86</sup> is sometimes thought to support the contrary view, but can be explained on the ground that the plaintiff did know of the offer of reward by the time the information was given on his behalf to the person named in the advertisement.<sup>87</sup>

In the reward cases just considered, it is hard to see what prejudice the offeror would suffer if he had to pay the reward to someone who had complied with the terms of the offer without being aware of it. The reasons for holding that there is no contract in such a case seem to be largely doctrinal; but more practical difficulties can arise where the acts alleged to amount to an acceptance can not only confer rights on the actor, but also deprive him of rights<sup>88</sup> or impose duties on him. This last possibility may be illustrated by reference to Upton Rural DC v Powell<sup>89</sup> where the defendant, whose house was on fire, telephoned the Upton police and asked for “the fire brigade”. He was entitled to the service of the Pershore fire brigade free of charge as he lived in its district; but the police called the Upton fire brigade, in the belief that the defendant lived in that district. The latter fire brigade for a time shared this belief and thought “that they were rendering gratuitous services in their own area”. It was held that the defendant was contractually bound to pay for these services. But even if the defendant’s telephone call was an offer, it is hard to see how the Upton brigade’s services, given with no thought of reward, could be an acceptance. It would have been better to give the claimants a restitutionary remedy than to hold that there was a contract. The case was concerned only with the rights of the fire brigade, but the fire brigade could also have owed more extensive duties as contractors than as volunteers. It may well be hard to subject a person who reasonably thinks that he is a volunteer to the more stringent duties of a contractor.<sup>90</sup>

(2) Cross-offers

The requirement that the offeree must know of the offer at the time of the alleged acceptance also accounts for the rule that there is no contract if two persons make identical cross-offers, neither party knowing of the other’s offer when he makes his own,

<sup>83</sup> R. v Clarke (1927) 40 C.I.R. 227 at 233; Tracomis SA v Anton C Nielsen [1984] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 195 at 203; Lark v Outhwaite [1991] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 132 at 140.

<sup>84</sup> R. v Clarke, above, at 241.

<sup>85</sup> Bloom v American Swiss Watch Co (1915) A.D. 100; the American authorities are divided: see Corbin, Contracts, s.59.

<sup>86</sup> (1891) 64 L.T. 594, sub nom. Gibson v Proctor, 55 J.P. 616. See Hudson, 84 L.Q.R. 513.

<sup>87</sup> “The information ultimately reached Penn at a time when the plaintiff knew that the reward had been offered”: 55 J.P. 616.

<sup>88</sup> e.g. Tracomis SA v Anton C Nielsen [1984] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 195 at 203.

<sup>89</sup> [1942] 1 All E.R. 220; Mitchell, 12 J.C.L. 78. For the fire brigade’s duty apart from contract, see John Munroe (Acrylics) Ltd v London Fire & Civil Defence Authority [1997] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 161.

<sup>90</sup> cf. BSC v Cleveland Bridge & Engineering Co Ltd [1984] 1 All E.R. 504 at 510. Quaere what the position should be where one party thinks that he is giving or getting a gratuitous service while the other thinks that he is contracting.

e.g. if A writes to B offering to sell B his car for £5,000 and B simultaneously writes to A offering to buy the car for £5,000. If no further communication took place in such a case, the parties might well be in doubt as to whether there was indeed a contract between them; and the view that “cross offers are not an acceptance of each other”<sup>91</sup> can be supported on the ground that it tends to promote certainty.

(3) Motive for acceptance

A person who knows of the offer may do the act required for acceptance with some motive other than that of accepting the offer. In Williams v Carwardine<sup>92</sup> the defendant offered a reward of £20 to anyone who gave information leading to the conviction of the murderers of Walter Carwardine. The plaintiff knew of the offer, and, thinking that she had not long to live, signed a “voluntary statement to ease my conscience, and in hopes of forgiveness hereafter”. This statement resulted in the conviction of the murderers. It was held that the plaintiff had brought herself within the terms of the offer and was entitled to the reward. Patteson J. said: “We cannot go into the plaintiff’s motives”.<sup>93</sup> Similarly, in Carlill v Carbolic Smoke Ball Co<sup>94</sup> the plaintiff recovered the £100, although her predominant motive in using the smoke ball was (presumably) to avoid catching influenza. But in the Australian case of R. v Clarke<sup>95</sup> a reward had been offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderers of two police officers. Clarke, who knew of the offer and was himself suspected of the crime, gave such information. He admitted that he had done so to clear himself of the charge, and with no thought of claiming the reward. His claim for the reward failed as he had not given the information “in exchange for the offer”.<sup>96</sup> It seems that an act which is wholly motivated by factors other than the existence of the offer cannot amount to an acceptance,<sup>97</sup> but if the existence of the offer plays some part, however small, in inducing a person to do the required act, there is a valid acceptance of the offer.

5. Acceptance in Unilateral Contracts

(1) Classification

An offer of a unilateral contract is made when one party promises to pay the other a sum of money<sup>98</sup> if the other will do (or forbear from doing) something without making any promise to that effect: for example, when one person promises to pay another £100 if he will walk from London to York,<sup>99</sup> or find and return the promisor’s lost dog, or give up smoking for a year.<sup>1</sup> The contract which arises in these cases is called “unilateral” because it arises without the offeree’s having made any counter-promise to perform the required act or forbearance; it is contrasted with a bilateral contract, in which each party undertakes an obligation and in which acceptance, as a general rule, takes the form of a communication by the offeree of his counter-promise. The distinction between the two

<sup>91</sup> Tinn v Hoffmann & Co (1873) 29 L.T. 271 at 278.

<sup>92</sup> (1833) 5 C. & P. 566; 4 B. & Ad. 621; it must be assumed that the plaintiff knew of the offer: Carlill v Carbolic Smoke Ball Co Ltd [1892] 2 Q.B. at 489, n.2.

<sup>93</sup> 4 B. & Ad. at 623.

<sup>94</sup> [1893] 1 Q.B. 256.

<sup>95</sup> (1927) 40 C.L.R. 227; contrast Simonds v US, 308 F. 2d 160 (1962).

<sup>96</sup> At 233.

<sup>97</sup> Lark v Outhwaite [1991] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 132 at 140.

<sup>98</sup> Or to do some other act, or to forbear from doing something. In the text we shall deal only with the most common case of a promise to pay money.

<sup>99</sup> An old example: Rogers v Snow (1573) Dalison 94; cf. Great Northern Ry v Witham (1873) L.R. 9 C.P. 16 at 19. Its modern version is the “sponsored walk”.

<sup>1</sup> cf. Hamer v Sidway, 124 N.Y. 538 (1881).

types of contract sometimes gives rise to difficulty,<sup>2</sup> because a contract may be in its inception unilateral, but become bilateral in the course of its performance.<sup>3</sup> For example, A may promise to pay B £1000 for some service (such as repainting A's house) which B does not promise to render. Here B would not be liable if he did nothing; but once he began the work (e.g. by stripping off the old paint) he might be held to have impliedly promised<sup>4</sup> to complete it, so that at this stage the contract would become bilateral<sup>5</sup> and both parties would be bound by it.

(2) General rules as to acceptance

Once a promise is classified as an offer of a unilateral contract, a number of rules apply to the acceptance of such an offer. First, the offer can be accepted by fully performing the required act or forbearance.<sup>6</sup> Secondly, there is no need to give advance notice of acceptance to the offeror.<sup>7</sup> And thirdly, the offer can, like all other offers, be withdrawn before it has been accepted. But there is much dispute as to the exact stage at which the offer is "accepted" so as to deprive the offeror of the power of withdrawal. It is probable that the offer can be accepted only by some performance and not by a counter-promise to walk to York, or to look for the lost dog, or to give up smoking; for such a counter-promise would not be what the offeror had bargained for. Thus the offeror could still withdraw after such a counter-promise had been made.

(3) Acceptance by part performance

It is less clear whether the offeror can still withdraw after the offeree has partly performed the required act or forbearance, e.g. if he has walked half-way to York or refrained from smoking for six months. The first problem (which will be discussed here) is whether the offeree has at this stage accepted the offer; the second (to be discussed in Chapter 3<sup>8</sup>) is whether he has provided consideration for the offeror's promise.

(a) IN GENERAL. According to one view, there is no contract until the required act or forbearance has been completed, and this is said to give effect to the intention of the parties, each of whom intends, until then, to reserve a locus poenitentiae.<sup>9</sup> But in most cases<sup>10</sup> it is unlikely that the offeree intends to expose himself to the risk of withdrawal <sup>2</sup> See generally Llewellyn, 48 Yale L.J. 1, 799. cf. the American Law Institute's Restatement of the Law of Contracts (hereinafter called Restatement, Contracts) §12; the Restatement of the Law Second, Contracts (hereinafter called Restatement 2d., Contracts), §45 substitutes the term "option contract", without any very obvious increase in clarity.

<sup>3</sup> cf. The Eurymedon [1975] A.C. 154, 167-8 ("a bargain initially unilateral but capable of becoming mutual"). For this classification of the contract in that case, see further p.631, below.

<sup>4</sup> According to a dictum in Little v Courage Ltd (1995) 70 P. & C.R. 469 at 475, terms which impose legal obligations cannot be implied into a unilateral contract; but this view would not preclude such a contract from becoming bilateral after it had originally come into existence. See further p.205, below.

<sup>5</sup> See The Unique Mariner [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 37 at 51-52; The Kurnia Dewi [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 553 at 559; contrast BSC v Cleveland Bridge & Engineering Co Ltd [1984] 1 All E.R. 504 at 510-511 where such an implied promise was negated by the fact that the terms of a bilateral contract were still under negotiation and were never agreed. It is not clear whether the situation discussed in Offord v Davies (1862) 12 C.B.N.S. 748 at 753 falls into the category of a unilateral or into that of a bilateral contract.

<sup>6</sup> See Daulia Ltd v Four Millbank Nominees Ltd [1978] Ch.231 at 238; cf. Harvela Investments Ltd v Royal Trust of Canada (CI) Ltd [1986] A.C. 207 at 224.

<sup>7</sup> Carlill v Carbolic Smoke Ball Co [1893] 1 Q.B. 256; Bowerman v Association of British Travel Agents [1995] N.I.J. 1815.

<sup>8</sup> See below, p.151.

<sup>9</sup> Wormser in Selected Readings on the Law of Contracts, p.307; but for the same writer's later views see 3 J.Leg.Educ. 146.

<sup>10</sup> For a possible exception, see below, p.39.

when he has partly performed and is willing and able<sup>11</sup> to complete performance for the sake of securing the promised benefit.<sup>12</sup> The general view is that it would cause hardship to the offeree to allow the offeror to withdraw in such a case; and most writers try to find some reason for saying that part performance prevents the offeror from withdrawing the offer. One possibility is to say that the offeror makes two offers: (1) the principal offer and (2) a collateral one to keep the principal offer open once performance has begun; this latter offer is accepted by beginning to perform.<sup>13</sup> But this analysis is artificial: it is more realistic to say that the principal offer itself is accepted by beginning to perform.<sup>14</sup> It has been objected that this cannot simply be asserted but must be explained.<sup>15</sup> The explanation appears to be that acceptance is no more (or less) than an unqualified expression of assent to the terms of the offer by words or conduct; and that the question whether an inference of such assent can be drawn from part performance is simply one of fact. The sight of a man walking northwards from London may or may not suggest that he does so in response to an offer to pay him £100 if he reaches York, but, if his conduct does clearly suggest this, there is no theoretical difficulty in saying that he has accepted the offer. Factual difficulties might, of course, arise in distinguishing between commencement of performance and mere preparation to perform. Thus it is probable that an offer of a reward for the return of lost property could still be withdrawn after someone had spent time looking for the property without success, but not after he had actually found it and was in the process of returning it to the owner.

Support for the above view is provided by Errington v Errington<sup>16</sup> where a father bought a house subject to a mortgage, allowed his son and daughter-in-law to live in it, and told them that, if they paid the mortgage instalments, the house would be theirs when the mortgage was paid off. The couple started to live in the house and paid some of the mortgage instalments; but they did not bind themselves to go on making the payments. It was held that this arrangement amounted to a contract which could not, after the father's death, be revoked by his personal representatives. Denning L.J. said:

"The father's promise was a unilateral contract—a promise of the house in return for their act of paying the instalments. It could not be revoked by him once the couple entered on performance of the act, but it would cease to bind him if they left it incomplete and unperformed, which they have not done."<sup>17</sup>

(b) CONTINUING GUARANTEES. The view that part performance of a unilateral contract can amount to an acceptance is further supported by the law relating to continuing guarantees. These may be divisible, where each advance constitutes a separate transaction; or indivisible e.g. where, on A's admission to an association, B guarantees all liabilities that A may incur as a member of the association.<sup>18</sup> If the guarantee is divisible, <sup>11</sup> It is assumed that performance remains within the offeree's power. If not, the offeror can withdraw: see Morrison SS Co v The Crown (1924) 20 Ll.L.R. 283.

<sup>12</sup> Lord Diplock in the Harvela case [1986] A.C. 207 at 224 can be read as depriving the offeror of the power to withdraw as soon as his offer is communicated (i.e. before any performance); but in that case the offeree had completely performed the required act by making the requested bid.

<sup>13</sup> McGoveney, Selected Readings, p.300.

<sup>14</sup> Pollock, Principles of Contract (13th ed.), p.19; Ballantine, Selected Readings, p.312.

<sup>15</sup> McGoveney, above.

<sup>16</sup> [1952] 1 K.B. 290. The reasoning of this case was doubted, but not on this point, in National Provincial Bank Ltd v Ainsworth [1965] A.C. 1175 at 1239–1240, 1251–1252 and in Ashburn Anstalt v Arnold [1989] Ch.1, 17 (overruled on another point in Prudential Assurance Co Ltd v London Residuary Body [1992] A.C. 386); see below, p.559, n.7. See also Beaton v McDivitt (1988) 13 N.S.W.L.R. 162 at 175.

<sup>17</sup> [1952] 1 K.B. 290 at 295.

<sup>18</sup> As in Lloyd's v Harper (1880) 16 Ch.D. 290.

it can be revoked at any time with regard to future advances<sup>19</sup>; but an indivisible guarantee cannot be revoked after the creditor has begun to act on it by giving credit to the principal debtor.<sup>20</sup> This rule applies even though the contract of guarantee is unilateral in the sense that the creditor has not made any promise to the guarantor (in return for the guarantee) to give credit to the debtor.

(c) BANKERS' IRREVOCABLE CREDITS. This subject is more fully explained in Chapter 3.<sup>21</sup> Here it need only be said that the essence of the system is that a bank, on the instruction of its customer (usually a buyer of goods) notifies a third person (usually the seller) that it has opened an irrevocable credit in his favour, promising to pay him a stipulated sum if he will present certain specified documents to the bank. The general view is that the bank cannot revoke the promise once it has been notified to the seller; and, as the seller makes no promise to the bank, this result is sometimes explained in terms of a unilateral contract between these parties. In most cases there will be some act of part performance by the seller, e.g. in shipping the goods so as to procure the required documents. But the bank's promise is regarded as binding as soon as it is notified to the seller, i.e. before he has done any act in response to it. The binding force of such irrevocable credits is not, therefore, easily explicable in terms of acceptance of an offer.

(d) ESTATE AGENTS' CONTRACTS. Where an estate agent is engaged to negotiate the sale of a house, it is arguable that his client's promise to pay a commission on sale gives rise to a unilateral contract, for in one case of this kind it was said that "No obligation is imposed on the agent to do anything."<sup>22</sup> It is settled that the client (the offeror) can, without liability, revoke his instructions before a claim to commission has accrued, in spite of the fact that the agent (the offeree) has made considerable efforts to find a purchaser.<sup>23</sup> Hence these cases could be said to support the view that an offer of a unilateral contract can be withdrawn after part performance by the offeree. But the better explanation is that this is one of the exceptional cases in which, on the true construction of the offer, a locus poenitentiae is reserved to the client even after part performance by the agent. This view is supported by the fact that the right to revoke instructions exists even where the contract is bilateral because the agent has, expressly or by implication, made some promise, e.g. one to use his best endeavours to effect a sale<sup>24</sup> or one to bear advertising expenses.<sup>25</sup> Such promises have been found to exist where the agent has been appointed "sole agent", but in practice they are commonly made by other agents as well. A "sole agent" is entitled to damages if the client sells through another agent,<sup>26</sup> but not if he simply revokes his instructions or sells "privately", without the help of any agent at all.<sup>27</sup> These rules apply irrespective of the unilateral or bilateral nature of the contract; so that the estate agency cases shed little,

<sup>19</sup> As in Offord v Davies (1862) 12 C.B.N.S. 748.

<sup>20</sup> Lloyd's v Harper, above.

<sup>21</sup> See below, p.152.

<sup>22</sup> Luxor (Eastbourne) Ltd v Cooper [1941] A.C. 108 at 124. In fact the agent often does undertake to do something; see below, nn.24, 25. See generally Murdoch, (1975) 91 L.Q.R. 357.

<sup>23</sup> See below, p.742.

<sup>24</sup> Christopher v Essig [1958] W.N. 461; John McCann & Co v Pow [1974] 1 W.L.R. 1643 at 1647; Wood v Lucy (Lady Duff-Gordon), 118 N.E. 214 (1917) (where such a promise was implied). On the question whether such a promise is sufficiently certain to have legal effect, see below, pp.48, 167.

<sup>25</sup> cf. Bentall, Horsley & Baldry v Vicary [1931] 1 K.B. 253.

<sup>26</sup> Hampton & Sons Ltd v George [1939] 3 All E.R. 627; Christopher v Essig [1958] W.N. 461, below, p.714.

<sup>27</sup> See below, p.744.

if any, light on the question of acceptance by part performance of unilateral contracts.

(e) EXTENT OF RECOVERY. Where a unilateral contract takes the shape of a promise to pay a sum of money, it is generally assumed that the promisee must either get nothing or the full sum. Perhaps some compromise is possible. Suppose the promisee has walked half-way to York before the offer is withdrawn. It is arguable that he should desist and recover his expenses, or a reasonable sum.<sup>28</sup> This might be fairer to both parties than the “all or nothing” solutions which are usually canvassed.<sup>29</sup>

SECTION 3. TERMINATION OF OFFER

1. Withdrawal

(1) Communication to offeree generally required

As a general rule, an offer can be withdrawn at any time before it is accepted.<sup>30</sup> It is not withdrawn merely by acting inconsistently with it, e.g. by disposing of the subject-matter.<sup>31</sup> Notice of the withdrawal must be given and must actually reach the offeree: mere posting will not suffice. In Byrne & Co v Leon van Tienhoven<sup>32</sup> an offer to sell tinplates was posted in Cardiff on October 1 and reached the offerees in New York on October 11, and they immediately accepted it by a telegram which they confirmed by a letter of October 15. Meanwhile, the offerors had on October 8 posted a letter withdrawing their offer, but that letter of withdrawal did not reach the offerees until October 20. It was held that there was a contract since the withdrawal had not been communicated when the offer was accepted.<sup>33</sup> Thus there was a contract in spite of the fact that the parties were demonstrably not in agreement, for when the offerees first knew of the offer, the offerors had already ceased to intend to deal with the offerees. The rule is based on convenience; for no one could rely on a postal offer if it could be withdrawn by a letter already posted but not yet received.

(2) Communication need not come from offeror

Although withdrawal must be communicated to the offeree, it need not be communicated by the offeror. It is sufficient if the offeree knows from any reliable source that the offeror no longer intends to contract with him. Thus in Dickinson v Dodds<sup>34</sup> it was held that an offer to sell land could not be accepted after the offeror had, to the offeree's knowledge, decided to sell the land to a third party. The decision is based on the fact that

<sup>28</sup> Unless the promisee has a “substantial or legitimate interest” in going on, this may be the law under the principles laid down in White & Carter (Councils) Ltd v McGregor [1962] A.C. 413, below, pp.1016–1019.

<sup>29</sup> Fuller & Perdue, 46 Yale L.J. at p.411.

<sup>30</sup> Routledge v Grant (1828) 4 Bing 653; Offord v Davies (1862) 12 C.B.N.S. 748; Tuck v Baker [1990] 2 E.G.L.R. 195; Scammell v Dicker [2001] 1 W.L.R. 631; Bircham & Co Nominees (No.2) v Worrell Holdings [2001] EWCA Civ 775; (2001) 82 P. & C.R. 472 at [24], [35]; Dunmore v Alexander (1830) 8 Shaw 190; cf. Defamation Act 1996, s.2(6). For a statutory exception, see Companies Act 1985, s.82(7); and see Vienna Convention (above, p.28) Art.16(2).

<sup>31</sup> Adams v Lindsell (1818) 1 B. & Ald. 681; Stevenson, Jacques & Co v McLean (1880) 5 Q.B.D. 346; contrary dicta in Dickinson v Dodds (1876) 2 Ch.D. 463 at 472 would no longer be followed.

<sup>32</sup> (1880) 5 C.P.D. 344. Under Consumer Credit Act 1974, s.69(1)(ii) and (7) posting is, exceptionally, sufficient.

<sup>33</sup> The same result would follow under Vienna Convention (above, p.28) Art.16(1), though under Arts 18(2) and 24 the contract would not be made until the acceptance was communicated to the offeror or delivered to his address.

<sup>34</sup> (1876) 2 Ch.D. 463; cf. Cartwright v Hoogstoel (1911) 105 L.T. 628.

there is in such a case no agreement between the parties. But this would be equally true if the offeree did not know of the withdrawal at all when he accepted the offer: yet in that case there is normally<sup>35</sup> a contract.<sup>36</sup> The rule that communication of withdrawal need not come from the offeror can be a regrettable source of uncertainty. It puts on the offeree the possibly difficult task of deciding whether his source of information is reliable, and it may also make it hard for him to tell exactly when the offer was withdrawn. In Dickinson v Dodds, for example, it is not clear whether this occurred when the offeree realised that the defendant had (a) sold the land to the third party, or (b) begun to negotiate with the third party, or (c) simply decided not to sell to the plaintiff. Certainty would be promoted if the rule were that the withdrawal must be communicated by the offeror, as well as to the offeree.

(3) Exceptions

The general rule that the withdrawal must be “brought to the mind of”<sup>37</sup> the offeree is subject to a number of exceptions. First, the requirement cannot be taken quite literally where an offer is made to a company whose mail is received, opened and sorted in different offices and then distributed to be dealt with in various departments. Is a letter withdrawing such an offer communicated when it is received, or when it is opened, or when it is actually read by the responsible officer?<sup>38</sup> In the interests of certainty it would probably be held that communication took place when the letter was “opened in the ordinary course of business or would have been so opened if the ordinary course was followed.”<sup>39</sup> Secondly (as the concluding words of the passage just quoted suggest) the general rule may be displaced by the conduct of the offeree. A withdrawal which was delivered to the offeree’s last known address would be effective if he had moved without notifying the offeror. Similarly, a withdrawal which had reached the offeree would be effective even though he had simply failed to read it after it had reached him: this would be the position where a withdrawal by telex or fax reached the offeree’s office during business hours<sup>40</sup> even though it was not actually read by the offeree or by any of his staff till the next day.<sup>41</sup> Of course the withdrawal would not be effective in such a case, if it had been sent to the offeree at a time when he and all responsible members of his staff were, to the offeror’s knowledge, away on holiday or on other business.<sup>42</sup> A third exception to the requirement that a withdrawal must be actually communicated relates to offers made to the public, e.g. of rewards for information leading to the arrest of the perpetrator of a crime. As it is impossible for the offeror to ensure that the notice of withdrawal comes to the attention of everyone who knew of the offer, it seems to be enough for him to take reasonable steps to bring the withdrawal to the attention of such persons, even though it does not in fact come to the attention of them all.<sup>43</sup>

<sup>35</sup> i.e. subject to the exceptions stated in the following paragraph.

<sup>36</sup> Byrne & Co v Leon van Tienhoven (1880) 5 C.P.D. 344, above, n.32.

<sup>37</sup> Henthorn v Fraser [1892] 2 Ch.27 at 32.

<sup>38</sup> cf. Currie v London, etc. Bank [1908] 1 K.B. 291 at 300–301 (notice to countermand a cheque).

<sup>39</sup> Eaglehill Ltd v J Needham (Builders) Ltd [1973] A.C. 992 at 1011, discussing notice of dishonour of a cheque; The Pamela [1995] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 249 at 252; contrast The Pendrecht [1980] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 56 at 66 (telex notice of arbitration).

<sup>40</sup> For the effect of such messages when sent out of business hours, see above, p.22.

<sup>41</sup> cf. The Brimnes [1975] Q.B. 929 (notice withdrawing ship from charterparty).

<sup>42</sup> cf. Brinkibon Ltd v Stahag Stahl und Stahlwarenhandels-gesellschaft mbH [1983] 2 A.C. 34 at 42 (communication of acceptance).

<sup>43</sup> Shuey v US, 92 U.S. 73 (1875).

2. Rejection

An offer is terminated by rejection.<sup>44</sup> An attempt to accept an offer on new terms, not contained in the offer, may be a rejection of the offer accompanied by a counter-offer.<sup>45</sup> An offeree who makes such an attempt cannot later accept the original offer.<sup>46</sup> A communication from the offeree may be construed as a counter-offer (and hence as a rejection) even though it takes the form of a question as to the offeror's willingness to vary the terms of the offer.<sup>47</sup> But such a communication is not necessarily a counter-offer: it may be a mere inquiry<sup>48</sup> or request for information made without any intention of rejecting the terms of the offer. Whether the communication is a counter-offer or a request for information depends on the intention, objectively ascertained,<sup>49</sup> with which it was made. If, for example, an offer is made to sell a house at a specified price, an inquiry whether the intending vendor is prepared to reduce the price will not amount to a rejection if the inquiry is "merely exploratory."<sup>50</sup>

It seems that a rejection has no effect unless it is actually communicated to the offeror. There is no ground of convenience for holding that it should take effect when posted. The offeree will not act in reliance on it as he derives no rights or liabilities from it; and the offeror will not know that he is free from the offer until the rejection is actually communicated to him. Hence if a letter of rejection is overtaken by an acceptance sent by telex there should be a contract, provided that the offeree has made his final intention clear to the offeror. But once the rejection had reached the offeror he should not be bound by an acceptance posted after the rejection and also reaching the offeror after the rejection. To hold the offeror bound,<sup>51</sup> merely because the acceptance was posted before the rejection had reached him, could expose him to hardship, particularly when he had acted on the rejection, e.g. by disposing elsewhere of the subject-matter. If the offeree has posted a rejection and then wishes, after all, to accept the offer, he should ensure that his subsequently posted acceptance actually comes to the notice of the offeror before the latter receives the rejection.

3. Lapse of Time

An offer which is expressly stated to last for a fixed time cannot be accepted after that time; and an offer which stipulates for acceptance "by return" (of post) must normally<sup>52</sup> be accepted either by a return postal communication or by some other no less expeditious method. An offer which contains no express provision limiting its duration terminates after lapse of a reasonable time.<sup>53</sup> What is a reasonable time depends on such circumstances as the nature of the subject-matter and the means used to communicate the offer. Thus an offer to sell a perishable thing, or one whose price is liable to sudden fluctuations, would determine after a short time. The same is true of an offer made by telegram<sup>54</sup> or by some other at least equally speedy means of communication such as telex or fax.

<sup>44</sup> Tinn v Hoffmann & Co (1873) 29 L.T. 271 at 278.

<sup>45</sup> See above, p.20.

<sup>46</sup> Hyde v Wrench (1840) 3 Beav. 334.

<sup>47</sup> See the treatment in Tinn v Hoffman (1873) 29 L.T. 271 at 278 of the claimant's letter of November 27.

<sup>48</sup> Stevenson Jacques & Co v Maclean (1880) 5 Q.B.D. 346 at 349.

<sup>49</sup> See above, p.8.

<sup>50</sup> Gibson v Manchester CC [1979] 1 W.L.R. 294 at 302.

<sup>51</sup> Under the "posting rule", above, p.24.

<sup>52</sup> See above, p.30.

<sup>53</sup> Ramsgate Victoria Hotel Co Ltd v Montefiore (1866) L.R. 1 Ex. 109; Cemco Leasing SpA v Rediffusion Ltd [1987] F.T.L.R. 201.

<sup>54</sup> Quenerduaine v Cole (1883) 32 W.R. 185.

The period that would normally constitute a reasonable time for acceptance may be extended if the conduct of the offeree within that period indicates an intention to accept and this is known to the offeror. Such conduct would often of itself amount to acceptance, but this possibility may be ruled out by the terms of the offer, which may require the acceptance to be by written notice sent to a specified address.<sup>55</sup> In such a case the offeree's conduct, though it could not amount to an acceptance, could nevertheless prolong the time for giving a proper notice of acceptance. For the offeree's conduct to have this effect, it must be known to the offeror; for if this were not the case the offeror might reasonably suppose that the offer had not been accepted within the normal period of lapse, and act in reliance on that belief: e.g. by disposing elsewhere of the subject-matter.

4. Occurrence of Condition

An offer which expressly provides that it is to terminate on the occurrence of some condition cannot be accepted after that condition has occurred; and such a provision may also be implied. If an offer to buy or hire-purchase goods is made after the offeror has examined them, it may be an implied term of the offer that they should at the time of acceptance still be in substantially the same state as that in which they were when the offer was made. Such an offer cannot be accepted after the goods have been seriously damaged.<sup>56</sup> Similarly, an offer to insure the life of a person cannot be accepted after he has suffered serious injuries by falling over a cliff.<sup>57</sup> On the same principle, it is submitted that the offer which is made by bidding at an auction by implication provides that it is to lapse as soon as a higher bid is made.<sup>58</sup>

5. Death

One possible view is that the death of either party terminates the offer, as the parties can no longer reach agreement.<sup>59</sup> But there may be a contract in spite of a demonstrable lack of agreement if to hold the contrary would cause serious inconvenience.<sup>60</sup> In accordance with this principle, it is submitted that the death of either party should not of itself terminate the offer except in the case of such "personal" contracts as are discharged by the death of either party.<sup>61</sup>

(1) Death of an offeror

The effect of the death of the offeror has been considered in a number of cases concerning continuing guarantees. In general, a continuing guarantee, e.g. of a bank overdraft, is divisible<sup>62</sup>: it is a continuing offer by the guarantor, accepted from time to time as the banker makes loans to his customer. Each loan is a separate acceptance,

<sup>55</sup> As in Manchester Diocesan Council for Education v Commercial and General Investments Ltd [1970] 1 W.L.R. 241.

<sup>56</sup> Financings Ltd v Stimson [1962] 1 W.L.R. 1184.

<sup>57</sup> Canning v Farquhar (1885) 16 Q.B.D. 722 (the offer here came in the form of a counter-offer from the insurance company: see at 733); Looker v Law Union & Rock Ins Co Ltd [1928] 1 K.B. 554. Contrast p.292, n.63, below.

<sup>58</sup> See above, p.11.

<sup>59</sup> Dickinson v Dodds (1876) 2 Ch.D. 463 at 475.

<sup>60</sup> See above, p.41.

<sup>61</sup> e.g. contracts of employment or agency: below, p.750. Even in such cases the legal effects of saying that the offer was terminated, so that there was never any contract, would be likely to differ from those of saying that there had been a contract which had been discharged: e.g. the Law Reform (Frustrated Contracts) Act 1943 could apply to the latter, but not to the former, situation.

<sup>62</sup> See above, p.39.

turning the offer pro tanto into a binding contract. It seems that such a guarantee is not terminated merely by the death of the guarantor.<sup>63</sup> But it is terminated if the bank knows that the guarantor has died and that his personal representatives have no power under his will to continue the guarantee<sup>64</sup>; or if for some other reason it is inequitable for the bank to charge the guarantor's estate.<sup>65</sup> If the guarantee expressly provides that it can be terminated only by notice given by the guarantor or his personal representatives, the death of the guarantor, even if known to the bank, will not terminate the guarantee: express notice must be given.<sup>66</sup>

(2) Death of offeree

Two cases have some bearing on the effect of the death of the offeree. In Reynolds v Atherton<sup>67</sup> an offer to sell shares was made in 1911 "to the directors of" a company. An attempt to accept the offer was made in 1919 by the survivors of the persons who were directors in 1911 and by the personal representatives of those who had since died. The purported acceptance was held to be ineffective; and Warrington L.J. said obiter that an offer "made to a living person who ceases to be a living person before the offer is accepted . . . is no longer an offer at all". The actual ground for the decision, however, was that the offer had, on its true construction, been made to the directors of the company for the time being, and not to those who happened to hold office in 1911. In Kennedy v Thomassen<sup>68</sup> an offer to buy annuities was accepted by the solicitors of the annuitant after she had, without the solicitors' knowledge, died. This acceptance was held to be ineffective on the grounds that the solicitors' authority was terminated by their client's death and that the acceptance was made under a mistake.<sup>69</sup> Neither case supports the view that an offer can never be accepted after the offeree's death. It is submitted that, where an offer related to a contract which was not "personal",<sup>70</sup> it might, on its true construction, be held to have been made to the offeree or to his executors, and that such an offer could be accepted after the death of the original offeree.

6. Supervening Incapacity

(1) Mental patients

If an offeror became a mental patient he would not be bound by an acceptance made after this fact had become known to the offeree, or after the patient's property had been made subject to the control of the court. But the other party would be bound; and an offer made to a person who later became a mental patient could be accepted so as to bind the other party. These rules can readily be deduced from the law as to contracts with mental patients.<sup>71</sup>

<sup>63</sup> Bradbury v Morgan (1862) 1 H. & C. 249; Harris v Fawcett (1873) L.R. 8 Ch.App. 866 at 869; Coulthart v Clementson (1879) 5 Q.B.D. 42, at 46.

<sup>64</sup> Coulthart v Clementson (1879) 5 Q.B.D. 42.

<sup>65</sup> Harris v Fawcett (1873) L.R. 8 Ch.App. 866.

<sup>66</sup> Re Silvester [1895] 1 Ch.573.

<sup>67</sup> (1921) 125 L.T. 690; affirmed, (1922) 127 L.T. 189.

<sup>68</sup> [1929] 1 Ch.426.

<sup>69</sup> cf. below, p.286.

<sup>70</sup> See above, at n.61.

<sup>71</sup> See below, pp.557 et seq.

(2) Corporations

(a) COMPANIES GOVERNED BY THE COMPANIES ACT 1985. Such a company may lose its capacity to do an act by altering its memorandum of association.<sup>72</sup> If the company nevertheless entered into transactions after so losing its capacity to do so, those transactions were formerly ultra vires and void.<sup>73</sup> Now the general rule<sup>74</sup> is that acts done by the company can no longer be called into question on the ground that the company lacked capacity to do them by reason of anything in its memorandum<sup>75</sup>; and that, in favour of a person dealing with the company in good faith, the power of the board of directors to bind the company, or to authorise others to do so, is deemed to be free of any limitation under the company's constitution.<sup>76</sup> But a member of the company may bring proceedings to restrain the doing of acts beyond the company's capacity, or beyond the powers of the directors, except where such acts are done in fulfilment of legal obligations arising from previous acts of the company.<sup>77</sup> The effect of these provisions must be considered on offers made to and by the company.

(i) Company as offeree. A company may receive an offer to enter into a contract and then alter its memorandum so as to deprive itself of the capacity to enter into that contract. If it nevertheless accepts the offer, the acceptance is effective in favour of a person who deals with the company in good faith; but before the company has accepted the offer, it can be restrained from doing so in proceedings brought by one of its members.

(ii) Company as offeror. A company may make an offer to enter into a contract and then alter its memorandum and so deprive itself of the capacity to enter into that contract. An acceptance of that offer is nevertheless effective in favour of a person dealing with the company in good faith; but it is not entirely clear whether in this situation a member of the company could take proceedings to prevent the conclusion of the contract. Such proceedings lie only to restrain "the doing of an act"<sup>78</sup> by the company and since the relevant act on the company's part (i.e. the making of the offer) would already have been done when the company still had capacity to do it, there seems to be nothing for the member to restrain, unless holding the offer open could be described as a continuing act.

Of course, the company itself could normally withdraw the offer and would be likely to do so in pursuance of the policy which had led it to change its memorandum. But this possibility would not be open to the company where it had bound itself not to withdraw the offer, i.e. where it had granted a legally enforceable option<sup>79</sup>; and in such a case a member could not take proceedings to prevent the conclusion of the contract since such proceedings cannot be taken "in respect of an act to be done in fulfilment of a legal obligation arising from a previous act of the company"<sup>80</sup>; i.e. from the grant of the option.

(b) OTHER CORPORATIONS. Companies may also be incorporated by Royal Charter or by special legislation. Charter corporations have the legal capacity of a natural person so that an alteration of the charter would not affect the validity of an offer or acceptance

<sup>72</sup> See below, p.560.

<sup>73</sup> See below, p.560.

<sup>74</sup> See generally below, pp.561–563. For an exception, see Charities Act 1993, s.65.

<sup>75</sup> Companies Act 1985, s.35(1) (as substituted by Companies Act 1989, s.108).

<sup>76</sup> ibid. s.35A(1).

<sup>77</sup> ibid. ss.35(2), 35A(4).

<sup>78</sup> ibid.

<sup>79</sup> For legally enforceable options, see below, p.153, n.80.

<sup>80</sup> Companies Act 1985, ss.35(2), 35A(3) (as substituted by Companies Act 1989, s.108).

made by the corporation.<sup>81</sup> The legal capacity of corporations incorporated by special statute is governed by the statute, and acts not within that capacity are ultra vires<sup>82</sup> and void. An alteration of the statute could therefore prevent the company from accepting an offer made to it, and from being bound by the acceptance of an offer made by it, where the offer was made before the alteration came into effect. In practice, the problem is likely to be dealt with in the statute which changes the capacity of the corporation.

Limited liability partnerships incorporated under the Limited Liability Partnerships Act 2000<sup>83</sup> are bodies corporate<sup>84</sup>; but problems of the kind here under discussion cannot arise with regard to them as they have “unlimited capacity”.<sup>85</sup>

SECTION 4. SPECIAL CASES

In some situations already discussed, the analysis of agreement into offer and acceptance gives rise to considerable difficulty,<sup>86</sup> and in others, to be discussed in this section, such analysis is impossible or highly artificial.<sup>87</sup> For this reason, it has been suggested that the analysis is “out of date”<sup>88</sup> and that “you should look at the correspondence as a whole and at the conduct of the parties and see therefrom whether the parties have come to an agreement”.<sup>89</sup> The objection to this view, however, is that it provides too little guidance for the courts (or for the legal advisers of the parties) in determining whether agreement has been reached. For this reason, the situations to be discussed below are best regarded as exceptions<sup>90</sup> to a general requirement of offer and acceptance. This approach is supported by cases in which it has been held that there was no contract precisely because there was no offer and acceptance<sup>91</sup>; and by those in which the terms of a contract have been held to depend on the analysis of the negotiation into offer, counter-offer and acceptance.<sup>92</sup>

1. Multipartite Agreements

In The Satanita<sup>93</sup> the claimant and the defendant entered their yachts for a regatta. Each signed a letter, addressed to the secretary of the club which organised the regatta, undertaking to obey certain rules during the race. It was held that there was a contract <sup>81</sup> See below, p.560; but members of a corporation could bring proceedings to restrain the conclusion of the contract: ibid.

<sup>82</sup> See below, p.563.

<sup>83</sup> See ss.2 and 3 of the Act.

<sup>84</sup> ibid. s.1(2).

<sup>85</sup> ibid. s.1(3).

<sup>86</sup> See above, pp.10, 16–17, 20–21.

<sup>87</sup> Gibson v Manchester CC [1978] 1 W.L.R. 520 at 523, reversed [1979] 1 W.L.R. 294; cf. The Eurymedon [1975] A.C. 154 at 167; Pollock, Principles of Contract (13th ed.), p.5.

<sup>88</sup> Butler Machine Tool Co Ltd v Ex-Cell-O Corp (England) Ltd [1979] 1 W.L.R. 401 at 404; cf. Port Sudan Cotton Co v Govindaswamy Chettiar & Sons [1977] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 5 at 10; Interfoto Picture Library Ltd v Stiletto Visual Programmes Ltd [1989] Ch.433 at 443.

<sup>89</sup> Gibson v Manchester CC [1978] 1 W.L.R. 520 at 523, reversed [1979] 1 W.L.R. 294.

<sup>90</sup> Gibson v Manchester CC [1979] 1 W.L.R. 294 at 297; The Good Helmsman [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 377 at 409; G Percy Trentham v Archital Luxfer Ltd [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 25 at 27, 29–30.

<sup>91</sup> The Kapetan Markos NL (No.2) [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 323 at 331 (“What was the mechanism for offer and acceptance?”); cf. The Good Helmsman [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 377 at 409; The Aramis [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 213, Treitel [1989] L.M.C.L.Q. 162; Taylor v Dickens [1998] 1 FLR 806 at 818 (doubted on another point in Gillett v Holt [2001] Ch.210); Schuldenfrei v Hilton [1999] S.T.C. 821. The “offer and acceptance” analysis was also regarded as decisive in many of the arbitration cases discussed at pp.10, 30, above, though it was viewed with scepticism in The Multibank Holsatia [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 486 at 491 and in The Maritime Winner [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 506 at 515.

<sup>92</sup> e.g. The “battle of forms” cases discussed at pp.20–21, above.

<sup>93</sup> [1895] p.248; affirmed sub nom. Clarke v Dunraven [1897] A.C. 59; Phillips, 92 L.Q.R. 499.

between all the competitors on the terms of the undertaking, though it is not clear whether the contract was made when the competitors entered their yachts or when they actually began to race. In either event, it is difficult to analyse the transaction into offer and acceptance.<sup>94</sup> If the contract was made when the yachts were entered, one would have to say that the entry of the first competitor was an offer and that the entry of the next was an acceptance of that offer and (simultaneously) an offer to yet later competitors; but this view is artificial and unworkable even in theory unless each competitor knew of the existence of previous ones. It would also lead to the conclusion that entries which were put in the post together were cross-offers and thus not binding on each other.<sup>95</sup> If the contract was made when the race began, then it seems that each competitor simultaneously agreed to terms proposed by the officers of the club, and not that each proposed an identical set of terms amounting at the same time to an offer to the others and to an acceptance of the offers at that instant made by them. Even if the second view of the facts could be taken, the “offers” and “acceptances” would all occur at the same moment. Thus they would be cross-offers and would not create a contract. The competitors, no doubt, reached agreement, but they did not do so by a process which can be analysed into offer and acceptance. Similar reasoning would seem to apply to the contract which governs the legal relations between members of an unincorporated association.<sup>96</sup>

The above discussion is based on the assumption that all the parties to the alleged multilateral contract were willing to agree to the same terms. Where one of the negotiating parties had refused to accept one of the terms of the proposed contract, no multilateral contract would arise between that party and any of the others, unless the others agreed to be bound to that party on terms excluding the one rejected by him.<sup>97</sup>

2. Reference to Third Party

Where two negotiating parties reach deadlock, they may ask a third party to break it. If both simultaneously assent to a solution proposed by him, there is a contract, but it is again impossible to say which party has made the offer and which the acceptance.<sup>98</sup> The same is true where the parties negotiate through a single broker who eventually obtains their consent to the same terms.<sup>99</sup>

3. Sale of Land

There is some difficulty in analysing into offer and acceptance a transaction such as the sale of land where parties agree “subject to contract” so that they are not bound until formal contracts are exchanged.<sup>1</sup> Strictly an “offer” subject to contract does not satisfy the definition of offer<sup>2</sup> since the person making it has no intention to be bound immediately on acceptance. However, the agreement is made by the usual process: the <sup>94</sup> cf. Kingscroft Insurance Co Ltd v Nissan Fire and Marine Insurance Co Ltd [2000] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 272 at 291 (admission of new members to an existing insurance pool analysed in terms of offer and acceptance).

<sup>95</sup> See above, p.37.

<sup>96</sup> See Artistic Upholstery Ltd v Art Forma (Furniture) Ltd [1999] 4 All E.R. 277, 285; below, p.543; though breach of the rules by one member may not, on their true construction, be actionable in damages at the suit of another: Anderton v Rowland, The Times, November 5, 1999.

<sup>97</sup> Azor Shipping Co v Baltic Shipping Co [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 159 at 165.

<sup>98</sup> Pollock, Principles of Contract (13th ed.), p.5.

<sup>99</sup> Pagnan SpA v Feed Products Ltd [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 601 at 616.

<sup>1</sup> See below, p.52.

<sup>2</sup> See above, p.8.

reason why parties are not bound until they exchange formal contracts is that the terms of their agreement expressly negative for the time being the intention to enter into legal relations.<sup>3</sup> Alternatively, a party can be regarded as making the offer when he submits a signed contract for exchange<sup>4</sup>; and this would be accepted when the exchange took place.

SECTION 5. CERTAINTY

An agreement is not a binding contract if it lacks certainty, either because it is too vague or because it is obviously incomplete.<sup>5</sup>

1. Vagueness

An agreement may be so vague that no definite meaning can be given to it without adding new terms. Thus in G Scammell & Nephew Ltd v Ouston<sup>6</sup> the House of Lords held that an agreement to buy goods “on hire-purchase” was too vague to be enforced, since there were many kinds of hire-purchase agreements in widely different terms, so that it was impossible to say on which terms the parties intended to contract. Similarly, agreements “subject to war clause”,<sup>7</sup> “subject to strike and lockout clause”,<sup>8</sup> and “subject to force majeure conditions”<sup>9</sup> have been held too vague, there being no evidence in any of the cases of a customary or usual form of such clauses or conditions.<sup>10</sup> Similar reasoning has sometimes been applied where agreements were made subject to the “satisfaction” of one party.<sup>11</sup> The problems arising from such provisions are discussed later in this Chapter.<sup>12</sup>

But the courts do not expect commercial documents to be drafted with strict precision, and will, particularly if the parties have acted on an agreement,<sup>13</sup> do their best to avoid striking it down on the ground that it is too vague.<sup>14</sup>

(1) Custom and trade usage

Apparent vagueness can be resolved by custom. Thus a contract to load coal at Grimsby “on the terms of the usual colliery guarantee” was upheld on proof of the terms usually contained in such guarantees at Grimsby.<sup>15</sup> It has similarly been held that an undertaking

<sup>3</sup> See below, p.150.

<sup>4</sup> See Christie Owen & Davies v Rapacioli [1974] Q.B. 781; cf. Commission for the New Towns v Cooper (Great Britain) Ltd [1995] Ch.259 at 285.

<sup>5</sup> Fridman, 76 L.Q.R. 521; Lücke, 6 Adelaide L.Rev. 1.

<sup>6</sup> [1941] A.C. 251.

<sup>7</sup> Bishop & Baxter Ltd v Anglo-Eastern Trading Co [1944] K.B. 12.

<sup>8</sup> Love & Stewart Ltd v S Instone & Co (1917) 33 T.L.R. 475.

<sup>9</sup> British Electrical, etc. Industries Ltd v Patley Pressings Ltd [1953] 1 W.L.R. 280.

<sup>10</sup> For further illustrations, see below, p.423.

<sup>11</sup> Stabilad Ltd v Stephens & Carter Ltd (No.2) [1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 651 at 659.

<sup>12</sup> See below, p.63.

<sup>13</sup> Brown v Gould [1972] Ch.53 at 57–58; Tito v Waddell (No.2) [1977] Ch.106 at 314; The Tropwind [1982] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 232; Sudbrook Trading Estate Ltd v Eggleton [1983] 1 A.C. 444; The Mercedes Envoy [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 559 at 564.

<sup>14</sup> See Rahcassi Shipping Co v Blue Star Line [1969] 1 Q.B. 173; Nea Agrex S.A v Baltic Shipping Co Ltd [1976] Q.B. 933; Grace Shipping Inc v CF Sharpe & Co (Malaysia) Pte [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 207; Deutsche Schachtbau-und-Tiefbohrgesellschaft mbH v Ras Al Khairah National Oil Co [1990] 1 A.C. 295 at 306, reversed on other grounds ibid. at 329 et seq.; Anangel Atlas Compania Naviera S.A v Ishikawajima Harima Heavy Industries Co Ltd (No.2) [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 526 at 546; The Star Texas [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 445 at 455.

<sup>15</sup> Shamrock SS Co v Storey & Co (1899) 81 L.T. 413; cf. Hart v Hart (1881) 18 Ch.D. 670; Baynham v Philips Electronics (UK) Ltd, The Times, July 19, 1995.

to grant a lease of a shop “in prime position” was not too uncertain to be enforced since the phrase was commonly used by persons dealing with shop property, so that its meaning could be determined by expert evidence.<sup>16</sup> And courts often enforce commercial contracts expressed in abbreviations whose meaning is certain and notorious.

(2) Reasonableness

In Hillas & Co Ltd v Arcos Ltd,<sup>17</sup> an agreement for the sale of timber “of fair specification”, was made between persons well acquainted with the timber trade. The agreement was upheld as the standard of reasonableness could be applied to make the otherwise vague phrase certain since the words of the contract imported some objective standard for assessing the quality of the goods to be supplied. The case should be contrasted with one in which a supplier of clothing to a retail chain alleged that there was an implied contract between them not to terminate their long-standing relationship except on reasonable notice. One ground for rejecting the claim was that there were “no objective criteria by which the court could assess what would be reasonable either as to quantity or price.”<sup>18</sup>

(3) Duty to resolve uncertainty

An agreement containing a vague phrase may be binding because one party is under a duty to resolve the uncertainty. In one case an agreement to sell goods provided for delivery “free on board . . . good Danish port”. It was held that the agreement was not too vague: it amounted to a good contract under which the buyer was bound to select the port of shipment.<sup>19</sup>

(4) Meaningless and self-contradictory phrases

The court will make considerable efforts to give meaning to an apparently meaningless phrase<sup>20</sup>; but, even where these efforts fail, the presence of such phrases does not necessarily vitiate the agreement. In Nicolene Ltd v Simmonds<sup>21</sup> steel bars were bought on terms which were certain except for a clause that the sale was subject to “the usual conditions of acceptance”. There being no such usual conditions, it was held that the phrase was meaningless, but that this did not vitiate the whole contract: the words were severable and could be ignored. A self-contradictory clause can be treated in the same way. Thus where an arbitration clause provided for arbitration of “any dispute” in London and of “any other dispute” in Moscow the court disregarded the clause and

<sup>16</sup> Ashburn Anstalt v Arnold [1989] Ch.1 at 27, overruled on another ground in Prudential Assurance Co Ltd v London Residuary Body [1992] A.C. 386.

<sup>17</sup> (1932) 147 L.T. 503 (and see below, p.55); Sweet & Maxwell Ltd v Universal News Services Ltd [1964] 2 Q.B. 699; cf. Greater London Council v Connolly [1970] 2 Q.B. 100; Finchbourne Ltd v Rodrigues [1976] 3 All E.R. 581; Malcolm v Chancellor, Masters and Scholars of the University of Oxford, The Times, December 19, 1990; Hackney LBC v Jackson [2001] L.&T. Rep. 7.

<sup>18</sup> Baird Textile Holdings Ltd v Marks & Spencer plc [2001] EWCA Civ 274; [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 737, at [30].

<sup>19</sup> David T Boyd & Co v Louis Louca [1973] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 209; cf. Siew Soon Wah v Yong Tong Hong [1973] A.C. 831; Pagnan SpA v Feed Products Ltd [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 601; cf. Bulk Trading Co Ltd v Zenziper Grains and Feedstuffs [2001] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 357 (seller's duty to specify place of delivery under f.o.t. contract).

<sup>20</sup> The Tropwind [1982] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 232.

<sup>21</sup> [1953] 1 Q.B. 543; discussed in Heisler v Anglo-Dal Ltd [1954] 1 W.L.R. 1273; cf. Slater v Ram, The Times, October 15, 1977; The Scaptrade [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 425 at 432 (affirmed without reference to this point [1983] 2 A.C. 694), and see below, p.54.

determined the dispute itself.<sup>22</sup> Such cases show that the question whether a meaningless phrase vitiates the contract, or can be ignored, depends on the importance which the parties may be considered to have attached to it. If it is simply verbiage, not intended to add anything to an otherwise complete agreement, or if it relates to a matter of relatively minor importance, it can be ignored. But if the parties intend it to govern some vital aspect of their relationship, its vagueness will vitiate the entire agreement.

2. Incompleteness

(1) Agreement in principle only<sup>23</sup>

Parties may reach agreement on essential matters of principle, but leave important points unsettled, so that their agreement is incomplete. There is, for example, no contract if an agreement for a lease fails to specify the date on which the term is to commence.<sup>24</sup> Similarly, an agreement for the sale of land by instalments is not a binding contract if it provides for conveyance of "a proportionate part" as each instalment of the price is paid but fails to specify which part was to be conveyed on each payment.<sup>25</sup>

On the other hand, the agreement does not have to be worked out in meticulous detail.<sup>26</sup> Under the Sale of Goods Act 1979, an agreement for the sale of goods may be binding as soon as the parties have agreed to buy and sell, where the remaining details can be determined by the standard of reasonableness or by law. Even failure to fix the price is not necessarily fatal in such a case. S.8(2) of the Act provides that, if no price is determined by the contract, a reasonable price must be paid. Under s.15(1) of the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982, a reasonable sum must similarly be paid where a contract for the supply of services fails to fix the remuneration to be paid for them.<sup>27</sup> These statutory provisions assume that the agreement amounts to a contract in spite of its failure to fix the price or remuneration. The very fact that the parties have not reached agreement on this vital point may indicate that there is no contract, e.g. because the price or remuneration is to be fixed by further agreement.<sup>28</sup> In such a case, the statutory provisions for payment of a reasonable sum do not apply. There may, however, be a claim for payment of such a sum at common law: for example, where work is done in the belief that there was a contract or in the expectation that the negotiations between the parties would result in the conclusion of a contract.<sup>29</sup> Such liability arises in restitution, in spite of the fact that there was no contract. It follows that the party doing the work, though he is entitled to a reasonable sum, is not liable in damages, e.g. for failing to do the work within a reasonable time.<sup>30</sup> If the claim arose under a contract by virtue of s.15(1) of the 1982 Act, the party doing the work would be both entitled and liable.

<sup>22</sup> E R J Lovelock v Exportles [1968] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 163; cf. The Star Texas [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 445.

<sup>23</sup> Lücke, 3 Adelaide L.Rev. 46.

<sup>24</sup> Harvey v Pratt [1965] 1 W.L.R. 1025; and see Re Day's Will Trusts [1962] 1 W.L.R. 1419.

<sup>25</sup> Bushwall Properties Ltd v Vortex Properties Ltd [1976] 1 W.L.R. 591; Emery, [1976] C.L.J. 215; cf. Hillreed Land v Beautridge [1994] F.G.C.S. 55; Avintar v Avill 1995 S.C.L.R. 1012; Hadley v Kemp [1999] E.M.L.R. 589 at 628; London & Regional Development Ltd v TBI plc Belfast International Airport Ltd [2002] F.W.C.A. Civ 355.

<sup>26</sup> First Energy (UK) Ltd v Hungarian International Bank Ltd [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 195 at 205.

<sup>27</sup> cf. at common law, Way v Latilla [1937] 3 All E.R. 759; The Tropwind [1982] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 232; Michael Elliott & Partners v UK Land [1991] 1 E.G.L.R. 39; and see, as to agents' commissions, below, p.740.

<sup>28</sup> e.g. May & Butcher v R [1934] 2 K.B. 17n; Courtney & Fairbairn Ltd v Tolaini Bros (Hotels) Ltd [1975] 1 W.L.R. 297; Dugdale and Lowe [1976] J.B.L. 312; Chamberlain v Boodle & King [1982] 1 W.L.R. 1443 n.; Russell Bros (Paddington) Ltd v John Elliott Management Ltd (1995) 11 Const. L.J. 337; Southmark LBC v Logan (1996) 8 Admin.L.R. 315.

<sup>29</sup> See below, pp.988-989.

<sup>30</sup> BSC v Cleveland Bridge & Engineering Co Ltd [1984] 1 All E.R. 504.

Even an agreement for the sale of land dealing only with the barest essentials may be regarded as complete if that was the clear intention of the parties. Thus in Perry v Suffields Ltd<sup>31</sup> an offer to sell a public-house with vacant possession for £7,000 was accepted without qualification. It was held that there was a binding contract, in spite of the fact that many important points such as the date of completion<sup>32</sup> and the question of paying a deposit, were left open.<sup>33</sup> In another case<sup>34</sup> a buyer and seller of corn feed pellets had reached agreement on the “cardinal terms of the deal: product, price, quantity, period of shipment, range of loading ports and governing contract terms”.<sup>35</sup> The agreement was held to have contractual force even though the parties had not yet reached agreement on a number of other important points, such as the loading port,<sup>36</sup> the rate of loading and certain payments (other than the price) which might in certain events become due under the contract. In all these cases, the courts took the view that the parties intended to be bound at once in spite of the fact that further significant terms were to be agreed later; and that even their failure to reach such agreement would not invalidate the contract unless without such agreement the contract was unworkable or too uncertain<sup>37</sup> to be enforced.

A distinction must finally be drawn between cases in which agreement on such matters as the price is required for the making, and those in which it is required for the continued operation, of a contract. The latter possibility is illustrated by a case<sup>38</sup> in which an agreement for the supply of services for 10 years fixed the fee to be paid only for the first of those two years. On the parties’ failure to fix the fee in later years, it was held that they had intended to enter into a 10-year contract and that a term was to be implied into that contract for payment of a reasonable fee in those later years.

(2) Further agreement expressly required

An agreement may be incomplete because it expressly requires further agreement to be reached on points as yet left open.

(a) AGREEMENTS “SUBJECT TO CONTRACT”. Agreements for the sale of land by private treaty are usually<sup>39</sup> made “subject to contract”. Such an agreement is incomplete until the details of a formal contract have been settled and approved by the parties.<sup>40</sup>

<sup>31</sup> [1916] 2 Ch.187; Elias v George Sahely & Co (Barbados) Ltd [1982] 3 All E.R. 801.

<sup>32</sup> cf. Storer v Manchester CC [1974] 1 W.L.R. 1403.

<sup>33</sup> For the resolution of such points, see below, p.55.

<sup>34</sup> Pagnan Sp.A v Feed Products Ltd [1987] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 601.

<sup>35</sup> ibid. at 611.

<sup>36</sup> cf. above, p.50 at n.19.

<sup>37</sup> See above, p.48.

<sup>38</sup> Mumidilo-Jetoil Arab Petroleum Co SA v Otku Crude Oil Refinery AD [2001] EWCA Civ 406; [2001] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 76. For further proceedings arising out of the same contract, see [2003] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 1, below, p.58.

<sup>39</sup> Not always: Storer v Manchester CC [1974] 1 W.L.R. 1403; Tweedell v Henderson [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1496 at 1501–1502; Elias v George Sahely & Co (Barbados) Ltd, above.

<sup>40</sup> Winn v Bull (1877) 7 Ch.D. 29. cf. The Nissos Samos [1985] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 378 at 385; The Intra Transporter [1985] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 159 at 163, affirmed [1986] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 132; The Junior K [1988] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 583; (sale of ship and charterparty intended to be “subject to details” not binding before details settled); cf. The CPC Gallia [1994] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 68; Debattista, [1985] L.M.C.L.Q. 241; Ronald Preston & Partners v Markheath Securities [1988] 2 E.G.L.R. 23 (agreement to pay fee to estate agent “subject to contract” not legally binding); Ignazio Messina & Co v Polskie Linie Oceaniczne [1995] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 566; Drake Scull Engineering Ltd v Higgs & Hill (Northern) Ltd (1995) 11 Const.L.J. 214; Regalian Properties plc v London Dockland Development Corp [1995] 1 W.L.R. 212; Enfield LBC v Arajah [1995] E.G.C.S. 164; contrast Prudential Assurance Co Ltd v Mount Eden Land Co Ltd [1997] 1 E.G.L.R. 37 (consent to alterations given by landlord “subject to licence” held effective as the consent was a unilateral act, so that no question of agreement arose).

(i) Requirement of exchange of contracts. Even when the terms of the formal contract have been agreed, there is, where the agreement is subject to contract, no binding contract until there has been an “exchange of contracts”.<sup>41</sup> It is also necessary (though not sufficient) for the formal requirements for contracts for the sale of land (which are described in Chapter 5) to be satisfied.<sup>42</sup> The formal requirement in cases of the present kind is that each party must sign a document containing all the terms which have been expressly agreed<sup>43</sup>; and the requirement of exchange traditionally refers to the handing over by each party to the other of one of these documents, or to their despatch by post; if the later method is adopted, the process is completed on the receipt of the second of the posted documents.<sup>44</sup> No doubt the mechanics of “exchange” will be suitably modified when the proposed system of electronic conveyancing is brought in to operation.<sup>45</sup> Before the “exchange,” there is no uncertainty as to the terms of the agreement, but there is no contract because neither party intends to be legally bound until the “exchange of contracts” takes place.<sup>46</sup>

(ii) Mitigations of the requirement. The above state of the law, which enables either party with impunity to go back on a concluded agreement, has been described as “a social and moral blot on the law”<sup>47</sup>; and there are indications that the courts are prepared to mitigate the former strictness of the requirement of “exchange of contracts”. Thus it has been held that the exchange may be effected by telephone or telex<sup>48</sup>; that certain technical slips in the process may be disregarded<sup>49</sup>; that exchange is not necessary where the parties use the same solicitor<sup>50</sup>; and (in Australia) that where the two parts do not match precisely there may nevertheless be a contract, the discrepancy being remedied by rectification.<sup>51</sup> The parties may also create a binding contract by a subsequent agreement to remove the effect of the words “subject to contract,” thus indicating their intention henceforth to be legally bound.<sup>52</sup> Subsequent conduct may also give rise to liability on other grounds: where one party to the agreement encourages the other to believe that he will not withdraw, and the other acts to his detriment in reliance on that belief, the former may be liable on the basis of “proprietary estoppel”.<sup>53</sup> In “a very strong and

<sup>41</sup> Eccles v Bryant & Pollock [1948] Ch.93; Santa Fé Land Co Ltd v Forestal Land Co Ltd (1910) 26 T.L.R. 534; cf. Coope v Ridout [1921] 1 Ch.291; Chillingworth v Esche [1924] 1 Ch.97; Ruingold v Bromley [1931] 2 Ch.307; D'Silva v Lister House Development Ltd [1971] Ch.17.

<sup>42</sup> See below, p.163. A document setting out all the terms expressly agreed and signed by both parties would satisfy the formal requirements; but if it were expressed to be “subject to contract” it would not give rise to a contract till “exchange” had taken place.

<sup>43</sup> Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989, ss.2(1), (3).

<sup>44</sup> See Commission for the New Towns v Cooper (Great Britain) Ltd [1995] Ch.259 at 285, 289; cf. ibid. 293, 295.

<sup>45</sup> On the making of Orders under Land Registration Act 2002.

<sup>46</sup> See below, p.163.

<sup>47</sup> Cohen v Nessdale [1981] 3 All E.R. 118 at 128 (affirmed [1982] 2 All E.R. 97); cf. Law Commission Paper No.65.

<sup>48</sup> Domb v Isoz [1980] Ch.548. This relaxation refers only to the process of exchange. The formal requirements referred to at n.43 must also be satisfied.

<sup>49</sup> Harrison v Battye [1975] 1 W.L.R. 58.

<sup>50</sup> Smith v Mansi [1963] 1 W.L.R. 26; exchange is also unnecessary in the case of a deed, which takes effect as soon as it has been duly executed (below pp.158–159); Vincent v Premo Enterprises Ltd [1969] 2 Q.B. 609; D'Silva v Lister House Development Ltd [1971] Ch.17.

<sup>51</sup> Sindel v Georgiou (1984) 1454 C.L.R. 661; for rectification see below, p.321.

<sup>52</sup> Law v Jones [1974] Ch.112, as explained in Daulia v Four Millbank Nominees [1978] Ch.231 at 250; Cohen v Nessdale [1981] 3 All E.R. 118 at 127; [1982] 2 All E.R. 97 at 104; see also Tiverton Estates Ltd v Wearwell [1975] Ch.146; the subsequent agreement would now have to satisfy formal requirements more stringent than those in force at the time of the decisions cited in this note: see below, p.179.

<sup>53</sup> See the discussion at p.138, below of Attorney-General of Hong Kong v Humphreys Estate (Queen's Gardens) [1987] A.C. 114.

exceptional context”<sup>54</sup> the court may even infer that the parties intended to be legally bound when executing the original document, even though it is expressed to be “subject to contract”. This was held to be the position where a document containing these words laid down an elaborate time-table, imposed a duty on the purchaser to approve the draft contract (subject only to reasonable amendments) and required him then to exchange contracts.<sup>55</sup> In these exceptional circumstances, the words “subject to contract” were taken merely to mean that the parties had not yet settled all the details of the transaction and therefore not to negative the intention to be bound.

(iii) Exceptions to the requirement. Agreements for the sale of land by auction or by tender are not normally made “subject to contract”. The intention of the parties in such cases is to enter into a binding contract as soon as an offer to buy has been accepted. In one case<sup>56</sup> of a sale by tender, the words “subject to contract” were, by a clerical error, typed on one of the contractual documents. In these highly exceptional circumstances,<sup>57</sup> the words were held to be meaningless, so that there was a binding contract. This was also held to be the case where a notice exercising an option to purchase land was expressed to be “subject to contract”, as the notice was clearly intended to give rise to a binding contract.<sup>58</sup>

(iv) Collateral contract. A party’s freedom to withdraw from an agreement “subject to contract” may also be restricted by a collateral contract. For example a vendor who has agreed to sell land “subject to contract” may, either at the same time or subsequently, undertake not to negotiate for the sale of the land with a third party. Such a collateral agreement (sometimes called a “lock-out” agreement) must itself satisfy the requirement of certainty<sup>59</sup> and in Walford v Miles<sup>60</sup> it was held that this requirement had not been satisfied where the agreement failed to specify the time for which the vendor’s freedom to negotiate with third parties was to be restricted. But in a later case<sup>61</sup> it was held that a vendor’s promise not to negotiate with third parties for two weeks was sufficient to satisfy the requirement of certainty and so to give rise to a collateral contract.<sup>62</sup>

(b) EXECUTION OF FORMAL DOCUMENT REQUIRED. One possible effect of a stipulation that an agreement is to be embodied in a formal written document is that the agreement is regarded by the parties as incomplete, or as not intended to be legally binding,<sup>63</sup> until the terms of the formal document are agreed and the document is duly executed in accordance with the terms of the preliminary agreement (e.g. by signature).<sup>64</sup> A second possibility is that such a document is intended only as a solemn record of an

<sup>54</sup> Alpenstown Ltd v Regalian Properties Ltd [1985] 1 W.L.R. 721 at 730; Harpum, [1986] C.L.J. 356.

<sup>55</sup> Alpenstown Ltd v Regalian Properties Ltd, above.

<sup>56</sup> Michael Richard Properties Ltd v St Saviour’s Parish [1975] 3 All E.R. 416; Emery, [1976] C.L.J. 28.

<sup>57</sup> See Munton v GLC [1976] 1 W.L.R. 649.

<sup>58</sup> Westway Homes v Moore (1991) 63 P. & C.R. 480.

<sup>59</sup> See above, p.48.

<sup>60</sup> [1992] 2 A.C. 128. See further p.59, below.

<sup>61</sup> Pitt v PHH Asset Management Ltd [1993] 1 W.L.R. 327; cf. Tye v House [1997] 2 E.G.L.R. 171.

<sup>62</sup> For the consideration for this promise, see below, p.154.

<sup>63</sup> BSC v Cleveland Bridge & Engineering Co Ltd [1984] 1 All E.R. 504; Ignazio Messina Co v Polskie Linie Oceaniczne [1995] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 566; The Bay Ridge [1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 306 at 323; Galliard Homes Ltd v Jarvis Interiors Ltd [2000] C.L.C. 411.

<sup>64</sup> Okura & Co Ltd v Navara Shipping Corp SA [1982] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 537; cf. R. v Sevenoaks DC, Ex p. Terry [1985] 3 All E.R. 226; The Nissos Samos [1985] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 378 at 385; The Intra Transporter [1985] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 159 at 163; affirmed [1986] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 132; The Pina [1992] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 103 at 107; New England Reinsurance Corp v Messaghios Insurance Co SA [1992] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 251; Britvic Soft Drinks Ltd v Messer UK Ltd [2001] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 20 at [64], affirmed on other grounds [2002] EWCA Civ 548; [2002] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 321.

already complete and binding agreement<sup>65</sup>: for example, a contract of insurance is generally regarded as complete as soon as the insurer initials a slip setting out the main terms of the contract, even though the execution of a formal policy is contemplated.<sup>66</sup> The question whether an agreement which expressly requires the execution of a formal document is incomplete depends on the purpose of the requirement in each case<sup>67</sup>; and there is no point multiplying examples.

Even where, under the principles here stated, the agreement has no contractual force, a party to it may be liable on other grounds: e.g. under a separate preliminary contract coming into existence when one party begins to render services requested by the other and entitling the former to a reasonable remuneration for those services<sup>68</sup>; or under a constructive trust.<sup>69</sup>

(c) TERMS LEFT OPEN. Parties may be reluctant to commit themselves to a rigid long-term contract, particularly when prices and other factors affecting performance are likely to fluctuate. They therefore attempt sometimes to introduce an element of flexibility into the agreement; a number of devices which have been used for this purpose call for discussion.

(i) Terms "to be agreed". One possibility is to provide that certain matters (such as prices, quantities or delivery dates) are to be agreed later, or from time to time. The question whether the resulting agreement is a binding contract then depends primarily on the intention of the parties; and inferences as to this intention may be drawn both from the importance of the matter left over for further agreement, and from the extent to which the parties have acted on the agreement.

Sometimes such agreements have no contractual force. In May & Butcher v R.<sup>70</sup> an agreement for the sale of tentage provided that the price, dates of payment and manner of delivery should be agreed from time to time. The House of Lords held that the

<sup>65</sup> Rossiter v Miller (1878) 3 App.Cas. 1124; cf. Fowle v Freeman (1804) 9 Ves. 351; Filby v Hounsell [1896] 2 Ch.737; Branca v Cobarro [1947] K.B. 854; E R Ives Investments Ltd v High [1967] 2 Q.B. 379; Elias v George Sahely & Co (Barbados) Ltd [1982] 3 All E.R. 801; The Blankenstein [1985] 1 W.L.R. 435; The Anemone [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 547; Malcolm v Chancellor, Masters and Scholars of the University of Oxford, The Times, December 19, 1990; The Great Marine (No.2) [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 250, affirmed without reference to this point, [1991] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 421; Jayaar Impex Ltd v Toaken Group Ltd [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 437; The Kurnia Dewi [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 553 at 559. cf. Cromden v Aldridge [1993] 1 W.L.R. 433, applying the same principle to a document which was not a contract but a direction to trustees.

<sup>66</sup> Ionides v Pacific Insurance Co (1871) L.R. 6 Q.B. 674 at 684; Cory v Patton (1872) L.R. 7 Q.B. 304; General Reinsurance Corp v Forsakringsaktiebolaget Fennia Patria [1983] Q.B. 856; Hadenfayre Ltd v British National Insurance Soc. Ltd [1984] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 393; The Zephyr [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 56 at 69–70 (reversed in part on other grounds [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 529); Youell v Bland Welch & Co Ltd [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 127 at 140–141; HIH Casualty & General Insurance Ltd v New Hampshire Insurance [2001] EWCA Civ 735; [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) at [86–87]; under Marine Insurance Act 1906, s.22, the contract is complete, though evidence of it may not be admissible: below, p.165. Under an "open cover" arrangement, it is not the initialling of the slip but the declaration of the insured that creates the obligation of the insurer: Citadel Insurance Co v Atlantic Union Insurance Co [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 543.

<sup>67</sup> Von Hatzfeldt-Wildenburg v Alexander [1912] 1 Ch.284 at 288–289.

<sup>68</sup> The Kurnia [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 553; cf. Galliard Homes Ltd v Jarvis Interiors [2000] C.L.C. 411, where the incomplete agreement expressly provided for such a remuneration in the events which happened.

<sup>69</sup> Banner Homes Ltd v Luff Development Ltd [2000] Ch.372 (party to joint venture agreement, which lacked contractual force, acquiring proposed subject-matter for himself); contrast London & Regional Investments Ltd v TBI plc Belfast International Airport Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 355 (where such an agreement was expressly "subject to contract").

<sup>70</sup> [1934] 2 K.B. 17n.; cf. British Homophone Ltd v Kunz (1935) 152 L.T. 589; The Shamah [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 40 at 83; The Good Helmsman [1981] Lloyd's Rep. 377 at 409. Pancommerce SA v Veecheema BI [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 304 at 307; The Gudermes [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 623.

agreement was incomplete as it left vital matters still to be settled. Had the agreement simply been silent on these points, they could perhaps have been settled in accordance with the provisions of the Sale of Goods Act 1979<sup>71</sup>; or by the standard of reasonableness<sup>72</sup>; but the parties showed that this was not their intention by providing that such points were to be settled by further agreement between them. It has similarly been held that a lease at "a rent to be agreed" was not a binding contract.<sup>73</sup> In these cases, the most natural inference to be drawn from the fact that the parties left such an important matter as the price to be settled by further agreement was that they did not intend to be bound until they had agreed on the price. Even where the points left outstanding are of relatively minor importance, there will be no contract if it appears from the words used or other circumstances that the parties did not intend to be bound until agreement on these points had been reached.<sup>74</sup> A fortiori they are not bound by a term requiring outstanding points to be agreed if that term forms part of an agreement which is itself not binding because it was made without any intention of entering into contractual relations.<sup>75</sup>

Where, on the other hand, it can be inferred that the parties intended to be bound immediately, in spite of the provision requiring further agreement, a binding contract can be created at once<sup>76</sup>; for the courts are "reluctant to hold void for uncertainty any provision that was intended to have legal effect".<sup>77</sup> This judicial attitude is illustrated by Foley v Classique Coaches Ltd.<sup>78</sup> The claimant owned a petrol-filling station and adjoining land. He sold the land to the defendants on condition that they should enter into an agreement to buy petrol for the purpose of their motor-coach business exclusively from him. This agreement was duly executed, but the defendants broke it, and argued that it was incomplete because it provided that the petrol should be bought "at a price agreed by the parties from time to time". The Court of Appeal rejected this argument and held that, in default of agreement, a reasonable price must be paid.<sup>79</sup> May & Butcher v R.<sup>80</sup> was distinguished on a number of grounds: the agreement in Foley's case was contained in a stamped document; it was believed by both parties to be binding and had been acted upon for a number of years; it contained an arbitration clause in a somewhat unusual

<sup>71</sup> See above, p.51.

<sup>72</sup> cf. Mamidoil-Jetoil Greek Petroleum SA v Okta Crude Oil Refinery AD [2001] EWCA Civ 406; [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 76, esp. at [73]; Malcolm v Chancellor, Masters & Scholars of the University of Oxford, The Times, December 19, 1990.

<sup>73</sup> King's Motors (Oxford) Ltd v Lax [1970] 1 W.L.R. 426; cf. King v King (1981) 41 P. & C.R. 311 (rent review clause).

<sup>74</sup> The Gladys [1994] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 402; Ignazio Messina & Co v Polskie Linie Oceaniczne [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 566.

<sup>75</sup> Orion Insurance plc v Sphere Drake Insurance plc [1992] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 239.

<sup>76</sup> Pagnan SpA v Freed Products Ltd [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 601.

<sup>77</sup> Brown v Gould [1972] Ch.53 at 57–58; cf. Smith v Morgan [1971] 1 W.L.R. 803 at 807; Snelling v John G Snelling Ltd [1973] 1 Q.B. 87 at 93; Queensland Electricity Generating Board v New Hope Colliery Pty Ltd [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 205 at 210.

<sup>78</sup> [1934] 2 K.B. 1.

<sup>79</sup> cf. British Bank for Foreign Trade v Novinex [1949] 1 K.B. 623; Sykes (Wessex) Ltd v Fine Fare Ltd [1967] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 53; Beer v Bowden [1981] 1 W.L.R. 522; Thomas Bates & Sons Ltd v Wyndham's (Lingerie) Ltd [1981] 1 W.L.R. 505 at 518–519; The Tropwind [1982] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 232 at 236; Voest Alpine Intertrading GmbH v Chevron International Oil Co Ltd [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 547; Granit SA v Benship International Inc [1994] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 526; Mitsui Babcock Energy Ltd v John Brown Engineering Ltd (1996) 51 Const.L.R. 129; Global Container Lines Ltd v State Black Sea Shipping Co [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 127 at 155; Mamidoil-Jetoil case above, n.72.

<sup>80</sup> See above, at n.70.

form which was construed to apply “to any failure to agree as to the price”<sup>81</sup>; and it formed part of a larger bargain under which the defendants had acquired the land at a price which was no doubt fixed on the assumption that they would be bound to buy all their petrol from the claimant.<sup>82</sup> While none of these factors in itself is conclusive,<sup>83</sup> their cumulative effect seems to be sufficient to distinguish the two cases.<sup>84</sup>

Thus an agreement is not incomplete merely because it calls for some further agreement between the parties.<sup>85</sup> Even the parties’ later failure to agree on the matters left outstanding will vitiate the contract only if it makes the agreement “unworkable or void for uncertainty.”<sup>86</sup> Often, the failure will not have this effect, for it may be possible to resolve the uncertainty in one of the ways already discussed, e.g. by applying the standard of reasonableness<sup>87</sup>; or by regarding the matter to be negotiated as of such subsidiary importance<sup>88</sup> as not to negative the intention of the parties to be bound by the more significant terms to which they have agreed.<sup>89</sup> There can be no doubt as to the commercial convenience of this approach. Commercial agreements are often intended to be binding in principle even though the parties are not at the time able or willing to settle all the details. For example, contracts of insurance may be made “at a premium to be arranged” when immediate cover is required but there is no time to go into all the details at once: such agreements are perfectly valid and a reasonable premium must be paid.<sup>90</sup> All this is not to say that the courts will hold parties bound when they have not yet reached substantial agreement<sup>91</sup>; but once they have reached such agreement it is not necessarily fatal that some points (even important ones) remain to be settled by further negotiation.

(ii) Options and rights of pre-emption. An option to purchase land “at a price to be agreed” is not a binding contract<sup>92</sup>; but such an option must be distinguished from a “right of pre-emption” by which a landowner agrees to give the purchaser the right to buy “at a figure to be agreed” should the landowner wish to sell.<sup>93</sup> An option has at least

<sup>81</sup> [1934] 2 K.B. 1 at 10; the clause covered disputes as to “the subject matter or construction of this agreement,” while the arbitration clause in May & Butcher v R. covered “disputes with reference to or arising out of this agreement.” For the distinction between the two forms of clause, see Heyman v Darwins [1942] A.C. 356 at 382, 392; cf. also Vosper Thorneycroft Ltd v Ministry of Defence [1976] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 58; Queensland Electricity Generating Board v New Hope Collieries Pty Ltd [1989] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 205.

<sup>82</sup> Scrutton L.J. said at 7 that he was glad to decide in favour of the plaintiff “because I do not regard the appellants’ [defendants’] contention as an honest one”.

<sup>83</sup> R.S.T.C., 49 L.Q.R. 316.

<sup>84</sup> Foley’s case was approved by the House of Lords in G Scammell & Nephew Ltd v Ouston [1941] A.C. 251.

<sup>85</sup> cf. Wilson Smithett & Cape (Sugar) Ltd v Bangladesh Sugar & Food Industries Ltd [1986] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 378 at 386.

<sup>86</sup> Pagnan SpA v Feed Products Ltd [1987] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 601 at 619.

<sup>87</sup> See above, p.50; or by imposing on one party the duty to resolve the uncertainty: p.51 at n.19; Pagnan SpA v Feed Products Ltd, above.

<sup>88</sup> Though this point is not decisive: see above p.56, n.74.

<sup>89</sup> Nelson v Stewart (1991) S.L.R. 523.

<sup>90</sup> Glicksten & Son Ltd v State Assurance Co (1922) 10 Ll.L.R. 604; cf. Marine Insurance Act 1906, s.31(2); contrast American Airline Inc v Hope [1973] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 233, affirmed [1974] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 301 (“at an additional premium and geographical area to be agreed”).

<sup>91</sup> See Shakleford’s Case (1866) L.R. 1 Ch.App. 567; Bertel v Neveux (1878) 39 L.T. 257; Lofius v Roberts (1902) 18 T.L.R. 532; The Intra Transporter [1986] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 132; Pagnan SpA v Granaria BV [1986] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 547; Alfred McAlpine Construction Ltd v Panatown Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 485; (2001) 67 Con.L.R. 224 at [35].

<sup>92</sup> See Brown v Gould [1972] Ch.52 (where, however, the option was binding as it specified criteria for determining the price: see below, p.58).

<sup>93</sup> Pritchard v Briggs [1980] Ch.339. For the purposes of the Landlord and Tenants (Covenants) Act 1995, “option” includes a right of first refusal:” s.1(6).

some of the characteristics of an offer<sup>94</sup> in that it can become a contract of sale when the purchaser accepts it by exercising the option; and it cannot have this effect where it fails to specify the price. A right of pre-emption is not itself an offer<sup>95</sup> but an undertaking to make an offer in certain specified future circumstances.<sup>96</sup> An agreement conferring such a right is therefore not void for uncertainty merely because it fails to specify the price. It obliges the land-owner to offer the land to the purchaser at the price at which he is prepared to sell; and if the purchaser accepts that offer there is no uncertainty as to price.<sup>97</sup> This is so even though the parties have described the right as an “option” when its true legal nature is that of a right of preemption.<sup>98</sup>

(iii) Criteria or machinery specified in the agreement. An agreement may fail to specify matters such as price or quality but lay down criteria for determining those matters. For example, in Hillas & Co Ltd v Arcos Ltd<sup>99</sup> an option to buy timber was held binding even though it did not specify the price, since it provided for the price to be calculated by reference to an official price list. Similarly, an option to renew a lease “at a rent to be fixed having regard to the market value of the premises” has been held binding as it provided a criterion (though not a very precise one) for resolving the uncertainty.<sup>1</sup> Even a provision that hire under a charterparty was in specified events to be “equitably decreased by an amount to be mutually agreed” has been held sufficiently certain to be enforced: it was said that “equitably” meant “fairly and reasonably”<sup>2</sup> and that a “purely objective standard has been prescribed.”<sup>3</sup> Where, on the other hand, an agreement provided for payment of a fixed percentage of the “open market value” of shares in a private company, it was held that these words did not provide a sufficiently precise criterion since there was more than one formula for calculating the market value of shares in such a company.<sup>4</sup>

Alternatively, the agreement may provide machinery for resolving matters originally left open. Perhaps the most striking illustration of this possibility is provided by cases in which such matters are to be resolved by the decision of one party: for example a term, by which interest rates are expressed to be variable on notification by the creditor, is perfectly valid,<sup>5</sup> though the creditor’s power to set interest rates under such a contract is limited by an implied term that he must not exercise it “dishonestly, for an improper purpose, capriciously or arbitrarily.”<sup>6</sup> Similarly, an arbitration clause can validly provide for the arbitration to take place at one of two or more places to be selected by one of the parties.<sup>7</sup> Agreements are a fortiori not incomplete merely because they provide that

<sup>94</sup> See below, p.153 n.74; Bircham & Co Nominees (No.2) Ltd v Worrell Holdings Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 775; (2001) P. & C.R. 427 at [41].

<sup>95</sup> ibid. at [16], [23].

<sup>96</sup> Similarly, a “lock-out agreement” (above, p.54) does not bind the promisor to sell to the promisee: it merely restricts his freedom to sell to someone else: see Tye v House [1997] 2 E.G.L.R. 171.

<sup>97</sup> Smith v Morgan [1971] 1 W.L.R. 803; cf. Snelling v John G Snelling [1973] 1 Q.B. 87 at 93; Miller v Lakefield Estates Ltd [1988] 1 E.G.L.R. 212 (where some doubts were expressed about Smith v Morgan).

<sup>98</sup> See Fraser v Thames Television Ltd [1984] Q.B. 44.

<sup>99</sup> (1932) 147 L.T. 503; cf. Miller v F.A. Sadd & Son Ltd [1981] 3 All E.R. 265; Mamidoil-Jetoil Greek Petroleum Company S.A. v Okta Crude Oil Refinery AD [2003] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 1, at [161–165].

<sup>1</sup> Brown v Gould [1972] Ch.53.

<sup>2</sup> Didymi Corp v Atlantic Lines & Navigation Co Inc [1988] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 108 at 116, 118.

<sup>3</sup> ibid. at 117.

<sup>4</sup> Gilliatt v Sky Television Ltd [2000] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 461.

<sup>5</sup> Lombard Tricity Finance Ltd v Paton [1989] 1 All E.R. 918. This position is preserved by Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999 (SI 1999/2083), reg.5(5) and Sch.2, para.2(b).

<sup>6</sup> Paragon Finance Ltd v Staunton [2001] EWCA Civ 1466 at [36]; [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 1025; the power (to maintain interest rates at a level above that charged by other lenders) had in that case been validly exercised.

<sup>7</sup> The Star Texas [1993] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 445.

outstanding points shall be determined by arbitration<sup>8</sup> or by the valuation of a third party. The Sale of Goods Act 1979 provides that if the third party “cannot or does not make the valuation, the agreement is avoided”<sup>9</sup>; but an agreement is not necessarily ineffective merely because the agreed machinery fails to work. In Sudbrook Trading Estate Ltd v Eggleton<sup>10</sup> a lease gave the tenant the option to purchase the premises “at such price as may be agreed upon by two Valuers, one to be nominated by” each party. The landlord having refused to appoint a valuer, the House of Lords held that the option did not fail for uncertainty. It amounted, on its true construction, to an agreement to sell at a reasonable price to be determined by the valuers; and the stipulation that each party should nominate one of the valuers was merely “subsidiary and inessential”.<sup>11</sup> So long as the agreed machinery (which fails to operate) is of this character,<sup>12</sup> the court can substitute other machinery: for example, it can itself fix the price with the aid of expert evidence. This is so not only where the agreed machinery fails because of one party’s refusal to operate it,<sup>13</sup> but also where it fails for some other reason, such as the refusal of a designated valuer to make the valuation.<sup>14</sup>

(d) FACTS TO BE ASCERTAINED. An agreement is not ineffective on the ground of uncertainty merely because the facts on which its operation depend are not known when it is made: the requirement of certainty is satisfied if those facts become ascertainable and are ascertained (without the need for further negotiation) after the making of the agreement.<sup>15</sup>

(e) CONTRACT TO MAKE A CONTRACT In some cases of incomplete agreements it is said that there is a “contract to make a contract”. This expression may refer to a number of different situations.

(i) Agreement to execute formal document. One possibility is that the parties may agree to execute a formal document incorporating terms on which they have previously agreed. Such a provision does not deprive the agreement of contractual force.<sup>16</sup> For example, in Morton v Morton<sup>17</sup> an agreement “to enter into a separation deed containing the following clauses” (of which a summary was then given) was held to be a binding contract. The grant of an option to purchase can similarly be described as a contract by which one party binds himself to enter into a further contract if the other so elects; and neither of these contracts is void for uncertainty.<sup>18</sup>

(ii) Express agreement to negotiate. A further possibility is that the parties have simply agreed to negotiate. In spite of dicta to the contrary,<sup>19</sup> it has been held that a mere agreement to negotiate is not a contract “because it is too uncertain to have any binding

<sup>8</sup> Arcos Ltd v Aronson (1930) 36 Ll.L.R. 108; cf. Thomas Bates & Son Ltd v Wyndham's (Lingerie) Ltd [1981] 1 W.L.R. 505, where a lease was rectified (below, p.321) to include such a clause; Queensland Electricity Generating Board v New Hope Collieries Pty Ltd [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 205.

<sup>9</sup> Sale of Goods Act 1979, s.9(1); cf. Pym v Campbell (1856) 6 E. & B. 370.

<sup>10</sup> [1983] 1 A.C. 444; Robertshaw, 46 M.L.R. 493.

<sup>11</sup> Re Malpas [1985] Ch.42 at 50; Tito v Waddell (No.2) [1977] Ch.106 at 314; Didymi Corp v Atlantic Lines & Navigation Co Inc [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 108 at 115.

<sup>12</sup> i.e. not if it is “an integral and essential part of the definition of the payments to be made”: Gilliatt v Sky Television Ltd [2000] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 461 at 479.

<sup>13</sup> As in the Sudbrook case, above.

<sup>14</sup> As in Re Malpas, above.

<sup>15</sup> Welsh Development Agency v Export Finance Ltd [1992] B.C.L.C. 148.

<sup>16</sup> Subject to statutory exceptions: see Consumer Credit Act 1974, s.59.

<sup>17</sup> [1942] 1 All E.R. 273.

<sup>18</sup> See The Messiniaki Bergen [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 424 at 426; and below p.153 n.74 for various views as to the nature of an option.

<sup>19</sup> Chillingworth v Esche [1924] 1 Ch.97 at 113; Hillas & Co Ltd v Arcos Ltd (1932) 147 L.T. 503 at 515. See F.P., 48 L.Q.R. 141; F.W. McC., ibid. 310; Williams, 6 M.L.R. 81.

force.”<sup>20</sup> It therefore does not impose any obligation to negotiate, or to use best endeavours to reach agreement,<sup>21</sup> or to accept proposals that “with hindsight appear to be reasonable”.<sup>22</sup>

(iii) Implied agreement to negotiate. Where an agreement is too uncertain to be enforced, this defect cannot be cured by implying into it a term to the effect that the parties must continue to negotiate in good faith. In Walford v Miles,<sup>23</sup> a “lock-out” agreement collateral to negotiations for the sale of a business lacked sufficient certainty because it failed to specify the time during which the vendors were not to negotiate with third parties<sup>24</sup>; and the House of Lords unanimously rejected the argument that a term should be implied requiring the vendors to continue to negotiate in good faith with the purchasers for so long as the vendors continued to desire to sell, since such a term was itself too uncertain to be enforced. The uncertainty lay in the fact that the alleged duty was “inherently inconsistent with the position of a negotiating party”<sup>25</sup> who must normally<sup>26</sup> be free to advance his own interests during the negotiations. The point is well illustrated by the facts of Walford v Miles itself, where the defendants had agreed subject to contract to sell a property to the purchasers for £2 million and had (in breach of the ineffective “lock-out” agreement) sold it to a third party for exactly that sum, and the purchasers then claimed damages of £1 million on the basis that the property was (by reason of facts known to them but not the defendants) worth £3 million. If a duty to negotiate in good faith exists, it must be equally incumbent on both parties, so that it can hardly require a vendor to agree to sell a valuable property for only two-thirds of its true value when the facts affecting that value are known to the purchaser and not disclosed (as good faith would seem to require) to the vendor. The actual result in Walford v Miles (in which the purchasers recovered the sum of £700 in respect of their wasted expenses as damages for misrepresentation,<sup>27</sup> but not the £1 million which they claimed as damages for breach of contract<sup>28</sup>) seems with respect, to be entirely appropriate on the facts, especially because the vendors reasonably believed themselves to be protected from liability in the principal negotiation by the phrase “subject to contract”.

In Walford v Miles Lord Ackner, with whom all the other members of the House agreed, described as “unsustainable” the view expressed in an American case<sup>29</sup> “that an agreement to negotiate in good faith is synonymous with an agreement to use best

<sup>20</sup> Courtney & Fairbairn Ltd v Tolaini Bros (Hotels) Ltd [1975] 1 W.L.R. 297 at 301; cf. Von Hatzfeldt-Willdenburg v Alexander [1912] 1 Ch.284 at 249; Malozzi v Carapelli SpA [1976] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 407; The Scaptrade [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 425 at 432 (affirmed without reference to this point [1983] 2 A.C. 694); Nile Co for the Export of Agricultural Crops v H & J M Bennett (Commodities) Ltd [1986] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 555 at 587; The Jing Hong Hai [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 523 at 526; Paul Smith Ltd v H & S International Holdings Inc [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 127 at 131; Mamidoil-Jetoil Greek Petroleum SA v Okta Crude Oil Refining AD [2001] EWCA Civ 406; [2001] Lloyd's Rep. 76, at [53], [59].

<sup>21</sup> The Scaptrade, (above, n.20) [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. at 432; The Junior K [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 583. Contrast, in the United States, Hoffman v Red Owl Stores Inc, 133 N.W. 2d. 267 (1965).

<sup>22</sup> Pagnan SpA v Granaria BV [1985] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 256 at 270; affirmed [1986] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 547.

<sup>23</sup> [1992] 2 A.C. 128; Neill, 108 L.Q.R. 405.

<sup>24</sup> See above, p.54.

<sup>25</sup> [1992] 2 A.C. 128 at 138; cf. Surrey C.C. v Bredero Homes Ltd [1993] 1 W.L.R. 1361 at 1368 (doubted on other grounds in Attorney-General v Blake [2001] 1 A.C. 268 at 283, below, p.868); Halifax Financial Services Ltd v Intuitive Systems Ltd [1999] All E.R. (Comm) 303 at 311; Baird Textile Holdings Ltd v Marks and Spencer plc [2001] EWCA Civ 274; [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 737 at [68].

<sup>26</sup> For an exception, see Re Debtors (Nos.4449 and 4450 of 1998) [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 149 at 158 (Lloyds bound to negotiate in good faith with its names as it was “performing functions in the public interest within a statutory framework”).

<sup>27</sup> See [1992] 2 A.C. 128 at 136.

<sup>28</sup> ibid. at 135.

<sup>29</sup> Channel Home Centers Division of Grace Retail Corp v Grossman 795 F.2d 291 (1986).

endeavours and, as the latter is enforceable so is the former".<sup>30</sup> He went on to say that "the reason why an agreement to negotiate, like an agreement to agree, is unenforceable is simply because it lacks the necessary certainty. The same does not apply to an agreement to use best endeavours".<sup>31</sup> This passage gives rise to a number of difficulties. The first arises from dictum in an English case<sup>32</sup> (which is cited with approval in Walford v Miles<sup>33</sup>) to the effect that an agreement to negotiate does not impose any obligation to use best endeavours to reach agreement; and this dictum certainly supports the view that an agreement to negotiate contains no implied term to use best endeavours. It may be that Lord Ackner's reference was to an express term to use best endeavours, or that he was simply prepared to assume (without deciding) that an agreement (express or implied) to use best endeavours might be legally enforceable and that he was concerned only to make the point that, even on that assumption, the same was not true of an agreement to negotiate in good faith. That explanation of Lord Ackner's statement in turn gives rise to the difficulty of distinguishing between the two types of agreement. One possibility is that an "agreement to negotiate" refers to the formation and one "to use best endeavours" to the performance of a contract, e.g. where an admitted contract between A and B requires A to use his best endeavours to make a computer software system supplied by A work, or procure C to enter into a contract with B. There is no doubt that such terms can impose a legal obligation on A.<sup>34</sup> But where the question is whether any contract has come into existence, later decisions support the view that an express agreement to use best or reasonable endeavours to agree on the terms of a contract is no more than an agreement to negotiate, lacking contractual force.<sup>35</sup> It may be that, while an agreement to use best endeavours could be interpreted as referring to the machinery of negotiation, one to negotiate in good faith is more plausibly interpreted as referring to its substance. A promise to use best endeavours might, for example, oblige a party to make himself available for negotiations, or at least not (e.g. by deliberately failing to pick up his telephone) to prevent the other from communicating with him.<sup>35a</sup> A promise to negotiate in good faith, on the other hand, would oblige a party not to take unreasonable or exorbitant positions during the negotiations; and it is the difficulty of giving precise content to this obligation, while maintaining each party's freedom to pursue his own interests, that makes such a promise too uncertain to be enforced.

In Walford v Miles the principal agreement was not legally binding because it was subject to contract, and the lock-out agreement was not legally binding because it specified no dates.<sup>36</sup> The case does not exclude the possibility that a different conclusion may be reached where the parties have reached agreement on all essential points so as to show that they do intend to be legally bound by the agreement, but have left other points open. The court may then imply a term that they are to negotiate in good faith

<sup>30</sup> [1992] 2 A.C. 128 at 138.

<sup>31</sup> ibid.

<sup>32</sup> The Scaptrade [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 425 at 432 (and see above n.20); cf. Little v Courage Ltd (1995) 70 P. & C.R. 469 at 475.

<sup>33</sup> [1992] 2 A.C. 128 at 137.

<sup>34</sup> See Watford Electronics Ltd v Sanderson Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 317; [2001] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 696 at [45]; and the estate agency cases discussed at p.38 above; cf. Lambert v HTI Cymru (Wales) Ltd, The Times, March 17, 1998.

<sup>35</sup> See Little v Courage (1995) 70 P. & C.R. 469 at 475; London & Regional Investments Ltd v TBI plc Belfast International Airport Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 355 at [39].

<sup>35a</sup> Example based on Nissho Iwai Petroleum Co Inc v Cargill International S.A [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 80, where such conduct was held to amount to a breach of a party's duty to co-operate in the performance (not in the formation) of a contract. cf. Re Debtors (Nos.449 and 4450 of 1998) [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 149 at 158 (implied obligation to use "best endeavours" to conclude an agreement required the party "not unreasonably to frustrate" its conclusion).

<sup>36</sup> See above, p.54 at n.60.

so as to settle outstanding details which are to be incorporated in the formal document setting out the full terms of the contract between them.<sup>37</sup>

SECTION 6. CONDITIONAL AGREEMENTS

1. Classification

An agreement is conditional if its operation depends on an event which is not certain to occur. Discussions of this topic are made difficult by the fact that in the law of contract the word "condition" bears many senses: it is "a chameleon-like word which takes on its meaning from its surroundings."<sup>38</sup> At this stage, we are concerned with only one of these meanings; but to clear the ground it is necessary to draw a number of preliminary distinctions.

The word "condition" may refer either to an event, or to a term of a contract (as in the phrase "conditions of sale"<sup>39</sup>). Where "condition" refers to an event, that event may be either an occurrence which neither party undertakes to bring about, or the performance by one party of his undertaking. The first possibility is illustrated by a contract by which A is to work for B, and B is to pay A £50, "if it rains tomorrow". Here the obligations of both parties are contingent on the happening of the specified event which may therefore be described as a contingent condition. The second possibility is illustrated by the ordinary case in which A agrees to work for B at a weekly wage payable at the end of the week. Here the contract is immediately binding on both parties, but B is not liable to pay until A has performed his promise to work. Such performance is a condition of B's liability, and, as A has promised to render it, the condition may be described as promissory.<sup>40</sup> In this Chapter our concern is with contingent conditions; promissory conditions will be discussed in Chapter 18.<sup>41</sup>

Contingent conditions may be precedent or subsequent.<sup>42</sup> A condition is precedent if it provides that the contract is not to be binding until the specified event occurs. It is subsequent if it provides that a previously binding contract is to determine on the occurrence of the event: e.g. where A contracts to pay an allowance to B until B marries.<sup>43</sup>

2. Degrees of Obligation

Where an agreement is subject to a contingent condition precedent, there is, before the occurrence of the condition, no duty on either party to render the principal performance

<sup>37</sup> Donwin Productions Ltd v EMI Films Ltd, The Times, March 9, 1984 (not cited in Walford v Miles [1992] 2 A.C. 128).

<sup>38</sup> The Varenna [1984] Q.B. 599 at 618.

<sup>39</sup> Property and Bloodstock Ltd v Emerton [1968] Ch.94 at 118; cf. also below, pp.705, 731.

<sup>40</sup> For the distinction between promissory and contingent condition see Chalmers, Sale of Goods (18th ed.) Appendix 2, Note A; Roadworks (1952) Ltd v Charman [1994] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 99 at 103; Total Gas Marketing Ltd v Arco British Ltd [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 209 at 215, 218.

<sup>41</sup> See below, pp.761–766; 788–805.

<sup>42</sup> Conditions precedent are also sometimes called "suspensive", and conditions subsequent "resolutive", conditions: see Treitel, Remedies for Breach of Contract, pp.262–263. In Ignazio Messina & Co v Polskie Linie Oceaniczne [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 566 at 580 a condition there under discussion was said to be "a true condition subsequent or suspensive condition". "Subsequent" here seems to be a misprint for "precedent." The distinction between the two types of condition is not always clear-cut: see below at n.52.

<sup>43</sup> cf. Brown v Knowsley BC [1986] I.R.L.R. 102 (appointment to "last only as long as sufficient funds were provided" from specified sources), and (semble) Gyllenhammar & Partners International v Sour Brodogradovna Industrija [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 403 (contract to "become null and void" if certain consents were not obtained) and Jameson v CEBG [2000] 1 A.C. 455 at 477 (settlement of a tort claim immediately binding but subject to an implied resolutive condition that it was to become void if the agreed amount was not paid).

promised by him: for example, a seller is not bound to deliver and a buyer is not bound to pay. Nor, in such a case, does either party undertake that the condition will occur. But an agreement subject to such a condition may impose some degree of obligation on the parties or on one of them. Whether it has this effect, and if so what degree of obligation is imposed, depends on the true construction of the term specifying condition.<sup>44</sup>

One possibility is that, before the event occurs, each party is free to withdraw from the agreement. In Pym v Campbell<sup>45</sup> an agreement for the sale of a patent was executed, but the parties at the same time agreed that it should not “be the agreement” unless a third party approved of the invention. He did not approve, and it was held that the buyer was not liable for refusing to perform. The written agreement was “not an agreement at all”.<sup>46</sup> If this is taken literally, either party could have withdrawn even before the third party had given his opinion.

A second possibility is that, before the event occurs, the main obligations have not accrued; but that, so long as the event can still occur, one (or both) of the parties cannot withdraw. Thus in Smith v Butler<sup>47</sup> A bought land from B on condition that a loan to B (secured by a mortgage on the premises) would be transferred to A.<sup>48</sup> It was held that A could not withdraw before the time fixed for completion: he was bound to wait until then to see whether B could arrange the transfer. However, if it becomes clear that the condition has not occurred, or that it can no longer occur, within the time specified in the contract, the parties will be under no further obligations under the contract.<sup>49</sup> In such a case, the effect of the non-occurrence of the condition is that the parties are “no longer bound”<sup>50</sup> by the contract, or that the contract is “discharged.”<sup>51</sup> What the parties have called a “condition precedent” can thus operate as, or have the effect of, a condition subsequent.<sup>52</sup>

A third possibility is that, before the event occurs, the main obligations have not accrued; but that in the meantime neither party must do anything to prevent the occurrence of the event. Thus in Mackay v Dick<sup>53</sup> an excavating machine was sold on condition that it could excavate at a specified rate on the buyer’s property. The buyer’s refusal to provide facilities for a proper trial was held to be a breach. Similarly, the seller would have been in breach, had he refused to subject the machine to a proper test. The same principle is illustrated by a case<sup>54</sup> in which a professional footballer was transferred for a fee, part of which was to be paid only after he had scored 20 goals. Before he had done so, the new club dropped him from their first team, and they were held to be in

<sup>44</sup> For special difficulties where the condition precedent is implied, see Bentworth Finance Ltd v Lubert [1968] 1 Q.B. 680; Carnegie, 31 M.L.R. 78.

<sup>45</sup> (1856) 6 E. & B. 370.

<sup>46</sup> ibid. at 374.

<sup>47</sup> [1900] 1 Q.B. 694, cf. Felixstowe Dock & Ry Co v British Transport Docks Bd [1976] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 656; Alan Estates Ltd v W. G. Stores Ltd [1982] Ch.511 at 520.

<sup>48</sup> On agreements “subject to finance”, see Coote, 40 Conv. (N.S.) 37; Furmston, 3 O.J.L.S. 438, discussing Meehan v Jones (1982) 149 C.L.R. 571.

<sup>49</sup> North Sea Energy Holdings NV v Petroleum Authority of Thailand [1997] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 418 at 428–429 (affirmed on other grounds [1999] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 483).

<sup>50</sup> Total Gas Marketing Ltd v Arco British Ltd [1998] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 209 at 215.

<sup>51</sup> ibid. at 218.

<sup>52</sup> ibid. at 221, 224.

<sup>53</sup> (1881) 6 App.Cas. 251. The condition is described as subsequent in Colley v Overseas Exporters [1921] 3 K.B. 302 at 308. cf. also Shipping Corp of India v Naviera Letasa [1976] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 132; CLA Barca de Panama SA v George Wimpey & Co Ltd [1980] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 598 and South West Trains Ltd v Wightman, The Times, January 14, 1998; contrast North Sea Energy Holdings NV v Petroleum Authority of Thailand [1999] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 483 (duty to co-operate in bringing about the event negated by terms of the contract).

<sup>54</sup> Bournemouth & Boscombe Athletic FC v Manchester United FC, The Times, May 22, 1980. cf. also below, p.744.

breach as they had not given the player a reasonable opportunity to score the 20 goals.

The duty not to prevent the occurrence of the condition has been explained as resting on an implied term and this explanation limits the scope of the duty in a number of ways. For example, the implied term may be only to the effect that a party will not deliberately prevent the occurrence of the condition<sup>55</sup>; or (even more narrowly) that he will not wrongfully do so.<sup>56</sup> The latter type of implication may allow a party to engage in certain kinds of deliberate prevention but not in others: for example, it may allow a company which has promised an employee the opportunity of earning a bonus to deprive him of that opportunity by going out of business, but not by simply dismissing him, before the bonus has become due.<sup>57</sup> The implied term can also be excluded by an express contrary provision,<sup>58</sup> in particular, by a provision making the operation of a contract depend on the "satisfaction" of one party with the subject-matter or other aspects relating to the other's performance. Thus it has been held that there was no contract where a house was bought "subject to satisfactory mortgage"<sup>59</sup>; and where a boat was bought "subject to satisfactory survey"<sup>60</sup> it was held that the buyer was not bound if he expressed his dissatisfaction,<sup>61</sup> in spite of the fact that such expression was a deliberate act on his part which prevented the occurrence of the condition. The same is true where goods are bought on approval and the buyer does not approve them,<sup>62</sup> and where an offer of employment is made "subject to satisfactory references," and the prospective employer does not regard the references as satisfactory.<sup>63</sup> There is some apparent conflict in the authorities on the question whether the law imposes any restriction on the freedom of action of the party on whose satisfaction the operation of the contract depends. In one case<sup>64</sup> a proposed royalty agreement relating to the use by a manufacturer of an invention was "subject to detailed evaluation of production and marketing feasibility" by the manufacturer. It was held that his discretion whether to enter into the contract was "unfettered by any obligation to act reasonably or in good faith"<sup>65</sup> and that, as his satisfaction had not been communicated<sup>66</sup> to the other party, the agreement had not acquired contractual force. On the other hand, where a ship was sold "subject to satisfactory completion of two trial voyages" it was said that such a stipulation was to be construed as "subject to bona fides".<sup>67</sup> The distinction between the two lines of cases turns, ultimately, on the construction of the agreement. Even if this requires the

<sup>55</sup> See Blake & Co v Sohn [1969] 1 W.L.R. 1412.

<sup>56</sup> See Thompson v ASDA-MFI Group plc [1988] Ch.241.

<sup>57</sup> Example based on Thompson v ASDA-MFI Group plc, above and below, p.744.

<sup>58</sup> See Micklefield v SAC Technology Ltd [1990] 1 W.L.R. 1002.

<sup>59</sup> Lee-Parker v Izett (No.2) [1975] 1 W.L.R. 775; distinguished in Junmohammed v Hassam, The Times, June 10, 1976.

<sup>60</sup> Astra Trust Ltd v Adams & Williams [1969] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 81 doubted in The Merak [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 250 at 254 and in Ee v Kahar (1979) 40 P. & C.R. 223 (as to which see below, n.34).

<sup>61</sup> But if the buyer declared his satisfaction the seller would be bound even though the survey was not objectively satisfactory: Graham v Pitkin [1992] 1 W.L.R. 403 at 405.

<sup>62</sup> cf. Sale of Goods Act 1979, s.18, r.4.

<sup>63</sup> Wishart v National Association of Citizens' Advice Bureaux [1990] I.C.R. 794.

<sup>64</sup> Stabilad Ltd v Stephens & Carter (No.2) [1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 651.

<sup>65</sup> ibid. at 662.

<sup>66</sup> For the requirement of communication see ibid. at 660; the requirement may be satisfied by conduct from which satisfaction can be inferred, e.g. where a buyer of goods on approval retains them without notifying rejection for more than the stipulated or a reasonable time: Sale of Goods Act 1999, s.18, r.4(b).

<sup>67</sup> The John S Darbyshire [1977] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 457 at 464; cf. BV Oliehandel Jongkind v Coastal International Ltd [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 463; The Nissos Samos [1985] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 378 at 385; contrast The Junior K [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 583 at 589 (where the words were held to negative contractual intention). See also El Amadi v Bank of Credit & Commerce International SA [1990] 1 Q.B. 606 at 619; and in an analogous context, The Product Star (No.2) [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 397 at 404.

discretion to be exercised in good faith, it does not follow that it must be exercised reasonably: the matter may be left to the relevant party's "subjective decision".<sup>68</sup> It has also been held that the party on whose satisfaction the operation of the contract depends must at least provide facilities for, or not impede, the inspection referred to in the agreement.<sup>69</sup> Of course if the result of the inspection is unsatisfactory, the principal obligation of the contract will not take effect.<sup>70</sup>

A fourth possibility is that, before the event occurs, the main obligations have not accrued but that one of the parties undertakes to use reasonable efforts to bring the event about (without absolutely undertaking that his efforts will succeed). This construction was applied, for instance, where land was sold subject to the condition that the purchaser should obtain planning permission to use the land as a transport depot: he was bound to make reasonable efforts to obtain the permission, but he was free from liability when those efforts failed.<sup>71</sup> Similarly, where goods are sold "subject to export (or import) licence", the party whose duty it is to obtain the licence<sup>72</sup> does not prima facie promise absolutely that a licence will be obtained,<sup>73</sup> but only undertakes to make reasonable efforts to that end.<sup>74</sup> The principal obligations to buy and sell will not take effect if no licence is obtained<sup>75</sup>; but if the party who should have made reasonable efforts has failed to do so he will be liable in damages,<sup>76</sup> unless he can show that any such efforts, which he should have made would (if made) have necessarily been unsuccessful.<sup>77</sup> The same principles have been applied where an agreement was made "subject to the approval of the court"; and where an agreement was made to assign a lease which could only be assigned with the consent of the landlord. In such cases the requisite approval or consent must be sought; but the main obligations do not accrue until the approval or consent is given,<sup>78</sup> and if it is refused the principal obligation will not take effect.<sup>79</sup>

<sup>68</sup> Stabilad Ltd v Stephens & Carter Ltd (No.2) [1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 651 at 659.

<sup>69</sup> The Merak [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 250; cf. Ee v Kahar (1979) 40 P. & C.R. 223 (where the sale was simply "subject to survey"—omitting the word "satisfactory"—thus falling, it is submitted, within the principle of Mackay v Dick, above n.53).

<sup>70</sup> As in The John S. Darbyshire [1977] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 457.

<sup>71</sup> Hargreaves Transport Ltd v Lynch [1969] 1 W.L.R. 215 (condition not satisfied); Richard West & Partners (Inverness) Ltd v Dick [1969] 2 Ch.424 (similar condition satisfied); cf. Fisher v Tomatousos [1991] 2 E.G.L.R. 204; Jolley v Carmel Ltd [2000] 2 E.G.L.R. 153 (buyer who was required by the contract to make reasonable efforts to get planning permission under no duty to get it within a reasonable time); contrast Tesco Stores Ltd v Gibson (1970) 214 E.G. 835 (no obligation on purchaser to apply for planning permission).

<sup>72</sup> As to which party has this duty, see H O Brandt & Co v H N Morris & Co [1917] 2 K.B. 784; A F Pound & Co v M W Hardy & Co [1956] A.C. 588.

<sup>73</sup> The prima facie rule may be excluded by express words which do, on their true construction, impose an absolute duty; e.g. Peter Cassidy Seed Co Ltd v Osuustukkukauppa [1957] 1 W.L.R. 273; C Czarnikow Ltd v Centrala Handlu Zagranicznego "Rolimpex" [1979] A.C. 351 at 371; Congimex Companhia Geral, etc. S.A.R.L. v Tradax Export S.A. [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 250; Pagnan Sp.A v Tradax Ocean Transport S.A. [1987] 3 All E.R. 565; and, semble, The Seafloamer [2001] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 341 (where the standard of duty imposed by a "guarantee" to get specified approvals was not discussed); Yates and Carter, 1 J.C.L. 57.

<sup>74</sup> Re Anglo-Russian Merchant Traders and John Batt & Co (London) Ltd [1917] 2 K.B. 679; Coloniale Import-Export v Loumidis & Sons [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 560; Overseas Buyers Ltd v Granadex S.A. [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 608; Gamerco S.A v ICM Fair Warning (Agency) Ltd [1995] 1 W.L.R. 1226 at 1231. Where the contract is expressly subject to the approval of a public authority, there may not even be a duty to make reasonable efforts to secure that approval: see Gyllenhammar Partners International v Sour Brodegradevna Industrija [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 403.

<sup>75</sup> Charles H Windschuegl Ltd v Alexander Pickering & Co Ltd (1950) 84 Ll.L. Rep 89 at 92-93; Brauer & Co (Great Britain) Ltd v James Clark (Brush Materials) Ltd [1952] 2 All E.R. 497 at 501; cf. the cases on sales of goods "to arrive" discussed in Benjamin's Sale of Goods (5th ed.), §§ 21-022 to 21-027.

<sup>76</sup> e.g. Malik v C.E.T.A. [1974] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 279; Agroexport v Cie. Européenne de Céréales [1974] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 499.

<sup>77</sup> See Benjamin's Sale of Goods (6th ed.), § 18-293; Overseas Buyers Ltd v Granadex S.A., above, at 612.

<sup>78</sup> Smallman v Smallman [1972] Fam. 25.

<sup>79</sup> Shires v Brock (1977) 247 E.G. 127.

It will be seen that in cases falling within the second, third and fourth categories discussed above, a distinction must be drawn between two types of obligation: the principal obligation of each party (e.g. to buy and sell) and a subsidiary obligation, i.e. one not to withdraw, not to prevent occurrence of the condition, or to make reasonable efforts to bring it about. One view is that the party who fails to perform the subsidiary obligation is to be treated as if the condition had occurred; and that he is then liable on the principal obligation. Thus in Mackay v Dick<sup>80</sup> the buyer was held liable for the price; but there was no discussion as to the remedy. In principle it seems wrong to hold him so liable, for such a result ignores the possibility that the machine might have failed to come up to the standard required by the contract, even if proper facilities for trial had been provided. It is submitted that the correct result in cases of this kind is to award damages for breach of the subsidiary obligation: in assessing such damages, the court can take into account the possibility that the condition might not have occurred, even if there had been no such breach.<sup>81</sup> To hold the party in breach liable for the full performance promised by him, on the fiction that the condition had occurred, seems to introduce into this branch of the law a punitive element that is inappropriate to a contractual action.<sup>82</sup> The most recent authorities rightly hold that such a doctrine of "fictional fulfilment" of a condition does not form part of English law.<sup>83</sup>

Where a condition is inserted entirely for the benefit of one party, that party may waive the condition. He can then sue<sup>84</sup> and be sued<sup>85</sup> on the contract as if the condition had occurred. Obviously this rule does not apply to cases falling within the first of the categories discussed above, in which there is no contract at all before the condition occurs.

<sup>80</sup> (1881) 6 App.Cas. 251, above, p.63.

<sup>81</sup> Bournemouth & Boscombe Athletic FC v Manchester United FC, The Times, May 22, 1980; cf. The Blankenstein [1985] 1 W.L.R. 435 (below, p.764); Alpha Trading Ltd v Dunshaw-Patten Ltd [1981] Q.B. 290 (below p.688); George Moundreas & Co SA v Navimpex Centrala Navala [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 515; The Energy Progress [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 355 at 358.

<sup>82</sup> cf. below, p.935.

<sup>83</sup> Thompson v ASDA-MFI Group plc [1988] Ch.241 at 266 (where the condition was said at 251 to be subsequent); Little v Courage Ltd (1995) 70 P. & C.R. 469 at 474.

<sup>84</sup> Wood Preservation Ltd v Prior [1969] 1 W.L.R. 1077; contrast Heron Garages Properties Ltd v Moss [1974] 1 W.L.R. 148.

<sup>85</sup> McKillop v McMullan [1979] N.I. 85.

CHAPTER THREE

CONSIDERATION<sup>1</sup>

SECTION 1. INTRODUCTION

1. General

IN English law, a promise is not, as a general rule, binding as a contract unless it is either made in a deed<sup>2</sup> or supported by some “consideration”. The purpose of the requirement of consideration is to put some legal limits on the enforceability of agreements even where they are intended to be legally binding<sup>3</sup> and are not vitiated by some factor such as mistake, misrepresentation, duress or illegality.<sup>4</sup> The existence of such limits is not a peculiarity of English law: for example, in some civil law countries certain promises which in England are not binding for “want of consideration” cannot be enforced unless they are made in some special form, e.g. by a notarised writing.<sup>5</sup> The view was, indeed, at one time put forward that consideration was only evidence of the intention of the parties to be bound, and that (at any rate in the case of certain commercial contracts), such evidence could equally well be furnished by writing.<sup>6</sup> But the view that agreements (other than those contained in deeds), were binding without consideration merely because they were in writing was rejected in England over 200 years ago,<sup>7</sup> though it has been revived as a proposal for law reform.<sup>8</sup> The present position therefore is that English law limits the enforceability of agreements (not in deeds) by reference to a complex and multifarious body of rules known as “the doctrine of consideration”.

This doctrine is based on the idea of reciprocity: “something of value in the eye of the law”<sup>9</sup> must be given for a promise in order to make it enforceable as a contract. An informal gratuitous promise therefore does not amount to a contract.<sup>10</sup> A person or body to whom a promise of a gift is made from purely sentimental or charitable motives gives nothing for the promise; and the claims of such a promisee are less compelling than those of a person who has given (or promised) some return for the promise.<sup>11</sup> The invalidity of informal gratuitous promises of this kind can also be supported on the ground that their enforcement could prejudice third parties such as creditors of the promisor.<sup>12</sup>

---

<sup>1</sup> Shatwell, 1 Sydney L.R. 289; Sutton, Consideration Reconsidered.

<sup>2</sup> See below, p.158.

<sup>3</sup> See below, Chap.4.

<sup>4</sup> See below, Chaps 8–11.

<sup>5</sup> See generally von Mehren, 72 Harv.L.Rev. 1009.

<sup>6</sup> Pillans v Van Mierop (1765) 3 Burr. 1663.

<sup>7</sup> Rann v Hughes (1778) 7 T.R. 350 n.; 4 Bro. P.C. 27. In the United States, writing is in a number of jurisdictions, at least for some purposes, regarded as a substitute for consideration: see Farnsworth on Contracts §2.18.

<sup>8</sup> See below p.160.

<sup>9</sup> Thomas v Thomas (1842) 2 Q.B. 851 at 859.

<sup>10</sup> Re Hudson (1885) 54 L.J. Ch. 811; Re Cory (1912) 29 T.L.R. 18; Williams v Roffey Bros & Nicholls (Contractors) Ltd [1991] 1 Q.B. 1 at 19.

<sup>11</sup> cf. Eisenberg, 47 U. of Chi.L.Rev. 1; 85 Cal.L.Rev. 821.

<sup>12</sup> Eastwood v Kenyon (1840) 11 A. & E. 438 at 451.

Such promises, too, may be rashly made<sup>13</sup>; and the requirements of executing a deed or giving value provide at least some protection against this danger.

The doctrine of consideration has, however, also struck at many promises which were not “gratuitous” in any ordinary or commercial sense. These applications of the doctrine were brought within its scope by stressing that consideration had to be not merely “something of value”, but “something of value in the eye of the law”.<sup>14</sup> The law in certain cases refused to recognise the “value” of acts or promises which might well be regarded as valuable by a layman. This refusal was based on many disparate policies; so that “promises without consideration” included many different kinds of transactions which, at first sight, had little in common.<sup>15</sup> It is this fact which is the cause of the very great complexity of the doctrine; and which has also led to its occasional unwarranted extensions and hence to demands for reform of the law.<sup>16</sup>

2. Definitions

(1) Benefit and detriment

The traditional definition of consideration concentrates on the requirement that “something of value” must be given and accordingly states that consideration is either some detriment to the promisee (in that he may give value) or some benefit to the promisor (in that he may receive value).<sup>17</sup> Usually, this detriment and benefit are merely the same thing looked at from different points of view. Thus payment by a buyer is consideration for the seller’s promise to deliver and can be described as a detriment to the buyer or as a benefit to the seller; and conversely delivery by a seller is consideration for the buyer’s promise to pay and can be described either as a detriment to the seller or as a benefit to the buyer. These statements relate to the consideration for the promise of each party looked at separately. For example, the seller suffers a “detriment” when he delivers the goods and this enables him to enforce the buyer’s promise to pay the price. It is quite irrelevant that the seller has made a good bargain and so gets a benefit from the performance of the contract. What the law is concerned with is the consideration for a promise—not the consideration for a contract.

(a) EITHER SUFFICIENT. Under the traditional definition it is sufficient if there is either a detriment to the promisee or a benefit to the promisor. Thus detriment to the promisee suffices even though the promisor does not benefit<sup>18</sup>: for example, where A guarantees B’s bank overdraft and the promisee bank suffers detriment by advancing money to B, then A is bound by his promise, even though he gets no benefit from the advance to B. One view indeed, was that “Detriment to the promisee is of the essence

<sup>13</sup> Beaton v McDavit (1988) 13 N.S.W.L.R. 162 at 170. It is often easier to promise to make a gift than actually to make one.

<sup>14</sup> See above, at n.9; below, p.69.

<sup>15</sup> cf. Corbin, Contracts, Vol.1, p.489: “The doctrine of consideration is many doctrines.”

<sup>16</sup> See below p.146.

<sup>17</sup> Currie v Misa (1875) L.R. 10 Ex. 153 at 162. See also Barber v Fox (1682) 2 Wms. Saund. 134, n.(e); Cooke v Oxley (1790) 3 T.R. 653 at 654; Jones v Ashburnham (1804) 4 East 455; Bainbridge v Firmstone (1838) 8 A. & E. 743 at 744; Thomas v Thomas (1842) 2 Q.B. 851 at 859; Bolton v Madden (1873) L.R. 9 Q.B. 55 at 56; Gore v Van der Lann [1967] 2 Q.B. 31 at 42; Argy Trading Development Co Ltd v Lapid Developments Ltd [1977] 1 W.L.R. 444 at 455; Midland Bank & Trust Co Ltd v Green [1981] A.C. 513 at 531; R. v Braithwaite [1983] 1 W.L.R. 385 at 391; Johnsey Estates Ltd v Lewis Manley (Engineering) Ltd [1987] 2 E.G.L.R. 69 at 70; Guinness Mahon & Co Ltd v Kensington & Chelsea Royal BC [1999] Q.B. 215 at 236; Modahl v British Athletics Federation Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 1447; [2002] 1 W.L.R. 1192 at [50]; cf. ibid. at [103].

<sup>18</sup> O’Sullivan v Management Agency & Music Ltd [1985] Q.B. 428 at 459; Re Dale [1994] Ch. 31 at 38; cf. Gill & Duffus SA v Rionda Futures Ltd [1994] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 67 at 82.

of the doctrine, and benefit to the promisor is, when it exists, merely an accident".<sup>19</sup> But the view that benefit to the promisor is, on its own, sufficient to satisfy the requirement of consideration is supported by a number of cases<sup>20</sup> in which promises were enforced on the ground that such a benefit had been conferred, even though there was no apparent detriment to the promisee.

(b) BENEFIT AND DETRIMENT MAY BE FACTUAL OR LEGAL. The traditional definition of consideration lacks precision because the key notions of "benefit" and "detriment" are used in at least two senses. They may refer, first, to any act<sup>21</sup> which is of some value, or, secondly, only to acts, the performance of which is not already legally due from the promisee. In the first sense, there is consideration if a benefit or detriment is in fact obtained or suffered. When the words are used in the second sense this factual benefit or detriment is disregarded, and a notion of what may be called legal benefit or detriment is substituted.<sup>22</sup> Under this notion, the promisee may provide consideration by doing anything that he was not legally bound to do, whether or not it actually occasions a detriment to him or confers a benefit on the promisor; while conversely he may provide no consideration by doing only what he was legally bound to do, however much this may in fact occasion a detriment to him or confer a benefit on the promisor. The English courts have not consistently adopted either of these senses of the words "benefit" and "detriment." In some of the situations to be discussed in this Chapter, factual benefit is stressed<sup>23</sup> even though legal detriment may also have been present; while in others the absence of a legal detriment or benefit has in the past been regarded as decisive.<sup>24</sup> One modern authority<sup>25</sup> regards factual benefit to the promisor as sufficient in one such situation, even in the absence of a legal benefit to him or of a legal detriment to the promisee and it is possible (though far from certain) that this approach may spread to at least some<sup>26</sup> of the situations in which the courts have in the past insisted on legal benefit or detriment.

(2) Other definitions

The traditional definition of consideration in terms of benefit and detriment is sometimes regarded as unsatisfactory. One cause of dissatisfaction is that it is thought to be wrong to talk of benefit and detriment when both parties expect to, and actually may, benefit from the contract. But this reasoning falls, with respect, into the error of treating the subject-matter of the definition as the consideration for a contract,<sup>27</sup> when the definition is actually concerned with the consideration for a promise.<sup>28</sup> Another cause of dissatisfaction is the artificial reasoning that is sometimes necessary to accommodate decided cases within the traditional definition. Sir Frederick Pollock has, accordingly, described consideration as simply "the price for which the promise is bought".<sup>29</sup> This

<sup>19</sup> Holdsworth, History of English Law, Vol.8, p.11.

<sup>20</sup> e.g. below, pp.81, 92, 127, 129.

<sup>21</sup> Or forbearance, or promise to do or to forbear. For the sake of simplicity references in the text are confined to the doing of an act.

<sup>22</sup> Corbin, §172 rightly points out that use of this terminology does not explain why legal benefit or detriment is necessary; but the present point is simply that the terms are sometimes used in this sense.

<sup>23</sup> e.g. in Bolton v Madden (1873) L.R. 9 Q.B. 55, below, p.81.

<sup>24</sup> e.g. in some of the existing duty cases discussed on pp.92–95, below.

<sup>25</sup> Williams v Roffey Bros & Nicholls (Contractors) Ltd [1991] 1 Q.B. 1, below, p.95.

<sup>26</sup> e.g. to the variation cases discussed below, pp.101–102; but probably not to the forbearance to sue cases discussed below, pp.88–90.

<sup>27</sup> There are traces of this approach in Williams v Roffey Bros & Nicholls (Contractors) Ltd [1991] 1 Q.B. 1 at 23: "If both parties benefit from an agreement it is not necessary that each also suffered a detriment."

<sup>28</sup> See above, p.68.

<sup>29</sup> Principles of Contract, (13th ed.), p.133.

statement has been approved in the House of Lords<sup>30</sup>; but if it is to be regarded as a definition of consideration it is defective in being so vague as to give no help in determining whether consideration exists on a given set of facts. A view which leads to even more uncertainty is that consideration “means a reason for the enforcement of promises”<sup>31</sup>—that reason being simply “the justice of the case”.<sup>32</sup> But “the justice of the case” is in almost all the decided cases highly debatable, so that the suggested definition provides no basis for formulating a coherent legal doctrine.<sup>33</sup> A modification of the suggested definition, describing consideration as “a reason for the recognition of an obligation”<sup>34</sup> is open to the same objection. Of course the traditional definition does not provide complete (or even a very high degree of) certainty. But it does state the doctrine in a way which gives some basis for predicting the course of future decisions; and it has more support in the authorities than any other definition. For these reasons it will be used in this Chapter.

(3) Mutual promises

So far we have discussed performance by one party as consideration for the promise of the other: for example, payment by a buyer as the consideration for the seller’s promise to deliver, or delivery by a seller as consideration for the buyer’s promise to pay. It is, however, also well settled that mutual promises can be consideration for each other. Hence if a seller promises to deliver goods in six months’ time and the buyer to pay for them on delivery, there is an immediately binding contract from which neither party can withdraw, though, of course, performance cannot be claimed till the appointed time. Implied, no less than express, promises can constitute consideration for each other.<sup>35</sup>

Some difficulty has been felt in explaining the rule that mutual promises can be consideration for each other. At first sight, it might seem that the mere giving of a promise was not a detriment, nor its receipt a benefit, so as to make the counter-promise binding. It will not do to say that the person making the promise suffers a detriment because he is legally bound to perform it; for if this assumption is made about one of the promises, it must also be made of the other, so that the “explanation” assumes the very point in issue. Probably the reason for the rule is simpler. A person who makes a commercial promise expects to have to perform it (and is in fact under considerable pressure to do so). Correspondingly, one who receives such a promise expects it to be kept. These expectations, which can exist even where the promise is not legally enforceable,<sup>36</sup> are based on commercial morality, and can properly be called a detriment and a benefit; hence they satisfy the requirement of consideration in the case of mutual promises.

<sup>30</sup> Dunlop Pneumatic Tyre Co Ltd v Selfridge Ltd [1915] A.C. 847 at 855.

<sup>31</sup> Atiyah, Consideration in Contracts: A Fundamental Restatement (Canberra, 1971) p.60. For an earlier, similar statement, see I. Jewell, 40 Yale L.J. at 741 (1931)—“any sufficient justification for court enforcement”; but he makes no attempt to suggest that this actually is the law. For criticism of Atiyah’s views, see Treitel, 50 A.L.J. 439. cf. Colonia Versicherung AG v Amoco Oil Co [1995] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 570 at 577 (affirmed without reference to this point [1997] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 261) where the words “(a) the reason for and (b) ample consideration for” a payment clearly treat these concepts as distinct.

<sup>32</sup> Atiyah (above, n.31), pp.52, 58.

<sup>33</sup> cf. the description of a similar concept as “potentially very confusing” in Guinness Mahon & Co Ltd v Kensington & Chelsea Royal BC [1999] Q.B. 215 at 236.

<sup>34</sup> Atiyah, Essays in Contract, pp.179, 183.

<sup>35</sup> Thoresen Car Ferries Ltd v Weymouth Portland BC [1977] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 614 at 619; The Aramis [1989] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 213 at 225 (where the claim failed for want of contractual intention). But a mere proposal falling short of a promise does not suffice: The Kaliningrad and Nadezhda Krupskaya [1995] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 35 at 39.

<sup>36</sup> cf. Lipkin Gorman v Karpnale Ltd [1991] 2 A.C. 548 at 581.

As a general rule a promise is regarded as consideration for a counter-promise only if its performance would also have been so regarded.<sup>37</sup> It follows that a mere promise to accept a gift cannot be consideration for the promise to make it. Similarly, we shall see that a debtor who actually pays part of a debt does not thereby provide consideration for the creditor's promise to release the balance<sup>38</sup> and the position is exactly the same if the debtor promises part payment in return for the creditor's counter-promise to accept the part payment in full settlement.

(4) Invented consideration

Normally, a party enters into a contract with a view to obtaining the consideration provided by the other: for example, the buyer wants the goods and the seller the price. In the United States it has been said that this is essential, and that "Nothing is consideration that is not regarded as such by both parties."<sup>39</sup> But English courts do not insist on this requirement and often regard an act or forbearance as the consideration for a promise even though it may not have been the object of the promisor to secure it.<sup>40</sup> They may also regard the possibility of some prejudice to the promisee as a detriment without regard to the question whether it has in fact been suffered.<sup>41</sup> These practices may be called "inventing consideration",<sup>42</sup> and the temptation to adopt one or the other of them is particularly strong when the act or forbearance which was actually bargained for cannot be regarded as consideration for some reason which is thought to be technical and without merit. In such cases the practice of inventing consideration may help to make the operation of the doctrine of consideration more acceptable; but the practice may also be criticised<sup>43</sup> on the ground that it gives the courts a wide discretion to hold promises binding (or not) as they please. Thus the argument that the promisee might have suffered prejudice by acting in reliance on a promise is in some cases made a basis of decision,<sup>44</sup> while in others precisely the same argument is rejected.<sup>45</sup> The courts have not been very consistent in the exercise of this discretion and its existence is a source of considerable uncertainty in this branch of the law.

<sup>37</sup> Thorp v Thorp (1702) 12 Mod. 445 at 449; Re Dale [1994] Ch. 31 at 38.

<sup>38</sup> See below, p.125.

<sup>39</sup> Philpot v Gruninger (1872) 14 Wall, 570 at 577; Restatement, Contracts §75(1); Restatement 2d, Contracts §71(1) and (2); Williston, Contracts (rev. ed.), Vol.1, at p.320; Corbin, Contracts, §172, is more sceptical. Restatement 2d, Contracts §72 also supports the converse proposition, namely that anything is consideration if it is bargained for, even if there is no element of benefit or detriment; but this is subject to important exceptions, especially where what is bargained for is the performance of an existing duty or the settlement of an invalid claim: §§73, 74: as to these topics, see below, pp.88–90, 92–98.

<sup>40</sup> See for example, below, pp.85–86, 155, 298; cf. Pollway Ltd v Abdullah [1974] 1 W.L.R. 493, discussed by Zuckerman, 38 M.L.R. 384; Thornely [1975] C.L.J. 26; The Alev [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 138 at 147; Moran v University College Salford (No.2), The Times, November 23, 1993.

<sup>41</sup> e.g. below, n.44.

<sup>42</sup> Atiyah, Essays in Contract, p.183 accuses me of having "invented the concept of invented consideration"; but all that I can claim to have invented is a phrase for describing what the courts sometimes actually do. The phrase does not imply approval of the practice: see below after n.43. Nor does the phrase necessarily imply inconsistency between decisions, as Atiyah suggests ibid.: courts could consistently hold that an act or forbearance was consideration although it was not the promisor's object to secure it. In fact, the decisions on the point are not perfectly consistent with each other: see below at nn.44 and 45; but that is hardly unusual in a common law system.

<sup>43</sup> Holmes, The Common Law, p.292. In the United States there is less need to invent consideration because of the existence of a broad doctrine of promissory estoppel: see below, p.118.

<sup>44</sup> Shadwell v Shadwell (1860) 9 C.B.(N.S.) 159 at 174: the consideration was said by Erle C.J. to consist of the possibility that the promisor "may have made a most material change in his position . . .".

<sup>45</sup> In Offord v Davies (1862) 12 C.B.(N.S.) 748: the argument of counsel (at 750) that "the plaintiff might have altered his position in consequence of the guarantee" was rejected, Erle C.J. being again a member of the court. cf. also below p.84, n.67 and p.85, n.74, for refusal to "invent" consideration.

(5) Motive and consideration

In Thomas v Thomas<sup>46</sup> a testator shortly before his death expressed a desire that his widow should during her life have the house in which he lived, or £100. After his death, his executors “in consideration of such desire” promised to convey the house to the widow during her life or for so long as she should continue a widow, “provided nevertheless and it is hereby further agreed” that she should pay £1 per annum towards the ground rent, and keep the house in repair. In an action by the widow for breach of this promise, the consideration for it was stated to be the widow’s promise to pay and repair. An objection that the declaration omitted to state part of the consideration, namely the testator’s desire, was rejected. Patteson J. said: “Motive is not the same thing with consideration. Consideration means something which is of value in the eye of the law, moving from the plaintiff.”<sup>47</sup> This remark should not be misunderstood: a common motive for making a promise is the desire to obtain the consideration; and an act or forbearance on the part of the promisee may fail to constitute consideration precisely because it was not the promisor’s motive to secure it: for example, where A promises to give B £1,000 and B thereupon buys a diamond ring. What Patteson J. meant was that a motive for promising does not amount to consideration unless two further conditions are satisfied, viz.: (i) that the thing secured in exchange for the promise is “of some value in the eye of the law”<sup>48</sup>; and (ii) that it moves from the plaintiff.<sup>49</sup> Consideration and motive are not opposites; the former concept is a subdivision of the latter. The consideration for a promise is (unless it is nominal or invented)<sup>50</sup> always a motive for promising; but a motive for making a promise is not necessarily consideration for it in law. Thus the testator’s desire in Thomas v Thomas was a motive for the executors’ promise, but not part of the consideration for it. The widow’s promise to pay and repair was another motive for the executors’ promise and did constitute the consideration.

(6) Consideration and condition

Thomas v Thomas also illustrates the difference between consideration and condition<sup>51</sup>: the plaintiff’s remaining a widow was not part of the consideration but a condition of her entitlement to enforce the executors’ promise. Similarly, in Carlill v Carbolic Smoke Ball Co<sup>52</sup> the plaintiff provided consideration for the defendants’ promise by using the smoke-ball; but her catching influenza was only a condition of her entitlement to enforce that promise. In these cases, the promisee can be said to have performed the condition, but such performance was not requested by the promisor.<sup>53</sup> Where the promisee’s performance of the condition is (or can reasonably be regarded as having been) so requested, it can constitute consideration<sup>54</sup>: for example, where A promised B to convey

<sup>46</sup> (1842) 2 Q.B. 851.

<sup>47</sup> ibid. at 859. cf. Hadley v Kemp [1999] E.M.L.R. 589 at 625.

<sup>48</sup> See below, pp.83–98.

<sup>49</sup> See below, pp.80–83.

<sup>50</sup> See above, p.71, below, p.73. In Thomas v Thomas the consideration may not have been adequate, but it was not nominal: cf. below, p.74, and Westminster City Council v Duke of Westminster [1991] 4 All E.R. 136 at 146 (reversed in part on other grounds (1992) 24 H.L.R. 572).

<sup>51</sup> i.e. a contingent condition: see above, p.62.

<sup>52</sup> [1893] 1 Q.B. 256; above, p.13.

<sup>53</sup> For similar reasoning, see Dickinson v Abel [1969] 1 W.L.R. 295 where A promised to pay £10,000 to B if A succeeded (as he did) in buying Blackacre from X. This was said to be “nothing but a conditional promise without consideration” because B had not been requested to do anything to promote the sale by X to A.

<sup>54</sup> Williston, Contracts, rev. ed. §112; cf. Ellis v Chief Adjudication Officer [1998] 1 F.L.R. 184 where performance of the condition was no doubt requested but the actual decision was that an executed gift of a flat failed because the condition (that the donee should look after her mother there) had not been performed. The agreement in that case lacked contractual force for want of contractual intention: below, p.167.

a plot of land to B if B built a house on it, B could enforce the promise after he had built the house.<sup>55</sup> Similarly, where A promised to pay £3,000 to B if B established a school, in the running of which A was to take an active part, it was held that B had provided consideration by setting up the school<sup>56</sup>: a request that he should do so could be inferred from the fact that A had expressed his intention to take part in its management.

(7) Limited effects of promises without consideration

A promise that is not supported by consideration may nevertheless give rise to certain legal effects. In particular, English law places certain restrictions on the revocability of a promise where the promisee has acted on it in a way that the promisor could have anticipated but had not requested; and it may give a remedy against a promisor who would be unjustly enriched if he were allowed freely to revoke his promise after such action in reliance on it by the promisee. These limited legal effects of promises without consideration will be discussed later in this Chapter<sup>57</sup>: here it is only necessary to emphasise that they do not give such promises the full consequences of binding contracts. Thus the restrictions on their revocability may be only temporary<sup>58</sup> and breach of the promise may not entitle the injured party to the full loss of bargain damages normally awarded for breach of contract,<sup>59</sup> or may not entitle him to them as of right.<sup>60</sup> Only a promise supported by consideration (or one made in a deed) has these full contractual effects. “Contract” does not exhaust the category of promises or agreements having some legal effects<sup>61</sup>; it refers, more narrowly, to those promises or agreements leading to the full measure of enforceability to be discussed later in this book.<sup>62</sup> Moreover, while promises without consideration may have some legal effects, the promisee can still gain a number of important practical advantages by showing that he provided consideration. If the promise was supported by consideration, the promisee will not need to show action in reliance on the promise, or unjust enrichment of the promisor; the promise will not be revocable but enforceable according to its terms; and the promisee will be entitled to full loss of bargain damages as of right. The limited effects of promises without consideration may have mitigated some of the rigours of the strict doctrine; but they have not eliminated consideration as an essential requirement of a binding contract.<sup>63</sup>

SECTION 2. ADEQUACY

1. Consideration need not be Adequate

Under the doctrine of consideration, a promise has no contractual force unless some value has been given for it. But the courts do not, in general, ask whether adequate value

<sup>55</sup> See Raffaele v Raffaele [1962] W.A.R. 29; Allan, 79 L.Q.R. 239; cf. Errington v Errington [1952] 1 K.B. 290 (above, p.38); The Castle Alpha [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 383 at 387. For the purpose of assessing VAT, a wider test (laid down by European Community Law), requiring only a “direct link” between performance and counter-performance, suffices: see Rosgill Group Ltd v Customs & Excise Commissioners [1997] 3 All E.R. 1012, though in that case the English test for what constitutes consideration was said at 1020 also to have been satisfied.

<sup>56</sup> Re Soames (1897) 13 T.L.R. 439.

<sup>57</sup> See below, pp.105–119, 130–149.

<sup>58</sup> See below, pp.111, 131–133, 142.

<sup>59</sup> See above, pp.6–7, below, Chap.21; cf. Restatement 2d, Contracts §90 (“the remedy . . . may be limited as justice requires”).

<sup>60</sup> See below, p.144.

<sup>61</sup> cf. Duncanson, 39 M.L.R. 268.

<sup>62</sup> See below, Chap.21.

<sup>63</sup> See below, p.112.

has been given,<sup>64</sup> or whether the agreement is harsh or one-sided.<sup>65</sup> The reason for this is not that the courts cannot value the promise of each party: they have to do just this when assessing damages.<sup>66</sup> It is rather that they should not interfere with the bargain actually made by the parties. The fact that a person pays “too much” or “too little” for a thing may be evidence of fraud or mistake, or induce the court to imply a term as to the quality of the subject-matter or be relevant to the question whether a contract has been frustrated.<sup>67</sup> But it does not of itself affect the validity of the contract. This state of the law sometimes causes dissatisfaction, for example, when it is alleged that “excessive” profits have been made out of government contracts<sup>68</sup> or that “irrationally generous” payments had been made out of public funds<sup>69</sup> or when, in times of scarcity, it is said that “excessive” prices are charged for goods or services or accommodation. Such problems are, however, more appropriately dealt with by special legislation or by administrative measures than by the ordinary process of civil litigation. The courts are not well equipped to develop a system of price-control, and their refusal, as a general rule, to concern themselves with the adequacy of consideration is a reflection of this fact. At the same time, the general rule is subject to a number of exceptions, to be discussed later in this book.<sup>70</sup> These indicate that the courts are (even where the legislature has not intervened) by no means insensitive to the problem of unequal bargains; but in none of them is a promise held invalid merely because adequate value for it has not been given. Some additional factor is required to bring a case within one of the exceptions: for example, the existence of a relationship in which one party is able to take an unfair advantage of the other. The general rule remains that “no bargain will be upset which is the result of the ordinary interplay of forces”.<sup>71</sup>

2. Nominal Consideration

(1) Sufficiency of nominal consideration

The rule that consideration need not be adequate makes it possible to evade the doctrine of consideration, in the sense that a gratuitous promise can be made binding by means of a nominal consideration, e.g. £1 for the promise of valuable property, or a peppercorn for a substantial sum of money. Such cases are merely extreme applications of the rule

<sup>64</sup> Haigh v Brooks (1840) 10 A. & E. 309 at 320; Westlake v Adams (1858) 5 C.B.(N.S.) 248 at 265; Wild v Tucker [1914] 3 K.B. 36 at 39; cf. Langdale v Danby [1982] 1 W.L.R. 1123; CCC Films (London) Ltd v Impact Quadrant Films Ltd [1985] Q.B. 16 at 27; Brady v Brady [1989] A.C. 755 at 775; Normid Housing Association Ltd v R. John Ralphs [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 265 at 272; Barton, 103 L.Q.R. 118. The principle is recognised and, in general, preserved by Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999 (SI 1999/2083), reg.6(2)(b), below, p.271, n.77.

<sup>65</sup> Gaumont-British Pictures Corp v Alexander [1936] 2 All E.R. 1686 (where the 1999 Regulations, above, would not apply: Dir. 93/13, Recital 10 and below, p.278); Midland Bank & Trust Co Ltd v Green [1981] A.C. 513 at 532. cf. below, p.421 at n.99.

<sup>66</sup> See below, p.936.

<sup>67</sup> e.g. in the coronation cases, below pp.885–887.

<sup>68</sup> See [1964] Public Law 391; cf. the report into allegations of overcharging by Bristol Siddeley Engines Ltd (H.C. Paper 129, Session 1967–1968); see Turpin, 31 M.L.R. 241; Turpin, Government Contracts, pp.196 et seq.

<sup>69</sup> Newbold v Leicester CC [1999] 1 C.R. 1182 at 1185 (upholding such a promise).

<sup>70</sup> See below, pp.75 at n.74, 419–421, 461, 1027–1029; Waddams, 39 M.L.R. 393; Tiplady, 46 M.L.R. 601. See also Bankway Properties Ltd v Penfold Dunsford [2001] EWCA Civ 538; [2001] 1 W.L.R. 1369 where a provision for rent increase in a shorthold tenancy far beyond the amount which (as the landlord knew) the tenant could possibly pay was held to be unenforceable as being inconsistent with the intention of the parties to create an assured tenancy.

<sup>71</sup> Lloyds Bank Ltd v Bundy [1975] Q.B. 326 at 336, per Lord Denning M.R.

that the courts will not judge the adequacy of consideration.<sup>72</sup> If, however, it appears on the face of the agreement that the consideration must as a matter of arithmetic be worth less than the performance of the counter-promise, there would seem to be no contract: for example, if A promised to pay B £100 in return for £1 to be simultaneously paid by B. It is assumed in the example that both sums are simply to be paid in legal tender. An agreement to exchange a specific coin or coins of a particular description for a sum of money greater than their face value (e.g. 20 shilling pieces bearing the date 1900 for £100) would be a good contract. The same would be true of an agreement to pay a sum in one currency in exchange for one payable in another, and of an agreement to pay a larger sum tomorrow in exchange for a smaller sum paid today.

Where an agreement is legally binding on the ground that it is supported by nominal consideration, the doctrine of consideration does not serve its main purpose, of distinguishing between gratuitous and onerous promises. But the law has no settled policy against enforcing all gratuitous promises. It refuses to enforce only informal gratuitous promises; and the deliberate use of a nominal consideration can be regarded as a form to make a gratuitous promise binding. In some cases it may, indeed, be undesirable to give nominal consideration the same legal effect as substantial consideration; but these cases are best dealt with by special rules.<sup>73</sup> Such rules are particularly necessary where the promise can cause prejudice to third parties. For example, the danger that company promoters might use the device of nominal consideration to the prejudice of shareholders is avoided by imposing fiduciary duties on the promoters.<sup>74</sup>

(2) Nominal distinguished from inadequate consideration

It is not normally necessary to distinguish between “nominal” and “inadequate” consideration, since both equally suffice to make a promise binding. The need to draw the distinction may, however, arise in some of the exceptional cases<sup>75</sup> in which the law treats promises or transfers supported only by nominal consideration differently from those supported by consideration which is substantial or “valuable” (even though it may be inadequate).

One view is that a nominal consideration is one which is of only token value,<sup>76</sup> while an inadequate consideration is one which has substantial value even though it is manifestly less than that of the performance promised or rendered in return. A second view is that “‘Nominal consideration’ and a ‘nominal sum’ appear . . . , as terms of art, to refer to a sum or consideration which can be mentioned as consideration but is not necessarily paid.”<sup>77</sup> This was the view of Lord Wilberforce in Midland Bank & Trust Co

<sup>72</sup> Atiyah, Essays in Contract, p.194 argues that there is no logical connection between the two rules, relying on the fact that in many of the United States the courts recognise the principle that consideration need not be adequate, while rejecting the device of nominal consideration. The answer to this argument lies in Holmes’ aphorism (The Common Law, p.1) that “the life of the law has not been logic: it has been experience”: American courts which reject the device of nominal consideration do so on policy grounds which have nothing to do with logic.

<sup>73</sup> Thus a nominal consideration was disregarded in Milroy v Lord (1862) 4 D.F. & J. 264, discussed below, p.685 and for the purposes of the Law of Property Act 1925, “valuable consideration” . . . does not include a nominal consideration in money”; s.205(1)(xxi).

<sup>74</sup> See below, p.399. For other ways of protecting third parties from being prejudiced by contracts made for inadequate consideration see Insolvency Act 1986, ss.238, 339, 423; Trustee Act 1925, s.13; Law of Property Act 1925, s.172; Local Government Act 1972, s.123(2); Inheritance (Provisions for Family and Dependents) Act 1975, ss.10(2)(b), 10(5)(b), 11(2)(c); cf. Companies Act 1985, ss.103, 320.

<sup>75</sup> See above at nn.73 and 74.

<sup>76</sup> This seems to be the sense in which 10s. was described as “nominal” consideration (for the assignment of a debt) in Turner v Forwood [1951] 1 All E.R. 746.

<sup>77</sup> Midland Bank & Trust Co Ltd v Green [1981] A.C. 513 at 532.

Ltd v Green,<sup>78</sup> where a husband sold a farm, said to be worth £40,000, to his wife for £500. It was held that the wife was, for the purposes of the Land Charges Act 1925, s.13(2), a “purchaser for money or money’s worth” so that the sale to her prevailed over an unregistered option to purchase the land, which had been granted to one of the couple’s sons.<sup>79</sup> It was not necessary to decide whether the consideration for the sale was nominal but Lord Wilberforce said that he would have had “great difficulty” in so holding; and that “To equate ‘nominal’ with ‘inadequate’ or even ‘grossly inadequate’ consideration would embark the law on inquiries which I cannot think were ever intended by Parliament”<sup>80</sup>: i.e. inquiries into the adequacy of the price. On the facts of the case the £500 was in fact paid and was more than a mere token, so that the consideration was not nominal on either of the two views stated above. But if the stated consideration had been only £1, or a peppercorn, it is submitted that it would have been nominal even if it had been paid, or delivered, in accordance with the intention of the parties. So to hold would not lead to enquiries as to the adequacy of consideration; for the distinction between a consideration that is a mere token and one that is inadequate (or even grossly inadequate) is, it is submitted, clear as a matter of common sense. Thus where the question was whether a lease amounted to a “disposition . . . for a nominal consideration”<sup>81</sup> it was said that “Any substantial value—that is, a value of more than, say, £5 . . . will prevent [the] disposition from being for a nominal consideration”.<sup>82</sup> Such an approach gives rise to no more difficulty than the concept of a consideration which is “mentioned as a consideration but . . . not necessarily paid”. That test would presumably make the question whether consideration was nominal turn on the intention of the parties; and, in the present context, this would be an even more than usually elusive criterion, since no guidance could be obtained from the terms of the contract, those terms being, in cases of this kind, often deliberately drafted so as to conceal the true nature of the transaction.

3. Attitude of Equity

Equity recognised the general rule that the validity of a contract could not be challenged merely on the ground of inadequacy of consideration.<sup>83</sup> But it sometimes refused specific performance, or set a contract aside, or even reopened it (i.e. varied its terms) on the ground that adequate value had not been given to a party who was thought to need special protection.<sup>84</sup>

Equity also refuses to aid a “volunteer”—i.e. a person who has given no substantial consideration but can nonetheless enforce a promise at law because it was made in a deed or supported by nominal consideration.<sup>85</sup> It was evidently thought that even such formal gratuitous promises did not deserve the same degree of enforcement as those for which substantial value had been given, and so the equitable remedy of specific performance is not available in respect of such a promise.<sup>86</sup> But while the equitable principle restricts the

<sup>78</sup> See above.

<sup>79</sup> For later successful proceedings by the son against his parents in conspiracy see [1982] Ch. 529.

<sup>80</sup> [1981] A.C. 513 at 532. In other legislative contexts such an inquiry may be intended: e.g. by use of the phrase “full and valuable consideration” in Inheritance (Provision for Family and Dependents) Act 1975, s.1(3).

<sup>81</sup> Within Law of Property Act 1925, s.84(7).

<sup>82</sup> Westminster City Council v Duke of Westminster [1991] 4 All E.R. 136 at 146, reversed in part on another ground (1992) 24 H.L.R. 572.

<sup>83</sup> See, e.g. Cheale v Kenward (1858) 3 D. & J. 27; Townend v Tucker (1866) L.R. 1 Ch.App. 446.

<sup>84</sup> Tennents v Tennents (1870) L.R. 2 Sc. & Div. 6 at 9, below pp.419–421, 1027–1029.

<sup>85</sup> Jefferys v Jefferys (1841) Cr. & Ph. 138.

<sup>86</sup> See below, pp.1035–1037.

enforceability of gratuitous promises, it does not affect the validity of a completed gift.<sup>87</sup>

SECTION 3. PAST CONSIDERATION

1. General Rule

The consideration for a promise must be given in return for the promise. If A makes a present of a car to B and a year later B promises to pay A £500 there is no consideration for B's promise as A did not give B the car in return for it. This reasoning often applies where there is an interval of time between an act and the promise said to have been given in return for it. The alleged consideration is then said to be "past consideration" and therefore bad.<sup>88</sup> Thus if a thing is guaranteed after it has been sold there is no consideration for the guarantee.<sup>89</sup> Similarly, a promise to pay a sum of money may be made to an employee after his retirement or to an agent after the termination of the agency. If the sole consideration for the promise is the service previously rendered by the employee or agent under the terminated contract, it will be a past consideration so that the promise will not be contractually binding.<sup>90</sup> It will be so binding only if some consideration, other than the past service, has been provided by the promisee. Such other consideration may consist in his giving up rights which are outstanding (or are in good faith believed to be outstanding) under the original contract,<sup>91</sup> or in his promising or accomplishing some other act or forbearance not due from him under the original contract: for example, in his validly promising not to compete with the promisor.<sup>92</sup>

In determining whether consideration is past, the court is not, it is submitted, bound to apply a strictly chronological test. If the consideration and the promise are substantially one transaction, the exact order in which these events occur is not decisive.<sup>93</sup> A manufacturer's "guarantee" may be given to a customer after he has bought the goods. But the consideration for the guarantee would not be past if the sale and the giving of the "guarantee" were in substance a single transaction, as they would be if the customer at the time of the sale thought that he was buying a guaranteed product. Where the guarantee is a "consumer guarantee" within the Sale and Supply of Goods to Consumers Regulations 2002<sup>94</sup> it binds the guarantor by force of this legislation. For this purpose, the consumer need not show that he has provided consideration for the

<sup>87</sup> T Choithram International SA v Pagarani [2001] 1 W.L.R. 1; Pennington v Waine [2002] EWCA Civ 227; [2002] 1 W.L.R. 2075.

<sup>88</sup> Dent v Bennett (1839) 4 My. & Cr. 269; Eastwood v Kenyon (1840) 11 A. & E. 438.

<sup>89</sup> Thorner v Field (1612) 1 Bulst. 120; Roscorla v Thomas (1842) 3 Q.B. 234. In the latter case, an oral warranty had been given at the time of sale (see 11 L.J.Q.B. 214 and 6 Jur. 929) but was presumably regarded as "void" for want of written evidence: see below, p.176.

<sup>90</sup> cf. Simpson v John Reynolds [1975] 1 W.L.R. 617; Murray v Goodhens [1978] 1 W.L.R. 489, where payments made in such circumstances were for tax purposes held to be voluntary.

<sup>91</sup> e.g. Bell v Lever Bros Ltd [1932] A.C. 161 (where the value of the rights given up in return for the payment was uncertain in amount since it included not only future salary but also possible future commission).

<sup>92</sup> cf. Wyatt v Kreglinger and Fernau [1933] 1 K.B. 793, where the ex-employee's claim would have succeeded if the restraint undertaken by him had not been invalid (below, p.461).

<sup>93</sup> Thornton v Jenkyns (1840) 1 Man. & G. 166; Tanner v Moore (1846) 9 Q.B. 1; National Westminster Bank v Cullinane, The Times, October 27, 1982; Westminster City Council v Duke of Westminster [1991] 4 All E.R. 136 at 145, reversed in part on another ground (1992) 24 H.L.R. 572; and cf. the discussion of Halifax BS v Edell [1992] Ch. 436, below, p.587.

<sup>94</sup> SI 2002/3045, reg.15, implementing Dir. 1999/44, Art.7. For definitions of "consumer", "consumer guarantee" and "guarantor", see reg.2.

guarantor's promise; but the requirement of consideration continues to apply to guarantees which are not "consumer guarantees" within the Regulations.<sup>95</sup>

The question whether consideration is past is one of fact: the wording of the agreement is not decisive. Thus in Re McArdle<sup>96</sup> a promise made "in consideration of your carrying out" certain work was held to be gratuitous as the work had already been done. Conversely, a promise made "in consideration of your having today advanced . . . £750" has been held binding on proof that the advance was made at the same time as the promise.<sup>97</sup>

2. Past Acts or Promises requested by Promisor

A past act can be consideration for a promise if three conditions are satisfied: the act must have been done at the request of the promisor<sup>98</sup>; it must have been understood that payment would be made; and the payment, if it had been promised in advance, must have been legally recoverable.<sup>99</sup> In such a case the promisee is, quite apart from the subsequent promise, entitled to a reasonable sum for his services. The promise can be regarded either as fixing the amount of that sum<sup>1</sup> or as being given in consideration of the promisee's releasing his claim for such a payment.

On the other hand, a past service which was not done at the request of the promisor, or one for which payment was not expected, or one for which payment, though expected, is not legally recoverable, is no consideration for a subsequent promise to pay for it.<sup>2</sup>

The consideration for a promise by A can consist not only of a past act done by B at A's request, but also of an earlier promise made by B at A's request. Thus in Pao On v Lau Yiu Long<sup>3</sup> the claimants had promised the defendants that for one year they would not sell certain shares in a company of which the defendants were the principal shareholders. This promise had been made at the request of the defendants, who were anxious to prevent the value of their own holding from being depressed by a sudden sale of the claimants' shares. Later, the defendants gave the claimants a guarantee in which they promised to indemnify the claimants against any loss which they might suffer if, during the year, the shares fell in value.<sup>4</sup> The Privy Council rejected the argument that the consideration for the guarantee was past.<sup>5</sup> The claimants' promise not to sell the shares was good consideration for the guarantee; for although that promise had been made before the guarantee was given, it had been made at the defendants' request and on the understanding that the claimants were, in return for making it, to receive some <sup>95</sup> e.g. where the buyer is not a "natural person" and so does not fall within the definition of "consumer" in reg. 2.

<sup>96</sup> [1951] Ch. 669.

<sup>97</sup> Goldshede v Swan (1847) 1 Ex. 154. The burden of proving that the consideration was not past is on the person seeking to enforce the promise: Savage v Umechia [1961] 1 W.L.R. 455.

<sup>98</sup> Southwark LBC v Logan (1996) 8 Admin.J.R. 315, where this requirement was not satisfied.

<sup>99</sup> Re Casey's Patents [1892] 1 Ch. 104 at 115–116; cf. Lampleigh v Brathwait (1615) Hob. 105.

<sup>1</sup> Kennedy v Brown (1863) 13 C.B.(N.S.) 677 at 740; Rondel v Worsley [1969] 1 A.C. 191 at 236, 278, 287.

<sup>2</sup> Kennedy v Brown, above; Rondel v Worsley, above: promise to pay barrister for past professional services not binding since he could not sue for his fees; see now Courts and Legal Services Act 1990, s.61. In Arthur JS Hall Ltd v Simons [2002] 1 A.C. 615 the House of Lords disapproved the reasoning of Rondel v Worsley so far as it relates to an advocate's immunity from liability for negligence in the conduct of civil or (by a majority) criminal proceedings. This disapproval therefore does not affect the point for which Rondel v Worsley is here cited, i.e. the common law rule that a barrister cannot sue for his fees. Reference to this point is made, perhaps with some scepticism, in the Arthur JS Hall case at 677 and 685.

<sup>3</sup> [1980] A.C. 614.

<sup>4</sup> This guarantee replaced an earlier agreement which was less favourable to the claimants.

<sup>5</sup> For the further argument that the consideration was no more than the promise to perform an existing contractual duty, see below, p.98.

form of protection against the risk (to which the promise exposed them) of a fall in the value of those shares.

3. Antecedent Debt

In a number of cases it has been held that the mere existence of an antecedent debt does not constitute “value” for a transfer by the debtor as it amounts only to past consideration.<sup>6</sup> These cases are not directly concerned with the question whether such an antecedent debt can constitute consideration for a later promise by the debtor: e.g. for one to pay higher interest or to pay early. But they may, by analogy, support the view that, where the only possible consideration for such a promise is an antecedent debt owed by the promisor to the promisee, then such consideration is past, so that the promise is not contractually binding.<sup>7</sup> In practice, however, the creditor (i.e. the promisee) will often provide consideration for such a promise by forbearing, on the strength of it, to sue for the debt.<sup>8</sup>

4. Moral Obligation

In the eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries, an attempt was made (originally by Lord Mansfield) to define consideration so as to include certain pre-existing “moral” obligations. In accordance with this theory it was held that an executor was personally liable on a promise to pay a legacy if he had sufficient assets of the deceased in his hands to pay his debts and legacies<sup>9</sup>; that a promise by a discharged bankrupt to pay a debt contracted before the discharge was binding<sup>10</sup>; and that a promise to pay a statute-barred debt<sup>11</sup> or one contracted during minority<sup>12</sup> was binding. In some of these cases, the consideration for the promise was said to be the “moral” obligation of the promisor to pay the debt.

In this context, the term “moral obligation” was used in a narrow sense. It was restricted to cases in which the promisor’s previous obligation was not legally enforceable (or not enforceable in the particular court in which the action on the promise was brought<sup>13</sup>) because it suffered from some specific legal defect. It did not follow that any “moral” obligation was consideration. Thus in Eastwood v Kenyon<sup>14</sup> the guardian of a young girl had raised a loan to pay for her maintenance and education, and to improve her estate. After she had come of age and married; and her husband promised the guardian to pay the amount of the loan. In dismissing the guardian’s action on this promise, the court rejected the argument that the husband’s promise was binding merely because he was under a moral obligation to perform it. Lord Denman C.J. said that this argument would “annihilate the necessity for any consideration at all, inasmuch as the

<sup>6</sup> Roger v Comptoir d’Escompte de Paris (1869) L.R. 2 C.P. 393; Re Barker’s Estate (1875) 44 L.J. Ch. 487; Wigan v English & Scottish Law Life Assurance Society [1909] 1 Ch. 291.

<sup>7</sup> e.g. Hopkinson v Logan (1839) 5 M. & W. 241 (promise fixing date of payment).

<sup>8</sup> See below, p.92.

<sup>9</sup> Atkins v Hill (1775) 1 Cowp. 284; Hawkes v Saunders (1782) 1 Cowp. 289, an alternative ground for the decision given by Buller J. was that the defendant’s equitable (as opposed to “moral”) obligation to pay the legacy was consideration for the promise.

<sup>10</sup> Trueman v Fenton (1772) 2 Cowp. 544.

<sup>11</sup> Hyeling v Hastings (1699) 1 Ld. Raym. 389.

<sup>12</sup> See below, p.508; cf. Lee v Muggerridge (1813) 5 Taunt. 36 (promise by a woman after her husband’s death to pay debt incurred during marriage); for attempts to restrict or define the doctrine, see Littlefield v Shee (1831) 2 B. & Ad. 811; Meyer v Haworth (1838) 8 A. & E. 467.

<sup>13</sup> As in Hawkes v Saunders, above, n.9.

<sup>14</sup> (1840) 11 A. & E. 438.

mere fact of giving a promise creates a moral obligation to perform it".<sup>15</sup> The moral obligation to perform a promise cannot be the consideration for it even in the most general sense: it cannot be the reason for making the promise. The case also shows that the mere existence of an antecedent moral obligation (in the ordinary sense of the phrase) to reimburse the guardian did not amount to consideration for the husband's promise. From this point of view, the case provides the classic illustration of the requirement that the consideration for a promise must not be past.

Many of the cases in which promises were held binding under the old "moral obligation" theory would now go the other way. For example, an executor who has assets of the deceased in his hands is no longer personally liable on a promise to pay legacies<sup>16</sup>; a promise by a discharged bankrupt to pay in full debts incurred before his discharge is binding only if supported by fresh consideration<sup>17</sup>; and the same is true of a promise to pay a debt after it has become statute-barred.<sup>18</sup>

On the other hand, a promise by an adult to pay a debt (or to perform some other obligation) contracted during minority is enforceable<sup>19</sup>; and Eastwood v Kenyon<sup>20</sup> did not purport to overrule the "moral obligation" theory in its original narrow sense, that a promise to perform an earlier obligation which suffered from some specific legal defect might be binding. In this sense the theory was restated by Lord Denman himself only two years after his decision in Eastwood v Kenyon<sup>21</sup> and applied 23 years later in a case<sup>22</sup> that was mentioned with approval by Scrutton L.J. in 1918.<sup>23</sup> In this narrow sense, the "moral obligation" theory may still survive, though its scope has been restricted and the label has become unfashionable.

5. Statutory Exceptions

There are two exceptions to the rule that past consideration is no consideration.

First, an "antecedent debt or liability," though normally a past consideration,<sup>24</sup> is good consideration for a bill of exchange.<sup>25</sup>

Secondly, the Limitation Act 1980<sup>26</sup> provides that, where a debtor in a writing signed by him<sup>27</sup> "acknowledges" a debt, it shall be deemed to have accrued on and not before the date of the acknowledgment. An "acknowledgment" need not take the form of a promise<sup>28</sup>; but if it does take this form the promise can extend the period of limitation even though the only consideration for it was the antecedent debt, and thus past. Further acknowledgments made within such an extended period or periods have the same effect.<sup>29</sup> But once the debt has become statute-barred the right to sue for it cannot

<sup>15</sup> ibid. at 450; cf. Monkman v Stephenson (1840) 11 A. & E. 411 at 416.

<sup>16</sup> Williams, Mortimer and Sunnucks, Executors and Administrators and Probate (17th ed.), p.714.

<sup>17</sup> Jakeman v Cook (1878) 4 Ex.D. 26; Re Bonacina [1912] 2 Ch. 394; Wild v Tucker [1914] 3 K.B. 36.

<sup>18</sup> Limitation Act 1980, s.29(7); cf. as to time bars imposed by contract, The Ion [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 245 at 249.

<sup>19</sup> See below, p.549.

<sup>20</sup> (1840) 11 A. & E. 438.

<sup>21</sup> Rasorla v Thomas (1842) 3 Q.B. 234 at 237.

<sup>22</sup> Flight v Reed (1863) 1 H. & C. 703.

<sup>23</sup> J Evans & Co v Heathcote [1918] 1 K.B. 418 at 437.

<sup>24</sup> See above, p.78.

<sup>25</sup> Bills of Exchange Act 1882, s.27(1)(b). Such consideration is not necessarily past: it might consist of forbearance of the creditor to sue for the debt or in his treating the bill as conditional payment: see Currie v Misa (1875) L.R. 10 Ex. 153 and cf. below, pp.86, 698.

<sup>26</sup> s.27(5).

<sup>27</sup> ibid. s.30(1).

<sup>28</sup> An admission of liability suffices: Surrendra Overseas Ltd v Government of Sri Lanka [1977] 1 W.L.R. 481; cf. Re Overmark Smith Warden Ltd [1982] 1 W.L.R. 1195.

<sup>29</sup> Limitation Act 1980, s.29(7).

be revived by any subsequent acknowledgment<sup>30</sup>: to this extent, the old “moral obligation” theory as applied to statute-barred debts<sup>31</sup> has been reversed.

SECTION 4. CONSIDERATION MUST MOVE FROM THE PROMISEE

1. Promisee must provide Consideration

The rule that consideration must “move from the promisee”<sup>32</sup> means that a person to whom a promise was made can enforce it only if he himself provided the consideration for it. He has no such right if the consideration moved from a third party. Thus if A promises B to pay £10,000 to B if C will paint A’s house, and C does so, B cannot enforce A’s promise (unless, of course, B had procured, or undertaken to procure, C to do the work). The promisee need not, however, provide the whole consideration for the promise: thus he can enforce a promise, the consideration for which was provided partly by himself and partly by his agent or partner or by some other co-promisee.<sup>33</sup>

2. Consideration need not move to Promisor

While consideration must move from the promisee, it need not move to the promisor.<sup>34</sup> It follows that the requirement of consideration may be satisfied where the promisee suffers some detriment at the promisor’s request, but confers no corresponding benefit on the promisor. Thus the promisee may provide consideration by giving up a job<sup>35</sup> or the tenancy of a flat,<sup>36</sup> even though no direct benefit results to the promisor from these acts. Consideration may also move from the promisee without moving to the promisor where the promisee at the promisor’s request confers a benefit on a third party, e.g. by entering into a contract with the third party.<sup>37</sup> This possibility is illustrated by the case in which goods are bought and paid for by the use of a cheque card or credit card. The issuer of the card makes a promise to the supplier of the goods that the cheque will be honoured or that the supplier will be paid; and the supplier provides consideration for this promise by supplying the goods to the customer.<sup>38</sup> In the case of the credit card transaction, there is also consideration in the shape of the discount allowed by the supplier of the goods to the issuer of the card: this is both a detriment to the supplier and a benefit to the issuer.<sup>39</sup>

<sup>30</sup> ibid.

<sup>31</sup> See above, p.79.

<sup>32</sup> Barber v Fox (1682) 2 Wms.Saund. 134, n.(e); Thomas v Thomas (1842) 2 Q.B. 851 at 859; Treddle v Atkinson (1861) 1 B. & S. 393 at 398, 399; Pollmay Ltd v Abdullah [1974] 1 W.L.R. 493 at 497; cf. Dickinson v Abel [1969] 1 W.L.R. 295; Customs & Excise Commissioners v Telemed [1992] S.T.C. 89; for criticism of a contrary dictum, see below, p.578.

<sup>33</sup> Jones v Robinson (1847) 1 Ex. 454; Fleming v Bank of New Zealand [1900] A.C. 577. For the position where the whole consideration is provided by a co-promisee, see below, p.577.

<sup>34</sup> Re Wyvern Developments Ltd [1974] 1 W.L.R. 1097; cf. Barclays Bank plc v Weeks, Legg & Dean [1998] 3 All E.R. 213 at 220–221.

<sup>35</sup> Jones v Padavatton [1969] 1 W.L.R. 628.

<sup>36</sup> Tanner v Tanner [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1346; contrast Horrocks v Forray [1976] 1 W.L.R. 230; Coombes v Smith [1986] 1 W.L.R. 808.

<sup>37</sup> See International Petroleum Refining Supply Ltd v Caleb Brett & Son Ltd [1980] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 569 at 594 (where the promisor benefited indirectly since promisor and third party were associated companies); cf. also The Chemical Venture [1993] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 509 at 522 (payments made by charterer to crew regarded as consideration for promise by shipowner to charterer).

<sup>38</sup> See R. v Lambie [1982] A.C. 449; Re Charge Card Services Ltd [1987] Ch. 150, affirmed [1989] Ch. 497.

<sup>39</sup> Customs & Excise Commissioners v Diner’s Club Ltd [1989] 1 W.L.R. 1196 at 1207.

3. Benefit to Promisor sufficient

The requirement that consideration must move from the promisee at first sight supports the view that the essence of consideration is detriment to the promisee. But the requirement may be satisfied, even though the promisee in fact suffers no detriment, if he confers a benefit on the promisor, or on a third party at the promisor's request. This was the position in Bolton v Madden,<sup>40</sup> where the claimant and defendant were entitled, as subscribers to a charity, to vote on the disposition of its funds. The claimant promised to vote at one meeting for a person whom the defendant wished to benefit, and the defendant promised in return to vote at the next meeting for a person whom the claimant wished to benefit. In an action on the defendant's promise, it was argued that there was no consideration for it as the claimant "incurred neither trouble nor prejudice".<sup>41</sup> But it was held that consideration had moved from the claimant when he had at the defendant's request conferred a benefit on a third party. It could be argued that the claimant had suffered a legal detriment<sup>42</sup> by voting in accordance with his promise as he was not previously bound to do so. But this was not the basis of the decision. The possibility that consideration may consist in benefit to the promisor is further illustrated by Edmonds v Lamson,<sup>43</sup> where the relationship between a pupil barrister and the members of the chambers at which she had accepted an offer of pupillage was held to be contractual even though she paid no pupillage fee. The requirement of consideration was satisfied in that her (and other pupils') agreement to accept pupillage "provide[d] a pool of selected candidates who can be expected to compete with each other for recruitment as tenants",<sup>44</sup> and in that "chambers may see an advantage in developing close relationships with pupils who plan to practise as employed barristers or overseas".<sup>45</sup> Both these factors stress the benefit to the promisors (the members of the chambers), moving from the promisee (the pupil barrister) even though no detriment was suffered by her.

The view that consideration can move from the promisee though he in fact suffers no detriment is, supported by two further rules to be discussed later in this Chapter. The first is that performance of an existing contractual duty (or a promise to perform such a duty) can constitute consideration if it benefits the promisor<sup>46</sup>: this benefit "moves" from the promisee in that it is conferred by him, even though it may cause him no detriment<sup>47</sup> in the sense that he was already bound to do the acts in question. The second is that a composition agreement between a debtor and his creditors is binding<sup>48</sup> because it benefits the creditors; and this benefit can be said to "move" from the debtor in that his co-operation is essential to the making and performance of the composition agreement. It could be said that the debtor suffers a legal detriment by signing the

<sup>40</sup> (1873) L.R. 9 Q.B. 55.

<sup>41</sup> ibid. at 57.

<sup>42</sup> See above, p.69.

<sup>43</sup> [2000] Q.B. 501.

<sup>44</sup> ibid. at 515.

<sup>45</sup> ibid.

<sup>46</sup> See below, pp.95, 98.

<sup>47</sup> Williams v Roffey Bros & Nicholls (Contractors) Ltd [1991] 1 Q.B. 1 at 16.

<sup>48</sup> See below, p.129, the application of this rule in West Yorks Darracq Agency Ltd v Coleridge [1911] 2 K.B. 326 is hard to support, since there the creditors got nothing and so received no benefit. The consideration was said at 329 to be benefit to the debtor, but he was the person to whom the promise was made, and benefit to the promisee is obviously no consideration. If it were, there would be consideration for every gratuitous promise.

agreement when he is not bound to do so. But the rule is not based on this invented consideration.<sup>49</sup> It is based on benefit to the promisors.<sup>50</sup>

4. Contracts (Rights of Third Parties) Act 1999

Under this Act, a term in a contract between A (the promisor) and B (the promisee) is, in specified conditions, enforceable by a third party, C, against A. The Act is more fully discussed in Chapter 15<sup>51</sup>; the only points to be made here are that C is not prevented from enforcing the term by the fact that no consideration for A's promise moved from him,<sup>52</sup> and that C's right to enforce that promise can be described as a quasi-exception to the rule that consideration must move from the promisee.<sup>53</sup> It is not a true exception to the rule since in the case put the promisee is B, who must provide consideration for A's promise.

SECTION 5. CONSIDERATION MUST BE OF SOME VALUE

1. Must be of Economic Value

An act, forbearance or promise will amount to consideration only if the law recognises that it has some economic value. It may have such value even though the value cannot be precisely quantified. But "natural affection of itself is not a sufficient consideration",<sup>54</sup> and the same is true of other merely sentimental motives for promising. This is the reason why in Thomas v Thomas<sup>55</sup> the desire of the testator that his widow should live in his house was not part of the consideration for the executors' promise that she might do so. Similar reasoning may also explain the decision in White v Bluett<sup>56</sup> that a son had not provided consideration (for his father's promise not to sue him on a promissory note) by promising not to bore his father with complaints.

2. Illusory Consideration

A promise may appear to be made for some consideration which is illusory and which must therefore be disregarded.

One such situation can arise when the alleged consideration consists of a promise, the performance of which is, to the knowledge of both parties, impossible. For example, a promise by A to pay B £100 in return for B's promise to let A have all the wine in B's cellar would probably be regarded as a gratuitous promise if, when the promise was made, both A and B knew<sup>57</sup> that there was no wine in the cellar. The position would be different if B's promise were to deliver the future contents of the cellar. In that case, A

<sup>49</sup> See above, p.71. The creditors do not bargain for the debtor's signature but for a dividend. If the debtor's signature were the consideration it could equally well be so regarded in a composition with a single creditor, but this would be contrary to Foakes v Beer (1884) 9 App.Cas. 605, below, p.125.

<sup>50</sup> See below, p.129.

<sup>51</sup> See below, pp.651 et seq.

<sup>52</sup> Law Com. No. 242 (on which the Act is based) §6.8.

<sup>53</sup> See below, pp.656–657.

<sup>54</sup> Bret v JS (1600) Cro.Eliz. 756; Mansukhani v Sharkey [1992] 2 F.G.I.R. 105.

<sup>55</sup> (1842) 2 Q.B. 851; above, p.72.

<sup>56</sup> (1853) 23 L.J.Ex. 36. Pollock C.B. said at 37 that the son had "no right" to bore his father with complaints; but the son certainly had no legal duty not to do this and it is arguable that his forbearance did amount to consideration. Perhaps the decision can be explained on the ground that the father, in spite of his promise, retained the note.

<sup>57</sup> There could be a good contract if the parties were in doubt on this point: see Smith v Harrison (1857) 26 L.J. Ch. 412, below, p.294.

would be buying the chance of the cellar's containing wine<sup>58</sup>; and the value of that chance would be illusory only if the question whether any wine was to be put into the cellar had been left entirely to B's discretion.<sup>59</sup>

A second situation in which consideration would be illusory is where the promisee would have accomplished the act or forbearance anyway, even if the promise had not been made. This will be the position if A promises to pay B, who happens to be fond of port, £5 if B will drink the glass of port that he has just poured for himself; or if C promises D, who has religious objections to smoking, £5 if he will not smoke for a week. Since "it is no consideration to refrain from a course of conduct which it was never intended to pursue",<sup>60</sup> such promises would not be legally binding. But where the promise provided an inducement for the act or forbearance, the requirement of consideration would be satisfied even though there were also other inducements operating on the mind of the promisee.<sup>61</sup> It seems that the burden of proving that the requested act or forbearance would have been accomplished, even if the promise had not been made, is on the promisor.<sup>62</sup>

Consideration would again be illusory where it was alleged to consist of a promise the terms of which left performance entirely to the discretion of the promisor.<sup>63</sup> A person does not provide consideration by promising to do something "if I feel like it", or "unless I change my mind"; and the same principle may apply in analogous cases. Thus a promise may be illusory if it is accompanied by a clause effectively<sup>64</sup> excluding all liability of the promisor for breach.<sup>65</sup> And a promise to buy "so much coal as I may decide to order" would be an illusory consideration for the seller's counter-promise to deliver, which could therefore not be enforced.<sup>66</sup> On the other hand, if the promise were to buy "so much of the coal that I require as I may order from you", the court could give reality to the promise by implying a term into it to the effect that at least a reasonable part of any requirements which the promisor actually turned out to have must be ordered from the promisee. Equally a buyer would provide consideration by promising to buy from the seller "all the coal I require"; for in such a case, even if the buyer does not promise to have any requirements, he does at least give a definite undertaking not to deal with anybody else.<sup>67</sup> Similarly, a promise which is subject to cancellation by A may nevertheless constitute consideration for a counter-promise from B where A's power to

<sup>58</sup> cf. Brady v Brady [1989] A.C. 755 at 774 ("at the date of the promise").

<sup>59</sup> See below at n.63.

<sup>60</sup> Arrale v Costain Civil Engineering Ltd [1976] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 98 at 106; cf. Colchester BC v Smith [1991] Ch. 448 at 489, affirmed on other grounds [1992] Ch. 421; Beaton v McDivitt (1988) 13 N.S.W.L.R. 162.

<sup>61</sup> Brikom Investments Ltd v Carr [1979] Q.B. 467 at 490.

<sup>62</sup> cf. the analogous rule in cases of "proprietary estoppel" (below, p.141): Greasley v Cook [1980] 1 W.L.R. 1306; and misrepresentation (below, p.342): Smith v Chadwick (1884) 9 App.Cas. 187 at 196.

<sup>63</sup> Stabilad Ltd v Stephens & Carter Ltd (No.2) [1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 651 at 659. Such promises may also give rise to problems of contractual intention: see below, p.167.

<sup>64</sup> See below, Chap.7. If the clause were ineffective (e.g., under Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999 (SI 1999/2083), Sch.2, para.1(c) or (f)), this fact would give reality to an otherwise illusory promise.

<sup>65</sup> Firestone Tyre & Rubber Co Ltd v Vukins [1951] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 32; cf. the discussion of The Cap Palos [1921] p.458, in the Suisse Atlantique Case [1967] 1 A.C. 361 at 432.

<sup>66</sup> See Wickham & Burton Coal Co v Farmer's Lumber Co 189, 179 N.W. 417 (1923); for an exception, see Citadel Insurance Co v Atlantic Union Insurance Co [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 543; below, p.154.

<sup>67</sup> The validity of "requirement" contracts is assumed in such cases as Metropolitan Electric Supply Co v Ginder [1901] 2 Ch. 799 and Dominion Coal Co Ltd v Dominion Steel & Iron Co Ltd [1909] A.C. 293. Similarly, a contract by a manufacturer to sell his entire output to a particular buyer is binding even though he does not bind himself to have any output: see, for example, Donnell v Bennett (1883) 22 Ch.D. 835 and cf. Thames Tideway Properties Ltd v Serfaty [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 110 at 127; Howard, 2 U. of Tas.L.R. 446; Adams, 94 L.Q.R. 73. For the possible illegality of such promises, see below, pp.468-472.

cancel is limited by the express terms of the promise, e.g., where it can be exercised only within a specified time. Such a limitation on the power to cancel may also be implied, so that (for example) A could not cancel after B had begun to perform his counter-promise. A's promise would then constitute consideration, so that B would be liable if he failed to complete the performance. Finally, the objection that a promise amounts only to illusory consideration on the grounds here discussed can be removed if the promise is performed: such actual performance can constitute consideration even though the person who has rendered it was not legally obliged to render it.<sup>68</sup>

3. Trivial Acts or Objects

Since consideration need not be adequate, acts or omissions of very small value can be consideration. Thus it has been said that there was consideration for a promise to give a man £50 "if you will come to my house"<sup>69</sup>; that the act of executing a deed could be consideration for a promise to pay money although the deed was void<sup>70</sup>; that the execution of a will by A could be consideration for B's promise to make (and not to revoke) a similar will, even though the will made by A is revocable<sup>71</sup>; that to give up a piece of paper without reference to its contents was consideration<sup>72</sup>; that even to show a person a document was consideration<sup>73</sup>; and that the mere act of conducting negotiations can satisfy the requirement of consideration, even though that act does not commit the promisee to bringing the negotiations to a successful conclusion.<sup>74</sup>

On the same principle, objects of trifling value can constitute consideration. In Chappell & Co Ltd v Nestlé Co Ltd,<sup>75</sup> chocolate manufacturers sold gramophone records for 1s. 6d. plus three wrappers of their 6d. bars of chocolate. It was held that the delivery of the wrappers formed part of the consideration, though the wrappers were of little value and were in fact thrown away. If the delivery of the wrappers formed part of the consideration it could, presumably, have formed the whole of the consideration, so that a promise to deliver records for wrappers alone would have been binding. This case should be contrasted with Lipkin Gorman v Karpnale Ltd,<sup>76</sup> where gaming chips supplied by a gaming club to one of its members (and then lost by the member in the course of the gaming) were held not to constitute consideration for the money which the member had paid for them. One reason for this view appears to have been that

<sup>68</sup> Cambridge Nutrition Ltd v BBC [1990] 3 All E.R. 523 at 538; Stabilad Ltd v Stephens & Carter Ltd (No.2) [1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 651 at 660.

<sup>69</sup> Gilbert v Ruddeard (1608) 3 Dy. 272b (n); cf. Denton v GN Ry (1856) 5 E. & B. 860.

<sup>70</sup> Westlake v Adams (1858) 5 C.B.(N.S.) 248; perhaps there was also an element of compromise in this case: cf. below, p.88.

<sup>71</sup> Re Dale [1994] Ch. 31 at 38. Contrast Re Goodchild [1997] 1 W.L.R. 1216 where a mere "common understanding" (as opposed to definite mutual promises) did not suffice to make B's promise irrevocable, but some effect was given to it by an order in favour of the intended beneficiary under the Inheritance (Provision for Dependents) Act 1975; cf. Taylor v Dickens [1998] 1 F.L.R. 806, the reasoning of which was doubted on other grounds in Gillett v Holt [2001] Ch. 210.

<sup>72</sup> Haigh v Brooks (1839) 10 A. & E. 309 at 334; contrast Foster v Dawber (1861) 6 Ex. 839.

<sup>73</sup> Sturlyn v Albany (1587) Cro.Eliz. 67; March v Culpepper (1628) Cro.Car. 70. Contrast Re Charge Card Services Ltd [1987] Ch. 150 at 164, affirmed [1989] Ch. 497 (production of charge card and signature of voucher not the consideration for a supply of goods, evidently because such "consideration" would be blatantly "invented": above, p.71).

<sup>74</sup> Sepong Engineering Construction Co v Formula One Management Ltd [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 602 at 611; but damages for breach of the resulting contract would be no more than nominal: cf. below, p.955.

<sup>75</sup> [1960] A.C. 87.

<sup>76</sup> [1991] 2 A.C. 548.

“the chips themselves were worthless”<sup>77</sup>; but this is equally true of the wrappers in the Chappell case. Another seems to have been that the chips “remained the property of the club”<sup>78</sup>; but this again would not of itself be decisive, for the transfer of possession (no less than that of ownership) can constitute consideration.<sup>79</sup> A third reason for the view that the chips were not consideration for the money may be that the parties did not so regard the transaction: they regarded the chips as merely “a convenient mechanism for facilitating gambling”,<sup>80</sup> and the case may be one in which the court refused to “invent” consideration<sup>81</sup> (by regarding something as consideration which was not so regarded by the parties) even though this course was technically open to it. This refusal appears to have been based on the context in which the question arose. The issue was not whether the club could sue the member on any promise made by him: it arose because the money paid by the member to the club had been stolen; and the club, which had received the money in good faith, argued that it had given valuable consideration for it, so as to defeat the true owner’s claim for the return of the money. This explanation of the case derives some support from Lord Goff’s discussion of a hypothetical case of tokens supplied by a department store in exchange for cash. He said that “by receiving the money in these circumstances the store does not for present purposes give valuable consideration for it”<sup>82</sup>; yet he also accepted that (in the store example) “an independent contract is made for the chips when the customer originally obtains them at the cash desk”.<sup>83</sup> The question whether a party has provided consideration may thus receive one answer when it arises for the purpose of determining the enforceability of a promise, and a different and narrower one when it arises for the purpose of determining whether a transaction has adversely affected the rights of an innocent third party.<sup>84</sup> It was the desire to protect the victim of the theft which led the House of Lords in the Lipkin Gorman case to reject the, no doubt somewhat technical, argument that the chips constituted consideration for the money.

The Lipkin Gorman case gives rise to further difficulty because the chips were supplied on the terms that they could be used, not only for gaming, but also to purchase refreshments at the club. There was no evidence of their having been used for this purpose,<sup>85</sup> but Lord Templeman said that “neither the power to buy refreshments nor the exercise of that power could constitute consideration for the receipt [by the club] of £154,693”, (the sum lost by the member of the club).<sup>86</sup> One possible interpretation of this passage is that the supply of refreshments could not constitute consideration for £154,693 since the disparity in value was too great; but this would be inconsistent with the principle that consideration need not be adequate. It is submitted that the preferable explanation of Lord Templeman’s statement is that the chips were simply “treated as currency”<sup>87</sup> in the club and could be used for a variety of transactions. The reason why the supply of refreshments was not consideration for the face value of the chips lost at play was simply that these transactions were entirely separate ones.

---

<sup>77</sup> ibid. at 561.

<sup>78</sup> ibid.; and see 575.

<sup>79</sup> Bainbridge v Firmstone (1838) 8 A. & E. 743.

<sup>80</sup> Lipkin Gorman’s case at 575.

<sup>81</sup> See above, p.71.

<sup>82</sup> Lipkin Gorman’s case, at 577; italics supplied; cf. above, p.70.

<sup>83</sup> Lipkin Gorman’s case at 576.

<sup>84</sup> See above, p.67.

<sup>85</sup> Lipkin Gorman’s case at 569.

<sup>86</sup> Lipkin Gorman case at 567.

<sup>87</sup> ibid., at 561.

4. Gift of Onerous Property

A promise to give away onerous property is binding if the donee promises in return to discharge obligations attached to it. Thus a promise to give away a leasehold house is binding if the donee promises to perform the donor's covenants under the lease, e.g. to repair, to insure and to pay rent<sup>88</sup>; a promise to give away a freehold house is binding if the donee promises to pay outstanding mortgage instalments or other charges<sup>89</sup>; and a promise to give away partly paid-up shares in a company is binding if the donee promises to pay further calls which may be made on the shares.<sup>90</sup> If the property is worth more than the obligations attached to it, there will be an element of gift in such transactions; and safeguards are provided by law to ensure that this aspect of it does not prejudice certain categories of third parties, such as creditors of the promisor.<sup>91</sup>

5. Compromise and Forbearance to Sue

Three situations call for discussion. In the first, a person promises not to enforce a valid claim; in the second the claim that he promises not to enforce is invalid or doubtful; and in the third he simply forbears in fact from enforcing a claim, without making any promise to forbear.

(1) Valid claims

A promise not to enforce a valid claim<sup>92</sup> is clearly good consideration for a promise given in return.<sup>93</sup> If, for example, A is injured by the admitted negligence of B, they can validly compromise the claim, A's promise not to sue B constituting the consideration for B's promise to pay the agreed compensation. Similarly, a creditor to whom a sum of money has become due may promise to give the debtor extra time to pay in return for the debtor's promise to pay higher interest or to give additional security. In such a case there is good consideration for the debtor's promise: he benefits by getting extra time to pay, while the creditor suffers a detriment in that he is, for a time, kept out of his money.<sup>94</sup> There is such benefit to the debtor and detriment to the creditor even if the creditor promises to forbear for only a limited time; and if no time is specified, the court will infer that he undertook to forbear for a reasonable time.<sup>95</sup> The principles just stated apply, not only to a promise not to enforce a claim, but also to a promise to abandon a good defence<sup>96</sup>; and to a promise to abandon a particular remedy, e.g. to one to abandon arbitration proceedings.<sup>97</sup>

Although a promise to release a valid claim is thus supported by consideration, the court may protect the party granting the release on other grounds. This possibility is

<sup>88</sup> Price v Jenkins (1877) 5 Ch.D. 619; Johnsey Estates Ltd v Lewis Manley (Engineering) Ltd [1987] 2 F.G.I.R. 69; Westminster City Council v Duke of Westminster [1991] 4 All E.R. 136, reversed in part on other grounds (1992) 24 H.L.R. 572. In so far as Thomas v Thomas (1842) 2 Q.B. 851, above, p.68, takes a contrary view, it seems to be inconsistent with Price v Jenkins (where the "case which is not reported" mentioned at 620 closely resembles Thomas v Thomas).

<sup>89</sup> Merritt v Merritt [1970] 1 W.L.R. 1121.

<sup>90</sup> Cheale v Kenward (1858) 3 D. & J. 27.

<sup>91</sup> Insolvency Act 1986, ss.238, 339; above, p.75, n.74; Re Kumar [1993] 1 W.L.R. 224.

<sup>92</sup> For promises to abandon defences and remedies, see below at nn.96 and 97.

<sup>93</sup> e.g. Greene v Church Commissioners for England [1974] Ch. 467; cf. Centrovincial Estates plc v Merchant Investors Assurance Co Ltd, The Times, March 8, 1983 (as to which see above, p.8, n.7); The Atika Hope [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 439 at 442 (forbearance to sue third party).

<sup>94</sup> Crompter v Farrer (1850) 15 Q.B. 677.

<sup>95</sup> Payne v Wilson (1827) 7 B. & C. 423; Oldershaw v King (1857) 2 H. & N. 517.

<sup>96</sup> See Banque de l'Indochine v J H Rayner (Mincing Lane) Ltd [1983] Q.B. 711.

<sup>97</sup> The Leonidas D [1985] 1 W.L.R. 925 at 933, where there was no such abandonment: see above p.10.

illustrated by Bank of Credit and Commerce International SA v Ali<sup>98</sup> where an employee, on being dismissed for redundancy, promised in return for certain payments to release all claims against the employers “of whatever nature that exist or may exist”. At the time of the release, claims for “stigma damages” were believed not to be available to employees for breach of their employment contracts, but the availability of such claims was established by a later decision of the House of Lords.<sup>99</sup> It was held by the House of Lords in the present case that the general words of the release (quoted above) were not sufficiently clear to show “that the parties intended to provide for the release of rights and surrender of claims which they could never have had in contemplation at all”.<sup>1</sup> It is implicit in this reasoning that the possibility of releasing such a claim is not ruled out as a matter of law: the court is simply “slow to infer that a party intended to surrender rights and claims of which he was unaware and could not have been aware”.<sup>2</sup> The crucial points in Ali’s case seems to have been that neither party could have been aware of the possibility that the employee might, in law, have had a claim for stigma damages. If the employer had been aware of this possibility, it is far from clear that the employee would have succeeded on the issue of construction. There is, however, the further possibility that the amount of a settlement may be affected by the fact that “the party to whom the release was given [B] knew that the other party [A] had or might have a claim [beyond the one he thought he was releasing] and knew also that the other party was ignorant of this”.<sup>3</sup> B’s taking the release “without disclosing the existence of the claim or possible claim” would then be “unacceptable sharp practice”<sup>4</sup> and there is judicial support for the view that the law should on this ground grant relief to A,<sup>5</sup> i.e. allow him to pursue the claim which he had unwittingly abandoned.

(2) Invalid and doubtful claims

(a) CLAIMS KNOWN TO BE INVALID. It used to be thought that a promise by A not to enforce a claim which was invalid was no consideration for a promise given by B in return, since B, if he was not liable, did not benefit from A’s promise not to sue him, while A lost nothing by giving up a worthless right.<sup>6</sup> This reasoning still applies where the sole<sup>7</sup> consideration provided by A is his forbearance to enforce a claim which is clearly invalid and which he either knows to be invalid or does not believe to be valid. Thus a promise by a bookmaker not to sue his client for the amount of lost bets<sup>8</sup> is no consideration for a promise made in return by the client.<sup>9</sup>

<sup>98</sup> [2001] UKHL 8; [2001] I.C.R. 337.

<sup>99</sup> Malik v Bank of Credit and Commerce International [1998] A.C. 20, below, p.991.

<sup>1</sup> [2001] I.C.R. 337 at [19]. This reasoning does not apply to an arbitration clause in a contract since the very purpose of such a clause is “to provide machinery for the resolution of disputes which may arise in the future”: Capital Trust Investment Ltd v Radio Design T&AB [2002] EWCA Civ 135; [2002] 2 All E.R. 159 at [50]. Contrast also, on the issue of construction, Mostcash plc v Fluor Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 975, [2002] B.I.R. 411.

<sup>2</sup> [2001] I.C.R. 377 at [10]. Lord Hoffmann dissented.

<sup>3</sup> ibid. at [32], italics supplied.

<sup>4</sup> ibid. at [32]. in Ali’s case there was no such knowledge on B’s part.

<sup>5</sup> ibid. per Lord Nicholls. Lord Bingham left the point open: ibid. at [20].

<sup>6</sup> Jones v Ashburnham (1804) 4 East 455.

<sup>7</sup> The position is different where there is also other consideration: The Siboen and the Sibotre [1976] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 293 at 334.

<sup>8</sup> For the invalidity of the bookmaker’s claim, see below, p.520.

<sup>9</sup> Hyams v Coombes (1912) 28 T.L.R. 413; Burrell & Sons v Leven (1926) 42 T.L.R. 407; Poteliakhoff v Teakle [1938] 2 K.B. 816; cf. Edwards v Baugh (1843) 11 M. & W. 641; Goodson v Baker (1908) 98 L.T. 415, contra, seems wrong.

(b) DOUBTFUL CLAIMS. Where the claim is doubtful in law, a promise to abandon it involves the possibility of detriment to the potential claimant and of benefit to the other party. Such a promise is therefore good consideration for a counter-promise given by the latter party: e.g. for one to pay a sum of money to the party promising to abandon the claim.<sup>10</sup>

(c) CLAIMS WRONGLY BELIEVED TO BE VALID. A promise by A to abandon a claim is also good consideration for a counter-promise made by B, even though A's claim is clearly bad in law, if it is believed by A to be a valid one.<sup>11</sup> One reason which has been given for this rule is that otherwise "in no case of a doubtful claim could a compromise be enforced"<sup>12</sup>; but this does not explain why the rule applies where A's claim is not merely "doubtful" but clearly bad. Another suggested reason for the rule is that A suffers detriment because "he gives up what he believes to be a right of action"<sup>13</sup>; but, in general, consideration must be something of value, not something believed to be of value. In fact A would be worse off, if he did not forbear, for he would lose his action and the costs. A further suggestion is that A suffers detriment in that it becomes more difficult to get up his case, the longer he waits<sup>14</sup>; this is a possible detriment (even though his action is bound to fail) as the failure may be more expensive than it would have been, had he sued promptly. A may also suffer detriment if as a result of the agreement he loses the right to sue a third party who is liable on the original cause of action.<sup>15</sup> A's forbearance can also be said to confer a benefit on B since "instead of being annoyed with an action, he [B] escapes from the vexations incident to it".<sup>16</sup> There is some difficulty in relying on this benefit as the consideration for B's counter-promise, since it may also exist where A's claim is known to be bad, in which case the compromise is not binding.<sup>17</sup> Perhaps this last rule is based on public policy rather than on want of consideration. As Tindal C.J. said in Wade v Simeon<sup>18</sup>: "It is almost contra bonos mores and certainly contrary to the principles of natural justice that a man should institute proceedings against another when he is conscious that he has no good cause of action". If compromises of such claims were upheld, improper pressure might be brought to bear on persons who "owed" void debts.

The rule that a promise by A to abandon a claim which is clearly bad, but believed to be valid, is good consideration for a counter-promise from B is subject to a number of safeguards. There must be a "reasonable claim",<sup>19</sup> (i.e. one made on reasonable grounds) and A must honestly believe that his claim had at any rate a fair chance of success.<sup>20</sup> He must not conceal from B any facts which, if known to the latter, would

<sup>10</sup> Haigh v Brooks (1839) 10 A. & E. 309; cf. Colchester BC v Smith [1992] Ch. 421; Colonia Versicherung AG v Amoco Oil Co [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 570 at 577 (affirmed without reference to this point [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 261).

<sup>11</sup> Cook v Wright (1861) 1 B. & S. 559; Callisher v Bischoffsheim (1870) L.R. 5 Q.B. 449; Holworthy Urban DC v Holworthy Rural DC [1907] 2 Ch. 62; cf. Horton v Horton [1961] 1 Q.B. 215; Freedman v Union Group plc [1997] E.G.C.S. 28.

<sup>12</sup> Callisher v Bischoffsheim, above, at 451.

<sup>13</sup> ibid. at 452.

<sup>14</sup> Cook v Wright, above, at 569.

<sup>15</sup> ibid. at 569–570.

<sup>16</sup> Callisher v Bischoffsheim, above, at 452; cf. Pitt v P.H.H. Asset Management Ltd [1994] 1 W.L.R. 327 at 332, but in this case it is not clear that the party forbearing in fact believed in the validity of his claim. See also Mousaka Inc v Goldon Seagull Maritime Inc [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 797 at [14] ("commercial benefit").

<sup>17</sup> See above, n.9.

<sup>18</sup> (1846) 2 C.B. 548, 564; cf. Edwards v Baugh (1843) 11 M. & W. 641, 646.

<sup>19</sup> Cook v Wright, above, at 569.

<sup>20</sup> Callisher v Bischoffsheim, above, at 452.

enable him to resist the claim.<sup>21</sup> And he must show that he seriously intended to enforce the claim.<sup>22</sup>

The cases in the present group all concern claims the validity of which was doubtful in law. It seems that the same rules apply where the claim was doubtful because of a dispute about the facts. A settlement based on a simple mistake of fact made by both parties might be void for mistake.<sup>23</sup> But it will not be void on this ground where both parties knowingly take the risk that the actual facts may turn out to be different from the facts as they were supposed to be. This element of risk is always present when parties negotiate a settlement on disputed facts.

(d) EXECUTED COMPROMISES. The preceding discussion is concerned with the enforceability of an agreement to compromise a claim. Different problems can arise after such an agreement has been performed, generally by payment of the amount which one party has agreed to pay under the compromise. Even if there was, under the rules discussed above, no consideration for that party's promise, he will not be entitled to the return of the payment if it was made "to close the transaction"<sup>24</sup>: in such a case the payment is treated as if it were an executed gift.<sup>25</sup> To give rise to a claim for repayment, it will be necessary to establish other circumstances than lack of consideration: e.g. that the payment was made under duress.<sup>26</sup>

(3) Actual forbearance

A person may forbear from enforcing a claim without expressly promising to do so. The question then arises whether this actual forbearance is consideration for some promise or act of the other party, for example for a promise by him to give security, or for giving the security. Sometimes actual forbearance may be evidence of an implied promise to forbear.<sup>26a</sup> Thus the acceptance of a cheque in payment of a debt may be evidence of a promise not to sue the debtor so long as the cheque is not dishonoured, or at least for a reasonable time.<sup>27</sup>

But even where no promise to forbear (express or implied) has been made, an actual forbearance may constitute consideration. In Alliance Bank v Broom<sup>28</sup> the defendant owed £22,000 to his bank, which pressed him to give some security. He promised to do so, but the bank made no counter-promise not to sue him. It was held that there was consideration for the defendant's promise as the bank had given, and the defendant received, "some degree of forbearance".<sup>29</sup> On the other hand, in Miles v New Zealand

<sup>21</sup> Miles v New Zealand Alford Estate Co (1886) 32 Ch.D. 267 at 284; Colchester BC v Smith [1992] Ch. 421 at 435. The discussion at nn.3 to 5, above is concerned with the different problem of non-disclosure by B of the existence of a valid claim against himself.

<sup>22</sup> Cook v Wright, above, at 569; The Proodos C [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 390 at 392.

<sup>23</sup> e.g. Gloyne v Richardson [2001] EWCA Civ 716; [2001] 2 B.C.L.C. 669 at [39]; below, Chap.8; Andrews [1989] L.M.C.L.Q. 431; Grains & Fournages S.A v Huyton [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 628, where there was no compromise since both parties wished from the start to achieve the same result but were mistaken only as to the effect of the steps they had taken to achieve it.

<sup>24</sup> Woolwich Equitable BS v IRC (No.2) [1993] A.C. 70 at 165.

<sup>25</sup> ibid., citing Maskell v Horner [1915] 3 K.B. 106 at 120.

<sup>26</sup> See below, p.405.

<sup>26a</sup> Re Wyvern Developments Ltd [1974] 1 W.L.R. 1097; Thornton Springer v NEM Insurance Co Ltd [2000] 2 All E.R. 489 at 516.

<sup>27</sup> Baker v Walker (1845) 14 M. & W. 465; Elkington v Cooke-Hill (1914) 30 T.L.R. 670.

<sup>28</sup> (1864) 2 Dr. & Sm. 289; cf. also Brikom Investments Ltd v Carr [1979] Q.B. 467 at 490.

<sup>29</sup> At 292.

Alford Estate Co<sup>30</sup> a company had bought land and then became dissatisfied with the purchase. The vendor later promised to make certain payments to the company, and it was alleged that the consideration for this promise was the company's forbearance to take proceedings to rescind the contract. A majority of the Court of Appeal held that there was no consideration for the vendor's promise as no proceedings to rescind were ever intended; and Cotton L.J. added that "it must be shown that there was something which would bind the company not to institute proceedings".<sup>31</sup> Bowen L.J. dissented from this proposition,<sup>32</sup> relying on Alliance Bank v Broom; but it may be possible to reconcile the cases by reference to the types of claim forborne. A bank to which £22,000 is owed is virtually certain to take steps to enforce its claim, but a dissatisfied purchaser of land is much less certain to take proceedings for rescission. It may, therefore, be reasonable to say that an actual forbearance can amount to consideration in relation to the former type of claim, but that a promise to forbear is necessary where it is problematical whether the claim will ever be enforced at all. A promise to forbear is also, of course, necessary where that is what the debtor bargains for.

Where the consideration consists of a promise to forbear which specifies no time the creditor must forbear for a reasonable time.<sup>33</sup> There is no such requirement where the consideration consists of actual forbearance: here it is enough that the debtor had "a certain amount of forbearance".<sup>34</sup>

A forbearance amounts to consideration only for a promise or performance that is induced by it. In Wigan v English & Scottish Life Assurance Society<sup>35</sup> a debtor executed a mortgage of an insurance policy in favour of his creditor. It was held that the creditor, who knew nothing of the mortgage, had not provided consideration for it merely by having forborne to sue for his antecedent debt. But Parker J. added<sup>36</sup> that the creditor would have provided consideration if he had been told of the mortgage and if, "on the strength of" it, he had actually forborne to sue for the debt. The crucial question, therefore, is whether the creditor has forborne "on the strength of" the debtor's act or promise. He will clearly have done so where the debtor has expressly requested the forbearance<sup>37</sup> but in Alliance Bank v Broom<sup>38</sup> the bank's forbearance was held to constitute consideration even though the defendant had not expressly requested it. The case has been explained on the ground that the debtor had impliedly requested forbearance.<sup>39</sup> But where the forbearance is not requested either expressly or by implication, it is no consideration. In Combe v Combe<sup>40</sup> a husband during divorce proceedings promised to pay his wife an annual allowance. In an action to enforce this promise, the wife argued, inter alia, that she had given consideration for it by forbearing to apply to the court for a maintenance order. But her argument was rejected as she had not forborne at the husband's request.<sup>41</sup>

<sup>30</sup> (1886) 32 Ch.D. 267; cf. Hunter v Bradford Property Trust Ltd, 1970 S.L.T. 173.

<sup>31</sup> (1886) 32 Ch.D. 267 at 285.

<sup>32</sup> ibid. at 291; his view was approved by Lord Macnaghten in Fullerton v Provincial Bank of Ireland [1903] A.C. 309 at 314.

<sup>33</sup> See above, p.87.

<sup>34</sup> Alliance Bank v Broom (1864) 2 Dr. & Sm. 289 at 292.

<sup>35</sup> [1909] 1 Ch. 291; cf. above, p.78.

<sup>36</sup> At 298.

<sup>37</sup> Crears v Hunter (1887) 19 Q.B.D. 341 at 344.

<sup>38</sup> (1864) 2 Dr. & Sm. 289.

<sup>39</sup> Fullerton v Provincial Bank of Ireland [1903] A.C. 309 at 313.

<sup>40</sup> [1951] 2 K.B. 215.

<sup>41</sup> Quaere whether such a request should not have been implied.

6. Performance of Existing Duty<sup>42</sup>

Much difficulty arises in determining whether a person who does, or promises to do, what he was already under a legal duty to do thereby provides consideration for a promise made to him. As he was already legally bound to do the act, he suffers no legal detriment.<sup>43</sup> But he may suffer a factual detriment if he actually does the act: this may be more troublesome to him than to pay damages. The promisor may also get a factual benefit, as damages might not fully compensate him for the loss which he would suffer if the duty were broken. Denning L.J. has therefore said that the performance of an existing duty, or the promise to perform it, was of itself good consideration.<sup>44</sup> This radical view has not been accepted; but the requirement of consideration in this group of cases has been mitigated by recognising that it can be satisfied where the promisee has conferred a factual (as opposed to a legal) benefit on the promisor.<sup>45</sup>

(1) Duty imposed by law

The question whether a person can enforce a promise made to him in return for performing, or promising to perform, a duty imposed by law (as opposed to one imposed by contract) has received a variety of answers.

(a) PUBLIC POLICY. One group of cases denies the enforceability of such promises. Thus a public officer cannot enforce a promise to pay him money for doing his duty as such,<sup>46</sup> and generally a person does not provide consideration by forbearing to engage in a course of conduct that is criminal.<sup>47</sup> Enforcement of such promises would tend to encourage an undesirable form of extortion; and it is this ground of public policy, rather than want of consideration, that accounts for most of the authorities in this group.

(b) PERFORMANCE OF THE DUTY AS CONSIDERATION. Promises to pay rewards for information that might lead to the arrest of a felon were often enforced<sup>48</sup> though, till 1968, a person who had such information was bound to communicate it to the police, and indeed committed an offence<sup>49</sup> if he failed to do so. Public policy was not offended by the enforcement of such promises, as they might induce people to look for the information and so promote the interests of justice. These cases show that an act may constitute consideration even though there is a public duty to do it. The contrary view

<sup>42</sup> Davis, 6 C.L.J. 202; Reynolds and Treitel, 7 Malaya Law Rev. 1; Aivazian, Trebilcock & Penny, 22 Osgoode Hall L.J. 173; Hooley, [1991] J.B.L. 195; Halston, 107 L.Q.R. 649.

<sup>43</sup> See above, p.69.

<sup>44</sup> Ward v Byham [1956] 1 W.L.R. 496 at 498; Williams v Williams [1957] 1 W.L.R. 148 at 151.

<sup>45</sup> See below, pp.95, 98.

<sup>46</sup> Withen v Sandys (1811) 2 Camp. 640; Morris v Burdett (1808) 1 Camp. 218; Bilke v Havelock (1813) 3 Camp. 374; Morgan v Palmer (1825) 2 B. & C. 729 at 736 (where the actual decision was that money paid to the official was recoverable by the payee as having been extorted from him colore officii: see Woolwich Equitable BS v IRC (No.2) [1993] A.C. 70 at 155 at 165, 181, 198).

<sup>47</sup> Brown v Brine (1875) L.R. 1 Ex.D. 5 (forbearance to commit criminal libel).

<sup>48</sup> England v Davidson (1840) 11 A. & E. 856; Neville v Kelly (1862) 12 C.B.(N.S) 740; Bent v Wakefield and Barnsley Union Bank (1878) 4 C.P.D. 1. Contrast Maryland Casualty Co v Matthews, 209 F.Supp. 822 (1962) where a similar claim by a detective failed on grounds of public policy.

<sup>49</sup> i.e. misprision of felony: Sykes v DPP [1962] A.C. 528. This offence was abolished by Criminal Law Act 1967, s.1. The offence of concealing an arrestable offence created by s.5(1) of that Act is narrower in scope than the former offence of misprision of felony; it is committed only if the person withholding the information accepts or agrees to accept some consideration (other than making good the loss) for not disclosing it. cf. below, p.445. For the definition of "arrestable offence," see now Police & Criminal Evidence Act 1984, s.24, as amended by Police Act 2002, s.48.

is, indeed, supported by Collins v Godefroy<sup>50</sup> where an attorney who had been subpoenaed to give evidence was promised a guinea a day for attendance. This was held to be "a promise without consideration" as he was already bound to attend. But the reasoning is hard to reconcile with the reward cases just mentioned; and the actual decision has long ceased to represent the practice in such cases.<sup>51</sup> A subpoena must be accompanied by a tender of "conduct money"<sup>52</sup>; this includes the reasonable expenses of attending the trial, and, in certain cases, compensation for loss of time. Expert witnesses can validly contract for payment<sup>53</sup>; and it seems that all witnesses who attend in a professional capacity, whether they are strictly expert witnesses or not, are entitled to compensation for loss of time.

(c) OTHER CONSIDERATION. A person can provide consideration by doing, or promising, more than he is by law obliged to do. Thus in Glasbrook Bros Ltd v Glamorgan CC<sup>54</sup> mine-owners who feared violence from strikers asked, and promised to pay, for a greater degree of police protection than the police reasonably thought necessary. It was held that the police authority had provided consideration for this promise by giving the extra protection, and that accordingly the promise was enforceable. The position in cases of this kind is now regulated by statute. S.25(1) of the Police Act 1996 provides that payment can be claimed for "special police services" rendered at the "request" of the person requiring them. Such a request can be implied from conduct, e.g. where a person organises an event which cannot safely take place without such special services. On this reasoning, a football club has been held liable to a police authority for the cost of policing matches played on its ground.<sup>55</sup> Such liability arises irrespective of contract.

In Ward v Byham<sup>56</sup> the father of an illegitimate child promised to pay its mother £1 per week "providing you can prove that [the child] is well looked after and happy, and also that she is allowed to decide for herself whether or not she wishes to come and live with you". The mother began to look after the child, and it was held that she could enforce the father's promise although she was under a statutory duty to maintain the child. One basis of the decision is that the mother had provided consideration by showing that she had made the child happy, etc.: in this way she can be said to have done more than she was required by law to do, and to have conferred a factual benefit on the father or on the child,<sup>57</sup> even though she may not have suffered any detriment.<sup>58</sup> But if a son's promise not to bore his father is not good consideration,<sup>59</sup> it is hard to see why a mother's promise to make her child happy should stand on a different footing. There is, with respect, force in Denning L.J.'s view, that the mother provided consideration by merely performing her legal duty to support the child. There was certainly no ground of public policy for refusing to enforce the promise.

<sup>50</sup> (1831) 1 B. & Ad. 950; cf. Willis v Peckham (1820) 1 Br. & B. 515; Thoresen Car Ferries Ltd v Weymouth Portland BC [1977] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 614 at 619.

<sup>51</sup> Re Working Men's Mutual Society (1882) 21 Ch.D. 831; Chamberlain v Stoneham (1889) 24 Q.B.D. 113.

<sup>52</sup> Supreme Court Act 1981, s.36(4). A subpoenaed witness (other than an expert witness) is not entitled to more than this and if he threatens to withhold or alter his evidence unless he is paid more he may be guilty of blackmail: R. v Clear [1968] 1 Q.B. 670; semble the same result could be reached under Theft Act 1968, s.21.

<sup>53</sup> Goulden v White Barca [2000] 1 W.L.R. 167.

<sup>54</sup> [1925] A.C. 270; cf. Thoresen Car Ferries v Weymouth Portland BC [1977] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 614 at 619 (A's promise to make use of B's services for which he was under a legal duty to pay held to constitute consideration for B's counter-promise).

<sup>55</sup> Harris v Sheffield United FC Ltd [1988] Q.B. 77.

<sup>56</sup> [1956] 1 W.L.R. 496.

<sup>57</sup> Consideration need not move to the promisor (the father); above, p.81.

<sup>58</sup> Williams v Roffey Bros & Nicholls (Contractors) Ltd [1991] 1 Q.B. 1 at 13.

<sup>59</sup> White v Bluett (1853) 23 L.J. Ex. 36; above, p.83.

(2) Duty imposed by contract with promisor

When A was bound by contract with B to do, or to forbear from doing, something, the law at one time took the view that A's performance of that duty (or his promise to perform it) was no consideration for a new promise by B. Later authority has qualified that view but the extent of the qualification is uncertain. The cases fall into three groups.

(a) CASES IN WHICH THERE WAS NO CONSIDERATION. The view that there was no consideration for B's new promise was first established in cases in which seamen who had bound themselves to serve for a voyage were promised higher wages by the masters of their ships if they performed their duty by working the ships home. It was held that these promises were not binding. Originally this conclusion was based on the ground of public policy that the enforcement of such promises might lead the men to refuse to perform their original contracts unless they were promised extra pay.<sup>60</sup> But according to one of the reports of Stilk v Myrick<sup>61</sup> such reasoning was doubted in that case, where the claim for extra pay was instead rejected on the ground that the men had provided no consideration by doing only what they were already bound to do; and this is the explanation of such cases which is now commonly accepted.<sup>62</sup> On the same principle, a promise to pay an extra charge for the carriage of goods to the agreed destination cannot be enforced by the carrier<sup>63</sup>; and a debtor's promise to pay in stated instalments a debt that is already due is no consideration for the creditor's promise not to take bankruptcy proceedings in respect of the debt.<sup>64</sup>

The public policy explanation of the rule, stated above,<sup>65</sup> was always open to the objection that it was based on a danger that was not more than hypothetical: in the cases on seamen's wages,<sup>66</sup> for example, there was no evidence of any refusal on the men's part to perform their original contracts. Even where there is such evidence, the argument is much reduced in importance now that the law has come to recognise that such a refusal may amount to economic duress.<sup>67</sup> Where the refusal does amount to duress, a promise induced by it can be avoided (and money paid in pursuance of it be recovered back) on that ground.<sup>68</sup> This is true even where the promise is supported by consideration: for example, because the promisee has undertaken, not merely to perform his duties under the original contract, but also to render some additional performance.<sup>69</sup> If, on the other hand, the promisee's refusal to perform the original contract does not amount to duress, it has been held that the promise cannot be impugned merely on the ground that the

<sup>60</sup> Harris v Watson (1791) Peake 102; cf. Scotson v Pegg (1861) 6 H. & N. 295 at 299.

<sup>61</sup> That in (1809) 2 Camp. 317; the other report, in 6 Esp. 129, does not mention consideration and makes the decision turn on public policy. Both grounds are stated in Harris v Carter (1854) 3 E. & B. 559.

<sup>62</sup> Harrison v Dodd (1914) 111 L.T. 47; Swain v West (Butchers) Ltd [1936] 3 All E.R. 261; The Atlantic Baron [1979] Q.B. 705 at 712; Pau On v Lau Yiu Long [1980] A.C. 614 at 633; Sybron Corp v Rochem Ltd [1984] Ch. 112 at 129; The Alev [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 138 at 147; Hadley v Kemp [1999] E.M.L.R. 586 at 626.

<sup>63</sup> The Proodos C [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 390; cf. Atlas Express Ltd v Kafco (Importers and Distributors) Ltd [1989] Q.B. 833.

<sup>64</sup> Vanbergen v St. Edmund's Properties Ltd [1933] 2 K.B. 223.

<sup>65</sup> See above, at n.60.

<sup>66</sup> See above, at nn.60 and 61.

<sup>67</sup> See below, pp.405–407.

<sup>68</sup> As in The Universe Sentinel [1983] 1 A.C. 366; B & S Contracts & Designs v Victor Green Publications [1984] I.C.R. 419, below, p.405; Atlas Express Ltd v Kafco (Importers and Distributors) Ltd [1989] Q.B. 833; and in T A Sundell & Sons Pty Ltd v Emm Yannoulatos (Overseas) Pty Ltd [1956] 56 S.R. (N.S.W.) 323. The position would have been the same in The Atlantic Baron [1975] Q.B. 705 if the victim of the duress had not affirmed the contract.

<sup>69</sup> e.g. The Atlantic Baron [1979] Q.B. 705; below, p.96 at n.85; The Alev [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 138.

refusal amounted to an abuse by the promisee of a dominant bargaining position.<sup>70</sup> To allow a promise to be invalidated on this ground alone would introduce an intermediate category of promises unfairly obtained; and this would (in the words of Lord Scarman) “be unhelpful because it would render the law uncertain”.<sup>71</sup>

The now more generally held view is that the new promises in the present group of cases are unenforceable for want of consideration; and the reason for this view seems to have been that the promisee suffered no legal detriment<sup>72</sup> in performing what was already due from him, nor did the promisor receive any legal benefit in receiving what was already due to him. But this reasoning takes no account of the fact that the promisee may in fact suffer a detriment: for example, the wages that a seaman could earn elsewhere may exceed those that he would earn under the original contract together with the damages that he would have to pay for breaking it. Conversely, the promisor may in fact benefit from the actual performance of what was legally due to him: in Stilk v Myrick the master got his ship home and this may well have been worth more to him than any damages that he could have recovered from the crew.

(b) FACTUAL BENEFIT TO PROMISOR. The foregoing discussion shows that a new promise by B in consideration of A's performing his duty to B under an earlier contract between them is not necessarily obtained by duress; and that A's performance of the duty may in fact benefit B. Where both these conditions are satisfied, it has been held that A can enforce B's new promise.

In Williams v Roffey Bros & Nicholls (Contractors) Ltd<sup>73</sup> B had engaged A as carpentry sub-contractor, for the purpose of performing a contract between B and X to refurbish a number of flats. The amount payable by B to A under the subcontract was £20,000 but B later promised to make extra payments to A, who undertook no additional obligation in return.<sup>74</sup> B made this new promise because B's own surveyor recognised that the originally agreed sum of £20,000 was too low, and because B feared that A (who was in financial difficulties) would not be able to complete his work on time, and so expose B to penalties for delay under his contract with X. It was held that B's promise to make the extra payments to A was supported by consideration in the shape of the “practical benefits”<sup>75</sup> obtained by B from A's performance of his duties under the original contract between them.<sup>76</sup> Since no allegation of duress on A's part had been made by B, the new promise by B to pay extra could not be avoided on this ground. There had been no threat by A to break his original contract; indeed, the initiative for the agreement containing the promise of extra pay seems to have come from B.

<sup>70</sup> Pan On v Lau Yiu Long [1980] A.C. 614 at 632.

<sup>71</sup> ibid. at 634. This statement was made in a case involving three parties, but it is of general application: Williams v Roffey Bros & Nicholls (Contractors) Ltd [1991] 1 Q.B. 1 at 15.

<sup>72</sup> See above, p.69.

<sup>73</sup> [1991] 1 Q.B. 1; Adams and Brownword, 53 M.I.L.R. 536; Chen-Wishart, 14 N.Z.U.L.R. 270; Hird and Blair [1996] J.B.L. 254.

<sup>74</sup> The payments under the original contract were found to be due in unspecified instalments while those under the new promise were due as each flat was completed, but no attempt was made to argue that this change in the times when payment was due might have been to A's disadvantage and therefore provided consideration. There is perhaps a hint to this effect in Russell L.J.'s judgment at 19. Similar reasoning is one basis of Anangel Atlas Compania Naviera S.A v Ishikawajima-Harima Heavy Industries Co Ltd (No.2) [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 526, where “promisor” and “promisee” appear to have been transposed in a passage at p.588.

<sup>75</sup> [1991] 1 Q.B. 1 at 11; cf. ibid. at 19, 23. See also Simon Container Machinery Ltd v Emba Machinery A.B. [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 428 at 435.

<sup>76</sup> In fact, B did not secure the whole of this benefit, but this was because B's wrongful failure to make the extra payments justified A's refusal to continue with the work: see below, p.787.

The element of factual benefit which was stressed in the Williams case has also been regarded as consideration where a person performs (or promises to perform) a contractual duty owed to a third party<sup>77</sup>; and the Williams case is to be welcomed in bringing the two-party cases in line with those involving three parties.<sup>78</sup> But it is by no means clear how the case is, from this point of view, to be reconciled with Stilk v Myrick and with the line of more recent decisions which have followed that case.<sup>79</sup> As has been suggested above, the master in Stilk v Myrick also obtained a factual benefit (in getting his ship home); and such a factual benefit will very often be obtained by B where he secures actual performance from A (as opposed to having to sue him for non-performance of the original contract).

In the Williams case, Stilk v Myrick was not overruled; indeed Purchas L.J. described it as a "pillar stone of the law of contract".<sup>80</sup> But he added that the case might be differently decided today<sup>81</sup>; while Glidewell L.J. said that the present decision did not "contravene" but did "refine and limit"<sup>82</sup> the principle of the earlier case; and Russell L.J. said that the "rigid approach" to consideration in Stilk v Myrick was "no longer necessary or desirable."<sup>83</sup> The conclusion which may tentatively be drawn from these statements is that the factual benefit to B in securing A's performance of the earlier contract will normally suffice to constitute consideration. The insistence in the earlier cases on the stricter requirement of legal benefit or detriment is no longer justified (if it ever was) by the need to protect B from the undue pressure that A might exert by refusing to perform his original contract; for this need can now be met by the expanding concept of duress. This provides a more satisfactory solution of the present problem since it invalidates promises only where actual duress is established. Where this is not the case, and the promisee has in fact conferred a benefit on the promisor by performing the original contract, then the requirement of consideration is satisfied and there seems to be no good reason for refusing to enforce the new promise.

(c) OTHER CONSIDERATION. The promisee may provide other consideration for the new promise by doing, or promising to do, more than he was bound by the original contract to do. Thus a seaman is entitled to extra wages if, during the voyage, he is promoted and so undertakes additional duties.<sup>84</sup> The same principle was applied where shipbuilders claimed an increase in the agreed price for a supertanker on the ground that the currency in which that price was to be paid had been devalued. The contract required the builders to give a performance guarantee, and it was held that they had provided consideration for the prospective owners' promise to pay the price increase by making a corresponding increase in their performance guarantee.<sup>85</sup>

<sup>77</sup> See below, p.98.

<sup>78</sup> In Stilk v Myrick above, p.94 the distinction was ignored: no one even asked whether the original contract was with the promisor (the master) or with a third party (the shipowner). It is clear from the report in Espinasse that the action was brought against the master. cf. also Turner v Owen (1862) 3 F. & F. 176; B & S Contracts & Designs v Victor Green Publications Ltd [1984] I.C.R. 419.

<sup>79</sup> See above, p.94.

<sup>80</sup> [1991] 1 Q.B. 1 at 20.

<sup>81</sup> ibid. at 21. But he was not prepared to accept Watkins v Carrig 21 A 2d. 591 (1941), where a contractor who had agreed to do excavating work unexpectedly struck hard rock and was held entitled to enforce a promise to pay nine times the originally agreed sum. That case was said not to represent English law in The Atlantic Baron [1979] Q.B. 705 at 714, cf. also Finland SS Co Ltd v Felixstowe Dock Ry Co [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 390.

<sup>82</sup> [1991] 1 Q.B. 1 at 16.

<sup>83</sup> ibid. at 18.

<sup>84</sup> Hanson v Royden (1867) L.R. 3 C.P. 47; semble, such extra pay is recoverable notwithstanding failure to comply with the formal requirements now contained in Merchant Shipping Act 1995, s.25; cf. below, p.176, n.5.

<sup>85</sup> The Atlantic Baron [1979] Q.B. 705; Coote [1980] C.L.J. 40; Adams, 42 M.L.R. 557.

The promisee similarly provides other consideration where, before the new promise is made, circumstances arise which justify his refusal to perform the original contract. Thus the crew of a ship may be justified in refusing to complete a voyage because so many of their fellows have deserted that completion will involve hazards of a kind not originally contemplated. If they are induced to go on by a promise of extra pay, they do something which they were not bound to do, and can recover the extra pay.<sup>86</sup> The same principle applies where the contract is determined by notice or by mutual consent. Thus a promise to pay an employee higher wages after he has lawfully determined his contract by notice is binding. Or the parties might agree to rescind the contract and substitute a new one, at a higher rate of pay<sup>87</sup>; though such a transaction might be hard to distinguish from a simple promise to pay higher wages for continuing to work under the original contract.<sup>88</sup> If the original contract is void, voidable or unenforceable, performance of the work specified would, it seems, be consideration for a promise of extra pay; and if the original contract was in fact good but was believed to be defective, then the new promise might be binding on the analogy of the rule that forbearance to litigate an invalid claim may amount to consideration.<sup>89</sup> A final possibility is that the contract may provide, expressly or by implication, for revision of pay scales from time to time; and in such a case an agreement to pay higher (or to accept lower) wages would clearly be binding.<sup>90</sup>

(3) Duty imposed by contract with a third party

Two problems arise under this heading. The first is whether, if A is under a contractual duty to B, the performance of this duty can constitute consideration for a promise made to A by C. The second is whether A's promise to perform his contractual duty to B can constitute consideration for a counter-promise made to A by C.

(a) PERFORMANCE OF THE DUTY. Three mid-nineteenth century cases give some support to the view that A's actual performance of a contractual duty owed by him to B can constitute consideration for a promise later made by C to A.<sup>91</sup> These cases are, however, less than wholly conclusive, since in two of them<sup>92</sup> A did or may have done more than he was bound by the original contract with B to do (and so have provided additional consideration for C's promise); while in the third<sup>93</sup> the decision was reached only by a majority who make no reference to the fact that A was already under a contractual duty

<sup>86</sup> Hartley v Ponsonby (1857) 7 E. & B. 872; O'Neil v Armstrong, Mitchell & Co [1895] 2 Q.B. 418; Palace Shipping Co v Caine [1907] A.C. 386; Liston v SS Carpathian (Owners) [1915] 2 K.B. 42.

<sup>87</sup> See Schwartzreich v Bauman-Busch Inc 131 N.E. 887 (1921); Dekoven, 35 U. of Chi.L. Rev. 173.

<sup>88</sup> cf. below, pp.101, 189.

<sup>89</sup> See above, pp.88–89; E. Hulton & Co v Chadwick Taylor Ltd (1918) 34 T.L.R. 230 at 231.

<sup>90</sup> e.g. Pepper & Hope v Daish [1980] I.R.L.R. 13; cf. Lombard Tricity Finance Ltd v Paton [1989] 1 All E.R. 98 (credit agreement providing for increases in interest rates to be made by lender).

<sup>91</sup> For the contrary view, see McDevitt v Stokes 192 S.W. (1917). In Pfizer Corp v Ministry of Health [1965] A.C. 512, Lord Reid said that there was no contract where a chemist supplied drugs to a patient under the National Health Service in return for a prescription charge, because the chemist is "bound by his contract with the appropriate authority to supply the drug . . ." (at 536). But it seems from the context that Lord Reid was considering whether the relationship was consensual (above, p.5) and was not thinking of the problem of consideration.

<sup>92</sup> Scotson v Pegg (1861) 6 H. & N. 295; Chichester v Cobb (1866) 14 L.T. 433. The question in these cases was whether A provided consideration for C's promise by performing a contractual duty owed by A to B. There is no doubt that C's promise to perform a duty owed by B to A (or the performance of such a promise) can constitute consideration for a promise (express or implied) by A to C: see, e.g. Brandt v Liverpool, etc. SN Co [1924] 1 K.B. 575; The Aramis [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 213 at 225 (where C's claim failed for want of contractual intention: below, p.169).

<sup>93</sup> Shadwell v Shadwell (1860) 9 C.B.(N.S.) 159. cf. De Cicco v Schweitzer 117 N.E. 807 (1917).

to B to render the performance in question,<sup>94</sup> and the view of the dissentient, that C's later promise to A was not binding for want of contractual intention, has been approved in a twentieth-century case.<sup>95</sup> The view that performance of a contractual duty owed to a third party can constitute consideration for a promise is, however, supported by The Eurymedon.<sup>96</sup> A (a firm of stevedores) had unloaded goods from B's ship. Some of these belonged to C who, for present purposes,<sup>97</sup> may be taken to have promised A not to sue him for damaging the goods. It was held that A had provided consideration for this promise by unloading the goods even if he was already bound<sup>98</sup> by a contract with B to unload them.

(b) PROMISE TO PERFORM THE DUTY. It was at one time thought that a mere promise to perform a contractual duty owed to a third party could not constitute consideration. Thus in Jones v Waite<sup>99</sup> it was said that a promise by A to C that A will pay a debt owed by A to B is no consideration for a promise made by C to A. This view seems to be based on the idea that A suffers no (legal) detriment by promising to pay a debt that he was already bound to pay; nor did it appear that C gained any benefit as a result of the promise. It is, however, possible for C to gain such a benefit: for example, where C promises A some benefit in return for A's promise not to carry out his intention of breaking a contract with B, a company in which C has an interest. This was the position in Pao On v Lau Yiu Long<sup>1</sup> where A, having entered into a contract with a company (B), refused to perform it unless C, who were shareholders in the company, guaranteed A against loss which might be incurred as a result of the performance of one of the terms of that contract. The guarantee was given in consideration of A's promise to perform their contractual obligations to the company; and was held binding<sup>2</sup> on the ground that "A promise to perform, or the performance of, a pre-existing contractual obligation to a third party can be valid consideration".<sup>3</sup> This view seems, with respect, to be preferable to that expressed in Jones v Waite; for the guarantee was certainly not gratuitous in a commercial sense.

It will, of course, be open to the promisor to avoid liability if he can show that the promisee's refusal to perform the contract with the third party amounted to duress<sup>4</sup> not merely with regard to the third party, but also with regard to the promisor himself.

<sup>94</sup> i.e. to marry B. Such a promise would no longer have contractual force: see Law Reform (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1970, s.1.

<sup>95</sup> Jones v Padavatton [1969] 1 W.L.R. 328 at 333.

<sup>96</sup> [1975] A.C. 154; followed in The New York Star [1981] 1 W.L.R. 138 and The Antmerpen [1994] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 213; cf. The Mahkutai [1996] A.C. 650 at 664.

<sup>97</sup> For a discussion of this point, see below, pp.631–634.

<sup>98</sup> A question may arise as to whether A has indeed performed or begun to perform his contract with B: The Rigoletto [2000] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 532 at 542–545.

<sup>99</sup> (1839) 5 Bing. N.C. 341, 351, affirmed on another ground (1842) 9 Cl. & F. 107; contrast Morton v Burn (1837) 7 A. & F. 19 (promise to pay assignee).

<sup>1</sup> [1980] A.C. 614.

<sup>2</sup> For rejection of the argument that the consideration was past, see above, p.78.

<sup>3</sup> [1980] A.C. 614 at 632. cf. Scotson v Pegg (1861) 6 H. & N. 295 at 301. In The Eurymedon, above, at 183, a promise to perform a contractual duty owed to a third party is said to be consideration because it is a benefit to the promisee. This is puzzling at first sight, since consideration must be a detriment to the promisee or a benefit to the promisor. The reference, however, is to a case in which A's promise to C is said to be the consideration for C's counter-promise to A, and it is the consideration for C's counter-promise which is in issue. In relation to the counter-promise, C is the promisor, and the benefit that he gets from A's promise satisfies the orthodox test of consideration for C's counter-promise. cf. the words "for the benefit of the shipper" (i.e. the promisor) at p.182; and above, p.68.

<sup>4</sup> See above, pp.94–95.

SECTION 6. RESCISSION AND VARIATION

A contract may be rescinded or varied by subsequent agreement. The object of rescission is to release the parties from the contract, while that of variation is to alter some term of the contract. Such subsequent agreements give rise to problems of consideration, which will be discussed here, and to problems of form, to be discussed in Chapter 5. One aspect of the consideration problem has already been dealt with in our discussion of the question whether the performance by A of his obligations under the old contract could be consideration for a new promise from B.<sup>5</sup> Our present problem is whether there is consideration for a promise by B to accept in discharge of A's obligations some performance other than that originally undertaken by A, or to grant A a total release from the contract. Even if there is no such consideration B's subsequent promise may, nevertheless, have some limited legal effect either as a waiver or in equity.<sup>6</sup>

1. Rescission

An agreement to rescind a contract will generate its own consideration whenever each party has outstanding rights under the contract against the other. This is most obviously true where the contract is wholly executory and neither party is in breach.<sup>7</sup> Thus a contract for the sale of goods to be delivered and paid for on a future day can be rescinded by mutual consent at any time before the day fixed for performance. A contract can similarly be rescinded by agreement after both parties have broken it.<sup>8</sup> And a partly executed contract can be rescinded by agreement so long as there are outstanding obligations on both sides: thus a lease for seven years can be rescinded by mutual consent after it has run for three years. In all these cases there is consideration for the rescission in that each party promises to give up his rights against the other under the original contract. It is, of course, essential, that each party should make such a promise. If only one party does so, the other making no counter-promise, the former party's promise will be "entirely unilateral and unsupported by any consideration".<sup>9</sup>

An agreement to rescind a contract may also fail to generate its own consideration (and so lack contractual force) where only one party has outstanding rights under the contract. This will often be the position where the contract has been wholly executed by that party. Suppose that goods are sold and delivered but not paid for, and the parties then agree to "rescind" the contract. If the agreement means that the buyer is to return the goods and to be released from his liability to pay the price, there is good consideration for the promise of each party. But if it simply means that the buyer is not to pay the price, it is a gratuitous promise by the seller.<sup>10</sup> Conversely, goods may be sold, delivered and paid for, but turn out to be defective. Here an agreement to "rescind" would be a gratuitous promise if it simply released the seller from his liability under the original contract for the defects. Similarly, A may agree to sell goods to B for cash on delivery on a future day. If, when that day came, B tendered the price but A failed to deliver the

<sup>5</sup> See above, pp.94-98.

<sup>6</sup> See below, pp.102-119; 130-134.

<sup>7</sup> Foster v Damber (1851) Ex. 839 at 850; cf. The Trado [1982] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 157.

<sup>8</sup> e.g. Morris v Baron & Co [1918] A.C. 1.

<sup>9</sup> Collin v Duke of Westminster [1985] Q.B. 581 at 598.

<sup>10</sup> Commissioner of Stamp Duties v Bone [1977] A.C. 511 at 519. ("A debt can only be truly released and extinguished by agreement for valuable consideration or under seal.") This rule seems with respect, to have been overlooked in a dictum in Brikom Investments Ltd v Carr [1979] Q.B. 467 at 488 according to which "waiver" of instalments of rent could extinguish the tenant's liability to pay. The landlord's actual promise in that case was supported by consideration: above, p.90; below, p.102.

goods, A would be liable in damages; and a rescission of the contract at this stage would be gratuitous if it merely released A from that liability. This is what is meant by the statement that rescission after breach requires separate consideration.<sup>11</sup>

That statement must, however, be qualified where the contract is a continuing one, such as one to deliver goods by instalments. An agreement to “rescind” such a contract after one defective instalment had been delivered and paid for would not be a gratuitous release of the seller from his liability for the defects, for he would be giving up his rights to have future instalments accepted and paid for. It is only where the defect is of such a kind as to give the buyer the right as a matter of law to treat the contract as repudiated<sup>12</sup> that the seller may be said to give up nothing in return for the buyer’s promise not to sue for the defect. Even in such a case, however, this result would not necessarily follow; for so long as the seller in good faith believed that the contract remained binding he would provide consideration by forbearing to enforce it.<sup>13</sup>

Where the rescinding agreement does not generate its own consideration, it must be supported by separate consideration: there must, in technical language, be not only accord but also satisfaction. Thus a buyer of goods may agree to release a seller who has become liable in damages for non-delivery, if the seller will pay him £50. The agreement to release the seller is the accord; payment of the £50 is the satisfaction.<sup>14</sup> On payment of the £50, the seller is released from his liability in damages.

It was formerly said that an executory accord, i.e. one which had not yet been followed by satisfaction, had no effect: that it neither released the party in breach nor gave the other party any new right of action.<sup>15</sup> But it is settled that an executory accord can be enforced by the party to whom the satisfaction was offered,<sup>16</sup> and it may release the party by whom it was offered if that party’s promise to perform his part of the accord has, on the true construction of the accord, been accepted by the injured party in discharge of his original cause of action.<sup>17</sup> Even where the injured party has not accepted the wrongdoer’s promise in settlement of the cause of action, a question can arise as to the time at which the accord takes effect. In the absence of an express provision in it on the point, the accord releases the original cause of action at the time of the accord,<sup>18</sup> subject only to the implied condition subsequent<sup>19</sup> that it will be retrospectively avoided on the wrongdoer’s failure to perform it in accordance with its terms. On such failure, the original liability will therefore revive. The parties may, of course, also agree to make performance of the accord a condition precedent to discharge. If they do so, the party originally in breach will not be discharged by the accord so long as it remains executory; he will be discharged only on giving the agreed satisfaction.<sup>20</sup>

<sup>11</sup> Atlantic Shipping & Trading Ltd v Louis Dreyfus & Co [1922] 2 A.C. 250 at 262.

<sup>12</sup> See below, pp.759 et seq.

<sup>13</sup> See above, pp.88–89.

<sup>14</sup> British-Russian Gazette Ltd v Associated Newspapers Ltd [1933] 2 K.B. 616 at 643. Mere acceptance of a cheque sent in full settlement is not conclusive evidence of such an agreement: Stour Valley Builders v Stuart, The Times, February 23, 1993, following Day v McLea [1889] 2 Q.B. 610; Inland Revenue Commissioners v Fry [2001] S.T.C. 1715 at [12]. See also Clarke v Nationwide BS (1998) 76 P. & C.R. D5 (acceptance of cheque sent “as a gesture of goodwill” not an accord).

<sup>15</sup> Bayley v Homan (1837) 3 Bing.N.C. 915; cf. Morris v Baron & Co [1918] A.C. 1 at 36.

<sup>16</sup> Henderson v Stobart (1850) 5 Ex. 99.

<sup>17</sup> Elton Cap Dyeing Co v Broadbent & Son Ltd (1919) 89 L.J.K.B. 186; cf. Cartwright v Cooke (1832) 3 B. & Ad. 701; Cromther v Farrer (1850) 15 Q.B. 677.

<sup>18</sup> Jameson v CEBG [2000] 1 A.C. 455 at 477, where the original liability arose in tort; and see p.572, below.

<sup>19</sup> ibid.; for the distinction between conditions precedent and subsequent, see above, p.63.

<sup>20</sup> cf. Johnson v Davies [1999] Ch. 117 at 128 (a case, not of accord and satisfaction at common law, but of a “voluntary arrangement” under the Insolvency Act 1986, Pt VIII).

There is one long-established exception to the rule that accord without satisfaction does not discharge a contract after breach. If the holder of a bill of exchange or promissory note at or after its maturity absolutely, unconditionally and in writing renounces his rights against any person liable on the bill or note, the latter is discharged.<sup>21</sup> The exception provides a comparatively simple way of evading the general rule: the creditor can take a bill or note in satisfaction of the debt and then renounce it.

2. Variation

Four situations call for discussion.

First, a variation of a contract may amount to a rescission of the old contract followed by the making of a new one relating to the same subject-matter. The question whether there is consideration for the rescission then depends on the principles just discussed.<sup>22</sup> If there is consideration for the rescission there is also consideration for the new promises. "The same consideration which existed for the old agreement is imported into the new agreement, which is substituted for it."<sup>23</sup>

Secondly, the parties may agree to vary their contract in a way that can benefit either party. Such a variation again normally generates its own consideration. This is the position if a lease is varied by altering the date on which notice of termination can be given<sup>24</sup>; or if a contract of sale is varied by altering the currency in which payment is to be made.<sup>25</sup> In the latter case, it would make no difference that the new currency was later devalued in relation to the old, for at the time of the variation it could not be certain how the two currencies would move in relation to each other: hence either party might benefit from the variation. If a variation is, taken as a whole, capable of benefiting either party, the requirement of consideration will be satisfied even though a particular term of the variation is for the sole benefit of one.<sup>26</sup> A variation does not, however, generate its own consideration if, though capable of benefiting either party, it is in fact made wholly for the benefit of one. For example, a variation as to the place at which a debt is to be paid may benefit either party and thus provide consideration for a promise by the creditor to accept part payment in full settlement. But it will not have this effect if it is introduced solely for the benefit of the debtor.<sup>27</sup> Similarly, an agreement to reduce the quantity of goods to be delivered and paid for under a contract for the sale of goods may benefit either party; but if it is made purely for the seller's convenience it will not be consideration for the buyer's promise to accept the smaller quantity; nor conversely.<sup>28</sup>

Thirdly, the parties may agree to vary the contract in a way that can confer a legal benefit<sup>29</sup> on only one party. In some situations, it is settled that such a variation does not generate its own consideration: thus a promise by a creditor to accept part payment of a debt in full settlement is not binding unless it is supported by some separate consideration.<sup>30</sup> Such separate consideration could be provided by some further variation which may benefit the creditor: for example, by a debtor's promise to make the part

<sup>21</sup> Bills of Exchange Act 1882, s.62.

<sup>22</sup> See above, pp.99–102.

<sup>23</sup> Stead v Dawber (1839) 10 A. & E. 57 at 66.

<sup>24</sup> Fenner v Blake [1900] 1 Q.B. 427.

<sup>25</sup> W J Alan & Co Ltd v El Nasr Export & Import Co [1972] 2 Q.B. 189; Woodhouse AC Israel Cocoa Ltd SA v Nigerian Produce Marketing Co [1972] A.C. 741 at 757.

<sup>26</sup> Ficom SA v Sociedad Cadex Ltda [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 118 at 132.

<sup>27</sup> Vanbergen v St. Edmund's Properties Ltd [1933] 2 K.B. 233; cf. Continental Grain Export Corp v STM Grain Ltd [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 460 at 476.

<sup>28</sup> ibid.

<sup>29</sup> See above, p.69.

<sup>30</sup> See below, p.125.

payment before the day when the debt becomes due.<sup>31</sup> In other situations, it is arguable<sup>32</sup> that the variation may be supported by consideration if, though capable of conferring a legal benefit on only one party, it can also confer a factual benefit<sup>33</sup> on the other, e.g. where a buyer's promise to pay more than the originally agreed price secures eventual delivery when strict insistence on the original contract would have led to nothing but litigation.

Fourthly, there is the apparently paradoxical possibility that the parties may agree to vary a contract even before that contract has been concluded. This may be the position where A and B negotiate on the basis of formal documents and A represents that the proposed contract will be on terms less favourable to himself than those set out in the documents. If the documents are nevertheless executed without alteration, the representation may then be enforceable as a collateral contract. The consideration for the promise contained in A's representation is provided by B when he executes the documents (and so enters into the principal contract) at the request of A and in reliance on the representation. In Brikom Investments Ltd v Carr<sup>34</sup> landlords of blocks of flats, negotiated with their tenants for the sale of long leases of the flats on terms requiring the tenants to contribute to the cost of (inter alia) roof maintenance. At the time of the negotiations, the roof was in need of repairs, and the landlords promised to execute these "at our own cost". It was held that one of the tenants had provided consideration for this promise by executing the agreement for the lease, and the lease itself; and that the promise was accordingly binding as a collateral contract. It followed that the landlords could not enforce the term in the lease under which the tenant would (but for the collateral contract) have been liable to contribute to the cost of the roof repairs.<sup>35</sup> Greater difficulty would have arisen if the tenant had already executed the documents before the landlord's promise had been made,<sup>36</sup> for in that case the execution of the documents would have been past consideration.<sup>37</sup> The tenants could, however, have succeeded, even in such a case, on an alternative ground. The landlords had been guilty of unreasonable delay in executing the repairs, and the tenants would, by forbearing to take proceedings in respect of that breach,<sup>38</sup> have provided consideration for the landlords' promise to bear the cost of the repairs.

3. Waiver<sup>39</sup>

(1) At common law

Where a party promises to relinquish some or all of his rights under a contract, he is sometimes said to have "waived" those rights. Unfortunately, however, "the word

<sup>31</sup> See below, p.127.

<sup>32</sup> On the analogy of the reasoning of Williams v Roffey Bros & Nicholls (Contractors) Ltd [1991] 1 Q.B. 1, above, p.95.

<sup>33</sup> See above, p.69.

<sup>34</sup> [1979] Q.B. 467.

<sup>35</sup> This was agreed by all members of the Court of Appeal. For other grounds for the decision, see below, pp.130, 133.

<sup>36</sup> From the grounds of appeal as stated at 472-473 of the report, it seems that the tenants relied on representations made before the main contracts were concluded; cf. the statement at 490 that the landlords' promise was made "at the time when the leases were granted." According to Lord Denning M.R. at 480 "some of the tenants" had already signed agreements for leases when the representations were made; but that does not seem to have been the position with regard to any of the cases before the court.

<sup>37</sup> See above, p.77.

<sup>38</sup> See [1979] Q.B. 467 at 490; cf. above, p.90. Delay in executing the repairs was a breach irrespective of the question of who was to pay for them.

<sup>39</sup> Ewart, Waiver Distributed; Wilben and Villiers, Waiver Variation and Estoppel; Cheshire and Fifoot, 63 L.Q.R. 283; Stoljar, 35 Can.Bar.Rev. 485; Dugdale and Yates, 39 M.L.R. 681.

'waiver' . . . covers a variety of situations different in their legal nature. . . ."<sup>40</sup> Of the many senses in which it is used, three are relevant to the present discussion.<sup>41</sup>

(a) TO MEAN RESCISSION. Sometimes "waiver" means total rescission of the contract: "The waiver spoken of in the case is an entire abandonment and dissolution of the contract."<sup>42</sup> This usage assumes that the rescission is supported by consideration.<sup>43</sup> It has been judicially criticised so far as it refers to a purported release without consideration. "To say that a claim is to be waived is incorrect. If a right has accrued, it must be released or discharged by deed or upon consideration."<sup>44</sup>

(b) TO MEAN VARIATION. Sometimes, "waiver" refers to a variation which is supported by consideration and is therefore binding as a contract.<sup>45</sup> It is also used to refer to a variation which, though supported by consideration, is for some other reason not contractually binding. This usage occurs in the context of the rule that a contract which is required to be in, or evidenced in, writing can be rescinded but not varied orally.<sup>46</sup> In such cases, the ineffective oral variation is sometimes referred to as a "waiver". so as to contrast it with an effective rescission followed by the making of a substituted contract on new terms: "There was no fresh agreement . . . which can be regarded as having been substituted for the original written contract. There was nothing more than a waiver by the defendants of a delivery by the plaintiff in [the originally stipulated month]".<sup>47</sup>

(c) TO MEAN FORBEARANCE. A variation may not be contractually binding for want of consideration or of contractual intention, or because it fails to comply with a legal requirement that it must be in, or evidenced in, writing.<sup>48</sup> It may nevertheless have certain limited legal effects, which are sometimes said to arise because one party has "waived" his rights. To distinguish such arrangements from contractually binding variations, they will here be referred to as "forbearances".<sup>49</sup> Their effects are as follows:

(i) The party requesting the forbearance cannot refuse to accept the varied performance. Thus, if a seller at the request of the buyer delivers late, the buyer cannot refuse to accept on the ground that delivery was made after the time specified in the original contract.<sup>50</sup>

<sup>40</sup> The Laconia [1977] A.C. 850 at 871; cf. Kammins Ballrooms Co Ltd v Zenith Investments (Torquay) Ltd [1971] A.C. 850 at 882–883; The Athos [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 127 at 134; The Kanchenjunga [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 391 at 397; Oliver Ashmorth (Holdings) Ltd v Ballard (Kent) Ltd [2000] Ch. 12 at 28; The Happy Day [2002] EWCA Civ 1068, [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 487, at [64].

<sup>41</sup> For further senses, see below pp.752–753.

<sup>42</sup> Price v Dyer (1810) 17 Ves. 356 at 364.

<sup>43</sup> See above, p.99.

<sup>44</sup> Atlantic Shipping & Trading Co Ltd v Louis Dreyfus & Co [1922] 2 A.C. 250 at 262; cf. The Ion [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 245 at 249.

<sup>45</sup> Semble, this is the sense in which the word is used by Roskill and Cumming-Bruce L.J.J. in Brikom Investments Ltd v Carr [1979] Q.B. 467 at 488, 491; for the consideration for the "waiver", see above p.102; cf. Shamsher Jute Mills Ltd v Sethia (London) Ltd [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 388 at 392. In Royal Boskalis Westminster NV v Mountain [1997] 2 All E.R. 929, "waiver" is similarly used to refer to a variation which would have been contractually binding if it had not been vitiated by duress and illegality. Only Phillips L.J. took the view that there was no "meaningful" consideration. "Meaningful" here seems to mean no more than "adequate"; for it appears from the facts stated at 934 and 958–959 that in the subsequent agreement each party gave up rights existing under the original contract.

<sup>46</sup> See below, p.190.

<sup>47</sup> Hickman v Haynes (1875) L.R. 10 C.P. 598 at 604.

<sup>48</sup> See below, pp.189–190.

<sup>49</sup> cf. The Kanchenjunga [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 391 at 397.

<sup>50</sup> Hickman v Haynes, above; Levey & Co v Goldberg [1922] 1 K.B. 688; cf. British and Beningtons Ltd v NW Cuchar Tea Co [1923] A.C. 48.

(ii) If the varied performance is actually made and accepted, neither party can claim damages on the ground that performance was not in accordance with the original contract. Thus, in the above example the seller who delivers late, or the buyer who takes delivery late, is not liable in damages. But if the contract is not performed at all, the damages are assessed on the footing that the breach took place at the end of the extended period.<sup>51</sup>

(iii) The cases that give rise to the greatest difficulty are those in which the party granting the forbearance refuses to perform, or to accept performance, in accordance with it.

Suppose, for example, that a buyer agrees, at the seller's request, to accept late delivery. The buyer cannot then claim damages for the seller's failure to deliver within the contract period<sup>52</sup>; but a further set of problems can arise if, after expiry of that period but within the extended period, the seller tenders delivery, and the buyer refuses to accept it. One possible view is that the seller cannot derive rights from a forbearance which is not binding as a contract, and that therefore he is not entitled to damages for the buyer's refusal to take delivery within the extended, but outside the original, contract period. A claim for such damages was accordingly rejected in Plevins v Downing,<sup>53</sup> where the agreement to extend the delivery dates had no contractual force since it was oral when it should, as the law then stood, have been evidenced in writing<sup>54</sup> and since it was probably unsupported by consideration, having been made at the request, and for the sole benefit, of the seller.<sup>55</sup>

But in many cases the party for whose benefit the forbearance was granted was allowed to enforce the contract in accordance with the new terms. In Hartley v Hymans<sup>56</sup> a buyer of cotton agreed to allow the seller to make late delivery. It was held that he was liable in damages for peremptorily refusing to take delivery after the period originally specified in the contract had expired. Similarly, a party may acquiesce in a method of payment other than that specified in the contract so as to indicate that the new method is to become the "accepted method."<sup>57</sup> He cannot then refuse to perform his part simply because the other party has not performed his obligation to pay strictly in accordance with the terms originally agreed<sup>58</sup>; nor can he peremptorily require performance strictly in accordance with those terms.<sup>59</sup> In these cases it is sometimes said that there is no variation of the contract, but only a variation of the mode of performance; or that there is no variation, but only a waiver<sup>60</sup> in the sense of forbearance.

Such a forbearance differs from a variation which is supported by consideration in that it does not irrevocably alter the rights of the parties under the original contract. The party granting the forbearance can generally retract it, provided that he gives reasonable

<sup>51</sup> Ogle v Vane (1868) 1 L.R. 3 Q.B. 272.

<sup>52</sup> cf. The Kanchenjunga [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 354 at 358, affirmed [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 391.

<sup>53</sup> (1876) 1 C.P.D. 220.

<sup>54</sup> For this reason alone, the variation could not then have been enforced as a contract: below, p.190.

<sup>55</sup> See above, p.101.

<sup>56</sup> [1920] 3 K.B. 475; cf. Tyers v Rosedale & Ferryhill Iron Co (1875) L.R. 10 Ex. 195; Besseler Waechter Glover & Co v South Derwent Coal Ltd [1938] 1 K.B. 408; and see Leather Cloth Co v Hieronimus (1875) L.R. 10 Q.B. 104 (variation of route of shipment).

<sup>57</sup> The Scaptrade [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 425 at 431 (where this requirement was not satisfied), affirmed without reference to this point [1983] 2 A.C. 694; Hazel v Abhtar [2001] EWCA Civ 1883, The Times, January 7, 2002 (landlord tolerating habitually late payment of rent).

<sup>58</sup> Panoutsos v Raymond Hadley Corp of NY [1917] 2 K.B. 473; Tankexpress A/S v Cie Financière Belge des Pétroles, S.A. [1949] A.C. 76; Plasticmoda Soc v Davidsons (Manchester) Ltd [1952] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 527.

<sup>59</sup> Mitas v Hymans [1951] 2 T.L.R. 1215.

<sup>60</sup> e.g. in Plevins v Downing (1876) 1 C.P.D. 220 at 225; Besseler Waechter Glover & Co v South Derwent Coal Co Ltd [1938] 1 K.B. 408 at 416; The Kanchenjunga; [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 391 at 397-398.

notice of his intention to do so to the party for whose benefit it was granted.<sup>61</sup> Thus, in Charles Rickards Ltd v Oppenheim<sup>62</sup> a contract for the sale of a car provided for delivery on March 20. The car was not delivered on that day but the buyer continued to press for delivery and finally told the seller on June 29 that he must have the car by July 25 at the latest. It was held that the buyer could not have refused peremptorily to accept the car merely because the original delivery date had gone by, as he had continued to press for delivery; but that he could refuse on the seller's failure to comply with a notice to deliver within a reasonable time. Here the notice did give the seller a reasonable time to deliver, so that the buyer was justified in refusing to take the car after July 25. A fortiori, the buyer could have refused to take delivery if the original delivery date had been extended only for a fixed time and if delivery had not been made by the end of that time.<sup>63</sup>

A forbearance may, however, become irrevocable as a result of subsequent events: for example if a buyer indicates that he is willing to accept goods of a different quality from those contracted for, and the seller, in reliance on that assurance, so conducts himself as to put it out of his power to supply goods of the contract quality within the contract period.<sup>64</sup>

The distinction between a forbearance and a variation is sometimes said to depend on the intention of the parties<sup>65</sup>: a statement is a forbearance if the party making it intends to reserve a power to retract; but a variation if he intends permanently to abandon his rights under the contract. The courts were, however, anxious to avoid the unjust effects of the rules as to variations that were not contractually binding for lack of consideration or failure to comply with formal requirements. Hence they often interpreted a subsequent agreement as a forbearance, so as to give it at least some legal effects.

(2) In equity<sup>66</sup>

The common law rules as to waiver in the sense of forbearance are defective in two ways. First, they rest on the tenuous distinction between forbearance and variation, which can be deduced from the judgments, but does not provide any very solid basis for distinguishing between the actual decisions. It is hard to see, for instance, why the buyer in Plevins v Downing<sup>67</sup> was allowed to reject late delivery, while the buyer in Hartley v Hymans<sup>68</sup> was not allowed to do so. Secondly, the common law rules produced the paradoxical result that, the more a party purported to bind himself by a subsequent agreement, the less he was likely to be bound. An attempt permanently to renounce a right would be a variation, and ineffective for want of writing or consideration. But an attempt to suspend a right would be effective, to a limited extent, as a forbearance.

(a) HUGHES v METROPOLITAN RY. Equity devised a more satisfactory approach to the problem by concentrating, not on the intention of the party granting the forbearance,

<sup>61</sup> Banning v Wright [1972] 1 W.L.R. 972, 981. Ficom SA v Sociedad Cadex Ltda. [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 118 at 131; Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH v Raiffeisen Hauptgenossenschaft EG [1982] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 599.

<sup>62</sup> [1950] 1 K.B. 616; cf. Cape Asbestos Co Ltd v Lloyds Bank Ltd [1921] W.N. 274 at 276; Bird v Hildage [1948] 1 K.B. 91; State Trading Corp of India v Cie Française d'Importation et de Distribution [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 679 at 681.

<sup>63</sup> cf. Nichimen Corp v Gatoil Overseas Inc [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 46, where similar fixed term extensions were granted by a seller.

<sup>64</sup> Trepper v Warinco AG [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 569 at 576.

<sup>65</sup> Stead v Damber (1839) 10 A. & E. 57 at 64.

<sup>66</sup> Denning, 15 M.L.R. 1; Wilson, 67 L.Q.R. 330; Sheridan, 15 M.L.R. 325; Gordon [1963] C.L.J. 222; Wilson [1965] C.L.J. 93; Thompson [1983] C.L.J. 257; Spence, Protecting Reliance.

<sup>67</sup> (1876) 1 C.P.D. 220; above, p.104.

<sup>68</sup> [1920] 3 K.B. 475; above, p.104.

but on the conduct of that party and on its effect on the position of the other party. The leading case is Hughes v Metropolitan Ry,<sup>69</sup> where a landlord had given his tenant notice requiring him to do repairs within six months. During the six months he began to negotiate with the tenant for the purchase of his lease. When the negotiations broke down, he immediately claimed to forfeit the lease on the ground that the tenant had not done the repairs. The claim was rejected, Lord Cairns saying that if one party leads the other "to suppose that the strict rights arising under the contract will not be enforced, or will be kept in suspense or held in abeyance, the person who otherwise might have enforced those rights will not be allowed to enforce them where it would be inequitable having regard to the dealings which have thus taken place between the parties".<sup>70</sup> The landlord had by his conduct led the tenant to suppose that during the negotiations he would not enforce his right to forfeit. Hence he could not forfeit immediately the negotiations broke down: he had to give the tenant a reasonable time from that date to do the repairs. This equitable doctrine can now be applied to arrangements which might formerly have been regarded as variations ineffective at common law for want of consideration.<sup>71</sup> For reasons to be discussed later in this Chapter<sup>72</sup> the doctrine is often (if somewhat misleadingly) referred to as "equitable" or "promissory" estoppel.

(b) RELATIONSHIPS WITHIN THE DOCTRINE. The rights which the equitable doctrine prevents a promisor or representor from enforcing normally arise out of a contract between him and the other party. But the doctrine can also apply where the relationship giving rise to rights and duties is non-contractual: e.g. to prevent the enforcement of a liability imposed by statute<sup>73</sup>; or to prevent a man from ejecting a woman, with whom he had been cohabiting, from the family home.<sup>74</sup> On the other hand, it has been said that the doctrine "has no application as between a landowner and a trespasser".<sup>75</sup> Hence the mere fact that a landowner has for some time failed or neglected to enforce his rights against a trespasser does not prevent him from later doing so without notice.

It has been suggested that the doctrine can apply even where, before the making of the promise or representation, there is no legal relationship of any kind between the parties<sup>76</sup>; or where there is only a putative contract between them: e.g. where the promisee is induced to believe that a contract into which he had undoubtedly entered was between him and the promisor, when in fact it was between the promisee and another person.<sup>77</sup> But it is submitted that these suggestions mistake the nature of the doctrine, which is to restrict the enforcement by the promisor of previously existing rights against the promisee. Such rights can arise only out of a legal relationship existing between these parties before the making of the promise or representation. To apply the

<sup>69</sup> (1877) 2 App.Cas. 439.

<sup>70</sup> ibid. at 448. cf. Smith v Lawson (1998) 75 P. & C.R. 466, below p.115.

<sup>71</sup> e.g. Charles Rickards Ltd v Oppenheim [1950] K.B. 616 (where both common law and equitable principles were applied). The principle in Hughes v Metropolitan Ry was said in Brikom Investments Ltd v Carr [1979] Q.B. 467 at 489 to be "an illustration of contractual variation of strict contractual rights." This description was apt on the facts of that case, where the promise not to enforce such rights was supported by consideration: above, p.102. But the principle stated in Hughes v Metropolitan Ry applies even in the absence of such consideration: cf. below, p.133.

<sup>72</sup> See below, p.114.

<sup>73</sup> Durham Fancy Goods Ltd v Michael Jackson (Fancy Goods) Ltd [1968] 2 Q.B. 839.

<sup>74</sup> Maharaj v Chand [1986] A.C. 898.

<sup>75</sup> Morris v Tarrant [1971] 2 Q.B. 143 at 160; cf. Burrows v Brent LBC [1996] 1 W.L.R. 1448 at 1458, where no attempt was made to invoke the doctrine in favour of a "tolerated trespasser".

<sup>76</sup> See Evenden v Guildford City FC [1975] Q.B. 917 at 924, 926 (actual decision overruled in Secretary of State for Employment v Globe Elastic Thread Co Ltd [1980] A.C. 506); cf. in Australia, Waltons Stones (Interstate) Ltd v Maher (1988) 164 C.L.R. 387; below, p.118.

<sup>77</sup> The Henrik Sif [1982] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 456 at 466; the actual decision can perhaps be explained as one of liability for actionable non-disclosure: below, p.400.

doctrine where there was no such relationship would contravene the rule (to be discussed below) that the doctrine creates no new rights.<sup>78</sup>

(c) WHEN APPLICABLE. The operation of the doctrine is subject to the following requirements:

(i) A “clear” or “unequivocal” promise or representation. There must be a promise (or an assurance or representation in the nature of a promise)<sup>79</sup> which is intended to affect the legal relationship between the parties<sup>80</sup> and which indicates that the promisor will not insist on his strict legal rights,<sup>81</sup> arising out of that relationship, against the promisee. Here, as elsewhere,<sup>82</sup> the law applies an objective test. It is enough if the promise induces the promisee reasonably to believe that the other party will not insist on his strict legal rights.<sup>83</sup> A mere threat to do something is not sufficient, nor, probably, is a representation or promise by a person that he will enforce a legal right: thus the doctrine does not apply where A tells B that he will exercise his right to cancel a contract between them unless by a specified date B has paid sums due under the contract to A.<sup>84</sup>

The promise or representation must be “clear” or “unequivocal,” or “precise and unambiguous.” This requirement seems to have originated in the law relating to estoppel by representation<sup>85</sup> and it is now frequently stated in relation to “waiver”<sup>86</sup> and “promissory estoppel.”<sup>87</sup> It does not mean that the promise or representation must be <sup>78</sup> See below, p. 111. Some doubt as to the correctness of The Henrik Sif, above, is expressed by Webster J. (who decided the case) in Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc v MacLaine Watson & Co Ltd [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 570 at 596, 604, though the decision was approved on another point in The Stolt Loyalty [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 281 at 289–291, affirmed without reference to this point [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 599; see also Orion Finance Ltd v J D Williams & Co Ltd [1997] C.L.Y. 986, where no estoppel arose in the absence of a previous legal relationship; Baird Textile Holdings Ltd v Marks & Spencer plc [2001] EWCA Civ 274; [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 737, at [89] apparently doubting some of the reasoning in The Henrik Sif, but not the outcome since there was undoubtedly “a legal relationship . . . whoever were the parties thereto” (though the difficulty remains that the first defendants, against whom the doctrine was said to operate, were not parties to that relationship).

<sup>79</sup> James v Heim Galleries (1980) 256 E.G. 819 at 821; Collin v Duke of Westminster [1985] Q.B. 581 at 595.

<sup>80</sup> Spence v Shell (1980) 256 E.G. 55 at 63; Central London Property Trust Ltd v High Trees House Ltd [1947] K.B. 130 at 134; Baird Textile Holdings Ltd v Marks & Spencer plc, above, n.78, at [94].

<sup>81</sup> Or that he will not rely on an available defence: cf. below, pp.115, 403.

<sup>82</sup> See above, pp.1, 8.

<sup>83</sup> Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH v Vanden Avenue-Izegem P.V.B.A. [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 109 at 126; Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH v Mackprang Jr [1979] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 221 (both these cases concerned “waiver”; cf. below, n.86).

<sup>84</sup> Drexel Burnham Lambert International NV v El Nasr [1986] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 356.

<sup>85</sup> Low v Bouquerie [1891] 3 Ch. 82 at 106; Woodhouse AC Israel Cocoa Ltd SA v Nigerian Produce Marketing Co Ltd [1972] A.C. 741; The Shackleford [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 155 at 159; below, p.402.

<sup>86</sup> Finagrain SA Geneva v p.Kruse Hamburg [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 508 at 534; The Laconia [1977] A.C. 850 at 871; Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH v Vanden Avenue-Izegem P.V.B.A. [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 109 at 126; The Mihailos Xilas [1979] 1 W.L.R. 1018 at 1024; Avimex SA v Demulf & Cie. [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 57 at 67; Bremer Handelsgesellschaft GmbH v Westzucker GmbH [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 207 at 212; Prosper Homes v Hambro's Bank Executor & Trustee Co (1979) 39 P. & C.R. 395; Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH v Finagrain Cie. Commerciale Agricole & Financière S.A. [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 259 at 266; The Rio Sun [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 489 and [1982] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 404; The Athos [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 127 at 134–135; Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH v Deutsche Conti-Handelsgesellschaft mbH [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 689; for the analogy between waiver and the equitable doctrine here under discussion, see above, p.106; below, p.117.

<sup>87</sup> BP Exploration Co (Libya) Ltd v Hunt (No.2) [1979] 1 W.L.R. 783 at 812 (affirmed without reference to this point [1983] 2 A.C. 352); Spence v Shell (1980) 256 E.G. 55 at 63; James v Heim Galleries (1980) 256 E.G. 819 at 821; The Post Chaser [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 695 at 700; The Scaptrade [1983] Q.B. 529 at 534–535 (“equitable estoppel”) (affirmed without reference to this point [1983] A.C. 694); Goldworthy v Brickell [1987] Ch. 378 at 410; Hiscox v Outram (No.3) [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 524 at 535; Rowan Companies Inc v Lambert Eggink Offshore Transport Consultants [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 443 at 448 and Thameside MBC v Barlow Securities Group Services Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 1; [2001] B.L.R. 113 (where this requirement was not satisfied).

express<sup>88</sup>; in Hughes v Metropolitan Ry<sup>89</sup> itself the landlord made no express promise that he would not enforce his right to forfeit the lease; but an implication of such a promise fairly arose from the course of the negotiations between the parties. There is some support for the view that the promise must have the same degree of certainty as would be needed to give it contractual effect if it were supported by consideration.<sup>90</sup> Thus if the statement could not have contractual effect because it was too vague,<sup>91</sup> or if it was insufficiently precise to amount to an offer,<sup>92</sup> or if it does not amount to an unqualified acceptance,<sup>93</sup> it will not bring the equitable doctrine into operation.<sup>94</sup>

The purpose of the requirement that the promise or representation must be "clear" or "unequivocal" is to prevent a party from losing his legal rights merely because he has granted some indulgence by failing throughout to insist on strict performance of a contract<sup>95</sup>; or because he has offered some concession in the course of negotiations for the settlement of a dispute arising out of the contract<sup>96</sup> or merely because he has declared his willingness to continue such negotiations.<sup>97</sup> Thus the requirement was not satisfied where one of the parties to such negotiations throughout insisted on strict compliance with the terms of the contract.<sup>98</sup> Nor was it satisfied where he accepted less than that to which he was entitled but did so subject to an express reservation of his rights.<sup>99</sup> Failure, in the course of negotiations of this kind, to object to a defect or deficiency in performance is likewise insufficient if the injured party did not know and could not reasonably have known of it<sup>1</sup> or if full performance remained possible and continued to be demanded by that party.<sup>2</sup> On the other hand, failure to object to a known defect or deficiency within a reasonable time of its discovery<sup>3</sup> may be regarded as an unequivocal indication of the injured party's intention not to insist on his strict legal

<sup>88</sup> Spence v. Shell (1980) 256 F.G. 55 at 63.

<sup>89</sup> (1877) 2 App.Cas. 439; cf. The Post Chaser [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 695 at 700.

<sup>90</sup> The Winson [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 213 at 222; reversed on other grounds [1982] A.C. 939; Drexel Burnham Lambert International NV v El Nasr [1986] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 357; The Antclizo [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 130 at 142 (affirmed [1988] 1 W.L.R. 603); Baird Textile Holdings Ltd v Marks & Spencer [2001] EWCA Civ 274; [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 737, at [38], [54]; cf. above, p.48 for the requirement of certainty.

<sup>91</sup> See above, p.48.

<sup>92</sup> See above, p.8.

<sup>93</sup> Azov Shipping Co v Baltic Shipping Co [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 159 at 173, a case of estoppel by representation, to which the requirement of a clear and unequivocal representation also applies: see below, p.403. For the requirement of an "unqualified" acceptance, see above, p.18.

<sup>94</sup> The Winson [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 213 at 223; reversed on other grounds [1982] A.C. 939.

<sup>95</sup> The Scaptrade [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 425 at 431, [1983] Q.B. 529 at 535 affirmed [1983] 2 A.C. 694; cf. Cape Asbestos Co Ltd v Lloyds Bank Ltd [1921] W.N. 274 at 276; Bunge SA v Compagnie Européenne des Céréales [1982] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 306; Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH v Raiffeisen Hauptgenossenschaft E.G. [1982] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 599; Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH v Bunge Corp [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 476.

<sup>96</sup> cf. London & Clydebank Properties v HM Investment Co [1993] E.G.C.S. 63.

<sup>97</sup> Seechurn v. Ace Insurance SA [2002] EWCA Civ 67; [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 390, esp. at [55].

<sup>98</sup> V Berg & Son Ltd v Vanden-Avenue-Izegem PVBA [1977] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 500; cf. Edm J M Mertens & Co PVBA v Veevoeder Import Export Vimex BV [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 372.

<sup>99</sup> Finagrain S.A. Geneva v p.Kruse Hamburg [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 508; cf. Cook Industries Inc v Meunerie Liègeois SA [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 359 at 368; Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH v Deutsche Conti Handelsgesellschaft mbH [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 45; Peter Cremer v Granaria BV [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 583; cf. The Winson [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 213 (as to which see n.90, above).

<sup>1</sup> Avimex SA v Demulf & Cie. [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 57.

<sup>2</sup> The Mihailos Xilas [1979] W.L.R. 1018; Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH v C Mackprang Jr [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 292 at 299; Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH v Westzucker GmbH [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 207 at 212–213; Peter Cremer v Granaria BV [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 583; The Post Chaser [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 695 at 700.

<sup>3</sup> See The Laconia [1977] A.C. 850 (where retention of an under-payment accepted without authority by the payee's bank was held not to amount to a waiver); The Superhulls Cover Case (No.2) [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 431 (where the deficiency was not known).

rights.<sup>3a</sup> The position seems to be the same where the defect or deficiency, though not actually known to the injured party, was obvious or could have been discovered by him, if he had taken reasonable steps.<sup>4</sup> But where more than one matter is in dispute between the parties, “emphatic reliance upon some important disputed point does not by itself . . . imply any unequivocal representation that compliance with other parts of the bargain is thereby waived”.<sup>5</sup>

Although a promise or representation may be made by conduct, mere inactivity will not normally suffice for the present purpose since “it is difficult to imagine how silence and inaction can be anything but equivocal”.<sup>6</sup> Unless the law took this view, mere failure to assert a contractual right could lead to its loss; and the courts have on a number of occasions rejected this clearly undesirable conclusion. Thus it has been held that there is “no ground for saying that mere delay, however lengthy, destroys the contractual right”;<sup>7</sup> and that the mere failure to prosecute a claim regarded by both parties as hopeless did not amount to a promise to abandon it.<sup>8</sup> The only circumstances in which “silence and inaction” can have this effect are the exceptional ones (discussed elsewhere in this book<sup>9</sup>) in which the law imposes a duty to disclose facts or to clarify a legal relationship and the party under the duty fails to perform it.

(ii) Reliance. The requirement of reliance means that the promise or representation must in some way have influenced the conduct of the party to whom it was made. Although the promise need not form the sole inducement,<sup>10</sup> it must (it is submitted) be some inducement. Hence the requirement would not be satisfied if it could be shown that the other party’s conduct was not influenced by the promise at all,<sup>11</sup> so that he was not in any way prejudiced by it.<sup>12</sup> But if this is a matter of “mere speculation”,<sup>13</sup> or if the

<sup>3a</sup> e.g. Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH v Vanden Avenne-Izegem P.V.B.A [1978] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 109; Hazel v Akhtar [2001] EWCA Civ 1883; The Times, January 7, 2002.

<sup>4</sup> See Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH v C. Mackprang Jr. [1979] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 221, where there was a division of opinion on the point in the Court of Appeal. Contrast, for a different type of waiver, pp.815–816, below.

<sup>5</sup> The Athos [1983] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 127 at 135; Rafsanjan Pistachio Producers Co-operative v Bank Leumi (UK) plc. [1992] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 513 at 542.

<sup>6</sup> The Leonidas D [1985] 1 W.L.R. 925 at 937; cf. Cook Industries v Tradax Export S.A [1983] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 327 at 332 (affirmed [1985] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 454); The August P Leonhardt [1985] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 28 at 33; MSC Mediterranean Shipping Co SA v BRE Metro Ltd [1985] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 239; Cie. Française d’Importation, etc., v Deutsche Continental Handelsgesellschaft [1985] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 592 at 598; The Antelizo [1986] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 181 at 187 (affirmed [1988] 1 W.L.R. 603); The Superhulls Cover Case (No.2) [1990] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 431 at 452; and see above, p.10.

<sup>7</sup> Amherst v James Walker Goldsmith & Silversmith Ltd [1983] Ch. 305 at 315; cf., in another context, The Nai Genova [1984] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 353 at 365.

<sup>8</sup> Collin v Duke of Westminster [1985] Q.B. 581.

<sup>9</sup> See below, pp.392–400, above, p.33; see, for example, The Lutetian [1982] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 140 at 158; The Stolt Loyalty [1993] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 281 at 289, 291, affirmed (without reference to the point here under discussion) [1995] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 559; and see Petrotrade Inc v Stinnes Handel GmbH [1995] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 142 at 151, where the statement that there may be a representation by “conduct (including silence)” evidently refers to the exceptional situations described in the text above.

<sup>10</sup> cf. below, p.340.

<sup>11</sup> See Fontana NV v Mautner (1979) 254 F.G. 199; Raiffeisen Hauptgenossenschaft v Louis Dreyfus & Co [1981] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 345 at 352; Cook Industries Ltd v Meunerie Liégeois S.A [1981] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 359 at 368; The Scaptrade [1983] Q.B. 529 at 536, affirmed without reference to this point [1983] 2 A.C. 694; Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH v Bunge Corp [1983] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 476; Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH v Deutsche-Conti Handelsgesellschaft mbH [1983] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 689; Lark v Outhwaite [1991] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 132 at 142; The Nerano [1996] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 1; Rowan Companies Inc v Lambert Eggink Offshore Transport Consultants [1999] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 443 at 449.

<sup>12</sup> Eis Soules & Cie. v International Trade Development Co Ltd [1980] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 129; The Multibank Holsatia [1988] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 486 at 493.

<sup>13</sup> Brikom Investments Ltd v Carr [1979] Q.B. 467 at 482.

promise or representation "was one of the factors . . . relied upon",<sup>14</sup> it would form a sufficient inducement. In other words, where the promisee has, after the promise, conducted himself in the way intended by the promisor, it will be up to the promisor to establish that the conduct was not induced by the promise.<sup>15</sup>

There is sometimes said to be a further requirement, namely that the promisee must have suffered some "detriment" in reliance on the promise.<sup>16</sup> This may mean that the promisee must have done something which he was not previously bound to do and as a result have suffered loss, e.g. by incurring expenditure in reliance on the promise. The alleged requirement of "detriment" in this sense is based on the analogy of estoppel by representation.<sup>17</sup> But that analogy is (as we shall see)<sup>18</sup> inexact; and the equitable doctrine can clearly operate even though there is no "detriment" in this sense.<sup>19</sup> It is enough if the promisee has altered his position in reliance on the promise so that it would be inequitable to allow the promisor to act inconsistently with it.<sup>20</sup> Thus the requirement can be satisfied if the promisee has forborne from taking steps to safeguard his legal position (as in Hughes v Metropolitan Ry<sup>21</sup> itself); or if he has performed or made efforts to perform the original obligation as altered by the promise (for example, where a seller who has been promised extra time for delivery continues to make efforts to perform after the originally agreed delivery date has gone by).

(iii) Inequitable. It must be "inequitable" for the promisor to go back on the promise. This requirement cannot be defined with anything approaching precision, but the underlying idea is that the promisee must have acted in reliance on the promise in one of the ways just described, so that he can no longer be restored to the position in which he was before he took such action.<sup>22</sup> If the promisee can be restored to that position, it will not be inequitable for the promisor to go back on the promise. In one case<sup>23</sup> the promisor re-asserted his strict legal rights only two days after the promise had been made. It was held that this was not "inequitable", since the promisee had not, in this short period, suffered any prejudice: he could be, and was, restored to exactly the position in which he had been before the promise was made. Sometimes, moreover, extraneous circumstances will justify the promisor in going back on the promise without notice. In Williams v Stern<sup>24</sup> the plaintiff gave the defendant a bill of sale of furniture as security for a loan; the bill entitled the defendant to seize the furniture if the plaintiff defaulted in paying instalments due under it. When the fourteenth instalment became due, the plaintiff asked for extra time, and the defendant said that he "would not look

<sup>14</sup> ibid. at 490 (per Cumming-Bruce L.J., whose decision was based on the different ground discussed above, p.101).

<sup>15</sup> cf. the similar rule in cases of "proprietary estoppel" stated below, p.141.

<sup>16</sup> e.g. Fontana NV v Mautner (1979) 254 E.G. 199; Meng Long Development Pte Ltd v Jip Hong Trading Co Pte Ltd [1985] A.C. 511 at 524. cf. Wilson, 67 L.Q.R. 344.

<sup>17</sup> See below, p.403; Carr v L & NW Ry (1875) L.R. 10 C.P. 310 at 317.

<sup>18</sup> See below, pp.114–115.

<sup>19</sup> W J. Alan & Co Ltd v El Nasr Export & Import Co [1972] 2 Q.B. 189 at 213.

<sup>20</sup> James v Heim Galleries (1980) 256 E.G. 819 at 825; The Post Chaser [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 695 at 701; The Superhulls Cover Case (No.2) [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 431 at 454; cf. Seachurn v Ace Insurance SA [2002] F.W.C. Civ 67, [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 390, at [25], leaving open the question whether further "detriment" is required.

<sup>21</sup> (1877) 2 App.Cas. 439; above p.105.

<sup>22</sup> Maharaj v Chand [1986] A.C. 898.

<sup>23</sup> The Post Chaser [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 693; cf. Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH v Bunge Corp [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 476 at 484; Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH v Deutsche-Conti Handelsgesellschaft mbH [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 689; The Trado [1982] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 157 at 160; Banner Industrial & Commercial Properties Ltd v Clark Patterson [1990] 2 E.G.L.R. 139; Transatlantico de Comercio SA v Incrobasa Industrial e Comercio Brasileira SA [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 215 at 219.

<sup>24</sup> (1879) 5 Q.B.D. 409.

to a week". Three days later he seized the furniture because he had heard that the plaintiff's landlord intended to distrain it for arrears of rent. It was held that the defendant's seizure was justified. There was no consideration for his promise to give time, nor did Hughes v Metropolitan Ry<sup>25</sup> apply. Brett L.J. said: "Has there been any misconduct on the part of the defendant? I think not: it appears that a distress by the plaintiff's landlord was threatened; and under those circumstances I do not blame the defendant for changing his mind."<sup>26</sup> His conduct was not "inequitable".

(d) EFFECT GENERALLY SUSPENSORY. The equitable doctrine, like the common law doctrine of waiver,<sup>27</sup> does not extinguish, but only suspends, rights. In Hughes v Metropolitan Ry the landlord was not forever prevented from enforcing the covenant: he could have enforced it on giving reasonable notice requiring the tenant to do the repairs.<sup>28</sup> This aspect of the doctrine was stressed in Tool Metal Manufacturing Co Ltd v Tungsten Electric Co Ltd,<sup>29</sup> where a licence for the use of a patent provided that the licensees should pay "compensation" if they manufactured more than a stated number of articles incorporating the patent. In 1942 the owners of the patent agreed to suspend the obligation to pay "compensation" until a new agreement was made. They later gave notice to end the suspension. It was held that they were once again entitled to the payments after the expiry of a reasonable time from the giving of notice. The reason for this rule is that, in equity, the effect of the representation is to give the court a discretion to do what is equitable in all the circumstances<sup>30</sup>; and in the cases just discussed it would not be equitable (or in accordance with the intention of the parties) wholly to extinguish the representor's (or promisor's) rights.

Subsequent events may, however, in exceptional circumstances, give the doctrine an extinctive effect. They can, most obviously, lead to this result where they make it impossible for the promisee to perform his original obligation. In Birmingham & District Land Co v L & NW Ry<sup>31</sup> a building lease bound the tenant to build by 1885. The lessor agreed to suspend this obligation; but in 1886, while the suspension was still in force, the land was compulsorily acquired by a railway company, so that performance of the tenant's obligation became impossible. The tenant recovered statutory compensation from the railway company on the footing that the building lease was still binding; but clearly his obligation to build was wholly extinguished. Even where performance of the original obligation has not become literally impossible, the doctrine may sometimes have an extinctive effect. For example, in Ogilvy v Hope-Davies<sup>32</sup> a vendor of land indicated on August 15 that he would not insist on the contractual completion date of August 30. It was held that no question of reinstating the contractual completion date could arise "because the time was far too short".<sup>33</sup> The doctrine has an extinctive effect in such cases because subsequent events, or the passage of time, though not making performance

<sup>25</sup> (1877) 2 App.Cas. 439; above, p.105.

<sup>26</sup> At 413; cf. also Southwark LBC v Logan (1996) 8 Admin.L.R. 315.

<sup>27</sup> i.e. in the sense of forbearance, above, p.102.

<sup>28</sup> No reference to this point was made in Smith v Lamson (1998) 75 P. & C.R. 446 (below, p.115), probably because no attempt was made by the promisor to give notice of any intention to resume his strict legal rights.

<sup>29</sup> [1955] 1 W.L.R. 761; cf. Banning v Wright [1972] 1 W.L.R. 972 at 981, The Post Chaser [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 695 at 701; The Kanchenjunga [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep 391 at 399; Hazel v Akhtar [2001] EWCA Civ 1883, The Times, January 7, 2002, at [43].

<sup>30</sup> Roebuck v Mungovin [1994] 2 A.C. 224 at 235.

<sup>31</sup> (1888) 40 Ch.D. 268. cf. Durham Fancy Goods Ltd v Michael Jackson (Fancy Goods) Ltd [1968] 2 Q.B. 839.

<sup>32</sup> [1976] 1 All E.R. 683; The Ion [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 245; Voest Alpine Intertrading GmbH v Chevron International Oil Co [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 547 at 560.

<sup>33</sup> Ogilvy v Hope-Davies [1976] 1 All E.R. 683 at 696.

of the original obligation impossible, have made it highly inequitable to require such performance even after reasonable notice.<sup>34</sup>

(c) CREATES NO NEW RIGHTS. The equitable doctrine prevents the enforcement of existing rights, but it does not create entirely new rights or extend the scope of existing ones. This was decided in Combe v Combe,<sup>35</sup> where a husband during divorce proceedings promised to pay £100 per annum to his wife who, in reliance on this promise, forbore from applying to the court for maintenance. This forbearance did not constitute consideration for the husband's promise.<sup>36</sup> It was held that the equitable doctrine did not entitle the wife to recover the promised payments; nor is there any support in English cases for the view that it could create a cause of action in the narrower sense of "limiting recovery to reliance loss".<sup>37</sup> The view that the doctrine gave rise to no new rights came to be associated with its description as a kind of estoppel (known as "promissory estoppel"<sup>38</sup>) and hence with the rule, established in relation to another kind of estoppel (known as "estoppel by representation"<sup>39</sup>), that "you cannot found a cause of action on an estoppel".<sup>40</sup> It will be submitted below<sup>41</sup> that the analogy between the two kinds of estoppel is (to say the least) imperfect and that it does not satisfactorily account for the rule that "promissory estoppel" gives rise to no new rights. The more plausible explanation for this restriction on the scope of the equitable doctrine is that the restriction is needed to prevent that doctrine from coming into head-on collision with the rules which lay down the requirements for the creation of a binding contract. The significant point in the present context is that the restriction preserves consistency between the equitable doctrine and the rule that a promise is not binding as a contract unless it is supported by consideration or made in a deed.<sup>42</sup> Combe v Combe has likewise been relied on in support of the view that the equitable doctrine could not give rise to a cause of action on a promise which lacked contractual force for want, not of consideration, but of certainty and contractual intention.<sup>43</sup> There seems, with respect, to be no reason in principle for distinguishing for the present purpose between promises which lack contractual effect for want of consideration and those which lack such effect for some other reason: the danger of collision between the equitable principle and the requirements for the creation of a contract exists, whatever the reason may be why a

<sup>34</sup> See Maharaj v Chand [1986] A.C. 898; cf. W J Alan & Co Ltd v El Nasr Export & Import Co [1972] Q.B. 189 (where the actual decision was that there was a variation supported by consideration: above, p.101).

<sup>35</sup> [1951] 2 K.B. 215. The point had been foreshadowed in Central London Property Trust Ltd v High Trees House Ltd [1947] K.B. 130 at 134.

<sup>36</sup> See above, p.91.

<sup>37</sup> Baird Textile Holdings Ltd v Marks & Spencer plc [2001] EWCA Civ 274; [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 737, at [99]; for the difficulty of distinguishing in that case between reliance and expectation loss, see ibid. at [81], [82]; for the distinction in general, see below, pp.937 to 941.

<sup>38</sup> See above, p.106.

<sup>39</sup> See below, p.403.

<sup>40</sup> Lop v Bouverie [1891] 3 Ch. 82 at 101; cf. ibid. at 105; below, p.403.

<sup>41</sup> See below, p.108, esp. n.47a.

<sup>42</sup> This appears to be the point that Denning L.J. had in mind in Combe v Combe [1951] 2 K.B. 215 at 219 when he said that he did not want the equitable principle to be "stretched too far lest it be endangered". cf. Brikom Investments Ltd v Carr [1979] Q.B. 467 at 486; Tool Metal Manufacturing Co Ltd v Tungsten Electric Co Ltd [1955] 1 W.L.R. 761 at 764; Beesly v Hallwood Estates Ltd [1960] 1 W.L.R. 549 at 561; Drexel Burnham Lambert International NV v El Nasr [1986] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 357 at 365 contrast Vaughan v Vaughan [1953] Q.B. 762 at 768; Denning, 15 M.L.R. 1.

<sup>43</sup> Baird Textile Holdings Ltd v Marks & Spencer plc, above, n.37, where Combe v Combe is cited at [34], and [87] in support of the view stated in the text above; though an alternative explanation for the result in the Baird case may be that, in the absence of certainty or contractual intention, the requirements for the operation of the equitable doctrine are simply not satisfied (above, pp.107–109), so that no question can arise as to its effects.

particular promise lacks contractual force.<sup>44</sup> The view that the equitable doctrine does not create new causes of action seems, indeed, to have been doubted<sup>45</sup> or ignored<sup>46</sup> by dicta in later cases; but the promises in these cases created new rights on the orthodox ground that they were supported by consideration.<sup>47</sup> Combe v Combe therefore still stands as the leading English<sup>48</sup> authority for the proposition that the doctrine creates no new rights and this proposition has been reaffirmed in a number of later cases.<sup>49</sup>

It appears to follow from this proposition that the equitable doctrine would not enable employees in a case like Stilk v Myrick<sup>50</sup> to recover the extra pay which they had been promised. It could, indeed, be argued<sup>51</sup> that in such a case the cause of action was the original contract of employment and that the subsequent agreement fell within the principle stated by Denning L.J. in Combe v Combe that consideration was not necessary for the “modification or discharge”<sup>52</sup> of a contract where the conditions required for the operation of the equitable doctrine were otherwise satisfied. This argument may derive some judicial support from a dictum that promissory estoppel “may enlarge the effect of an agreement”<sup>53</sup>; for this could mean that a promise of extra pay on facts such as those of Stilk v Myrick could create a cause of action even though it was not supported by consideration. This view is, however, hard to reconcile with the treatment of Stilk v Myrick in Williams v Roffey Bros<sup>54</sup> and with the fact that the decision in the latter case was based, not on estoppel,<sup>55</sup> but on the ground that the promise of extra pay there was supported by consideration. It is submitted that, when in Combe v Combe Denning L.J.

<sup>44</sup> In Azov Shipping Co v Baltic Shipping Co [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 159 at 175 it is suggested that the rule that promissory estoppel gives rise to no cause of action “is limited to the protection of consideration” and has “no general application in the field of estoppel”. The estoppel there under discussion was estoppel by representation, and the suggestion is, with respect, hard to reconcile with the statements in Low v Bouverie [1891] 3 Ch. 82 at 101, 105 referred to in n.40 above. Similar difficulty arises from the more tentative suggestion in Thornton Springer v NEM Insurance Ltd [2000] 2 All E.R. 489 at 519 that estoppel could lead to the “enforcement of the promise” where no contract was concluded for want of acceptance of an offer, though not where there was no contract for want of consideration. The former situation is one of estoppel by convention (as to which see below, p.119); and it is also, with respect hard to see why one answer should be given to the question whether the rule in Combe v Combe applies where the promise lacks contractual force for want of consideration and a different one where it lacks such force for want of an effective acceptance. Such a distinction seems also to be inconsistent with the readiness of the Court of Appeal in the Baird case (above at n.43) to apply the rule in Combe v Combe to an alleged promise which lacked contractual force for some reason other than want of consideration.

<sup>45</sup> Re Wyvern Developments Ltd [1974] 1 W.L.R. 1097 at 1104–1105; Atiyah, 38 M.L.R. 65 and see Allan, 79 L.Q.R. 238. The point was left open in The Henrik Sif [1982] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 456 at 466–468 (as to which see above, p.107 n.78).

<sup>46</sup> Evenden v Guildford City FC [1975] Q.B. 917 at 924, 926; Napier, [1976] C.L.J. 38; and see next note.

<sup>47</sup> e.g. Secretary of State for Employment v Globe Elastic Thread Co Ltd [1980] A.C. 506, overruling Evenden's case, above. Lord Wilberforce remarked at 518 that “To convert this [contract] into an estoppel is to turn the doctrine of promissory estoppel . . . upside down.”

<sup>48</sup> For other jurisdictions, see below, p.118.

<sup>49</sup> Argy Trading Development Co Ltd v Lapid Developments Ltd [1977] 1 W.L.R. 444 at 457; Aquaflite Ltd v Jaymar International Freight Consultants Ltd [1980] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 36; The Proodos C [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 390 at 394; James v Heim Galleries (1980) 256 E.G. 819 at 821; Brikom Investments Ltd v Seaforth [1981] 1 W.L.R. 863; cf. Taylor's Fashions Ltd v Liverpool Victoria Trustees Co Ltd [1982] Q.B. 133 n. at 152; Baird Textile Holdings Ltd v Marks & Spencer plc, above, n.43.

<sup>50</sup> (1809) 2 Camp. 317; 6 Esp. 129; above, p.94.

<sup>51</sup> See Hiscox v Outthwaite (No.3) [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 524 at 535.

<sup>52</sup> [1951] 2 K.B. 215 at 219.

<sup>53</sup> Baird Textile Holdings Ltd v Marks & Spencer plc [2001] EWCA Civ 274, [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 737, at [88].

<sup>54</sup> Williams v Roffey Bros & Nicholls (Contractors) Ltd [1991] 1 Q.B. 1, above, p.95.

<sup>55</sup> Though there are references to estoppel in that case at 13 (“not yet fully developed”) and 17–18 (this reference seems to be to estoppel by convention, the relevance of which to the case is doubted at p.123, n.43, below).

used the phrase “modification or discharge” he had in mind a modification which reduced a party’s obligations.<sup>56</sup> To apply it to a case in which it had the effect of increasing them necessarily amounts to giving the other party a new cause of action on a promise for which he has not provided any consideration; and Combe v Combe decides that this is not the effect of the equitable doctrine here under discussion.<sup>57</sup> A cause of action on a promise unsupported by consideration could, however, arise under other equitable doctrines: e.g. under the doctrine of “proprietary estoppel” to be discussed later in this Chapter.<sup>58</sup>

The essentially defensive nature of the equitable doctrine here under discussion is sometimes expressed by saying that it operates as a shield and not as a sword.<sup>59</sup> In other words, its normal effect is merely to protect the promisee against enforcement of the original obligation. But the metaphor is apt to mislead,<sup>60</sup> for the equitable doctrine can assist a claimant no less than a defendant. For example, a creditor may threaten to seize property on which a debt is secured, after having indicated that he would not insist on punctual payment. In such a case the debtor will, if the requirements of the equitable doctrine<sup>61</sup> are satisfied, be able to restrain the creditor’s threatened seizure by injunction.<sup>62</sup> Similarly, a seller may tender goods after the originally agreed delivery date, in reliance on the buyer’s promise to accept late delivery. If the buyer without justification refuses to accept the delivery, the seller will be entitled to damages.<sup>63</sup>

The equitable doctrine can also assist the promisee as claimant in that it may prevent the promisor from relying on a defence which would, but for the promise, have been available to him: e.g. the defence that a claim which the promisee has made against him is time-barred,<sup>64</sup> or that the claim has been satisfied,<sup>65</sup> or that the contractual document suffers from some minor formal defect, the effect of which is not specified by the statute imposing the formal requirement.<sup>66</sup> In such cases, the doctrine will, once again, enable the promisee to win an action which, but for the doctrine, he would have lost. But the promisee’s cause of action will have arisen independently of the promise which brought the equitable doctrine into operation: the effect of the doctrine is merely to prevent the promisor from relying on some circumstance which would, if the promise had not been made, have destroyed the promisee’s original cause of action. This situation must be distinguished from that in which the promisor’s “defence” is that (apart from the promise) the promisee’s alleged cause of action never existed at all. It is submitted that the equitable doctrine should not prevent the promisor from relying on a “defence” of this

<sup>56</sup> As in Central London Property Trust Ltd v High Trees House Ltd [1947] K.B. 130, below p.130, this being the case under discussion in Combe v Combe, above, at 219.

<sup>57</sup> The Proodos C [1980] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 390.

<sup>58</sup> See below, pp.134–149, especially at p.147.

<sup>59</sup> Combe v Combe [1951] 2 K.B. 215 at 224; The Proodos C [1980] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 390 at 391 (“time-honoured phrase”); Lark v Outhwaite [1991] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 132 at 142; Hiscox v Outhwaite (No.3) [1991] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 524 at 535.

<sup>60</sup> Azor Shipping Co v Baltic Shipping Co [1999] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 159 at 175 (“largely inaccurate”); Baird Textile Holdings Ltd v Marks & Spencer plc [2001] EWCA Civ 274; [2001] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 737 at [52] (“misleading aphorism”).

<sup>61</sup> i.e. those discussed at pp.107–111, above.

<sup>62</sup> Such a claim would have succeeded in Williams v Stern (1879) 5 Q.B.D. 409 (above, p.104), if the creditor’s conduct had been “inequitable.”

<sup>63</sup> cf. Hartley v Hymans [1920] 3 K.B. 475, applying the corresponding doctrine of common law forbearance (above, p.104); Johnson v Gore-Wood [2001] 1 All E.R. 481 at 508. And see Jackson, 81 L.Q.R. 223.

<sup>64</sup> See The Ion [1980] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 245; Hazel v Akhtar [2002] EWCA Civ 1883; The Times, January 7, 2002 at [25]. Commonwealth of Australia v Verwayen (1990) 170 C.L.R. 394 (discussed by Spence, 107 L.Q.R. 221) can be explained on this ground: see Baird Textile Holdings Ltd v Marks & Spencer plc, above, n.60 at [198].

<sup>65</sup> cf. below, p.403.

<sup>66</sup> Shah v Shah [2001] EWCA Civ 527; [2001] 4 All E.R. 138 at [31] (a case of estoppel by representation).

kind. If the doctrine were allowed to operate in this way, it would give the promisee a new cause of action based on the promise, even though the promise was not supported by consideration; and such a result would be inconsistent with the essentially defensive nature of the doctrine.<sup>67</sup>

This doctrine may also, somewhat paradoxically, deprive a promisee of a defence. This was the position in Smith v Lawson<sup>68</sup> where a lessor told the lessee that he would not trouble to collect the small rent which the lessee had previously paid. It was held that the lessee's rent-free occupation did not amount to adverse possession since the lessor was precluded by the doctrine of promissory estoppel from obtaining possession on the ground of non-payment of rent and that therefore the lessee could not rely on her occupation to defeat the lessor's claim for a declaration that he remained freehold owner of the land.

(f) ANALOGY WITH ESTOPPEL. The equitable doctrine has certain features in common with the doctrine of estoppel by representation.<sup>69</sup> Each is based on a representation followed by reliance on the part of the representee, and each is defensive in nature in that neither is capable in itself of giving rise to new rights. But there are also many differences between estoppel by representation and the equitable doctrine, even though the latter is now often referred to as a kind of estoppel.<sup>70</sup> These differences are reflected in the statement of Millett L.J. that "the attempt . . . to demonstrate that all estoppels . . . are now subsumed in the single and all-embracing estoppel by representation and that they are all governed by the same principle"<sup>71</sup> has "never won general acceptance".<sup>72</sup> The various kinds of estoppel discussed in this book<sup>73</sup> are linked only by the broadest of general principles, that a person's taking of inconsistent positions is in some situations to be discouraged by law; in this sense it can be said that "unconscionability . . . provides the link between them".<sup>74</sup> But they nevertheless have "separate requirements and different terrains of application"<sup>75</sup> and therefore "cannot be accommodated within a single principle".<sup>76</sup> An important difference between the two types of estoppel at this stage under discussion<sup>77</sup> relates to the nature of the representations required to bring them into operation. A representation of intention or a promise suffices for the purpose of the equitable doctrine; for this reason, and because the doctrine was developed in

<sup>67</sup> cf. the criticism (above, p.107) of The Henrik Sif [1982] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 456.

<sup>68</sup> (1998) 75 P. & C.R. 466.

<sup>69</sup> See below, p.403.

<sup>70</sup> Below, n.78.

<sup>71</sup> The reference seems to be to Lord Denning M.R.'s statement in Amalgamated Investment & Property Co Ltd v Texas Commerce International Bank Ltd [1982] 2 Q.B. 73 at 122 ("one general principle shorn of limitations"). The passage containing these words is cited with apparent approval by Lord Bingham in Johnson v Gore Wood & Co [2001] 1 All E.R. 481 at 501 but it is not clear whether this citation (a) is part of Lord Bingham's ratio in that case or (b) the apparent approval is shared by Lords Hutton and Cooke who agree generally with the part of Lord Bingham's speech in which it occurs; cf. also the reference, in another context, to a possible "move to a more uniform doctrine of estoppel" in Scottish Equitable plc v Derby [2001] EWCA Civ 369 at [48]; [2001] 3 All E.R. 818.

<sup>72</sup> First National Bank plc v Thomson [1996] Ch. 231 at 236; cf. The Indian Endurance (No.2) [1998] A.C. 878 at 913; National Westminster Bank plc v Somer [2001] 1 All E.R. 198 at [38], [39] dicta in Baird Textile Holdings Ltd v Marks & Spencer plc [2001] EWCA Civ 274; [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 737 at [38, 50, 83, 84] perhaps incline in the other direction but cannot be regarded as conclusive.

<sup>73</sup> i.e., estoppel by representation (below, p.403) promissory estoppel (discussed here), estoppel by convention (below, pp.119 et seq.) and proprietary estoppel (below, pp.134 et seq.).

<sup>74</sup> Johnson v Gore Wood & Co [2001] 1 All E.R. 481 at 508.

<sup>75</sup> The Indian Endurance (No.2) [1998] A.C. 878 at 914, distinguishing between estoppels by convention and by acquiescence.

<sup>76</sup> Johnson v Gore Wood & Co [2001] 1 All E.R. 481 at 508.

<sup>77</sup> i.e., estoppel by representation and promissory estoppel.

equity, it is often referred to as “promissory” or “equitable” estoppel.<sup>78</sup> True estoppel by representation, on the other hand, cannot be based on a representation of intention, but only on one of existing fact. This rule was laid down in Jorden v Money,<sup>79</sup> where it was held that a representation by a creditor that he would not enforce a bond did not give rise to such an estoppel. This difference between estoppel by representation and the equitable doctrine cannot be explained by saying that the requirement of a representation of existing fact did not exist in equity but only at common law.<sup>80</sup> Jorden v Money was an appeal from the Court of Appeal in Chancery and was, no less than Hughes v Metropolitan Ry,<sup>81</sup> decided on equitable principles; and the requirement of a representation of existing fact is stated in many equity cases.<sup>82</sup> There are, moreover, other significant differences between the two doctrines. The equitable doctrine may operate even though there is no such “detriment” as is required to bring the doctrine of estoppel by representation into play.<sup>83</sup> And the effect of the equitable doctrine is only to suspend rights,<sup>84</sup> while estoppel by representation, where it operates, has a permanent effect. There is, finally, a difference in the legal nature of the two doctrines. Estoppel by representation prevents a party from establishing facts: i.e. from alleging that the facts represented by him are untrue, even where that is actually the case.<sup>85</sup> The equitable <sup>78</sup> e.g. Woodhouse AC Israel Cocoa Ltd v Nigerian Produce Marketing Co Ltd [1972] A.C. 741 at 758; Ogilvy v Hope-Davies [1976] 1 All E.R. 683 at 689; Ets. Soules & Cie v International Trade Development Co Ltd [1980] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 129 at 133; The Ion [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 245 at 250; Peter Cremer v Granaria BV [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 583 at 587; The Post Chaser [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 695 at 700; The Kanchenjunga [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 391 at 398; Roebuck v Mungovin [1994] 2 A.C. 224 at 235. Contrast Brikom Investments Ltd v Carr [1979] Q.B. 467 at 485, 489, where Roskill L.J. prefers to refer simply to the principle of Hughes v Metropolitan Ry (1877) 2 App.Cas. 439. Amherst v James Walker Goldsmiths & Silversmiths Ltd [1983] Ch. 305 at 316 somewhat puzzlingly seems to distinguish between “promissory” and “equitable” estoppel. Terminological difficulty is compounded by the occasional use of the phrase “equitable estoppel” to refer to true estoppel by representation: see below, n.80.

<sup>79</sup> (1854) 5 H.L.C. 185; criticised by Jackson, 81 L.Q.R. 84; cf. Halliwell, 5 L.S. 15. Atiyah (above, p.70, n.31, pp.56–61), argues that Jorden v Money does not support the proposition for which it is usually cited, but that there was a contract in the case, which was unenforceable for want of written evidence. But no such contract was alleged by the claimant: as Lord Cranworth said at 215, “it is put entirely on the ground of misrepresentation.” The orthodox view is also unequivocally supported by Lord Selborne (who was counsel in Jorden v Money) in his speech in Maddison v Alderson (1883) 8 App.Cas. 467, 473. For more recent statements of the rule that there must be a representation of fact see Argy Trading Development Co Ltd v Lapid Development Ltd [1977] 1 W.L.R. 444 at 450; Spence v Shell (1980) 256 E.G. 55 at 63; TCB Ltd v Gray [1986] Ch. 621 at 634, affirmed [1987] Ch. 458; Roebuck v Mungovin [1994] 2 A.C. 224 at 235; so-called “estoppel by convention” (below, p.119) is similarly based on an assumption as to an existing state of fact or (at least to some extent) of “law” see below, p.119 at n.56 and p.111 at n.69a.

<sup>80</sup> Estoppel by representation of fact (below, p.403) was recognised at common law at least as long ago as Freeman v Cooke (1848) 2 Ex. 654; but sometimes this form of estoppel is confusingly referred to as “equitable estoppel”: e.g. in Lombard North Central plc v Stobart [1990] Tr.L.R. 105 at 107. In that case, an estoppel arose from a finance company's statement that no more than £1,003 was due under a conditional sale, when the actual sum due was nearly five times as much. This statement was clearly a representation of fact rather than a promise.

<sup>81</sup> (1877) 2 App.Cas. 439; above, p.105.

<sup>82</sup> Pigott v Stratton (1859) 1 D.F. & J. 33 at 51; Citizens' Bank of Louisiana v First National Bank of New Orleans (1873) L.R. 6 H.L. 352 at 360; Maddison v Alderson (1883) 8 App.Cas. 467 at 473; Chadwick v Manning [1896] A.C. 231 at 238.

<sup>83</sup> See above, p.110.

<sup>84</sup> See above, p.111.

<sup>85</sup> This point accounts for the rule that estoppel by representation does not give rise to a cause of action: below p.403. If, for example, A represents to B that B's goods are in C's possession, the fact that A is estopped from denying the truth of that representation does not turn A into a bailee of those goods. The rule that promissory estoppel does not give rise to a cause of action is based on different grounds explained at p.112, above.

doctrine, by contrast, has nothing to do with proof of facts; it is concerned with the legal effects of a promise. There was, for example, no dispute about facts, in Hughes v Metropolitan Ry<sup>86</sup>: the issue was not whether the repairs had been done or whether the landlord had promised or represented that he would not forfeit the lease; it was simply whether he was (to some extent, at least) bound by that promise.

(g) ANALOGY WITH WAIVER. It is submitted that the characteristics just described indicate that the equitable doctrine is not truly analogous with estoppel by representation. As Denning J. (a leading proponent of the modern equitable doctrine) has pointed out, the authorities which support it “although they are said to be cases of estoppel, are not really such”.<sup>87</sup> The doctrine has closer affinities with the common law rules of waiver in the sense of forbearance: both are based on promises, or representations of intention; both are suspensive (rather than extinctive) in effect and both are concerned with the legal effects of promises rather than with proof of disputed facts. The main difference between them is that the equitable doctrine avoids the difficulties encountered at common law in distinguishing between a variation and a forbearance.<sup>88</sup>

There is now much judicial support for these submissions. Lord Pearson has said that “promissory estoppel” was “far removed from the familiar estoppel by representation of fact and seems . . . to be more like waiver of contractual rights”.<sup>89</sup> In many later cases “waiver” and “promissory estoppel” (or the rule in Hughes v Metropolitan Ry)<sup>90</sup> are treated as substantially similar doctrines.<sup>91</sup> The two expressions have been judicially described as “two ways of saying exactly the same thing”<sup>92</sup>; and, although the use of terminology has not been wholly consistent,<sup>93</sup> the courts often use the two expressions interchangeably when discussing situations in which it is alleged that one party has indicated that he will not enforce his strict legal rights against the other. This usage

<sup>86</sup> (1877) 2 App. Cas. 439, above, p.105. The application of the principle of this case in Central London Property Trust Ltd v High Trees House Ltd [1947] K.B. 130 (below p.131) likewise did not give rise to any dispute about facts.

<sup>87</sup> Central London Property Trust Ltd v High Trees House Ltd [1947] K.B. 130 at 134; below, p.121.

<sup>88</sup> See above, pp.103–105.

<sup>89</sup> Woodhouse AC Israel Cocoa Ltd v Nigerian Produce Marketing Co Ltd [1972] A.C. 741 at 762.

<sup>90</sup> (1877) 2 App.Cas. 439; above, p.105.

<sup>91</sup> Ogilvy v Hope-Davies [1976] 1 All E.R. 683 at 688–689; Finagrain SA Geneva v p.Kruse Hamburg [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 508 at 534; Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH v C. Mackprang Jr [1979] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 221 at 226; Brikom Investments Ltd v Carr [1979] Q.B. 467 at 488, 489, 490; Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH v Westzucker GmbH [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 207 at 212–213; Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH v Mackprang Jr [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 292 at 298; Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH v Bunge Corp. [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 476 at 484; BICC Ltd v Burndy Corp. [1985] Ch. 232 at 253; The Chemical Venture [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 509 at 521.

<sup>92</sup> Prosper Homes v Hambro's Bank Executor & Trustee Co (1979) 39 P. & C.R. 395 at 401; The Nerano [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 1 at 6.

<sup>93</sup> For suggestions that “waiver” may be distinguishable from the equitable doctrine, see W.J. Alan & Co Ltd v El Nasr Export Co [1972] 2 Q.B. 189 at 212; The Ion [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 245 at 249–250; Brikom Investments Ltd v Carr [1979] Q.B. 467 at 485, 489 (perhaps because there the “waiver” amounted to a variation supported by consideration). In The Superhulls Cover Case (No.2) [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 431 at 449 “waiver” is distinguished from “equitable estoppel” on the ground that the former doctrine requires the party who is alleged to have lost his rights to know the material facts, while the latter is not subject to any such requirements. But when “waiver” is said to be subject to this requirement, the reference is to “waiver” in the sense of election between remedies (below, p.811) and not to “waiver” in the sense of relinquishing rights; and it is this latter type of waiver which is here under discussion. The reference in Union Eagle Ltd v Golden Achievements Ltd [1997] A.C. 514 at 518 to “waiver or estoppel” is likewise to election between remedies. This was also the type of “waiver” under consideration in Oliver Ashworth (Holdings) Ltd v Ballard (Kent) Ltd [2000] Ch. 12 at 27, 28 and in The Happy Day [2002] EWCA Civ 1068, [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 487 at [67].

indicates that the equitable doctrine is more closely akin to waiver (in the sense of forbearance) than to true estoppel by representation of fact.

(h) DISTINGUISHED FROM PROMISES SUPPORTED BY CONSIDERATION. Under the equitable doctrine, certain limited effects are given to a promise without consideration. But it is nevertheless in the interests of the promisee to show, if he can, that he did provide consideration so that the promise amounted to a contractually binding variation. Such proof will free him from the many rules that restrict the scope of the equitable doctrine: he need not then show that he has “relied” on the promise, or that it would be “inequitable” for the other party to go back on it; the variation will permanently affect the rights of the promisor and not merely suspend them (unless it is expressed so as to have only a temporary effect); and a contractual variation can not only reduce or extinguish existing rights but also create new ones. Where parties agree to modify an existing contract, the equitable doctrine (and its common law counterpart of waiver) may have reduced, but they have by no means eliminated, the practical importance of the doctrine of consideration.

(i) OTHER JURISDICTIONS. The English view that the doctrine of promissory estoppel gives rise to no cause of action has not been followed in other common law jurisdictions. In the United States, a similar doctrine has long been regarded as being capable of creating new rights, though both the existence and the content of the resulting rights are matters for the discretion of the courts.<sup>94</sup> A line of Australian cases likewise supports the view that promises or representations which, for want of consideration or of contractual intention, lack contractual force may nevertheless be enforceable as if they were binding contracts. The leading Australian case is Waltons Stores (Interstate) Ltd v Maher,<sup>95</sup> where A, a prospective lessor of business premises, did demolition and building work on the premises while the agreement for the lease lacked contractual force because it was still subject to contract<sup>96</sup>; he had done so to meet the prospective lessee’s (B’s) requirements and on the assumption, of which B must have known, that a binding contract would come into existence. B withdrew from the agreement (relying on his solicitor’s advice that he was not bound by it); and it was held that he was estopped from denying that a contract had come into existence and that the agreement for the lease was therefore specifically enforceable against him. The reasoning of the High Court is complex, but the basis of the decision appears to be that B had knowingly induced A to believe that a binding contract would come into existence by exchange of contracts<sup>97</sup> and to act in reasonable reliance on that belief. In English law, such reliance is, in appropriate circumstances, capable of giving rise to a variety of remedies, even where the promise or representation which induces it lacks contractual force. Sometimes the remedy may be the enforcement of the promise according to its terms, as in cases of proprietary estoppel (to be discussed later in this Chapter)<sup>98</sup>; sometimes it may be an award of the reasonable value of work done in the belief that a contract had, or would, come into existence.<sup>99</sup> Neither of these remedies would have been available in the Waltons Stores case since <sup>94</sup> Restatement, Contracts §90 and Restatement 2d, Contracts §90. In English law, the need to use the doctrine to give rise to a cause of action is less acute than in the US, where the courts are less ready than the English courts to “invent” consideration (above, p.71).

<sup>95</sup> (1988) 164 C.L.R. 387; Duthie, 104 L.Q.R. 362; Sutton, 1 J.C.L. 205.

<sup>96</sup> See above, p.52.

<sup>97</sup> For this requirement, see above, p.53.

<sup>98</sup> e.g., in Dillwyn v Llewelyn (1862) 4 D.F. & G. 517, below, p.135.

<sup>99</sup> e.g., in William Lacey (Hounslow) Ltd v Davis [1954] 1 Q.B. 428; Countrywide Communications Ltd v ICL Pathways Ltd [2000] C.L.C. 325; cf. below, p.989.

proprietary estoppel does not arise where work is done on the promisee's (rather than on the promisor's) land<sup>1</sup> and a claim for the reasonable value of the claimant's work is not available where he is aware of the fact that no binding agreement has come into existence and so takes the risk that the negotiations may fail.<sup>2</sup> Even where the second of these objections can be overcome (e.g. on the ground that the work was done at the request of the promisor or as a result of his assurance that an exchange of contracts would take place) it does not follow that the appropriate remedy is enforcement of the contract in its terms: if the basis of the Australian doctrine is reliance induced by the promisor, compensation for reliance loss would appear to be the more appropriate remedy. The Australian doctrine also gives rise to the difficulties that there appear to be no clear limits to its scope, and that this lack of clarity is a regrettable source of uncertainty. The doctrine is, moreover, hard to reconcile with a number of fundamental principles of English law, such as the non-enforceability of informal gratuitous promises (even if relied on)<sup>3</sup> and the rule that there is no right to damages for a wholly innocent non-contractual misrepresentation.<sup>4</sup> While on the facts of some of the cases in which the Australian doctrine has been applied the same conclusions would probably be reached in English law on other grounds,<sup>5</sup> the broad doctrine remains, in the present context, inconsistent with the view that the English doctrine of promissory estoppel (like that of estoppel by representation)<sup>6</sup> does not give rise to a cause of action in the sense of entitling the promisee to enforce a promise in its terms, even though it was unsupported by consideration. It is true that other forms of estoppel, such as proprietary estoppel, may produce this result; but the scope of that doctrine is limited in many important ways<sup>7</sup> and the law would present an incongruous appearance if those limits could be outflanked simply by invoking the broader Australian doctrine.

(j) DISTINGUISHED FROM ESTOPPEL BY CONVENTION. Estoppel by convention may arise where both<sup>8</sup> parties to a transaction "act on an assumed state of facts or law,"<sup>9</sup> the assumption being either shared by both or made by one and acquiesced in by the other".<sup>10</sup> The parties are then precluded from denying the truth of that assumption, if <sup>1</sup> See below, p.139; proprietary estoppel would also probably have been excluded on the ground that the prospective lessor had no belief that a right had been or would be created in his favour while the agreement remained "subject to contract": see Attorney-General of Hong Kong v Humphreys Estates (Queens Gardens) [1987] 1 A.C. 114; this obstacle can be overcome if one party induces the other to believe that he will not withdraw: see ibid. at 124; but this qualification can scarcely enable the party by whom the interest in property is to be created to rely on proprietary estoppel.

<sup>2</sup> Regalian Properties plc v London Dockland Development Corp [1995] 1 W.L.R. 212.

<sup>3</sup> See above, p.67.

<sup>4</sup> e.g., Oscar Chess Ltd v Williams [1957] 1 W.L.R. 370, below, p.354.

<sup>5</sup> See, for example, Commonwealth of Australia v Verwayen (1990) 179 C.L.R. 394, which could be explained in English law on the ground stated in n.64 on p.114, above.

<sup>6</sup> Low v Bouverie [1891] 3 Ch. 82; Clipper Maritime Ltd v Shirlstar Container Transport Ltd (The Anemone) [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 547 at 557.

<sup>7</sup> e.g. by the requirements that the promisee must believe that legal rights have been, or will be, created in his favour, and that these are rights in or over the promisor's land: see below, pp.138-140.

<sup>8</sup> There can be no such estoppel where one party is not yet in existence: see Rover International Ltd v Cannon Film Sales Ltd [1987] B.C.L.C. 540, revsd. in part on other grounds [1989] 1 W.L.R. 912 (company not yet formed: see below, pp.734-736).

<sup>9</sup> See below, p.121.

<sup>10</sup> The Indian Endurance (No.2) [1998] A.C. 878 at 913; Spencer Bower and Turner, Estoppel by Representation (3rd ed. 1977), p.157; for qualification of this formulation, see The Vistafford [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 343 at 351; and see Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc v Maclaine Watson & Co Ltd [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 570 at 596; Phillip Collins Ltd v Davis [2000] 3 All E.R. 808 at 823 (where there was no common assumption or acquiescence); Dawson, 9 Legal Studies 16.

it would be unjust or “unconscionable”<sup>11</sup> to allow them (or one of them) to go back on it.<sup>12</sup> Such an estoppel differs from estoppel by representation and from promissory estoppel<sup>13</sup> in that it does not depend on any “clear and unequivocal” representation or promise<sup>14</sup>; it can arise where the assumption was based on a mistake spontaneously made by the party relying on it, and acquiesced in by the other party. Estoppel by convention has also been said to arise out of an express agreement by which the parties had compromised a disputed claim<sup>15</sup>; but where such a compromise is supported by consideration in accordance with the principles discussed earlier in this Chapter<sup>16</sup> it is binding as a contract,<sup>17</sup> so that there is, it is submitted, no need to rely on estoppel by convention in order to establish the facts in dispute.

(i) Requirements. Estoppel by convention was discussed in Amalgamated Investment & Property Co Ltd v Texas Commerce International Bank Ltd,<sup>18</sup> where A had negotiated with the X Bank for a loan to B (one of A’s subsidiaries) for the purpose of acquiring and developing a property in the Bahamas. It was agreed that the loan was to be secured by a mortgage on that property and also by a guarantee from A. In the guarantee, A promised the X Bank, in consideration of the Bank’s giving credit to B, to “pay you . . . all moneys . . . due . . . to you” from B. This was an inappropriate form of words since the loan to B was made, not directly by the X Bank, but by one of its subsidiaries, the Y Bank, with money provided by the X Bank: hence, if the guarantee were read literally, it would not apply to the loan since no money was due from B to the X Bank. The Court of Appeal, however, took the view that this literal interpretation would defeat the intention of the parties, and held that, on its true construction, the guarantee applied to the loan made by the Y Bank.<sup>19</sup> But even if the guarantee did not, on its true construction, produce this result, A was estopped from denying that the guarantee covered the loan by the Y Bank, since, when negotiating the loan, A and the X Bank had assumed that the guarantee did cover it; and since the X Bank continued subsequently to act on that assumption<sup>20</sup> in granting various indulgences to A in respect of the loan to B and of another loan made directly by the X Bank to A. It made no difference that the assumption was not induced by any representation<sup>21</sup> made by A but originated in the

<sup>11</sup> Crédit Suisse v Borough Council of Allerdale [1995] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 315 at 367–370, affirmed on other grounds [1997] Q.B. 362.

<sup>12</sup> The Vistafjord [1988] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 343, 352; Hiscox v Outhwaite [1992] 1 A.C. 562, affirmed on other grounds ibid. 585; Republic of India v India SS Co Ltd (No.2) [1998] A.C. 878 at 913.

<sup>13</sup> cf. above p.115 at nn.71 and 73 for the distinction between various kinds of estoppel.

<sup>14</sup> Troop v Gibson (1986) 277 E.G. 1134; Baird Textile Holdings Ltd v Marks & Spencer plc [2001] EWCA Civ 274, [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 737 at [84]; in Commercial Union Assurance plc v Sun Alliance Assurance Group plc [1992] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 475 at 481 estoppel by convention was rejected on the ground that the evidence did not “clearly and unequivocally establish the agreement of the parties on the relevant conventional interpretation”; but this statement seems to relate to quantum of proof rather than to the definition of the facts to be proved.

<sup>15</sup> Colchester BC v Smith [1992] Ch. 421 at 434.

<sup>16</sup> See above, p.87.

<sup>17</sup> Colchester BC v Smith, above, at 435.

<sup>18</sup> [1982] Q.B. 84.

<sup>19</sup> cf. on the issue of construction, TCB Ltd v Gray [1987] Ch. 458; Bank of Scotland v Wright [1990] B.C.C. 663.

<sup>20</sup> Contrast Crédit Suisse v Borough Council of Allerdale [1996] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 315 at 367, where this requirement was not satisfied as the conduct of the party alleged to be estopped had not “influenced the mind” of the other party; affirmed on other grounds [1997] Q.B. 362.

<sup>21</sup> A dictum in the Crédit Suisse case, above, at 367 which appears to treat representation as a requirement of estoppel by convention is, with respect, inconsistent with the treatment of that doctrine in the Amalgamated Investment case.

X Bank's own mistake: the estoppel was not one by representation but by convention.<sup>22</sup> The same principle was applied in The Vistafjord<sup>23</sup> where an agreement for the charter of a cruise ship had been negotiated by agents on behalf of the owners. Both the agents and the owners throughout believed that commission on this transaction would be payable under an earlier agreement but, on its true construction, this agreement gave no such rights to the agents. It was held that estoppel by convention precluded the owners from relying on the true construction of the earlier agreement, so that the agents were justified in retaining the amount of the commission out of sums received by them from the charterers.

To give rise to an estoppel by convention, the mistaken assumption of the party claiming the benefit of the estoppel must, however, have been shared or acquiesced in by the party alleged to be estopped; and both parties must have conducted themselves on the basis of such a shared assumption: the estoppel "requires communications to pass across the line between the parties. It is not enough that each of two parties acts on an assumption not communicated to the other".<sup>24</sup> Such communication may be effected by the conduct of one party, known to the other.<sup>25</sup> But no estoppel by convention arose where each party spontaneously made a different mistake and there was no subsequent conduct by the party alleged to be estopped from which any acquiescence in the other party's mistaken assumption could be inferred.<sup>26</sup> Nor can a party (A) invoke such an estoppel to prevent the other (B) from denying facts alleged to have been agreed between A and B if A has later withdrawn from that agreement; for in the light of A's withdrawal it is no longer unjust to allow B to rely on the true state of affairs.<sup>27</sup>

(ii) Assumption of law. It is often said that the assumption giving rise to an estoppel by convention can be one of "fact of law".<sup>28</sup> The point of reference to "law" in this formulation appears to be to include within the scope of the doctrine assumptions about the construction of a contract<sup>29</sup>; for, since the construction of a contract is often said to be a matter of "law",<sup>30</sup> all such assumptions would be excluded from the scope of the doctrine (and its scope be unduly narrowed) if it did not include at least assumption of this kind. The question whether estoppel by convention could be based on assumptions of "law" in a wider sense was the subject of conflicting views in Johnson v Gore-Wood

<sup>22</sup> cf. The Leila [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 172; and see below, n.26.

<sup>23</sup> [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 343; Thornton Springer v NEM Insurance Co Ltd [2000] 2 All E.R. 489 at 516–518; cf. also Kenneth Allison Ltd v A.E. Limehouse & Co [1992] 2 A.C. 105 at 127, per Lord Goff. The other members of the House of Lords took the view that there was an actual agreement (to accept service of a writ) which was legally effective even though the requirements of the Rules of the Supreme Court (with regard to personal service) had not been complied with.

<sup>24</sup> The Captain Gregos (No.2) [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 395 at 405, following The August P Leonhardt [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 28 at 35; Hiscox v Outhwaite (No.3) [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 524 at 533; The Indian Endurance (No.2) [1998] A.C. 878 at 913.

<sup>25</sup> As in The Vistafjord [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 343 at 351 ("very clear conduct crossing the line . . . of which the other party was fully cognisant").

<sup>26</sup> The August P Leonhardt [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 28, reversing [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 332, which had been followed in The Leila, above, n.22. The status of The Leila is therefore in doubt but the two cases can be reconciled on the ground that in The Leila there was, while in The August P Leonhardt there was not, conduct by the party alleged to be estopped from which acquiescence in the other party's mistaken belief could be inferred.

<sup>27</sup> Gloyne v Richardson [2001] EWCA Civ 716, [2001] 2 B.C.L.C. 669 at [41].

<sup>28</sup> Amalgamated Investment case [1982] 2 Q.B. 84 at 122, 126; The Vistafjord [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 343 at 351; Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc v MacLaine Watson & Co Ltd [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 570 at 596; The Indian Endurance (No.2) [1988] A.C. 878 at 913.

<sup>29</sup> Such an assumption could also be called one of "private right" and hence of fact: below, pp.314, 334.

<sup>30</sup> See below, pp.334, 923.

& Co.<sup>31</sup> In that case a company had brought a claim for professional negligence against a firm of solicitors who were told that a further claim based on the same negligence would be made against them by the company's managing director. The company's claim was settled on terms which limited some of the director's personal claims against the solicitor and when the director later brought other claims against the solicitors, it was held that this was not an abuse of process. Lord Bingham based this conclusion in part<sup>32</sup> on estoppel by convention: in his view, the terms of the settlement were based on the common assumption that it would not be an abuse of process for the director to pursue the claims which he had in fact brought; and it would be unfair to allow the solicitors to go back on this assumption. All the members of the House of Lords agreed with Lord Bingham's conclusion that there was no abuse of process; but Lord Goff was "reluctant to proceed on estoppel by convention"<sup>33</sup> as the common assumption was in his view one of law, a type of assumption which in his view did not give rise to this form of estoppel; while Lord Millett was equally reluctant to "put it on the ground of estoppel by convention" as he had "some difficulty in discerning a common assumption".<sup>34</sup> Lord Millett's difficulty is an entirely factual one but Lord Goff's raises a more difficult issue of principle. Support for the view that estoppel by convention can be based on a common assumption of law is admittedly based only on dicta<sup>35</sup>; but it is arguable that those dicta gain support from cases concerned with mistakes (and possibly misrepresentations) of law. In these fields, the distinction between matters of "law" and of "fact" has proved hard to draw and is now, at least in some context, discredited.<sup>36</sup> On the other hand, the extension of estoppel by convention to all common assumptions of "law" could undermine the security of commercial transactions by allowing a party to resist enforcement merely on account of an assumption as to the legal effect of a contract the terms or meaning of which were not in dispute; and this is a type of assumption which, on the authorities, does not give rise to such an estoppel.<sup>37</sup>

(iii) Effect of estoppel by convention. The effect of this form of estoppel is to preclude a party from denying the agreed or common assumption of fact or as to the meaning of a document<sup>38</sup> or (at least to the extent suggested above<sup>39</sup>) of law. One such assumption may be that a particular promise has been made<sup>40</sup>; thus it is possible to describe the result in the Amalgamated Investment & Property case by saying that A was estopped from denying that it had promised the X Bank to repay any sum left unpaid by B to the Y Bank. But, although estoppel by convention may thus take effect in relation to a promise, it is quite different in its legal nature<sup>41</sup> from promissory estoppel. In cases of promissory estoppel, the promisor or representor is not estopped from denying that the promise or representation has been made: on the contrary, this must be proved to establish that kind of estoppel, which is concerned with the legal effects of a promise that has been shown to exist. Where, on the other hand, the requirements of estoppel by convention are satisfied, then this type of estoppel operates to prevent a party from

<sup>31</sup> [2001] 1 All E.R. 481.

<sup>32</sup> See ibid. at 501–502 for an alternative ground for Lord Bingham's decision. Lords Cooke and Hutton agreed with Lord Bingham on the "abuse of process" point but without referring to estoppel by convention.

<sup>33</sup> ibid. at 508.

<sup>34</sup> ibid. at 527.

<sup>35</sup> See above, p.119 at n.9; above, n.28.

<sup>36</sup> See below, pp.313–314, 333.

<sup>37</sup> See below, p.124.

<sup>38</sup> Amalgamated Investment & Property case [1982] 2 Q.B. 84 at 126, 130.

<sup>39</sup> See above, pp.121–122.

<sup>40</sup> Such an assumption is one of fact (and not as to the future).

<sup>41</sup> See above, p.116.

denying a fact,<sup>42</sup> i.e. that the assumed promise has been made, or that a promise contains the assumed term: it does not specify the legal effects of the assumed promise or term.<sup>43</sup> In the Amalgamated Investment & Property case, once A was estopped from denying the existence of the promise described above, no question arose as to its legal validity. There could be no doubt that that promise was supported by consideration<sup>44</sup>: this was provided by the X Bank in making funds available to the Y Bank to enable it to make a loan to B, and in inducing the Y Bank to make that loan.<sup>45</sup> Where the assumed promise is one that would, if actually made, have been unsupported by consideration, both types of estoppel can, however, operate in the same case: estoppel by convention to establish the existence of the promise, and promissory estoppel to determine its legal effect.<sup>46</sup>

Estoppel by convention does not operate prospectively, so that “once the common assumption is revealed to be erroneous the estoppel will not apply to future dealings”.<sup>47</sup>

(iv) Whether estoppel by convention can create new rights. We have seen that promissory estoppel does not “create new causes of action where none existed before”<sup>48</sup>; and the same principle applies to estoppel by representation.<sup>49</sup> Estoppel by convention resembles estoppel by representation in that it can prevent a party from denying existing facts, and one would therefore expect estoppel by convention to operate only where its effect was defensive in substance. The question whether estoppel by convention is so limited was discussed in the Amalgamated Investment & Property case where, however, it was not necessary to decide the point. The action was brought because the X Bank had sought to apply money due from it to A under another transaction in discharge of A’s alleged liability under A’s guarantee of B’s debt. Hence the effect of the estoppel was to provide the X Bank with a defence to A’s claim for a declaration that it was not entitled to apply the money in that way. Eveleigh L.J. said: “I do not think that the bank could have succeeded in a claim on the guarantee itself.”<sup>50</sup> Brandon L.J. seems to have taken the view that the bank could have sued on the guarantee, but to have based that view on the ground that the loan agreement between A and the X Bank imposed an obligation on A to give the guarantee: hence it was that agreement, and not the estoppel, which would have given rise to the X Bank’s cause of action, if it had sued on the guarantee.<sup>51</sup> Lord Denning M.R. expressed the principle of estoppel by convention in such a way as to enable it to give rise to a cause of action<sup>52</sup>; but he was alone in stating the principle so

<sup>42</sup> In this respect its legal nature resembles that of estoppel by representation: see above, p.116.

<sup>43</sup> The Vistaford [1988] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 343 at 351 (“not dependent on contract but on common assumption”). For this reason the citation in Williams v Roffey Bros & Nicholls (Contractors) Ltd [1991] 1 Q.B. 1 at 17–18 of the Amalgamated Investment & Property case seems, with respect, to be of doubtful relevance. In the Williams case there was no doubt that the promise had been made; and the actual decision was that it was supported by consideration and thus binding contractually: above, p.95.

<sup>44</sup> This was also true in The Vistaford [1988] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 343, above, p.121.

<sup>45</sup> It is enough that consideration moved from the promisee (the X Bank): above, p.81.

<sup>46</sup> e.g. (apparently) Troop v Gibson (1986) 277 E.G. 1134.

<sup>47</sup> Hiscox v Outthwaite [1992] A.C. 562 at 575, per Lord Donaldson M.R. (affirmed ibid. at 585 on other grounds); Phillip Collins Ltd v Davis [2000] 3 All E.R. 808 at 823.

<sup>48</sup> Combe v Combe [1951] 2 K.B. 215 at 219; above, p.112.

<sup>49</sup> See above, p.112; below, p.403.

<sup>50</sup> [1982] Q.B. 84 at 126.

<sup>51</sup> ibid. at 132. For a different interpretation of Brandon L.J.’s judgment, see Baird Textile Holdings Ltd v Marks & Spencer plc [2001] EWCA Civ 274; [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 737, at [84]. The alleged estoppel in the Baird case was regarded at first instance as one “by convention” (at [20]) but it is far from clear whether the Court of Appeal so regarded it.

<sup>52</sup> [1982] Q.B. 84 at 122. A similar view may be hinted at in Williams v Roffey Bros & Nicholls (Contractors) Ltd [1991] 1 Q.B. 1 at 17–18; but see above, n.43.

broadly.<sup>53</sup> In The Vistafjord<sup>54</sup> the estoppel similarly operated defensively. This factor was not stressed in the judgments, but there is no suggestion in them that in this respect estoppel by convention differs from estoppel by representation, which does not, of itself, give rise to a cause of action.<sup>55</sup> It is indeed, possible for estoppel by convention (as it is for promissory estoppel<sup>56</sup> and estoppel by representation) to deprive the defendant of a defence and so to enable the claimant to win an action which otherwise he would have lost<sup>57</sup>; but even in such cases the estoppel does not create the cause of action, for the facts giving rise to the cause of action exist independently of the estoppel.<sup>58</sup> No other authority squarely supports the view that estoppel by convention can, of itself, create a new cause of action; and the present position seems to be that it cannot, any more than promissory estoppel or estoppel by representation, produce this effect.<sup>59</sup>

(v) Invalidity of assumed term. A party is not liable on the basis of estoppel by convention where the alleged agreement would, if concluded, have been ineffective for want of contractual intention,<sup>60</sup> or on account of a formal defect<sup>61</sup> (other than a minor one<sup>62</sup>) or where the term in respect of which such an estoppel is alleged to operate would, if actually incorporated in the contract, have been invalid<sup>63</sup>; nor does such an estoppel prevent a party from relying on the true legal effect (as opposed to the meaning<sup>64</sup>) of an admitted contract merely because the parties have entered into it under a mistaken view as to that effect.<sup>65</sup>

<sup>53</sup> Keen v Holland [1984] 1 W.L.R. 251 at 261–262. In Wilson Bowden Properties Ltd v Milner & Bardon [1996] C.L.Y. 1229 the cause of action arose out of the undisputed contract and not out of the estoppel.

<sup>54</sup> [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 343; above, p.112. In Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc v MacLaine Watson & Co Ltd [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 570 the estoppel would likewise (if supported on the facts) have operated defensively. cf. Mitsui Babcock Energy Ltd v John Brown Energy Ltd (1996) Const.L.R. 125 at 185–186 where the estoppel, if it had been necessary to invoke it, would have restricted the claimant's rights.

<sup>55</sup> See below, p.403.

<sup>56</sup> See above, pp.115.

<sup>57</sup> This was the effect of the estoppel in The Amazonia [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 238, where it operated to prevent a party from relying on facts giving rise to a mistake nullifying consent (below, p.286) and where the effect of allowing him to rely on those facts would have been to bar the other party's claim by lapse of time. For the possibility that estoppel by convention may deprive a party of a defence, see also Azov Shipping Co v Baltic Shipping Co [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 159 at 175–176; semble this is subject to the limitation discussed with regard to promissory estoppel at p.114, above.

<sup>58</sup> cf. Johnson v Gore Wood & Co [2001] 1 All E.R. 481 (above, pp.121–122) where the estoppel likewise did not create the cause of action, which was based on the alleged negligence of the defendant solicitors; it merely helped to dispose of the defendants' objection that the action to enforce that claim was an abuse of process.

<sup>59</sup> Russell Bros (Paddington) Ltd v John Elliott Management Ltd (1995) 11 Const.L.J. 377. Contrast dicta in Thornton Springer v NEM Insurance Co Ltd [2000] 2 All E.R. 489 at 516–518, which seem to assume that estoppel by convention can give rise to new rights. This aspect of the case gives rise to the same difficulty as that discussed in relation to promissory estoppel at p.113, above. The actual decision in the Thornton Springer case was that there was a contract supported by consideration in the form of “an implied promise not to take proceedings” (at 516): see above, p.90.

<sup>60</sup> Orion Insurance plc v Sphere Drake Insurance [1992] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 239.

<sup>61</sup> Yaxley v Gotts [2000] Ch. 162 at 182.

<sup>62</sup> cf. Shah v Shah [2001] F.W.C.A. Civ 527, [2001] 4 All E.R. 138, at [31] (deed signed but not in presence of attesting witness); contrast ibid. at [28] (deed not signed at all). The case was one of estoppel by representation.

<sup>63</sup> See Keen v Holland [1984] 1 W.L.R. 251; Godden Merthyr Tydfil Housing Association (1997) 74 P. & C.R. D1; contrast The Amazonia [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 238 (illegality under foreign law).

<sup>64</sup> See above, p.121.

<sup>65</sup> Keen v Holland, above, n.63; cf. The Nile Rhapsody [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 399 at 408, affirmed, on another ground [1994] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 382.

4. Part Payment of a Debt

(1) General rule

The general rule of common law is that a creditor is not bound by an undertaking to accept part payment in full settlement of a debt. An accrued debt can be discharged only by accord and satisfaction.<sup>66</sup> A promise by the debtor to pay part of the debt provides no consideration for the accord, as it is merely a promise to perform part of an existing duty owed to the creditor. And the actual part payment is no satisfaction under the rule in Pinneel's case that "Payment of a lesser sum on the day in satisfaction of a greater sum cannot be any satisfaction for the whole."<sup>67</sup> This rule was approved by the House of Lords in Foakes v Beer.<sup>68</sup> Mrs Beer had obtained a judgment against Dr Foakes for £2,090 19s. Sixteen months later Dr Foakes asked for time to pay. Thereupon the parties entered into a written agreement<sup>69</sup> under which Mrs Beer undertook not to take "any proceedings whatsoever" on the judgment, in consideration of an immediate payment by Dr Foakes of £500 and on condition<sup>70</sup> of his paying specified instalments "until the whole of the said sum of £2,090 19s. shall have been paid and satisfied". Some five years later, when Dr Foakes had paid £2,090 19s., Mrs Beer claimed £360<sup>71</sup> for interest on the judgment debt. The House of Lords upheld her claim, and the actual decision does not appear to be unjust; for it seems that Mrs Beer intended only to give Dr Foakes time to pay, and not to forgive interest.<sup>72</sup>

The rule in Pinneel's case may sometimes have served the useful purpose of protecting a creditor against a debtor who had too ruthlessly exploited the tactical advantage of being a potential defendant in litigation.<sup>73</sup> For example, in D & C Builders Ltd v Rees<sup>74</sup> the claimants had done building work for the defendant and had presented an account of which some £482 was outstanding. Six months after payment had first been demanded, the defendant's wife (acting on his behalf) offered the claimants £300 in full settlement. They accepted this offer as they were in desperate straits financially; and there was some evidence that the defendant's wife knew this.<sup>75</sup> It was held that the claimants were entitled to the balance; and a majority<sup>76</sup> of the Court of Appeal based their decision on the rule in Pinneel's case.

On the other hand, it is arguable that the function of protecting the creditor in such a situation is now satisfactorily performed by the expanding concept of economic duress,<sup>77</sup> while the rule in Pinneel's case is open to two main objections. First, it applies

<sup>66</sup> See above, p.100.

<sup>67</sup> (1602) 5 Co.Rep. 117a; Cumber v Wane (1721) 1 Stra. 426; McManus v Bark (1870) 1 L.R. 5 Ex. 65; Underwood v Underwood [1894] p.204; Tilney Engineering v Admos Knitting Machinery [1987] 2 C.L.L. 21; Re Broderick (1986) 6 N.I.J.B. 36.

<sup>68</sup> (1884) 9 App.Cas. 605; Dixon, Jesting Pilate, 159–165.

<sup>69</sup> Drawn up by Dr Foakes' solicitor: (1884) 9 App.Cas. 625.

<sup>70</sup> Dr Foakes made no promise to pay the instalments.

<sup>71</sup> Beer v Foakes (1883) 11 Q.B.D. 221 at 222.

<sup>72</sup> Lords Fitzgerald and Watson thought that the agreement did not, on its true construction, cover interest. Lords Selborne and Blackburn sympathised with this view but felt unable to adopt it as the operative part of the document was too "clear" to be controlled by the recitals.

<sup>73</sup> As Dr Foakes appears to have done. Kelly, 27 M.L.R. 540, argues that there is consideration in giving up this advantage, as there is in the compromise of a disputed claim. This may be so, but a compromise is only binding if there is a bona fide dispute as to liability (above, p.90) and there was no such dispute in Foakes v Beer.

<sup>74</sup> [1966] 2 Q.B. 617; Chorley, 29 M.L.R. 165; Cornish, 29 M.L.R. 428.

<sup>75</sup> [1966] 2 Q.B. 617 at 622.

<sup>76</sup> Lord Denning M.R. based his decision on a different ground: see below, pp.134–135.

<sup>77</sup> cf. above, p.95 and below, pp.405–407. A debtor who by any deception dishonestly induces the creditor to accept part payment of a debt in full settlement may also be guilty of an offence under Theft Act 1978, s.2: see Treitel in Essays in Memory of Sir Rupert Cross, pp.90–92.

to all agreements to accept part payment of debts in full settlement, even though some such agreements are perfectly fair and reasonable transactions.<sup>78</sup> Secondly, as Lord Blackburn said in Foakes v Beer, part payment is often in fact more beneficial to the creditor than strict insistence on his full legal rights.<sup>79</sup> A factual benefit<sup>80</sup> of a similar kind has been accepted as sufficient consideration for a promise to make an extra payment for the performance of an existing contractual duty owed by the promisee to the promisor<sup>81</sup>; and the law would be more consistent, as well as more satisfactory in its practical operation, if it adopted the same approach to cases of part payment of a debt. Agreements of the kind here under discussion would then be binding unless they had been made under duress. But the rule in Foakes v Beer is open to challenge only in the House of Lords.<sup>82</sup> In the meantime, its operation is mitigated by limitations on its scope at common law and by evasions of it in equity.

(2) Common law limitations

(a) DISPUTED CLAIMS. The general rule does not apply where the creditor's claim (or its amount) is disputed in good faith.<sup>83</sup> In such cases, the value of the claim is doubtful and the debtor accordingly provides consideration by paying something, even though it is less than the amount claimed. It makes no difference that the amount paid is small in relation to the amount claimed, or that the creditor has a good chance of succeeding on the claim; for the law will not generally investigate the adequacy of consideration.<sup>84</sup>

Where the defendant admits liability for less than the amount claimed, payment of the smaller sum is no consideration for the claimant's promise to accept that payment in full settlement of the larger claim. The rule in Foakes v Beer applies since, once a binding admission has been made to pay the smaller sum, the payment of it amounts to no more than the performance of what, at that stage, is legally due from the defendant.<sup>85</sup>

(b) UNLIQUIDATED CLAIMS. The general rule applies only if the original claim is also a "liquidated" one, i.e. a claim for a fixed sum of money, such as one for money lent or for the agreed price of goods<sup>86</sup> or services. It does not apply to "unliquidated" claims<sup>87</sup> such as claims for damages or for a reasonable remuneration (where none is fixed by the contract). In such cases, the claim is of uncertain value; and even if the overwhelming

<sup>78</sup> e.g. on the facts of Central London Property Trust Ltd v High Trees House Ltd [1947] K.B. 130; below, pp.130–131.

<sup>79</sup> (1884) 9 App.Cas. 605 at 617–620.

<sup>80</sup> See above, p.69.

<sup>81</sup> Williams v Roffey Bros & Nicholls (Contractors) Ltd [1991] 1 Q.B. 1, above, p.95.

<sup>82</sup> See Re Selectmove Ltd [1995] 1 W.L.R. 474 where the Court of Appeal refused to apply the principle of the Williams case; above in the present context; Peel, 110 L.Q.R. 353.

<sup>83</sup> Cooper v Parker (1885) 15 C.B. 822; Re Warren (1884) 53 L.J. Ch. 1016; Anangel Atlas Compania Naviera SA v Ishikawajima Harima Heavy Industries Co Ltd (No.2) [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 526 at 544; for other consideration in this case, see ibid. at 545 and below, p.117; Huyton SA v Peter Cremer GmbH [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 620 at 629.

<sup>84</sup> See above, p.73. But the fact that the sum received is much smaller than that claimed may be evidence that the recipient has not accepted it in full settlement: Rustenburg Platinum Mines Ltd v Pan Am [1979] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 19.

<sup>85</sup> Ferguson v Davies [1997] 1 All E.R. 315, per Henry L.J.; Evans L.J.'s judgment is based on the ground that, as a matter of construction, the claimant had not accepted the smaller sum in full settlement. Aldous L.J. agreed with both the other judgments.

<sup>86</sup> A claim may be "liquidated" even though it is disputed and even though the dispute relates to its amount: e.g. where it is for the price of goods and the buyer alleges short delivery: The New Vanguard [1994] 1 W.L.R. 1634.

<sup>87</sup> Wilkinson v Byers (1834) 1 A. & E. 106; Ibberson v Neck (1886) 2 T.L.R. 427.

probability is that it is worth more than the sum paid, the possibility that it may be worth less suffices to satisfy the requirement of consideration.

An originally unliquidated claim may later become liquidated by act of the parties. For example, in D & C Builders v Rees<sup>88</sup> it does not seem that the contract fixed the price of the work to be done by the claimants. When they presented their account they had only an unliquidated claim (for a reasonable remuneration); and if at this stage they had accepted £300 in full settlement they would not have been protected by the rule in Foakes v Beer. That rule only became applicable because the defendant had, by retaining the account without protest, impliedly agreed that it correctly stated the sum due, and so turned the claim into a liquidated one.<sup>89</sup>

A creditor may have two claims against the same debtor, one of them liquidated and the other unliquidated; or a single claim which is partly liquidated and partly unliquidated. A promise by the creditor to release the whole claim will not be binding if the debtor pays no more than the liquidated amount and if his liability to pay this amount is undisputed. For example, in Arrale v Costain Civil Engineering Ltd<sup>90</sup> an employee was injured at work. Legislation in force at the place of work gave him an undisputed right against the employers to a fixed lump sum of £490 and it was assumed that he also had a common law right to sue the employers in tort for unliquidated damages.<sup>91</sup> It was held that any promise<sup>92</sup> which he might have made not to pursue the common law claim was not made binding by the employers' payment of the £490. They had not provided any consideration for such a promise since, in making that payment, they merely did what they were already bound to do.<sup>93</sup>

(c) VARIATIONS IN DEBTOR'S PERFORMANCE. Consideration for a creditor's promise to accept part payment in full settlement can be provided by the debtor's doing an act that he was not previously bound by the contract to do.<sup>94</sup> For example, payment of a smaller sum at the creditor's request before the due day is good consideration for a promise to forego the balance, since it is a benefit to the creditor to receive (and a corresponding detriment to the debtor to make) such early payment.<sup>95</sup> The same applies, mutatis mutandis, where payment of a smaller sum is made at the creditor's request at a place different from that originally fixed for payment,<sup>96</sup> or in a different currency.<sup>97</sup> Again, payment of a smaller sum accompanied at the creditor's request by the delivery of a chattel is good consideration for a promise to forego the balance: "The gift of a horse, hawk or robe, etc., in satisfaction is good. For it shall be intended that a horse, hawk or robe, etc., might be more beneficial than the money. . . ."<sup>98</sup>

<sup>88</sup> [1966] 2 Q.B. 617; above, p.125.

<sup>89</sup> cf. Amantilla v Telefusion (1987) 9 Con. L.R. 139, where a builder's quantum meruit claim which had not been disputed was treated as "liquidated claim" for the purpose of Limitation Act 1980, s.29(5)(a).

<sup>90</sup> [1976] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 98; cf. Rustenburg Platinum Mines Ltd v Pan Am [1979] 1 Lloyd's Rep 19 at 24.

<sup>91</sup> cf. below, p.206.

<sup>92</sup> Lord Denning M.R. and Stephenson L.J. took the view that no such promise had been made.

<sup>93</sup> Per Stephenson and Geoffrey Lane L.J.J. Lord Denning M.R. based his decision on a different ground: below, p.134.

<sup>94</sup> e.g. Re William Porter & Co [1937] 2 All E.R. 261; Ledingham v Bermejo Estancia Co Ltd [1947] 2 All E.R. 748.

<sup>95</sup> Pinnel's case, above, p.125.

<sup>96</sup> ibid.

<sup>97</sup> cf. above, p.101.

<sup>98</sup> Pinnel's case, above. Many cases formerly supported the view that part payment by a negotiable instrument, made at the request of the creditor and accepted by him in full settlement, discharged the debt. But these cases were overruled in D & C Builders Ltd v Rees [1966] 2 Q.B. 617.

(d) OTHER BENEFIT TO CREDITOR. We have seen that a promise to pay a supplier of services more than the agreed sum for performing his part of the contract can be supported by consideration in the form of a benefit in fact obtained by the other party as a result of his obtaining the promised performance.<sup>99</sup> Conversely, a promise by the supplier to accept less than the agreed sum may be supported by a similar consideration. The mere receipt of the smaller sum cannot, indeed, constitute the consideration: that possibility is precluded by Foakes v Beer.<sup>1</sup> But the performance by the debtor of other obligations under the contract may confer such a benefit on the creditor and so satisfy the requirement of consideration. This possibility is illustrated by the Anangel Atlas<sup>2</sup> case, where a shipbuilder's promise to reduce the price which the buyers had agreed to pay was held to have been supported by consideration, and one way in which the buyers had provided consideration was by accepting delivery on the day fixed for such acceptance. Even if the buyers were already bound to take delivery on that day, they had conferred a benefit on the shipbuilder by so doing since they were "core customers"<sup>3</sup> and their refusal to take delivery might have led other actual or potential customers to cancel (or not to place) orders.

(e) FORBEARANCE TO ENFORCE CROSS-CLAIM. The debtor may have a cross-claim against the creditor; and forbearance to enforce such a claim can constitute consideration for the creditor's promise to accept part payment in full settlement. For example, where a landlord promises to accept part payment of rent in full settlement, the tenant may provide consideration for this promise by forbearing to sue the landlord for breach of the latter's obligation to keep the premises in repair.<sup>4</sup>

(f) PART PAYMENT BY THIRD PARTY. Part payment by a third party, if accepted by the creditor in full settlement of the debtor's liability,<sup>5</sup> is a good defence to a later action by the creditor against the debtor for the balance.<sup>6</sup>

It is generally agreed that this rule does not depend on any contract between debtor and creditor, so that it can apply even though no promise was made to the debtor and no consideration moved from him. The rule has therefore been explained on other grounds. One such ground is that it would be a fraud on the third party to allow the creditor to sue the debtor for the balance of the debt.<sup>7</sup> The difficulty with this reasoning is that the mere breach of a promise does not usually amount to fraud at common law; it only has this effect if the promisor had no intention of performing the promise when he made it.<sup>8</sup> A second reason for the rule is that the court will not help the creditor to break his contract with the third party by allowing him to recover the balance of the debt from the debtor. On the contrary, it has been held that where A (the creditor) contracts with B (the third party) not to sue C (the debtor), and A nevertheless does sue C, B can

<sup>99</sup> Williams v Roffey Bros & Nicholls (Contractors) Ltd [1991] 1 Q.B. 1, above, p.95.

<sup>1</sup> (1884) 9 App.Cas. 605, above, p.125.

<sup>2</sup> Anangel Atlas Compania Naviera SA v Ishikawajima-Harima Heavy Industries Co Ltd (No.2) [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 526. For other consideration in that case, in the form of reducing "a previously ill-defined understanding" to "precise terms," and so setting a potential dispute, see ibid. at 544.

<sup>3</sup> ibid. at 544.

<sup>4</sup> Brikom Investments Ltd v Carr [1979] Q.B. 467; as explained above, p.102.

<sup>5</sup> See below, pp.699–700 for this requirement.

<sup>6</sup> Welby v Drake (1825) 1 C. & p.557; Cook v Lister (1863) 13 C.B.(N.S.) 543 at 595.

<sup>7</sup> See the authorities cited in n.6, above.

<sup>8</sup> See below, pp.331–332.

intervene so as to obtain a stay of the action.<sup>9</sup> A third explanation is suggested by Hirachand Punamchand v Temple,<sup>10</sup> where the defendant was indebted to the claimant on a promissory note. The claimant accepted a smaller sum from the defendant's father in full settlement. It was held that he could not later sue the defendant for the balance of the debt, because the promissory note was extinct: the position was the same as if the note had been cancelled.<sup>11</sup> This reasoning again does not depend on any contract between the claimant and the defendant, for the cancellation of a promissory note can release a person liable on it irrespective of contract and without consideration.<sup>12</sup> Under the Contracts (Rights of Third Parties) Act 1999, the debtor may also, if the requirements of the Act are satisfied,<sup>13</sup> be able to take the benefit of any term in the contract between the creditor and the person making the payment which may exclude the debtor's liability for the balance; and he will be able to do so without having to show that he provided any consideration for the creditor's promise to accept the part payment in full settlement.<sup>14</sup>

(g) COMPOSITION AGREEMENTS. A debtor who cannot pay all his creditors in full may be able to induce them to agree with himself and each other to accept a dividend in full settlement of their claims.<sup>15</sup> A creditor who has accepted a dividend under such an agreement cannot sue the debtor for the balance of his original demand.<sup>16</sup> If the debtor fails to pay the agreed dividend, the original debt revives.<sup>17</sup>

One reason why such composition agreements are binding is again said to be that a creditor who sued for the balance of his debt would commit a fraud on the others.<sup>18</sup> On this view it is unnecessary to look for any consideration moving from the debtor. Another possible reason for the rule is that the debtor may be prejudiced by forbearing to have himself adjudicated bankrupt. But it is hard to see how this can be consideration if the debtor's whole object in agreeing to the composition was to avoid bankruptcy.<sup>19</sup> And if such a forbearance were consideration for a composition with several creditors, why is it not consideration for a composition with one? The same objection applies to the theory that the debtor can provide consideration by the act of executing the composition agreement. The debtor may, however, provide consideration by procuring a third party to act as surety for his promise to pay the dividend.<sup>20</sup> A final justification for the rule, stated in some of the relevant judgments, is that there is consideration for the creditors' promise to forgo the balance since each creditor benefits from the arrangement: he is

<sup>9</sup> Snelling v John G Snelling Ltd [1973] 1 Q.B. 87, distinguishing Gore v Van der Lann [1967] 2 Q.B. 31, where no promise was made not to sue C; cf. South West Trains Ltd v Wightman, The Times, January 14, 1998.

<sup>10</sup> [1911] 2 K.B. 330.

<sup>11</sup> At 336. cf. in the case of joint debts, the reasoning of Johnson v Davies [1999] Ch. 117 at 130.

<sup>12</sup> See above, p.101.

<sup>13</sup> See below, pp.651 et seq.

<sup>14</sup> See above, p.83, below, p.656. For the purposes of the Act, it is the debtor who is the "third party".

<sup>15</sup> Provision for publicity and substantial agreement among creditors is made by the Deeds of Arrangement Act 1914 (repealed in part by Insolvency Act 1985, s.235 and Sch.10, Pt III and amended by Insolvency Act 1986, s.439(2)). Oral agreements are not caught by the 1914 Act; Hughes & Falconer v Newton [1939] 2 All E.R. 869. "Voluntary arrangements" under Insolvency Act 1986, Pts I and VIII can, by virtue of ss.5(2) and 260(2), bind even a creditor who did not attend the meeting or dissented from the proposal "as if he were a party to the arrangement;" see Johnson v Davies [1999] Ch. 117 at 138; cf. Re Cancel Ltd [1996] 1 All E.R. 37. And see Re a Debtor (No.259 of 1990) [1990] 1 W.L.R. 226.

<sup>16</sup> Good v Cheesman (1831) 2 B. & Ad. 328; Boyd v Hind (1857) 1 H. & N.938; the bare agreement to pay a dividend may operate as satisfaction, if the parties so intend: Bradley v Gregory (1810) 2 Camp. 383.

<sup>17</sup> Evans v Powis (1847) 1 Ex. 601.

<sup>18</sup> Wood v Roberts (1818) 2 Stark. 417; Cook v Lister (1863) 13 C.B.(N.S.) 543 at 595.

<sup>19</sup> cf. above, p.83. The position might be different if the debtor really did intend to go into bankruptcy and the creditors dissuaded him by promising to accept part payment in full settlement.

<sup>20</sup> As in Bradley v Gregory (1810) 2 Camp. 383.

certain to get some payment, while in the scramble for priority which would take place if there were no composition agreement he might get nothing at all.<sup>21</sup>

(h) COLLATERAL CONTRACT. An agreement to accept part payment of a debt in full settlement may take effect as a collateral contract if the requirements of contractual intention and consideration are satisfied. This was the position in Brikom Investments Ltd v Carr<sup>22</sup> where a tenant's liability to contribute to the maintenance costs of a block of flats was held to have been reduced by a collateral contract under which the landlord undertook to execute certain roof repairs at his own expense.<sup>23</sup> The landlord's claim for contribution in this case was probably unliquidated; but the principle seems to be equally applicable where a creditor enters into a collateral contract to accept part payment in full settlement of a liquidated claim.

(3) Equitable evasion

The common law limitations can (with one exception<sup>24</sup>) be explained on the ground that there was, in the situations covered by them, some consideration for the creditor's promise to accept the part payment in full settlement. They assume the continued existence of the general, if often inconvenient, rule that, in the absence of such consideration, the creditor's promise was not binding. Equity went further: it made two attempts to evade that rule even where there was no consideration for the creditor's promise.

(a) EQUITABLE RELEASE. A number of early cases may support the view that in equity a creditor could release a debt by simply saying that he had done so, or was doing so.<sup>25</sup> Other cases, on the contrary, hold that a release was not good in equity unless it was also good at law.<sup>26</sup> A possible distinction between the two lines of cases is that in the first the creditor says "I hereby release the debt", while in the second he says "I promise not to sue the debtor".<sup>27</sup> The former statement could be regarded as a completed gift of the debt by the creditor to the debtor<sup>28</sup> and the latter as a mere promise not to sue (which would not be binding without consideration). But the distinction is tenuous, and it is doubtful whether the doctrine of equitable release, if it was ever established, has survived Jorden v Money.<sup>29</sup>

<sup>21</sup> Good v Cheesman (1831) 2 B. & Ad. 328 at 334; Garrard v Woolner (1832) 8 Bing. 258 at 265; West Yorks Dairymay Agency Ltd v Coleridge [1911] 2 K.B. 326 is an unwarranted extension of the principle since the creditor got nothing: above, p.83, n.55. Even in such cases, the debtor may get the benefit of the agreement if, when he is sued by one creditor, another is entitled to, and does, intervene to stay the action under Snelling v John G. Snelling Ltd [1973] 1 Q.B. 87, above, p.129, n.9. The debtor will not, however, be able to avoid the requirement of consideration by relying on the Contracts (Rights of Third Parties) Act 1999 (above, n.13) since this applies only in favour of "a person who is not a party" to the contract (s.1(1)); and in the case of a composition agreement the debtor typically will be a party.

<sup>22</sup> [1979] Q.B. 467.

<sup>23</sup> For the consideration supporting this promise, see above p.102, for other grounds for the decision, see below, p.133.

<sup>24</sup> i.e. cases of part payment by a third party: above, p.128. The debtor does also not need to provide consideration where he can rely on the Contracts (Rights of Third Parties) Act, 1999: above at n.14.

<sup>25</sup> Wickett v Raby (1724) 2 Bro.P.C. 386; Richards v Symes (1740) 2 Eq.Ca.Abr. 617; Eden v Smyth (1800) 5 Ves. 341; Flower v Marten (1837) 2 My. & Cr. 459.

<sup>26</sup> Cross v Sprigg (1849) 6 Hare 552 (reversed on other grounds: 2 Mac. & G. 113); Major v Major (1852) 1 Drew. 165; Luxmore v Clifton (1867) 17 L.T. 460.

<sup>27</sup> See Reeves v Bryner (1801) 6 Ves. 516, distinguishing Eden v Smyth, above.

<sup>28</sup> cf. Gray v Barton, N.Y. 68 (1873). If a creditor can make a gift of a debt to a third party by assignment (below, pp.631 et seq.) why should he not be able to make such a gift to the debtor?

<sup>29</sup> See above, p.116.

(b) EQUITABLE FORBEARANCE. Under the equitable doctrine of Hughes v Metropolitan Ry<sup>30</sup> a promise by a contracting party not to enforce his legal rights has (even where it is not supported by consideration) at least a limited effect in equity. Before 1946, this doctrine had not been applied where a creditor's promise to accept part payment of a debt in full settlement was not supported by any consideration moving from the debtor.<sup>31</sup> Such an extension of the rule seemed to be barred by Foakes v Beer.<sup>32</sup> The possibility of making the extension was, however, suggested in Central London Property Trust Ltd v High Trees House Ltd.<sup>33</sup> In 1937 block of flats had been let to the defendants for 99 years at a rent of £2,500 per annum. In 1940 the landlords agreed to reduce the annual rent to £1,250 as many of the flats were unlet because of war-time conditions. After the end of the war, the landlords demanded the full rent for the last two quarters of 1945 and Denning J. upheld their claim on the ground that, as a matter of construction, the 1940 agreement was intended to apply only while the war-time conditions lasted. But he also said that the landlords would have been precluded by the equitable doctrine of Hughes v Metropolitan Ry<sup>34</sup> from suing for the full rent for the period which was covered by the 1940 agreement. He added: "The logical consequence no doubt is that a promise to accept a smaller sum, if acted upon, is binding notwithstanding the absence of consideration."<sup>35</sup> The requirements and effects of the equitable doctrine have already been discussed.<sup>36</sup> Three points give rise to particular difficulty in its application to cases of part payment of a debt.

(i) Effect generally suspensory. The first difficulty is to reconcile the remarks of Denning J. in the High Trees case with Foakes v Beer.<sup>37</sup> If the claimant in Foakes v Beer could go back on her promise not to ask for interest, why could not the landlords in the High Trees case go back on their promise not to ask for the full rent in, say, 1941, when war-time difficulties of letting still prevailed? One possibility is to say that "that aspect was not considered in Foakes v Beer"<sup>38</sup> which was decided without reference to equity, and is therefore "no longer valid"<sup>39</sup>; but this is unsatisfactory, as the rule that part payment of a debt was no discharge was clearly recognised in equity.<sup>40</sup> Another possibility, and one which does less violence to the authorities, is to say that the creditor's right to the balance of his debt is not extinguished but only suspended.<sup>41</sup> This is generally the sole consequence of the principle in Hughes v Metropolitan Ry<sup>42</sup> and in

<sup>30</sup> (1877) 2 App.Cas. 439; above, p.105.

<sup>31</sup> The doctrine had been applied in Buttery v Pickard (1946) 62 T.L.R. 241 to a landlord's promise to accept payment of part of the rent in full settlement, but in that case consideration did move from the tenant in the shape of her forbearance to exercise her contractual right to terminate the lease (though this was not the ratio decidendi of the case).

<sup>32</sup> (1884) 9 App.Cas. 605; above, p.110.

<sup>33</sup> [1947] K.B. 130; Denning, 15 M.L.R. 1; Wilson, 67 L.Q.R. 330; Sheridan, 15 M.L.R. 325; Bennion, 16 M.L.R. 441; Guest, 30 A.L.J. 187; Turner, 1 N.Z.U.L.R. 185; Campbell, ibid. 232.

<sup>34</sup> See above, p.105.

<sup>35</sup> [1947] K.B. 130 at 134; cf. Combe v Combe [1951] 2 K.B. 215 at 220.

<sup>36</sup> See above, pp.105-119.

<sup>37</sup> (1884) 9 App.Cas. 605, above, p.125.

<sup>38</sup> High Trees case, above, at p.146; this sentence does not occur in any of the other reports of the case ([1947] L.J.R. 77; (1946) 175 L.T. 333; (1946) 62 T.L.R. 557; [1956] 1 All E.R. 256n.) The argument, with respect, lacks plausibility since Hughes v Metropolitan Ry, above n.34, had been decided only seven years before Foakes v Beer and Lords Selborne and Blackburn heard the appeals in both cases.

<sup>39</sup> Arrale v Costain Civil Engineering Ltd [1976] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 98 at 102.

<sup>40</sup> Bidder v Bridges (1887) 37 Ch.D. 406; Re Warren (1884) 53 L.J.Ch. 1016.

<sup>41</sup> Ajayi v R T Briscoe (Nig) Ltd [1964] 1 W.L.R. 1326, 1330; Unger, 28 M.L.R. 231; cf. Re Temming [1947] W.N. 196; Gordon [1963] C.L.J. 222, arguing that the equitable principle is limited to relief against forfeiture. But see Wilson [1965] C.L.J. 93.

<sup>42</sup> See above, p.111.

the present context it would give effect to the intention of the parties where the purpose of the arrangements was to give the debtor extra time to pay,<sup>43</sup> rather than to extinguish part of the debt. Of course, where the intention is to extinguish, and not merely to suspend, the creditor's right to the balance, the suggestion that the creditor is permanently bound by his promise not to sue for the balance<sup>44</sup> may seem to be an attractive one.<sup>45</sup> But such an extension of the principle of Hughes v Metropolitan Ry would require the overruling of Foakes v Beer. It is, no doubt, with such difficulties in mind that Lord Hailsham L.C. has said that the High Trees principle "may need to be reviewed and reduced to a coherent body of doctrine by the courts".<sup>46</sup>

For the present the better view is that the principle only suspends rights; but the meaning of this statement is not entirely clear where the debtor is under a continuing obligation to make a series of payments, e.g. of rent under a lease,<sup>47</sup> or of royalties under a licence to use a patent,<sup>48</sup> or of instalments under a hire-purchase agreement.<sup>49</sup> In such cases the statement may mean one of two things: first, that the creditor is entitled to payment in full only of amounts which fall due after the expiry of a reasonable notice of the retraction of his promise<sup>50</sup>; or, secondly, that he is then entitled, not only to future payments in full, but also to the unpaid balance of past ones. Of course the second of these views might sometimes be at variance with the intention of the parties at the time of the promise.<sup>51</sup> On the other hand it is hard to see why a debtor whose liability accrues from time to time should, for the present purpose, be in a more favourable position than one whose liability is to pay a single lump sum; nor is it clear which of the two views should apply where a debtor who owed a lump sum undertook to pay it off in instalments and the creditor first made, and then gave reasonable notice revoking, a promise to accept reduced instalments. In such a case, it is at least arguable that the intention of the creditor is only to give extra time for payment. Hence the total debt remains due, and the only effect of the promise is to extend the period over which it is to be repaid.<sup>52</sup>

There may, however, be exceptional cases where the creditor's right is wholly extinguished. We have seen that a forbearance cannot be retracted where subsequent events, <sup>43</sup> e.g. in Ajayi v R T Briscoe (Nig) Ltd, above: see below, n.51. This seems also to have been the position in Foakes v Beer, above.

<sup>44</sup> Originally made by Lord Denning in the High Trees case at 134 and repeated by him in D & C Builders Ltd v Rees [1966] 2 Q.B. 617 at 624. cf. W J Alan & Co Ltd v El Nasr Export & Import Co [1972] 2 Q.B. 189, 213; and ibid. 218 at 220; but in that case there was consideration: above, p.101.

<sup>45</sup> Provided that there was no duress: cf. above, p.94; below, p.137.

<sup>46</sup> Woodhouse AC Israel Cocoa Ltd v Nigerian Produce Marketing Co Ltd [1972] A.C. 741 at 758; cf. Baird Textile Holdings Ltd v Marks & Spencer plc [2001] EWCA Civ 274; [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 737, at [48] ("not yet fully developed").

<sup>47</sup> As in the High Trees case.

<sup>48</sup> As in the Tool Metal case [1955] 1 W.L.R. 761; above, p.111.

<sup>49</sup> As in Ajayi v R T Briscoe (Nig) Ltd [1964] 1 W.L.R. 1326.

<sup>50</sup> Banning v Wright [1972] 1 W.L.R. 972 at 981; cf. W J Alan & Co Ltd v El Nasr Export & Import Co [1972] 2 Q.B. 189 at 213. This view is apparently regarded as correct in the Tool Metal case, above; but the case is not conclusive as the liability of the licensee to make the payments during the suspension period was not directly considered by the House of Lords.

<sup>51</sup> This would be so in cases like the High Trees and Tool Metal cases—but not in a case like Ajayi v R T Briscoe (Nig) Ltd, above, n.49 as the promise there "was not intended to be irrevocable": Meng Long Development Pte Ltd v Jip Hong Trading Pte Ltd [1985] A.C. 511 at 524. J T Sydenham & Co Ltd v Enichem Elastomers Ltd [1989] 1 F.G.I.L.R. 257 at 260 (discussed by Cartwright, [1990] C.L.J. 13) purports to give the "estoppel" an extinctive effect; but the amount of rent due in that case was in dispute, so that the actual decision is explicable on the ground stated at p.126, above.

<sup>52</sup> Hardwick v Johnson [1978] 1 W.L.R. 683 (where the creditor was said at 699 to have agreed to "postpone" the debtor's obligation to pay instalments).

or the passage of time, make it highly inequitable<sup>53</sup> to require performance of the original obligation, even after reasonable notice. This principle could be applied to cases of the present kind, so that the creditor's right to the balance might be extinguished if, in reliance on that promise, the debtor had undertaken new commitments in relation to the subject-matter: e.g. if the tenant in the High Trees case had used the rebate to modernise the flats.<sup>54</sup>

The creditor's right was also held to have been wholly extinguished in Brikom Investments Ltd v Carr.<sup>55</sup> In that case, long leases of flats provided that the tenants should pay (inter alia) contributions in respect of certain expenses incurred by the landlords on repairs. During negotiations leading to the execution of the leases, the landlords had promised to put the roof into repair "at our own cost". This was held to amount to a collateral contract<sup>56</sup> with one of the original tenants, precluding the landlords from enforcing against her the provision in the lease requiring her to contribute to the cost of the roof repairs. It was further held that claims for contributions to the cost of those repairs could not be made against assignees and sub-assignees of original tenants, even though there were no collateral contracts with these persons. Lord Denning M.R. based this conclusion on the High Trees principle which, in his view, was available not only between the original parties, but also in favour of, and against, their assigns.<sup>57</sup> The extinctive effect of the principle in these circumstances can perhaps be supported on the ground that the original tenants, the assignees and the sub-assignees had all, in reliance on the landlord's promise, undertaken fresh commitments by entering into long leases of the flats. Alternatively, the case can be treated, not as one, of "promissory estoppel",<sup>58</sup> but as one of "waiver".<sup>59</sup> The latter expression here seems to refer to a variation supported by consideration<sup>60</sup>; for the consideration provided by the tenants<sup>61</sup> could equally support the landlords' promise whether that promise was regarded as a collateral contract<sup>62</sup> or as a variation of the principal contract itself. On this interpretation of the case, it is possible to account for the extinctive effect of the landlord's promise even on the liability of the assignees and sub-assignees. The variation was supported by consideration and so extinguished the liability of the original tenants to contribute to the cost of the repairs in question; and once it had been so extinguished it was not revived on assignment of the leases.

(ii) Reliance. One difficulty which has been felt about the High Trees case is that a tenant who is bound to pay £2,500 per annum for 99 years suffers no "detriment", in the sense in which that word is used in the law of estoppel,<sup>63</sup> by paying half that rent for part of the period. Ingenious attempts have been made to find some "detriment" in the

<sup>53</sup> See above, p.111 at n.34.

<sup>54</sup> cf. Mitchell, 2 Univ. of Western Australia Annual Law Review 245 at 251. The principle is somewhat similar to that which underlies the defence of "change of position" in an action for the recovery of money paid; for recognition of this defence, see Lipkin Gorman v Karpnale Ltd [1991] 2 A.C. 548; below, p.537.

<sup>55</sup> [1979] Q.B. 467.

<sup>56</sup> See above, p.102.

<sup>57</sup> [1979] Q.B. 467 at 484-485.

<sup>58</sup> ibid. at 485, 491.

<sup>59</sup> ibid. at 488, 490.

<sup>60</sup> cf. above, p.102.

<sup>61</sup> See above, p.102. Roskill L.J. at 489 refers to Hughes v Metropolitan Ry (1877) 2 App.Cas. 439 (above p.100) as stating a principle of "contractual variation of strict contractual rights." It is respectfully submitted that this phrase should be interpreted to refer to variations of contracts, rather than to contractually binding variations; for the Hughes principle clearly applies to variations which are not contractually binding (but revocable on reasonable notice) because they are not supported by consideration.

<sup>62</sup> See above, p.102.

<sup>63</sup> cf. above, p.111.

case<sup>64</sup>; but Lord Denning himself has said extra-judicially that there was none.<sup>65</sup> Nor is the requirement mentioned in the High Trees case itself, or in later statements of the principle.<sup>66</sup> And if such “detriment” is not necessary for the purpose of the rule in Hughes v Metropolitan Ry<sup>67</sup> it is hard to see why it should be necessary for the purpose of its offshoot, the High Trees rule. All that is necessary is that the tenant should have acted in reliance on the promise in such a way as to make it inequitable for the landlord to act inconsistently with it. This requirement was satisfied on the facts of the High Trees case, no less than on those of Hughes v Metropolitan Ry.

(iii) Inequitable. When the debtor makes the part payment in reliance on the creditor’s promise, it becomes prima facie “inequitable” for the creditor peremptorily to go back on his promise. But other circumstances may indicate that it would not be “inequitable” for the creditor to reassert his claim for the full amount<sup>68</sup>: this would, for example, be the position where the debtor had failed to perform his promise to pay the smaller amount.<sup>69</sup> It has been suggested that another such circumstance may be the conduct of the debtor in obtaining the promise. Thus in D & C Builders Ltd v Rees<sup>70</sup> Lord Denning M.R. held that the High Trees principle did not apply because the builders’ promise to accept £300 in full settlement of their claim for £482 had been obtained by taking undue advantage of their desperate financial position. The difficulty with this reasoning is that most debtors who offer part payment in full settlement try to exert some form of “pressure” against their creditors. The law now recognises that it is possible for such pressure to amount to duress<sup>71</sup>; and where it has this effect the promise should clearly not bring the High Trees principle into operation. Where, on the other hand, there is no duress, the operation of the High Trees principle should not be excluded merely because it could be said that the creditor’s promise had, in some sense, been “improperly obtained.” Such an intermediate category between promises obtained by duress and those not so obtained should, here as elsewhere,<sup>72</sup> be rejected as “unhelpful because it would make the law uncertain”.<sup>73</sup>

SECTION 7. PROPRIETARY ESTOPPEL

Proprietary estoppel is said to arise in certain situations in which a person has done acts in reliance on the belief that he has, or that he will acquire, rights in or over another’s land. Usually, but not invariably, these acts consist of erecting buildings on, or making other improvements to, the land in question. Where the requirements of proprietary estoppel are satisfied, the landowner is precluded from denying the existence of the rights in question, and may indeed be compelled to grant them. Because the estoppel precludes him from denying the existence of rights in property, it has come to be known <sup>64</sup> e.g. Wilson, 67 L.Q.R. 330 at 344.

<sup>65</sup> 15 M.L.R. 1, 6–8.

<sup>66</sup> e.g. in Combe v Combe [1951] 2 K.B. 215 at 220. See also p.110, et seq., above.

<sup>67</sup> See above, p.111.

<sup>68</sup> cf. above, pp.111–112.

<sup>69</sup> cf. Re Selectmove [1995] 1 W.L.R. 474 at 481, where the debtor’s promise was not to pay less but to pay late; and see Burrows v Brent LBC [1996] 1 W.L.R. 1448, where decision was based on lack of contractual intention so that neither consideration nor the equitable doctrine was discussed.

<sup>70</sup> [1966] 2 Q.B. 617. Winder, 82 L.Q.R. 165; above, p.114. cf. Arrale v Costain Civil Engineering Ltd [1976] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 98 at 102.

<sup>71</sup> See above, pp.94–95; below, pp.405–407.

<sup>72</sup> See above, p.98.

<sup>73</sup> Pao On v Lau Yiu Long [1980] A.C. 614 at 634; cf. Huyton SA v Peter Cremer GmbH [1999] 1 Lloyd’s Rep 620, where the requirement of consideration was satisfied (above, p.115) but there was no duress (below, p.405). It was said at 629 that “the submissions relating to consideration and duress inter-relate”.

as “proprietary estoppel”.<sup>74</sup> It is distinct<sup>75</sup> from promissory estoppel, both in the conditions which must be satisfied before it comes into operation and in its effects. But under both doctrines some legal effects are given to promises which are not contractually binding for want of consideration; and it is this aspect<sup>76</sup> of proprietary estoppel which calls for discussion in the present Chapter.

1. Nature and Scope of the Doctrine

Proprietary estoppel operates in a variety of cases so disparate that it has been described as “an amalgam of doubtful utility.”<sup>77</sup> The cases can be divided broadly into two categories.

In the first, one person acts under a mistake as to the existence or as to the extent of his rights in or over another’s land. Even though the landowner did not induce mistake, he might be prevented from taking advantage of it, particularly if he “stood by” knowing of the mistake, or actively encouraged the mistaken party to act in reliance on his mistaken belief.<sup>78</sup> These cases of so-called “acquiescence”<sup>79</sup> do not raise any questions as to the enforceability of promises and therefore do not call for further discussion in this Chapter.<sup>80</sup>

In the second group of cases, there is not merely “acquiescence” by the landowner, but “encouragement”<sup>81</sup>: that is, conduct by the landowner, or a representation by him, from which a promise to the other party (the promisee) can be inferred<sup>82</sup> to the effect that the promisee has a legally enforceable<sup>83</sup> interest in the land or that one will be created in his favour. If the other party acts in reliance on such a promise, the question will arise to what extent the promise can be enforced, even though it may not be supported by consideration, or fail to satisfy the other requirements (such as those of certainty or form<sup>84</sup>) of a binding contract.

(1) Bases of liability

(a) EXPENDITURE ON ANOTHER’S LAND IN RELIANCE ON A PROMISE. In Dillmyn v Llewelyn<sup>85</sup> a father executed a memorandum “presenting” a named estate to his son “for

<sup>74</sup> Jones v Jones [1977] 1 W.L.R. 438 at 442; Pascoe v Turner [1979] 1 W.L.R. 431 at 436; Re Sharpe [1980] 1 W.L.R. 219 at 233; Greasley v Cooke [1980] 1 W.L.R. 1306 at 1311; cf. Midland Bank plc v Cooke [1995] 4 All E.R. 564 at 573 (“equities in the nature of an estoppel”).

<sup>75</sup> Fontana NV v Mautner (1980) 254 E.G. 199 at 207; and see below, p.146.

<sup>76</sup> For wider discussions, see Davies, 8 Sydney L.Rev. 200 and 7 Adelaide L.Rev. 200; Moriarty, 100 L.Q.R. 376; Smith in Consensus ad Idem: Essays in the Law of Contract in Honour of Guenter Treitel (ed. Rose), p.235.

<sup>77</sup> Amalgamated Investment & Property Co Ltd v Texas Commerce International Bank Ltd [1982] Q.B. 84 at 103.

<sup>78</sup> Wilmott v Barber (1880) 15 Ch.D. 96; cf. Taylor’s Fashions Ltd v Liverpool Victoria Trustee Co Ltd [1982] Q.B. 133n.

<sup>79</sup> Wilmott v Barber (1880) 15 Ch.D. 96 at 105.

<sup>80</sup> Nor do they call for discussion in Chap.8, since the mistake is not one that prevents the formation of a contract, or is alleged to do so.

<sup>81</sup> Ramsden v Dyson (1866) L.R. 1 H.L. 129 at 170. Contrast Attorney-General of Hong Kong v Humphreys Estate (Queen’s Gardens) [1987] A.C. 114, where there was no encouragement.

<sup>82</sup> See Lloyd’s Bank plc v Rosset [1991] 1 A.C. 107 and Keelmalk Properties Ltd v Waller [2002] EWCA Civ 1076 at [63] (where this requirement was not satisfied).

<sup>83</sup> See Coombes v Smith [1986] 1 W.L.R. 808 (where there was no belief in the existence of a legally enforceable right); cf. Brinnand v Emens (1987) 19 H.L.R. 415.

<sup>84</sup> See, for example, below, p.136, n.91.

<sup>85</sup> (1862) 4 D.F. & G. 517; Allan, 79 L.Q.R. 238.

the purpose of furnishing himself with a dwelling house". The son spent £14,000 in building a house on the land; and it was held (after the father's death) that he was entitled to have the fee simple of the estate conveyed to him. Many latter cases similarly give some degree of legal enforceability to a promise by a landowner in reliance on which the promisee has spent money on making improvements to the promisor's land: for example, where a mother purported to make a gift of a cottage to her son "provided he did it up" and the son incurred considerable expense in doing so<sup>86</sup>; where A built a bungalow on B's land in reliance on B's promise that A could stay there for the rest of his life<sup>87</sup>; where A spent money on extending or improving B's house in reliance on a similar promise by B<sup>88</sup>; where, in reliance on such a promise, A actually did the work of improvement him- or herself<sup>89</sup>; and where a tenant, whose lease had been terminated, spent money on improving the premises in reliance on the landlord's promise to grant him a new lease.<sup>90</sup> The most obvious explanation of such cases is that in them the landowner would be unjustly enriched if he were allowed to disregard his promise and to take back the land after he had induced the promisee to make improvements to it. This explanation is, perhaps, reflected in statements found in some modern cases that the liability is based on "an implied or constructive trust."<sup>91</sup> But the discussion which follows will show that the doctrine can apply even where there is no enrichment of the kind just described, or indeed of any kind at all.<sup>92</sup> Unjust enrichment therefore cannot provide complete explanation of the doctrine.

(b) OTHER ACTS DONE IN RELIANCE ON THE PROMISE. Improvement to the promisor's land is not a necessary condition for the operation of proprietary estoppel. The doctrine can apply also where the promisee has conferred some other benefit on the promisor<sup>93</sup> and even where no benefit at all is received by the promisor. This appears from one of the illustrations given by Lord Westbury in Dillwyn v Llewelyn: if "A gives a house to B, but makes no formal conveyance, and the house is afterwards included, with the knowledge of A, in the marriage settlement of B, A would be bound to complete the title

<sup>86</sup> Voyce v Voyce (1991) 62 P. & C.R. 290.

<sup>87</sup> Inwards v Baker [1965] 2 Q.B. 507.

<sup>88</sup> Hussey v Palmer [1972] 1 W.L.R. 1286; Pascoe v Turner [1979] 1 W.L.R. 431; Durant v Heritage [1994] F.G.C.S. 134; semble spending money on mere maintenance would not suffice: Griffiths v Williams [1978] F.G. Digest of Cases 919.

<sup>89</sup> Eves v Eves [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1338; Jones v Jones [1977] 1 W.L.R. 438; Ungurian v Lesnoff [1990] Ch. 206; Clough v Kelly (1996) 72 P. & C.R. D22 (where the claimant had also spent money on the premises).

<sup>90</sup> J T Developments v Quinn (1991) 62 P. & C.R. 33.

<sup>91</sup> Sen v Headley [1991] Ch. 425 at 440; Re Dale [1994] Ch. 31, 47; Lloyd's Bank plc v Carrick [1996] 4 All E.R. 632 at 640 cf. Drake v Whipp (1996) 28 H.L.R. 531; Yaxley v Gotts [2000] Ch. 162 at 176, 193; Banner Homes Group plc v Luff Developments Ltd [2000] Ch. 372 at 382. The agreements (if any) in these last two cases lacked contractual force, not for want of consideration, but in Yaxley v Gotts on account of failure to comply with the formal requirements imposed by Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989, s.2 (below, pp.178, 179) and in the Banner Homes case for incompleteness (above, p.55).

<sup>92</sup> Canadian Pacific Railway v The King [1931] A.C. 414; Armstrong v Sheppard & Short [1959] 2 Q.B. 384.

<sup>93</sup> e.g. Tanner v Tanner [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1346 (services rendered to promisor in managing his property); Greasley v Cooke [1980] 1 W.L.R. 1306 (personal and nursing services); Wayling v Jones (1993) 69 P. & C.R. 170 (services rendered for virtually no pay); Campbell v Griffin [2001] EWCA Civ 999; [2001] W.T.L.R. 981 (lodger caring for elderly couple); Jennings v Rice [2002] EWCA Civ 159; [2002] W.T.L.R. 367 (below, p.144); cf. Plimmer v Mayor of Wellington (1884) 9 App.Cas. 699 and E. R. Ives Investments Ltd v High [1967] 2 Q.B. 379 (where the landowner benefited from improvements to his land but also—and more significantly—in other ways); Grant v Edwards [1986] Ch. 638 at 657; Maharaj v Chand [1986] A.C. 898 (where, because of local legislation, proprietary estoppel was not argued); Re Basham [1986] 1 W.L.R. 1498; contrast Howard v Jones (1988) 19 Fam. L. 231 (contribution to running cost of another property insufficient).

of the parties claiming under the settlement.”<sup>94</sup> Similarly, the doctrine operated in the absence of any expenditure on the promisor’s land in Crabb v Arun DC.<sup>95</sup> In that case A (a local authority) by its conduct represented to B that B had a right of way from his land over adjoining land owned by A. In reliance on that representation, B sold part of his own land, so that the only access from the remainder to the nearest public highway was by means of the right of way across A’s land. It was held that B had a right to cross A’s land for the purpose of access to his retained land. Detrimental reliance by the promisee here gave rise to a proprietary estoppel even though no benefit was conferred on the promisor.<sup>96</sup>

(c) ALTERNATIVE EXPLANATION: CONTRACT. In Dillwyn v Llemelyn Lord Westbury, while referring to the parties to the transaction as “donor” and “donee” also said that the son’s expenditure “supplied a valuable consideration originally wanting”<sup>97</sup> and, in discussing a hypothetical example similar to the facts of the case before him, he concluded “that the donee acquires a right from the subsequent transaction to call upon the donor to perform that contract and to complete the imperfect donation”.<sup>98</sup> These passages may suggest that he regarded the memorandum as a kind of unilateral contract<sup>99</sup> by which the father promised to convey the land if the son built a house on it. The terms of the memorandum make it improbable that a modern court would so regard it; it is more likely that these terms would now be regarded as negating contractual intention.<sup>1</sup> However, in a number of later cases the rights of a person who had expended money on the property of another have been explained as being based on contract<sup>2</sup>; and often such an explanation was sufficiently plausible to make reliance on a doctrine of proprietary estoppel unnecessary.<sup>3</sup> A unilateral contract to transfer an interest in land has been held to arise out of a promise to make the transfer if the promisee would pay instalments due under a mortgage on the house<sup>4</sup>; it can equally arise out of a promise to make the transfer if the promisee will make improvements to the land, or indeed do any other act.<sup>5</sup>

<sup>94</sup> (1862) 4 D.F. & G. 517 at 521.

<sup>95</sup> [1976] Ch. 179. The case was described in Amalgamated Investment & Property Co Ltd v Texas Commerce International Bank Ltd [1982] Q.B. 84 at 121 as one of “estoppel by convention”; but this would require a dealing between A and B on the basis of common assumption (above, p.120), while in Crabb’s case the dealing was between B and a purchaser from him. In Waltons Stores (Interstate) Ltd v Maher (1988) 64 C.L.R. 387, 403 Crabb’s case was described as one of “promissory estoppel” (see above, p.116); but the requirements of that doctrine (in particular, the requirement of a pre-existing legal relationship: above, p.105) were not satisfied in Crabb’s case, and the effect of the estoppel differed from promissory estoppel in giving rise to a new right: cf. above, pp.105–106.

<sup>96</sup> cf. Hammersmith & Fulham BC v Top Shop Centres Ltd [1990] Ch. 237.

<sup>97</sup> (1862) 4 D.F. & G. 517 at 521.

<sup>98</sup> ibid. at 521.

<sup>99</sup> See above, p.37.

<sup>1</sup> cf. below, p.164.

<sup>2</sup> e.g. Plimmer v Mayor of Wellington (1884) 9 App.Cas. 699 as explained in Canadian Pacific Railway v The King [1931] A.C. 414 at 428; Eves v Eves [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1338; Tanner v Tanner [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1346; cf. Re Sharpe [1980] 1 W.L.R. 219 at 224; and see E R Ives Investments Ltd v High [1967] 2 Q.B. 379 (where there was a contract between the defendant and the claimant’s predecessor in title).

<sup>3</sup> See Lloyd’s Bank plc v Carrick [1996] 4 All E.R. 632, where the existence of a contract of sale precluded reliance by the purchaser on proprietary estoppel, even though that contract was, as against a bank to which the property had been charged as security, void for non-registration. Contrast Yaxley v Gotts [2000] Ch. 162 at 179, where there was no such contract but, at most, an agreement lacking contractual force.

<sup>4</sup> Errington v Errington [1952] 1 Q.B. 290; see above, p.39, n.16, for authorities doubting this case on other points.

<sup>5</sup> e.g. Tanner v Tanner [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1346; merely to maintain the house in repair could be sufficient for the present purpose, even if it did not suffice to raise a proprietary estoppel: above p.136, n.88.

But there are, it is submitted, obstacles to treating all cases of proprietary estoppel as depending on contract.<sup>6</sup> One is that the promises in cases of this kind are often made in a family context, without contractual intention. Another is that the promise may lack consideration because the party relying on the estoppel made no counter-promise and so incurred no obligation, and that the arrangement was one in which it would not be in accordance with the intention of the parties to treat it as a unilateral contract.<sup>7</sup> A third is that the terms of the alleged contract are often too vague to satisfy the requirement of certainty.<sup>8</sup> This point accounts for the view of the Court of Appeal that there was no contract in Crabb v Arun DC<sup>9</sup>: there may have been an implied promise to grant the claimant some right of way across the defendants' land, but no financial or other terms were specified in that promise, so that it would not (even if supported by consideration) have been sufficiently certain to give rise to a contract. Moreover, many arrangements which can give rise to proprietary estoppel are made without any attempt to comply with the stringent formal requirements for the making of contracts for the disposition of interests in land.<sup>10</sup> Failure to comply with these requirements does not prevent such arrangements from giving rise to a proprietary estoppel,<sup>11</sup> but it does prevent them from taking effect as contracts. The possibility of explaining proprietary estoppel on the basis of contract is therefore in practice likely to be restricted to cases where the arrangement does not purport to dispose of an interest in land, e.g. where it amounts to no more than a promise to grant a licence to occupy the land.<sup>12</sup>

(2) Conditions of liability

(a) KINDS OF PROMISES CAPABLE OF GIVING RISE TO A PROPRIETARY ESTOPPEL. A promise may give rise to a proprietary estoppel even though it is not express but is implied: for example, from the fact that the parties acted on the common assumption that one of them was to have the right to reside on the other's property.<sup>13</sup> The promise must be of such a kind that it is reasonable for the promisee to rely on it; the promisor must have intended the promisee would so to rely on it<sup>14</sup>; and it must induce the promisee to believe that a legal right has been, or will be, created in his favour; though there is no further requirement that this belief must be legally well founded.<sup>15</sup> There can

<sup>6</sup> cf. Beaton v McDivitt (1988) 13 N.S.W. L.R. 162 at 170–171.

<sup>7</sup> J T Developments v Quinn (1991) 62 P. & C.R. 33.

<sup>8</sup> See above, p.49. See Gillet v Holt, above, at 230; Banner Homes Group plc v Luff Developments Ltd [2000] Ch. 372; Jennings v Rice [2002] EWCA Civ 159; [2002] W.T.L.R. 367, at [10], [49, 50].

<sup>9</sup> [1976] Ch. 179; Atiyah, 92 L.Q.R. 174, criticises the view that there was no contract but the argument is based on the fallacy that, merely because a promise has some legal effects, it must necessarily have all the effects of a contract: cf. above, p.73, and below, p.148; Millett, 92 L.Q.R. 342; Duncanson, 39 M.L.R. 268.

<sup>10</sup> Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989, s.2(1)–(3). Previously the contract could be made informally, but Law of Property Act 1925, s.40 (replacing part of Statute of Frauds 1677, s.4 and now repealed) had required either a note or memorandum in writing as evidence of the contract, or “part performance” of the contract: The latter requirement could be satisfied by the conduct of the promisee giving rise to proprietary estoppel. cf. the reference to “part performance” in Dillwyn v Llewelyn (1862) 4 D.F. & G. 517 at 521.

<sup>11</sup> See below, p.180.

<sup>12</sup> The earlier legislation referred to in n.10, above, did not apply to a licence to occupy land: Wright v Stavert (1860) 2 F. & E. 721; cf. Taylor v Waters (1816) 7 Taunt. 374 (licence to use opera box). The position seems to be the same under Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989, s.2(6).

<sup>13</sup> e.g. Re Sharpe [1980] 1 W.L.R. 219.

<sup>14</sup> Gillet v Holt [2001] Ch. 210 at 228.

<sup>15</sup> ibid. at 229.

normally be no such belief, and hence no proprietary estoppel, if the promise expressly disclaims legal effect: for example, in one case<sup>16</sup> it was held that no proprietary estoppel arose out of an agreement for the transfer of a number of flats “subject to contract”, it being well known that the effect of these words was to negative the intention to be legally bound.<sup>17</sup> The promisee may have formed “the confident and not unreasonable hope”<sup>18</sup> that the promise would not be withdrawn; but no belief to this effect had been encouraged<sup>19</sup> by the promisor or relied on by the promisee. It seems that a proprietary estoppel could arise out of such an agreement if one of the parties did encourage such a belief in the other and the other acted to his detriment in reliance on that belief.<sup>20</sup> Similar reasoning applies where the promise in terms reserves a right to the promisor wholly to revoke the promise. Thus where a landowner promised her part-time gardener to leave him her house in her will but told him “not to count his chickens before they were hatched,” it was held that no proprietary estoppel arose when, after having made a will in his favour, she then revoked it and made another leaving the property to someone else: in these circumstances it was not unconscionable for the landowner to revoke the promise.<sup>21</sup> The position is the same where the promise, even though it does not in terms reserve a power of revocation, is in its nature revocable and this is a matter of common knowledge so that the promisee must be taken to have been aware of the risk of its being revoked. This will often be the position where the promise is one to make a will in favour of the promisee; but it does not follow as a matter of law that such a promise cannot give rise to proprietary estoppel. In Gillett v Holt<sup>22</sup> the claimant had worked for nearly 40 years in the defendant’s farming business in reliance on the defendant’s frequently repeated promises to leave him the bulk of his estate, and had in various other ways relied on those promises. It was held that the promises were “more than a statement of revocable intention”,<sup>23</sup> and that they were capable of giving rise, and did give rise, to a proprietary estoppel.

The rights which the promisee believes to have been created must, as a general rule, be rights in or over the property of the promisor. Thus a representation by a planning authority to the effect that a landowner does not need permission to carry <sup>16</sup> Attorney-General of Hong Kong v Humphreys Estates (Queen's Gardens) [1987] 1 A.C. 114; the case was said in Waltons Stores (Interstate) Ltd v Maher (1988) 164 C.L.R. 387 at 404 to be “not a case of proprietary estoppel” but (apparently) one of promissory estoppel. But most of the authorities relied on in the Humphreys Estates case were cases of proprietary estoppel; the leading cases on promissory estoppel were not cited; and if the requirements of encouragement and reliance had been satisfied the estoppel would have created a new right, which in English law is not the effect of promissory estoppel: above, p.111. cf. Salomon v Aikens [1993] 1 F.G.L.R. 10 (no proprietary estoppel arising from agreement “subject to lease”); Pridean Ltd v Forest Taverns (1998) P. & C.R. 477 (no proprietary estoppel arising from work done during negotiations which failed to lead to a contract); Edwin Shirley Productions v Workspace Management Ltd [2001] 23 E.G. 158 (negotiations “subject to contract” and “without prejudice” held not to give rise to proprietary estoppel); London & Regional Investments Ltd v TBI plc Belfast International Airport Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 355 (no estoppel or constructive trust where agreement was “subject to contract”).

<sup>17</sup> See above, p.52; below, p.163.

<sup>18</sup> [1987] 1 A.C. 114 at 124.

<sup>19</sup> cf. above, p.136; Brinnand v Emens (1987) 19 H.L.R. 415; and (in a different context) Kelly v Liverpool Maritime Terminals [1988] I.R.L.R. 310, where authorities on proprietary estoppel are cited in a case unconnected with property.

<sup>20</sup> This is assumed in Attorney-General of Hong Kong v Humphreys Estate (Queen's Gardens) above n.16, where the Privy Council at 124 stress that there had been no such encouragement.

<sup>21</sup> Taylor v Dickens [1998] F.L.R. 806, as explained in Gillett v Holt [2001] Ch. 210 at 227.

<sup>22</sup> [2001] Ch. 210.

<sup>23</sup> ibid. at 228.

out development on his own land is not capable of giving rise to a proprietary estoppel.<sup>24</sup> The promisor may, however, make two promises, of which the first relates to the promisor's land while the second relates to that of the promisee; and the two promises may be so closely linked as to form in substance a single transaction. If the doctrine of proprietary estoppel applies to that transaction as a whole, then it can provide the promisee with a remedy in respect of the second promise even though that promise, standing alone, could not have given rise to proprietary estoppel because it related only to the promisee's land. In one case,<sup>25</sup> for example, A promised B (1) to sell blackacre to B to enable B to build on it, and (2) to buy whiteacre from B so that B could pay for the building operations on blackacre. B carried out the building work envisaged in the first of A's promises and it was held that the doctrine of proprietary estoppel provided B with a remedy in respect of the second promise (which had no contractual force), even though that promise related only to B's land. But it was recognised that the doctrine could not have applied to the second promise if it had stood alone and not formed part of a transaction also relating to A's land.<sup>26</sup> It could not, for example, have applied if A had simply made a non-contractual promise to B to buy whiteacre from B, knowing that B intended to use the proceeds of the sale to buy shares from C, and if B had then entered into a contract to that effect with C. Normally, the doctrine applies to promises to grant rights in land to the promisee;<sup>27</sup> it only applies to promises to acquire such rights from him where they are inextricably linked with promises of the former kind.

(b) SUBJECT MATTER OF THE PROMISE. In the cases to which the doctrine has so far been applied, the subject-matter of the promise has always been (or at least included<sup>28</sup>) land. The question whether a promise can give rise to a proprietary estoppel where its subject-matter is property of some other kind remains an open one.<sup>29</sup> Even if the doctrine is extended to such promises, its scope will in one respect remain narrower than that of so-called promissory estoppel<sup>30</sup>: the promise must relate to the acquisition of an interest in the property which is the subject-matter of the promise. It is not enough that the promise should in some other way relate to property: for example, the doctrine of proprietary estoppel would not apply on the facts of Central London Property Trust v High Trees House Ltd.<sup>31</sup>

(c) DETRIMENTAL RELIANCE. The promisee must have relied on the promise or

<sup>24</sup> Western Fish Products Ltd v Penwith DC [1981] 2 All E.R. 204 (decided in 1978); cf. Lloyd's Bank plc v Carrick [1996] 4 All E.R. 632 (above, p.137 n.3).

<sup>25</sup> Salvation Army Trustee Co v West Yorks Metropolitan CC (1981) 41 P. & C.R. 179.

<sup>26</sup> ibid. at 191. The case was approved but distinguished in Attorney-General of Hong Kong v Humphreys Estate (Queen's Gardens) [1987] A.C. 114 at 126–127.

<sup>27</sup> For the possibility that the doctrine may prevent A from asserting rights in B's property against C, a purchaser of that property: see J S Bloor (Measham) Ltd v Calcott (No.2), The Times, December 12, 2001.

<sup>28</sup> See Re Basham [1986] 1 W.L.R. 1498.

<sup>29</sup> Western Fish Products Ltd v Penwith DC [1981] 2 All E.R. 204 at 217; cf. the reference ibid. at 218, and in Crabb v Arun DC [1976] Ch. 179 at 187, to the decision of the Court of Appeal in Moorgate Mercantile Co v Twitchings [1976] Q.B. 225; that decision was reversed by the House of Lords: [1977] A.C. 890. For the view that proprietary estoppel is limited to cases where the subject-matter of the promise is land, see Baird Textile Holdings Ltd v Marks & Spencer plc [2001] EWCA Civ 274; [2001] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 737, at [97].

<sup>30</sup> See above, pp.105–118, 130–134.

<sup>31</sup> [1947] K.B. 130; above, pp.130–131.

representation to his detriment.<sup>32</sup> The requirement has been doubted<sup>33</sup> but in the absence of any such reliance it is hard to see why failure to perform a merely gratuitous promise should be regarded as giving rise to any legal liability. The element of detrimental reliance is necessary to satisfy “the essential test of unconscionability”<sup>34</sup> on which the operation of proprietary estoppel depends; and the existence of the requirement is further supported by the rules (to be discussed below) as to the revocability of the promise.<sup>35</sup> The detriment must be “substantial”, i.e. such as to make it “unjust or inequitable to allow the assurance to be disregarded”<sup>36</sup>; and the question whether it has this character is to be judged “as at the moment when the person who has given the assurance seeks to go back on it”.<sup>37</sup>

Where a promise has been made which is capable of inducing detrimental reliance, and which is in fact followed by such reliance, the question may arise whether the promise actually did induce the reliance. The burden on this issue is on the promisor: that is, it is up to the promisor, in order to escape liability, to show that the promisee would have done the acts in question anyway, even if the promise had not been made.<sup>38</sup> The position appears to be different where a proprietary estoppel arises because both parties have acted under a mistake as to their rights in the land.<sup>39</sup> Here it seems to be up to the party relying on the proprietary estoppel to show that his conduct in relation to the property was in fact induced by his belief that he had an interest in it.<sup>40</sup>

(d) WHETHER RELIANCE MUST RELATE TO SPECIFIC PROPERTY. The authorities are divided on the question whether, to give rise to a proprietary estoppel, the reliance must relate to identifiable property. According to one case, the promisee's conduct must relate to “some specific asset” in which an interest is claimed; so that proprietary estoppel did not arise merely because B rendered services to A in the expectation of receiving some indeterminate benefit under A's will.<sup>41</sup> But in another case reliance on a similar expectation (induced by A's promise) was held sufficient even though it did not relate to any “particular property”.<sup>42</sup> The latter case can perhaps be explained on the ground that the promise did to some extent identify the property.<sup>43</sup> It is submitted that the view

<sup>32</sup> This was the view of the majority of the Court of Appeal in Greasley v Cooke [1980] 1 W.L.R. 1306; the requirement is assumed to exist in Taylor's Fashions Ltd v Liverpool Victoria Trustees Co Ltd [1982] Q.B. 133 n and stated in Grant v Edwards [1986] Ch. 638 at 657; cf. Lloyds Bank Plc v Rosset [1991] 1 A.C. 107 at 132; Hammond v Mitchell [1991] 1 W.L.R. 1127. The fact that there was no such reliance was one reason why the claim based on proprietary estoppel failed in Western Fish Products Ltd v Penwith DC, above: see [1981] 2 All E.R. 204 at 217, in Coombes v Smith [1986] 1 W.L.R. 808, in Attorney-General of Hong Kong v Humphreys Estate (Queen's Gardens) [1987] A.C. 114, in Mecca Leisure v The London Residuary Body [1988] C.L.Y. 1375, in Jones v Stones [1999] 1 W.L.R. 1739 and in Jennings v Rice [2002] EWCA Civ 159; [2002] W.T.L.R. 367 at [21], [49].

<sup>33</sup> By Lord Denning M.R. in Greasley v Cooke, above at p.1311. The argument may be influenced by the analogy of promissory estoppel (see above, p.110); but the two doctrines are distinct: below, p.146.

<sup>34</sup> Gillett v Holt [2001] Ch 210 at 232; Jennings v Rice [2002] EWCA Civ 159; [2002] W.T.L.R. 367 at [21], [49].

<sup>35</sup> See below, p.142.

<sup>36</sup> Gillett v Holt, above, n.34, at 232.

<sup>37</sup> ibid.

<sup>38</sup> Greasley v Cooke, above; cf. Grant v Edwards [1986] Ch. 638; Re Basham [1986] 1 W.L.R. 1498; Hammersmith & Fulham BC v Top Shop Centres Ltd [1990] Ch. 237; Wayling v Jones (1993) 69 P. & C.R. 170 at 172.

<sup>39</sup> See above, pp.134–136.

<sup>40</sup> Taylor's Fashions Ltd v Liverpool Victoria Trustees Co Ltd [1982] Q.B. 133 note; cf. Coombes v Smith [1986] 1 W.L.R. 808.

<sup>41</sup> Layton v Martin [1986] 2 F.L.R. 277.

<sup>42</sup> Re Basham [1986] 1 W.L.R. 1498 at 1508.

<sup>43</sup> By referring to the promisor's cottage. In Gillett v Holt [2001] Ch. 210 the property was likewise identified, if not very precisely; cf. Jennings v Rice, above, n.32 at [50], where the promise again related in part to the promisor's house.

that the promise must relate to identified or identifiable property is to be preferred; for, without some such limitation on its scope the doctrine of proprietary estoppel could extend to any gift promise on which the promisee had relied to his detriment. Such a very broad doctrine would be fundamentally inconsistent with the doctrine of consideration<sup>44</sup> and, indeed, with the rule that the doctrine of promissory estoppel gives rise to no new rights.<sup>45</sup>

2. Effects of the Doctrine

(1) Revocability

Proprietary estoppel will not arise at all where the promise to confer a benefit on the promisee is revocable in the sense that it reserves a power to the promisor wholly to deprive the promisee of that benefit.<sup>46</sup> But even where the promise does not allow the promisor to do this, and so is capable of giving rise to a proprietary estoppel, the extent of the promisee's rights under the estoppel may be limited by terms of the promise giving the promisor a power of putting an end to those rights. Thus if the landowner promises to allow the promisee to stay on the land "until I decide to sell", then the promisee cannot, merely by spending money on improvements to the land, acquire any right to stay there for a longer period.<sup>47</sup> Even where the promise is not expressed to be revocable, it can be revoked before the promisee has acted on it. Thus in Dillwyn v Llewelyn<sup>48</sup> the father could have revoked his promise before the son had started to build on the land<sup>49</sup> and in Crabb v Arun DC<sup>50</sup> the promise to grant a right of way could have been revoked before the promisee had, by selling off part of his land, made it impossible for himself to obtain access to the retained land except by means of the promised right of way. In this respect proprietary estoppel resembles so-called promissory estoppel (under which promises are similarly revocable<sup>51</sup>) and differs from contractually binding promises which are not revocable unless they expressly or impliedly so provide. The cases of proprietary estoppel assume that once the promisee has acted on the representation, he cannot be restored to his original position. Where he has made improvements to land, this will generally be the case. Where a restoration of the status quo is physically possible, it seems that a promise giving rise to a proprietary estoppel could be revoked even after the promisee had acted on it, provided that the promisor in fact restored the promisee to the position in which he was before he had acted in reliance on the promise.

A promise which has given rise to proprietary estoppel may also be none the less revocable, because the court considers it appropriate in this way to limit the effects to be given to the promise.<sup>52</sup>

(2) Operation of proprietary estoppel

Where the conditions required to give rise to a proprietary estoppel have been satisfied, the effect of the doctrine is said to be to confer an "equity" on the promisee. Two further <sup>44</sup> See, e.g. above, p.67.

<sup>45</sup> See above, p.111.

<sup>46</sup> See above, pp.138–140.

<sup>47</sup> E & L Berg Homes v Gray (1979) 253 E.G. 473.

<sup>48</sup> (1862) 1 D.F. & G. 517; above, p.136.

<sup>49</sup> cf. Pascoe v Turner [1979] 1 W.L.R. 431 at 435 (where before the promisee's action in reliance on the promise she was said to be only a licensee at will).

<sup>50</sup> [1976] Ch. 179; above, pp.136–137.

<sup>51</sup> See above, p.111.

<sup>52</sup> See below, p.143, at n.60.

questions then arise: namely, what is the extent of that “equity”, and what are the remedies for its enforcement.<sup>53</sup> In practice these questions tend to merge into each other; but an attempt to deal with them in turn will be made in the following discussion.

(a) EXTENT OF THE EQUITY. At one extreme, the promisee may be entitled to conveyance of the fee simple in the property which is the subject-matter of the promise, as in Dillwyn v Llewelyn.<sup>54</sup> On the other hand, in Inwards v Baker,<sup>55</sup> where a son had also built a house for himself at his father's suggestion on the latter's land, the result of the estoppel was only to entitle the son to occupy the house for life. Similar results were reached in a number of later cases in which the promisee made improvements to the promisor's property (or otherwise acted to his detriment) in reliance on a promise, or common understanding, that the promisee would be entitled to reside there for as long as he or she wished to do so<sup>56</sup>; or for some shorter period: e.g. until her children had left school<sup>57</sup>; or that a lease of the premises, to which the promise related, would be granted to him.<sup>58</sup> Dillwyn v Llewelyn can be reconciled with these cases by reference to the terms of the respective promises, which may be expressed either as an outright gift of the property or merely as an assurance that the promisee would be entitled to reside in the property for the specified period. Another way of giving effect to a promise of the latter kind is by the grant of a long, non-assignable lease at a nominal rent, on terms that ensured that the right of occupation was personal to the promisee.<sup>59</sup> In other cases, not concerned with rights of personal occupation but with the right to keep and use structures on promisor's land, the promisee has been held entitled only to a revocable licence.<sup>60</sup>

Where the circumstances are such as to give rise to an estoppel against the landowner, the estoppel is equally available against a third party who claims later to have obtained title to the land by way of gift from the landowner.<sup>61</sup>

The estoppel may operate conditionally where the promisee has acted in reliance on the promise but the terms of the promise show that the promisor did not intend to give up his title gratuitously. This was the position in Lim Teng Huan v Ang Swee Chuan,<sup>62</sup> where A built a house on land jointly owned by him and L, who had agreed that he was to have no title to the house and would exchange his share in the land for other land. The arrangement had no contractual force as the other land was not identified with sufficient certainty; and it was held that L was estopped from asserting title to the house but that he was entitled to be compensated for the loss of his share in the land.

Similarly, where the promise is one to allow the promisee access to his own land over that of the promisor, the effect of the proprietary estoppel will be to entitle the promisee to an easement or licence on terms.<sup>63</sup> Such terms, if not agreed between the parties, may be imposed by the court: they can specify the extent of the permitted user as well as any

<sup>53</sup> Crabb v Arun DC [1976] Ch. 179 at 193, per Scarman L.J.

<sup>54</sup> (1862) D.F. & G. 517; Durant v Heritage [1994] E.G.C.S. 134; or, in the exceptional cases discussed on p.140 above, at n.25 and n.27, to orders enforcing the promises made in those cases.

<sup>55</sup> [1965] 2 Q.B. 507; Maudsley, 81 L.Q.R. 183.

<sup>56</sup> Jones v Jones [1977] 1 W.L.R. 438; Re Sharpe [1980] 1 W.L.R. 219; Greasley v Cooke [1980] 1 W.L.R. 1306.

<sup>57</sup> Tanner v Tanner [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1346 (where there was a contract: cf. above, p.137); Yaxley v Gotts [2000] Ch. 162 (where the remedy was based on constructive trust).

<sup>58</sup> J T Developments v Quinn (1991) 62 P. & C.R. 33.

<sup>59</sup> Griffiths v Williams [1978] E.G. Digest of Cases 919; cf. Jones v Jones [1977] 1 W.L.R. 438.

<sup>60</sup> Canadian Pacific Railway v The King [1931] A.C. 414; Armstrong v Sheppard & Short [1959] Q.B. 384.

<sup>61</sup> Voyce v Voyce (1991) 62 P. & C.R. 290.

<sup>62</sup> [1991] 1 W.L.R. 113.

<sup>63</sup> E R Ives Investments Ltd v High [1967] 2 Q.B. 379; Crabb v Arun DC [1976] Ch. 179.

payment that the promisee may be required to make for the exercise of the right.<sup>64</sup> However, an order for such payment was held not to be appropriate in one case, because the promisor had already obtained other benefits under the agreement.<sup>65</sup> It may also be inappropriate for other reasons, as the following discussion of the promisee's remedy will show.

(b) REMEDY. The remedy in cases of proprietary estoppel is "extremely flexible", its object being "to do what is equitable in all the circumstances".<sup>66</sup> Although the court thus has a considerable discretion with regard to the remedy in cases of proprietary estoppel, that discretion is not a "completely unfettered"<sup>67</sup> one and a "principled approach"<sup>68</sup> must be taken to its exercise. In giving effect to the "equity"<sup>69</sup> account must be taken, not only of the claimant's expectations "but also of the extent of his detrimental reliance"<sup>70</sup>; and "there must be proportionality between the expectation and the detriment".<sup>71</sup> For the purpose of achieving such "proportionality" regard must be had to the degree of precision of the promise giving rise to the expectation. Where this amounts to an assurance that an interest in specific property will be transferred in return for specified acts, then an order for the specific enforcement of that promise (once the acts have been done) may be the appropriate remedy.<sup>72</sup> Where, on the other hand, the terms of the promise are less precise, amounting only to an assurance that some indeterminate benefit will be conferred on the promisee, so that the expectations reasonably arising from it are, at least objectively, uncertain, then the court will not give effect in full to expectations which the promisee may in fact have formed if they are "uncertain or extravagant or out of all proportion to the detriment which the claimant has suffered".<sup>73</sup> In such cases, compensation in money is likely to be the more appropriate remedy. That compensation must be proportionate to the detriment, but need not be its precise equivalent<sup>74</sup>: the fact that the detriment was incurred in response to a promise indicating (though in vague terms) some higher level of recompense is also to be taken into account. The balancing of such factors is illustrated by Jennings v Rice<sup>75</sup> where the claimant had worked as gardener-handyman for an elderly widow for some 17 years without pay and had also provided personal care for her in the years of increasing frailty towards the end of her life. He had done so in response to her statements that "he would be alright" and that "all this will be yours one day".<sup>76</sup> The latter statement referred to her house and its contents, valued on her death at £435,000 out of a total estate of £1.285 million. The Court of Appeal upheld an award of £200,000 as being properly proportionate to the detriment suffered by the claimant in reliance on the assurances given to him.

Apart from the terms of the promise and the extent of the promisee's reliance on them, the court may also take into account the conduct of the promisor after the facts giving rise to the estoppel. Thus in Crabb v Arun DC<sup>77</sup> the defendants acted without <sup>64</sup> Crabb v Arun DC, [1976] Ch. 179 at 199.

<sup>65</sup> E R Ives Investments Ltd v High [1967] 2 Q.B. 379.

<sup>66</sup> Rochuck v Mungovin [1994] 2 A.C. 224 at 235; cf. the remedy granted in Gillet v Holt [2001] Ch. 210.

<sup>67</sup> Jennings v Rice [2002] EWCA Civ 159; [2002] W.T.L.R. 367 at [43].

<sup>68</sup> ibid.

<sup>69</sup> See above, p.143.

<sup>70</sup> Jennings v Rice, above, at [49].

<sup>71</sup> ibid. at [36]; cf. ibid. at [56] ("proportionality (between remedy and detriment)").

<sup>72</sup> ibid. at [45].

<sup>73</sup> ibid. at [50].

<sup>74</sup> ibid. at [51].

<sup>75</sup> See above, at n.67.

<sup>76</sup> At [9].

<sup>77</sup> [1976] Ch. 179.

warning in blocking the claimants' access to his land. In view of this "high-handedness"<sup>78</sup> and the resulting loss to the claimant, he was not required to make the payment that would otherwise have been a condition of the exercise of the right of way. Similarly, in Pascoe v Turner<sup>79</sup> a proprietary estoppel arose when a man told a woman with whom he had formerly cohabited that the house in which they had lived was hers, and she later spent some £230 of her limited resources on repairs and improvements to it. The Court of Appeal relied on the man's "ruthlessness"<sup>80</sup> in seeking to evict the promisee as a ground for ordering him to convey the fee simple to her. The submission that she should have no more than an irrevocable licence to occupy the house was rejected since this would not protect her against a bona fide purchaser from the promisor. The result seems, with respect, unduly punitive; and intermediate possibilities (such as granting the promisee a long lease<sup>81</sup>) were not put before the court.

Pascoe v Turner illustrates the possibility that the grant of an irrevocable licence to remain on the property may constitute an unsatisfactory remedy because it will not adequately secure the promisee's possession. It may also be unsatisfactory on account of its inflexibility: thus in Inwards v Baker<sup>82</sup> the remedy would have been of no use to the promisee, had he wanted to move elsewhere; nor would his dependants have had any remedy had he died shortly after completing the house. In such cases a remedy by way of compensation in money would be more satisfactory for the promisee; and it would also have the advantage for the promisor that dealing with the property would not be impeded for an indefinite time.<sup>83</sup> Such a remedy was granted in Dodsworth v Dodsworth<sup>84</sup> where the promisees spent £700 on improvements to the promisor's bungalow in reliance on an implied promise (not intended to have contractual force) that they could live there as if it were their home. The Court of Appeal held that to give the promisees a right of occupation for an indefinite time would confer on them a greater interest than had been contemplated by the parties; and that the most appropriate remedy was to repay them their outlay on improvements. Compensation in money will also be the more appropriate remedy where, as a practical matter, the promise which gives rise to the estoppel cannot be specifically enforced; for example, where its performance would involve occupation of premises by, and co-operation between, members of a family who later quarrel,<sup>85</sup> or between a couple whose relationship has broken down.<sup>86</sup> Where there is evidence that the improved property has increased in value by reason of market fluctuations, it is submitted that the amount recoverable by the promisee should be increased correspondingly; conversely it should be reduced where the market value of the property has declined.<sup>87</sup>

<sup>78</sup> ibid. at 199; cf. ibid. at 189.

<sup>79</sup> [1979] 1 W.L.R. 431; Sufrin, 42 M.L.R. 574.

<sup>80</sup> At 439; cf. the reference in Gillett v Holt [2001] Ch 210 at 235 to the promisee's "bitter humiliation" on being summarily dismissed and made the subject of a police investigation for allegations of dishonesty which the promisor made no attempt to justify at the trial of the civil action.

<sup>81</sup> As in Griffiths v Williams [1978] E.G. Digest of Cases 919.

<sup>82</sup> [1965] 2 Q.B. 507.

<sup>83</sup> cf. criticisms of the law by Browne-Wilkinson J. in Re Sharpe [1980] 1 W.L.R. 219 at 226.

<sup>84</sup> [1973] E.G. Digest of Cases 233; to the extent that the reasoning is based on the provisions of Settled Land Act 1925, s.1, it is criticised in Griffiths v Williams [1978] E.G. Digest of Cases 919; cf. Campbell v Griffin [2001] EWCA Civ 990; [2001] W.T.L.R. 981; Jennings v Rice [2002] EWCA Civ 159; [2002] W.T.L.R. 367.

<sup>85</sup> Burrows and Burrows v Sharp (1991) 23 H.L.R. 82; cf. Baker v Baker (1993) 25 H.L.R. 408. (where the action was for damages).

<sup>86</sup> Clough v Kelly (1996) 72 P. & C.R. D22.

<sup>87</sup> cf. Cheese v Thomas [1994] 1 W.L.R. 129, a case of undue influence.

In Dodsworth v Dodsworth<sup>88</sup> the court awarded compensation even though, when the action was brought, the promisee was still in possession of the improved property. More commonly this form of remedy is granted where the promisee is no longer in possession, having either left voluntarily<sup>89</sup> or been lawfully ejected as a result of legal proceedings.<sup>90</sup> Where the promisee has been wrongly ordered to give up possession, compensation in money is similarly available,<sup>91</sup> though in such a case the court may alternatively order the promisee to be put back into possession of the premises.<sup>92</sup> The compensation has been assessed in a variety of ways: at the cost of improvements made with the promisee's money<sup>93</sup>; at a proportionate interest in the property<sup>94</sup>; or at the reasonable value of the right of occupation, based (presumably) on the cost to the promisee of equivalent alternative accommodation.<sup>95</sup> The flexibility of the remedy also enables the court to combine monetary compensation with specific relief: for example, in Gillett v Holt<sup>96</sup> the promisee was awarded part of the property to which the promise referred, together with a cash payment to compensate him for his exclusion from the farming business on that property.

The court may, finally, deny the promisee a remedy where, on balance, greater hardship would be produced by giving effect to the promise than by allowing the promisor to go back on it. This was the position in Sledmore v Dalby,<sup>97</sup> where the promisee had contributed to major improvements to the property but at the time of the proceedings had already enjoyed 20 years' rent-free occupation and was gainfully employed, while the promisor was a widow living on social security benefits. The promisee's claim to be entitled to a licence for life to stay in the house was in these circumstances rejected and the promisor was held entitled to possession.

(3) Proprietary and promissory estoppels contrasted<sup>98</sup>

Proprietary and promissory estoppels have a number of points in common. Both can arise from promises<sup>99</sup>; consideration is not, while action in reliance is, a necessary condition for their operation<sup>1</sup>; and both are, within limits, revocable.<sup>2</sup> But there are also important differences between the two doctrines.

The scope of proprietary is in two respects narrower than that of promissory estoppel. First, proprietary estoppel is restricted promises relating to property (generally the land) of another. Promissory estoppel may, on the other hand, arise (if other necessary conditions are satisfied<sup>3</sup>) out of any promise that strict legal rights will not be enforced: there is no need for those rights to relate to land or other property. Secondly proprietary estoppel requires the promisee to have acted to his detriment,<sup>4</sup> while promissory estoppel may operate even though the promisee merely performs a pre-existing duty and

<sup>88</sup> [1973] E.G. Digest of Cases 233.

<sup>89</sup> As in Hussey v Palmer [1972] 1 W.L.R. 1286 and Eves v Eves [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1338.

<sup>90</sup> As in Plimmer v Mayor of Wellington (1884) 9 App.Cas. 699.

<sup>91</sup> Tanner v Tanner [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1346 (where there was a contract).

<sup>92</sup> ibid.

<sup>93</sup> Hussey v Palmer [1972] 1 W.L.R. 1286; Burrows and Burrows v Sharp (1991) 23 H.L.R. 82.

<sup>94</sup> Eves v Eves [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1338.

<sup>95</sup> Tanner v Tanner [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1346; Baker v Baker (1993) 25 H.L.R. 408.

<sup>96</sup> [2001] Ch. 210.

<sup>97</sup> (1996) 72 P. & C.R. 196.

<sup>98</sup> Evans [1988] Conv. 346.

<sup>99</sup> See above, pp.107, 116, 131, 136. For use of the expressions "promissory estoppel" see above, p.116.

<sup>1</sup> See above, pp.109, 131, 141.

<sup>2</sup> See above, pp.111, 131, 142.

<sup>3</sup> See above, pp.107–111, 130–134.

<sup>4</sup> See above, p.141.

so suffers no detriment in the sense of doing something that he was not previously bound to do.<sup>5</sup> This difference between the two doctrines follows from the fact that promissory estoppel is (unlike proprietary estoppel) concerned only with the variation or abandonment of rights arising out of a pre-existing legal relationship between promisor and promisee.

On the other hand, the scope of proprietary is in two respects wider than that of promissory estoppel. First, promissory estoppel arises only out of a representation or promise that is "clear" or "precise and unambiguous".<sup>6</sup> Proprietary estoppel, on the other hand, can arise where there is no actual promise: for example, where one party makes improvements to another's land under a mistake<sup>7</sup> and the other either knows of the mistake<sup>8</sup> or seeks to take unconscionable advantage of it.<sup>9</sup> Secondly (and more significantly), while promissory estoppel is essentially defensive in nature,<sup>10</sup> proprietary estoppel can give rise to a cause of action.<sup>11</sup> The promisee is not merely entitled to raise the estoppel as a defence to an action of trespass or to a claim for possession: the court can make an order for the land to be conveyed to him,<sup>12</sup> or for compensation<sup>13</sup> or for such other remedy as appropriate.<sup>14</sup> Although the authorities support this second distinction between the two kinds of estoppel, they do not make any attempt to explain or justify it. It is submitted that the explanation is in part historical and terminological. Proprietary estoppel was originally explained in terms of acquiescence<sup>15</sup> or encouragement.<sup>16</sup> Hence no conflict with the requirement that promises must be supported by consideration was perceived; or where it was perceived the facts were said to give rise to a contract.<sup>17</sup> Promissory estoppel, on the other hand, dealt principally with the renegotiation of contracts; it obviously depended on giving binding effect to promises, and it did so in the context of releases and variations, in which the common law requirement of consideration had long been established.<sup>18</sup> The rule that promissory estoppel gives rise to no cause of action was evolved to prevent what would otherwise be an obvious conflict between the doctrines of promissory estoppel and consideration. In cases of proprietary estoppel there was no such conflict where liability was based on "acquiescence"; and where it was based on "encouragement" the conflict, though sometimes real enough, was at least less obvious. There are, moreover, two aspects of proprietary estoppel which help to justify the distinction. These are that the acts done by the promisee are not ones which he was under any previous legal obligation to perform; and that generally their effect would be unjustly to enrich the promisor if he were allowed to go back on his promise.<sup>19</sup> In these respects, the facts on which proprietary estoppel is based provide

<sup>5</sup> See above, p.110.

<sup>6</sup> See above, p.107.

<sup>7</sup> See above, pp.134–136.

<sup>8</sup> Wilmott v Barber (1880) 15 Ch.D. 96 at 105 (the claim in that case failed as the party against whom it was made did not know of the extent of his own rights or of the other party's mistake).

<sup>9</sup> Taylor's Fashions Ltd v Liverpool Victoria Trustees Co Ltd [1982] Q.B. 133 n.

<sup>10</sup> See above, pp.111–114.

<sup>11</sup> Crabb v Arun DC [1976] Ch. 179 at 187; Taylor's Fashions Ltd v Liverpool Victoria Trustees Co Ltd [1982] Q.B. 133n. at 148; Durant v Heritage [1994] E.G.C.S. 134, where the words "promissory estoppel" appear to be a misprint for "proprietary estoppel."

<sup>12</sup> e.g. Dillwyn v Llewelyn (1862) 4 D.F. & G. 517.

<sup>13</sup> e.g. Eves v Eves [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1338.

<sup>14</sup> See above, pp.144–146.

<sup>15</sup> Wilmott v Barber (1880) 15 Ch.D. 96 at 105.

<sup>16</sup> Ramsden v Dyson (1866) L.R. 1 H.L. 129 at 170.

<sup>17</sup> Dillwyn v Llewelyn (1862) 4 D.F. & G. 517 at 522; above, pp.136–138.

<sup>18</sup> See above, pp.99–102.

<sup>19</sup> See the reference to the landowner's "profit" in Ramsden v Dyson (1866) L.R. 1 H.L. 129 at 141 and cf. above, pp.136–137.

more compelling grounds for relief<sup>20</sup> than those commonly found in cases of promissory estoppel.

While the two doctrines are in these respects distinct it can also be argued that they have a common basis, namely that it would be unconscionable for the promisor to go back on his promise after the promisee has acted on it; and that the precise labels to be attached to them are “immaterial”.<sup>21</sup> It is perhaps for these reasons that the distinction between the two kinds of estoppel was described as “not . . . helpful” by Scarman L.J. in Crabb v Arun DC.<sup>22</sup> That decision was, in a later case, said to illustrate “the virtual equation of promissory estoppel and proprietary estoppel”,<sup>23</sup> perhaps because it extended the operation of proprietary estoppel beyond the situations originally within its scope, namely those in which the promisor would be unjustly enriched by the work done by the promisee on the land unless some legal effect were given to the promise. Nevertheless it is submitted that the doctrines are distinct in the respects stated above.<sup>24</sup> Attempts to unite them by posing “simply” the question whether it would be “unconscionable”,<sup>25</sup> for the promisor to go back on his promise are, for reasons given earlier in this Chapter,<sup>26</sup> unhelpful<sup>27</sup>; and they are also open to the objection that they provide no basis on which a legal doctrine capable of yielding predictable results can be developed.

(4) Proprietary estoppel and contract contrasted

We have seen that some cases which have been said to support the doctrine of proprietary estoppel can be explained on the alternative basis that there was a contract between the parties.<sup>28</sup> But this explanation will not cover all the cases; for proprietary estoppel can operate even though the conditions required for the creation of a contract are not satisfied. The need to discuss the doctrine in this Chapter arises precisely because a promise can give rise to a proprietary estoppel even though it is not supported by consideration; and a promise can also give rise to such an estoppel even though it cannot take effect as a contract because it is not sufficiently certain or because it fails to comply with formal requirements. Moreover, the effect of a proprietary estoppel differs from that of a contract. Sometimes, indeed, the result of a proprietary estoppel is to give effect to the promise in the terms in which it was made<sup>29</sup>; but such a result does not

<sup>20</sup> See Fuller and Eisenberg, Basic Contract Law (3rd ed.), p.70: “Unjust enrichment presents a more urgent case for judicial intervention than losses through reliance which do not benefit the defendant.” cf. Fuller and Perdue, 46 Yale L.J. 52, 56 (1936).

<sup>21</sup> Taylor's Fashions Ltd v Liverpool Victoria Trustee Co Ltd [1982] Q.B. 133 n.at 153, where, however, a distinction is also drawn between “promissory estoppel” and the principle in Ramsden v Dyson (1866) L.R. 1 H.L. 129 (i.e. proprietary estoppel).

<sup>22</sup> [1976] Ch. 179 at 193.

<sup>23</sup> Taylor's Fashions Ltd v Liverpool Victoria Trustees Co Ltd [1982] Q.B. 133 n.at 153. The use of “promissory estoppel” to describe a typical proprietary estoppel situation in Griffiths v Williams [1978] E.G. Digest of Cases 919 at 921 may be a misprint.; cf. also above, p.137, n.95.

<sup>24</sup> At nn.11 to 22.

<sup>25</sup> Taylor's Fashions Ltd v Liverpool Victoria Trustees Co Ltd [1982] Q.B. 133 n. at 155; cf. Habib Bank Ltd v Habib Bank AG Zürich [1981] 1 W.L.R. 1265 at 1285; Amalgamated Investment & Property Co Ltd v Texas Commerce International Bank Ltd [1982] Q.B. 84 at 104, 122.

<sup>26</sup> See above, p.115.

<sup>27</sup> cf. Haslemere Estates Ltd v Baker [1982] 1 W.L.R. 1009 at 1119 where Megarry V.-C., rejecting the argument that proprietary estoppel arises “whenever justice and good conscience requires it,” said “I do not think that the subject is as wide and indefinite as that”. Dicta emphasising the flexibility of the remedy (above, p.144) must be read subject to the requirement to adopt a “principle approach” (ibid.) to this aspect of the doctrine; and they should, in any event, not be taken to refer also to conditions of liability.

<sup>28</sup> See above, p.137.

<sup>29</sup> e.g. Dillwyn v Llemelyn (1862) 4 D.F. & G. 517.

follow as of right. We have seen that the promisee's rights may depend, not only on the terms of the promise and on the extent to which he has acted on it, but also on the subsequent conduct of the promisor. Thus in Crabb v Arun DC the promisee would have had to make some payment for the right of way but for the "high-handedness"<sup>30</sup> of the promisor; and in Pascoe v Turner the promisee would not have been entitled to the fee simple of the house (but only to an irrevocable licence for life) if the promisor had not shown a "ruthless"<sup>31</sup> determination to evict her. The rights arising under a binding contract are fixed at its formation and not subject to such variation in the light of the court's approval or disapproval of the subsequent conduct of one of the parties. For this reason, and because proprietary estoppel may be revocable,<sup>32</sup> it will generally be more advantageous to a party to show the existence of a binding contract (if he can) than to rely on a proprietary estoppel.

SECTION 8. SPECIAL CASES

1. Defective Promises<sup>33</sup>

Mutual promises are generally consideration for each other,<sup>34</sup> but difficulty is sometimes felt in treating a promise as consideration for another if the first promise suffered from some defect by reason of which it was not legally binding. The law on this topic is based rather on expediency than on any supposedly logical deductions which might be drawn from the doctrine of consideration. The question whether a defective promise can constitute consideration for a counter-promise depends on the policy of the rule of law making the former promise defective.

(a) POLICY CONSIDERATIONS. One group of cases concerns contracts made between persons, one of whom lacks contractual capacity.<sup>35</sup> A minor can enforce a promise made to him under such a contract, even though the only consideration for that promise is his own promise, which does not bind him by reason of his minority.<sup>36</sup> The same rule applies to contracts with mental patients.<sup>37</sup> The reason for these rules is that it is the policy of the law to protect the person under the incapacity, and not the other party, who is therefore not allowed to rely on that incapacity. A contrasting group of cases concerns promises which are illegal. Obviously the illegal promise cannot be enforced; and if both promises are illegal the consequence that neither can be enforced follows from the policy of the invalidating rule rather than from the fact that an illegal promise cannot constitute consideration.<sup>38</sup> But in some cases of illegal contracts the illegality affects the promise or promises of only one party: this is, for example, often the position where the contract is in restraint of trade. In such a case, the party who makes the illegal promise cannot enforce the counter-promise (e.g. to pay a sum of money) if the illegal promise constitutes the sole consideration for the counter-promise.<sup>39</sup> Indeed, the position is the same if the illegal promise is the main consideration for the counter-promise, even though

<sup>30</sup> [1976] Ch. 179 at 199.

<sup>31</sup> [1979] 1 W.L.R. 431 at 438.

<sup>32</sup> See above, p.142.

<sup>33</sup> Treitel, 77 L.Q.R. 83.

<sup>34</sup> See above, pp.70.

<sup>35</sup> See Chap.13 below.

<sup>36</sup> Holt v Ward Clarendieux (1732) 2 Stra. 937; below, p.549.

<sup>37</sup> See below, p.557.

<sup>38</sup> As suggested in Nerot v Wallace (1789) 3 T.R. 17 at 23.

<sup>39</sup> e.g. Wyatt v Kreglinger & Fernau [1933] 1 K.B. 793.

there was also some other consideration for it.<sup>40</sup> The reason for this rule lies in the policy of the law to discourage illegal bargains.

(b) PERFORMANCE OF DEFECTIVE PROMISE. Where a defective promise does not amount to consideration its performance can nevertheless sometimes provide consideration for the counter-promise. For example, a mere promise to negotiate has no contractual force<sup>41</sup> and so cannot constitute consideration for a counter-promise; but actually carrying on the negotiations can satisfy the requirement of consideration.<sup>42</sup> A similar principle accounts for the rule that a victim of misrepresentation, duress or undue influence can sue but not be sued: by suing, he affirms the contract, makes his own promise binding on himself, and so supplies consideration for the other party's promise. But where the promise of one party is illegal, even its performance does not entitle that party to enforce the counter-promise,<sup>43</sup> for the law must not give him any incentive to perform the illegal promise.

(c) PROMISE DEFECTIVE BY STATUTE. Where one of the promises is defective by statute, the terms of the statute may solve the problem whether the person giving the defective promise can sue on the counter-promise.<sup>44</sup> Thus a party who gives a promise which is defective under s.4 of the Statute of Frauds 1677, or under s.34 of the Matrimonial Causes Act 1973, may, in spite of not being bound by that promise, be entitled to enforce the counter-promise<sup>45</sup>; and this may be so even though for other purposes (such as the validity of a disposition) a promise, precisely because it is defective by statute, does amount to consideration.<sup>46</sup> Where a statute invalidates a promise but does not provide for the effect of its invalidity on the other party's promise, it seems that the invalid promise is not good consideration<sup>47</sup>; but, unless the promise is illegal, the party giving it can sue on the counter-promise if he actually performs his own promise.<sup>48</sup>

(d) BOTH PROMISES DEFECTIVE BY STATUTE. A statute may also invalidate both promises: this is the position with regard to wagering contracts which are "null and void" under s.18 of the Gaming Act 1845.<sup>49</sup> Performance of one such promise clearly would not make the other enforceable<sup>50</sup>; but the question whether performance of the void promise could constitute consideration might also arise in another context, for example in the context of the question whether the performance amounted to consideration for the purpose of a rule of law by which a transfer or disposition of property was effective only if made for valuable consideration. This was the question which arose in

<sup>40</sup> See Goodinson v Goodinson [1954] 2 Q.B. 118; the actual decision is obsolete in view of Matrimonial Causes Act 1973, s.34, below, p.118.

<sup>41</sup> See above, pp.59–62.

<sup>42</sup> Sepong Engineering Construction Co Ltd v Formula One Management Ltd [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 602 at 611, where it was also said that damages for breach of the resulting contract would be no more than nominal: below, p.890. The same reasoning applied when, before the Corporate Bodies Contracts Act 1960, unsealed promises made by a corporation did not bind it: see Fishmongers' Co v Robertson (1843) 5 Man. & G. 131; Kidderminster Corp v Hardwick (1873) L.R. 9 Ex. 13.; cf. Re Dale [1994] Ch. 31 at 38.

<sup>43</sup> e.g. Wyatt v Kreglinger & Fernall [1933] 1 K.B. 793.

<sup>44</sup> See Laythoarp v Bryant (1836) 2 Bing.N.C. 735.

<sup>45</sup> See below, pp.183, 447. For more elaborate provisions of this kind, see Financial Services and Markets Act 2000, ss.20, 26–30.

<sup>46</sup> Re Kumar [1993] 1 W.L.R. 224, where a void promise was held not to constitute consideration for the purpose of protecting third parties under Insolvency Act 1986, s.339 (above, p.75).

<sup>47</sup> Clayton v Jennings (1760) 2 W.B. 706.

<sup>48</sup> This, it is submitted, is the best justification for Rajbenback v Mamon [1955] 1 Q.B. 283; see 77 L.Q.R. 95. For another view, see Unger 19 M.L.R. 99.

<sup>49</sup> See below, p.520.

<sup>50</sup> cf. above at n.43.

Lipkin Gorman v Karpnale Ltd,<sup>51</sup> where stolen money was used by the thief for gambling at a club of which he was a member, and it was held that the club had not received the money for valuable consideration so as to be entitled, as against the owner of the money, to retain it. We have already noted that the club did not provide consideration for the payment by exchanging the money for gaming chips.<sup>52</sup> The present point is that the club did not provide consideration for the payments made to it by the member by allowing him to gamble and promising to pay, or actually paying him, the amount of any bets which he had won. The club's promise to pay did not amount to consideration since it was void under s.18 of the 1845 Act. Nor did performance of that promise constitute consideration; for such a payment was said by Lords Templeman and Goff to be treated in law as a completed voluntary gift to the winner.<sup>53</sup> To treat the payment of losses as gifts may not be easy to reconcile with the "common sense approach"<sup>54</sup> used in the same case to rebut the argument that the club had provided consideration for the payments by supplying the member with gaming chips. In another part of his speech Lord Goff said that "the practical business position is that if the casino does not pay winnings when they are due it will simply go out of business. So the obligation in honour to pay winnings is an obligation which, in business terms, the casino has to comply with".<sup>55</sup> Conversely, a member who did not pay losses when due would no doubt be excluded from the club. It is scarcely realistic to describe payments made under such pressures as voluntary gifts. But the view that the club did not provide consideration by paying bets which it had lost can be explained by reference to the context in which it arose: it helped to protect the victim of the theft,<sup>56</sup> or at least formed the first step in a line of reasoning which enabled the House of Lords to split the loss between the victim of the theft and the equally innocent recipient of the money.<sup>57</sup>

2. Unilateral Contracts<sup>58</sup>

In the case of a unilateral contract the promisee clearly provides consideration if he completes the required act or forbearance (such as walking to York or not smoking for a year).<sup>59</sup> This amounts in law to a detriment to the promisee; and the promisor may also obtain a benefit: e.g. where he promises a reward for the return of lost property and it is actually returned to him. But it has been suggested that if the promisee has begun, but not yet completed, the required act or forbearance the promisor can still withdraw. At this stage, there is said to be no consideration for the promise, since the promisee is not bound to complete performance.<sup>60</sup> But it may in law be detriment to walk part of the way to York, or to forbear from smoking for part of the year. Questions of fact may, indeed, arise in determining whether performance has actually begun, particularly where the stipulated performance was a forbearance; but if an actual forbearance to sue can <sup>51</sup> [1991] 2 A.C. 548; below, p.535.

<sup>52</sup> See above, p.86.

<sup>53</sup> [1991] 2 A.C. 548 at 562, 565, 577.

<sup>54</sup> [1991] 2 A.C. 548 at 576.

<sup>55</sup> ibid. at 581.

<sup>56</sup> See above, p.86.

<sup>57</sup> See below, p.537.

<sup>58</sup> See above, pp.37 et seq.

<sup>59</sup> See above, p.38; Marshall v N M Financial Management Ltd [1997] 1 W.L.R. 1527 at 1533. For controversy whether the act must be "requested" by the promisor in cases of unilateral contracts, see A.L.G., 67 L.Q.R. 456; Smith, 69 L.Q.R. 99; A.L.G., 69 L.Q.R. 106.

<sup>60</sup> Wormser, in Selected Readings on the Law of Contracts, at p.307; but for the same writer's later views, see 3 J.L.Leg.Educ. 146.

constitute good consideration,<sup>61</sup> it must in principle be possible to tell when a forbearance has begun. Thus commencement of performance (whether of an act or of a forbearance) may provide consideration for the promise and so deprive the promisor of the power to withdraw it. Of course, the promisor's liability to pay the amount promised (e.g. the £100 for walking to York) does not accrue before the promisee has fully performed the required act or forbearance. The present point is merely that, after part performance by the promisee, the promisor cannot withdraw his promise with impunity.

It has been suggested that a unilateral contract may be made as soon as the offer is received by the offeree<sup>62</sup>; and this could be interpreted to mean that the contract was binding even before the offeree had acted on the offer in any way. But at this stage the offeree has clearly not provided any consideration, and in the case in which the suggestion was made no problem of consideration arose as the offeree had completed the required act<sup>63</sup> before any attempt to withdraw the offer was made. Except in the case of bankers' irrevocable credits (to be discussed below), the better view is that an offer of a unilateral contract is not binding on receipt, but only when the offeree has begun to render the required performance.

3. Bankers' Irrevocable Credits

Contracts for the international sale of goods often provide for payment by irrevocable credit.<sup>64</sup> The buyer instructs his bank to open an irrevocable credit in favour of the seller; and the bank then notifies the seller that such a credit has been opened in his favour, and that he will be paid, usually when he tenders specified shipping documents to the bank. The general view is that the bank is bound by this arrangement and is not entitled to withdraw simply because the shipping documents have not yet been tendered.<sup>65</sup> But it is very doubtful whether at this stage there is any consideration, moving from the seller, for the bank's promise to him.<sup>66</sup>

One view is that the bank makes an offer of a unilateral contract, for which the seller provides consideration by performing his contract with the buyer.<sup>67</sup> As in the case of other unilateral contracts, steps taken in the performance would be enough, e.g. beginning to manufacture the goods. If the seller already had the goods when he received notification of the credit one could find consideration in his forbearing to make other attempts to dispose of them. Another view is that, because the seller is not bound to deliver the goods to the buyer until he receives notification of the credit, his becoming

<sup>61</sup> See above, p.90.

<sup>62</sup> Harvela Investments Ltd v Royal Trust Co of Canada (CI) Ltd [1986] 1 A.C. 207 at 224 ("when the invitation was received").

<sup>63</sup> By submitting the requested bid: cf. above, p.21.

<sup>64</sup> See generally Guaranty Trust Co of NY v Hannay [1918] 2 K.B. 623 at 659.

<sup>65</sup> See Hamzeh Malas & Sons v British Imex Industries Ltd [1958] 2 Q.B. 127 at 129 (where there was consideration of the most orthodox kind, the seller having paid the bank a confirmation commission: see British Imex Industries Ltd v Midland Bank Ltd [1958] 1 Q.B. 542 at 544; W J Alan & Co Ltd v El Nasr Export & Import Co [1972] 2 Q.B. 189 at 208; cf. ibid. at 218; Offshore International SA v Banco Central SA [1977] 1 W.L.R. 399 at 401; Trendtex Trading Corp v Central Bank of Nigeria [1977] Q.B. 529 at 551; The American Accord [1983] 1 A.C. 168 at 183; Jaks (UK) Ltd v Cera Investment Bank SA [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 89 at 94.

<sup>66</sup> Davis, The Law Relating to Commercial Credits (3rd ed.), Chap.7; Gutteridge & Megrah, The Law of Bankers' Commercial Credits (7th ed.), pp.26 et seq.; Ellinger, Documentary Letters of Credit, pp.39 et seq.; Benjamin's Sale of Goods (6th ed.), §§23-131 to 23-135.

<sup>67</sup> cf. Guaranty Trust Co of NY v Hannay [1918] 2 K.B. 623 at 659; Urquhart Lindsay & Co v Eastern Bank [1922] 1 K.B. 318 at 321; above, p.40.

so bound on such notification is the consideration for the bank's promise.<sup>68</sup> But as the seller's becoming bound in this way does not result from any act (or even forbearance) by him at this stage, it is hard to see how it can amount to consideration for the promise by the bank. Yet another suggestion is that the seller might provide consideration by forbearing to sue the buyer for the price. But the bank would not, on this view, be bound before the seller had acted, or forborne, in some such way. The widely held commercial view is that the bank is bound as soon as the seller is notified of the credit. If (as seems probable) this view also represents the law, it is best regarded as exception to the doctrine of consideration.<sup>69</sup> A final possibility is that the seller might be able to make a claim, as a third party, to enforce a term of the contract between the buyer and the bank, under the Contracts (Rights of Third Parties) Act 1999. Such a claim could succeed even though no consideration for the bank's promise had moved from the seller<sup>70</sup>; but it would in a number of ways<sup>71</sup> be less secure than one available at common law.

4. Firm Offers

A "firm" offer is one containing a promise not to revoke it for a specified time. Such a promise is not binding unless the offeree has provided some consideration for it. Thus in Dickinson v Dodds<sup>72</sup> it was held that an offer to sell land "to be left over until Friday"<sup>73</sup> could be withdrawn on Thursday. Consideration for such a promise is most obviously provided if the offeree pays (or promises to pay) a sum of money for it and so buys an option.<sup>74</sup> It may also be provided by some other promise: for example, in the case of an offer to sell a house, the offeree may provide consideration for the offeror's promise to hold the offer open, by promising to apply for a mortgage on the house; and, in the case of an offer to buy shares, the offeree may provide consideration for the offeror's promise not to revoke the offer for a specified time, by promising not to dispose of those shares elsewhere during that time. The performance of the offeree's promises in such cases could likewise provide consideration for the offeror's promise to keep the offer open. In one case a vendor of land entered into a so-called "lock-out" agreement<sup>75</sup> by which he <sup>68</sup> The suggestion is sometimes said to be supported by dictum in Dexters Ltd v Schenker & Co (1923) 14 Ll.L. Rep. 586 at 588; but the judgment does not purport to go beyond Urquhart Lindsay & Co v Eastern Bank, above, n.67. The seller does not promise the bank to perform his contract with the buyer, so that cases such as Pao On v Lau Yiu Long [1980] A.C. 614 (above, p.98) do not help with the problem of consideration for the bank's promise to him.

<sup>69</sup> cf. in the United States, U.C.C. ss.5–105.

<sup>70</sup> See above, p.83.

<sup>71</sup> It would be subject to any defences which the bank might have against the buyer: see s.3(2) of the 1999 Act, below, p.660 and to rescission or variation by agreement between the buyer and the bank of the contract between them, to the extent permitted by s.2(1), below, p.657.

<sup>72</sup> (1876) 2 Ch.D. 463; cf. Cooke v Oxley (1790) 3 T.R. 653; Routledge v Grant (1828) 4 Bing. 653; Head v Diggon (1828) 3 M. & Ry. 97.

<sup>73</sup> Quaere whether this meant that the offer would not be withdrawn before Friday, or only that it should lapse on Friday and not before. The latter interpretation was given to a stipulation that an offer should be "open all Monday" in Stevenson, Jacques & Co v McLean (1880) 6 Q.B.D. 346.

<sup>74</sup> The legal characteristics of such an option have been variously described: (1) as a contract: Greene v Church Commissioners for England [1974] Ch. 467 at 476, 478 (disapproving a dictum in Beesly v Hallwood Estates Ltd [1960] 1 W.L.R. 549 at 555, actual decision affirmed [1961] Ch. 549); though not one of sale: Chippenham Golf Club v North Wilts Rural DC (1992) 64 P. & C.R. 527; (2) as a transaction which, even though it is not a contract, gives rise to an interest in property: Re Button's Lease [1964] Ch. 263 at 270–271; Armstrong & Holmes Ltd v Holmes [1994] 1 All E.R. 826; (3) as a unilateral contract: United Scientific Holdings Ltd v Burnley B.C. [1978] A.C. 904 at 945; Little v Courage Ltd. (1995) 70 P. & C.R. 469 at 474; (4) as a conditional contract: Bircham & Co Nominees (No.2) Ltd v Worrell Holdings Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 773; (2001) 82 P. & C.R. 427 at [45]; and (5) as being sui generis: Spiro v Glencrown Properties [1991] Ch. 537 at 544. And see Mowbray, 74 L.Q.R. 242; Lücke, 3 Adelaide L.Rev. 200.

<sup>75</sup> See above, p.53.

promised a prospective purchaser not to consider other offers if that purchaser would exchange contracts within two weeks; and it was said that "the promise by the [purchaser] to get on by limiting himself to just two weeks"<sup>76</sup> constituted consideration for the vendor's promise not to consider other offers. Such a "lock out" promise is not strictly a firm offer since it does not prevent the vendor from deciding not to sell at all; but the reasoning quoted above could apply to the case of a firm offer. On the facts of the case from which it is taken, the reasoning gives rise to some difficulty since it does not appear that the purchaser there made any promise to exchange contracts within two weeks. It seems more plausible to say that the vendor's promise had become binding as a unilateral contract under which the purchaser had provided consideration by actually making efforts to meet the deadline, even though he had not promised to do so. Similar reasoning can apply if a seller of land promises to keep an offer open for a month, asking the buyer during that period to raise the necessary money. If the buyer makes efforts to that end (without actually promising to do so) it is arguable that he has by part performance accepted the seller's offer of a unilateral contract to keep the principal offer open. On the other hand the equitable doctrine of Hughes v Metropolitan Ry<sup>77</sup> will not avail the offeree since it does not create new causes of action where none existed before.<sup>78</sup> Nor does it seem likely that an offeree who suffers loss as a result of the withdrawal of the offer will be able to claim damages in tort<sup>79</sup> for misrepresentation.<sup>80</sup>

The rule in Dickinson v Dodds can lead to inconvenience, so much so that there are some situations in which it has been said that "the market would disdain"<sup>81</sup> to take the point that there was no consideration for a promise to keep an offer open. In the case of certain international sales, the rule is rejected by the Vienna Convention on Contracts for the International Sale of Goods.<sup>82</sup> It is also subject to a common law exception in the law of insurance where an underwriter who initials a slip under an "open cover" arrangement is regarded as making a "standing offer" which the insured can accept from time to time by making "declarations" under it. The underwriter's commitment is regarded as binding even though there is no consideration for his implied promise not to revoke the "standing offer".<sup>83</sup> But even with these mitigations, the rule can still cause hardship to an offeree who has acted in reliance on the assurance that the offer will be kept open for a stated time. Such hardship can, for example, arise where a builder submits a tender in reliance on offers from sub-contractors, expressed to remain "firm" for a fixed period,<sup>84</sup> and those offers are withdrawn within that period but after his

<sup>76</sup> Pitt v PHH Asset Management Ltd [1994] 1 W.L.R. 327 at 332; MacMillan, [1993] C.L.J. 392; for other consideration in this case, see above, p.90; Tye v House [1997] 2 E.G.L.R. 171.

<sup>77</sup> (1877) 2 App.Cas. 439; above, p.105.

<sup>78</sup> See above, p.111.

<sup>79</sup> cf. Holman Construction Ltd v Delta Timber Co Ltd [1972] N.Z.L.R. 1081; and see Blackpool and Fylde Aero Club Ltd v Blackpool BC [1990] 1 W.L.R. 1195 at 1202.

<sup>80</sup> i.e. under Hedley Byrne & Co Ltd v Heller & Partners Ltd [1964] A.C. 465; below, p.344.

<sup>81</sup> Jaglom v Excess Insurance Co Ltd [1972] 2 Q.B. 250 at 258; cf. County Ltd v Girozentrale Securities [1996] 3 All E.R. 834 where an "offer to subscribe" for shares was described at 837 as "not legally binding but regarded by City convention as binding in honour unless some unforeseen exceptional circumstances supervened." It seems that the "commitment" (ibid.) was given, not to the company, but to the underwriter, or by prospective investors to each other, so that the principles discussed at pp.15–16 above did not apply. For the view that the statement in Jaglom's case was not an offer, but an acceptance (and binding as such) see General Reinsurance Corp v Forsakringsaktiebolaget Fennia Patria [1983] Q.B. 856 at 863–864.

<sup>82</sup> See above, p.29, Art. 16(2); cf. U.C.C. s.2–205, limiting the period of irrevocability to three months on the theory that unlimited irrevocability could unreasonably prejudice the offeror.

<sup>83</sup> Citadel Insurance Co v Atlantic Union Insurance Co [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 543 at 546.

<sup>84</sup> For conflicting American authorities, see James Baird Co v Gimbel Bros 64 F.2d. 344 (1933); Drennan v Star Paving Co 51 Cal. 2d. 409, 333 p.2d. 757 (1958). For a review of Canadian authorities, see Northern Construction Co v Gloge Heating & Plumbing [1986] 2 W.W.R. 649, holding a sub-contractor bound by his offer.

tender has been accepted. On the other hand, the rule does sometimes provide necessary protection for the offeror: e.g. when an offer is made by a customer on a form provided by a supplier and expressed to be irrevocable; or when the period of irrevocability is not specified so that the offeror is left subject to an indefinite obligation without acquiring any corresponding right. Any further development of the law on the point will require a balancing of these conflicting factors.<sup>85</sup>

5. Auction Sales Without Reserve<sup>86</sup>

Where goods are put up for auction without reserve, there is no contract of sale if the auctioneer refuses to knock the goods down to the highest bidder; but the auctioneer is liable to the highest bidder on a separate promise that the sale will be without reserve.<sup>87</sup> It is arguable that there is no consideration for this promise as the highest bidder is not bound by his unaccepted bid.<sup>88</sup> But it has been held that the bidder suffers a detriment by bidding on the strength of the promise, for he runs the risk of being bound by a contract of sale<sup>89</sup>; and the auctioneer benefits as the bidding is driven up.<sup>90</sup> Hence there is consideration for the separate promise, and it makes no difference to the auctioneer's liability on this promise that he would not be liable if he did not put the goods up for sale at all (since an advertisement of an auction is not an offer to hold it)<sup>91</sup> or that there was no contract of sale because of his refusal to accept the highest bid.<sup>92</sup>

6. Novation of Partnership Debts

When the composition of a partnership changes, it is usual to arrange that liability for the debts owed by the existing partners should be transferred by novation<sup>93</sup> to the new partners. Two situations may be considered.

(1) A and B are in partnership; A retires and C is admitted as a new partner; it is agreed between A, B and C, and the creditors of the old firm of A and B, that A shall cease to be liable for the firm's debts, and that C shall undertake such liability. The result is that the creditors can sue C and can no longer sue A. They provide consideration for C's promise to pay by abandoning their claim against A; and A provides consideration for their promise to release him by procuring a substitute debtor, C.

(2) A and B are in partnership; A retires; it is agreed between A, B and the creditors of the firm that A shall cease to be liable and that B shall be solely liable. It seems that the creditors cannot sue A, but it is hard to see what consideration moves from him. In one case it was said that there was consideration in that a remedy against a single debtor

<sup>85</sup> See Law Commission Working Paper 60 (1975).

<sup>86</sup> See also above, p.11.

<sup>87</sup> Warlow v Harrison (1859) 1 E. & E. 309; approved in Harris v Nickerson (1873) L.R. 8 Q.B. 286 at 288; Johnston v Boyes [1899] 2 Ch. 73 at 77.

<sup>88</sup> For discussion of this point, see Slade, 68 L.Q.R. 238; Gower, ibid. 457; Slade, 69 L.Q.R. 21.

<sup>89</sup> An "invented" consideration: see above, p.71.

<sup>90</sup> Barry v Davies [2000] 1 W.L.R. 1962 at 1967.

<sup>91</sup> Harris v Nickerson (1873) L.R. 8 Q.B. 286; above, p.12.

<sup>92</sup> See above, p.11.

<sup>93</sup> See below, p.673; cf. Partnership Act 1890, s.17(3). Problems of the kind here discussed do not arise in the same form in the case of a limited liability partnership incorporated under the Limited Liability Partnership Act 2000 since the liabilities of the partnership are those of the body corporate incorporated under ss.1–3 of that Act; these are not affected by a change in the membership of that body. S.6(3) of the Act deals with the different question of the extent to which acts of a person who has ceased to be a member can still impose liability on the partnership.

might be easier to enforce than one against several, all of whom are solvent<sup>94</sup>; thus the creditors benefit by the release of A. This is a possible, if invented<sup>95</sup> consideration.

7. Gratuitous Bailments

A gratuitous bailment may be for the benefit of either the bailee or the bailor.

The first possibility is illustrated by Bainbridge v Firmstone<sup>96</sup> where the defendant asked for, and received, permission from the plaintiff to weigh two boilers belonging to the plaintiff. In performing this operation, the defendant damaged the boilers; and he was held liable for breach of his promise to return them in good condition. The court rejected the argument that, as the defendant was not paid to weigh, or look after, the boilers, there was no consideration for his promise. Patteson J. said: "I suppose the defendant thought he had some benefit; at any rate there is a detriment to the plaintiff from his parting with the possession for even so short a time."<sup>97</sup> It is more doubtful whether there would be any consideration moving from the defendant for any promise by the plaintiff to allow the defendant to have possession of the boilers. A mere promise by the defendant to return the boilers might not suffice as it would only be a promise to perform a duty imposed by law on all bailees; but a promise to repair the boilers or to improve them in some way would probably be regarded as consideration moving from the defendant.<sup>98</sup>

The second possibility, i.e. that of a bailment for the benefit of the bailor, arises where A undertakes the safekeeping of B's chattel without reward. Here B's parting with the possession is hardly a detriment to him; and A's duty to look after the thing<sup>99</sup> does not arise out of a contractual promise made by him but is imposed by the general law. It follows that A's only duty is that imposed by the law.<sup>1</sup> Thus A is under no obligation before he actually receives the thing; and if he promised to do anything which went beyond the duty imposed by law (for example, to keep the thing in repair) he would be bound by this promise only if B had provided some consideration for it apart from the delivery of the chattel.<sup>2</sup> To constitute such consideration, it is not necessary to show that A profited from the transaction; thus it is enough if B reimburses (or promises to reimburse) any expenses that A has incurred for the purpose of performing his promise.<sup>3</sup>

8. Gratuitous Services

Normally, a promise to render services without reward is not binding contractually as no consideration for it is provided by the promisee. For example, where A gratuitously promises B to insure B's property but fails to do so, A is not liable to B for breach of contract if the property is lost or damaged.<sup>4</sup> It may sometimes be possible to find <sup>94</sup> Lyth v Ault (1852) 7 Ex. 669; Thompson v Percival (1834) 5 B. & Ad. 925 is based on reasoning which is obsolete after D & C Builders Ltd v Rees [1967] 2 Q.B. 617.

<sup>95</sup> See above, p.71.

<sup>96</sup> (1838) 8 A. & E. 743.

<sup>97</sup> ibid. at 744.

<sup>98</sup> cf. Verrall v Farnes [1966] 1 W.L.R. 1254, a case relating to land; followed in Mitton v Farrow (1980) 255 E.G. 449.

<sup>99</sup> For this duty see Coggs v Bernard (1703) 2 Ld.Raym. 909; Mitchell v London Borough of Ealing [1979] Q.B. 1; Port Swettenham Authority v T W Wu & Co [1979] A.C. 580 at 590.

<sup>1</sup> Morris v C W Martin Ltd [1966] 1 Q.B. 716 at 731; The Agia Skepi [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 467 at 472.

<sup>2</sup> cf. Charnock v Liverpool Corporation [1968] 1 W.L.R. 1498; below, p.584.

<sup>3</sup> CCC Films (London) Ltd v Impact Quadrant Films Ltd [1985] Q.B. 16 at 27.

<sup>4</sup> Argy Trading & Development Co Ltd v Lapid Developments Ltd [1977] 1 W.L.R. 444; cf. the New York case of Thorn v Deas 4 Johns. 84 (1809); more recent American authorities are divided: Corbin, Contracts, s.205, n.54.

consideration in an indirect benefit which the promisor obtains from the arrangement: e.g. in the form of favourable publicity.<sup>5</sup>

Even where the promise is not supported by consideration, the promisor may be liable in tort for negligence if he actually renders the gratuitous services but does so without due care and so causes loss. A banker who gives a negligent credit reference may be liable on this ground even though he makes no charge to the person to whom the information is given.<sup>6</sup> Similarly, where A gratuitously promised B to insure B's property and did so negligently, so that the policy did not cover the loss which occurred, A was held liable to B in tort.<sup>7</sup> In one case, a person was even held liable in tort for negligently giving free advice to a friend in connection with the purchase of a second-hand car which turned out to be seriously defective.<sup>8</sup>

The most important distinction between the two groups of cases discussed above is that between non-feasance and misfeasance in the performance of a promise to render gratuitous services. For this purpose, non-feasance means complete failure to pursue a promised course of action, while misfeasance means carelessness in the pursuit of that course of action, leading to failure to achieve a promised result. The first group of cases shows that non-feasance does not (in the absence of consideration) make the promisor liable in contract, while the second shows that misfeasance can make the promisor liable in tort. There is no liability in tort for simply doing nothing after having promised to render services gratuitously; for to impose such liability would amount to holding "that the law of England recognises the enforceability of a gratuitous promise. On the face of it, this would be inconsistent with fundamental principle."<sup>10</sup> In cases of such pure non-feasance, the promisee will therefore have a remedy only if he can show that he provided consideration for the promise. Even in the case of misfeasance he may be in a better position with regard to damages if he can show that the promise had contractual force.<sup>11</sup>

In Gore v Van der Lann<sup>12</sup> a corporation issued a free travel pass to the claimant who "in consideration of my being granted a free pass" undertook that the use of the pass

<sup>5</sup> cf. De la Bere v Pearson [1908] 1 K.B. 280 at 287.

<sup>6</sup> See Hedley Byrne & Co Ltd v Heller & Partners Ltd [1964] A.C. 465; cf. below, p.344.

<sup>7</sup> Wilkinson v Coverdale (1793) 1 Esp. 75.

<sup>8</sup> Chaudhry v Prabhakar [1989] 1 W.L.R. 29 where the defendant conceded that he owed a duty of care to the claimant and two members of the Court of Appeal seem to have regarded this concession as correct; Brown [1989] L.M.C.L.Q. 148. Contrast Henderson v Merrett Syndicates Ltd [1995] 2 A.C. 145 at 181, suggesting that there may be no liability in respect of services rendered on "an informal occasion."

<sup>9</sup> Or of privity of contract: see The Rebecca Elaine [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 1 at 5.

<sup>10</sup> The Zephyr [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 529 at 538, disapproving the contrary view expressed at first instance [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 58 at 85 and there based on authorities which were all cases of misfeasance. The Zephyr itself was also such a case: [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. at 79, 86 ("he was making the position steadily worse"). A fortiori, there is no liability in tort for pure omission where no promise has been made: see Reid v Rush & Tompkins Group plc [1990] 1 W.L.R. 212 and Van Oppen v Clerk to the Bedford Charity Trustees [1990] 1 W.L.R. 235, though in the latter case it was said at 260 that a voluntary assumption of responsibility by one party followed by reliance on it by the other might in exceptional cases give rise to such liability. The scope of this exception is not clear; in the last two cases it was held that there was no duty on respectively an employer and a school to advise an employee or the parents of a pupil to insure against foreseeable risks of injury; cf. Outram v Academy Plastics Ltd [2001] I.C.R. 367 at 372: generally no liability in tort "for pure omission", the omission taking the form of an employer's failure, without breach of contract, to advise an employee as to his membership of the employer's pension scheme. Liability in tort for pure omission may exceptionally arise where there is a "duty to act": see White v Jones [1995] 2 A.C. 207 at 261, 268, 295 (below, p.616); but it is submitted that no such duty would be imposed by merely making gratuitous promise.

<sup>11</sup> cf. below, pp.359–362.

<sup>12</sup> [1967] 2 Q.B. 31; Harris, 30 M.L.R. 584; Odgers, 86 L.Q.R. 69; and see below, p.171, on the issue of contractual intention.

by her should be subject to certain conditions. One of these was that neither the corporation nor its servants were to be liable to her for loss or injury suffered while she was boarding, alighting from, or being carried in, the corporation's vehicles. The claimant was injured while boarding a corporation bus; and it was held that the issue and acceptance of the free pass amounted to a contract.<sup>13</sup> Willmer L.J. said that "Each party gave good consideration by accepting a detriment in return for the advantages gained."<sup>14</sup> The parties were, as a result of the issue of the pass, brought into a relationship of passenger and carrier which gave rise to duties independently of contract; and it was the promise not to enforce these obligations which constituted the consideration moving from the claimant. In the absence of such a relationship, a promise not to sue for defective performance would not amount to consideration for a promise to render a gratuitous service. Thus if A promised to carry B's goods to London free of charge and B promised not to sue A for negligently damaging them on the way, A would not be under any contractual liability for failing to pick up the goods. But he might be liable if he did pick them up and then unloaded them short of the agreed destination.

SECTION 9. PROMISES IN DEEDS

Consideration is not necessary for the validity of a promise in a deed. The binding force of such a promise does not depend on contract at all. Thus it can take effect although the person in whose favour it was made did not know of it.<sup>15</sup> To take effect as a deed, an instrument must make it clear on its face that it is intended to be a deed and must be validly executed as such.<sup>16</sup> At common law, execution of an instrument as a deed had to be under seal, but in many cases the requirement of sealing has been abolished by legislation. Sealing is no longer necessary in the case of an instrument executed as a deed by an individual.<sup>17</sup> To be validly executed as a deed, such an instrument must be signed<sup>18</sup> by or at the direction of the person making it in the presence of one attesting witness if it is signed by that person or of two such witnesses if it is signed as his direction<sup>19</sup>; it must also be delivered.<sup>20</sup> Sealing is also no longer necessary for the execution of a deed by a company incorporated under the Companies Acts: a document signed by a director and secretary, or by two directors, of such a company and expressed to be executed by the company has the same effect as if executed under the common seal of the company<sup>21</sup>; and (even if the company has no common seal<sup>22</sup>) a document executed by the company which makes it clear on its face that it is intended to be a deed has effect upon delivery

<sup>13</sup> This contract was void, so far as it purported to exclude liability for personal injury, by virtue of s.151 of the Road Traffic Act 1960, now Public Passenger Vehicles Act 1981, s.29; below, p.249.

<sup>14</sup> [1967] 2 Q.B. 31 at 42.

<sup>15</sup> Hall v Palmer (1844) 3 Hare 532; Macedo v Stroud [1922] 2 A.C. 330.

<sup>16</sup> Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989, s.1(2); Virgo and Harpum, [1991] L.M.C.L.Q. 209.

<sup>17</sup> 1989 Act, above, s.1(1)(b).

<sup>18</sup> Making one's mark suffices: ibid., s.1(4).

<sup>19</sup> ibid., s.1(3)(a). In Shah v Shah [2001] EWCA Civ. 527; [2001] 4 All E.R. 138 it was held that, though the requirement of signing was "fundamental" (at [28]), the requirement of the attesting witness' presence at the time of the signature was not; and that the maker of the instrument could be estopped from denying that the latter requirement was satisfied where, by delivering the Instrument, he had unambiguously represented that the instrument had been validly executed.

<sup>20</sup> Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989, s.1(3)(b).

<sup>21</sup> Companies Act 1985, s.36A(4) (as inserted by Companies Act 1989, s.130(1)). The subsection can apply where a document purporting to be sealed is not properly sealed: OTV Birwelco Ltd v Technical & General Guarantee Co [2002] F.W.H.C. 2240 (TCC); [2002] 4 All E.R. 668 at [70].

<sup>22</sup> See ibid., s.36A(3).

as a deed.<sup>23</sup> Similar rules apply to charities incorporated under the Charities Act 1993.<sup>24</sup> When the system of electronic conveyancing envisaged by the Land Registration Act 2002 is brought into operation, certain electronic documents relating to the transfer of interests in land<sup>25</sup> are also to be regarded as deeds “for the purposes of any enactment”.<sup>26</sup> The common law requirements of sealing and delivery continue to apply to the execution of deeds by corporations where it has not been relaxed by statutory provisions of the kind here described.

The common law requirement of sealing has been laxly interpreted. There need be no actual seal: it is enough if the document indicates where the seal is meant to be, and is signed with the intention of executing it as a deed.<sup>27</sup>

Delivery does not mean transfer of possession, but conduct indicating that the person who has executed the deed intends to be bound by it.<sup>28</sup> Delivery can be effected by giving the deed to the beneficiary, or to a third person to hold for him, but it is perfectly possible for the grantor to “deliver” the deed and yet keep possession of it.<sup>29</sup> A deed sealed by a corporation is deemed, in favour of a purchaser, to have been duly executed if certain statutory requirements are satisfied.<sup>30</sup> In such a case there is no separate requirement of “delivery”. In the case of a document executed by a company incorporated under the Companies Acts, the rules just stated apply even if the document is not sealed: in favour of a purchaser, a document is deemed to have been duly executed if it purports to be signed by a director and the secretary or by two directors; and where the document makes it clear on its face that it is intended to be a deed, it is deemed to have been delivered upon its being executed.<sup>31</sup> Similar rules apply to charities incorporated under the Charities Act 1993.<sup>32</sup>

A document may be executed as a deed and delivered with the intention that it is to take effect only on the occurrence of some condition. The document is then said to be delivered as an escrow.<sup>33</sup> It will become effective as a deed only if the condition occurs; though it may then relate back to the date of the original delivery. For example, if the document is a lease, rent under it is payable from that date, unless the document specifies some other date.<sup>34</sup> Even before the occurrence of the condition, the document has some legal effect; it cannot be revoked by the grantor so long as it remains possible for the condition to occur.<sup>35</sup> The document will, however, cease to have this effect if the condition fails to occur within the time specified for its occurrence by the document.<sup>36</sup>

<sup>23</sup> ibid., s.36A(5).

<sup>24</sup> Charities Act 1993, ss.50, 60.

<sup>25</sup> See below, p.178.

<sup>26</sup> Land Registration Act 2002, s.91(5); Companies Act 1985, s.36A(4) (above n.21) is modified accordingly by Land Registration Act 2002, s.91(9).

<sup>27</sup> First National Securities Ltd v Jones [1978] Ch. 109; Hoath, 43 M.L.R. 415. Contrast TCB Ltd v Gray [1987] Ch. 48; Rushingdale SA v Byblos Bank S.A.L 1985 P.C.C. 342.

<sup>28</sup> Xenos v Wickham (1866) L.R. 2 H.L. 296; cf. Beesly v Hallwood Estates Ltd [1960] 1 W.L.R. 549 at 562; affirmed [1961] Ch. 105; Vincent v Premo Enterprises (Voucher Sales) Ltd [1969] 2 Q.B. 609; Yale [1970] C.L.J. 52.

<sup>29</sup> Doe v Knight (1826) 5 B. & C. 671.

<sup>30</sup> Law of Property Act 1925, s.74(1); D'Silva v Lister House Developments Ltd [1971] Ch. 17.

<sup>31</sup> Companies Act 1985, s.36A(5) and (6), as inserted by Companies Act 1989, s.130(1).

<sup>32</sup> Charities Act 1993, s.60(7) and (8).

<sup>33</sup> See, for example, Davy Offshore Ltd v Emerald Field Contracting Ltd [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 142 at 155.

<sup>34</sup> Alan Estates Ltd v W G Stores Ltd [1982] Ch. 511.

<sup>35</sup> ibid. at 520–521 and 527 rejecting a dictum in Terrapin International Investments v IRC [1976] 1 W.L.R. 665 at 669 that before the condition is fulfilled the escrow has “no effect whatsoever”; cf. above, p.63.

<sup>36</sup> Glessing v Green [1975] 1 W.L.R. 863.

Where no such time is specified, a term is likely to be implied that the condition must be fulfilled within a reasonable time.<sup>37</sup>

It is sometimes difficult to distinguish between a deed which has not been delivered at all and one which has been delivered as an escrow.<sup>38</sup> The distinction depends on the intention of the grantor. If he reserves an overriding power to recall the deed at his discretion, it is not delivered as an escrow but is simply an undelivered deed.<sup>39</sup>

SECTION 10. PROPOSALS FOR REFORM

The doctrine of consideration has attracted much criticism on general and on particular grounds. It has been said that the doctrine is an historical accident; that foreign systems do without it; and that it can easily be evaded, e.g. by the device of nominal consideration.<sup>40</sup> But these criticisms fail to come to grips with the fundamental question: whether it is desirable to enforce informal gratuitous promises. So long as the rights and interests of third parties are adequately protected,<sup>41</sup> the enforcement of such promises may do no harm. On the other hand English law does recognise, in the deed, a perfectly safe and relatively simple means of making gratuitous promises binding. Many such promises are in fact made by deed for tax purposes; and for this reason the legal enforceability of promises to give money to charitable institutions presents no serious problem in England.<sup>42</sup> Moreover, the small amount of extra effort, which the execution of a deed requires the promisor to make, may be a useful safeguard against rash promises.<sup>43</sup> The availability of the deed does not solve the problem of action in reliance on an informal gratuitous promise; but where there is such action the court may be able to invent consideration, or to give at least some effect to the promise under the doctrine of waiver or in equity.<sup>44</sup>

The doctrine can also cause inconvenience where the law for some reason treats a promise as not being supported by consideration even though the parties reasonably regard it as having been made for value.<sup>45</sup> This is particularly true in the existing duty cases, and in the cases on part payment of a debt. In those cases the doctrine of consideration may indeed at one time have performed a useful function in protecting a promisor against undue pressure or other undesirable conduct on the part of the promisee.<sup>46</sup> But this function is now more satisfactorily provided by the expanding notion of duress,<sup>47</sup> and the authorities have recognised this point, by holding that the requirement of consideration can be satisfied by the performance of, or the promise to perform, an existing duty, even if it causes no legal detriment to the promisee, so long

<sup>37</sup> Alan Estates Ltd v W G Stores Ltd [1982] Ch. 511 at 520.

<sup>38</sup> See Vincent v Premo Enterprises (Voucher Sales) Ltd [1969] 2 Q.B. 609; Kingston v Ambrian Investments Ltd [1975] 1 W.L.R. 161.

<sup>39</sup> Windsor Refrigerator Co Ltd v Branch Nominees Ltd [1961] Ch. 88 at 102; actual decision reversed on other grounds [1961] Ch. 375.

<sup>40</sup> See above, p.74.

<sup>41</sup> cf. above, p.74; Eastwood v Kenyon (1840) 11 A. & E. 438 at 450 and Horrocks v Forray [1976] 1 W.L.R. 230 (where a finding that there was no consideration helped to protect the creditors of the alleged promisor).

<sup>42</sup> There appear to be only two reported cases in which such claims failed for want of consideration; Re Hudson (1885) 54 L.J.Ch. 811 and Re Cory (1912) 29 T.L.R. 18.

<sup>43</sup> cf. below, p.176.

<sup>44</sup> See above, pp.71, 105–118, 130–134.

<sup>45</sup> e.g. above, pp.91–96, 125–126.

<sup>46</sup> See above, pp.91–92, 94, 125–126.

<sup>47</sup> See above, pp.94–95; below, p.405.

as it results in a factual benefit to the promisor.<sup>48</sup> On the other hand, the function of the doctrine in providing protection against the different risk of being bound by rashly made gratuitous promises remains an important one and must be taken into account in formulating proposals for reform.

A number of such proposals were made in 1937 by the Law Revision Committee.<sup>49</sup> Detailed discussion of these proposals no longer seems to be appropriate since some of them have been overtaken by later developments in the law<sup>50</sup> and since proposals for reform, if now revived, would no doubt differ substantially<sup>51</sup> from those made in 1937. Two central questions remain: first, whether the law should protect the promisor and third parties by retaining restrictions on the enforceability of gratuitous promises; and secondly, to what extent the law should protect a promisee who has reasonably acted in reliance on a promise which is not supported by consideration. So far as the second question is concerned, the present law amounts to a compromise solution,<sup>52</sup> giving the promisee some remedy on the ground of such reliance. This compromise could be carried further<sup>53</sup> by providing that the promisee, while not necessarily entitled in full to the promised performance,<sup>54</sup> should at least be compensated to the extent to which he has been prejudiced as a result of his reliance on the promise.<sup>55</sup>

---

<sup>48</sup> Pao On v Lau Yiu Long [1980] A.C. 614, above, p.98; Williams v Roffey Bros & Nicholls (Contractors) Ltd [1991] 1 Q.B. 1, above, p.95.

<sup>49</sup> 6th Interim Report, Cmd. 5449; Hamson, 54 L.Q.R. 233; Hays, 41 Col.L.Rev. 849; Chloros, 17 I.C.L.Q. 137; Beatson, [1992] C.L.P. 1.

<sup>50</sup> e.g. in the cases on existing duties as consideration, on promissory estoppel and on proprietary estoppel.

<sup>51</sup> Contrast the Committee's recommendations that "firm offers" should be binding with the more sophisticated proposals, on this subject in Law Commission, Working Paper 60 (1975), above, p.155.

<sup>52</sup> See above, pp.105–132, 130–149.

<sup>53</sup> e.g. by allowing "promissory estoppel" (above, p.116) to give rise to a cause of action or by extending the categories of cases covered by proprietary estoppel (above, p.134).

<sup>54</sup> The qualification would not preclude such enforcement at the discretion of the court, as at present in cases of proprietary estoppel: above, p.144.

<sup>55</sup> cf. p.41, above, and Restatements, Contracts, §90. Restatement 2d, Contracts, §90 imposes somewhat less stringent conditions and concludes: "The remedy . . . may be limited as justice requires."

CHAPTER FOUR

CONTRACTUAL INTENTION

An agreement, though supported by consideration, is not binding as a contract<sup>1</sup> if it was made without any intention of creating legal relations.

SECTION 1. ILLUSTRATIONS

1. Mere Puffs

A statement inducing a contract may be so vague, or so clearly one of opinion, that the law refuses to give it any contractual effect.<sup>2</sup> Even a statement that is perfectly precise may nevertheless not be binding if the court considers that it was not seriously meant. Thus in Weeks v Tybald<sup>3</sup> the defendant “affirmed and published that he would give £100 to him that should marry his daughter with his consent”. The court held that “It is not reasonable that the defendant should be bound by such general words spoken to excite suitors.” Similarly, in Lambert v Lewis<sup>4</sup> a manufacturer stated in promotional literature that his product was “foolproof” and that it “required no maintenance”. These statements did not give rise to a contract between the manufacturer and a dealer (who had bought the product from an intermediary) as they were “not intended to be, nor were they, acted on as being express warranties”.<sup>5</sup>

2. Other Statements Inducing a Contract

A statement inducing a person to enter into a contract may be either “mere representation” or a term of the contract. The distinction between these categories turns on the intention with which the statement was made.<sup>6</sup> In most cases on this subject the question is merely as to the contents of a contract which is proved or admitted to exist. But sometimes the test of intention determines the very existence of the contract itself. This happens when a statement inducing a principal contract for some reason cannot take <sup>1</sup> For enforcement on other grounds, see John Fox v Bannister King & Rigbys [1988] Q.B. 925 at 928.

---

<sup>2</sup> See below, p.330.

<sup>3</sup> (1605) Noy 11; cf Dalrymple v Dalrymple (1811) 2 Hag.Con. 54 at 105.

<sup>4</sup> [1982] A.C. 225; affirmed, so far as the manufacturer's liability was concerned, but on other grounds, ibid. at 271.

<sup>5</sup> [1982] A.C. 225 at 262; contrast Carfill v Carbolite Smoke Ball Co Ltd [1893] 1 Q.B. 256 and Bowerman v Association of British Travel Agents [1995] N.L.J. 1815, above, p.13. Under s.14(2D) of the Sale of Goods Act 1979, as inserted by Sale and Supply of Goods to Consumers Regulations 2002, SI 2002/3045, reg.3, implementing Directive 1999/44, a commercial seller of goods to a buyer who deals as consumer may be liable if the goods lack a quality claimed for them in “public statements on the specific characteristics of the goods made about them by the seller, the producer or his representative in advertising or labelling”. Statements such as those made in Lambert v Lewis, above, would probably not be sufficiently “specific” for this purpose. Similar provisions apply to contract for the supply of goods other than contracts of sale: see Supply of Goods and Services Act 1983, s.4(2B), as inserted by reg.7 of the Regulations cited above.

<sup>6</sup> See below, pp.352, et seq.

effect as one of its terms, but only as collateral contract.<sup>7</sup> In Heilbut, Symons & Co v Buckleton<sup>8</sup> the claimant said to the defendants' manager that he understood the defendants to be "bringing out a rubber company." The manager replied that they were, on the strength of which statement the claimant applied for, and was allotted, shares in the company. It turned out not to be a rubber company and the claimant alleged that the defendants had warranted that it was a rubber company. It was held that nothing said by the defendants' manager was intended to have contractual effect. "Not only the terms of such contracts, but the existence of an animus contrahendi on the part of all the parties to them must be clearly shewn".<sup>9</sup> It follows that an oral statement made in the course of negotiations will not take effect as a collateral contract where the terms of the main contract show that the parties did not intend the statement to have such effect. This was, for example, the position where the main contract contained an "entire agreement" clause: this showed that statements made in the course of negotiations were to "have no contractual force".<sup>10</sup>

3. Intention Expressly Negated

An agreement has no contractual force if it expressly negatives the intention to be legally bound.<sup>11</sup> It is a question of construction whether a particular provision has this effect.<sup>12</sup>

(1) Honour clauses

In Rose & Frank Co v J R Crompton & Bros Ltd<sup>13</sup> an agency agreement provided: "This arrangement is not entered into, nor is this memorandum written, as a formal or legal agreement, and shall not be subject to legal jurisdiction in the Law Courts . . . but is only a definite expression and record of the purpose and intention of the . . . parties concerned, to which they each honourably pledge themselves. . . ." These words were held to negative contractual intention, so that the agreement did not amount to a legally binding contract. On the other hand, contractual intention was not negated where an arbitration clause in a reinsurance contract provided that "this treaty shall be interpreted as an honourable engagement rather than as a legal obligation . . ." The contract as a whole was clearly intended to be legally binding and the purpose of the words quoted

<sup>7</sup> See below, pp.180, 199–200, 356–357, 582–584. Under reg.15(1) of the Regulations referred to in n.5, above, a "consumer guarantee" given on the sale or supply of goods to a consumer is "takes effect as a contractual obligation owed by the guarantor"; it seems so to take effect by force of the Regulations, without regard to the issue of contractual intention.

<sup>8</sup> [1913] A.C. 30. A decision described as "catastrophic" by Atiyah in The Rise and Fall of Freedom of Contract at p.772, but followed by the House of Lords in IBA v EMI Electronics Ltd (1980) 14 Build. L.R. 1 (below, p.578); cf Strover v Harrington [1988] Ch. 390 at 410; Ignazio Messina & Co v Polskie Linie Oceaniczne [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 566 at 581. The Regulations referred to in nn.5 and 7, above would not now apply on facts such as those of any of the cases cited in this note.

<sup>9</sup> At 47; Unit Construction Co Ltd v Liverpool Corp (1972) 221 E.G. 459; The Kapetan Markos NL (No.2) [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 323 at 332. For possible effects of the Misrepresentation Act 1967, s.2 on such statements, see below, p.356.

<sup>10</sup> Intrepeneur Pub Co (GL) v East Crown Ltd [2000] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 611 at 614; cf White v Bristol Rugby Club Ltd [2002] I.R.L.R. 204.

<sup>11</sup> e.g. Broadwick Financial Services Ltd v Spencer [2002] E.W.C.A. Civ 35; [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 446 at [27].

<sup>12</sup> R. v Lord Chancellor's Departments, Ex p. Nangle [1991] I.C.R. 743.

<sup>13</sup> [1925] A.C. 445; [1923] 2 K.B. 261; County Ltd v Girozentrale Securities [1996] 3 All E.R. 834; cf: similar provisions in football pool coupons: Jones v Vernon's Pools [1938] 2 All E.R. 464; Appleson v Littlewoods [1939] 1 All E.R. 464; Guest v Empire Pools (1964) 108 S.J. 98. In Scotland, it has been argued that such honour clauses in football coupons may be unreasonable and hence ineffective: Ferguson v Littlewoods Pools 1997 S.L.T. 309 at 314–315.

was merely to free the arbitrator "to some extent from strict legal rules"<sup>14</sup> in interpreting the agreement.

(2) Agreement subject to contract

Agreements for the sale of land by private treaty are commonly made "subject to contract". These words normally negative contractual intention, so that the parties are not bound until formal contracts are exchanged.<sup>15</sup> It is a crucial part of this process of "exchange" that the parties should intend by it to bring a legally binding contract into existence.<sup>16</sup>

(3) Other phrases

The words "ex gratia" in a promise to make a payment to a dismissed employee have been held not to negative contractual intention: they merely mean that the employers did not admit any pre-existing liability to make the payment.<sup>17</sup> Contractual intention was likewise not negated where a shipowner, during negotiations for a charterparty said "we are fixed in good faith".<sup>18</sup> If these words had any effect, they amounted merely to a "collateral understanding"<sup>19</sup> that account should be taken of damage to the vessel, of which both shipowner and charterer were aware.

4. Social and Domestic Arrangements

Many social arrangements do not amount to contracts because they are not intended to be legally binding. "The ordinary example is where two parties agree to take a walk together, or where there is an offer and an acceptance of hospitality."<sup>20</sup> Similarly it has been held that the winner of a competition held by a golf club could not sue for his prize where "no one concerned with that competition ever intended that there should be any legal results flowing from the conditions posted and the acceptance by the competitor of those conditions"<sup>21</sup>; that the rules of a competition organised by a "jalopy club" for charitable purposes did not have contractual force<sup>22</sup>; that "car pool" and similar arrangements between friends or neighbours did not amount to contracts even though one party contributed to the running costs of the other's vehicle<sup>23</sup>; that an agreement between members of a group of friends relating to musical performances by the group

<sup>14</sup> Home Insurance Co v Administratia Asigurarilor [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 674 at 677; cf. Overseas Union Ins Ltd v International Ins Ltd [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 65; Home & Overseas Ins Co Ltd v Mentor Ins (UK) Ltd [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 473.

<sup>15</sup> See above, p.52. Rose & Frank Co v JR Crompton & Bros Ltd [1923] 2 K.B. 261 at 294.

<sup>16</sup> Commission for the New Towns v Cooper (GB) Ltd [1995] Ch. 259 at 295.

<sup>17</sup> Edwards v Skyways Ltd [1964] 1 W.L.R. 349; it was admitted that there was consideration moving from the employee.

<sup>18</sup> The Mercedes Envoy [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 559.

<sup>19</sup> ibid., at 612.

<sup>20</sup> Balfour v Balfour [1919] 2 K.B. 571 at 578; Rose & Frank Co v JR Crompton & Bros Ltd [1923] 2 K.B. 261 at 293; Wyatt v Kreglinger & Fernau [1933] 1 K.B. 793 at 806.

<sup>21</sup> Lens v Devonshire Club (1914) The Times, December 4; referred to in Wyatt's case, above, from which the quotation in the text is taken.

<sup>22</sup> White v Blackmore [1972] 2 Q.B. 651.

<sup>23</sup> Comard v MIB [1963] 1 Q.B. 259; overruled, but not on the issue of contractual intention, in Albert v MIB [1972] A.C. 301; Buckpitt v Oates [1968] 1 All E.R. 1145, criticised on this point by Karsten, 32 M.L.R. 88. The actual decisions are obsolete by reason of Road Traffic Act 1988, ss.145 to 149; cf. also s.150. But an issue of contractual intention might still arise if one party to such an arrangement simply failed to turn up at the agreed time. For another context in which sharing of expenses did not give rise to an inference of contractual intention, see Monmouth CC v Marlog, The Times, May 4, 1994.

was not intended to have contractual effect<sup>24</sup>; and that the provision of free residential accommodation for close friends did not amount to a contract as it was an act of bounty, done without any intention to enter into legal relations.<sup>25</sup>

For the same reason, many domestic arrangements lack contractual force. In Balfour v Balfour<sup>26</sup> a husband who worked abroad promised to pay an allowance of £30 per month to his wife, who had to stay in England on medical grounds. The wife's attempt to enforce this promise by action failed for two reasons: she had not provided any consideration, and the parties did not intend the arrangement to be legally binding. On the second ground alone, most domestic arrangements between husband and wife are not contracts. Atkin L.J. said: "Those agreements, or many of them, do not result in contracts at all . . . even though there may be what as between other parties would constitute consideration for the agreement. . . . They are not contracts . . . because the parties did not intend that they should be attended by legal consequences. . . ." <sup>27</sup> It has been said that the facts of Balfour v Balfour "stretched that doctrine to its limits"<sup>28</sup>, but the doctrine itself has not been judicially questioned and the cases provide many other instances of its application.<sup>29</sup> It does not of course prevent a husband from making a binding contract with his wife: he can be her tenant<sup>30</sup>; and binding separation agreements are often made when husband and wife agree to live apart.<sup>31</sup> Similarly, where a man before marriage promised his future wife to leave her a house if she married him, she was able to enforce the promise although it was made informally and in affectionate terms.<sup>32</sup>

Such issues of contractual intention can also arise between parents and children. An informal promise by a parent to pay a child an allowance during study is not normally a contract, though it may become one, if, for example, it is part of a bargain made to induce the child to give up some occupation so as to enter on some particular course of study.<sup>33</sup> Similarly, where a mother bought a house as a residence for her son and daughter-in-law on the terms that they should pay her £7 per week to pay off the purchase price, this was held to amount to a contractual licence which the mother could not revoke so long as either of the young couple kept up the payments.<sup>34</sup> On the other hand, there is normally no contract where a mother agrees to nurse her child who has fallen ill or been injured, even though performance of the agreement makes it necessary

<sup>24</sup> Hadley v Kemp [1999] E.M.L.R. 589 at 623.

<sup>25</sup> Heslop v Burns [1974] 1 W.L.R. 1241.

<sup>26</sup> [1919] 2 K.B. 571; Hedley, 5 O.J.L.S. 391.

<sup>27</sup> At p.627: it would clearly be undesirable to enforce such agreements in accordance with their original terms, however much the position of the parties had changed; cf. Gould v Gould [1970] 1 Q.B. 275 where it was held by a majority that there was no contractual intention where a husband on leaving his wife promised to pay her £15 per week so long as he could manage it; Ingman [1970] J.B.L. 109.

<sup>28</sup> Pettitt v Pettitt [1970] A.C. 806 at 816.

<sup>29</sup> e.g. Gage v King [1961] 1 Q.B. 188; Spellman v Spellman [1961] 1 W.L.R. 921; cf. Lloyds Bank plc v Rosset [1991] 1 A.C. 107.

<sup>30</sup> Pearce v Merriman [1904] 1 K.B. 80; contrast Morris v Tarrant [1971] 2 Q.B. 143.

<sup>31</sup> e.g. Merritt v Merritt [1970] 1 W.L.R. 1121; Re Windle [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1628 (doubted in Re Kumar [1993] 1 W.L.R. 224); Tanner v Tanner [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1346 (where the parties were not married) as explained in Horrocks v Forray [1976] 1 W.L.R. 230; cf. below, p.440.

<sup>32</sup> Syngé v Syngé [1894] 1 Q.B. 466; cf. Jennings v Brown (1842) 9 M. & W. 496 (promise to discarded mistress).

<sup>33</sup> See Jones v Padavatton [1969] 1 W.L.R. 328 at 333; cf. Shadwell v Shadwell (1860) 9 C.B. N.S. 159.

<sup>34</sup> Hardwick v Johnson [1978] 1 W.L.R. 683 per Roskill and Browne L.J.J.; Lord Denning M.R. thought that there was no contract but reached the same conclusion on other grounds; cf. Collier v Holinshead (1984) 272 E.G. 941.

for her to give up her job.<sup>35</sup> Conversely, it has been held that the gift of a flat by a mother to her daughter on condition that the daughter should look after the mother there did not amount to a contract because it was not intended to have contractual force.<sup>36</sup>

The principle of Balfour v Balfour can also apply where persons other than husband and wife share a common household. While that household is a going concern, many arrangements will be made about running it from day to day, and it is unlikely that these will be intended to be legally binding. But this may not be true of the financial terms which form the basis on which the household was established. In one case a young couple were induced to sell their house, and move in with their elderly relations, by the latter's promise to leave them a share of the proposed joint home. The argument that this promise was not intended to be legally binding was rejected as the young couple would not have taken the important step of selling their own house on the faith of a merely social arrangement.<sup>37</sup> Similar reasoning was used in a later case<sup>38</sup> in which a man promised a woman that the house in which they had lived together (without being married) should be available for her and the couple's children. It was held that the promise had contractual force because, in reliance<sup>39</sup> on it, the woman had moved out of her rent-controlled flat. In another case of this kind,<sup>40</sup> the fact that the promisee had helped to improve the property was relied on to support the conclusion that an express or implied promise, giving her an interest in the property, had contractual force. Formal requirements for contracts for the disposition of interests in land (imposed in 1989)<sup>41</sup> make it unlikely<sup>42</sup> that such an arrangement could now take effect as such a contract, but legal effect could be given to it by holding that it had taken effect by way of constructive trust.<sup>43</sup>

In view of the informality of many house-sharing arrangements, it may be hard in a particular case to say just what obligation is created. In Hussey v Palmer<sup>44</sup> a lady spent £600 on having a room added to her son-in-law's house, on the understanding that she could live there for the rest of her life. When she left voluntarily, about a year later, it was held that there was no contract of loan in respect of the £600<sup>45</sup> but there probably was a contract to allow her to live in the room for the rest of her life.

<sup>35</sup> If there is very clear evidence of contractual intention there may be a binding contract, as in Haggard v de Placido [1972] 1 W.L.R. 716. But in practice such "contracts" were made only as devices to enable the value of the mother's services to be recovered from a tortfeasor who had injured the child, and for this purpose they are now unnecessary: Donnelly v Joyce [1974] Q.B. 454.

<sup>36</sup> Ellis v Chief Adjudication Officer [1998] 1 F.L.R. 184 at 188.

<sup>37</sup> Parker v Clark [1960] 1 W.L.R. 286; cf. Schaefer v Schuhman [1972] 1 W.L.R. 1286; Lee, 88 L.Q.R. 320; Tanner v Tanner [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1346; Nunn v Dalrymple, The Times, August 3, 1989.

<sup>38</sup> Tanner v Tanner [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1346.

<sup>39</sup> Contrast Horrocks v Forray [1976] 1 W.L.R. 320 and Coombes v Smith [1986] 1 W.L.R. 808, where there was no such reliance and hence no contract.

<sup>40</sup> Eves v Eves [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1338 at 1345, per Browne L.J. and Brightman J.

<sup>41</sup> Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989, s.2, below, p.179.

<sup>42</sup> e.g. Taylor v Dickens [1998] 1 F.L.R. 806 at 809; the reasoning of this case was doubted, but not on this point, in Gillett v Holt [2001] Ch. 210 at 227. S.2(1) of the 1989 Act (above) requires the contract to be made in writing by incorporating all its "expressly agreed" terms in a document; and if the promise in Eves v Eves, supra, n.40, was indeed implied it could be argued that there were no "expressly agreed" terms.

<sup>43</sup> Eves v Eves [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1338 at 1342, per Lord Denning M.R.: cf. Grant v Edwards [1986] Ch. 638; Lloyds Bank plc v Rosset [1991] 1 A.C. 107 at 127 contrast Burns v Burns [1984] Ch. 317; Lowe and Smith, 47 M.L.R. 341; Dewar, ibid. p.735. The formal requirements imposed by the 1989 Act (above, n.41) do not apply to "the creation or operation of . . . constructive trusts": s.2(5).

<sup>44</sup> [1972] 1 W.L.R. 1286.

<sup>45</sup> But she recovered the £600 on equitable grounds; cf. Re Sharpe [1980] 1 W.L.R. 219, where there was both a loan and an equitable right in the lender, and Briggs v Roman [1991] E.G.C.S. 6.

An agreement between persons who share a common household may have nothing to do with the management of the household. In Simpkins v Pays<sup>46</sup> three ladies who lived in the same house took part in a fashion competition run by a newspaper, agreeing to pool their entries and to share the prize which any entry might win; and the agreement to share was held to be legally binding.

5. Agreements Giving Wide Discretion to One Party

Contractual intention may be negatived where the terms of a promise leave its performance entirely to the discretion of the promisor.<sup>47</sup> In Taylor v Brewer<sup>48</sup> the claimant agreed to do work for a committee who resolved that he should receive “such remuneration . . . as should be deemed right.” His claim for a reasonable remuneration for work done failed: the promise to pay was “merely an engagement of honour”.<sup>49</sup> This case is now more often distinguished than followed,<sup>50</sup> but its reasoning would still be followed if the wording made it clear that the promise was not intended to be legally binding.<sup>51</sup> A fortiori, there is no contract where performance by each party was left to that party’s discretion.<sup>52</sup> Where, however, an agreement is clearly intended to have contractual effect, there is judicial support for the view that a discretion conferred by it on one party cannot “however widely worded . . . be exercised for purposes contrary to those of the instrument by which it is conferred”.<sup>53</sup>

An agreement may give one party a discretion to rescind. That party will not be bound if his promise means “I will only perform if I do not change my mind.” But the power to rescind may be inserted only as a safeguard in certain eventualities which are not exhaustively stated: for example, a contract for the sale of land may entitle the vendor to rescind if the purchaser persists in some requisition or objection which the vendor is “unable or unwilling to satisfy.” In such a case there is a contract and the court will control the exercise of the power to rescind by insisting that the vendor must not rescind “arbitrarily, or capriciously, or unreasonably. Much less can he act in bad faith.”<sup>54</sup>

6. Letters of Intent or of Comfort<sup>55</sup>

An issue of contractual intention may arise where parties in the course of negotiations exchange “letters of intent” or where one party gives to the other a “letter of comfort”.

<sup>46</sup> [1955] 1 W.L.R. 975.

<sup>47</sup> cf. above, p.83 for the question whether such a promise can constitute consideration for a counter-promise.

<sup>48</sup> (1813) 1 M. & S. 290; cf. Shallcross v Wright (1850) 12 Beav. 558; Roberts v Smith (1859) 28 L.J.Ex. 164; Robinson v Commissioners of Customs & Excise, The Times, April 28, 2000.

<sup>49</sup> 1 M. & S. at p.291.

<sup>50</sup> See below, p.740; cf. Re Brand Estates [1936] 3 All E.R. 374.

<sup>51</sup> cf. Re Richmond Gate Property Co Ltd [1965] 1 W.L.R. 335; below, p.741.

<sup>52</sup> Carmichael v National Power plc [1999] 1 W.L.R. 2042.

<sup>53</sup> Equitable Life Assurance Society v Hyman [2002] 1 A.C. 408 at 460 per Lord Cooke, giving this as an alternative ground for the decision while also accepting the “implied term” reasoning on which the other members of the House based their decision: below, p.212.

<sup>54</sup> Selkirk v Romar Investments Ltd [1963] 1 W.L.R. 1415 at 1422. For the possible effects of Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977, s.3(2)(b)(ii) and of Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999 (esp. Sch.2, para.1(c)), see below, pp.252, 275. In the cases of agreements subject to the “satisfaction” of one party, there is no general rule requiring that party to act in good faith or reasonably: see Stabilad Ltd v Stephens & Carter Ltd [1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 651 at 622, above, p.64; such agreements can be distinguished from contracts which give one party a discretion to rescind since the exercise of such a discretion deprives the other party of rights under an existing contract, while in the “satisfaction” cases there is no such contract unless the party’s satisfaction is communicated to the other.

<sup>55</sup> Lake & Draetta, Letters of Intent (2nd ed.); Furmston, Poole & Norisada, Contract Formation and Letters of Intent.

The terms of such documents may negative contractual intention.<sup>56</sup> This was, for example, held to be the case where a company had issued a "letter of comfort" to a lender in respect of a loan to one of its subsidiaries.<sup>57</sup> The letter stated that "it is our policy that [the subsidiary] is at all times in a position to meet its liabilities in respect of the loan." This was interpreted to be no more than a statement of the company's present policy: it was not an undertaking that the policy would not be changed, since neither party had intended the statement to take effect as a contractual promise. On the other hand, where the language of such a document does not in terms negative contractual intention, it is open to the courts to hold the parties bound by the document; and they will, in particular, be inclined to do so where the parties have acted on the document for a long period of time or have expended considerable sums of money in reliance on it.<sup>58</sup> The fact that the parties envisage that the letter is to be superseded by a later, more formal, contractual document does not, of itself, prevent it from taking effect as a contract.<sup>59</sup>

7. Collective Agreements

Agreements as to rates of wages and conditions of work are commonly reached after collective bargaining between trade unions and employers or associations of employers. The general common law view was that such collective agreements were prima facie not intended to be legally binding<sup>60</sup> as between the trade unions and the employers.<sup>61</sup> The Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 goes further in providing that a collective agreement<sup>62</sup> is "conclusively presumed not to have been intended by the parties to be a legally enforceable contract" unless it is in writing and expressly provides the contrary (in which case the agreement is conclusively presumed to have been intended by the parties to be a legally enforceable contract).<sup>63</sup> To displace the presumption that a collective agreement is not intended to be a legally binding contract, the agreement must provide that it was intended to be legally binding. The presumption is

<sup>56</sup> Snelling v John G Snelling Ltd [1973] Q.B. 87; cf. Montreal Gas Co v Vesey [1900] A.C. 595; BSC v Cleveland Bridge & Engineering Ltd [1984] 1 All E.R. 504; Monk Construction v Norwich Union Life Assurance Society (1992) 62 B.L.R. 107.

<sup>57</sup> Kleinwort Benson Ltd v Malaysian Mining Corp [1989] 1 W.L.R. 379; Reynolds, 104 L.Q.R. 353; Davenport [1988] 1 L.M.C.L.Q. 290; Prentice, 105 L.Q.R. 346; Ayres and Moore, [1989] 1 L.M.C.L.Q. 281; Tyree, 2 J.C.L. 279.

<sup>58</sup> cf. Turriff Construction Ltd v Regalia Knitting Mills (1971) 22 E.G. 169 (letter of intent held to be a collateral contract for preliminary work); Wilson Smithett & Cape (Sugar) Ltd v Bangladesh Sugar and Food Industries Ltd [1986] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 378 (letter of intent held to be an acceptance); Chemco Leasing SpA v Rediffusion [1987] 1 F.T.L.R. 201 (letter of intent held to be an offer but to have lapsed before acceptance).

<sup>59</sup> See above, p.55.

<sup>60</sup> Kahn-Freund in (ed.) Flanders and Clegg, The System of Industrial Relations in Great Britain, Chap.2; and in (ed.) Ginsberg, Law and Opinion in England in the 20th Century, p.215; Grunfeld, Modern Trade Union Law, pp.219–220; Wedderburn, The Worker and the Law (3rd ed.), pp.318–322; Report of the Royal Commission on the Trade Unions and Employers' Associations (Cmd. 3623, 1968) §§470–471 Ford Motor Co Ltd v AEF [1969] 1 W.L.R. 339; Selwyn, 32 M.L.R. 377; Hepple [1970] C.L.J. 122; Lewis, 42 M.L.R. 613.

<sup>61</sup> For the position between employer and employee where the terms of a collective agreement are incorporated in individual contracts of employment, see below, pp.213–214.

<sup>62</sup> As defined by s.178(1) and (2) of the 1992 Act.

<sup>63</sup> s.179(1) and (2); The Universe Sentinel [1983] A.C. 366 at 380. The Rosso [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 120; cf. Cheall v APEX [1983] 1 A.C. 180 at 189 (inter-union agreement); provisions making collective agreements legally binding are said to be rare: see Commission of the European Communities v United Kingdom [1984] 1 C.R. 192, 195.

not displaced by a statement that the parties shall be “bound” by the agreement, for this may mean that they are to be bound in honour only.<sup>64</sup>

8. Other Cases

The cases in which there is no intention to create legal relations cannot be exhaustively classified. Contractual intention may be negated by many factors other than those listed above: for example, by evidence that “the agreement was a goodwill agreement . . . made without any intention of creating legal relations”<sup>65</sup>; that it was a sham, made with “no intention . . . to create legal relations”<sup>66</sup>; that the parties had not yet completed the contractual negotiations<sup>67</sup>; and, where a landlord had agreed not to enforce an order for possession against a tenant who had fallen into arrears with her rent, it was held that as the parties “plainly did not intend”<sup>68</sup> the agreement to have contractual force, but intended it merely to turn the tenant into a “tolerated trespasser”.<sup>69</sup>

A number of cases support the view that an arrangement which was believed simply to give effect to pre-existing rights was not a contract because the parties had no intention to enter into a new contract<sup>70</sup>; this may be true even where the contract giving rise to those rights had been discharged, so long as the parties believed that it was still in existence.<sup>71</sup> But contractual intention is not negated where the conduct of the parties to an earlier contract makes it clear that they intended not merely to give effect to that contract but also to enter into a new contract containing additional terms<sup>72</sup>; nor is contractual intention necessarily negated where the conduct of only one party to the alleged new contract consisted of his performance of an earlier contract between him and a third party.<sup>73</sup>

The context in which an agreement is made may negative contractual intention. For example, in one case a statement was made on behalf of the Government in time of war that a certain neutral ship would be allowed to leave a British port if specified conditions were met. It was held that the statement did not have contractual force as it was “merely an expression of intention to act in a particular way in a certain event”.<sup>74</sup> And in President of the Methodist Conference v Parfitt<sup>75</sup> it was held that the appointment of a person as a Minister of the Methodist Church did not give rise to a contract as the relationship was not one “in which the parties intended to create legal relations between

<sup>64</sup> NCB v NUM [1986] 1 C.R. 736.

<sup>65</sup> Orion Ins Co plc v Sphere Drake Ins plc [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 465 at 505, affirmed [1992] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 239; cf. County Ltd v Girozentrale Securities [1996] 3 All E.R. 834 at 837; Clarke v Nationwide Building Society (1998) 76 P. & C.R. D5.

<sup>66</sup> The Ocean Enterprise [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 449 at 484; Hitch v Stokes [2001] EWCA Civ 63; [2001] S.T.C. 214.

<sup>67</sup> The Bay Ridge [1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 306 at 329.

<sup>68</sup> Burrows v Brent LBC [1996] 1 W.L.R. 1448 at 1454. cf. Stirling v Leadenhall Residential 2 Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 1011; [2001] 3 All E.R. 645: agreement as to rate at which payments under a court order for rent arrears were to be made held not to give rise to a new tenancy.

<sup>69</sup> [1996] 1 W.L.R. at 1455.

<sup>70</sup> Beesly v Hallwood Estates Ltd [1960] 1 W.L.R. 549 at 558, affirmed on other grounds [1961] Ch. 105; cf., Harvela Investments Ltd v Royal Trust Co of Canada (CI) Ltd [1986] A.C. 207. See also The Aramis [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 213, Treitel, [1989] L.M.C.L.Q. 162; The Gudermes [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 311; The Happy Day [2002] EWCA Civ 1068; [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 487 at [63].

<sup>71</sup> GF Sharp & Co v McMillan [1998] 1 R.L.R. 632.

<sup>72</sup> The Amazonia [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 238 at 241–242; cf. the Stirling case, above, n.68, where a new tenancy was held to arise on the parties' subsequent agreement to increase the rent.

<sup>73</sup> Pyrene v Scindia Navigation Co Ltd [1954] 2 Q.B. 402; The Eurymedon [1975] A.C. 514; The Captain Gregos (No 2) [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 395 (so far as it relates to B.P.'s claim). cf. Halifax Building Society v Edell [1992] Ch. 436, discussed below. p.587

<sup>74</sup> Rederiaktiebolaget Amphitrite v R. [1921] 2 K.B. 500 at 503.

<sup>75</sup> [1984] Q.B. 368.

themselves so as to make the agreement . . . enforceable in the courts".<sup>76</sup> At one time, it was thought that the relationship between the Crown and one of its civil servants was not contractual because the Crown did not, when the relationship was entered into, have the necessary contractual intention.<sup>77</sup> But in one of the cases which supported that view it was said that there was evidence that the Crown was reconsidering its position on the point<sup>78</sup>; and more recently it has been held<sup>79</sup> that the requirement of contractual intention was satisfied in spite of the fact that the terms of appointment stated that "a civil servant does not have a contract of employment" but rather "a letter of appointment". These words were not sufficient to turn a relationship which, apart from them, had all the characteristics of a contract into one which was binding in honour only. It has been said that a police constable was a person who "holds an office and is not therefore strictly an employee"<sup>80</sup>; and that there is "no contract between a police officer and a chief constable".<sup>81</sup> But it does not follow that the relationship is binding in honour only: the resulting relationship is "closely analogous to a contract of employment"<sup>82</sup> so that duties analogous to those arising out of such a contract may be owed to the constable.

Contractual intention may be negated by the vagueness of a statement or promise. Thus, in one case a promise by a husband to allow his deserted wife to stay in the matrimonial home was held to have no contractual force because it did not state for how long or on what terms she could stay there: this showed that it was "not intended by him, or understood by her, to have any contractual basis or effect".<sup>83</sup> So, too, the use of deliberately vague language was held to negative contractual intention where a property developer reached an "understanding" with a firm of solicitors to employ them in connection with a proposed development, but neither side entered into a definite commitment.<sup>84</sup> The assumption in all these cases was that the parties had reached agreement, and in them lack of contractual intention prevented that agreement from having legal effect. Vagueness may also be a ground for concluding that the parties had never reached agreement at all.<sup>85</sup> This issue is separate from that of contractual intention, which strictly speaking concerns only the effect of an agreement which is first shown to exist.<sup>86</sup> But the two issues are related in borderline cases in which the question whether an agreement exists depends on the degree of vagueness or on whether the vagueness can be resolved, e.g. by applying the standard of reasonableness; for in such

<sup>76</sup> ibid. at 378; approved in Davies v Presbyterian Church of Wales [1986] 1 W.L.R. 323 (no contract of employment between pastor and Presbyterian Church); Woolman, 102 L.Q.R. 356; cf. Santokh Singh v Guru Nanak Gurdwara [1990] I.C.R. 309; Diocese of Southmark v Coker [1998] I.C.R. 140; and see Birmingham Mosque Trust v Alami [1992] I.C.R. 435.

<sup>77</sup> See R. v Civil Service Appeal Board, ex p. Bruce [1988] I.C.R. 649, affirmed on other grounds [1989] I.C.R. 171; McLaren v Home Office [1990] I.C.R. 824.

<sup>78</sup> R. v Civil Service Appeal Board, ex p. Bruce, above, at 659.

<sup>79</sup> R. v Lord Chancellor's Department, ex p. Nangle [1991] I.C.R. 743; cf. Trade Unions and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 ss.62(7), 245: "deemed [for certain purposes] to constitute a contract".

<sup>80</sup> White v Chief Constable of the South Yorkshire Police [1999] A.C. 455 at 481.

<sup>81</sup> ibid. at 497.

<sup>82</sup> ibid.; see also Waters v Commissioner of Police to the Metropolis [2000] 1 W.L.R. 1607 at 1616.

<sup>83</sup> Vaughan v Vaughan [1953] 1 Q.B. 762 at 765; cf. Booker v Palmer [1942] 2 All E.R. 674; Horrocks v Forray [1976] 1 W.L.R. 230; Jones v Padavatton [1969] 1 W.L.R. 328; Windeler v Whitehall [1990] 2 FLR 505; and see Gould v Gould [1970] 1 Q.B. 275; Layton v Morris, The Times, December 11, 1985.

<sup>84</sup> J H Milner & Son v Percy Bilton Ltd [1966] 1 W.L.R. 1582; cf. Baird Textile Holdings Ltd v Marks & Spencer plc [2001] EWCA Civ 274; [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 737, at [10, 46, 47, 73, 76].

<sup>85</sup> See above, pp.46–47.

<sup>86</sup> See Re Goodchild [1997] 1 W.L.R. 1216, where it is said at 1226 that one of the parties to alleged mutual wills "regarded the arrangement as irrevocable, but . . . [the other] did not"; cf. Taylor v Dickens [1998] 1 FLR 806, criticised, but not on the issue of contractual intention, in Gillet v Holt [2000] Ch. 210 at 227.

cases “the absence of any intention to create legal relations”<sup>87</sup> may be a ground for holding that no agreement ever came into existence.

The fact that a statement was made in jest or anger may also negative contractual intention. Thus in Licenses Insurance Corporation v Lawson<sup>87a</sup> the defendant was a director of two companies, A and B. The former company held shares in the latter and resolved, in the defendant’s absence, to sell them. At a later meeting this resolution was rescinded after a heated discussion during which the defendant said that he would make good any loss which A might suffer if it kept the shares in B. It was held that the defendant was not liable on this undertaking. Nobody at the meeting regarded it as a contract; it was not recorded as such in the minute book; and the defendant’s fellow-directors at most thought that he was bound in honour.

There are conflicting decisions on the question whether the issue and acceptance of a free travel pass amounts to a contract. In Wilkie v LPTB<sup>88</sup> it was held that such a pass issued by a transport undertaking to one of its own employees did not amount to a contract. But the contrary conclusion was reached in Gore v Van der Lann<sup>89</sup> where the pass was issued to an old age pensioner. This conclusion was based on the ground that an application for the pass had been made on a form couched in contractual language; and Wilkie’s case was distinguished on the ground that the pass there was issued to the employee “as a matter of course . . . as one of the privileges attaching to his employment”.<sup>90</sup> But as the pass in Gore’s case was issued expressly on the “understanding” that it constituted only a licence subject to conditions the distinction seems, with respect, to be a tenuous one.

9. Proof of Contractual Intention

The question of contractual intention is, in the last resort, one of fact.<sup>91</sup> In deciding it, a distinction must be drawn between implied and express agreements.<sup>92</sup> Claims based on implied agreements are approached on the basis that “contracts are not lightly to be implied” and that the court must therefore be able “to conclude with confidence that . . . the parties intended to create contractual relations”.<sup>93</sup> The burden of proof on this issue is on the proponent of the implied contract, and in a number of cases claims or defences based on implied contracts have been rejected precisely on the ground that contractual intention had not been shown by that party to exist.<sup>94</sup> But where a claim is based on a proved or admitted express agreement the courts do not require, in addition, proof that parties to an ordinary commercial relationship actually intended to be bound.<sup>95</sup> On the

<sup>87</sup> Baird Textile Holdings Ltd v Marks & Spencer plc, above, n.84 at [30]; and see above, p.50.

<sup>87a</sup> (1896) 12 T.L.R. 501.

<sup>88</sup> [1947] 1 All E.R. 258.

<sup>89</sup> [1967] 2 Q.B. 31; above, p.157.

<sup>90</sup> [1967] 2 Q.B. 31 at 41.

<sup>91</sup> See Zakhem International Construction Ltd v Nippon Kohan KK [1987] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 596.

<sup>92</sup> For judicial recognition of the distinction, see Baird Textile Holdings Ltd v Marks & Spencer plc [2001] EWCA Civ 274; [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 737, at [61]; Modahl v British Athletics Federation Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 1447; [2002] 1 W.L.R. 1477 at [102] (where the burden of proof referred to at n.94 below, was held to have been discharged).

<sup>93</sup> Blackpool and Fylde Aero Club v Blackpool BC [1990] 1 W.L.R. 1195 at 1202; cf. the Baird Textile case, above, n.92, at [20, 21, 30, 62] (where the burden of proof was not discharged).

<sup>94</sup> The Kapetan Markos NL (No.2) [1987] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 323; The Aramis [1989] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 213; The Gudermes [1993] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 311; in some of these cases rights and liabilities under shipping documents would now arise by virtue of Carriage of Goods by Sea Act 1924, ss.2, 3.

<sup>95</sup> Certain regulated agreements under the Consumer Credit Act 1974 must contain the following notice: “This is a Hire-Purchase Agreement regulated by the Consumer Credit Act 1974. Sign it only if you want to be legally bound by its terms.” (Consumer Credit (Agreements) Regulations 1983 (SI 1983/1553)).

contrary, the onus of proving that there was no such intention "is on the party who asserts that no legal effect was intended, and the onus is a heavy one".<sup>96</sup> In deciding whether the onus has been discharged, the courts will be influenced by the importance of the agreement to the parties, and by the fact that one of them has acted in reliance on it.<sup>97</sup> Contractual intention is not negated merely by the fact that the parties were companies in the same group and that the terms of their agreement "might not in practice be strictly enforced between them".<sup>98</sup>

The test of contractual intention is normally an objective one,<sup>99</sup> so that where, for example, an agreement for the sale of a house is not "subject to contract",<sup>1</sup> both parties are likely to be bound even though one of them subjectively believed that he would not be bound till the usual exchange of contracts had taken place.<sup>2</sup> But the objective test is here (as elsewhere)<sup>3</sup> subject to the limitation that it does not apply in favour of a party who knows the truth. Thus in the example just given the party who did not intend to be bound would not be bound if his state of mind was actually known to the other party.<sup>4</sup> Nor could a party who did not in fact intend to be bound invoke the objective test so as to hold the other party to the contract<sup>5</sup>: to apply that test in such a case would pervert its purpose, which is to protect a party who has relied on the objective appearance of consent from the prejudice which he would suffer if the other party could escape liability on the ground that he had no real intention to be bound. Nor does the objective test apply where the parties have expressed their actual intention in the document alleged to constitute the contract: the question whether they intended the document to have contractual effect then becomes one "of construction of the documents as a whole what effect is to be given to such a statement".<sup>6</sup> The objective test, in other words, merely prevents a party from relying on his uncommunicated belief as to the binding force of the agreement. The incidence of the burden of proof and the objective test may explain two

<sup>96</sup> Edwards v Skyways Ltd [1964] 1 W.L.R. 349 at 355; cf. The Polyduke [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 211; Financial Techniques (Planning Services) Ltd v Hughes [1981] I.R.L.R. 32. The Zephyr [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 529, 537 (disapproving [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 58 at 63–64); Yani Haryanto v ED & F Man (Sugar) Ltd [1986] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 44; Orion Ins Co plc v Sphere Drake Ins plc [1992] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 239 at 263 (where the burden was discharged); Mamidoil-Jetoil Greek Petroleum Company S.A. v Okta Oil Refinery AD [2003] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 1, at [159].

<sup>97</sup> See above, p.166; Kingswood Estate Co Ltd v Anderson [1963] 2 Q.B. 169; cf. South West Water Authority v Palmer (1982) 263 E.G. 438.

<sup>98</sup> The Marine Star (No.2) [1994] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 629 at 632, reversed on other grounds [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 383.

<sup>99</sup> See above, pp.1, 8; Ignazio Messina & Co v Polskie Linie Oceaniczne [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 566 at 579 (where, on the objective test there was no contractual intention); Bowerman v Association of British Travel Agents [1995] N.L.J. 1815; The Bay Ridge [1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 306 at 327; London Baggage (Charing Cross) v Railtrack plc [2000] F.G.C.S. 57; Edmonds v Lamson [2000] Q.B. 501; Baird Textile Holdings Ltd v Marks & Spencer plc [2001] EWCA Civ 274; [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 737. If the agreement is intended to give rise to legal relations, its precise legal effects are similarly not determined by the subjective intentions of the parties or one of them: see Street v Mountfort [1985] A.C. 809 where an agreement was held as a matter of law to take effect as a lease even though the lessor clearly intended it to take effect only as a licence. cf. AG Securities v Vaughan [1990] 1 A.C. 417; contrast Ogmr BC v Dykes [1989] 1 W.L.R. 295; Monmouth BC v Marlog, The Times, May 4, 1994; Bruton v Quadrant Housing Trust [1997] N.L.J. 1385. See also Crondren v Aldridge [1993] 1 W.L.R. 433, applying the objective test of intention to produce legal consequences to a non-contractual direction to executors in favour of a third party. Quaere whether, in the absence of reliance on the direction, the policy which justifies the objective test in a contractual context extends to the situation which arose in this case.

<sup>1</sup> See above, p.52.

<sup>2</sup> Tiddell v Henderson [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1496; Storer v Manchester CC [1974] 1 W.L.R. 1403 at 1408.

<sup>3</sup> See above, p.9.

<sup>4</sup> Pateman v Pay (1974) 263 E.G. 467.

<sup>5</sup> Lark v Outhwaite [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 132 at 141.

<sup>6</sup> R. v Lord Chancellor's Department, Ex p. Nangle [1991] I.C.R. 743 at 751.

controversial decisions, in each of which there was a difference of opinion on the issue of contractual intention.

The first is Esso Petroleum Ltd v Commissioners of Customs and Excise.<sup>7</sup> Esso supplied garages with tokens called "World Cup coins", instructing them to give away one coin with every four gallons of petrol sold. The scheme was advertised by Esso and also on posters displayed by the garages. By a majority of four to one, the House of Lords held that there was no "sale" of the coins; but the majority was equally divided on the question whether there was any contract at all with regard to the coins. Those who thought that there was a contract<sup>8</sup> relied on the incidence of the burden of proof, and on the point that "Esso envisaged a bargain of some sort between the garage proprietor and the motorist".<sup>9</sup> But this point relates rather to the intention of Esso than to that of the alleged contracting parties. With regard to their intention, it is submitted that the more realistic view is that contractual intention was negated by the language of the advertisements (in which the coins were said to be "going free"), and by the minimal value of the coins.

The second case is J Evans & Son (Portsmouth) Ltd v Andrea Merzario Ltd.<sup>10</sup> The representative of a firm of forwarding agents told a customer, with whom the firm had long dealt, that henceforth his goods would be packed in containers and assured him that these would be carried under deck. About a year later, such a container was carried on deck and lost. At first instance,<sup>11</sup> Kerr J. held that the promise was not intended to be legally binding since it was made in the course of a courtesy call, not related to any particular transaction, and indefinite with regard to its future duration. The Court of Appeal, however, held<sup>12</sup> that the promise did have contractual force, relying principally on the importance attached by the customer to the carriage of his goods under deck, and on the fact that he would not have agreed to the new mode of carriage but for the promise. The case is no doubt a borderline one, but it is submitted that Kerr J.'s view accords more closely with the objective test of contractual intention. In most cases, that test prevents the promisor from relying on his subjective intention not to enter into a contractual undertaking. But it should equally prevent the promisee's subjective intention (if not known to the promisor) from being decisive. The Court of Appeal appears with respect to have attached too much weight to the customer's subjective state of mind, and too little weight to the circumstances in which the promise was made.

SECTION 2. INTENTION AND CONSIDERATION

In the United States, the view has been put forward by Williston<sup>13</sup> that "the common law does not require any positive intention to create a legal obligation as an element of contract". No one disputes that an agreement is not a contract if the parties expressly provide that it is not to be legally binding. But it is said that an agreement containing no such provision will generally be a contract although no positive intention to create a legal obligation existed in the minds of the parties. This theory can be interpreted in two ways.

<sup>7</sup> [1976] 1 W.L.R. 1; Atiyah, 39 M.L.R. 335.

<sup>8</sup> Lords Simon and Wilberforce. Lord Fraser, who dissented on the main issue, took the same view.

<sup>9</sup> [1976] 1 W.L.R. 1 at 6.

<sup>10</sup> [1976] 1 W.L.R. 1078; Adams, 40 M.L.R. 227; cf. El Awadi v Bank of Credit and Commerce International [1990] 1 Q.B. 606 at 617.

<sup>11</sup> [1975] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 162.

<sup>12</sup> [1976] 1 W.L.R. 1078.

<sup>13</sup> Williston, Contracts, Section 21; Tuck, 21 Can.B.Rev. 123; Shatwell, 1 Sydney L.R. at p.293; Unger, 19 M.L.R. 96. Hedley, 5 O.J.L.S. 391.

The first interpretation simply emphasises the rule as to burden of proof (as applied to express promises) and the objective test, stated above.<sup>14</sup> Thus Williston says: "If, under the circumstances, a reasonable person would understand<sup>15</sup> the words used as importing that the speaker promised to do something if given a requested exchange therefor, it is immaterial what intention the offeror may have had." This statement is no doubt true in the case of an ordinary commercial contract; but it is harder to apply where words are spoken in jest or in anger.<sup>16</sup> Williston admits that there is no contract in such cases; and this admission can perhaps be explained on the ground that a person to whom a promise is made in obvious jest or anger would know that it was not intended to be binding, so that the objective test would not be satisfied. Another difficulty is that Williston's test is, if taken quite literally, wide enough to cover ordinary social and domestic arrangements. Williston sees no reason why these "should not create a contract, if the requisites for the formation of a contract exist". No doubt it is possible that in exceptional circumstances and by use of clear words acceptance of an invitation to a party could create a contract. But would it do so merely because "the speaker promised to do something if given a requested exchange therefor?" Would acceptance of an invitation to a bottle-party normally create a contract? And can Williston's view be reconciled with the "car pool" cases<sup>17</sup> mentioned above?

The second, and more extreme, version of the theory is that there is no requirement of contractual intention at all. A promise is binding if it is supported by consideration; nothing else is necessary. Social and domestic arrangements are not contracts, even if they involve reciprocal promises or performances, because the promise of one party is not given as the price for the other's: there is no bargain. "The family circle differs from the market place in that it is not the setting for bargaining but for an exchange of gifts or gratuitous services".<sup>18</sup> This is said to be the true basis of Balfour v Balfour.<sup>19</sup> But this view merely makes the requirement of intention part of the definition of consideration: one cannot tell whether mutual promises constitute a bargain or an "exchange of gifts" without regard to the intention of the parties. Nor can one on this view explain why mere puffs or statements made in jest or anger do not give rise to contractual obligations; why a defendant who concedes that there was consideration has any case left to argue on the issue of intention<sup>20</sup> or why there was no contract in Heilbut, Symons & Co v Buckleton<sup>21</sup>; and why claims or defences based on implied contracts have been rejected precisely because contractual intention had not been established.<sup>22</sup> It is finally inconsistent with a number of cases in which there was agreement and consideration,<sup>23</sup> and the conclusion that the agreement did not amount to a contract was based solely on the ground that the parties did not intend that it should give rise to legal relations between them.

<sup>14</sup> See above, pp.171-172.

<sup>15</sup> See Edwards v Skyways Ltd [1964] 1 W.L.R. 349 at 356 for the difficulties which may arise in determining this question, especially where one of the parties is a corporation.

<sup>16</sup> See above, p.171.

<sup>17</sup> See above, p.164.

<sup>18</sup> Unger, loc. cit.; cf. Hepple [1970] C.I.J. 122.

<sup>19</sup> [1919] 2 K.B. 571.

<sup>20</sup> As in Edwards v Skyways Ltd [1964] 1 W.L.R. 349; cf. Re Beaumont [1980] Ch. 444 at 453, recognising that consideration may be provided "under a contract or otherwise".

<sup>21</sup> [1913] A.C. 30; above, p.149.

<sup>22</sup> See above, p.171.

<sup>23</sup> e.g. President of the Methodist Conference v Parfitt [1984] Q.B. 368 at 378; R. v Civil Service Appeal Board Ex p. Bruce [1988] I.C.R. 649 at 659, 665 (affirmed on other grounds [1989] I.C.R. 171); The Aramis [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 213.

It is submitted that neither version of the theory is satisfactory. Many of the decisions discussed in this Chapter are expressly based on the absence of an intention to create legal relations, and cannot be satisfactorily explained in any other way. They show that such intention is recognised by English law as a separate requirement for the formation of contracts.<sup>24</sup>

---

<sup>24</sup> For recent judicial support for this view, see Baird Textile Holdings Ltd v Marks & Spencer plc [2001] EWCA Civ 274; [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 737 at [30], [59].

CHAPTER FIVE

FORM

SECTION 1. GENERAL RULE

A LEGAL system is said to require that a contract shall be made in a certain form if it lays down the manner in which the conclusion of the contract must be marked or recorded. In modern legal systems, such formal requirements generally consist of writing, sometimes with additional requirements, e.g. those of a deed or (in some countries) of authentication by a notary. It has even been said that consideration is a form,<sup>1</sup> but more usually “form” refers to requirements which have nothing to do with the contents of an agreement. In this sense consideration is not generally a form, though the giving of peppercorn to make a gratuitous promise binding might be so regarded.<sup>2</sup>

Form may be sufficient to make a promise binding, as we have seen in discussing the effect of a gratuitous promise made in a deed.<sup>3</sup> But in this Chapter we shall discuss cases in which form is a necessary requirement which must be satisfied (granted that there is agreement, consideration and contractual intention) before the contract is fully effective. Such a requirement may serve one or more of several purposes. First, it promotes certainty, as it is usually relatively easy to tell whether the required form has been used. A requirement of writing also simplifies the problem of ascertaining the contents of the agreement. Secondly, form has a cautionary effect: a person may hesitate longer before executing a deed than he would before making an oral promise. Thirdly, form has a protective function: it is used to protect the weaker party to a contractual relationship by ensuring that he is provided with a written record of the terms of the contract. For example, an employee must be informed in writing of the particulars of his employment,<sup>4</sup> and a tenant must (in certain cases) be given a rent-book containing certain particulars of his tenancy.<sup>5</sup> Both the second and the third purposes of form are illustrated by the elaborate formal requirements that protect a debtor under certain consumer credit agreements. He must be given a document to be signed by him inside a “signature box”; this must contain a notice warning him that he is signing a consumer credit agreement. A similar box must contain a notice telling him of his statutory right

---

<sup>1</sup> Holmes, The Common Law, p.273: “Consideration is a form as much as a seal.” See also Fuller, 41 Col.L.Rev. 799.

<sup>2</sup> See The Alve [1989] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 138 at 147.

<sup>3</sup> See above, p.158.

<sup>4</sup> Employment Rights Act 1996, s.1; see also ss.2–4; these provisions give effect to EC Council Directive 91/533; the actual contract need not be in writing. Machinery for securing compliance with these sections is provided by s.11.

<sup>5</sup> Landlord and Tenant Act 1985, s.4; the actual lease is not required by this Act to be in writing. Failure to comply with s.4 is an offence under s.7 of the Act; but does not make the contract invalid: Shaw v Groom [1970] 2 Q.B. 504; cf. Estate Agents Act 1979, s.18 below, p.743, for information which estate agents must give to their clients; Consumer Protection (Distance Selling) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/2334, regs 7 and 8; these Regulations implement Dir.97/7/EC. See also Electronic Commerce (EC Directive) Regulations 2002, SI 2002/2013, reg.9 implementing Dir.2000/31/EC (below, p.170), requiring specified information to be given before the conclusion of a contract to which the Regulations apply; this requirement does not apply to contracts made exclusively by email: reg.9(4).

of cancellation.<sup>6</sup> It is scarcely fanciful to suggest that these boxes fulfil in a modern context some of the functions formerly performed by use of the seal. Form may finally serve what has been called a “channelling” purpose<sup>7</sup>: that is, the use of a certain form may help to distinguish one type of transaction from another.

Form has, on the other hand, the disadvantage that it is time-consuming and clumsy and that it is a source of technical pitfalls. Even the relatively simple requirement of writing is open to these objections and has therefore been regarded as inconvenient from a commercial point of view. Thus the general rule is that contracts can be made quite informally.<sup>8</sup>

SECTION 2. STATUTORY EXCEPTIONS

The general rule is subject to many exceptions. These now all depend on legislation dealing with specific types of contracts. Some such contracts must be made by deed, some must be in writing, and others must be evidenced by a note or memorandum in writing. No attempt can be made in this book to give a complete list of these exceptions. A few illustrations must suffice; after these have been discussed, an attempt will be made to consider the impact on this subject of contracting by electronic means.

1. Contracts which must be made by Deed

A lease for more than three years must be made by deed.<sup>9</sup> If it is not so made, it is “void for the purpose of creating a legal estate”.<sup>10</sup> But it operates in equity as an agreement for a lease,<sup>11</sup> which can be specifically enforced if it complies with the formal requirements (to be discussed below)<sup>12</sup> for contracts for the disposition of interests in land. Thus between the parties to the lease lack of a deed is not fatal. But, unless the tenant has registered the lease as a land-charge or, in the case of registered land, is in actual occupation, he can be turned out by a third party to whom the landlord has sold the land.<sup>13</sup>

2. Contracts which must be in Writing

(1) Illustrations of such contracts

Under nineteenth century legislation, contracts which must be in writing include bills of exchange, promissory notes<sup>14</sup> and bills of sale.<sup>15</sup> More recent statutes impose the requirement of writing on regulated consumer credit agreements and on most contracts for the sale or other disposition of interests in land.

<sup>6</sup> Consumer Credit (Agreements) Regulations (1983 SI No. 1553), Sch.5, made under Consumer Credit Act 1974, s.60. They apply where the price is under £25,000: below, pp.178–179.

<sup>7</sup> Von Mehren, 72 H.L.R. 1009 at 1017.

<sup>8</sup> Beckham v Drake (1841) 9 M.& W. 79 at 92.

<sup>9</sup> Law of Property Act 1925, ss.52, 54(2); and see above, p.159 at n.25.

<sup>10</sup> ibid., s.52.

<sup>11</sup> Walsh v Lonsdale (1882) 21 Ch.D. 9.

<sup>12</sup> Below, pp.179–181.

<sup>13</sup> At present under Law of Property Act 1925, s.199(1)(i); Land Charges Act 1925, ss.10(1) Class (iv); 13(2); Land Registration Act 1925, s.70(1)(g), to be superseded by Land Registration Act 2002, Sch.3, para.2.

<sup>14</sup> Bills of Exchange Act 1882, ss.3(1), 17(2).

<sup>15</sup> Bills of Sale Act 1878 (Amendment) Act 1882.

Under the Consumer Credit Act 1974, regulated consumer credit agreements, and certain other agreements<sup>16</sup> are “not properly executed”<sup>17</sup> unless certain formalities are complied with. A regulated consumer credit agreement is one by which a creditor provides an individual debtor with credit<sup>18</sup> not exceeding £25,000.<sup>19</sup> Both parties must sign a document in the form prescribed by government regulations.<sup>20</sup> This must legibly set out all the express terms of the contract<sup>21</sup> and contain a notice of the debtor’s statutory right to cancel during the “cooling off” period (where this applies),<sup>22</sup> as well as certain other information.<sup>23</sup> A copy must also be given to the debtor.<sup>24</sup>

Under s.2 of the Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989, most contracts for the sale or disposition of an interest in land<sup>25</sup> must be “made in writing”.<sup>26</sup> All the terms<sup>27</sup> expressly<sup>28</sup> agreed by the parties must be incorporated in the document (or in each document, where contracts are exchanged).<sup>29</sup> The terms may be incorporated either by being set out in the document, or by reference.<sup>30</sup> The document (or documents) must also be signed “by or on behalf of”<sup>31</sup> each party<sup>32</sup>; this requirement of signature is no longer satisfied (as it was earlier under legislation superseded by s.2 of the 1989 Act<sup>33</sup>) by merely typing a party’s name and address on the document.<sup>34</sup> The requirement of writing does not apply to short leases for less than three years, to sales at public auctions or to transactions in certain forms of investment securities (e.g. unit trust investing in land).<sup>35</sup>

<sup>16</sup> Such as consumer hire agreements (s.15) and security instruments (s.105).

<sup>17</sup> s.61(1).

<sup>18</sup> As defined by s.9.

<sup>19</sup> s.8; Consumer Credit (Further increase of Monetary Amounts) Order 1998 (SI 1998/996); certain agreements are exempt under s.16 of the 1974 Act.

<sup>20</sup> s.61(1)(a); for exceptions, see s.74; cf. above, p.176.

<sup>21</sup> s.61(1)(b) and (c).

<sup>22</sup> s.64(5); for “cooling off” periods, see below, p.428.

<sup>23</sup> Consumer Credit Act 1974, s.55(1).

<sup>24</sup> ss.62, 63.

<sup>25</sup> As defined in Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989, s.2(6); for application to mortgages, see United Bank of Kuwait v Sahib [1997] Ch. 107, not cited in Target Holdings Ltd v Priestley (2000) 79 P. & C.R. 305, where s.2 was held not to apply to the disposition itself, as opposed to the contract for the disposition. A “lock-out” agreement is not within the section: Pitt v PHH Asset Management Ltd [1993] 1 W.L.R. 327.

<sup>26</sup> s.2(1). When the system of electronic conveyancing envisaged by Pt 8 of the Land Registration Act 2002 is introduced, s.2 of the 1989 Act will be superseded by Rules to be made under that Part.

<sup>27</sup> See Enfield LBC v Arajah [1995] E.G.C.S. 164 (where only the main terms were set out in the document).

<sup>28</sup> This word makes it unnecessary to set out implied terms in the document.

<sup>29</sup> Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989, s.2(1). An agreement reached in pre-exchange correspondence between the parties will not satisfy s.2(1) where no single document contains all the terms expressly agreed or is signed by both parties; nor will such correspondence amount to an “exchange” since this process refers to exchange of the formal documents described at p.52 above: see Commission for the New Towns v Cooper (Great Britain) Ltd [1995] Ch. 259 at 285, 293 disapproving the concession to the contrary which had apparently been accepted in Hooper v Sherman [1995] C.L.Y. 840.

<sup>30</sup> s.2(2). cf. Record v Bell [1991] 1 W.L.R. 853, where this requirement was not satisfied, but there was a collateral contract (below, p.179).

<sup>31</sup> Signature by an agent who is liable and entitled under the contract suffices: Braymist v Wise Finance Co Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 127; [2002] 2 All E.R. 333; below, p.680.

<sup>32</sup> s.2(3). In the case of an option to purchase, the agreement granting the option is within the section, but the notice exercising it is not, and so does not have to be signed by the vendor: Spiro v Glencrown Properties Ltd [1991] Ch. 537.

<sup>33</sup> i.e. Law of Property Act 1925, s.40, in turn superseding the relevant part of Statute of Frauds 1677, s.4; for the authorities on what amounts to “signature” under this legislation, see below, p.183.

<sup>34</sup> Firstpost Homes Ltd v Johnson [1995] 1 W.L.R. 1567, where it is said at 1576 that “signed” in s.2 of the 1989 Act should be given the meaning which “the ordinary man would understand it to have.”

<sup>35</sup> s.2(5).

(2) Effect of non-compliance

Failure to comply with the statutory requirements just described can produce a variety of legal consequences.

A bill of sale is void unless it is in writing in the statutory form.<sup>36</sup> But if the sort of promise which is normally contained in a bill of exchange or promissory note is made orally, it can result in a perfectly valid contract. The contract is not invalid<sup>37</sup> but will not have the legal and commercial characteristics<sup>38</sup> of a bill or note.

In the case of regulated consumer credit agreements, the 1974 Act provides an intermediate solution. An agreement which is not properly executed can be enforced against the debtor “on an order of the court only”.<sup>39</sup> In the absence of such an order, no restitutionary remedy is available against the borrower at common law since the award of such a remedy to the lender would be inconsistent with the legislative scheme that, in the case of an improperly executed document, “subject to the enforcement powers of the court, the debtor should not have to pay”.<sup>40</sup> No enforcement order can be made against the debtor if the agreement has not been signed by him,<sup>41</sup> or (in the case of a cancellable agreement) if the debtor has not been given a copy or notice of his right to cancel.<sup>42</sup> In the case of other formal defects, the court has a wide discretion. It can take into account the prejudice caused to the debtor and the degree of culpability of the creditor<sup>43</sup>; order enforcement conditionally or subject to variations<sup>44</sup>; reduce the amount payable by the debtor<sup>45</sup>; or enforce the agreement as if it did not include a term omitted from the document signed by the debtor.<sup>46</sup> This flexible approach goes far to meet the objection that formal requirements can give rise to unmeritorious defences based on technical slips.<sup>47</sup>

S.2 of the Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989 requires a contract for the sale or other disposition of an interest in land to be “made in writing”. The effect of these words is that the contract does not come into existence if the parties fail to comply with the statutory formal requirements.<sup>48</sup> This could cause hardship where one party has partly performed<sup>49</sup> such a contract, or otherwise acted in reliance on it, e.g. by

<sup>36</sup> See above, at n.15.

<sup>37</sup> Hitchens v General Guarantee Corp [2001] EWCA Civ 359, The Times, March 13, 2001.

<sup>38</sup> See below, pp.691–693.

<sup>39</sup> s.65(1). The defective agreement is thus unenforceable only and not void: Reg. v Modupe [1991] C.C.I.R. 29.

<sup>40</sup> Dimond v Lovell [2002] 1 A.C. 384 at 398.

<sup>41</sup> s.127(3). In Wilson v First County Trust [2001] EWCA Civ 633; [2001] Q.B. 407 the court made a declaration under s.4 of the Human Rights Act 1998 that s.127(3) of the Consumer Credit Act 1974 was incompatible with provisions of the European Convention on Human Rights, which have the force of law by virtue of s.1(1) of the 1998 Act. It is part of the reasoning of this case that s.127(3) does not invalidate, but merely makes unenforceable (without scope for judicial discretion) a contract which fails to comply with the requirements of the subsection and may do so even though the failure, e.g. to include one of the “prescribed terms” in a document signed by the debtor, causes him little or no prejudice. See further n.48, below.

<sup>42</sup> s.127(4).

<sup>43</sup> s.127(1)(i).

<sup>44</sup> s.127(1)(ii).

<sup>45</sup> s.127(2); National Guardian Mortgage Corp v Wilks [1993] CCLR 1.

<sup>46</sup> s.127(5).

<sup>47</sup> cf. Mobile Homes Act 1983, s.1, under which the court can order the site-owner to comply with the formal requirements imposed by the Act.

<sup>48</sup> Since no contract comes into existence where s.2 of the 1989 Act is not complied with, the reasoning of Wilson v First County Trust, above n.41, does not apply to failure to comply with s.2 of the 1989 Act: it is an essential part of the reasoning of Wilson's case that s.127(3) of the Consumer Credit Act did not make the contract void (but made it only unenforceable).

<sup>49</sup> s.2 has been held not to apply where the contract was fully performed: Tootal Clothing v Guinea Properties Management (1992) 64 P. & C.R. 452.

making improvements to the land in question. But such hardship can be avoided by other judicially developed doctrines, such as proprietary estoppel or constructive trust.<sup>50</sup> Under these doctrines, the court can make an order for the transfer of the land to the party who has acted in reliance on the contract.<sup>51</sup> But the remedy is limited in various ways<sup>52</sup> and does not necessarily lead to enforcement of the contract as such.<sup>53</sup> In this respect the position of the party who has acted in reliance on the defective contract is now less favourable than it was before the 1989 Act.<sup>54</sup> Where the document fails to include all the terms on which the parties are alleged to have orally agreed, a number of possibilities call for discussion. If the failure was due to parties' having deliberately omitted the term from the written document, then it will not be a term expressly agreed so as to form part of the contract, so that its omission will not affect the validity of the contract as set out in the document.<sup>55</sup> If the failure was due to a mistake in recording those terms, it may be possible to rectify the document, i.e. to bring it into line with what was actually agreed.<sup>56</sup> If the failure is due to some other cause, it is sometimes possible to treat the omitted term as a separate or "collateral" contract, independent of the (main) contract set out in the document,<sup>57</sup> which will then satisfy the requirements of s.2. The omitted term cannot, however, be so treated if it is intended to form part of the main contract<sup>58</sup>; e.g. if it is so "interwoven with the substance of the transaction"<sup>59</sup> as to form an essential part of it; for to treat a document as sufficient even though it omitted such a term would be inconsistent with the statutory requirement that the document must incorporate all the expressly agreed term. It seems that a term can for the present purpose be treated as a collateral contract only if it was intended to take effect as an independent contract, separate from that set out in the document. If it can be so treated, two consequences follow. First, a document which omits the term can nevertheless satisfy the statutory requirement of incorporating all the express terms of the main contract. Secondly, the collateral contract is binding, even if oral, so long as it is not itself one which is required to be in writing,<sup>60</sup> and so long as evidence of it is admissible under the parol evidence rule.<sup>61</sup>

<sup>50</sup> See above, pp.134–149, 166 n.43. The concluding words of s.2(5) of Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989 are intended to preserve these rules: see Law Com. No. 164 paras 4.3, 5.4 and 5.5; Yaxley v Gotts [2000] Ch.162 at 193, referring with apparent approval to the view stated in the text above.

<sup>51</sup> See above, pp.142–143.

<sup>52</sup> ibid.; cf. also above, p.145.

<sup>53</sup> See above, p.149.

<sup>54</sup> Under Law of Property Act 1925, s.40 (re-enacting part of s.4 of the Statute of Frauds 1677 and now repealed) failure to comply with the statutory requirement of written evidence only made the contract unenforceable; and "part performance" (below, p.184) enabled the party so performing to enforce the contract.

<sup>55</sup> Grossman v Hooper [2001] EWCA Civ 615, [2001] 2 E.G.L.R. 82.

<sup>56</sup> See Commission for the New Towns v Cooper (GB) Ltd [1995] Ch.259. For the conditions in which rectification is available, see below, pp.321–326; the possibility of rectification is recognised by Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989, s.2(4), which provides that the contract is deemed to come into being at such time as may be specified in the court order rectifying the document. See also Law Com. No.164, para.5.6.

<sup>57</sup> e.g. Record v Bell [1991] 1 W.L.R. 853.

<sup>58</sup> Grossman v Hooper, above, n.55, at [21].

<sup>59</sup> Preece v Lewis (1963) 186 E.G. 113, decided under Law of Property Act 1925, s.40 (above, n.54) but, semble, equally applicable under Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989, s.2(1); Godden v Merthyr Tydfil Housing Association (1997) 74 P. & C.R. D1; see also Law Com. No. 164, paras 5.7, 5.8.

<sup>60</sup> Angell v Duke (1875) L.R. 10 Q.B. 174 (and see next note); Record v Bell [1991] 1 W.L.R. 853.

<sup>61</sup> See below, pp.199–200; in Angell v Duke, above, the evidence of the collateral contract was later rejected under the parol evidence rule: (1875) 32 L.T. 320.

3. Contracts which must be Evidenced in Writing

(1) In general

Some statutes do not require contracts to be made in writing, but only to be evidenced by a written document. A contract of marine insurance, for example, is "inadmissible in evidence" unless it is embodied in a marine policy signed by the insurer.<sup>62</sup> This is not a requirement of the making or validity of such a contract: it is enough if the policy is executed after the making of the contract. Other statutory provisions are less exacting; they are satisfied if there is merely a "note or memorandum" in writing. The Statute of Frauds 1677 applied this requirement to six classes of contracts. Its object was to prevent fraudulent claims based on perjured evidence; but it sometimes gave rise to technical defences which had little merit, so that it was restrictively interpreted by the courts. This process can be illustrated by reference to contracts of guarantee, the only type of contract to which the formal requirements imposed by the Statute still apply.<sup>63</sup>

(2) Contracts of guarantee

(a) DEFINITION. S.4 of the Statute of Frauds provides: "No action shall be brought . . . whereby to charge the defendant upon any special promise to answer for the debt, default or miscarriage of another person" unless there is written evidence of the promise. This provision applies whether the liability guaranteed is contractual or tortious.<sup>64</sup> But it does not apply in the following cases.

(i) Promise to debtor. The Statute applies only where the defendant's promise to pay the debt is made to the creditor. It does not apply where that promise is made to the debtor.<sup>65</sup>

(ii) Indemnity. The Statute applies to a guarantee, but not to an indemnity. A guarantee is a promise to pay another's debt if he fails to pay. An indemnity is a promise to indemnify the creditor against loss arising out of the principal contract.<sup>66</sup> In the case of a guarantee the liability of the principal debtor is primary and that of the guarantor only secondary; thus if for some reason the principal debtor is not liable, the guarantor is not liable either. A promise to indemnify creates primary liability which arises even though the promisee has no enforceable rights under the principal contract.<sup>67</sup>

It follows from the nature of a guarantee that there can be no guarantee if there never was a principal debtor: e.g. if A promises to pay B for doing work for C, which C has not ordered so that C is not liable to pay B for it.<sup>68</sup> Nor is a contract a guarantee if there once was a principal debtor, but if the whole object of the new contract is that his liability should cease and the liability of the new promisor be substituted for it. Thus a promise by a father to pay his son's creditor, if the creditor will release the son, is an indemnity.<sup>69</sup> But a promise may be an indemnity in spite of the fact that there is a principal debtor whose liability continues. This is the position if the person making the promise

<sup>62</sup> Marine Insurance Act 1906, ss.22 and 24.

<sup>63</sup> For the repeal of other relevant provisions contained (or formerly contained) in the Statute, see Law Reform (Enforcement of Contracts) Act 1954; Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989, ss.2(8) and 4, Sch.2.

<sup>64</sup> Kirkham v Marter (1819) 2 B. & Ald. 613.

<sup>65</sup> Eastwood v Kenyon (1840) 11 A. & E. 438.

<sup>66</sup> Birkmyr v Darnell (1704) 1 Salk. 27; Argo Caribbean Group v Lewis [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 289; cf. below, p.396.

<sup>67</sup> Yeoman Credit Ltd v Latter [1961] 1 W.L.R. 828; in Consumer Credit Act 1974, s.189(1), "security" includes both guarantee and indemnity.

<sup>68</sup> Lakeman v Mounistephen (1874) L.R. 7 H.L. 17.

<sup>69</sup> Goodman v Chase (1818) 1 B. & Ald. 297.

undertakes not merely to pay if the principal debtor fails to do so, but “to put the [creditor] in funds in any event”.<sup>70</sup>

It can hardly be said that there is less danger of perjury in the case of an indemnity than in the case of a guarantee. The distinction between them has accordingly been criticised for having “raised many hair-splitting distinctions of exactly that kind which bring the law into hatred, ridicule and contempt by the public”.<sup>71</sup> It can only be explained historically as a device for restricting the scope of the Statute of Frauds.

(iii) Part of larger transaction. The Statute applies to a guarantee which stands alone but not to one which is part of a larger transaction. It did not, for example, apply where the defendant introduced clients to a firm of stockbrokers on the terms that he was to receive half the commissions earned, and to pay half the losses incurred, by the stockbrokers on transactions with such clients.<sup>72</sup> The promise to pay losses was enforceable, though oral, as it formed part of a larger transaction in which the defendant was interested otherwise than as guarantor. Similarly the guarantee given by a del credere agent is not within the Statute. Such an agent guarantees the solvency of the third party between whom and his principal he makes a contract: that is, he promises the principal to pay if the third party does not. The main object of a del credere agency is to enable the principal to sell and the agent to earn his commission. “Though it may terminate in a liability to pay the debt of another, that is not the immediate object for which the consideration is given.”<sup>73</sup> On the wording of the Statute, it is hard to justify the special treatment of these cases. Perhaps it could be said that such promises are more likely to be made than purely disinterested guarantees: hence there is less danger of perjury.

(iv) Protection of property. A guarantee is not within the Statute if it is given to protect some proprietary interest of the guarantor. Thus A may buy goods from B which are held by C as security for a debt owed by B to C. If A induces C to deliver the goods to him by promising to pay B's debt in case B does not pay it, A's promise is not within the Statute.<sup>74</sup> The main object of A's promise is said to be to protect his own property and not to guarantee B's debt. This rule may again be justified on the ground that such promises are more likely to be made than purely disinterested guarantees. But if this is so, it is hard to see why the rule is restricted to cases in which the interest is strictly proprietary. The rule has, for example, been held not to apply where the guarantee was given to protect the assets of a company in which the guarantor was a substantial shareholder or debenture holder.<sup>75</sup> It was said that to enforce an oral guarantee in such a case would amount to repealing the Statute.<sup>76</sup> But this is also true where the interest protected is a strictly proprietary one.

So many subtle distinctions have been drawn to whittle away the application of the Statute to contracts of guarantee that it seems a pity that this part of the Statute has not been replaced by legislation which more effectively furthers its purpose of protecting guarantors. The requirement of written evidence is scarcely an effective means of

<sup>70</sup> Guild & Co v Conrad [1894] 2 Q.B. 885 at 892; cf. Thomas v Cook (1828) 8 B. & C. 728; Wildes v Dudlow (1874) 1 L.R. 19 Eq. 198; Re Hoyle [1893] 1 Ch. 84.

<sup>71</sup> Yeoman Credit Ltd v Latter [1961] 1 W.L.R. 828 at 835; cf. Actionstrength Ltd v International Glass Engineering Co [2001] EWCA Civ 1477; [2002] 4 All E.R. 468, at [52] (“overburdened with fine distinctions”).

<sup>72</sup> Sutton & Co v Grey [1894] 1 Q.B. 285.

<sup>73</sup> Couturier v Hastie (1852) 8 Ex. 40 at 56, reversed on another point: (1856) 5 H.L.C. 673, below, p.295.

<sup>74</sup> Fitzgerald v Dressler (1859) 7 C.B.(N.S.) 374.

<sup>75</sup> Harburg India Rubber Comb Co v Martin [1902] 1 K.B. 778; Davys v Buswell [1913] 2 K.B. 47; The Anemone [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 547.

<sup>76</sup> Harburg case, above, at 787.

providing such protection, since it can be satisfied by a standard form of guarantee drafted by a bank to protect its own interests rather than those of the guarantor.<sup>77</sup> Even if the requirement of written evidence did protect the guarantor, it would not do so very effectively, for it can fairly easily be evaded by drawing up the contract as one of indemnity.

(b) TYPE OF EVIDENCE REQUIRED. Contracts within the Statute of Frauds must be evidenced by a signed note or memorandum in writing. The exact nature of the evidence required was not specified by the Statute, but the following rules were later laid down by Parliament and by the courts. Many of the relevant cases concern contracts to which the Statute no longer applies; but the principles to be derived from them still apply, where appropriate, to contracts of guarantee.

(i) Parties. The memorandum must identify the parties by naming or describing them,<sup>78</sup> and state the capacity in which they contract.<sup>79</sup> It may sufficiently describe the parties without actually naming them. For example, a party can even be sufficiently described by a pronoun.<sup>80</sup>

(ii) Consideration. The memorandum of guarantee need not state the consideration for the guarantee.<sup>81</sup>

(iii) Terms. The memorandum must contain all the material terms of the contract.<sup>82</sup> There is some authority for the view that if a term has been omitted from the memorandum the claimant may waive the term if it is solely for his benefit and not of major importance, and enforce the contract without the term.<sup>83</sup> Conversely, if the omitted term is for the benefit of the defendant, the claimant may be able to enforce the contract on agreeing to perform it.<sup>84</sup>

(iv) Signature. The memorandum must be signed by the party to be charged or by his agent lawfully authorised<sup>85</sup> to sign for him.

The requirement that the memorandum must be "signed" is liberally interpreted. A party need not sign his full name: initials will do.<sup>86</sup> The signature may be printed,<sup>87</sup> and may be in any part of the document, not necessarily at the bottom.<sup>88</sup> It may be put on the document before the contract was made so long as it is "recognised" at the time of

<sup>77</sup> See below, p.244. In relation to regulated agreements, statutory protection is provided by Consumer Credit Act 1974, Pt VIII and s.127.

<sup>78</sup> Williams v Jordan (1877) 6 Ch.D. 517 ("Sir" not sufficient); Re Lindrea (1913) 109 L.T. 623 (first name sufficient); cf. UCB Corporate Services Ltd v Clyde & Co [2000] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 257 where the guarantor was not named or otherwise identified.

<sup>79</sup> Vandenbergh v Spooner (1866) L.R. 1 Ex. 316; Newell v Radford (1867) L.R. 3 C.P. 52; Dewar v Mintoft [1912] 2 K.B. 373.

<sup>80</sup> Carr v Lynch [1900] 1 Ch.613.

<sup>81</sup> Mercantile Law Amendment Act 1856, s.3.

<sup>82</sup> Hawkins v Price [1947] Ch. 645; cf. Beckett v Nurse [1948] 1 K.B. 535; Tweedell v Henderson [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1496; Marshall v Berridge (1881) 19 Ch.D. 233; Edwards v Jones (1921) 124 L.T. 740; State Bank of India v Kaur, The Times, April 24, 1995; MP Services v Lawyer (1996) P. & C.R. D49.

<sup>83</sup> North v Loomes [1919] 1 Ch. 378; Beckett v Nurse [1948] 1 K.B. 535; Turner v Hatton [1952] 1 T.L.R. 1148. The point was not argued in Tweedell v Henderson [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1496.

<sup>84</sup> Martin v Pycroft (1852) 2 D.M. & G. 785; Scott v Bradley [1971] Ch.850 (refusing to follow Burgess v Cox [1951] Ch. 383 on this point).

<sup>85</sup> Many cases on this point concern the authority of auctioneers and are obsolete now that no formal requirements apply either to sales of goods (Law Reform (Enforcement of Contracts) Act 1954) or to sales of land by public auction (Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989, s.2(5)(b)).

<sup>86</sup> Chichester v Cobb (1866) 14 L.T. 433; Hill v Hill [1947] Ch. 231 at 240.

<sup>87</sup> Schneider v Norris (1814) 2 M. & S. 286; cf. Godwin v Francis (1870) L.R. 5 C.P. 295 (telegram).

<sup>88</sup> Ogilvie v Foljambe (1817) 3 Mer. 53; Durrell v Evans (1862) 1 H. & C. 174; Evans v Hoare [1892] 1 Q.B. 593.

contracting. Thus a form printed before the contract is made and bearing one party's name is "signed" by that party if he at the time of contracting submits it to the other party for signature: he thereby "recognises" his own "signature".<sup>89</sup> These rules are lax, but a document is not signed by a party merely because his name occurs somewhere within it: the signature must authenticate the whole document. Thus if a memorandum is headed "Articles of Agreement between A & B" and concludes "As witness our hands . . ." the parties must actually subscribe: the mention of their names at the beginning is clearly not intended as a signature.<sup>90</sup> A party is not considered to have signed a document merely because he adds his signature to it as witness to the signature of the other party.<sup>91</sup>

The writing need be signed only by "the party to be charged". Thus the contract can be enforced against a party who has signed by one who has not.<sup>92</sup>

(v) Memorandum need not be prepared as such. The memorandum need not be prepared for the purpose of satisfying the statutory requirements of written evidence. A writing which comes into existence before an action is brought<sup>93</sup> on the contract will suffice so long as it acknowledges or recognises the existence of the contract.<sup>94</sup> Thus an offer signed by one party and orally accepted by the other,<sup>95</sup> a recital or disposition in a will,<sup>96</sup> a letter written by one of the parties to his own agent<sup>97</sup> and pleadings in a previous action between different parties<sup>98</sup> have been held sufficient. A letter repudiating liability is a sufficient memorandum if it admits the terms of the contract but denies the construction put upon them by the other party; but not if it denies that a contract was ever made on the terms alleged.<sup>99</sup>

(vi) Joinder of documents. Where no single document fully records the transaction it may be possible to produce a sufficient memorandum by joining together two or more documents.

Joinder is, in the first place, possible where one document expressly or impliedly refers to another transaction. If that transaction is also recorded in a document, and that document was in existence when the first was signed<sup>1</sup> the two documents can be joined.<sup>2</sup> Joinder may be effected via an intermediate document: e.g. where the first sets out the terms of the guarantee, the second referred to those terms and the third (which is signed

<sup>89</sup> Schneider v Norris, above; Evans v Hoare, above; Cohen v Roche [1927] 1 K.B. 169; Leeman v Stocks [1951] Ch. 941.

<sup>90</sup> Hubert v Treherne (1842) 3 Man. & G. 743.

<sup>91</sup> Gosbell v Archer (1835) 1 A. & E. 500.

<sup>92</sup> Laythorpe v Bryant (1836) 2 Bing.N.C. 735; cf. The Maria D [1992] 1 A.C. 21 (signature by agent sufficient although he was not liable on the main contract); as to specific performance, see below, p.1028.

<sup>93</sup> See Lucas v Dixon (1889) 22 Q.B.D. 357; Farr, Smith & Co v Messers [1928] 1 K.B. 397.

<sup>94</sup> Tweedell v Henderson [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1496.

<sup>95</sup> Reuss v Picksley (1866) L.R. 1 Ex. 342; Lever v Koffler [1901] 1 Ch. 543; Parker v Clark [1960] 1 W.L.R. 286.

<sup>96</sup> Re Hayle [1893] 1 Ch. 84; Schaefer v Schuhmann [1972] A.C. 572; contrast Maddison v Alderson (1883) 8 App.Cas. 467, where there was probably no contract at all.

<sup>97</sup> Gibson v Holland (1865) L.R. 1 C.P. 1.

<sup>98</sup> Grindell v Bass [1920] 2 Ch. 487. The position is probably different where reliance is placed on pleadings in an earlier action between the same parties; Hardy v Elphick [1974] Ch. 65.

<sup>99</sup> See Buxton v Rust (1872) L.R. 7 Ex. 279; Thirkell v Cambi [1919] 2 K.B. 591; cf. Dobell v Hutchison (1835) 3 A. & E. 355.

<sup>1</sup> For recognition of, and an exception to, this requirement, see Re Danish Bacon Co Ltd v Staff Pension Fund [1971] 1 W.L.R. 248, a case arising under Law of Property Act 1925, s.53(1)(c).

<sup>2</sup> Long v Millar (1879) 4 C.P.D. 450; cf. Reading Trust Ltd v Spero [1930] 1 K.B. 492; Holiday Credit Ltd v Erol [1977] 1 W.L.R. 704; Elias v George Sahely & Co (Barbados) Ltd [1983] 1 A.C. 646, where joinder is said at 655 to be possible even though the second document has no contractual force.

by the guarantor) refers to the second.<sup>3</sup> Even where there is no express reference in one document to the other, they can be joined if, on placing them side by side, it becomes obvious without the aid of oral evidence that they are connected.<sup>4</sup> It seems that the original and the photocopy of a document (one signed by one party and the other by the other) could be joined on this ground.<sup>5</sup> But if the document signed by the defendant contains no reference to another document or transaction, and if the connection between the two documents can be established only by oral evidence, joinder is not permitted.<sup>6</sup>

(c) EFFECT OF NON-COMPLIANCE. Failure to comply with the requirements just described does not make the contract void<sup>7</sup> but only unenforceable.<sup>8</sup> The contract can be made orally, but it can be enforced by action only if a note or memorandum of it exists, signed by the party against whom enforcement is sought. As the contract is not void, money paid or property transferred under it cannot be recovered back merely because the contract is not evidenced in writing.<sup>9</sup> For example, a guarantor could not recover back from the creditor money which he had paid or property which he had deposited under a guarantee of which there was no sufficient note or memorandum. Similarly, a security given for the guarantor's performance would not be void merely because the guarantee was unenforceable: thus an action could be brought on a cheque given to the creditor in payment of sums due from the debtor.<sup>10</sup>

The Statute of Frauds could cause hardship to a party who had wholly or partly performed a contract which was unenforceable for want of written evidence. To meet this hardship, Equity developed the doctrine of part performance, under which the party who had rendered such performance could enforce the contract in spite of the lack of a proper note or memorandum.<sup>11</sup> This doctrine was applied almost exclusively to contracts for the sale or other disposition of interests in land. S.2(1) of the Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) 1989 Act now requires such contracts to be made (and not merely to be evidenced) in writing.<sup>12</sup> The result of failure to comply with the subsection is that no contract comes into existence, and since there can be no part performance of a non-existent contract, it is submitted<sup>13</sup> that the doctrine can no longer apply in cases of such failure. The doctrine of part performance was in the past restricted to contracts which were specifically enforceable in Equity, or, perhaps more narrowly, to contracts for the disposition of interests in land.<sup>14</sup> Contracts of guarantee would hardly ever (if at all) fall within even the broader of these two formulations. The normal remedy against a

<sup>3</sup> The Anemone [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 547.

<sup>4</sup> Sheers v Thimbleby (1879) 13 T.L.R. 451; cf. Burgess v Cox [1951] Ch. 383 (disapproved on another point in Scott v Bradley [1971] Ch. 850).

<sup>5</sup> Stokes v Whicher [1920] 1 Ch. 411, 419 (top and carbon copies).

<sup>6</sup> Timmins v Moreland Street Property Co [1958] Ch. 110; cf. Boydell v Drummond (1809) 11 East 192; contrast Stokes v Whicher [1920] 1 Ch. 411; Pearce v Gardner [1899] 1 Q.B. 688.

<sup>7</sup> For the now rejected view that the contract was void, see dicta in Carrington v Roots (1837) 2 M. & W. 248 at 255, 257.

<sup>8</sup> Leroux v Brown (1852) 12 C.B. 801; Elias v George Sahely & Co (Barbados) Ltd [1983] 1 A.C. 646 at 650.

<sup>9</sup> Thomas v Brown (1876) 1 Q.B.D. 714.

<sup>10</sup> Low v Fry (1935) 152 L.T. 585.

<sup>11</sup> See the discussion on pp.144–146 of the 7th edition of this book.

<sup>12</sup> See above, p.179.

<sup>13</sup> Notwithstanding a dictum to the contrary in Sing v Beggs (1996) 71 P. & C.R. 120 at 122. For other devices by which hardship to a party who has acted in reliance on the supposed contract can be avoided, see above, p.179.

<sup>14</sup> See Britain v Rossiter (1879) 11 Q.B.D. 123; McManus v Cooke (1887) 35 Ch.D. 681.

guarantor would be a common law action for the amount which he had promised to pay, and not a claim for specific performance.<sup>15</sup> Accordingly, the doctrine of part performance has not in the past been applied to contracts of guarantee.<sup>16</sup> The possibility of its being so applied in the future cannot be categorically ruled out,<sup>17</sup> since it is conceivable that a contract of guarantee might, in exceptional circumstances, be specifically enforceable<sup>18</sup>; if so, acts done by the creditor in reliance on the guarantee might be regarded as sufficient part performance. But the possibility seems to be a remote one, and the safest conclusion is that it is highly unlikely that the doctrine will be applied to contracts of guarantee.

4. Formal Requirements and Electronic Documents

Many problems arise in determining whether the formal requirement of “writing”, or of a “document”, or of a “signature” are satisfied in the case of contracts made electronically. The Law Commission has advised<sup>19</sup> that where commercial contracts<sup>20</sup> are made by email or by trading on a website, the requirement of writing<sup>21</sup> will normally be satisfied, though this will not be true of electronic data interchange<sup>22</sup>: the distinction is based on the point that in the first two of these situations, but not in the third, the terms of the transaction will be produced (on screen or in printed out copies) in visible form.<sup>23</sup> It has also been held that electronically stored information can, in law, constitute a “document”.<sup>24</sup> The requirement of “signature” can likewise be satisfied in the case of electronic documents: e.g. by a digital signature, by typing a name into an electronic document or even by clicking on a website button.<sup>25</sup> Whether the requirement is actually so satisfied depends in these cases on the common law test of what constitutes a signature: i.e. on whether the act in question was done with the intention of authenticating the electronic document.<sup>26</sup> Under s.7 of the Electronic Communications Act 2000, “electronic signatures” are admissible in evidence; but this provision does not specify the effect of such signatures, which continues to depend on the common law “authentication” test stated above. S.8 of the Act also empowers the appropriate Minister by order to modify existing legislation (such as the legislation discussed in this Chapter) so as to authorise the use of electronic communications for the purpose of (inter alia) “the doing of anything which under . . . such [legislation] is required to be or may be authorised by <sup>15</sup> The common law remedy would normally be “adequate” and so exclude specific performance: below, p.1026. A debtor’s promise to give security may be specifically enforceable because damages for breach of it may be hard to quantify (below, p.1021); but no such difficulty arises in quantifying the liability of the guarantor.

<sup>16</sup> cf. Maddison v Alderson (1883) 8 App.Cas. 467 at 490.

<sup>17</sup> The point was left open in The Anemone [1987] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 546 at 557.

<sup>18</sup> e.g. if the principal debt were one to pay an annuity to a person other than the promisee, as in Beswick v Beswick [1968] A.C. 58; cf. below, pp.1021, 1026, 1038. The Contracts (Rights of Third Parties) Act 1999 will not, in a case of this kind, deprive the promisee of his remedy of specific performance: see s.4 of that Act below, p.665.

<sup>19</sup> In its paper on Electronic Commerce: Formal Requirements in Commercial Contracts (December 2001).

<sup>20</sup> The paper (above) does not deal with transactions relating to land; as to the use of electronic documents in this context, see above, p.178.

<sup>21</sup> Within Interpretation Act 1978, Sch.1.

<sup>22</sup> Law Commission, above, n.1, §§3.9, 3.23.

<sup>23</sup> ibid. §§3.14, 3.20.

<sup>24</sup> Victor Chandler International v Customs & Excise Commissioners [2000] 1 W.L.R. 1296.

<sup>25</sup> Law Commission, above, n.1, §§3.31–3.34, 3.36, 3.39.

<sup>26</sup> cf. above, p.184.

a person's signature or seal, or is required to be delivered as a deed or witnessed."<sup>27</sup> The Law Commission has (with respect) rightly advised that, since electronic communications will in most cases be capable of satisfying the requirements of writing and signature, legislation of the kind envisaged by s.8 "is not only unnecessary but risky,"<sup>28</sup> legislation should be attempted only where it was "context specific"<sup>29</sup> i.e. where it was needed to create "absolute certainty"<sup>30</sup> in some particular context.<sup>31</sup> Art.9 of the Directive of the European Parliament and Council on Electronic Commerce<sup>32</sup> (the Electronic Commerce Directive, 2000) obliges Member States to "ensure that their legal system allows contracts to be concluded by electronic means" and that "the legal requirements applicable to the contractual process neither create obstacles for the use of electronic contracts nor result in such contracts being deprived of their legal effectiveness on account of their having been made by electronic means".<sup>33</sup> Legislation to implement Art.9 will not be necessary<sup>34</sup> where present formal requirements of writing and signature can (as will commonly be the case) be satisfied by electronic means; the need for it is likely to arise where statutory requirements can be satisfied only by the use of paper documents: e.g. where legislation requires one party to send specified contractual particulars to the other by post.<sup>35</sup> The obligations imposed by Art.9 are, moreover, subject to a number of exceptions, the most important of which, in the present context, relate to (1) "contracts that create or transfer rights in real estate, except for rental rights,"<sup>36</sup> and (2) "contracts of suretyship granted on collateral securities furnished by persons acting outside their trade, business or profession".<sup>37</sup> If, and so far as, the United Kingdom chooses to rely on these exceptions, it will not (so far as they permit) be required to modify existing legislation imposing formal requirements on contracts for the sale of interests in land and on contracts of guarantee and will, moreover, be free to impose further formal requirements on such contracts where they are made electronically. It follows that, to this extent, the provisions for the use of electronic documents to be made under the Land Registration Act 2002 and in delegated legislation to be made under it<sup>38</sup> will not need to comply Art.9; and that nothing in that Article prevents the United Kingdom from imposing legislative restrictions on the efficacy of electronic contracts of guarantee of the kind there specified. The latter point is of some general interest in relation to what we have called the cautionary and protective functions of form<sup>39</sup>: if a guarantor could incur liability by simply clicking on the appropriate part of a website, then these functions would lose much of their efficacy,<sup>40</sup> at least if the guarantor were a person skilled in the use of this technology.

<sup>27</sup> s.8(2)(c).

<sup>28</sup> Law Commission, above n.1, §3.43: general provisions might be inappropriate for specific legislative requirements of form.

<sup>29</sup> Law Commission, above n.1, §3.43.

<sup>30</sup> ibid.

<sup>31</sup> e.g., that of electronic conveyancing: above, p.178; and see above n.20.

<sup>32</sup> Dir.2000/31.

<sup>33</sup> Art.9.1.

<sup>34</sup> Parts of Dir.2000/13 (but not Art.9) are implemented by the Electronic Commerce (EC Directive) Regulations 2002 (SI 2002/2013).

<sup>35</sup> e.g., Consumer Credit Act 1974, ss.63(3), 64(2).

<sup>36</sup> Art.9.2(a).

<sup>37</sup> Art.9.2(c). Art.9.2(b) also allows Member States to retain requirements of notarial attestation for contracts within the Directive: cf. Recital 36 and Art.6.5(d).

<sup>38</sup> See above, p.178.

<sup>39</sup> See above, p.176.

<sup>40</sup> Law Commission, above, n.1, §3.46.

SECTION 3. FORMAL REQUIREMENTS FOR RESCISSION AND VARIATION

So far this Chapter has dealt with formal requirements for the making, proof or enforceability of a contract. It is finally necessary to consider the impact of form where a contract which complies with such a requirement, or which is (though it is not required to be) made by deed or in writing, is rescinded or varied by subsequent agreement of the parties.<sup>41</sup> Our present concern is with formal requirements for such agreements. They also give rise to problems of consideration, which have been discussed in Chapter 3.<sup>42</sup>

1. Rescission

The general principle is that formal requirements which apply to the making of a contract do not apply to its rescission by mutual consent. For example, a contract of guarantee can be rescinded orally<sup>43</sup>; and the same appears to be true of a contract for the disposition of an interest in land.<sup>44</sup> Somewhat greater difficulty arises where the rescinding agreement is itself a contract which is subject to formal requirements. Suppose, for example, that A in writing guarantees X's debt to B and that the guarantee is later rescinded by an oral agreement by which A guarantees Y's debt to B. The oral agreement is a valid contract<sup>45</sup> so that the guarantee of X's debt is rescinded, but B cannot enforce<sup>46</sup> the guarantee of Y's debt since that guarantee is not evidenced in writing. The position is less certain where the original contract is one which must be made (and not merely evidenced) in writing and where the rescinding agreement is also such a contract: for example, where both agreements are contracts for the disposition of an interest in land and the first does, but the second does not, comply with the formalities required for the making of such contracts.<sup>47</sup> The second agreement is not itself a valid contract to make the new disposition; and one possible view is that that agreement, not having been properly "made",<sup>48</sup> is totally ineffective and so cannot operate even to rescind the first. An alternative (and, it is submitted, a preferable) view is that the second agreement is merely ineffective as a contract for the disposition of an interest in land. On this view, it can nevertheless amount to an agreement, supported by good consideration,<sup>49</sup> to rescind the first contract.<sup>50</sup> Hence the first contract is rescinded but the second is not binding.

<sup>41</sup> Our concern here is with this type of rescission. Formal requirements are sometimes imposed where a contract is "rescinded" without the consent of a party because of his failure in performance: below, p.723 n.34.

<sup>42</sup> See above, pp.99–102.

<sup>43</sup> cf. Morris v Baron & Co [1918] A.C. 1.

<sup>44</sup> Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989, s.2(1) (above, p.178) provides that such a contract shall be "made in writing" and says nothing about how it can be unmade. cf. McCausland v Duncan Lamrie Ltd [1997] 1 W.L.R. 38 at 48 ("rescission . . . may well be capable of being done otherwise than in writing").

<sup>45</sup> See above, p.185.

<sup>46</sup> See Morris v Baron & Co, above; Goman v Salisbury (1648) 1 Vern. 240.

<sup>47</sup> See above, n.44.

<sup>48</sup> Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989, s.2(1).

<sup>49</sup> See above, p.101.

<sup>50</sup> The mere rescission of a contract for the disposition of an interest in land does not itself appear to amount to a "disposition": see the definition of "disposition" in the Law of Property Act 1925, s.205(1)(ii), incorporated into the Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989 by s.2(6) of the latter Act.

At common law, a deed could only be rescinded by deed,<sup>51</sup> but this rule did not apply in equity, which now prevails.<sup>52</sup>

2. Variation

Difficult problems used frequently to arise out of oral variations of contracts which had to be evidenced in writing. Many of the cases concerned contracts which no longer need to be so evidenced,<sup>53</sup> or which must now be made in writing<sup>54</sup>; but the rules laid down in them continue to apply to contracts which still have to be in, or evidenced in, writing.<sup>55</sup>

An oral variation of a contract which had to be evidenced in writing could be regarded as a rescission of the old contract, followed by the making of a new one affecting the same subject-matter. If so, the old contract was effectively rescinded, but the new one could not be enforced for want of writing.<sup>56</sup> Alternatively, it could be said that the parties had simply tried to vary a term of, or to add one to, the original contract. If so, the original contract remained in force, but the variation, being oral, could not be enforced by action.<sup>57</sup> In this sense, a contract which had to be evidenced in writing could not be varied orally. For example, a written guarantee may provide that the guarantor is to be liable only if the creditor gives him notice of the debtor's default within one week of its occurrence. If the guarantor then says orally that he will not insist on this requirement, that oral variation does not have contractual force.<sup>58</sup> The position is the same where a contract which must be made in writing is varied in a way that does not satisfy the statutory formal requirements, for example, where a contract for the sale of land<sup>59</sup> which was made in a document signed by both parties is varied in a material respect by an exchange of letters each of which is signed by only one party. In one case<sup>60</sup> such a variation substituted an earlier completion date for that specified in the original contract; and it was held that the vendor could not insist on the earlier date.

In the above examples, the result would have been the same if the subsequent oral agreement had been regarded as a rescission: the guarantor or purchaser would not have been liable on the original contract because it was rescinded, nor under the new agreement because it was oral. But the distinction between (on the one hand) a rescission followed by a new agreement and (on the other) a variation would have been crucial if an attempt had been made, not to enforce the subsequent agreement, but to assert rights under the original one.<sup>61</sup> Had the subsequent agreement been a rescission, such an attempt would have failed. Had it been a variation, the attempt would prima facie have succeeded since the original agreement would have remained in force,<sup>62</sup> and the subsequent oral agreement would not have been effective to vary it, though it might have <sup>51</sup> West v Blakeway (1841) 2 Man. & G. 729; Spence v Healey (1853) 8 Ex. 668. The rule applied whether or not the contract was by law required to be made by deed.

<sup>52</sup> Berry v Berry [1929] 2 K.B. 316 at 319.

<sup>53</sup> i.e. since the Law Reform (Enforcement of Contracts) Act 1954: above, p.181.

<sup>54</sup> Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989, s.2(1).

<sup>55</sup> See above, pp.177-186.

<sup>56</sup> Morris v Baron & Co [1918] A.C. 1. Robinson v Page (1826) 3 Russ. 114; Tyers v Rosedale & Ferryhill Iron Co Ltd (1875) L.R. 10 Ex. 195.

<sup>57</sup> But it may provide a defence: Re a Debtor (No.517 of 1991), The Times, November 25, 1991.

<sup>58</sup> Example based on Goss v Nugent (1835) 5 B. & Ad. 58, where the contract was one for the disposition of an interest in land which then required only to be evidenced (not made) in writing.

<sup>59</sup> Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989, s.2, above, p.178.

<sup>60</sup> McCausland v Duncan Lawrie Ltd [1997] 1 W.L.R. 38.

<sup>61</sup> e.g. if in Goss v Nugent, above, n.30, the purchaser had been suing to enforce the original contract.

<sup>62</sup> Robinson v Page (1826) 3 Russ. 114; Tyers v Rosedale & Ferryhill Iron Co Ltd (1875) L.R. 10 Ex. 195.

had some effect as a waiver (in the sense of forbearance), or in equity,<sup>63</sup> if the necessary requirements<sup>64</sup> for invoking these doctrines were satisfied.<sup>65</sup>

Whether a subsequent agreement is a rescission or a variation depends on the extent to which it departs from the original contract. It is a rescission if it alters the original contract in some essential way; but if it does not go “to the very root of the original contract”<sup>66</sup> it is only a variation. The distinction is one of degree. In Morris v Baron & Co<sup>67</sup> a dispute arising out of a contract for the sale of goods (which then had to be evidenced in writing) was orally compromised: it was agreed that the buyer should have extra time to pay and that he should have an option whether he would take the goods not yet delivered. This compromise was held to be a rescission as it dealt with an essential matter, the quantity of goods to be delivered. On the other hand, alterations in the place and time of delivery have been held to be variations only, so that the original contracts could still be enforced.<sup>68</sup>

The foregoing discussion concerns contracts which are subject to some formal requirement imposed by law. If, however, a contract which is not subject to any such legal requirement merely happens to have been executed in writing or by deed, it can be varied informally. At common law, indeed, a deed could not be varied except by another deed; but this rule did not apply in equity which now prevails. Accordingly it was held in Berry v Berry<sup>69</sup> that a separation agreement which had been made by deed (though there was no legal requirement for it to be so made) could be varied by a subsequent agreement that was not made by deed. Later cases apply this rule where the original contract was by law required to be made by deed.<sup>70</sup> These decisions are hard to reconcile with the reasoning of cases which hold that a contract required to be evidenced or made in writing cannot be varied orally.<sup>71</sup> They are best explained on the ground that, though the variations were not contractually binding, they nevertheless had a limited effect under the rules of waiver in the sense of forbearance,<sup>72</sup> or in equity.<sup>73</sup>

---

<sup>63</sup> See above, pp.103 et seq.

<sup>64</sup> See above, pp.106–111.

<sup>65</sup> McCausland v Duncan Lamrie Ltd [1997] 1 W.L.R. 38 at 49–50.

<sup>66</sup> British and Beningtons Ltd v NW Cachar Tea Co [1923] A.C. 48 at 68.

<sup>67</sup> [1918] A.C. 1.

<sup>68</sup> e.g. the British and Beningtons case, above; Hickman v Haynes (1875) L.R. 10 C.P. 598; The Arawa [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 135; cf. United Dominions Corp (Jamaica) Ltd v Shoucair [1969] 1 A.C. 340 (temporary variation in rate of interest held not to amount to rescission of a mortgage).

<sup>69</sup> [1929] 2 K.B. 316.

<sup>70</sup> Plymouth Corporation v Harvey [1971] 1 W.L.R. 549 (lease for seven years), and possibly Mitas v Hyams [1951] 2 T.L.R. 1215 (where the length of the lease is not stated).

<sup>71</sup> e.g. Morris v Baron & Co [1918] A.C. 1; McCausland v Duncan Lamrie Ltd [1997] 1 W.L.R. 38.

<sup>72</sup> See above, p.103.

<sup>73</sup> See above, pp.105 et seq.

CHAPTER SIX

THE CONTENTS OF A CONTRACT

THE contents of a contract depend primarily on the words used by the parties in entering into the contract: these make up its express terms. A contract may, in addition, contain terms which are not expressly stated, but which are implied, either because the parties so intended, or by operation of law, or by custom or usage.

SECTION 1. EXPRESS TERMS

Where a contract is made orally, the ascertainment of its terms raises in the first place the pure question of fact: what did the parties say? Once this has been determined, a further question can arise as to the meaning of the words used. In answering this question, the court applies the objective test of agreement.<sup>1</sup> Under that test, a party cannot enforce the contract in the sense which he gave to the words, if that sense differs from the one which the other party reasonably gave to them.<sup>2</sup>

Further problems of ascertaining or proving express terms can arise where the contract is, or appears to have been, reduced to writing.

1. Joinder of Documents

(1) Incorporation by express reference

The terms of a contract may be contained in more than one document. One of these may expressly refer to another, e.g. where a contract is made subject to standard terms settled by a trade association. Those terms are then incorporated by reference into the contract; if there are several editions of the standard terms, the contract is prima facie taken to refer to the most recent edition.<sup>3</sup> It may also incorporate amendments validly made by the association.<sup>4</sup>

The parties may purport to incorporate one document in another by express reference, not realising that the terms of the two documents conflict. In Adamastos Shipping Co v Anglo-Saxon Petroleum Co<sup>5</sup> clause 1 of a charterparty provided: "This bill of lading shall have effect subject to the Carriage of Goods by Sea Act of the United States 1936, which shall be deemed to be incorporated herein. . . ." The object of this clause was to reduce the shipowner's duty to provide a seaworthy ship from the absolute duty existing at common law to that of due diligence imposed by the Act.<sup>6</sup> But s.5 of the Act stated that its provisions "shall not be applicable to charterparties. . . ." Two difficulties arose out of this contract. First, the parties had described their contract as "this bill of lading" when it was a charterparty; but, as this was a simple mistake, it was held that the phrase

---

<sup>1</sup> See above, pp.1, 8.

<sup>2</sup> Eyre v Measday [1986] 1 All E.R. 488; Thake v Maurice [1986] Q.B. 644; Grubb [1986] C.L.J. 197; below, p.841.

<sup>3</sup> Smith v South Wales Switchgear Ltd [1978] 1 W.L.R. 165.

<sup>4</sup> Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc v Maclaine Watson & Co [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 570 at 589; cf. The Marinor [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 301.

<sup>5</sup> [1959] A.C. 133; applied in The Oceanic Amity [1984] 2 All E.R. 140.

<sup>6</sup> cf. Carriage of Goods by Sea Act 1971, s.3 and Sch., Art.III.(1)(a).

could be taken to mean “this charterparty.” Secondly, the parties had apparently provided that the charterparty was to take effect subject to an Act which expressly provided that it did not apply to charterparties. The House of Lords could have held the whole contract meaningless, or rejected clause 1 of the charterparty, or rejected s.5 of the United States Act. The House chose the last course, and so gave effect to the intention of the parties that there should be a contract under which the shipowner was only bound to use due diligence to provide a seaworthy ship. The case is a good illustration of the anxiety of the courts to make sense, if possible, of loosely and sometimes carelessly drafted commercial documents.

(2) No express reference

A contract may be contained in several documents even though one does not expressly refer to the other. Suppose, for example, that a series of dealings takes place under a “master contract”, a separate document being executed each time an individual contract is made. All these contracts may be subject to the master contract, even though they do not refer to it.<sup>7</sup> Similarly, a policy of insurance can be read together with the rules of the mutual insurance society which had issued it,<sup>8</sup> although the policy does not expressly refer to the rules<sup>9</sup>; and a contract to purchase securities may be held to incorporate the terms of a prospectus on the faith of which they were bought.<sup>10</sup> Such incorporation without express reference appears to depend on the intention of the parties, determined in accordance with the objective test of agreement.

2. The Parol Evidence Rule

(1) Statement of the rule

The parol evidence rule states that evidence cannot be admitted (or, even if admitted, cannot be used) to add to, vary or contradict a written instrument.<sup>11</sup> In relation to contracts, the rule means that, where a contract has been reduced to writing, neither party can rely on extrinsic evidence of terms alleged to have been agreed, i.e. on evidence not contained in the document. Although the rule is generally stated as applying to parol evidence, it applies just as much to other forms of extrinsic evidence. Of course, if a contractual document incorporates another document by reference, evidence of the second document is admissible, but the rule prevents a party from relying on evidence that is extrinsic to both documents.<sup>12</sup>

There are obvious grounds of convenience for the application of the parol evidence rule to contracts: certainty is promoted by holding that parties who have reduced a contract to writing should be bound by the writing and by the writing alone.<sup>13</sup> On the other hand, the parol evidence rule will commonly be invoked where a dispute arises after the time of contracting as to what was actually said at that time; and in such cases <sup>7</sup> Panorama Developments (Guildford) Ltd v Fidelis Furnishing Fabrics Ltd [1971] 2 Q.B. 711.

<sup>8</sup> Edwards v Aberayron Insurance Society Ltd (1876) 1 Q.B.D. 563.

<sup>9</sup> For difficulties relating to joinder where contracts have to be evidenced in writing, see above, p.185.

<sup>10</sup> Jacobs v Batavia & General Plantations Trust Ltd [1924] 1 Ch. 287; affirmed [1924] 2 Ch. 329; another possible explanation of the case is that there was a collateral contract: below, p.199.

<sup>11</sup> Jacobs v Batavia & General Plantations Trust Ltd [1924] 1 Ch. 287 at 295; Rabin v Gerson Berger Association Ltd [1986] 1 W.L.R. 526 at 531, 537; The Nile Rhapsody [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 349 at 407, affirmed [1994] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 382; Orion Ins Co v Sphere Drake Ins plc [1992] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 239 at 273; W F Trustees Ltd v Expo Safety Systems Ltd, The Times, May 24, 1993.

<sup>12</sup> Jacobs v Batavia & General Plantations Trust Ltd, above.

<sup>13</sup> Rabin v Gerson Berger Association Ltd [1986] 1 W.L.R. 526 at 534, 537 AIB Group plc v Martin [2001] UKHL 63; [2002] 1 W.L.R. 94 at [4].

one of the parties could feel aggrieved if evidence on the point were excluded merely because the disputed term was not set out in the contractual document.<sup>14</sup> Evidence extrinsic to the document is therefore admitted in a number of situations (to be discussed below) which fall outside the scope of the rule.

(2) Cases in which extrinsic evidence is admissible

(a) WRITTEN AGREEMENT NOT THE WHOLE AGREEMENT. When a contract is reduced to writing, there is a presumption that the writing was intended to include all the terms of the contract; but this presumption is rebuttable.<sup>15</sup> If the written document was not intended to set out all the terms on which the parties had actually agreed, extrinsic evidence is admissible. In Allen v Pink<sup>16</sup> the buyer of a horse received a note as follows: "Bought of G. Pink, a horse for the sum of £7 2s. 6d. G. Pink." Evidence of an oral warranty that the horse would go quietly in harness was admitted as the note was "meant merely as a memorandum of the transaction, or as an informal receipt for the money, not as containing the terms of the contract itself". This case should be contrasted with Hutton v Watling<sup>17</sup> where a document was headed "To sale of a business," set out a number of terms, contained a receipt for the price of the goodwill, and was signed over a 6d. stamp. In an action by the purchaser to enforce one of the clauses of the written document, the vendor argued that the document was only a memorandum of a provisional agreement for the sale of goodwill, which had already been fully performed. Evidence to this effect was held inadmissible as the document was not intended to be a mere memorandum but a "true record of the contract".<sup>18</sup> It seems that a document which is intended simply to form a record of a previously concluded contract will prima facie be a mere memorandum<sup>19</sup>; while a document the execution of which marks the actual conclusion of a contract is more likely to be taken to contain all the terms of the contract.

It has been argued that the right of a party to rely on extrinsic evidence in the present group of cases turns the parol evidence rule (as applied to contracts) into "no more than a circular statement".<sup>20</sup> For if the rule applies only where the written document is intended to contain all the terms of the contract, evidence of other terms would be useless even if admitted (since they would not form part of the contract); while the rule never prevents a party from relying on evidence of terms which were intended to be part of the contract. Accordingly, on this view, no injustice is caused by the operation of the <sup>14</sup> Contrast AIB Group plc v Martin, above at [4] with ibid. at [44] on the question whether this was the position in that case.

<sup>15</sup> Gillespie Bros & Co v Cheney, Eggar & Co [1896] 2 Q.B. 59 at 62.

<sup>16</sup> (1838) 4 M. & W. 140; cf. Harris v Rickett (1859) 4 H. & N. 1; Malpas v L & S W Ry Co (1866) L.R. 1 C.P. 336; Roe v R A Naylor Ltd (1918) 87 L.J.K.B. 958; J Evans & Son (Portsmouth) Ltd v Andrea Merzario [1976] 1 W.L.R. 1078 at 1083; Yani Haryanto v E D & F Man (Sugar) Ltd [1986] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 44 at 46-47; Anangel Atlas Compania Naviera SA v Ishikawajima-Harima Heavy Industries Co Ltd (No.2) [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 526 at 545; Guardian Ocean Cargoes Ltd v Banco do Brasil [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 68 at 80, affirmed [1994] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 152; The Riza and Sun [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 314 at 319-320.

<sup>17</sup> [1948] Ch. 398.

<sup>18</sup> [1948] Ch. 398 at 404.

<sup>19</sup> This view would account for the special position of bills of lading: as to this see The Ardenne [1951] 1 K.B. 55; but for the need to protect third parties to whom such documents are transferred, see Leduc v Ward (1888) 20 Q.B.D. 475; Carver on Bills of Lading, (1st ed., 2001), §3-004 to 3-009.

<sup>20</sup> Law Commission Report on The Parol Evidence Rule (Law Com. No.154), para.2.7; Marston [1986] C.L.J. 192; Wild v Civil Aviation Authority (unrep.) (1987) C.A.T. No.85/N3/4250, per Ralph Gibson L.J.; cf. the reference to the Law Commission's analysis of "the rule, if rule it be" by Beldam L.J. in Youell v Bland Welch & Co Ltd [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 127 at 140.

rule.<sup>21</sup> There is much force in this view in cases in which, at the time of contracting, both parties actually shared a common intention with regard to the term in question. But in most cases in which the rule is invoked this is not the position: the dispute arises precisely because the parties had different intentions, and one alleges, while the other denies, that terms not set out in the document were intended to form part of the contract. In such cases, the court will attach importance to the appearance of the document: if it looks like a complete contract to one of the parties taking a reasonable view of it, then the rule will prevent the other party from relying on extrinsic evidence to show that the contract also contained other terms.<sup>22</sup> This result has been described as being simply an application of the objective test of agreement<sup>23</sup>; but, even if it can be so regarded, it is such a common and frequently recurring application of this test as to amount to an independent rule. In cases of the present kind, moreover, the law goes beyond the normal objective test. That test normally requires the party relying on it to prove that he reasonably believed that the other party was contracting on the terms alleged.<sup>24</sup> Where a document looks like a complete contract, the party relying on it does not have to prove that he had such a belief: he can rely on a presumption to that effect which it is up to the other party to rebut.<sup>25</sup> As laymen are known to attach greater importance than the law does to writing in a contractual context, it will be hard for the party relying on extrinsic evidence to rebut the presumption that the written document was an exclusive record of the terms agreed. Moreover, the objective test normally prevents a party from relying on his "private but uncommunicated intention as to what was to be agreed".<sup>26</sup> The presumption which applies in the case of an apparently complete contractual document goes beyond this: it prevents a party from relying on evidence of intention that was not "private and uncommunicated" at all, but simply not recorded in the document. For these reasons, it is submitted that the admissibility of extrinsic evidence, where it is proved that the document was not in fact intended to contain all the terms of the contract, does not turn the rule into a merely "circular statement".<sup>27</sup> Whether it also supports the conclusion that the rule is not one that "could lead to evidence being unjustly excluded"<sup>28</sup> is perhaps more doubtful. The primary purpose of the rule, like that of the objective test of agreement, is to promote certainty, sometimes even at the expense of justice.<sup>29</sup> Where the parties have brought into being an apparently complete contractual document, the rejection of evidence of extrinsic terms that were actually agreed may cause injustice to the party relying on those terms, while the reception of such evidence may cause injustice to the other party, if he reasonably believed that the document formed an exclusive record of the contract.<sup>30</sup> The question is which, on balance, is the greater injustice. Where the evidence is rejected because the party relying on it cannot overcome the presumption arising from the fact that the document looks like a complete contract, the greater injustice would appear to lie in the exclusion of the evidence; for the presumption seems to be based on

<sup>21</sup> Law Com. No.154, above; and see also para.1.7.

<sup>22</sup> Wedderburn [1959] C.L.J. 58, 62.

<sup>23</sup> Law Com. No.154, above, para.2.14, 2.17.

<sup>24</sup> See above, pp.1, 8.

<sup>25</sup> See above, p.193 at n.15.

<sup>26</sup> Law Com. No.154, above, para.2.14; cf. above, p.172.

<sup>27</sup> cf. the authorities cited in n.11 on p.192 above.

<sup>28</sup> Law Com. No.154, para.2.7.

<sup>29</sup> AIB Group plc v Martin [2001] UKHL 63; [2002] 1 W.L.R. 94 at [4].

<sup>30</sup> For the rejection of evidence in such circumstances, see Hutton v Watling [1948] Ch. 398 at 404; and cf. Rabin v Gerson Berger Association Ltd [1986] 1 W.L.R. 526 where the rule was applied to a declaration of trust but said at 536 to apply to contracts.

the nature and form of the document, rather than on any actual belief of the party relying on it, that it formed an exclusive record of the contract.<sup>31</sup>

(b) VALIDITY. The rule prevents a party from relying on extrinsic evidence only as to the contents of the contract, and not as to its validity. Such evidence can therefore be used to establish the presence or absence of consideration or of contractual intention,<sup>32</sup> or some invalidating cause such as incapacity, misrepresentation, mistake<sup>33</sup> or non est factum.<sup>34</sup> Evidence has similarly been held admissible to show that provisions in an agreement purporting to be a licence to occupy a room (as opposed to a lease of it) were a “mere sham”<sup>35</sup> in that they had failed to state the parties’ true intention and had been inserted simply in an attempt to evade the Rent Act.

(c) IMPLIED TERMS. The rule prevents a party from relying on extrinsic evidence only as to the express terms of the contract. Where the contract is silent on a matter on which a term is normally implied by law, parol evidence may be given to support, or to rebut, the usual implication. Thus a buyer of coal can show that he made known to the seller the particular purpose for which he required the coal, so as to raise the implication that he relied on the seller’s skill and judgment.<sup>36</sup> Conversely, a person who takes out a policy of marine insurance can show that the insurer knew the ship to be unseaworthy, and so negative the usual implied warranty of seaworthiness.<sup>37</sup>

(d) ORAL WARRANTIES. Where parties enter into a written contract of sale, the rule would prima facie prevent the buyer from relying on evidence of oral undertakings as to the quality of the subject-matter; but this application of the rule is subject to two qualifications. First, an exclusion clause contained in a written contract can be over-ridden by an express oral warranty given at the time of sale.<sup>38</sup> Secondly, an oral statement of fact may operate as a misrepresentation in spite of its purported incorporation into the contract as a warranty<sup>39</sup>; and where this is the case, the oral statement can be used as evidence, not of the contents of the contract, but of an invalidating cause.

(e) OPERATION OF THE CONTRACT. Extrinsic evidence can be used to show that the contract does not yet operate, or that it has ceased to operate. Thus in Pym v Campbell<sup>40</sup> a written agreement for the sale of a patent was drawn up, and evidence was admitted of an oral stipulation that the agreement should not become operative until a third party had approved of the invention. It seems from the reasoning of the court that evidence <sup>31</sup> The Law Commission had, before publishing the Report referred to in n.20, above, provisionally recommended the abolition of the rule: Law Commission Working Paper No.76 (1976); cf. Administration of Justice Act 1982, s.21 (making extrinsic evidence admissible in certain cases for interpretation of wills).

<sup>32</sup> Clever v Kirkman (1876) 33 L.T. 672; Zahem International Construction Ltd v Nippon Kohan K.K. [1987] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 596; Kleinport Benson Ltd v Malaysian Mining Corp [1989] 1 W.L.R. 379 at 392; Orion Ins Co plc v Sphere Drake Ins plc [1992] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 239; Carmichael v National Power plc [1999] 1 W.L.R. 2042.

<sup>33</sup> Campbell Discount Co v Gall [1961] 1 Q.B. 431 reversed on other points, by Consumer Credit Act 1974, s.56 and by Branwhite v Worchester Works Finance Ltd [1969] 1 A.C. 552; below, pp.707, 1058.

<sup>34</sup> Roe v R A Naylor Ltd (1918) 87 L.J.K.B. 958 at 964; below, p.326.

<sup>35</sup> AG Securities v Vaughan [1990] 1 A.C. 417 at 469, 475; Mikeover v Brady [1989] 3 All E.R. 618 at 625; cf. Chase Manhattan Equities Ltd v Goodman [1991] B.C.I.C. 897.

<sup>36</sup> Gillespie Bros. & Co v Cheney, Eggur & Co [1896] 2 Q.B. 59.

<sup>37</sup> Burges v Wickham (1863) 3 B. & S. 669; Blackburn J. dissented on this point.

<sup>38</sup> See below, p.241.

<sup>39</sup> Misrepresentation Act 1967, s.1(a); below, p.375.

<sup>40</sup> (1856) 6 E. & B. 370. According to this report a new trial was sought on the ground of misdirection; but the other reports (25 L.J.Q.B. 277; 2 Jur.(N.S.) 641 and 4 W.R. 528) are probably more accurate in stating that it was sought on the ground of improper reception of evidence.

of an oral stipulation that the agreement should cease to bind if the third party disapproved of the invention would not have been admissible. On the other hand, evidence is admissible to show that a written contract has been varied or rescinded.<sup>41</sup> It is not easy to deduce from the purpose of the parol evidence rule why evidence should be admissible in the first and third, but not in the second of these cases.

(f) EVIDENCE AS TO PARTIES. Extrinsic evidence can be used to identify the parties<sup>42</sup> and to show in what capacities the parties contracted. Thus in Newell v Radford<sup>43</sup> the written record of a contract read “Mr. Newell, 32 sacks of culasses at 39s. 280lbs., to await orders. John Williams.” Evidence was admitted that Newell was a baker and Williams’ principal a flour dealer, so as to show which party was buyer and which seller.

Where a person contracts ostensibly as principal evidence is admissible to prove that he really acted as another’s agent so as to entitle the latter to sue<sup>44</sup> unless such evidence contradicts the express description of the agent in the contract.<sup>45</sup> As the ostensible contracting party is in such cases personally liable even if he acted as agent, the evidence would not normally relieve him from liability. But in Wake v Harrop<sup>46</sup> an agent signed a charterparty on behalf of the charterer, but so as to make himself personally liable. He did so after an oral agreement with the shipowner that he should not be personally liable. It was held that the agent could rely on the oral agreement, if not at law, at any rate by way of equitable defence. Conversely, where a person contracted on the face of the document as agent evidence was held to be admissible of his contemporaneous statements that he intended to undertake personal liability.<sup>47</sup>

(g) DEFENCE TO SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE. Failure to perform an oral promise may be available as a defence when the party who made it claims specific performance of the written agreement.<sup>48</sup> Alternatively, in such a case, the court may have a discretion to order specific performance on the terms that the claimant performs the oral undertaking.<sup>49</sup> Where, as in the authorities which support these propositions, the contract was one for the disposition of an interest in land, it now generally has to be made in writing by incorporating all its express terms in a contractual document.<sup>50</sup> Failure to incorporate the oral promise would therefore prevent the contract from coming into existence,<sup>51</sup> and would lead to the dismissal of a claim (whether for specific performance or for damages) on that ground, unless the promise could be said to take effect only as a collateral contract.<sup>52</sup> But the reasoning of the older authorities would still apply where specific

<sup>41</sup> Morris v Baron & Co [1918] A.C. 1; Goss v Nugent (1833) 5 B. & Ad. 58 at 65. It does not, of course, follow from the admissibility of evidence of a variation that the variation can be enforced: as to this, see above, pp.188, 190.

<sup>42</sup> OTV Birmelco Ltd v Technical & General Guarantee Co Ltd [2002] EWHC 2240 (TCC); [2002] 4 All E.R. 668, at [22].

<sup>43</sup> (1867) 1 L.R. 3 C.P. 52; cf. The Riza and Sun [1997] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 314 at 320.

<sup>44</sup> Humfrey v Dale (1857) 7 E. & B. 266; affirmed (1858) E.B. & E. 1004.

<sup>45</sup> See, p.727.

<sup>46</sup> (1861) 6 H. & N. 768; affirmed 1 H. & C. 202.

<sup>47</sup> Sun Alliance Pensions Life & Investment Services Ltd v RJL [1991] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 410.

<sup>48</sup> Martin v Pycofi (1852) 2 D.M. & G. 785, 795; cf. Scott v Bradley [1971] Ch. 850.

<sup>49</sup> See London & Birmingham Ry v Winter (1840) Cr. & Ph. 57.

<sup>50</sup> Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989, s.2(1), above, p.178. Before this section came into force, the contract only had to be evidenced in writing, and failure to comply with this requirement did not prevent enforcement if there had been “part performance” by the claimant: above, p.185.

<sup>51</sup> See above, p.179.

<sup>52</sup> ibid.; below, p.199.

performance was sought of a contract which was in fact in writing, even though there was no legal requirement to this effect.<sup>53</sup>

(h) AID TO CONSTRUCTION. Where the words of the contract are “clear”, extrinsic evidence cannot be used to explain their meaning,<sup>54</sup> unless they have a special meaning by custom.<sup>55</sup> Extrinsic evidence can, on the other hand, be used to explain words or phrases which are ambiguous,<sup>56</sup> or which, if taken literally, make no sense,<sup>57</sup> or conflict with others in the same document,<sup>58</sup> as well as technical terms. Evidence is likewise admissible of the factual background (or “matrix”<sup>59</sup>) to the negotiations insofar as this sheds light on the meaning of the words used.<sup>60</sup>

Even where extrinsic evidence is normally admissible as an aid to construction, its use for this purpose is subject to a number of restrictions. First, evidence of prior negotiations is generally inadmissible, being unhelpful since “It is only the final document which records a consensus”.<sup>61</sup> Evidence of a prior contract between the parties may be admissible as part of the “factual matrix”<sup>62</sup> surrounding the contract in issue, though if that contract was intended to supersede the prior one, then evidence of the prior contract is either inadmissible<sup>63</sup> or, even if admissible, “of little relevance”.<sup>64</sup> If the final document contains ambiguous expressions, evidence of precontract communications is however admissible to show that the parties had attached an agreed meaning to these expressions.<sup>65</sup> Secondly, evidence of the conduct of the parties after the making of the contract will not be admitted on the issue of construction. For if such evidence were admitted the undesirable result might follow “that a contract meant one thing the day it was signed but, by reason of subsequent events, meant something different a month

<sup>53</sup> e.g. if it was a lease for less than three years (above, p.178) or a contract for the sale of “unique” goods (below, pp.1022, 1023).

<sup>54</sup> Bank of New Zealand v Simpson, [1900] A.C. at 189; Edmund Lloyd Ltd v Sturgeon Falls Pulp Co (1901) 85 L.T. 162; Lovell & Christmas Ltd v Wall (1911) 104 L.T. 85.

<sup>55</sup> See below, p.198.

<sup>56</sup> Robertson v Jackson (1845) 2 C.B. 412; Bank of New Zealand v Simpson [1900] A.C. 182; cf. Scarfe v Adams [1981] 1 All E.R. 843; Pao On v Lau Yiu Long [1980] A.C. 614 at 631; Forsikringsaktieselskapet Vesta v Butcher [1989] A.C. 582 at 909–910; Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc v MacLaine Watson & Co Ltd [1989] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 570 at 591; Anangel Atlas Compania Naviera SA v Ishikawajima-Harima Heavy Industries (No.2) [1990] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 526 at 554.

<sup>57</sup> The Sounion [1987] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 230 (“grates and stoves” on ships which no longer carried such implements).

<sup>58</sup> e.g. Mannai Investment Co Ltd v Eagle Star Life Assurance Co [1997] A.C. 749; BOC Group plc v Centeon LLC [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 970 at 979.

<sup>59</sup> Prenn v Simmonds [1971] 1 W.L.R. 1381 at 1384.

<sup>60</sup> Prenn v Simmonds [1971] 1 W.L.R. 1381 at 1385; Reardon Smith Line Ltd v Hansen Tangen [1976] 1 W.L.R. 989 at 996; Youell v Bland Welch & Co Ltd [1992] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 127 at 133; Scottish Power plc v Britoil (Exploration) Ltd, The Times, December 2, 1997 (urging a restrictive use of evidence for this purpose); Simon Container Machinery Ltd v Emba Machinery A.B. [1998] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 428 at 435.

<sup>61</sup> Prenn v Simmonds [1971] 1 W.L.R. 1381 at 1384; Arrale v Costain Civil Engineering Ltd [1976] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 49; The Ionio [1985] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 271 at 274; Youell v Bland Welch & Co Ltd [1992] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 127 at 133; cf. Rubin v Gerson Berger Association Ltd [1986] 1 W.L.R. 526; Mannai Investment Co Ltd v Eagle Star Life Assurance Co Ltd [1997] A.C. 749 at 779; Investors Compensation Scheme Ltd v West Bromwich B.S. [1998] 1 W.L.R. 896 at 913.

<sup>62</sup> HIH Casualty & General Insurance Ltd v New Hampshire Insurance Co [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 39, [2001] EWCA Civ 735 at [83].

<sup>63</sup> Youell v Bland Welch & Co Ltd [1992] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 127 at 141 (insurance slip inadmissible on construction of later policy; for the binding force of the slip, see above, p.54).

<sup>64</sup> HIH Casualty Case, above, n.62 at [83] (where the prior contract was not intended to be superseded by the later one).

<sup>65</sup> The Karen Oltman [1976] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 708; cf. The Pacific Colocotronis [1981] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 40.

or a year later".<sup>66</sup> Such evidence may be admissible to show what the terms of the original contract were,<sup>67</sup> or that the written terms were a "mere sham",<sup>68</sup> or that the contract had been varied by subsequent agreement,<sup>69</sup> or to raise an estoppel<sup>70</sup>; but it cannot be used to elucidate the original meaning of the contract. Thirdly, it has been said that evidence of the "parties' intentions"<sup>71</sup> will not be admitted on the issue of construction. What seems to be meant is that the purposes of the parties,<sup>72</sup> or the subjective intention of one of them<sup>73</sup> (not known to the other<sup>74</sup>) will not be considered. So far as their intentions relate (for example) to the identity of the subject-matter, evidence of them is no doubt admissible.<sup>75</sup>

(i) TO PROVE CUSTOM. Evidence of custom is admissible "to annex incidents to written contracts"<sup>76</sup> in matters with respect to which they are silent".<sup>77</sup> It is generally said that the evidence can be used to add to, but not to contradict, the written contract. Thus the evidence cannot be used where the custom, if actually written into the contract, would make it "insensible or inconsistent".<sup>78</sup> For example, where a charterparty provided that expenses of discharging should be borne by the charterer "as customary", a custom that they were to be borne by the shipowner was held to be inconsistent with the charterparty<sup>79</sup>; and where a bill of lading provided for "freight payable in London" this was held to be inconsistent with a custom that it was payable in advance in London.<sup>80</sup> But where a bill of lading provided for freight at a specified rate, evidence of a customary

<sup>66</sup> James Miller & Partners v Whitworth Street Estates (Manchester) Ltd [1970] A.C. 583 at 603, 606; Wickman Ltd v Schuler AG [1974] A.C. 325; cf. Houlder Bros & Co Ltd v Commissioners of Public Works [1908] A.C. 276 at 285; The Good Helmsman [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 377 at 416; Macedonia Maritime Co v Austin Pickersgill Ltd, The Times, January 26, 1989; Porteus v Element Books Ltd [1996] C.L.Y. 1029. For an exception, see Wilson v Maynard Shipbuilding Consultants A.B. [1978] Q.B. 665 at 675–676.

<sup>67</sup> Ferguson v Dawson & Partners (Contractors) Ltd [1976] 1 W.L.R. 1213; Mears v Safecar Securities Ltd [1983] Q.B. 54 at 77; Carmichael v National Power plc [1999] 1 W.L.R. 2042 at 2050–2051; cf. above, p.193.

<sup>68</sup> See above, p.195 at n.35.

<sup>69</sup> McCausland v Duncan Lamrie Ltd [1997] 1 W.L.R. 38 at 49.

<sup>70</sup> James Miller & Partners Ltd v Whitworth Street Estates (Manchester) Ltd [1970] A.C. 583 at 611, 615; cf. Amalgamated Investment & Property Co Ltd v Texas Commerce International Bank Ltd [1982] Q.B. 84 at 119.

<sup>71</sup> Prenn v Simmonds, above, n.59 at 1385; Pritchard v Briggs [1980] Ch. 338; The Good Helmsman [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 377 at 416; The Scaptrade [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 425 at 432, affirmed without reference to this point [1983] 2 A.C. 694; Rabin v Gerson Berger Association Ltd [1986] 1 W.L.R. 526 at 533; Transpetrol Ltd v Transol Olieprodukten Nederland BV [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 309 at 310; New Hampshire Insurance Co Ltd v MGN, The Times, July 25, 1995; Investors Compensation Scheme Ltd v West Bromwich BS [1998] 1 W.L.R. 896 at 913 ("subjective intent"); The Red Sea [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 28 at 30 ("subjective intention" as opposed to "objective meaning"); AIB Group plc v Martin [2001] UKHL 63; [2001] 1 W.L.R. 99, at [4]. This restriction on the admissibility of such evidence cannot be avoided "as it were by the backdoor" by invoking the doctrine of estoppel by convention (above, p.119): Phillip Collins Ltd v Davis [2000] 3 All E.R. 808 at 824.

<sup>72</sup> Prenn v Simmonds, above, n.59 at 1385.

<sup>73</sup> Scottish Power plc v Britoil (Exploration) Ltd, The Times, December 2, 1997; Zoan v Rouamba [2000] 1 W.L.R. 1509 at [43].

<sup>74</sup> ibid., at [42], distinguishing the Mannai case (above, p.197, n.58) where the mistake in the tenant's notice was obvious to the landlord.

<sup>75</sup> See below at n.84.

<sup>76</sup> Including those made by deed: Wigglesworth v Dallison (1779) 1 Doug. 201.

<sup>77</sup> Hutton v Warren (1836) 1 M. & W. 466 at 475.

<sup>78</sup> Humfrey v Dale 7 E. & B. 266, 275; affirmed (1858) E.B. & E. 1004.

<sup>79</sup> Pulgrave Brown & Sun Ltd v SS Turid (Owners) [1922] 1 A.C. 397; cf. Mowbray Robinson & Co v Rosser (1922) 91 L.J.K.B. 524.

<sup>80</sup> Krall v Burnett (1877) 25 W.R. 305; advance freight would be payable even though the ship failed to reach the contractual destination: below, p.917.

deduction of interest was held merely to add to the contract since the discount was calculated on the contract rate of freight.<sup>81</sup> In such borderline cases, the distinction between customs which add to and those which contradict the written contract is largely one of emphasis.

Custom can also be used as an aid to construction.<sup>82</sup> For this purpose, evidence of custom is admissible even though it contradicts the ordinary meaning of the words used in the contract e.g., to show that “1,000 rabbits” meant “1,200 rabbits.”<sup>83</sup>

(j) TO IDENTIFY THE SUBJECT-MATTER. Extrinsic evidence is admissible to identify the subject-matter of a contract: for example, to show that “your wool” meant not only wool produced by the claimant but also wool produced on a neighbouring farm<sup>84</sup>; and to define the exact area of land conveyed where the conveyance fails to make this clear.<sup>85</sup> Similarly, such evidence is admissible to define the extent of a party’s obligations under a contract: e.g. to show that a contract to pump oil out of a stranded tanker obliged the party rendering the service to take away only so much oil as was necessary to avert the risk of pollution<sup>86</sup>; or to show whether a guarantee related to one debt only or was a continuing one,<sup>87</sup> or to which of a number of transactions a guarantee related.<sup>88</sup> Where a lease contains a covenant to repair, evidence can similarly be given as to the character of the premises in order to determine the extent of the obligation imposed by the covenant.<sup>89</sup>

(k) RECTIFICATION A document may be meant to record a previous oral agreement, but fail accurately to do so. Such a document can sometimes be rectified, i.e. brought into line with the previous oral agreement.<sup>90</sup> When this is done evidence of the previous oral agreement must inevitably be admitted. This does not mean that a party can claim rectification merely by alleging that terms which were in fact agreed were not incorporated in the document. The remedy of rectification is based on a mistake in the recording of a previous oral agreement.<sup>91</sup> In most of the cases in which the parol evidence rule is invoked the parties make no such mistake: they know perfectly well that the extrinsic term is not incorporated in the document, so that rectification is not available.

(l) COLLATERAL AGREEMENTS. Even where extrinsic evidence cannot be used to vary, add to or contradict the terms of a written agreement, it may be possible to show that the parties made two related contracts, one written and the other oral. In Mann v Nunn<sup>92</sup> the claimant orally agreed to take a lease of the defendant’s premises if the defendant would first do certain repairs. A written agreement was later executed, but did not refer to the defendant’s promise to do the repairs. The claimant was nonetheless able to

<sup>81</sup> Brown v Byrne (1854) 3 E. & B. 703.

<sup>82</sup> e.g. Norden Steam Co v Dempsey (1876) 1 C.P.D. 654; cf. Robertson v Jackson (1845) 2 C.B. 412.

<sup>83</sup> Smith v Wilson (1832) 3 B. & Ad. 728.

<sup>84</sup> Macdonald v Longbottom (1859) 1 E. & E. 977.

<sup>85</sup> Scarfe v Adams [1981] 1 All E.R. 843; cf. Freeguard v Rogers, The Times, October 27, 1998.

<sup>86</sup> The Pacific Colocotronis [1981] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 40; cf. Essex CC v Ellam [1989] 2 All E.R. 494 (evidence admissible as to legal nature of payments made under covenant).

<sup>87</sup> Heffield v Meadows (1869) L.R. 4 C.P. 595.

<sup>88</sup> Perrylease Ltd v Imecar Ltd [1988] 1 W.L.R. 463.

<sup>89</sup> Burges v Wickham (1863) 3 B. & S. 669 at 698.

<sup>90</sup> See below, p.321 et seq.

<sup>91</sup> See below, p.321; cf. Rabin v Gerson Berger Association Ltd [1986] 1 W.L.R. 526, 534; The Riza and Sun [1997] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 314 at 320.

<sup>92</sup> (1874) 30 L.T. 526; cf. Walker Property Investments (Brighton) Ltd v Walker (1947) 177 L.T. 204.

enforce this promise. "The parol agreement neither alters nor adds to the written one, but is an independent agreement."<sup>93</sup>

Thus evidence is admissible if it proves an "independent agreement"; but it is often hard to say whether the evidence has this effect or whether it varies, or adds to, the terms of the main contract. The test seems to be whether the evidence relates to a term which would go to the essence of the whole transaction: if so, it cannot be regarded as evidence of a collateral contract and will be inadmissible.<sup>94</sup>

In Mann v Nunn the lease contained no provisions as to putting the premises in repair, so that the landlord's promise merely added to it. According to two later cases, evidence of a collateral contract is inadmissible if it varies or contradicts a term actually set out in the main written contract. In the first,<sup>95</sup> a lease of a furnished house specified the furniture to be included. Evidence of a collateral agreement, made before the lease, to put in more furniture, was held inadmissible. In the second,<sup>96</sup> rent under a lease was payable quarterly in advance. Evidence of a collateral agreement allowing the tenant (in effect) to pay the rent in arrear was similarly held inadmissible.

On the other hand, in City & Westminster Properties (1934) Ltd v Mudd<sup>97</sup> a lease contained a covenant to use the premises for business purposes only. The tenant had been induced to sign it by an oral assurance that the lessors would not object to his continuing to reside on the premises (as he had done in the past). In spite of the fact that this assurance contradicted the lease, evidence of it was held admissible to prove a collateral contract. The case is hard to distinguish from the cases discussed above<sup>98</sup>; and it is arguable that evidence of a collateral contract should not, any more than evidence of custom,<sup>99</sup> be allowed to contradict the main written contract. But evidence of custom is meant to elucidate the meaning of the written document itself, and it could hardly do this by introducing contradictory terms. Evidence of a collateral agreement is not meant to determine the content or meaning of a written document, but to give effect to an independent agreement. There is no compelling reason why this agreement should not contradict the written document.

It can be argued that the collateral contract device largely destroys the parol evidence rule, especially if Mudd's case is right. But some limitations on this device are imposed by the requirements that a statement operates as a collateral contract only if intended to be legally binding and supported by separate consideration.<sup>1</sup> Such consideration will often be provided by the promisee's act of entering into the main contract.<sup>2</sup> But this act could not be consideration for the collateral promise if that promise was made after the conclusion of the main contract; for in that case the consideration would be past and hence of no effect in law.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>93</sup> Mann v Nunn, above, at 527. For other requirements of collateral contracts, see above, pp.162, 180–181, below, pp.356–357.

<sup>94</sup> e.g. The Nile Rhapsody [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 399 at 407, affirmed [1994] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 382; Mitchill v Lath 160 N.E. 646 (1928) cf. in the context of formal requirements ante, pp.180–181.

<sup>95</sup> Angell v Duke (1875) 32 L.T. 320; for previous proceedings in this case, see (1875) L.R. 10 Q.B. 174; above, p.181.

<sup>96</sup> Henderson v Arthur [1907] 1 K.B. 10.

<sup>97</sup> [1959] Ch. 129; cf. Couchman v Hill [1947] K.B. 554, where one reason for the decision was that the oral warranty was a collateral contract; and Brikom Investments Ltd v Carr [1979] Q.B. 467 (above, p.102), where no point as to admissibility of evidence seems to have been taken.

<sup>98</sup> The fact that the tenant actually refused to sign the lease until he was given the oral assurance may distinguish Mudd's case from Angell v Duke and Henderson v Arthur above, at nn.95, 96.

<sup>99</sup> See above, p.198.

<sup>1</sup> See above, p.102; post, p.356.

<sup>2</sup> e.g. in City of Westminster Properties (1934) Ltd v Mudd [1959] Ch. 129.

<sup>3</sup> See above, p.77.

(m) CONSIDERATION. In Turner v Forwood<sup>4</sup> a person assigned a debt due to him from a company to one of its directors by a deed stated to have been made for a nominal consideration. It was held that evidence was admissible to show that there was a substantial consideration for the assignment.<sup>5</sup> This evidence did not really contradict the deed as the nominal consideration was mentioned only as a matter of form.<sup>6</sup> Where an agreement states a substantial consideration, evidence of additional consideration is also admissible, so long as it does not contradict that stated in the written agreement.<sup>7</sup>

SECTION 2. IMPLIED TERMS<sup>a</sup>

Implied terms may be divided into three main<sup>9</sup> groups. The first consists of terms implied in fact, that is, terms which were not expressly set out in the contract, but which the parties must have intended to include. The second consists of terms implied in law, that is, terms imported by operation of law, although the parties may not have intended to include them. The third consists of terms implied by custom.

1. Terms Implied in Fact

(1) Officious bystander test

One test for the implication of a term in fact is the “officious bystander” test. This has been stated by MacKinnon L.J. as follows: “Prima facie that which in any contract is left to be implied and need not be expressed is something so obvious that it goes without saying; so that, if while the parties were making their bargain, an officious bystander were to suggest some express provision for it in the agreement, they would testily suppress him with a common ‘Oh, of course!’”<sup>10</sup> For example, in one case<sup>11</sup> a vendor of land undertook that, if he later sold certain adjoining land, he would give the purchaser the “first refusal” of it. A term was implied to prevent the vendor from defeating the purchaser’s expectation by disposing of the land to a third party by way of gift.

(2) Business efficacy test

A second test for the implication of a term in fact is that of “business efficacy.” Lord Wright has described such a term as one “of which it can be predicated that ‘it goes

<sup>4</sup> [1951] 1 All E.R. 746.

<sup>5</sup> cf. above, p.75.

<sup>6</sup> i.e. to avoid the implication of a use: Cross and Tapper on Evidence (9th ed.), p.656.

<sup>7</sup> Pao On v Lau Yiu Long [1980] A.C. 614 at 631.

<sup>a</sup> Lücke, 5 Adelaide L.Rev. 31.

<sup>9</sup> See below, p.211 for cases not falling readily into anyone of these groups.

<sup>10</sup> Shirlan v Southern Foundries (1926) Ltd [1939] 2 K.B. 206 at 227 (affirmed [1940] A.C. 701); cf. Comptoir Commercial Anverso v Power, Son & Co [1920] 1 K.B. 868 at 899–900; MacKinnon L.J.’s test is viewed with some scepticism in The Manifest Lipkomy [1989] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 138 at 142, but (semble) approved ibid. at 143. In The Bonde [1991] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 136 at 145 and in North Sea Energy Holdings NV v Petroleum Authority of Thailand [1997] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 418 at 431 (affirmed [1999] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 483) the officious bystander is, unusually, regarded as answering, rather than as posing, the question assumed to have been put; cf. The Rio Assusu [1999] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 115 at 126.

<sup>11</sup> Gardner v Coutts & Co [1968] 1 W.L.R. 173, distinguished in Nicholson v Markham [1997] C.L.Y. 4255 on the ground stated below, p.204 at n.33; cf. Vosper Thornycroft v Minister of Defence [1976] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 58; Essoldo v Ladbrooke Group, The Times, December 26, 1976; Bournemouth & Boscombe Athletic FC v Manchester United FC, The Times, May 22, 1980; Fraser v Thames Television Ltd [1984] Q.B. 44 at 57; The Dadomar General T.J. Park [1986] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 68.

without saying,' some term not expressed but necessary to give the transaction such business efficacy as the parties must have intended".<sup>12</sup> It is sometimes also said that all implied terms are subject to a requirement of "necessity",<sup>13</sup> as if that were an additional requirement, but in the present context "necessity" seems to be no more than a part of (or perhaps an alternative to<sup>14</sup>) the "business efficacy"<sup>15</sup> test as stated by Lord Wright.

The relationship between the "officious bystander" and "business efficacy" tests is, however, not entirely clear.<sup>16</sup> One view is that both tests must be satisfied: in other words, that the party seeking to establish the term must show "that the implication was necessary, that the contract would have made no sense without it, and that the term was omitted . . . because it was so obvious that there was no need to make it explicit".<sup>17</sup> But if it can be established, as a matter of fact, that both parties regarded the term as obvious and would have accepted it, had it been put to them at the time of contracting, that should suffice to support the implication of the term in fact<sup>18</sup>; for the purpose of such an implication is simply "to give effect to the intention of the parties."<sup>19</sup> A second view is that it is sufficient to satisfy either test, so that "a term will be implied only where it is necessary in a business sense to give efficacy to a contract or where the term is one which the parties must obviously have intended."<sup>20</sup> This view in turn gives rise to difficulty where it is clear that one party (at least) would not have agreed to the term, even though the other (or the court) would have regarded it as necessary to give business efficacy to the contract. In such a case, the implication would clearly not "give effect to the intention of the parties",<sup>21</sup> so that there would be no room for an implication in fact. It is submitted that, in the present context, "business efficacy" (or "necessity"<sup>22</sup>)

<sup>12</sup> Luxor (Eastbourne) Ltd v Cooper [1941] A.C. 108 at 137; cf. Comptoir Commercial Anversois v Power, Son & Co [1920] 1 K.B. 868 at 899–900; Barclays Bank plc v Taylor [1989] 1 W.L.R. 1066 at 1074; The Star Texas [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 444 at 451; Burrows, 3 N.Z.U.L.R. 121.

<sup>13</sup> Luxor case, above, at 125; Anderson v Corporation of Lloyd's (No.2) [1992] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 620 at 627; Hughes v Greenwich LBC [1994] A.C. 170 at 179; Baker v Black Sea & Baltic Insurance Co Ltd [1998] 1 W.L.R. 974 at 980 (but see ibid. at 978).

<sup>14</sup> See Cox v Banks [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 436 at 466.

<sup>15</sup> See above at n.12: "necessary to give . . . business efficacy"; cf. Friend's Provident Life Office v Hillier Parker May & Ronden [1995] 4 All E.R. 260 at 279 ("business necessity"); Insurance Co v Lloyd's Syndicate [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 273 at 275; Flementatos Maritimos SA v Effjohn International BV [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 311 at 314–315; The Aegean Sea [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 39 at 65.

<sup>16</sup> See Suriya & Douglas v Midland Bank plc [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 612 at 615.

<sup>17</sup> Stubbs v Tromer Still and King [1987] I.R.L.R. 321 at 324 (emphasis added); McAuley v Bristol CC [1992] Q.B. 134 at 147; Association of British Travel Agents v British Airways plc [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 169 at 175, affirmed [2000] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 209; BP v Hastings (1978) 52 A.L.J.R. 20 at 26.

<sup>18</sup> Aspden v Webbs Poultry & Meat Group (Holdings) Ltd [1996] I.R.L.R. 521.

<sup>19</sup> Luxor (Eastbourne) Ltd v Cooper [1941] A.C. 108 at 137.

<sup>20</sup> The Manifest Lipkomy [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 138 at 143 (emphasis added) and 144; cf. The C Joyce [1986] 2 All E.R. 177 at 182; Barrett v Lounava (1982) Ltd [1990] 1 Q.B. 348 at 355; The Choko Star [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 516 at 524, 526; The Wardens, etc. of Mercers v New Hampshire Insurance Co [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 365 at 370; Cox v Banks [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 437 at 457, 466; Coca Cola Financial Corp v First International Ltd [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 274 at 277; The Kurnia Dewi [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 553 at 559 ("and/or"); Clarion Ltd v National Provident Association [2000] 1 W.L.R. 1888 at 1896; Weldon v GRE Linked Life Assurance Ltd [2000] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 914 at 919; Ministry of Defence v County and Metropolitan Homes (Rissington) Ltd, The Times, November 9, 2002. In Ashmore v Corporations of Lloyd's (No.2) [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 620 at 626 the "business efficacy" and "officious bystander" tests are described as two tests of "implications in fact" and it is said that "both depend upon the presumed joint intention of the parties."

<sup>21</sup> Luxor (Eastbourne) Ltd v Cooper, above at n.11; cf. The Gudermes [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 311 at 323.

<sup>22</sup> See Kumar v AGF Insurance Ltd [1998] 4 All E.R. 788 at 793–794; [1999] 1 W.L.R. 1747 at 1752.

is merely a practical test for determining the intention of the parties: in most cases, it can be assumed that they would have agreed to a term which is necessary to make their agreement work. This seems to be the meaning of Lord Wright's statement (quoted above) in which the two tests are stated in apposition and evidently regarded as meaning much the same thing<sup>23</sup>; and most of the authorities with which the following discussion is concerned are based on the assumption that a term cannot be implied in fact where the evidence actually negatives the "officious bystander" test.<sup>24</sup> In the absence of such evidence, it seems that satisfaction of either the "officious bystander" or the "business efficacy" test will suffice for the implication of a term in fact.

(3) Reasonableness

The fact that a particular implication is reasonable may be evidence that the parties would have agreed to it; if so, the "officious bystander test" is satisfied,<sup>25</sup> and the same fact may help to satisfy the "business efficacy" test.<sup>26</sup> But the courts will not imply a term in fact merely because it would be reasonable to do so<sup>27</sup>; "they will not . . . improve the contract which the parties have made for themselves, however desirable the improvement might be".<sup>28</sup> At most, the fact that the alleged term was unreasonable may lead to a refusal to imply a term on the ground that the party objecting to the implication would not have agreed to it.<sup>29</sup> The standard of reasonableness may also be used in interpreting express terms that are imprecise or ambiguous<sup>30</sup>; but the test for implying a new term in fact is to ask whether the parties would have agreed to it—not whether it would have been reasonable for them to have done so.

<sup>23</sup> cf. K C Sethia (1944) Ltd v Partabmull Rameshwar [1950] 1 All E.R. 51 at 59 (affirmed [1951] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 89): "unless, considering the matter from the point of view of business efficacy, it is clear that both parties intended a given term to operate"; The Good Luck [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 238 at 268 (reversed on other grounds [1992] 1 A.C. 233): "what would the parties, if asked, have said, also known as the business efficacy test" (emphasis added); The Bonde [1991] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 136 at 145. McClory v Post Office [1992] I.C.R. 758 at 764 ("often a different way of saying the same thing"); Flementatos Maritimos S.A v Effjohn International BV [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 311 at 315 (regarding the "officious bystander" test as an application of the "business efficacy" test); Ali Shipping Corp v Shipyard Trogir [1998] 2 All E.R. 136 at 147. See also The Island Archon [1994] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 227 where Evans L.J. at 237 based the implication in part on "business efficiency" while Nicholls V.-C. at 237 based it on the ground they "the contracting parties must have so intended."

<sup>24</sup> Clarion Ltd v National Provident Association [2000] 1 W.L.R. 1888 at 1897; see also Ali v Christian Salvageson Food Services Ltd [1997] 1 All E.R. 721 at 725, where "no reliance was placed on "the business efficacy test; Kumar v AGF Insurance Ltd [1998] 4 All E.R. 788 at 793–794, where the test of "necessity" is evidently regarded as the equivalent of the "officious bystander" test.

<sup>25</sup> Paragon Finance Ltd v Staunton [2001] E.W.C.A. Civ 1466 at [36]; [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 1025.

<sup>26</sup> Weldon's case, above, n.20 at 919.

<sup>27</sup> Reigate v Union Manufacturing Co (Ramsbottom) Ltd [1918] 1 K.B. 592 at 605; Bandar Property Holdings Ltd v J S Darwen (Successors) Ltd [1968] 2 All E.R. 305; Lupton v Potts [1969] 1 W.L.R. 1749; Liverpool City Council v Irwin [1977] A.C. 239; Duke of Westminster v Guild [1985] Q.B. 688 at 698; The Mammoth Pine [1986] 3 All E.R. 767 at 770. McAuley v Bristol CC [1992] Q.B. 134 at 146; The Island Archon [1994] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 227 at 237; Friends' Provident Life Office v Hillier Parker May & Rowden [1995] 4 All E.R. 260 at 279; Insurance Co v Lloyd's Syndicate [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 273 at 275; cf. Lord Simonds' warning in Scruttons Ltd v Midland Silicones Ltd [1962] A.C. 446 at 467 that the process of implication is one "against the abuse of which the courts must keep constant guard;" and see White v Reflecting Roadstuds Ltd [1991] I.C.R. 733.

<sup>28</sup> Trollope & Colls Ltd v NW Metropolitan Hospital Board [1973] 1 W.L.R. 601 at 609; cf. Johnson v Davies [1999] Ch.117 at 128.

<sup>29</sup> Suriya & Douglas v Midland Bank plc [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 615 (see especially at 615); cf. Times Newspapers Ltd v George Weidenfeld & Nicholson Ltd [2002] F.S.R. 29.

<sup>30</sup> Paula Lee Ltd v Robert Zehil & Co Ltd [1983] 2 All E.R. 390; cf. above, p.50.

(4) Factors negating implication in fact

It follows from the nature of the process of implication in fact that a term cannot be implied in fact if it actually conflicts with the express terms of the contract.<sup>31</sup> The courts are also reluctant to imply such a term “where the parties have entered into a carefully drafted written contract containing detailed terms agreed between them;”<sup>32</sup> or where the express terms of the agreement embody the outcome of negotiations to settle a “bitter and contentious” dispute between them.<sup>33</sup> Although the contrary is sometimes suggested,<sup>34</sup> the test of implication under the officious bystander test is subjective: what would the parties have agreed?—not what would reasonable persons in their position have agreed? This view is supported by the fact that attempts to imply terms in fact may fail for one of two further reasons.

(a) IGNORANCE OF ONE. First, one of the parties may simply not know of the matter to be implied or of the facts on which the implication is to be based.<sup>35</sup> For example, the terms of an agreement between one of the contracting parties and a third party cannot be implied in fact<sup>36</sup> into the contract in question if the other party to that contract was unaware of the existence or terms of the agreement; for if that party were asked whether he had agreed to the incorporation of the agreement, his reply would more probably be a puzzled “what’s that?” than a testy “oh, of course”.<sup>37</sup> Again, in K C Sethia (1944) Ltd v Partabmull Rameshwar<sup>38</sup> sellers of Indian jute to Italian buyers could not perform their contract because they failed to obtain a quota for shipment to Italy. They argued that the contract was impliedly “subject to quota,” and one reason why the argument was rejected was that the buyers did not know that the sellers had no quota for Italy.

(b) DIVERGENT VIEWS. Secondly, the parties may have different views with regard to the alleged term.<sup>39</sup> Where their interests are opposed, an implication that may be

<sup>31</sup> Duke of Westminster v Guild [1985] Q.B. 688 at 700. cf. Johnstone v Bloomsbury Health Authority [1992] Q.B. 333, per Legatt L.J. and Browne-Wilkinson V.-C.; McClory v Post Office [1992] I.C.R. 758; Yorkshire Water Services Ltd v Sun Alliance & London Insurance plc [1997] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 21 at 33; Courage Ltd v Crehan [1999] U.K.C.L.R. 110; [1999] 2 E.G.L.R. 145; Times Newspaper Ltd v George Weidenfeld & Nicholson Ltd [2002] F.S.R. 463 at 473.

<sup>32</sup> Shell UK Ltd v Lostock Garages Ltd [1976] 1 W.L.R. 1187, 1200; Duke of Westminster v Guild [1985] Q.B. 688; Ali v Christian Salveson Food Services Ltd [1997] 1 All E.R. 721 at 726; contrast Associated Japanese Bank (International) v Crédit du Nord SA [1989] 1 W.L.R. 255; The Maira (No.3) [1988] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 126, reversed on other grounds [1990] 1 A.C. 637; for some difference of judicial opinion on the point, see Turner v Stevenage BC [1997] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 129 at 133, 134–135.

<sup>33</sup> Nicholson v Markham [1997] C.L.Y. 4255.

<sup>34</sup> e.g. The Dadomar General T.J. Park [1986] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 68 at 70 (“reasonable men faced with the suggested term . . .”); McAuley v Bristol CC [1992] Q.B. 134 at 147; BP v Hastings (1978) 52 A.L.J.R. 20 at 26, PC; the phrase “presumed intention” in Hughes v Greenwich LBC [1994] 1 A.C. 170 at 179 is more equivocal. cf. Fal Bunkering of Sharjah v Grecale Inc of Panama [1990] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 369 at 372–373 (where both tests would have led to the same result).

<sup>35</sup> McCutcheon v David MacBrayne Ltd [1964] 1 W.L.R. 125 at 128, 134.

<sup>36</sup> For implication of such terms by custom, see below, pp.213–214.

<sup>37</sup> Spring v NASDS [1956] 1 W.L.R. 585 at 599 (inter-union agreement on transfer of members not incorporated in membership contract; see now Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.174 as substituted by Trade Union and Employment Rights Act 1993, s.14); cf. Spence v Cosmos Air Holidays Ltd, The Times, December 6, 1989; Wilson v Best Travel [1993] 3 All E.R. 353.

<sup>38</sup> [1950] 1 All E.R. 51 (affirmed [1951] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 89).

<sup>39</sup> Attica Sea Carriers Corp v Ferrastal Poseidon Bulk Reederei GmbH [1976] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 250; Frobisher (Second Investments) Ltd v Kiloran Trust Co Ltd [1980] 1 W.L.R. 425; Tadd v Eastwood [1985] I.C.R. 132; Nutting v Baldwin [1995] 1 W.L.R. 201 at 211 (no implied term that financial hardship should excuse members of an association from paying subscriptions); Quinn v Calder Industrial Materials Ltd [1996] I.R.L.R. 126 (no term to be implied from practice of employer to make enhanced redundancy payments).

regarded as obvious by one party may well be unacceptable to the other. For example, in Luxor (Eastbourne) Ltd v Cooper<sup>40</sup> the defendant had employed an estate agent to sell two cinemas and promised to pay him a commission “on completion of sale”. Before the agent had effected a sale, the defendant sold the cinemas himself. It was held that no term could be implied to the effect that the defendant should not (except for good cause) refuse to sell to a person introduced by the agent, since it was not clear that both parties would have agreed to such a term. Similarly, in Shell UK Ltd v Lostock Garages Ltd<sup>41</sup> a written contract provided that Shell should supply petrol and oil to the defendant garage, which undertook, (inter alia) to buy such goods solely from Shell.<sup>42</sup> During a price war, Shell reduced the price of petrol to neighbouring garages, so that the defendant could trade only at a loss. A majority of the Court of Appeal refused to imply a term that Shell should not “abnormally discriminate” against the defendant. One ground for rejecting the implication was that Shell would not have agreed to it<sup>43</sup>; another was that the alleged implication was too vague.<sup>44</sup> The complexity of the alleged term may be yet a further ground for saying that the “officious bystander” test is not satisfied.<sup>45</sup> Even where both parties accept that some term should be implied, an implication in fact may still fail because they disagree as to the exact formulation of that term.<sup>46</sup>

The view that both parties must have intended to agree to the implication also explains cases in which the courts have refused to imply a term in agency agreements that the principal would not, by going out of business, deprive the agent of a chance of earning his commission.<sup>47</sup> On the other hand, where a seller's agent had negotiated a sale of particular goods, a term was implied that the seller would not, by breaking that contract of sale, deprive the agent of his right to commission.<sup>48</sup> This implied term made the seller liable to the agent only if he broke one particular contract of sale, without otherwise restricting his freedom to go out of business. This made it less likely that he would have refused to agree to the term if it had been put to him at the time when the agency agreement was made.

(c) UNILATERAL CONTRACTS. The need for the agreement of both parties to the implication also seems to be the basis for the view that it is “impossible to imply terms (. . . which impose legal obligations) . . . into a unilateral contract”<sup>49</sup>; for, where such an

<sup>40</sup> [1941] A.C. 108; cf. Lonrho v Shell Petroleum Co [1981] Com.L.R. 74 (affirmed without reference to the point [1981] 2 All E.R. 456); Chorley BC v Ribble Motor Services (1997) 74 P. & C.R. 182; Kumar v AGF Insurance Ltd [1998] 4 All E.R. 788 at 793; Suriya & Douglas v Midland Bank plc [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 612 at 617.

<sup>41</sup> [1976] 1 W.L.R. 1187; Russell, 40 M.L.R. 582; cf. Courage Ltd v Crehan, above, n.31.

<sup>42</sup> See below, p.469 as to such agreements.

<sup>43</sup> cf. The Good Luck [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 238 at 273 (reversed on other grounds [1992] 1 A.C. 233); The Gudermes [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 311 at 323.

<sup>44</sup> cf. Watford BC v Watford Rural DC (1986) 86 L.G.R. 524 at 529; Paul Smith Ltd v H & S International Holdings Inc [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 127 at 131; Watford v Miles [1992] 2 A.C. 128 (above, p.56); Coca Cola Financial Corp v Finsat International Ltd [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 274 at 277; Yorkshire Water Services Ltd v Sun Alliance & London Insurance plc [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 21 at 31–32.

<sup>45</sup> Ashmore v Corporation of Lloyd's (No.2) [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 620 at 628.

<sup>46</sup> Abbott v Sullivan [1952] 1 K.B. 189; Trollope & Colls Ltd v NW Metropolitan Hospital Bd [1973] 1 W.L.R. 601 at 609, 610.

<sup>47</sup> Rhodes v Forwood (1876) 1 App.Cas. 256; cf. Hamlyn & Co v Wood [1891] 2 Q.B. 488; Lazarus v Cairn Line Ltd (1912) 106 L.T. 378; cf. Sun Alliance Pensions Life & Investment Services Ltd v RJL [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 40. Contrast cases in which the principal has expressly promised to stay in business: Reigate's Case [1918] 1 K.B. 592; cf. Ogdens Ltd v Nelson [1905] A.C. 109.

<sup>48</sup> Alpha Trading Ltd v Dunshaw-Patten [1981] Q.B. 290; post, p.744. Contrast The Manifest Lipkowsky [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 138 where it was held that no such term could be implied in an arrangement between a seller and the buyer's agent that the commission was to be deducted from the proceeds of sale.

<sup>49</sup> Little v Courage Ltd (1995) 70 P. & C.R. 469 at 474.

implied term would impose obligations on both parties,<sup>50</sup> it would destroy the unilateral nature of the contract and therefore it would not be accepted by the promisee. But it is not obvious why such reasoning should preclude the implication of a term which imposed an obligation only on the promisor. Nor does the reasoning exclude the possibility of implying a term which imposed an obligation on the promisee in cases (of the kind discussed in Chapter 2<sup>51</sup>) in which an originally unilateral contract becomes bilateral in the course of its performance.

2. Terms Implied in Law<sup>52</sup>

Many of the obligations arising out of particular types<sup>53</sup> of contracts are, at any rate presumptively, determined by rules of law; and some such obligations are said to be the result of implied terms. For example, in a contract of employment the employee impliedly undertakes that he is reasonably skilled,<sup>54</sup> that he will faithfully serve his employer<sup>55</sup> and not act against the employer's interests,<sup>56</sup> and that he will indemnify his employer against liabilities incurred by the employer as a result of his wrongful acts.<sup>57</sup> The employer, for his part, impliedly undertakes that he will not require the employee to do any unlawful act,<sup>58</sup> that he will provide safe premises,<sup>59</sup> that he will take reasonable care not to endanger the employee's health<sup>60</sup>; and that he will not without reasonable cause conduct himself so as to destroy or seriously damage the relationship of trust and confidence between himself and the employee.<sup>61</sup> Similarly, a surgeon carrying out an operation impliedly undertakes to exercise due care and skill, but he does not impliedly guarantee that the operation will achieve the desired result.<sup>62</sup>

Many terms which are implied in law have been put into statutory form. For example, a number of important terms implied into contracts for the sale of goods are stated in ss.12 to 15 of the Sale of Goods Act 1979,<sup>63</sup> and similar terms are implied by statute into hire-purchase agreements,<sup>64</sup> other contracts for the supply of goods<sup>65</sup> and contracts for <sup>50</sup> The only term which, in Little v Courage Ltd, the court was prepared to imply (or to read into the contract as a matter of construction) did not impose any obligation on either party: see below, p.811.

<sup>51</sup> See above, p.38.

<sup>52</sup> There is no scope for an implication of this kind where the contract does not fall within any "particular generic type": Clarion Ltd v National Provident Association [2000] 2 All E.R. 265 at 273; [2000] 1 W.L.R. 1888 at 1897.

<sup>53</sup> Peden, 117 L.Q.R. 190.

<sup>54</sup> Harmer v Cornelius (1858) 5 C.B.(N.S.) 236.

<sup>55</sup> Hivac Ltd v Park Royal Scientific Instruments Ltd [1946] Ch. 169; cf. Secretary of State v ASLEF (No.2) [1972] 2 Q.B. 455; Faccenda Chicken Ltd v Fowler [1987] Ch. 117.

<sup>56</sup> Wessex Dairies Ltd v Smith [1935] 2 K.B. 80; Sanders v Parry [1967] 1 W.L.R. 753.

<sup>57</sup> Lister v Romford Ice & Cold Storage Co Ltd [1957] A.C. 555; below, p.209.

<sup>58</sup> Gregory v Ford [1951] 1 All E.R. 121.

<sup>59</sup> Mathews v Kuwait Bechtel Corp [1959] 2 Q.B. 57; Webber, (1959) 22 M.L.R. 521; Jolowicz [1959] C.L.J. 163. See also Employers' Liability (Defective Equipment) Act 1969.

<sup>60</sup> Johnstone v Bloomsbury Area Health Authority [1992] 2 Q.B. 333.

<sup>61</sup> Malik v BCCI [1998] A.C. 20; for restrictions on the scope of this term, see University of Nottingham v Eyett [1999] I.C.R. 721.

<sup>62</sup> Eyre v Measday [1986] 1 All E.R. 488; Thake v Maurice [1986] Q.B. 644; below, p.781. In determining whether he has expressly given such a guarantee, the court will apply the objective test: above, p.191.

<sup>63</sup> As amended by Sale and Supply of Goods Act 1994, ss.1, 7 and Sch.2. For further amendments of some of the implied terms as to quality in the Sale of Goods Act 1979 and the Acts of 1973 and 1982 referred to in nn.64 and 65 below, see Sale and Supply of Goods to Consumer Regulations 2002, SI 2002/3045, regs. 3, 8 and 14.

<sup>64</sup> Supply of Goods (Implied Terms) Act 1973, ss.8–11, as substituted by Consumer Credit Act 1974, s.112 and Sch.4, para.35 and amended by Sale and Supply of Goods Act 1994, s.7 and Sch.2 and see above, n.63.

<sup>65</sup> Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982, ss.2–5, 7–10, as amended by Sale and Supply of Goods Act 1994, s.7 and Sch.2 and see above, n.63.

the supply of services.<sup>66</sup> The power to exclude these terms is now severely restricted by legislation.<sup>67</sup>

Detailed discussion of the terms implied by law into particular types of contracts will be found in specialist works on such contracts. But points of general interest arise out of the distinction between terms implied in fact and terms implied in law, and out of the legal nature of terms of the latter kind.

(1) Terms implied in law distinguished from terms implied in fact

The implication of a term in fact is usually based on the inference that the parties intended to incorporate the term into their contract<sup>68</sup>; but no such inference is necessary for the implication of a term in law.<sup>69</sup> This point can be illustrated in a number of ways.

(a) COMPLEXITY. Some statutory implied terms, such as the implied term as to fitness for a particular purpose set out in s.14(3) of the Sale of Goods Act 1979,<sup>70</sup> are extremely complex. If an officious bystander tried to read, and explain, this subsection to a chemist and an intending buyer of a hot-water bottle, he might be testily suppressed, but scarcely with a common “of course”. And the question whether any, and if so what, term is to be implied at common law often turns on distinctions which are so subtle that they can scarcely be based on the intention of the parties.<sup>71</sup>

(b) CITATION OF AUTHORITIES. The question whether any, and if so what, term should be implied in law is often decided exclusively by the citation of earlier cases.<sup>72</sup> This is done to determine an issue of “pure law”<sup>73</sup> and not to ascertain the intention of the parties.

(c) NEGATING THE IMPLICATION. A term implied in law can generally<sup>74</sup> be excluded by a definite contrary agreement,<sup>75</sup> but it is not necessarily excluded by circumstances which would prevent the implication of a term in fact. In Sterling Engineering Co Ltd v Patchett<sup>76</sup> it was held to be an implied term in a contract of service between an inventor and his employers that the inventor was trustee of his inventions and of the resulting patents for the employers. It was further held that this implied term could not be excluded by a mere “understanding” to the contrary, though obviously the term could not have been implied in fact if such an “understanding” had been proved. A fortiori, an

<sup>66</sup> Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982, ss.13–14.

<sup>67</sup> See below, p.251 et seq.

<sup>68</sup> This is true though the implication of even such terms may be a question of “law” in the sense of an inference based on primary facts: see O’Brien v Associated Fire Alarms [1968] 1 W.L.R. 1916; cf. below, p.836.

<sup>69</sup> For the distinction between the two processes, see The Dadomar General Tj Park [1986] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 68 at 70; The Choko Star [1990] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 516 at 526; McAuley v Bristol CC [1992] Q.B. 134 at 147; Ashmore v Corp of Lloyd’s (No.2) [1992] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 620 at 626; McClory v Post Office [1992] I.C.R. 758 at 764; Scully v Southern Health & Social Services Board [1992] 1 A.C. 294 at 307; The Star Texas [1993] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 445 at 451; Timeload Ltd v British Telecommunications plc [1995] E.M.L.R. 459 at 467; Ali Shipping Corp v Shipyard Trogir [1998] 2 All E.R. 136 at 146–147; Equitable Life Assurance Society v Hyman [2002] 1 A.C. 408 at 459.

<sup>70</sup> As amended: see above, p.206, n.63.

<sup>71</sup> See, e.g. the contrast between Young & Marten Ltd v McManus Childs Ltd [1969] 1 A.C. 454 and Gloucestershire CC v Richardson [1969] 1 A.C. 480.

<sup>72</sup> e.g. Yeoman Credit Ltd v Apps [1962] 2 Q.B. 508.

<sup>73</sup> Malik v BCCI [1998] A.C. 20 at 46.

<sup>74</sup> i.e. subject to exceptions such as those discussed at pp.251–252, 254–255 and 270–271, below.

<sup>75</sup> e.g. The Berge Sund [1993] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 453; The Spiros C [2000] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 319 at 335.

<sup>76</sup> [1955] A.C. 534.

express term will exclude a term implied in law (just as it will exclude one implied in fact<sup>77</sup>) if the two terms are in conflict with each other.<sup>78</sup> Whether there is such a conflict will depend on the construction of the express term.<sup>79</sup>

(2) Implied terms as legal duties

The implication of a term implied in law is simply a way of specifying some of the duties which prima facie arise out of certain types of contracts, or, as it has been put, “legal incidents of those . . . kinds of contractual relationship”.<sup>80</sup> It has indeed been said of such terms that “the test of implication is necessity” rather than “the imposition of a term”.<sup>81</sup> One possible view is that “necessity” here means the same thing as it does in relation to terms implied in fact: in other words, that it refers to the requirement that the implication must be necessary to give business efficacy to the contract.<sup>82</sup> But in the context of terms implied in fact the reason for this requirement is that it provides evidence of common intention: the parties are assumed to have agreed to a term, without which their contract would not work. In the context of terms implied in law the courts do not look for any such evidence of common intention; and it is submitted that, in such a context, the test of “necessity” (if appropriate at all<sup>83</sup>) has a different shade of meaning from that which it has in formulations of the business efficacy test.<sup>84</sup> The House of Lords has distinguished “between the search for an implied term necessary to give business efficacy to a particular contract and the search, based on wider considerations, for a term which the law will imply as a necessary incident of a definable category of contractual relationship”.<sup>85</sup> In accordance with this test, it has for example been held that it was an implied term in a contract of employment that the employer should inform the employees of steps which they were entitled to take to enhance their pension rights.<sup>86</sup> Such an implication was not necessary to give business efficacy to any individual employment contract, but it was a necessary aspect of employment relationships generally. “Necessity” in the sense in which the requirement is used in applying the “business efficacy” test similarly cannot justify the complex implied term of fitness of goods for a particular purpose, set out in s.14(3) of the Sale of Goods Act 1979: it is perfectly possible to imagine a workable contract of sale which did not contain such a term. In other contracts, moreover, terms have been implied in law in spite of the fact that the implication was not necessary to give business efficacy to the contract.<sup>87</sup> In many cases of this kind, the same process can with equal plausibility be described either as the

<sup>77</sup> See above, p.186, n.31.

<sup>78</sup> e.g. Eagle Star Life Assurance Co Ltd v Griggs and Miles [1998] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 256.

<sup>79</sup> Johnstone v Bloomsbury Health Authority [1992] 1 Q.B. 333.

<sup>80</sup> Mears v Safecar Securities Ltd [1983] Q.B. 54 at 78; Johnstone v Bloomsbury Health Authority [1992] Q.B. 333 at 343; The Kriti Rex [1996] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 171 at 191; Ali Shipping Corp v Shipyard Trogir [1998] 2 All E.R. 136 at 146 (“attaching as a matter of law”); Johnson v C.E.G.B. [2000] 1 A.C. 455 at 477–478.

<sup>81</sup> Tai Hing Cotton Mill Ltd v Liu Chong Hing Bank Ltd [1986] A.C. 80 at 104–105; Reid v Rush & Tompkins Group plc [1990] 1 W.L.R. 212 at 220; Barrett v Lounava (1982) Ltd [1990] 1 Q.B. 348 at 358–359; Ashmore v Corp of Lloyd’s (No.2), above, n.69. cf. Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995, s.2(1)(b), distinguishing covenants which are “implied” from those which are “imposed by law.”

<sup>82</sup> See above, p.201; Clarian Ltd v National Provident Association [2000] 1 W.L.R. 1888 at 1897.

<sup>83</sup> Timeload Ltd v British Telecommunications Ltd [1995] E.M.L.R. 459 at 467; cf. below, p.210 at n.6.

<sup>84</sup> cf. the reference to the two types of implication depending “in one form or another on a test of necessity” in Baker v Black Sea & Baltic General Insurance Co [1998] 1 W.L.R. 974 at 980 (italics supplied), where the alleged term was one “implied by law” (ibid. at 983).

<sup>85</sup> Scully v Southern Health & Social Services Board [1992] 1 A.C. 294 at 307; Malik v BCCI [1998] A.C. 20 at 45; cf. The Foresight Driller II [1995] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 251 at 266, treating “general principle” and “business efficacy” as separate grounds for implying a term.

<sup>86</sup> Scully’s case, above.

<sup>87</sup> See Liverpool City Council v Irwin [1977] A.C. 239 at 255, below p.210.

implication of a term in law or as the imposition of a legal duty. In one case concerning a landlord's duty to repair the outside of the premises the court indiscriminately refers to an "implied term" and to an "implied obligation"<sup>88</sup> which must be "imposed on"<sup>89</sup> the landlord. Where a term is imposed in law, the two processes are, as a practical matter, indistinguishable. It is, for example, commonly said that a landlord impliedly covenants that his tenant shall have quiet possession, and that the tenant is under an obligation not to commit waste.<sup>90</sup> One could just as well say that the landlord was under an obligation to let the tenant have quiet possession, and that the tenant impliedly covenanted not to commit waste. Again, it is said that if a party enters into an arrangement which can take effect only if a given state of circumstances continues, he impliedly promises not to put an end to it.<sup>91</sup> But in a case in which this rule was applied, Lord Atkin said: "Personally I should not so much base the law on an implied term, as on a positive rule of the law of contract that conduct of either promisor or promisee which can be said to amount to himself 'of his motion' bringing about the impossibility of performance is in itself a breach."<sup>92</sup>

This point would not be worth stressing if the true nature of the inquiry before the court were not sometimes obscured by the use of the expression "implied term" to refer to the imposition of a legal duty, and by the failure to distinguish between terms implied in fact and terms implied in law. In Lister v Romford Ice and Cold Storage Co Ltd<sup>93</sup> a lorry driver injured a third party by negligent driving in the course of his employment. The third party recovered damages from the employers, who obtained judgment for an indemnity from the driver on the ground that he had broken the implied term in the contract of employment to drive with proper care.<sup>94</sup> The driver in turn argued that the contract also contained an implied promise by the employers. This was formulated in various ways: as a promise to indemnify the driver against liability to third parties if the employers were insured, or if they were required by law to be insured, or if they ought as reasonable and prudent persons to have been insured. The House of Lords, by a majority, held that no such term could be implied. Some of the reasons given by the majority are reasons against the implication of a term in fact. The implication was not "precise and obvious"<sup>95</sup>; it was not necessary to give business efficacy to the contract<sup>96</sup>;

<sup>88</sup> Barrett v Lounava (1982) Ltd [1990] 1 Q.B. 348 at 359; cf. Imperial Group Pension Trust Ltd v Imperial Tobacco Ltd [1991] 1 W.L.R. 589, 597 ("I will call this implied term 'the implied obligation of good faith'"); Scully v Southern Health & Social Services Board [1992] 1 A.C. 294 at 307B ("terms which the law will imply"), 307D ("necessary . . . to imply an obligation").

<sup>89</sup> Barrett v Lounava (1982) Ltd [1990] 1 Q.B. 348 at 358; cf. Spring v Guardian Insurance plc [1995] 2 A.C. 296 at 353 ("imposing a duty").

<sup>90</sup> See Megarry and Wade, Law of Real Property (6th ed.), pp.702, 860, 881.

<sup>91</sup> Stirling v Maitland (1864) 5 B. & S. 840.

<sup>92</sup> Southern Foundries (1926) Ltd v Shirclaw [1940] A.C. 701 at 717; cf. The Dadomar General Tj Park [1986] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 68 at 70; Nisho Imai Petroleum Co Inc v Cargill International S.A [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 80; The Energy Progress [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 355; Spring v Guardian Insurance [1995] 2 A.C. 296 at 320; Grant v Cigman [1996] B.C.L.C. 24.

<sup>93</sup> [1957] A.C. 555.

<sup>94</sup> Employers' insurers have agreed not to make such claims against employees, so that the decision has little practical effect. See 272 L.T. 67 for a summary of the report of an Interdepartmental Committee set up in 1957. Semle, the validity of the alleged term would not be affected by Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977, s.4 (below, p.255) since that section does not seem to apply to implied promises to indemnify or to cases where the liability to indemnify arises from the negligence of the promisor himself. Nor would the term be affected by the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999, since these do not apply to contracts of employment: see below, p.278; nor does it seem that they apply to implied terms. For an unsuccessful attempt by a third party to claim the indemnity, see Morris v Ford Motor Co Ltd [1973] Q.B. 792.

<sup>95</sup> [1957] A.C. 555 at 574.

<sup>96</sup> ibid. at 583.

and it was not clear that both parties would have agreed to it.<sup>97</sup> But many terms implied in law would fail to pass these tests. Whether such terms should be implied is not a question of intention, but one of policy: “Should one imply [the alleged] term . . . ?”<sup>98</sup> In fact the House of Lords in Lister’s case was to a large extent concerned with considerations of policy. The argument that seems to have weighed most heavily with the majority was that it would be undesirable to allow a driver to recover an indemnity from his employer as he might then drive less carefully. Considerations of this kind always influence the implication of terms in law; but they have nothing to do with the intention of the parties, and hence with the implication of terms in fact.

The distinction between the two types of implication is clearly drawn in the later case of Reid v Rush & Tompkins Group plc,<sup>99</sup> where an employee was injured, while working abroad, as a result of the fault of a third party who could not be traced. He argued that his contract of employment contained an implied term obliging his employers to warn him to insure against such risks; but the argument was rejected on two separate grounds. First, no such term could be implied in fact since it would not have been agreed by the parties. And secondly, no such term should be implied in law by the court as the exact scope of such an implication raised issues of policy which could be resolved only by the legislature. It is, conversely, possible for both tests to support the conclusion that a term should be implied,<sup>1</sup> in which case the implication can be said to arise both in fact and in law.

There are, however, also cases in which, though no term can be implied in fact, it may be desirable to attach certain “legal incidents”<sup>2</sup> to a contract, or, in other words, to impose a legal duty. This point has sometimes been overlooked,<sup>3</sup> so that it was occasionally held that no terms should be implied in law merely because none could be implied in fact. But such reasoning would now be inconsistent with Liverpool City Council v Irwin.<sup>4</sup> The House of Lords there held that it was an implied term of a lease of a maisonette in a Council block that the landlord should take reasonable care to keep the common parts of the block in a reasonable state of repair. The term was clearly not implied in fact: the “official bystander” test was not satisfied<sup>5</sup>; nor was the implication necessary to give business efficacy to the contract.<sup>6</sup> The implication arose because the nature of the relationship made it desirable to place some obligation on the landlord as to the maintenance of the common parts of the premises. It amounted to the imposition of a legal duty, in spite of the fact that no term could be implied in fact.<sup>7</sup>

<sup>97</sup> ibid. at 578.

<sup>98</sup> Rockeagle Ltd v Alsop Wilkinson [1992] Ch. 47 at 51. Where this test as well as that for the implication of a term in fact is satisfied (as in St Albans City and District Council v International Computers Ltd [1996] 4 All E.R. 481) failure to distinguish between them causes no harm in the result.

<sup>99</sup> [1990] 1 W.L.R. 212; cf. Galaxy Energy International Ltd v Bayoil SA [2001] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 289 at 295, where an “implication of law” is supported by reference to the “official bystander” test, which is, strictly speaking, apposite only to the implication of a term in fact: above pp.201–202 and also at n.97 above.

<sup>1</sup> See The Island Archon [1994] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 227 at 237, where Evans L.J. regards the implication as justified “first by business efficacy” (i.e. in fact: above, p.201) and “secondly . . . [as] an implication of law.”

<sup>2</sup> Above, at p.208 at n.80.

<sup>3</sup> e.g. in Abbott v Sullivan [1952] 1 K.B. 189 where, it is submitted, a term might well have been implied in law (though on the principle stated at pp.204–205 above, none could be implied in fact). The Aramis [1989] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 213 is open to criticism on similar grounds: see Treitel, [1989] L.M.C.L.Q. 162. cf. John v Rees [1970] Ch. 345 where a term was implied in law.

<sup>4</sup> [1977] A.C. 239; MacIntyre [1977] C.L.J. 15; Duke of Westminster v Guild [1985] Q.B. 688 at 697–698; Sim v Rotherham MBC [1987] Ch. 216 at 245; cf. King v Northamptonshire DC, The Times, December 3, 1991 (“implied obligation”).

<sup>5</sup> At pp.283–290. This was also the position in Barrett v Lounava (1982) Ltd [1990] 1 Q.B. 348 (where a term was nevertheless implied in law).

<sup>6</sup> [1977] A.C. 239 at 255.

<sup>7</sup> cf. McAuley v Bristol CC [1992] Q.B. 134.

In deciding whether to imply a term in law, the courts are guided by general policy considerations affecting the type of contract in question<sup>8</sup>; and to this extent considerations of reasonableness and fairness may enter into the implication of such terms.<sup>9</sup> It has, indeed, been suggested that, even in this type of case, the test of implication is “necessity, not reasonableness”.<sup>10</sup> But it has been submitted above that terms are sometimes implied in law even though the test of “necessity” is not satisfied<sup>11</sup>; they are implied because the court considers that specified duties ought to be attached to the type of contractual relationship in question. Such decisions are based on considerations of “justice and policy”<sup>12</sup>; and the distinction between such considerations and “reasonableness” is at best an elusive one.<sup>13</sup> Nor, it is submitted, are decisions of such policy issues helped by distinguishing between what is reasonable and what is necessary; in the context of terms implied in law, that distinction appears to be no more than one of degree.<sup>14</sup> The principle that reasonableness is not of itself a ground for implying a term is entirely appropriate when the court is being asked to imply a term in fact into an individual contract,<sup>15</sup> but is, it is submitted, not one which should preclude the implication of terms in law into contracts of a particular type.

(3) Doubtful cases

(a) CLASSIFICATION PROBLEMS Sometimes it is not clear whether a particular term is implied in fact or in law. In The Moorcock<sup>16</sup> the defendants owned a wharf and made a contract to allow the claimants to unload their ship at the wharf. The ship was damaged by settling at low water on a ridge of hard ground. It was held that the defendants were liable for this damage as they were in breach of an implied term that they would take reasonable care to see that the berth was safe. The case is generally regarded as the leading authority on terms implied in fact, but some passages in the judgment also refer to terms implied in law. Lord Esher M.R. said that it must be implied that the defendants had “undertaken to see that the bottom of the river is reasonably fit, or at all events that they have taken reasonable care to find out that the bottom of the river is reasonably fit for the purpose. . . .”<sup>17</sup> Had these alternatives been put to the parties, they might well have disagreed. This suggests that the term was implied, not in fact, but in law. Again, in a famous passage, Bowen L.J. said: “An implied warranty, or, as it is called,

<sup>8</sup> The Star Texas [1993] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 445.

<sup>9</sup> cf. Re Charge Card Services Ltd [1989] Ch. 497 at 513 (“What is the fair term to imply”); Motis Exports Ltd v Dampskibsselskabet AF 1912 [1999] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 837 at 842, (“both reasonable and necessary”), affirmed without reference to this point: [2000] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 211; The Spiros C [2000] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 319 at 333 (using the same words); Galaxy Energy International Ltd v Bayoil SA [2001] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 289 at [27] (“necessary and reasonable”). The reference in these dicta seems to be to terms implied in law since reasonableness is neither a necessary or a sufficient condition for the implication of a term in fact: see above, p.203. The use in them of the word “necessary” gives rise, in the context of terms implied in law, to difficulties already mentioned: see p.208; see also text at n.6 above.

<sup>10</sup> Scallly v Southern Health and Social Services Board [1992] 1 A.C. 294 at 307; cf. The Choko Star [1990] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 516 at 526; Ashmore v Corporation of Lloyd’s [1992] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 620 at 630; The Star Texas [1993] 2 Lloyd Rep. 445 at 451; Spring v Guardian Insurance plc [1995] 2 A.C. 296 at 339, 354; The Island Archon [1994] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 227 at 237, above, p.208 at nn.81–82.

<sup>11</sup> See above, p.208.

<sup>12</sup> The Star Texas, see above, n.8 at 491.

<sup>13</sup> cf. Lord Radcliffe’s observation in Davis Construction Ltd v Fareham Urban DC [1956] A.C. 696 at 728 (more fully quoted at p.921 post) that “the fair and reasonable man . . . represents no more than an anthropomorphic conception of justice”).

<sup>14</sup> cf. above, p.208, n.85.

<sup>15</sup> See above, pp.203–204.

<sup>16</sup> (1889) 14 P.D. 64.

<sup>17</sup> ibid. at 67.

a covenant in law . . . is in all cases founded on the presumed intention of the parties and upon reason. . . . In business transactions such as this, what the law desires to effect by the implication is to give such business efficacy to the transaction as must have been intended at all events by both parties who are businessmen.”<sup>18</sup> The two italicised phrases show that Bowen L.J. was not exclusively concerned with the actual intention of the parties, on which terms implied in fact are based; and it does not seem that the “officious bystander” test<sup>19</sup> was satisfied. The most that could have been implied in fact was that the wharf-owner was to be under some obligation in relation to the safety of the berth; but the intention of the parties was not decisive in defining the precise extent of that obligation. To the extent that the implication was based on objective criteria of reasonableness, The Moorcock therefore resembles terms implied in law; but it differs from the category of terms implied in law discussed above, in that the implication related to a particular transaction rather than to a type of contract.

(b) IMPUTED INTENTION It has been submitted above that a term cannot be implied in fact where it is shown that one party would not have agreed to it<sup>20</sup>; and this submission appears to be supported by many cases in which the courts have indeed refused to imply terms on the ground that the officious bystander test had not been satisfied.<sup>21</sup> There is, however, also House of Lords authority that a term can be implied on the basis of an intention imputed to the parties.<sup>22</sup> Such an implication differs from an implication in fact as it “is not critically dependent on proof of an actual intention of the parties”,<sup>23</sup> while on the other hand the term is not one “implied by law in the sense of incidents impliedly annexed to particular forms of contract”.<sup>24</sup> A term of this kind was implied in Equitable Life Assurance Society v Hyman<sup>25</sup> where a provision incorporated in a life assurance policy gave the insurer a discretion, with regard to bonus declarations. This discretion was not fettered by the express term of the contract, but its exercise was nevertheless held to be restricted, so that it could not be so exercised as to conflict with the contractual rights of a group of policy holders. It is not entirely clear whether this conclusion is based on the process of implication or on that of construction or interpretation<sup>26</sup>; but the former seems to be the more probable view.<sup>27</sup> If so, the case appears to illustrate a type of implied term which does not fall precisely within the categories of terms implied in fact or in law; for this type of implication does not either give effect to the actual intention of the parties<sup>28</sup> or attach legal incidents to a particular type of contract.<sup>29</sup> The implication in the Equitable Life case was made as a matter of law but into an individual contract (it being irrelevant for the purposes of the reasoning in the

<sup>18</sup> (1889) 14 P.D. 64 at 68 (italics supplied).

<sup>19</sup> See above, p.202.

<sup>20</sup> See above, pp.204–205 at nn.39–43.

<sup>21</sup> See above, p.204 at nn.35–38.

<sup>22</sup> Equitable Life Assurance Society v Hyman [2002] 1 A.C. 408; cf. the reference to what parties “must have” intended and to their “presumed” intention: pp.202–203 at nn.20 and 23, p.204, n.34.

<sup>23</sup> ibid., at 459.

<sup>24</sup> ibid., at 458.

<sup>25</sup> See above, n.22.

<sup>26</sup> Lord Steyn, with whose speech all the other members of the House of Lords agreed, distinguished at 458 “between the processes of interpretation and implication”; at 459 he says that “the enquiry is entirely constructional in nature”.

<sup>27</sup> In the rest of the paragraph in which the words quoted at the end of n.26 occur, Lord Steyn he reverts to the language of implication. The exact difference between “interpretation” and a “constructional” inquiry is not made clear. For the distinction between “implication” and “interpretation”, see also Mousaka Inc v Golden Seagull Maritime Inc [2002] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 797 at [7].

<sup>28</sup> See above, p.202, n.21.

<sup>29</sup> See p.208, n.80 and n.24, above.

case that many policy holders were affected by the outcome). A term will be implied on the basis only if the implication is “strictly necessary”<sup>30</sup> or “essential to give effect to the reasonable expectations of the parties”<sup>31</sup>; and the “strict” necessity seems to override the fact that the implication corresponded with the actual expectations of only one of the parties. In this respect, the requirements of the present hybrid type of implied term are more stringent than those of the categories, discussed earlier in this Chapter,<sup>32</sup> of terms implied in fact and terms implied in law. The process of implication on the basis of imputed intention is to be “sparingly and cautiously used”<sup>33</sup> and the special circumstance calling for its use in the Equitable Life case seems to be that, without the implication, the insurers would have been able to exercise their discretion in conflict with the policyholder’s contractual rights against the Society. The decision gives no further guidance as to other circumstances in which terms will be implied on the basis of a merely imputed intention.<sup>34</sup>

3. Custom or Usage

We have seen that evidence of custom is admissible to add to, but not to contradict, a written contract.<sup>35</sup> Further, any contract (whether written or not) may be deemed to incorporate any relevant and notorious<sup>36</sup> custom of the market, trade or locality in which it is made, unless the custom is inconsistent with the express (or necessarily implied) terms, or with the nature, of the contract.<sup>37</sup> In cases of such inconsistency the custom is said to be “unreasonable”, and binds a party only if he knew of it. A custom which is “reasonable” binds both parties, whether they knew of it or not.<sup>38</sup> It is sometimes said that the incorporation of custom into a contract is based on the presumed intention of the parties,<sup>39</sup> but this is a somewhat unrealistic view. For the question whether a custom binds depends on whether it is “reasonable”, and this question can give rise to complex issues of law and fact on which the parties are unlikely to have a common (or any) view.<sup>40</sup>

The terms of collective agreements between trade unions and employers may be incorporated in the employment contracts of individual employees by express reference,<sup>41</sup> or by being acted on over a period of time.<sup>42</sup> Between employer and union, such agreements normally have no contractual force because they are not intended to be legally binding.<sup>43</sup> But when their terms are incorporated in individual contracts of

<sup>30</sup> [2002] 1 A.C. 408 at 459.

<sup>31</sup> ibid.

<sup>32</sup> See above, pp.202–203, 208.

<sup>33</sup> [2002] 1 A.C. 408 at 459.

<sup>34</sup> It is one of the paradoxes of the decision that its reasoning relied on the phrase “intention imputed” in Luxor (Eastbourne) Ltd v Cooper [1941] A.C. 108 at 137, where the result was to reject the implication precisely because it was not clear that both parties would have agreed to it: see above, p.204–205.

<sup>35</sup> See above, p.198.

<sup>36</sup> See Turner v Royal Bank of Scotland [1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 664, where this requirement was not satisfied.

<sup>37</sup> Such inconsistency was one ground why the alleged custom was not incorporated in the contract in Danowski v Henry Moore Foundation [1996] E.M.L.R. 364.

<sup>38</sup> Reynolds v Smith (1893) 9 T.L.R. 494 for other illustrations, see below, pp.711–712.

<sup>39</sup> e.g. in Produce Brokers Co Ltd v Olympia Oil & Cake Co Ltd [1916] 1 A.C. 314 at 324.

<sup>40</sup> cf. The Maira (No.3) [1990] 1 A.C. 637 at 681.

<sup>41</sup> Hooker v Lange, Bell & Co [1937] 4 L.J.N.C.C.R. 199; Camden Exhibition & Display Ltd v Lynott [1966] 1 Q.B. 555. Special requirements exist for the incorporation of “no strikes” clauses in collective agreements into employment contracts: Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992, s.180(1) and (2).

<sup>42</sup> NCB v Galley [1958] 1 W.L.R. 16.

<sup>43</sup> See above, p.168.

employment, those terms can, if so intended,<sup>44</sup> become legally binding between employer and employee.<sup>45</sup> It has, moreover, been suggested that the terms of collective agreements may be incorporated in contracts of employment as "crystallised custom".<sup>46</sup> The "custom" may be incorporated even in contracts with employees who are not members of the union which has negotiated the agreement,<sup>47</sup> so long as there is some evidence of intention to incorporate it.<sup>48</sup> Once the terms of the collective agreement have been incorporated in the contract of employment, the employee can enforce rights under that contract, even after the collective agreement itself has, as between the union and the employer, been brought to an end.<sup>49</sup>

Terms may also be implied by trade usage.<sup>50</sup> For example, where the owner of a crane hired it out to a contractor who was also engaged in the same business, it was held that the hirer was bound by the owner's usual terms though these were not actually communicated at the time of contracting.<sup>51</sup> They were, however, based on a model supplied by a trade association; and references in the judgment to the fact that they were reasonable and prevalent in the trade<sup>52</sup> suggest that they were incorporated on a principle similar to that which applies to customary terms.

---

<sup>44</sup> See NCB v NUM [1986] I.C.R. 736 where this intention was said to have been negatived. cf. Hulland v Saunders [1945] K.B. 78 (parties contracting out of collective agreement).

<sup>45</sup> Robertson v British Gas Corp [1983] I.C.R. 351; Marley v Forward Trust Group [1986] I.C.R. 891; Alexander v Standard Telephone and Cables Ltd [1990] I.C.R. 291 at 303 (where the intention was later found to have been negatived: see [1991] I.R.L.R. 286).

<sup>46</sup> Kahn-Freund in Flanders & Clegg (ed.), The System of Industrial Relations in Great Britain, Chap.2, p.58, and in Kahn-Freund (ed.), Labour Relations and the Law, pp.26–27; Wedderburn, The Worker and the Law (2nd ed.), pp.188–197.

<sup>47</sup> Gayler & Purvis, Industrial Law (2nd ed.), p.353.

<sup>48</sup> Young v Canadian Northern Ry [1931] A.C. 83.

<sup>49</sup> Gibbons v Associated British Ports Authority [1985] I.R.L.R. 376.

<sup>50</sup> See Baker v Black Sea & Baltic General Insurance Co Ltd [1998] 2 All E.R. 833 for proof of such usage.

<sup>51</sup> British Crane Hire Corp Ltd v Ipswich Plant Hire Ltd [1975] Q.B. 303; The Ulyanovsk [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 425 at 431; Harlow & Jones Ltd v American Express Bank Ltd [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 343. And see generally Hoggett, (1970) 33 M.L.R. 518.

<sup>52</sup> [1975] Q.B. 303 at 311, 313; contrast Salsi v Jetspeed [1977] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 57 (where there was no evidence of usage).

STANDARD FORM CONTRACTS<sup>1</sup>

CONTRACTUAL terms are often set out in standard forms which are used for all contracts of the same kind, and are only varied so far as the circumstances of each contract require. Such terms may be settled by a trade association for use by its members for contracting with each other or with members of the outside public. Standard contract forms are even provided by legislation<sup>2</sup> or under statutory authority.<sup>3</sup>

One object of these standard forms is to save time. The work of insurers, carriers and bankers, for example, would become impossibly complicated if all the terms of every contract they made had to be newly settled for each transaction.<sup>4</sup> Standard form contracts are also a device for allocating contractual risks: they can be used to determine in advance who is to bear the expense of insuring against those risks<sup>5</sup>; and they also facilitate the quotation of differential rates: e.g. where a carrier's form provides for goods to be carried either at his or at the customer's risk, and the charge is adjusted accordingly. Between businessmen bargaining at arm's length such uses of standard forms can be perfectly legitimate<sup>6</sup>; and this may be true even where the party to whom the standard terms are presented is a private consumer who has or is likely to have insured against the loss which has occurred.<sup>7</sup> But a less defensible object of the use of standard terms has been the exploitation or abuse of the superior bargaining power of commercial suppliers when contracting with such consumers. The supplier could draft the standard terms in ways highly favourable to himself, both by means of clauses which excluded or limited his liability for failure to perform or for defective performance, and by provisions which conferred rights on him under the contract. In cases concerning exemption clauses, the courts were to a considerable extent able to redress the balance in favour of the parties prejudicially affected by standard form contracts; but they were less inclined to do so where standard terms conferred rights on the supplier. In both fields, legislative intervention has become increasingly important. The most important legislative provisions are contained in the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977,<sup>8</sup> and in the

<sup>1</sup> Prausnitz, The Standardisation of Commercial Contracts; Coote, Exception Clauses; Yates and Hawkins, Standard Business Contracts; Lawson, Exclusion Clauses and Unfair Contract Terms (3rd ed.).

<sup>2</sup> e.g. Companies' Articles of Association: see Companies Table A–F Regulations (SI 1985/805) as amended by Companies Table A–F (Amendment) Regulations (SI 1985/1052) and by Companies Act (Electronic Communications) Order 2000 (SI 2000/3373).

<sup>3</sup> e.g. the Statutory Form of Conditions of Sale made by the Lord Chancellor under s.46 of the Law of Property Act 1925.

<sup>4</sup> cf. also Schmitthoff, 17 I.C.L.Q. 551.

<sup>5</sup> See The Maratha Envoy [1978] A.C. 1 at 8; Photo Production Ltd v Securicor Transport Ltd [1980] A.C. 827 at 843, 851; cf. A Schroeder Music Publishing Co Ltd v Macaulay [1974] 1 W.L.R. 308 at 316.

<sup>6</sup> See Marston Excelsior Ltd v Arbuckle Smith & Co Ltd [1971] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 70 at 95; Photo Production case above, at 851; Ailsa Craig Fishing Co Ltd v Malvern Fishing Co Ltd [1983] 1 W.L.R. 964 at 966. In some cases liability is even limited by statute: e.g. Carriage of Goods by Sea Act 1971, Sch. Art.IV. 5; Merchant Shipping Act 1995, ss.185, 186 and Sch.7.

<sup>7</sup> e.g. in the car-park cases, such as Hollins v J Davy Ltd [1963] 1 Q.B. 844. Contrast Mendelssohn v Normand Ltd [1970] 1 Q.B. 177 (where luggage stolen from a parked car did not belong to the owner of the car).

<sup>8</sup> See below, pp.246–266.

Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1994.<sup>9</sup> The 1977 Act deals almost<sup>10</sup> exclusively with exemption clauses; it makes some such clauses ineffective and subjects others to a requirement of reasonableness. The 1999 Regulations deal with standard terms in contracts between commercial sellers and suppliers on the one hand and consumers on the other, and provide that such terms do not bind the consumer if they are “unfair.” In a significant number of cases, however, standard form contracts are not affected by these legislative provisions<sup>11</sup> and continue to be governed by rules of common law. These rules therefore still call for discussion, even though many of the cases from which they are derived would now be differently decided under those legislative provisions,<sup>12</sup> or under other legislation to be described later in this Chapter.<sup>13</sup> For the most part, the common law rules are concerned with the efficacy of exemption clauses; but it will be necessary also to consider the common law approach to other types of standard terms.

SECTION 1. EXEMPTION CLAUSES AT COMMON LAW

A party who wishes to rely on a clause excluding or limiting liability<sup>14</sup> must show that the clause has been incorporated in the contract, and also that, on its true construction, it covers both the breach which has occurred and the resulting loss or damage. Even if he can show these things, he may still find that the clause is invalid or inoperative.

1. Incorporation in the Contract

An exemption clause can be incorporated in the contract by signature, by notice,<sup>15</sup> or by course of dealing.

(1) Signature

A person who signs a contractual document is bound by its terms even though he has not read them. In L'Estrange v F Graucob Ltd<sup>16</sup> the proprietress of a café bought an automatic cigarette vending machine. She signed, but did not read, a sales agreement which contained an exemption clause “in regrettably small print”.<sup>17</sup> It was held that she was bound by the clause, so that she could not rely on defects in the machine, either as a defence to a claim for part of the price, or as entitling her to damages. It would have

<sup>9</sup> See below, pp.266–283.

<sup>10</sup> The exception is s.4, which deals with indemnity clauses; for the close relationship of some such clauses with exemption clauses, see below, p.255.

<sup>11</sup> See below, pp.264–266, 277–280.

<sup>12</sup> See above at nn.8 and 9.

<sup>13</sup> See below, pp.283–285.

<sup>14</sup> For the distinction between these and certain other kinds of clauses, see below, pp.237–238.

<sup>15</sup> These are alternative ways of incorporating the clause so that the rules as to incorporation by notice do not apply to terms set out in signed contracts: HIH Casualty & General Insurance Ltd v New Hampshire Insurance Co [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 39; [2001] EWCA Civ 735 at [209].

<sup>16</sup> [1934] 2 K.B. 394; Levison v Patent Steam Cleaning Co Ltd [1978] Q.B. 69; The Polyduke [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 211; Singer (UK) Ltd v Tees & Hartlepool Port Authority [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 164 at 166; for criticism, see McCutcheon v David MacBrayne Ltd [1964] 1 W.L.R. 125 at 133; cf. Spencer [1973] C.L.J. 104; Samek, 52 Can.Bar Rev. 351.

<sup>17</sup> [1934] 2 K.B. 394 at 405. For the relationship between the rule in this case and Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999, Sch.2, para.1(i), see below pp.276–277; on the facts of L'Estrange v F Graucob Ltd, the Regulations would not apply as the buyer was not a “consumer.” see below, p.269.

made no difference had she been a foreigner who could not read English.<sup>18</sup> A party is, however, bound by terms of which he was unaware only if the document which he has signed was one which could reasonably have been expected to contain contractual terms. Where, for example, a hirer of machinery together with a driver had signed weekly time-sheets, it was held that he was not bound by terms printed on these sheets since their purpose was merely to record the hours worked and not to vary the terms of the earlier oral contract of hire.<sup>19</sup> It has been further suggested that “in some extreme circumstances even signature might not be enough”, so that a term which was “particularly onerous or unusual”<sup>20</sup> would not be incorporated unless, in addition to the signature, steps were taken to draw the attention of the signer<sup>21</sup> to such a term.

(2) Notice<sup>22</sup>

If the exemption clause is set out, or referred to,<sup>23</sup> in a document which is simply handed by one party to the other, or displayed where the contract is made, it will be incorporated in the contract only if the latter party either knew that the document contained (or was likely to contain) such a clause,<sup>24</sup> or if reasonable notice of its existence is given to that party. Whether such notice has been given depends on the following factors.

(a) NATURE OF THE DOCUMENT. An exemption clause is not incorporated in the contract if the document in which it is set out (or referred to) is not intended to have contractual force: for example, if the document is a mere receipt for payment.<sup>25</sup> On the other hand, the mere fact that a document is called a “receipt” will not prevent it from having contracted effect.<sup>26</sup> A document will have such effect if the party to whom it was handed knew that it was intended to be a contractual document or if it was handed to him in such circumstances as to give him reasonable notice of the fact that it contained conditions.<sup>27</sup> It will also be contractual if it is obvious to a reasonable person that it must have been intended to have this effect. This will be the case if the document is of a kind that generally contains contractual terms.<sup>28</sup> Whether a document falls into this class depends on current commercial practice, which may vary from time to time.<sup>29</sup>

(b) DEGREE OF NOTICE. The party relying on the exemption clause need not show that he actually brought it to the notice of the other party, but only that he took reasonable steps to do so. The test is whether the former party took such steps<sup>30</sup>—not whether the latter should, in the exercise of reasonable caution, have discovered or read

<sup>18</sup> The Luna [1920] p. 22; cf. Barclays Bank plc v Schwartz, The Times, August 2, 1995. The signer might be able to rely on the doctrine of non est factum (below, p.326), but if this applied there would be no contract at all.

<sup>19</sup> Grogan v Robin Meredith Plant Hire, The Times, February 20, 1996; cf. below, at n.25.

<sup>20</sup> Ocean Chemical Transport Inc v Exnor Craggs Ltd [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 446 at 454.

<sup>21</sup> i.e., in accordance with the requirements stated under heading (ii) on p.219, below.

<sup>22</sup> Clarke [1976] C.L.J. 451.

<sup>23</sup> For the sufficiency of incorporation by reference, see Circle Freight International Ltd v Mideast Gulf Exports [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 427; cf. above, p.191.

<sup>24</sup> Lacey's Footwear (Wholesale) Ltd v Bowler Insurance Ltd [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 369 at 378.

<sup>25</sup> Chapellon v Barry Urban D.C. [1940] 1 K.B. 532; cf. Henson v London & North Eastern Ry [1946] 1 All E.R. 653; The Eagle [1977] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 70; Clarke [1978] C.L.J. 22.

<sup>26</sup> Harling v Eddy [1951] 2 K.B. 739 at 746; Parker v South Eastern Ry (1877) 2 C.P.D. 416; The Polyduke [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 211.

<sup>27</sup> Watkins v Rymill (1883) 10 Q.B.D. 178.

<sup>28</sup> Nunan v Southern Ry [1923] 2 K.B. 703 at 707; Thompson v London, Midland & Scottish Ry [1930] 1 K.B. 41 at 46.

<sup>29</sup> For changing views on the status of railway cloakroom tickets, contrast Parker v South Eastern Ry, above, n.26, at 424 with Alexander v Railway Executive [1951] 2 K.B. 882 at 886.

<sup>30</sup> Parker v SE Ry (1877) 2 C.P.D. 416 at 424; cf. Burnett v Westminster Bank Ltd [1966] 1 Q.B. 742.

the clause.<sup>31</sup> Where the clause is printed on a ticket, it is not enough to show that the party to whom it was handed knew that there was writing on the ticket,<sup>32</sup> for the writing might not have been intended to have contractual effect. Nor is one party's reference in a telephone conversation to his own standard terms sufficient notice of those terms if the other party has no knowledge or means of knowledge of them.<sup>33</sup> The question whether adequate notice has been given turns principally on two factors: the steps taken to give notice and the nature of the exempting conditions.

(i) Steps taken to give notice. Where the notice is contained in a contractual document it is normally sufficient for the exempting condition to be prominently set out or referred to on the face of the document. In Thompson v LM & S Ry<sup>34</sup> the claimant asked her niece to buy a railway excursion ticket for her. The ticket (which cost 2s. 7d.) had on its face the words "see back" and on the back a statement that it was issued subject to the conditions set out in the company's time-tables,<sup>35</sup> which could be bought for 6d. These conditions included an exemption clause. The claimant could not read the words on the ticket as she was illiterate; and the jury found that the defendants had not taken reasonable steps to bring the conditions to the claimant's notice. But the Court of Appeal held that there was no evidence to support this finding as the notice was clear and as the ticket was a common form contractual document. Hence the exemption clause was held to be incorporated in the contract. The case is an extreme one since the time-table cost nearly a fifth of the fare paid by the claimant and was evidently a volume of some size, the exemption clause being set out on its 552nd page.<sup>36</sup> The likelihood of its being bought (let alone read) by an excursion passenger was, to say the least, remote; and it seems probable that the steps taken to incorporate the clause would not now be regarded as sufficient.<sup>37</sup> The principle that such a clause can be incorporated by reference<sup>38</sup> nevertheless seems to be a sound one. Many common contractual documents would become impossibly bulky if that principle were to be rejected. In a more recent case,<sup>39</sup> the rules of a newspaper "scratch card" competition were referred to on the card and had been set out in copies of the paper. It was held that they were incorporated in the contract between the owners of the paper and a competitor, even though they had not been read by the competitor.

On the other hand, the clause is unlikely to be incorporated if there are no words on the face of the document drawing attention to it,<sup>40</sup> or if words on the front of the document refer to terms on the back but the back is blank (only the front having been transmitted by fax),<sup>41</sup> or if the words are made illegible by a date stamp,<sup>42</sup> or if the exemption clause is buried in a mass of advertisements.<sup>43</sup> It is not necessary, as a matter

<sup>31</sup> Parker v SE Ry (1877) 2 C.P.D. 416; cf. Birch v Thomas [1972] 1 W.L.R. 294, a case that would now fall within Road Traffic Act 1988, s.149; cf. also ibid. s.150.

<sup>32</sup> This was the majority view in Parker v SE Ry, above. Bramwell L.J. dissented on this point.

<sup>33</sup> Jaycar Impex Ltd v Toaken Group Ltd [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 437.

<sup>34</sup> [1930] 1 K.B. 41; cf. Hood v Anchor Line [1918] A.C. 837.

<sup>35</sup> For the effect on such a term of Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999, Sch.2, para.1(i), see below, pp.276–277.

<sup>36</sup> [1930] 1 K.B. 41 at 46.

<sup>37</sup> cf. Mikhail Lermontov [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 579 at 594, affirmed [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 155 though reversed on other grounds sub nom Baltic Shipping Co v Dillon (1993) 176 C.L.R. 344.

<sup>38</sup> cf. Smith v South Wales Switchgear Ltd [1978] 1 W.L.R. 165 (indemnity clause).

<sup>39</sup> O'Brien v MGN Ltd, The Times, August 8, 2001, [2001] EWCA Civ 1279; [2002] C.L.C. 33.

<sup>40</sup> Henderson v Stevenson (1875) L.R. 2 Sc. & Div. 470 (where dicta that the ticket was not a contractual document are not ratio: Harris v GW Ry (1876) 1 Q.B.D. 515 at 532); Richardson, Spence & Co v Rowntree [1894] A.C. 217.

<sup>41</sup> Poseidon Freight Forwarding Co Ltd v Davies Turner Southern Ltd [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 388.

<sup>42</sup> Sugar v London, Midland & Scottish Ry [1941] 1 All E.R. 172.

<sup>43</sup> Stephen v International Sleeping Car Co Ltd (1903) 19 T.L.R. 620.

of law, to print words such as “see back” or “see inside” on the face of the document.<sup>44</sup>

In Thompson's case, the illiteracy of the claimant was treated as immaterial; but the position would probably be different where the party relying on the clause knew or should have known of the other party's disability. In an earlier case<sup>45</sup> some reliance was placed on the fact that the other party was a steerage passenger and so could not have been expected to read clauses in small print. Extra steps may have to be taken to bring the notice home to a person suffering from a known disability: for example translating it to a party who is known not to understand the language in which it is expressed, if such a step is reasonably practicable.<sup>46</sup> A person trying to incorporate the terms of a document should, however, beware of translating only part of it; for by doing this he may suggest that the rest is of no importance and so be unable to rely on it.<sup>47</sup>

(ii) Nature of the clause. The more unusual or unexpected a particular term is, the higher will be the degree of notice required to incorporate it. If the clause is of such a nature that the party adversely affected would not normally expect it, then the other party will not be able to incorporate it by simply handing over or displaying a document containing the clause. He must go further and “make it conspicuous”<sup>48</sup> or take other special steps to draw attention to it. For example, a person who drives his car into a car-park might expect to find in his contract a clause excluding the proprietor's liability for loss of or damage to the car. But in Thornton v Shoe Lane Parking Ltd<sup>49</sup> the car-park ticket referred to a condition purporting to exclude liability for personal injury.<sup>50</sup> It was held that adequate notice of this condition had not been given, even though the steps taken by the proprietor might have been sufficient to incorporate the more usual clauses excluding or limiting liability for property damage. As Denning L.J. had said in an earlier case: “Some clauses I have seen would need to be printed in red ink on the face of the document with a red hand pointing to it before the notice could be held to be sufficient.”<sup>51</sup>

(c) TIME OF NOTICE. The steps required to give notice of an exemption clause must be taken before or at the time of contracting. In Olley v Marlborough Court<sup>52</sup> the claimant booked a room in the defendants' hotel. She later saw a notice in her bedroom exempting the defendants from liability for articles lost or stolen unless handed to the management for safe custody. It was held that, as the contract had been made at the reception desk when the defendants agreed to accept the claimant as a guest and as the notice in the

<sup>44</sup> Burke v South Eastern Ry (1879) 5 C.P.D. 1.

<sup>45</sup> Richardson, Spence & Co v Rowntree [1894] A.C. 217.

<sup>46</sup> Geier v Kujawa, Weston & Warne Bros Transport [1970] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 364; the notice in that case would now be invalid under Road Traffic Act 1988, s.149.

<sup>47</sup> H Glynn (Covent Garden) Ltd v Wittleder [1959] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 409.

<sup>48</sup> Crooks v Allen (1870) 5 Q.B.D. 38 at 40.

<sup>49</sup> [1971] 2 Q.B. 163; cf. The Eagle [1977] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 70; Interfoto Picture Library Ltd v Stiletto Visual Programmes Ltd [1989] Q.B. 433, discussed at p.245, below; Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc v Maclain Watson & Co Ltd [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 570 at 612; Villela v MFI Furniture Centres Ltd [1999] I.R.L.R. 468 at 473; Chandler and Holland, 104 L.Q.R. 359; McLean, [1988] C.L.J. 172; Macdonald [1988] J.B.L. 375 and 8 Legal Studies 48; Swanton, 1 J.C.L. 223.

<sup>50</sup> Where the injury is caused by negligence such a provision is now ineffective: below, pp.249, 274.

<sup>51</sup> J Spurling Ltd v Bradshaw [1956] 1 W.L.R. 461 at 466. Contrast Ocean Chemical Transport Inc v Exnor Cragg Ltd [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 446 at 454 (“neither onerous nor unusual”); O'Brien v MGN Ltd [2001] F.W.C.A. Civ 1279; [2002] C.L.C. 33 at [21] (term not “onerous or outlandish”).

<sup>52</sup> [1949] 1 K.B. 532; cf. The Eagle [1977] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 70; The Dragon [1979] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 257, affirmed without reference to this point [1981] 1 W.L.R. 120; Jayaar Impex Ltd v Toaken Group Ltd [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 437; Oceanic Sun Line Special Shipping Co v Fay (1988) 165 C.L.R. 197. And cf., in the context of a hospital “refusal” form, Re T [1993] Fam. 95.

bedroom could not have been seen by the claimant until later, its terms were not incorporated in the contract.

(3) Course of dealing

Parties may for some time have dealt with each other on terms that exempted one of them from liability and that were usually incorporated by signature or notice. On the occasion in question, however, the usual document may by some oversight not have been handed over or signed at the time of contracting; and the question then arises whether the usual exemption clause is nevertheless incorporated in that particular transaction. A negative answer to this question was suggested by Lord Devlin in McCutcheon v David MacBrayne Ltd where he said: "Previous dealings are relevant only if they prove knowledge of the terms, actual and not constructive, and consent to them."<sup>53</sup> But this view is inconsistent with at least one earlier case<sup>54</sup>; and the House of Lords has held that if there has been a long consistent course of dealing on terms incorporating an exemption clause, then those terms may apply to a particular transaction even though in relation to it the usual steps to incorporate the clause have not been taken.<sup>55</sup> Of course the terms will not apply if the transaction in question was not part of a consistent course of dealings<sup>56</sup>; if the transactions were spread over a long period of time and their number was so small that they could not be said to give rise to a course of dealing<sup>57</sup>; if the steps necessary to incorporate the clause had never been taken at any stage of the dealings between the parties<sup>58</sup>; or if the terms of each transaction in the series had been separately negotiated and expressly agreed between the parties.<sup>59</sup>

The fact that there has been a long course of dealing may also be relevant to the degree of notice required when the party claiming the benefit of a clause seeks to alter it to his own advantage. As the other party is reasonably entitled to assume that the course of dealing is continuing on the accustomed terms, it seems that special steps would have to be taken to draw his attention to any such alteration.<sup>60</sup>

The course of dealing referred to in the present discussion is one between the parties to the contract.<sup>61</sup> A term may also be implied into a contract because of a general course

<sup>53</sup> [1964] 1 W.L.R. 125 at 134 (italics supplied).

<sup>54</sup> J Spurling Ltd v Bradshaw [1956] 1 W.L.R. 461.

<sup>55</sup> Hardwick Game Farm v Suffolk Agricultural, etc. Association [1969] 2 A.C. 31 at 90, 104, 105, 113, 130; and see Britain & Overseas Trading (Bristles) v Brookes Wharf and Bull Wharf [1967] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 51; SIAT di dal Ferro v Tradax Overseas S.A [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 470, affirmed [1980] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 53; George Mitchell (Chesterhall) Ltd v Finney Lock Seeds Ltd [1983] Q.B. 284 at 295, affirmed without reference to this point [1983] 2 A.C. 803; Circle Freight International Ltd v Mideast & Gulf Exports Ltd [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 427.

<sup>56</sup> McCutcheon v David MacBrayne Ltd, above, n.53, can be explained on the ground that the parties contracted sometimes on one set of terms and sometimes on another. cf. also Burnett v Westminster Bank Ltd [1966] 1 Q.B. 742, and Mendelsohn v Normand Ltd [1970] 1 Q.B. 177.

<sup>57</sup> On this question, contrast Hollier v Rambler Motors (A.M.C.) Ltd [1972] 2 Q.B. 71 (three or four transactions in five years not sufficient) and Metaalhandel J.A. Magnum BV v Ardfields Transport Ltd [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 197 at 203 ("isolated affairs") with The Havprins [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 356 at 362 (three transactions in five years sufficient, though incorporation was "not by course of dealing alone") and with the Hardwick Game Farm case, above, n.55, (three or four contracts a month for three years held to be sufficient).

<sup>58</sup> Smith v Taylor [1966] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 231.

<sup>59</sup> Johnson Matthey Bankers Ltd v State Trading Corp of India [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 427 at 433.

<sup>60</sup> See Pancommence Co SA v Veecheema BV [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 304 at 305 ("in bold type"); and contrast Burnett v Westminster Bank Ltd [1966] 1 Q.B. 742 with Re Bond Worth Ltd [1980] Ch. 228. In the last two cases the actual issue was as to the variation of a continuing contract: sufficient notice had been given in the first, but not in the second case.

<sup>61</sup> Or between one of them and a group of companies to which the other belongs, as in the SIAT case, above, n.55, and in The Raphael [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 42.

of dealing amounting to a trade custom or usage.<sup>62</sup> Such an implication can arise even though the parties to the particular contract in question have not previously dealt with each other. It seems that exemption clauses, no less than other types of terms, can be incorporated in this way.

2. Construction

Under this heading we shall first discuss the general principle that contract terms are construed contra proferentem; we shall then consider two special applications of that principle to cases in which a party relies on an exemption clause to protect him from liability for negligence or for certain particularly serious breaches.

(1) Contra proferentem rule

In relation to exemption clauses, the principle of construction contra proferentem means that such a clause is construed strictly against the party at whose instigation it was included in the contract and who now seeks to rely on it.<sup>63</sup> Thus a provision that a seller gives “no warranty, express or implied” does not protect him from liability for breach of condition<sup>64</sup>; a clause protecting him from liability for breach of implied conditions and warranties does not cover breach of an express term of the contract<sup>65</sup>; a provision in a hire-purchase agreement that “no warranty, condition or description or representation is given” does not exclude liability for breach of a collateral undertaking previously given,<sup>66</sup> and a clause excluding the right to rescind a contract does not affect the right to damages<sup>67</sup> (nor conversely).<sup>68</sup>

Ambiguous words in exemption clauses are construed in the way least favourable to the party relying on them.<sup>69</sup> In Houghton v Trafalgar Insurance<sup>70</sup> a five-seater car was involved in an accident while carrying six people. The driver's insurance policy exempted the insurers from liability for damage caused “whilst the car is carrying any load in excess of that for which it was constructed”. The insurers were held liable as the clause did not extend to cases where the car was carrying too many passengers. Similarly, in Beck & Co v Szymanowski<sup>71</sup> a contract for the sale of cotton provided that “The goods delivered shall be deemed to be in all respects in accordance with the contract”, unless <sup>62</sup> British Crane Hire Corp Ltd v Ipswich Plant Hire Ltd [1975] Q.B. 303; above, p.214. The dispute concerned an indemnity clause, but the principle seems equally applicable to exemption clauses: cf. Smith v South Wales Switchgear Ltd [1978] 1 W.L.R. 165; Victoria Fur Traders v Roadline UK Ltd [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 571.

<sup>63</sup> In the present context, this formulation necessarily refers to the same party, even though in other contexts this may not be the case: see Youell v Bland Welch & Co Ltd [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 127 at 134.

<sup>64</sup> Wallis, Son & Wells v Pratt & Haynes [1911] A.C. 394; Harling v Eddy [1951] 2 K.B. 739; for the distinction between conditions and warranties, see below, pp.788 et seq.; for statutory restrictions on exemption clauses in contracts for the sale of goods, see below, pp.250–251; 254–255.

<sup>65</sup> Andrews Bros (Bournemouth) Ltd v Singer & Co Ltd [1934] 1 K.B. 17; cf. Laceys Footwear (Wholesale) Ltd v Bowler International [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 369 at 379; contrast British Fermentation Products Ltd v Compair Reavell Ltd [1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 389, where other words in a clause referring to implied terms extended its scope to express terms.

<sup>66</sup> Webster v Higgins [1948] 2 All E.R. 127; cf. J Evans & Son (Portsmouth) Ltd v Andrea Merzario Ltd [1976] 1 W.L.R. 1078, 1084; Thomas Witter Ltd v BTP Industries Ltd [1996] 2 All E.R. 573 at 595–597.

<sup>67</sup> Toomey v Eagle Star Insurance Co [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 89.

<sup>68</sup> See below, p.238.

<sup>69</sup> cf. Morris v C W Martin & Sons Ltd [1966] 1 Q.B. 716; below, p.641, Ackerman v Protius Services [1988] 2 EGLR 259. Where an exemption clause is subject to the statutory reasonableness test, it may fail to satisfy that test on account of its obscurity and be ineffective on that ground: see below, p.259.

<sup>70</sup> [1954] 1 Q.B. 247.

<sup>71</sup> [1924] A.C. 43.

the buyer gave notice of a complaint within 14 days of the arrival of the goods. This clause did not prevent the buyers from claiming damages for short delivery: "The damages are claimed not in respect of goods delivered but in respect of goods which were not delivered."<sup>72</sup>

Although the contra proferentem rule applies to all exemption clauses, the courts do not apply it with the same rigour to clauses which merely limit liability as they do to those which purport totally to exclude it<sup>73</sup>; for while it is thought to be "inherently improbable" that the injured party will agree to a total exclusion of the other party's liability "there is no such high degree of improbability that he would agree to a limitation of . . . liability."<sup>74</sup>

The contra proferentem rule is intended to protect the injured party but it may sometimes paradoxically have the opposite effect. For example, where an exemption clause is subject to a legislative requirement of reasonableness, it may, on a narrow construction of its words, satisfy that requirement while, on a wider construction, it would not have done so. If the narrow construction suffices to protect the alleged wrongdoer, it will be in his interest to rely on that construction to prevent the clause from being struck down for unreasonableness.<sup>75</sup>

(2) Negligence

Legislation has severely restricted the effectiveness of clauses purporting to exempt a party from liability for negligence<sup>76</sup>; and the negligence of the party in breach may also support the conclusion that the statutory requirement of reasonableness has not been satisfied.<sup>77</sup> But even where it remains possible to exclude liability for negligence,<sup>78</sup> "clear words" must be used for this purpose, since the courts regard it as "inherently improbable that one party to a contract should intend to absolve the other party from the consequence of his own negligence".<sup>79</sup> The requirement is most obviously satisfied where the exemption clause expressly refers to negligence: i.e. uses the word "negligence"<sup>80</sup> or some synonym for it.<sup>81</sup> It may be satisfied, even though there is no such

<sup>72</sup> ibid. at 50, cf. Connaught Restaurants Ltd v Indoor Leisure Ltd [1994] 1 W.L.R. 501.

<sup>73</sup> Ailsa Craig Fishing Co Ltd v Malvern Fishing Co [1983] W.L.R. 964; Palmer, 45 M.L.R. 327; George Mitchell (Chesterhall) Ltd v Finney Lock Seeds Ltd [1983] 2 A.C. 803 at 814; Ocean Chemical Transport Inc v Exnor Cragg Ltd [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 446 at 452; BHP Petroleum Ltd v British Steel plc [2000] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 133 at 149; ibid. at 143 is more sceptical.

<sup>74</sup> Ailsa Craig case, above, at 970.

<sup>75</sup> As in Watford Electronics Ltd v Sanderson Ltd [2001] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 696, [2001] EWCA Civ 317, below. See also below p.284, n.22 for another illustration of the same paradox; for a legislative provision which is designed to prevent it from arising, see Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999 (SI 1999/2083), reg.7(2), below, p.280, n.86.

<sup>76</sup> Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977, s.2; below, pp.250, 252; cf. Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999, Sch.2, para.1(a) and (b).

<sup>77</sup> George Mitchell (Chesterhall) Ltd v Finney Lock Seeds Ltd [1983] 2 A.C. 803; below, p.228.

<sup>78</sup> As it is at common law: cf. Armitage v Nurse [1997] 2 All E.R. 705 at 712.

<sup>79</sup> Gillespie Bros Ltd v Roy Bowles Transport Ltd [1973] Q.B. 400 at 419; cf. Sonat Offshore SA v Amerada Hess Development Ltd [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 145 at 157. This rule of construction has been said not to apply to a clause excluding the right to avoid (i.e. to rescind) a contract for misrepresentation, as opposed to one excluding the right to damages: HIH Casualty & General Insurance v Chase Manhattan Bank [2001] EWCA Civ 125; [2001] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 483 at [114]; such a right to rescind is equally available for innocent and for negligent misrepresentation.

<sup>80</sup> e.g. Spriggs v Sotheby Parke Bernet & Co [1986] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 487; Henderson v Merrett Syndicates Ltd [1995] 2 A.C. 145 at 183; Monarch Airlines Ltd v Luton Airport [1998] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 403.

<sup>81</sup> Canada SS Lines Ltd v The King [1952] A.C. 192 at 208.

express reference to negligence, if the words are nevertheless wide enough to cover negligence: e.g. if the clause exempts a party from "all liability whatsoever".<sup>82</sup> But whether such general words actually are effective to exclude liability for negligence depends on a further distinction: namely that between cases in which, but for the clause, the party relying on it may be liable irrespective of negligence, and those in which his only possible liability is for negligence.<sup>83</sup>

(a) PARTY LIABLE IRRESPECTIVE OF NEGLIGENCE. If there is a realistic possibility (as opposed to a merely fanciful one<sup>84</sup>) that a party can be made liable irrespective of negligence, an exemption clause in general terms will not normally be construed so as to cover liability for negligence.<sup>85</sup> For example, a common carrier of goods is strictly liable if they are lost or damaged. A clause exempting him from liability "for loss or damage"<sup>86</sup> would be construed to refer to his strict liability only. The position is the same where it is doubtful in law whether the party relying on the clause is liable irrespective of negligence: here again a clause which does not refer to negligence will not prima facie be construed to exempt him from liability for negligence.<sup>87</sup> But in all the situations just described it is not absolutely necessary to refer expressly to negligence; for the rule is one of construction only and "should not be applied rigidly or mechanically so as to defeat [the] intentions [of the parties]".<sup>88</sup> Thus in one case<sup>89</sup> a charterparty provided that the shipowners were to be liable only for negligent stowage, want of personal diligence in making the ship seaworthy, and personal default. It was held that by accepting liability only for these three causes the shipowners had excluded liability for negligence of the crew resulting in the stranding of the ship. In another case<sup>90</sup> a clause excluded liability for loss or damage "however caused which can be covered by insurance". This was similarly held to cover negligence even though the party relying on the clause could have been liable (as a common carrier) irrespective of negligence.

The fact that the clause only limits (and does not wholly exclude) liability is also relevant to the issue of construction. Thus a seller is strictly liable for defects in goods; so that prima facie general words would not exclude liability for defects due to his negligence. But where a seller of seeds undertook to replace defective seeds or to refund the price paid for them, it was held that a clause excluding "all [further] liability" did, as a matter of construction, apply where the seller was negligent in supplying seeds

<sup>82</sup> Canada SS Lines Ltd v The King, above, at 208; such general words do not amount to an express reference to negligence: see Smith v South Wales Switchgear Ltd [1978] W.L.R. 165 at 173 and Smith v UMB Chrysler (Scotland) 1978 S.C.(H.L.) 1 at 12, disapproving dicta in Gillespie v Roy Bowles Transport Ltd [1973] Q.B. 400 at 420, 421; The Raphael [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 42.

<sup>83</sup> Canada SS Lines Ltd v The King [1952] A.C. 192 at 208.

<sup>84</sup> See Hair & Skin Trading Co Ltd v Norman Airfreight Carriers Ltd [1974] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 442; Gallagher v BRS [1974] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 440 at 448; Smith v South Wales Switchgear Ltd [1978] 1 W.L.R. 165 at 178; The Raphael, above, n.82; Cert plc v George Hammond plc [1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 976 at 988.

<sup>85</sup> Canada SS Lines Ltd v The King [1952] A.C. 192, esp. at 208; White v J Warwick & Co Ltd [1953] 1 W.L.R. 1285; Gower, 17 M.L.R. 155; Toomey v Eagle Star Insurance Co [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 89. Cf. EE Caledonia Ltd v Orbit Valve Co Europe [1994] 1 W.L.R. 221; The Fiona [1994] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 506; Shell Chemical UK Ltd v P & O Tankers Ltd [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 297 (indemnity clause).

<sup>86</sup> See Rutter v Palmer [1922] 2 K.B. 87; cf. Dorset CC v Southern Felt Roofing Co (1990) 9 Tr.L.R. 96; The Fantasy [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 391, affirmed without reference to this point [1992] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 235.

<sup>87</sup> The Emmanuel C [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 310; The Oceanic Amity [1984] 2 All E.R. 140 at 151.

<sup>88</sup> The Golden Leader [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 573 at 574; cf. HH Casualty & General Insurance v Chase Manhattan Bank [2001] EWCA Civ 735; [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 39 at [137].

<sup>89</sup> The Golden Leader, above.

<sup>90</sup> Joseph Travers & Sons Ltd v Cooper [1915] K.B. 73; cf. The Danah [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 351 at 354; and see A E Farr Ltd v Admiralty [1953] 1 W.L.R. 965.

which were defective; and one reason given for this conclusion was that the rules limiting the scope of exemption clauses in cases of negligent breach “cannot be applied in their full rigour to limitation clauses”.<sup>91</sup> The question in all the above cases is whether the intention of one party to exclude liability for negligence has been made sufficiently clear to the other. An express reference to negligence is the safest, but not the only, way of achieving this result.

(b) PARTY LIABLE ONLY FOR NEGLIGENCE. Where a contracting party is liable only for negligence, the rule of construction discussed above obviously does not apply. It follows that in such cases an exemption clause in general terms (i.e. one not specifically referring to negligence) can cover negligence.<sup>92</sup> It used, moreover, to be thought that, in cases of this kind, a clause in general terms necessarily did cover negligence, since “it would otherwise lack subject-matter”<sup>93</sup>; it would have no effect if it did not exclude the only liability which the defendant could incur. But this reasoning no longer prevails. Even where the defendant’s only liability is for negligence, the clause must make it clear that liability is to be excluded. It may do so by general words not containing any express reference to negligence.<sup>94</sup> But in Hollier v Rambler Motors (AMC) Ltd<sup>95</sup> a customer’s car had been left with the defendants for repair and was damaged in a fire caused by their negligence. It was held that they could not rely on a provision<sup>96</sup> that they were “not responsible for damage caused by fire to customer’s cars on the premises”. This was so even though they were liable for such damage only if the fire was due to their negligence: the provision merely operated as a warning to the customer that the garage proprietors were not liable for loss caused by a fire which was not due to their negligence. Obviously, however, a clause cannot be construed merely as such a warning if it expressly exempts a party from liability for negligence.<sup>97</sup>

Even where a defendant is liable only for negligence and clearly intends to exclude that liability, general words may fail to protect him. In Re Polemis<sup>98</sup> a clause in a charterparty provided that liability for fire should be mutually excepted, i.e. that neither shipowner nor charterer should be liable for fire. The shipowner was a common carrier and therefore liable without negligence. Thus the clause would not exempt him from liability for negligence, but only from strict liability. In view of this, it was held that the

<sup>91</sup> George Mitchell (Chesterhall) Ltd v Finney Lock Seeds Ltd [1983] 2 A.C. 803 at 814; but the fact that the seller was negligent was relevant for the purpose of the statutory reasonableness test: below p.260.

<sup>92</sup> e.g. J. Archdale Ltd v Comservices Ltd [1954] 1 W.L.R. 459; White v Blackmore [1972] 2 Q.B. 651; Scottish Special Housing Association v Wimpey Construction UK Ltd [1986] 1 W.L.R. 995; Rutter v Palmer [1922] 2 K.B. 87; cf. Levison v Patent Steam Carpet Cleaning Co Ltd [1978] Q.B. 69 at 83–84; The Raphael [1982] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 42; BHP Petroleum Ltd v British Steel Ltd [2000] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 133 (where the duties of the party in breach were partly strict and partly duties of diligence); Co-operative Retail Services Ltd v Taylor Young Partnerships Ltd [2002] UKHL 17; [2002] 1 W.L.R. 1419 at [42–44].

<sup>93</sup> Alderslade v Hendon Laundry [1945] K.B. 189 at 192; cf. Gibaud v Great Eastern Ry [1921] 2 K.B. 426; The Ballyhannon [1961] 1 W.L.R. 929.

<sup>94</sup> Alderslade v Hendon Laundry Ltd [1945] K.B. 189, as explained in Hollier v Rambler Motors (AMC) Ltd [1972] 2 Q.B. 71; Hair & Skin Trading Co Ltd v Norman Airfreight Carriers Ltd [1974] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 442; Cert plc v George Hammond plc [1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 976. For similar construction of indemnity clauses, see Gillespie Bros & Co Ltd v Roy Bowles Transport Ltd [1973] Q.B. 400, Arthur White (Contractors) Ltd v Tarmac Civil Engineering Ltd [1967] 1 W.L.R. 1506 and Thompson v T Lohan (Plant Hire) Ltd [1987] 1 W.L.R. 649; HIH Casualty case, above, n.88, at [138] and cf. The Super Servant Two [1990] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 1 at 8 (similar construction of cancellation clause).

<sup>95</sup> [1972] 2 Q.B. 71; cf. Olley v Marlborough Court [1949] 1 K.B. 532.

<sup>96</sup> Which was actually not incorporated in the contract: above, p.220 at n.57.

<sup>97</sup> Spriggs v Sotheby Parke Bernet & Co [1986] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 487.

<sup>98</sup> [1921] 3 K.B. 560.

clause did not exempt the charterer from liability for negligence either, although he was liable only for negligence.

(3) Seriousness of breach

Before exemption clauses were subject to legislative control, the courts were reluctant to allow a party to rely on such a clause in respect of a breach that was particularly serious. Effect was given to this policy by two techniques. One was to construe the clause narrowly, so that it would not apply where such a serious breach had occurred, unless the intention that it should apply in spite of the gravity of the breach was made very clear. Another was to say that, as a matter of substantive law, it was impossible by any clause (however widely drafted) to exclude liability for certain breaches which were "fundamental".<sup>99</sup> This "substantive doctrine" of fundamental breach was developed by the courts mainly as a device for protecting consumers. But it was not restricted to consumer cases; and, when applied to commercial transactions negotiated at arm's length, it was liable to upset perfectly fair bargains for the reasonable allocation of contractual risks. When, in the Suisse Atlantique case<sup>1</sup> in 1966, an attempt was made to apply the doctrine in such a context, the House of Lords rejected the view that the doctrine was one of substantive law and held that it was one of construction only, so that liability for even a fundamental breach could be excluded so long as the words of the clause were sufficiently clear. In the following years the lower courts were reluctant to accept this position, no doubt because they feared that it would weaken the doctrine of fundamental breach as a consumer-protecting device. But the substantive doctrine was no longer needed for this purpose once the effectiveness of exemption clauses came to be restricted by legislation<sup>2</sup>; and, where these restrictions did not apply, it was desirable, in the interests of commercial certainty, to allow the parties to allocate risks between themselves by clearly drafted exemption clauses.<sup>3</sup> In the Photo Production<sup>4</sup> case in 1980 the House of Lords therefore reasserted the view that the doctrine of fundamental breach was a rule of construction only. That view was again affirmed by the House of Lords in the George Mitchell case in 1983, where Lord Bridge said that the Photo Production case had given "the final quietus to the doctrine that a 'fundamental breach' of contract deprived the party in breach of the benefit of clauses in the contract excluding or limiting his liability".<sup>5</sup>

In the course of the development just described, the House of Lords overruled a small number of cases that were consistent only with the substantive doctrine<sup>6</sup>; but it did not cast doubt on many other decisions in which the seriousness of the breach had been a ground for holding that an exemption clause afforded no protection. A difficult question is therefore left unresolved as to the status of these decisions. One view is that they are all obsolete, as the question whether a clause applies to a particular breach simply depends in each case on whether the words of the clause are sufficiently clear to cover that breach. On this view, nothing more need or can be said about "fundamental breach"

<sup>99</sup> e.g. Karsales (Harrow) Ltd v Wallis [1956] 1 W.L.R. 936; and see Grunfeld, 24 M.I.L.R. 62; Guest, 77 L.Q.R. 98; Montrose [1964] C.L.J. 60 at 254.

<sup>1</sup> [1967] 1 A.C. 361 discussed at p.234, below.

<sup>2</sup> Photo Production Ltd v Securicor Transport Ltd [1980] A.C. 827 at 843.

<sup>3</sup> ibid.

<sup>4</sup> See above; discussed below at p.234.

<sup>5</sup> George Mitchell (Chesterhall) Ltd v Finney Lock Seeds [1983] 2 A.C. 803 at 813; cf. The Antares [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 424 at 428.

<sup>6</sup> i.e. Charterhouse Credit Co Ltd v Tolly [1963] 2 Q.B. 683 ("though the result might have been reached on construction of the contract": Photo Production case, above, at 845); Harbutt's "Plasticine" Ltd v Wayne Tank Co Ltd [1970] 1 Q.B. 477; Wathes (Western) Ltd v Austins (Menswear) Ltd [1976] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 14.

than that all exemption clauses are to be construed contra proferentem,<sup>7</sup> and that, the more serious the breach is, the less likely it is that the clause will apply. A second view is that the earlier cases are to be reinterpreted rather than rejected or ignored. In support of this view, it can be said that some of the earlier judgments explicitly proceeded on the basis that the rule was one of construction,<sup>8</sup> while others, though originally based on the substantive doctrine, were later explained as illustrations of the rule of construction,<sup>9</sup> or on other special grounds.<sup>10</sup> For these reasons, it is submitted that the second view is to be preferred. The cases concerning serious breaches resemble those (discussed above) concerning negligent breaches: they can be regarded as illustrations of the contra proferentem rule, but they amount to particular or special applications of that rule and therefore still provide guidance on the scope and effects of the rule of construction which applies where the breach is of a certain degree of seriousness. They can be said to give rise to a presumption or prima facie rule that general words will not exclude liability for certain very serious breaches; but they recognise that this presumption or rule can be displaced if the words of the clause are sufficiently clear. At the same time, the practical importance of the cases on this topic is likely to be confined to situations in which the validity of the exemption clause is not affected by the legislation to be considered later in this Chapter.<sup>11</sup> If under this legislation the clause is ineffective or not binding on the injured party, the outcome of the case will not depend on whether the clause covers the breach; and if the clause is subject to a statutory requirement of reasonableness, the outcome is more likely to depend on the question whether that requirement is satisfied than on the construction of the clause.<sup>12</sup>

In the following discussion, we shall first describe the breaches to which the rule of construction applies, bearing in mind that the occurrence of such a breach does not necessarily lead to the conclusion that the clause will not cover it: there is only a presumption that it will be construed so as not to have this effect, and this presumption can be overcome if the words of the clause are sufficiently clear. It will then be necessary to consider the exact effects (or present operation) of the rule of construction.

(a) SCOPE OF THE RULE. For the purpose of the rule of construction, a breach may be a serious one either because of the nature of the term broken, or because of the consequences of the breach, or because of the manner in which the breach was committed.

(i) Nature of the term broken. The legal consequences of a breach often depend on the nature of the term broken. The leading distinction is between three categories of terms known respectively as conditions, warranties and intermediate terms. This distinction is discussed in Chapter 18<sup>13</sup> here it need only be said that breach of condition of itself gives the injured party the right to rescind the contract while breach of warranty or of an intermediate term does not have this effect. But the law recognises yet a further category,

<sup>7</sup> See above, p.221.

<sup>8</sup> Gibaud v GE Ry [1921] 2 K.B. 426: see the Suisse Atlantique case [1967] 1 A.C. 361 at 412; and see the judgment of Pearson L.J. in UGS Finance Ltd v National Mortgage Bank of Greece [1964] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 446 at 453.

<sup>9</sup> e.g. Levison v Patent Steam Cleaning Co [1978] Q.B. 69: see the Photo Production case [1980] A.C. 827 at 845, 846; and cf. the Charterhouse case, above, n.6.

<sup>10</sup> i.e. the deviation cases: see below pp.228–231, 240.

<sup>11</sup> See below, pp.246, et seq.

<sup>12</sup> e.g. in George Mitchell (Chesterhall) Ltd v Finney Lock Seeds Ltd [1983] 2 A.C. 803, below, pp.227–228, 261.

<sup>13</sup> See below, pp.788–805.

the so-called "fundamental term," which is "narrower than a condition of the contract"<sup>14</sup> and it is this category of fundamental term that is significant for the present purpose. Such a term is one that specifies the essential purpose of the contract, so that breach of the term turns the performance rendered into one which is not merely defective, but essentially different from that promised: for example, where a person who had contracted to sell peas instead delivered beans<sup>15</sup>; or where a seller of mahogany logs instead delivered pine logs.<sup>16</sup> In a number of cases exemption clauses have been held not to cover breaches of this kind. It has, for example, been held that a seller of "foreign refined rape oil" could not rely on an exemption clause where what he delivered was not "foreign refined rape oil"<sup>17</sup>; that a seller of a new car would be in breach of a fundamental term if he delivered a second-hand car<sup>18</sup>; and that a shipowner who had contracted with a tour operator to provide cruise accommodation was not protected by an exemption clause when he substituted an inferior ship and a much less attractive itinerary.<sup>19</sup>

The same principle of construction can apply where what is supplied is not literally a different thing from what was bargained for, but is so seriously defective as to be different in substance.<sup>20</sup> In Pinnock Bros v Lewis & Peat Ltd<sup>21</sup> copra cake was sold "not warranted free from defect" but was so adulterated by castor beans as to poison the cattle to which it was fed. It was held that "where a substance quite different from that contracted for has been delivered, that clause has no application, as such a difference of substance cannot be said to constitute a 'defect' ". On the other hand, a party does not lose the protection of an exemption clause merely because his performance suffers from a defect that entitles (or would, but for the clause, have entitled) the other party to reject the defective performance. Thus a seller of "mahogany logs equal to sample" would not be in breach of a fundamental term (but only in breach of condition<sup>22</sup>) if he delivered mahogany logs that were not equal to sample.<sup>23</sup> Similarly, the supplier of a motor vehicle which corresponds with the contractual description does not commit a breach of a fundamental term merely because he breaks some implied undertaking as to the fitness of the vehicle for the purpose for which it was supplied.<sup>24</sup>

In these cases of defective performance, it is often hard to tell whether the performance rendered is so essentially different from that promised as to amount to a breach of a fundamental term. This depends on the answer to a preliminary question of construction: what is the essence of the bargain that the parties have made?<sup>25</sup> The "peas and

<sup>14</sup> Per Devlin J. in Smeaton Hanscomb & Co Ltd v Sassoon I Setty & Co (No.1) [1953] 1 W.L.R. 1468 at 1470; R W Green Ltd v Cade Bros Farms [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 602. A passage in Photo Production Ltd v Securicor Transport Ltd [1980] A.C. 827 at 849-850, can be interpreted as treating the two concepts as identical (cf. below, p.229, n.46) but only for the purpose of the rule that breaches of both give rise to a right to rescind: see below, p.806. It is respectfully submitted that Devlin J. was correct in treating them as distinct for the present purpose, i.e. the construction of an exemption clause.

<sup>15</sup> See Chanter v Hopkins (1838) 4 M. & W. 399 at 404; for a modern application, cf. The Bow Cedar [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 601.

<sup>16</sup> Smeaton Hanscomb & Co Ltd v Sassoon I Setty & Co (No.1) [1953] 1 W.L.R. 1468 at 1470.

<sup>17</sup> Nichol v Godis (1854) 10 Ex. 191; cf. Wieler v Schilizzi (1856) 17 C.B. 619.

<sup>18</sup> Andrews Bros (Bournemouth) Ltd v Singer & Co [1934] 1 K.B. 17, as explained in Karsales (Harrow) Ltd v Wallis [1956] 1 W.L.R. 17.

<sup>19</sup> Anglo-Continental Holidays Ltd v Typaldos Lines [1967] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 61.

<sup>20</sup> cf. Topfell Ltd v Galley Properties Ltd [1979] 1 W.L.R. 446 at 450 (vendor of a house not protected where he failed to give vacant possession); and see below, pp.771-773.

<sup>21</sup> [1923] 1 K.B. 690.

<sup>22</sup> See above, p.226; below, p.792; Sale of Goods Act 1979, s.15(2) and (3), as amended by Sale and Supply of Goods Act 1994 s.7 and Sch.2.

<sup>23</sup> Smeaton Hanscomb & Co Ltd v Sassoon I Setty & Co (No.1) [1953] 1 W.L.R. 1468 at 1470.

<sup>24</sup> Astley Industrial Trust Ltd v Grimley [1963] 1 W.L.R. 584.

<sup>25</sup> See Melville, 19 M.L.R. 26; Unger [1957] J.B.L. 30.

beans” example may be contrasted with a case put by Lord Devlin: “If an anxious hostess is late in the preparation of a meal, she can perfectly well say: ‘Send me peas or if you haven’t got peas send beans, but for heaven’s sake send something.’ That would be a contract for peas, beans or anything else ejusdem generis and is a perfectly sensible contract to make.”<sup>26</sup> In such a case, the supplier would not have been in breach at all if he had sent beans; but more difficulty arises where the supplier is undoubtedly in breach and the question is whether that breach makes the article supplied as different from that contracted for as peas are from beans. This question gave rise to much difference of judicial opinion in George Mitchell (Chesterhall) Ltd v Finney Lock Seeds Ltd<sup>27</sup> where the defendants agreed to sell to the plaintiffs 30 lbs of “a cabbage seed”<sup>28</sup> which was later invoiced to them as “Finney’s Late Dutch Special,” a variety of winter white cabbage. It was “common ground . . . that the seed agreed to be sold was seed for a winter white cabbage”<sup>29</sup> and “conceded that what was supplied was not the winter white cabbage which to everybody’s knowledge was what the plaintiffs had ordered and the defendants had agreed to sell.”<sup>30</sup> As a result of this breach, the plaintiffs’ crop failed, being fit for neither human nor animal consumption, and the question was whether the performance rendered was essentially or fundamentally different from that promised. This depended on how the defendants’ essential or fundamental obligation under the contract was to be described. Was it an obligation to deliver “cabbage seed” or one to deliver “vegetable seed” or simply one to deliver “seed”? Parker J.<sup>31</sup> and a majority of the Court of Appeal held that the essential obligation was one to deliver vegetable seed and that a clause limiting the sellers’ liability did not cover their breach of that obligation. Oliver L.J. said: “what was delivered to the plaintiffs simply was not fulfilment of the contract, even a defective fulfilment, any more than delivery of a motor bicycle would be a fulfilment of a contract for the sale of a car”.<sup>32</sup> But the House of Lords held that the clause did as a matter of construction cover the breach (though it did not in the end protect the defendants as it failed to satisfy the statutory requirement of reasonableness<sup>33</sup>). Lord Bridge said: “In my opinion this is not a ‘peas and beans’ case at all”<sup>34</sup>; in other words, he seems to have regarded the defendants’ essential obligation as one simply to deliver “seed”. Such a narrow view of a party’s essential obligation obviously extends the scope of exemption clauses for it increases the range of cases in which a breach can be described as giving rise to defective performance, as opposed to a failure to perform an essential obligation.

(ii) Deviation and analogous rules. In a contract for the carriage of goods by sea, the term as to the route is regarded as fundamental, so that the benefit of an exemption clause is normally lost by a carrier who has without justification<sup>35</sup> deviated, i.e. departed

<sup>26</sup> [1966] C.I.J. at 212.

<sup>27</sup> [1981] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 476 (Parker J.); [1983] Q.B. 284, CA; [1983] 2 A.C. 803, HL.

<sup>28</sup> [1981] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 476 at 477.

<sup>29</sup> ibid.

<sup>30</sup> ibid. At first instance counsel for the defendant further conceded that he would not be able to rely on the clause limiting the defendant’s liability “if what had been delivered had been beetroot seed or carrot seed” and “that to get within any distance of success he must establish that what was delivered was cabbage seed”: [1981] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 476 at 479. This concession was withdrawn on appeal: [1983] Q.B. 284 at 303.

<sup>31</sup> [1981] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 476 at 480.

<sup>32</sup> [1983] Q.B. 284 at 305.

<sup>33</sup> See below, p.260.

<sup>34</sup> [1983] 2 A.C. 803 at 813.

<sup>35</sup> See Kish v Taylor [1912] A.C. 604 at 617; Carriage of Goods by Sea Act 1971, Sch., Art.IV 4: deviation may be justified for the purpose of saving life or property at sea, or if it is “reasonable”.

from the agreed or usual route.<sup>36</sup> The same is true where a warehouseman has stored the goods in a place other than that agreed<sup>37</sup>; and where a bailee such as a cleaner or carrier has in the course of unauthorised subcontracting parted with the possession of goods entrusted to him.<sup>38</sup> On the other hand, such a person will not lose the protection of an exemption clause merely because he has broken some other term such as a carrier's undertaking to supply a seaworthy ship<sup>39</sup>; or a warehouseman's undertaking to exercise reasonable care in looking after the goods.<sup>40</sup> The reason for the distinction is sometimes said to be that the terms as to the route and as to the place where the goods are to be stored are fundamental,<sup>41</sup> while the other terms mentioned are not. The special importance of the term as to route has been explained on the ground that the owner of the goods may lose his insurance cover if the ship departs from the agreed route<sup>42</sup>: it is therefore thought necessary to give him a remedy against the carrier (in spite of the exemption clause) as if the latter were an insurer. In fact the goods-owner may not suffer the hardship on which the rule is based, since his insurance policy may provide that he is to be "held covered" in case of deviation at a premium to be arranged.<sup>43</sup> The special rule as to the effects of deviation has accordingly been criticised.<sup>44</sup> It can be explained either as an application of the rule of construction normally applied to breach of a fundamental term,<sup>45</sup> or as a rule which, on account of its historical and commercial background, must be treated as sui generis.<sup>46</sup>

Once a term has been identified as fundamental, the next question is whether that term has been broken. For this purpose it is first necessary to construe that term to see <sup>36</sup> Joseph Thorley Ltd v Orchis SS Co Ltd [1907] 1 K.B. 660; James Morrison & Co Ltd v Shaw Savill & Albion Co Ltd [1916] 2 K.B. 783; Stag Line Ltd v Foscolo, Mango & Co Ltd [1932] A.C. 328. For the application of the same principle to unauthorised carriage on deck, see J Evans & Sons (Portsmouth) Ltd v Andrea Merzario [1976] 1 W.L.R. 1078, and The Chanda [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 494; but contrast (in cases of a statutory limitation of liability), The Antares (No.2) [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 424, where dicta at p.430 suggest that on deck carriage is no longer regarded as a special case. cf. L & NW Ry v Neilson [1922] 2 A.C. 263 (carriage by land).

<sup>37</sup> Woolf v Collis Removal Services [1948] 1 K.B. 11 at 15; cf. United Fresh Meat Co Ltd v Charterhouse Cold Storage Ltd [1974] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 286; cf. The OOCL Bravery [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 394 at 401 (parking container lorry in street instead of in secured depot).

<sup>38</sup> Davies v Collins [1945] 1 All E.R. 247; Garnham, Harris & Elton Ltd v Alfred W Ellis (Transport) Ltd [1967] 1 W.L.R. 940.

<sup>39</sup> The Europa [1908] P. 84; Kish v Taylor [1912] A.C. 604. But if the unseaworthiness causes the loss, the carrier cannot rely on the exceptions provided under the Carriage of Goods by Sea Act 1924: see Maxine Footwear Ltd v Canadian Government Merchant Marine Ltd [1959] A.C. 589; but he can rely on the limitation so provided: The Happy Ranger [2002] EWCA Civ 694; [2002] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 694 at [38].

<sup>40</sup> J Spurling Ltd v Bradshaw [1956] 1 W.L.R. 461; Kenyon Son & Craven Ltd v Baxter Hoare & Co Ltd [1971] 1 W.L.R. 519; cf. Mayfair Photographic Supplies Ltd v Baxter Hoare & Co Ltd [1972] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 410.

<sup>41</sup> See Smeaton Hanscomb & Co v Sassoon I Setty [1953] 1 W.L.R. 1468 at 1470, describing deviation as a breach of a fundamental term.

<sup>42</sup> See Hain SS Co v Tate & Lyle Ltd (1936) 41 Com.Cas. 350 at 354. For the significance of this point, see further, p.240, below.

<sup>43</sup> See State Trading Corp of India v S. M. Golodetz Ltd [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 277 at 289. But such clauses may fail to provide satisfactory protection: for example, in Vincentelli v Rowlett (1911) 16 Com.Cas. 310 the insurer "arranged" the premium at an amount equal to the loss. Quere, whether such conduct is consistent with Marine Insurance Act 1906, s.31(2) under which such a premium must be reasonable.

<sup>44</sup> Farr v Hain SS Co (The Tregenna) 121 F.2d. 940 at 944 (1941). This case arose from the same facts as Hain SS Co v Tate & Lyle Ltd, above; cf. Livermore, 2 J.C.L. 241.

<sup>45</sup> The Antares [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 424 at 430; State Trading Corp of India v S M Golodetz Ltd [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 277 at 289.

<sup>46</sup> Photo Production Ltd v Securicor Transport Ltd [1980] A.C. 827 at 845 per Lord Wilberforce; cf. ibid. at 850, where Lord Diplock treats deviation as a breach of "condition": as to this see above, p.227, n.14. Contrast Devlin J.'s description of deviation (in the passage referred to in n.41, above) as a breach of a fundamental term.

what obligation it imposes. Thus a warehouseman commits a breach of a fundamental term if he stores the goods elsewhere than at the agreed place. But the court cannot apply the rule that, prima facie, exemption clauses are not to be construed so as to cover such a breach until it has first determined exactly where the goods were to be stored. In Gibaud v GE Ry<sup>47</sup> a contract to store a bicycle in a railway station cloakroom was interpreted as one to store in the cloakroom or in any convenient place nearby. Accordingly, an exemption clause was held to apply when the bicycle was stolen, even though it had been stored in the station hall and not in the cloakroom.

A similar principle applies in the deviation cases. In determining the content of the carrier's obligation as to route, the court will have regard not only to the agreed or usual route (if any)<sup>48</sup> but also to any liberty to deviate given by the contract of carriage. But because of the actual or assumed importance of the term specifying the route, such liberties are restrictively construed. In Glyn v Margeson<sup>49</sup> a contract for the carriage of oranges from Malaga to Liverpool gave the carrier a wide liberty to deviate. It was held that this provision did not apply where the ship first went east from Malaga, retraced her course, and then made for Liverpool. The general words of the clause were to be limited with reference to "the main object and intent"<sup>50</sup> of the contract—in this case a voyage from Malaga to Liverpool. The clause only justified the carrier in calling at ports on the route between those places. Such a restrictive interpretation can to some extent be overcome by permitting the carrier to call at any port "although in a contrary direction to or out of or beyond the route." In Connolly Shaw Ltd v A/S Det Nordenfjeldske D/S<sup>51</sup> a deviation clause containing these words was included in a contract for the carriage of lemons from Palermo to London. It was held that the clause justified deviation to Hull, involving a delay of three days on a voyage of 22 days. But it would not have justified a deviation to Vladivostok, though that was literally within its terms. It gave the carrier only such liberties as could be used "without frustrating the contract".<sup>52</sup>

Clauses permitting a change of route in circumstances beyond the control of the parties are more generously construed. In G H Renton & Co v Palmyra Trading Corporation of Panama<sup>53</sup> timber was shipped from Canada for carriage to London or Hull; if strikes prevented discharge at these ports, "the Master may discharge the cargo at . . . any other convenient port." Strikes at London and Hull made discharge at those ports impossible, and the master discharged the cargo at Hamburg. It was held that the carriers were entitled to rely on the clause; for it only applied in a specified emergency and did not enable them to alter the contractual destination at will.

Where the carrier departs from the agreed or usual route and cannot justify that departure by a deviation clause or otherwise,<sup>54</sup> he normally loses the protection of other exemption clauses in the contract. This rule is quite different in nature from that which applies in the supply of goods and similar cases discussed above.<sup>55</sup> In those cases, the term is regarded as fundamental because the effect of its breach is that the injured party receives a performance essentially different from that promised. In the deviation cases, by contrast, the courts are not concerned with the effect of the breach: any departure from the agreed route "however for practical purposes irrelevant"<sup>56</sup> normally deprives

<sup>47</sup> [1921] 2 K.B. 426; contrast Davies v Collins [1945] 1 All E.R. 247; below, p.757.

<sup>48</sup> See Frenkel v MacAndrew & Co Ltd [1929] A.C. 545.

<sup>49</sup> [1893] A.C. 351.

<sup>50</sup> ibid. at 355.

<sup>51</sup> (1934) 49 T.L.R. 183.

<sup>52</sup> ibid. at 190.

<sup>53</sup> [1957] A.C. 149; and see below, p.238.

<sup>54</sup> See above, p.228 n.35.

<sup>55</sup> See above, pp.226–228.

<sup>56</sup> Suisse Atlantique case [1967] 1 A.C. 361 at 423.

the shipowner of the benefit of the exemption clause. Yet it can hardly be said that a voyage actually accomplished after a minor deviation is essentially different from the voyage bargained for. According to Joseph Thorley Ltd v Orchis SS Co Ltd, it is, moreover, irrelevant that the deviation did not cause, or increase the risk of, loss. In that case,<sup>57</sup> a cargo of beans was damaged through being mixed with poisonous earth. The carrier lost the benefit of his exemption clause because he had deviated, though the deviation had not caused the loss.<sup>58</sup> And in James Morrison & Co v Sham, Savill & Albion Co Ltd<sup>59</sup> a ship was sunk by enemy action while deviating. The shipowner lost the benefit of his exemption clause even though the ship might just as probably have been sunk on her proper route. He would only have been protected had he been able to show that the loss must have occurred anyway, i.e. even if the ship had not deviated.

The deviation cases do, however, have one thing in common with the supply of goods cases: the manner in which the breach is committed is irrelevant. In the supply of goods cases, this point is assumed without argument; and in the deviation cases, so long as the carrier's act is voluntary,<sup>60</sup> it makes no difference that the deviation was quite innocent. In L & NW Ry v Neilson<sup>61</sup> the label came off a vanload of theatrical properties and its contents were despatched to various wrong destinations by a stationmaster. In spite of the fact that he had acted under an honest mistake, the railway company lost the protection of its exemption clause. From this point of view, the supply of goods, deviation and analogous cases may be contrasted with the next group to be discussed.

(iii) Manner of breach. The courts are reluctant to construe exemption clauses so as to apply to acts amounting to a deliberate disregard of the main purpose of the contract. They assume that "the parties never contemplated that such a breach should be excused or limited."<sup>62</sup> In accordance with this assumption, it has been held that a tug-owner could not rely on a clause which protected him from liability for "omission" and "default," where he had deliberately abandoned the tow<sup>63</sup>; and that a carrier of goods by sea could not rely on a clause, which protected him from liability after the goods were "discharged," where he had delivered the goods to a person who, as the carrier knew, had no authority to receive them.<sup>64</sup>

The former substantive doctrine of fundamental breach was often invoked in cases in which a bailee of goods had delivered them to the wrong person. It was held that exemption clauses did not apply where the misdelivery was deliberate<sup>65</sup> or reckless,<sup>66</sup> but could apply where it was merely negligent.<sup>67</sup> Thus the manner of breach was the crucial

<sup>57</sup> [1907] 1 K.B. 660. For criticism, see Carver on Bills of Lading (1st ed., 2001), §§9–059, et seq.

<sup>58</sup> Altier if loss is due to inherent vice or the nature of the goods themselves: Internationale Guano etc v Robert MacAndrew & Co [1909] 2 K.B. 360.

<sup>59</sup> [1916] 2 K.B. 783.

<sup>60</sup> See Rio Tinto Co Ltd v Seed Shipping Co Ltd (1926) 24 I.L.L.Rep. 321 at 326, where there was in fact no departure from the route.

<sup>61</sup> [1922] 2 A.C. 263. The deviation was no doubt "deliberate" (at 274) in the sense that the defendants' servant knew where he was sending the goods: but it was not "deliberate" in the sense that he knew he was sending them to a wrong destination. cf. below, p.232.

<sup>62</sup> Suisse Atlantique case [1967] 1 A.C. 361 at 435; cf. ibid. at 394, 397.

<sup>63</sup> The Cap Palos [1921] P. 458.

<sup>64</sup> Sze Hai Tong Bank Ltd v Rambler Cycle Co Ltd [1959] A.C. 576; so far as contra, Chartered Bank of India v British India Steam Navigation Co Ltd [1909] A.C. 369 would no longer be followed: see Guest, 77 I.L.Q.R. 98, 116–118; Wedderburn [1990] C.I.J. 11; The Ines [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 144 at 152; Motis Exports Ltd v Dampskibsselskabet AF 1912 [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 211.

<sup>65</sup> Alexander v Railway Executive [1951] 2 K.B. 882.

<sup>66</sup> J Spurling Ltd v Bradshaw [1956] 1 W.L.R. 461 at 466; cf. United Fresh Meat Co Ltd v Charterhouse Cold Storage Ltd [1974] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 286 at 291.

<sup>67</sup> Hollins v J Davy Ltd [1963] 1 Q.B. 844; Guest, (1963) 26 M.I.L.R. 301; cf. Gallagher v BRS [1974] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 446; The New York Star [1981] 1 W.L.R. 138.

point, since the term broken and the consequences of the breach were (in these misdelivery cases) always the same: because of delivery to the wrong person, the goods were lost to the owner. The cases, in which the decisive factor was the manner of breach, gave rise to much difficulty. For one thing, a "deliberate" breach was hard to define<sup>68</sup>; for another it was puzzlingly held that a deliberate misdelivery by an employee did not deprive the employer of the protection of an exemption clause where the employee had acted with the intention of defrauding his employer.<sup>69</sup> The need for "reconciling" the cases has largely disappeared now that each must be explained as turning on the construction of the clause. The fact that the breach was deliberate would be a ground<sup>70</sup> for holding that the clause was not intended to cover the breach; but it would no longer be a decisive ground. Thus an exemption clause may apply to a breach in spite of the fact that it is deliberate if it is of only trivial importance: "for example, a deliberate delay of one day in unloading."<sup>71</sup> This may be so even where a deliberate but trivial breach gives rise to unexpectedly serious consequences.<sup>72</sup>

(iv) Consequences of breach. Even though a breach is not deliberate, or one of a fundamental term, it may still, by reason of its practical consequences be sufficiently serious to attract the operation of the rule of construction. Failure to perform at the agreed time is always a breach of the same term; but an exemption clause may be construed so as to cover only slight delays and not those that are so prolonged as to cause serious prejudice to the injured party.<sup>73</sup> Again, goods supplied under a contract of sale or hire-purchase may not be fit for the particular purpose for which the customer has acquired them. The supplier is not, merely because he has failed to perform the implied condition as to fitness,<sup>74</sup> in breach of a fundamental term<sup>75</sup> but in a number of cases it has been held that he was not protected by an exemption clause because the defect was so serious as to make the thing practically useless for the customer's purposes.<sup>76</sup> The same result was reached where the proprietor of a parking garage had undertaken to keep a car which had been parked there locked, but left it unlocked, so that the customer's luggage was stolen.<sup>77</sup> In all these cases, the crucial factor was not the nature of the term broken, but the consequence of the breach: for this reason, it was the breach, rather than the term broken, that was described as fundamental.<sup>78</sup>

The rule of construction most clearly applies where the breach is such that the defective performance becomes "totally different from what the contract contem-

<sup>68</sup> Probably it meant delivery "to someone known to have no right" to the goods: Hollins v J Davy Ltd (above) at 856.

<sup>69</sup> John Carter (Fine Worsteds) Ltd v Hanson Haulage (Leeds) Ltd [1965] 2 Q.B. 495—a case now to be "treated with caution": W & J Lane v Spratt [1970] 1 All E.R. 162 at 172. cf. also Levison v Patent Steam Carpet Cleaning Co Ltd [1978] Q.B. 82 (where, on such facts, there is said to be a fundamental breach).

<sup>70</sup> e.g. The Cap Palos [1921] P. 458; Sze Hai Tong Bank Ltd v Rambler Cycle Co Ltd [1959] A.C. 576; above at n.64.

<sup>71</sup> Suisse Atlantique case [1967] 1 A.C. 361 at 435.

<sup>72</sup> e.g. Photo Production Ltd v Securicor Transport Ltd [1980] A.C. 827 at 840 (fire started deliberately but without the intention of burning down the factory: see below, p.236, n.24).

<sup>73</sup> See, e.g. Bontex Knitting Works Ltd v St John's Garage [1943] 2 All E.R. 690; [1944] 1 All E.R. 381; Suisse Atlantique case [1967] 1 A.C. 361; cf. Brandt v Liverpool, etc. SN Co Ltd [1924] 1 K.B. 575 at 597, 601.

<sup>74</sup> See above, p.207, below, p.251.

<sup>75</sup> See above, p.228.

<sup>76</sup> Yeoman Credit Ltd v Apps [1962] 2 Q.B. 508; Farnsworth Finance Facilities Ltd v Attryde [1970] 1 W.L.R. 1053.

<sup>77</sup> Mendelssohn v Normand Ltd [1970] 1 Q.B. 177; Treitel, 32 M.L.R. 685.

<sup>78</sup> For the distinction between breach of a fundamental term and fundamental breach, see the Suisse Atlantique case [1967] 1 A.C. 361 at 393, 421; United Fresh Meat Co Ltd v Charterhouse Cold Storage Ltd [1947] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 286; cf. (in the context of stipulations as to time) United Scientific Holdings Ltd v Burnley BC [1978] A.C. 904 at 945.

plates".<sup>79</sup> But the examples given in the preceding paragraph show that the rule can apply even where the breach does not make the performance totally different from that promised: it is sometimes enough if the breach causes serious prejudice to the injured party. Thus the rule was applied against suppliers of motor vehicles that were seriously defective,<sup>80</sup> even though they could still be described as the motor vehicles that were, under the contracts, to be supplied.<sup>81</sup> It has further been suggested that the rule of construction applies whenever the breach "entitles the injured party to treat it as repudiatory and rescind a contract".<sup>82</sup> This may merely refer to the general principle that an injured party wishing to rescind a contract on account of the other party's breach must show that the breach was a "serious" one.<sup>83</sup> But there are many exceptions to this principle: for example, a party may be entitled to rescind for breach of condition even though the breach does not cause him serious prejudice, or indeed any prejudice at all<sup>84</sup>; and the rule of construction with which we are here concerned would not apply merely because there had been a breach of condition.

It is impossible to define with precision the degree of seriousness of the prejudice (resulting from the breach) that is required to bring the rule of construction into operation. One can only say that the court's reluctance to construe a clause so as to apply to a particular breach will, in general, be directly proportioned to the gravity of that breach. The point may be illustrated by reference to Kenyon Son & Craven Ltd v Baxter Hoare & Co Ltd<sup>85</sup> where nuts stored in a warehouse were seriously damaged by rats as a result of the warehouseman's "gross and culpable" failure to take care to prevent such damage. It was held that the warehouseman was protected by an exemption clause which, on its true construction, covered the events which had occurred; but Donaldson J. said that clause would not have protected the warehouseman if he had stored the nuts in the open or in an area which was prohibited by the contract.<sup>86</sup>

(b) NATURE OF THE RULE. At this stage, it is necessary to discuss general statements of the rule, to illustrate its operation, and to consider a possible limitation on its scope.

(i) General statements. Where a breach falls within the scope of the rule of construction, the effect of the rule is that an exemption clause will cover the breach only if it is "most clearly and unambiguously expressed",<sup>87</sup> so that general words which can fairly be said to apply only to less serious breaches will be construed so as not to cover the serious breach which has occurred.<sup>88</sup> It would, indeed, be wrong "to create ambiguities by strained construction".<sup>89</sup> But general words which at first sight appear to cover even the most serious breach may not be construed in this sense, if to give them this effect

<sup>79</sup> Suisse Atlantique case [1967] 1 A.C. at 393.

<sup>80</sup> Yeoman Credit Ltd v Apps [1962] 2 Q.B. 508; Farnsworth Finance Facilities Ltd v Attridge [1970] 1 W.L.R. 1053.

<sup>81</sup> Thus in Yeoman Credit Ltd v Apps, above, it was held that there was a fundamental breach but no "total failure of consideration": cf. below, p.1055.

<sup>82</sup> Suisse Atlantique case, [1967] 1 A.C. 361 at 397.

<sup>83</sup> See below, p.769. Lord Diplock in the Photo Production case [1980] A.C. 827 at 849 and in The Afros [1983] 1 W.L.R. 12 at 195, 202 uses "fundamental breach" to refer to this type of breach.

<sup>84</sup> See below, pp.791, 793.

<sup>85</sup> [1971] 1 W.L.R. 519; Leigh-Jones and Pickering, 86 L.Q.R. 513.

<sup>86</sup> [1971] 1 W.L.R. 519 at 532.

<sup>87</sup> Ailsa Craig Fishing Co Ltd v Malvern Fishing Co Ltd [1983] 1 W.L.R. 964 at 966.

<sup>88</sup> e.g. Levison v Patent Steam Cleaning Co [1978] Q.B. 69, now said to be explicable on construction in Photo Production Ltd v Securicor Transport Ltd [1980] A.C. 827 at 845-846.

<sup>89</sup> Ailsa Craig case, above, at 966; Photo Production Ltd v Securicor Transport Ltd [1980] A.C. 827 at 851; George Mitchell (Chesterhall) Ltd v Finney Lock Seeds Ltd [1983] 2 A.C. 803 at 814; Singer (UK) Ltd v Tees & Hartlepool Port Authority [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 164 at 169; The Ines [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 144 at 151.

"would lead to an absurdity, or because it would defeat the main object of the contract or perhaps for some other reason".<sup>90</sup> For example, a carrier who had undertaken to deliver goods to one person could not rely on such general words if he deliberately delivered the goods to another person, or threw them into the sea.<sup>91</sup> In such cases it is said that the exemption clause "cannot be taken to refer" to the "total breach"<sup>92</sup>; or that the courts "lean against"<sup>93</sup> such a construction, while not wholly ruling out the possibility of its being achieved by sufficiently clear words.<sup>94</sup> According to another formulation of the rule, there is a "strong, though rebuttable, presumption that in inserting a clause of exclusion or limitation . . . the parties are not contemplating breaches of fundamental terms".<sup>95</sup>

(ii) Illustrations of breaches covered. An important element in the formulation of the rule just quoted is that the presumption is rebuttable. One way of rebutting it is to provide expressly that the clause is to cover loss or damage caused by fundamental breach: such words can, for example, protect a bailee from liability even for deliberate misdelivery by his employees.<sup>96</sup> But such an express reference to fundamental breach is by no means the only way of rebutting the presumption. It can also be rebutted if the court is for some other reason satisfied that the clause was intended to cover the breach which has occurred. In a number of cases, the House of Lords has therefore given effect to clauses excluding or restricting liability in spite of the seriousness of the breach. In the Suisse Atlantique<sup>97</sup> case, the liability of charterers for delays was limited to $1000 per day by a demurrage clause even though it was accepted<sup>98</sup> that the delays which had taken place were so long as to amount to a "fundamental breach".<sup>99</sup> In the Photo Production<sup>1</sup> case a security firm which had been engaged to safeguard a factory was protected by an exemption clause which was "clearly and fairly susceptible of one meaning only",<sup>2</sup> even though the firm's breach resulted in the total destruction of the factory by fire. In the Ailsa Craig<sup>3</sup> case, a security firm was likewise protected by a clause limiting its liability to £1,000, even though the firm had committed a "total" breach of its undertaking to provide a continuous security service for fishing boats, leading to a loss valued at £55,000. As the potential loss which might be caused by the breach was very great in proportion to the sums that could be charged for the service, and as the loss suffered was likely to have been covered by insurance, it was not inherently improbable that the owners of the boats should have agreed to the limitation of liability.

The same approach to the construction of exemption clauses is yet again illustrated by George Mitchell (Chesterhall) Ltd v Finney Lock Seeds Ltd,<sup>4</sup> where a contract for the sale of winter white cabbage seed contained a clause limiting the sellers' liability for defects to the return of the price (some £200) or to replacing the defective seed. The clause expressly provided that, except to the extent just stated, the sellers excluded "all

<sup>90</sup> Suisse Atlantique case [1967] 1 A.C. 361 at 398.

<sup>91</sup> Sze Hai Tong Bank Ltd v Rambler Cycle Co Ltd [1959] A.C. 576 at 587.

<sup>92</sup> Suisse Atlantique case [1967] 1 A.C. 361 at 432.

<sup>93</sup> Motis Exports Ltd v Dampskibsselskapet AF 1912 [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 211 at 216.

<sup>94</sup> ibid. at 217.

<sup>95</sup> [1967] 1 A.C. 361 at 427.

<sup>96</sup> See The Antwerpen [1994] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 213, where the general words of clause 4 were said at 246 not to be sufficient to cover the breach but the express reference to fundamental breach in clause 8(3) did produce this effect.

<sup>97</sup> [1967] 1 A.C. 371; Drake, 30 M.L.R. 531; Fridman, 7 Alberta L.Rev. 281; Treitel, 29 M.L.R. 546.

<sup>98</sup> [1967] 1 A.C. 371 at 419, 430.

<sup>99</sup> ibid. p.433.

<sup>1</sup> [1980] A.C. 827; below, p.239.

<sup>2</sup> [1980] A.C. 827 at 851; Smiss Bank Corp v Brink's-Mat Ltd [1986] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 79 at 92.

<sup>3</sup> [1983] 1 W.L.R. 964; Palmer, 45 M.L.R. 322.

<sup>4</sup> [1983] 2 A.C. 803; Clarke [1983] C.L.J. 32; Adams, 46 M.L.R. 147.

liability for any loss or damage” and for consequential loss or damage “arising from the use of any seeds ... supplied by us ... or any failure in the performance of or any defect in any seed supplied by us”. The actual decision was that this clause did not protect the sellers as it failed to comply with the statutory requirement of reasonableness.<sup>5</sup> But the House of Lords also held that the clause did, as a matter of construction, cover the breach which occurred even though the breach was of a most serious kind in that the seed supplied was “in no commercial sense vegetable seed at all”<sup>6</sup> so that the farmers who had bought it suffered total crop failure and a loss valued at over £60,000. Lord Bridge said that the clause, read as a whole, “unambiguously” limited the sellers’ liability and that it was “only possible to read an ambiguity into it by the process of strained construction”<sup>7</sup> which had been deprecated in the Ailsa Craig and Photo Production cases.<sup>8</sup> The adoption of such a “strained construction” would come “dangerously near to reintroducing by the back door the doctrine of ‘fundamental breach’ which this House in the Photo Production case had so forcibly evicted from the front”.<sup>9</sup>

(iii) Illustrations of breaches not covered. The four House of Lords cases just considered show that clear words in an exemption or limitation clause can cover even a very serious breach; but one feature of the George Mitchell case perhaps deserves some emphasis. It will be recalled that Lord Bridge described the case as “not a ‘peas and beans’ case at all. The relevant condition applies to ‘seeds’,”<sup>10</sup> and seeds had indeed been supplied. If the articles supplied had been plastic pellets designed for roof insulation but resembling seeds in appearance, no “strained construction” would have been necessary to hold that the clause did not apply: the things supplied would simply not have been “seeds”. In theory the sellers could have drafted a clause to cover even such a breach but in practice they would find it difficult to persuade a court that a clause “unambiguously” had such a very wide ambit. This kind of difficulty may be illustrated by contrasting the George Mitchell case with the later decision of the House of Lords in The TFL Prosperity.<sup>11</sup> In that case, a clause in a charterparty exempting the shipowner from liability for “damage” was held not to cover the economic loss suffered by the charterer by reason of the fact that the ship was not of the dimensions specified in the contract. The effect of construing the clause so as to cover this kind of loss would, in the words of Lord Roskill, have been that “the charter virtually ceases to be a contract . . . and becomes no more than a statement of intent by the owners in return for which the charterers are obliged to pay large sums of hire, though if the owners fail to carry out their promises as to description or delivery, [the charterers] are entitled to nothing in lieu”<sup>12</sup>; and he rejected that construction on the ground that it did not accord with “the true common intention of the parties”.<sup>13</sup> The same principle of construction has been held to deprive a carrier of goods by sea of the benefit of exemption clauses where he had undertaken to carry the goods under deck but had, by wrongfully carrying them on deck, exposed them to

<sup>5</sup> See below, p.260.

<sup>6</sup> [1981] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 476 at 478; cf. above, pp.227–228.

<sup>7</sup> [1983] 2 A.C. 803 at 814. All the other members of the House of Lords agreed with Lord Bridge’s speech.

<sup>8</sup> See above, p.233 at n.89.

<sup>9</sup> [1983] 2 A.C. 803 at 813.

<sup>10</sup> ibid. and see above, p.228.

<sup>11</sup> [1984] 1 W.L.R. 48.

<sup>12</sup> ibid. at 58–59.

<sup>13</sup> ibid. at 59. cf. in different contexts, cf. Bishop v Bonham [1988] 1 W.L.R. 742; Bovis Construction (Scotland) Ltd v Whallings Construction Ltd 1995 S.L.T. 1339, HL; contrast Great North Eastern Ry Ltd v Avon Insurance plc [2001] EWCA Civ 780; [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 526, at [31].

significantly greater risks of loss or damage.<sup>14</sup> But cases of this kind also illustrate the possibility that the principle can be displaced by sufficiently clear language<sup>15</sup>; and there are conflicting decisions on the question whether it is displaced by the words “in any event” in a clause which merely limits, without wholly excluding, the carrier’s liability for such a breach.<sup>16</sup>

(iv) Total breach. In discussing the scope of the rule of construction, we distinguished between breaches that caused serious prejudice and those that made performance totally different from that bargained for.<sup>17</sup> Clear words can, no doubt, exclude liability for serious breaches, but it is less certain whether the same is true where the words purport to cover breaches that are indeed total. Two suggestions in the Suisse Atlantique case bear on the point.

The first suggestion was made by Lord Wilberforce, when he said that the court could refuse to apply an exemption clause literally if to give effect to the clause would be to “deprive one party’s stipulation of all contractual force”.<sup>18</sup> The clause might then turn the party’s promise into one to perform only if he felt like it; and a promise of this kind might not amount to a contract at all on the ground that it was illusory.<sup>19</sup> Such a situation should be contrasted with that in the Ailsa Craig case<sup>20</sup> where the clause was expressed to cover “failure in the provision of services.” It was held to apply even on the assumption that the failure was “total”<sup>21</sup>; but the clause only limited the defendants’ liability, and therefore did not make their promise illusory. If an exemption clause would, on its literal meaning, make a promise illusory, the court might reject that meaning; but such a decision could be explained on the ground that the court was rejecting the literal meaning of the clause so as to give effect to the construction of the contract as a whole.

The second suggestion is based on Lord Reid’s statement in the Suisse Atlantique case, that an exemption clause might “apply to at least some cases of fundamental breach without being so widely drawn that it can be cut down by applying the ordinary principles of construction”.<sup>22</sup> The words here italicised suggest that there might be other cases in which this would not be true: for example, if a shipowner to whom goods had been entrusted for carriage deliberately threw them into the sea,<sup>23</sup> if the defendants in the Photo Production case had deliberately burnt down the factory<sup>24</sup> or if the defendants in the George Mitchell case had supplied plastic pellets instead of seeds. In such cases the

<sup>14</sup> The Kapitan Petko Voivoda [2002] EWHC (Comm) 1306; [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 560, at [27], so far as it relates to the carrier’s exemptions from liability.

<sup>15</sup> The Antares [1987] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 424 (time bar discharging carrier “in any event . . . from all liability whatsoever”).

<sup>16</sup> Contrast J Evans & Son (Portsmouth) Ltd v Andrea Merzario Ltd [1976] 1 W.L.R. 1078; The Chanda [1987] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 494 and The Pembroke [1995] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 290 (carrier’s liability not limited) with The Kapitan Petko Voivoda [2002] EWHC (Comm) 1306; [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 560, at [28] (carrier’s liability limited).

<sup>17</sup> See above, p.233.

<sup>18</sup> Suisse Atlantique case [1967] 1 A.C. 361 at 432.

<sup>19</sup> See above, pp.83, 167, cf. Firestone Tyre & Rubber Co Ltd v Vokins & Co Ltd [1951] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 32 at 39: “It is illusory to say—‘we promise to do a thing but we are not liable if we do not do it.’” The TFL Prosperity, above, p.235, n.11, goes further in that the owner was, even on his own argument, bound to supply some ship.

<sup>20</sup> [1983] 1 W.L.R. 964.

<sup>21</sup> ibid. at 971.

<sup>22</sup> [1967] A.C. 361 at 399.

<sup>23</sup> cf. above, p.232.

<sup>24</sup> This was not the position: see [1980] A.C. 827 at 840 where Lord Wilberforce says that, though the fire was started deliberately by one of the defendants’ employees, “it was not established that he intended to burn down the factory.”

court might refuse to give effect to the clause (even if it was literally wide enough to cover the breach) because to do so would “lead to an absurdity”.<sup>25</sup>

(c) CLAUSES TO WHICH THE RULE APPLIES. The principles of strict construction which operate in cases of serious breach apply to clauses that limit,<sup>26</sup> as well as to those that wholly exclude, liability; but they do not apply to limitation clauses “in their full rigour”.<sup>27</sup> Thus in the Ailsa Craig<sup>28</sup> case the House of Lords emphasised that the clause was not one of total exclusion; and this was also true of the clause in the Suisse Atlantique<sup>29</sup> case. To put the point in another way, the presumption that the clause is not intended to cover the breach is weaker in the case of a clause which merely limits than in the case of one which wholly excludes liability. Of course the presumption can be rebutted even in a case of the latter kind.<sup>30</sup>

Exclusion and limitation clauses must be distinguished from clauses that fix damages in advance.<sup>31</sup> The distinction can be illustrated by reference to the Suisse Atlantique<sup>32</sup> case where a further ground for the decision was that the purpose of the demurrage clause was not to limit damages but rather to fix in advance the damages payable in the event of certain breaches.<sup>33</sup> Under a limitation clause the owners would have recovered such loss as they could prove, with an upper limit of $1,000 per day. Under the demurrage clause they were entitled to $1,000 per day even if they could not prove any loss at all, or only a smaller loss. In the circumstances, the clause operated to limit the liability of the charterers; but it differed from a limitation clause in that it was capable of benefiting either party. Therefore there was less need to apply strict rules of construction to it.<sup>34</sup>

This is also true of arbitration clauses.<sup>35</sup> Although such clauses may be said to exclude a remedy (in restricting a party's right to sue on the contract in a court of law),<sup>36</sup> their main purpose is not to deprive a party of rights to compensation, but to set up machinery for determining these rights. The same is true of a clause which merely prevents a party from asserting his rights by some specified procedure: e.g. by way of set-off (as opposed to cross-action).<sup>37</sup>

<sup>25</sup> Suisse Atlantique case [1967] 1 A.C. 361 at 398. The substantive doctrine also finds a, perhaps unintended, echo in the passage from Equitable Life Assurance Society v Hyman [2000] All E.R. 961 at 971 quoted on p.167 above, at n.53.

<sup>26</sup> See Bovis Construction (Scotland) Ltd v Whittlings Construction Ltd 1995 S.L.T. 1339.

<sup>27</sup> George Mitchell case [1983] 2 A.C. 803 at 814; cf. above, p.202, 204; The Happy Ranger [2002] EWCA Civ 694; [2002] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 24 at [38].

<sup>28</sup> [1983] 1 W.L.R. 964.

<sup>29</sup> [1967] 1 A.C. 361.

<sup>30</sup> As, for example, in the Photo Production case [1980] A.C. 827.

<sup>31</sup> See below, pp.999 et seq. Such clauses in contracts with consumers can fall within the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999 (sec Sch.2, para.1(e)); but those Regulations are not restricted in their operation to exemption clauses: see below, p.268.

<sup>32</sup> [1967] 1 A.C. 361.

<sup>33</sup> [1967] 1 A.C. 361 at 395, 421, 435–436.

<sup>34</sup> Semble the rule does not apply to qualifications of provisions increasing a party's normal liability: Adams v Richardson & Starling Ltd [1969] 1 W.L.R. 1465.

<sup>35</sup> Woolf v Collis Removal Service [1948] 1 K.B. 11. cf. Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977, s.13(2). Contrast Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1994, Sch.3, para.1(q), and see above n.31.

<sup>36</sup> See below, p.447.

<sup>37</sup> The Fedora [1986] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 441; but the contra proferentem, rule (above, p.221) was applied to such a clause in Connaught Restaurants Ltd v Indoor Leisure Ltd [1994] 1 W.L.R. 501 and in Eso Petroleum Ltd v Milton [1997] 1 W.L.R. 938. cf. also Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999 Sch.2 para.1(b), (under which a clause “inappropriately excluding” a consumer's right of set-off is prima facie unfair); and see above n.31.

Clauses which assume that there has been a breach and exclude or limit liability must be distinguished from those which define a contracting party's duty.<sup>38</sup> For example, a building contract may provide for completion by a fixed date and contain an "exception" for delays caused by strikes. This may only be another way of saying that the builder will complete by the agreed date, if strikes do not prevent him from doing so: he is under no higher duty.<sup>39</sup> The clause in G H Renton & Co v Palmyra Trading Corporation<sup>40</sup> permitting discharge at ports other than London or Hull was of the same nature. In these cases, failure to complete on the day named, or to get to the specified ports, is not a breach at all.<sup>41</sup> On the other hand, a clause which provided that a builder was not to be liable for loss or damage due to his defective workmanship would be an exemption clause, for it would be absurd to suppose that a building contract should impose no duty at all with respect to the standard of workmanship.<sup>42</sup> This is all the more obvious where the clause only limits, and does not wholly exclude, liability. The rule of strict construction applies to exemption clauses, but it has been said that it does not apply to clauses which merely define the duties of a contracting party.<sup>43</sup> In borderline cases the distinction between the two types of clauses will not be easy to draw; but one important test is whether the events in which a clause is expressed to operate are beyond the control of the party relying on it. If they are, the clause is likely to be regarded as a provision defining the contractual duty rather than as an exemption clause.<sup>44</sup>

(d) EFFECTS OF AFFIRMATION OR RESCISSION. A serious breach of the kind here under discussion normally gives the injured party two remedies: he can claim damages, and he can rescind (or terminate) the contract.<sup>45</sup> An exemption clause may affect one or both of these remedies. If it is so worded as to exclude or restrict only the injured party's right to damages, it will not affect that party's remedy by way of rescission at all. This is true even though the clause is, as a matter of construction, held to apply to the serious breach that has occurred. Thus in the Suisse Atlantique<sup>46</sup> case the clause covered the serious breach which had occurred, and so limited the shipowners' damages; but it did not deprive them of their right to rescind the contract by sailing their ship away. Conversely, a contract may contain a non-rejection or non-cancellation clause which excludes the right to rescind but makes no reference to damages. Such a clause may take away the right to rescind even for a very serious breach, but it would not prevent the injured party from claiming damages.<sup>47</sup>

The right to rescind may be lost by affirmation; and it was held to have been so lost in the Suisse Atlantique case when the shipowners, with knowledge of the existence of that right, took no steps to rescind the charterparty.<sup>48</sup> The case therefore supports the

<sup>38</sup> See The London Lion [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 456 at 468; The Saudi Prince [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 1.

<sup>39</sup> Seemle, the position is the same under Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977, s.3(2)(b)(i). See further, below, p.248.

<sup>40</sup> [1957] A.C. 149; above, p.229.

<sup>41</sup> The Angelia, [1973] 1 W.L.R. 210 at 230, disapproved, but on another point, in The Nema [1982] A.C. 724; below, p.898.

<sup>42</sup> cf., in another context, The Union Amsterdam [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 832 at 836.

<sup>43</sup> The Angelia, above, at 231; Kenyon Son & Craven Ltd v Baxter Hoare & Co [1971] 1 W.L.R. 519 at 522; cf. The Gudermes [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 311 at 328 (oil to be carried on a ship known to have no means of heating it).

<sup>44</sup> The Angelia, above, at 231; contrast Blackburn v Liverpool, etc. SN Co [1902] 1 K.B. 290 ("exception" expressly including negligence).

<sup>45</sup> See below, pp.843 et seq.

<sup>46</sup> [1967] 1 A.C. 361; above, p.234.

<sup>47</sup> cf. Toomey v Eagle Star Insurance Co [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 89.

<sup>48</sup> [1967] 1 A.C. 361 at 395, 398, 409, 410, 437.

view<sup>49</sup> that affirmation after a serious breach does not affect the operation of an exemption clause which is expressed so as to exclude or restrict only the right to damages for that breach<sup>50</sup>: that right continues, after affirmation, to depend on the construction of the clause.

The position was formerly thought to be different if the injured party did not affirm the contract but rescinded it on account of the serious breach. It was argued that, by rescinding, the injured party could bring the whole contract to an end; and that in this way he could get rid of an exemption clause even though the clause, on its true construction, excluded or restricted his right to damages for the breach.<sup>51</sup> But this view was rejected in Photo Production Ltd v Securicor Transport Ltd,<sup>52</sup> where defendants had agreed to provide a "night patrol service" for the claimants' factory for a weekly charge of £8 15s. One of their employees started a small fire which got out of control so that the factory, worth £650,000, was destroyed. The contract contained an exemption clause which, on its true construction, applied to this breach, in spite of the seriousness of its effects.<sup>53</sup> The House of Lords held that the claimants could not get rid of the clause by electing to rescind the contract; for to allow their claim on this ground would have amounted to a reintroduction of the "substantive doctrine" after its rejection in the Suisse Atlantique case. The effect of the claimants' election to rescind was to put an end to obligations of further performance after that election.<sup>54</sup> But it did not operate retrospectively so as to deprive the defendants of the protection of the clause with respect to loss suffered before that election had been made.

Where a party exercises his right to rescind for breach, he may, however, be prima facie entitled to damages not only in respect of past loss but also in respect of prospective loss, i.e. loss which he will suffer after rescission, as a result of the other party's wrongful repudiation.<sup>55</sup> Suppose, for example, that in the Suisse Atlantique case the shipowners had justifiably rescinded when only half the period of the charter had expired, and that they had found alternative employment for the ship for the rest of that period. They would then, but for any exemption clauses, have been entitled to damages in respect of (i) detention of the ship before rescission and (ii) loss suffered thereafter if the alternative employment of the ship was less profitable than that under the original contract. The demurrage clause limited the damages for the past loss recoverable under the first head, but it did not even purport to affect the damages for prospective loss recoverable by reason of wrongful repudiation under the second head. When Lord Reid said that the shipowners would have been entitled to damages over and above the agreed demurrage if, instead of affirming the charterparty, they had justifiably terminated it,<sup>56</sup> he was (it is submitted) referring to this prospective loss. It should be emphasised that the demurrage clause did not cover this type of loss but only damages for detention <sup>49</sup> This view is also supported by Chandris v Isbrandtsen-Moller Inc [1951] 2 K.B. 240; reversed on another ground [1951] 1 K.B. at 256. For the apparently contrary decision in Charterhouse Credit Ltd v Tolly [1963] 2 Q.B. 683, see above, p.225, n.6.

<sup>50</sup> cf. Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977, s.9(2); below, p.261.

<sup>51</sup> e.g. Harbutt's "Plasticine" Ltd v Wayne Tank Co Ltd [1970] 1 Q.B. 447, overruled in Photo Production Ltd v Securicor Transport Ltd [1980] A.C. 827.

<sup>52</sup> [1980] A.C. 827. Guest, 96 L.Q.R. 324; Sealy [1980] C.L.J. 252; Palmer and Yates [1981] C.L.J. 108; Nicol and Rawlings, 43 M.L.R. 567.

<sup>53</sup> See above, p.234.

<sup>54</sup> [1980] A.C. 827 at 844–845, 849–850.

<sup>55</sup> See below, pp.850–852.

<sup>56</sup> [1967] 1 A.C. 361 at 398, cf. ibid. 419 and 437. It does not seem that Lord Wilberforce intended to cast doubt on this dictum when in the Photo Production case at 842 he criticised a different passage of Lord Reid's speech.

under the first head. If an exemption clause on its true construction did cover prospective loss under the second head, it is submitted that the injured party could not, by simply rescinding the contract on account of the breach, get rid of the clause so as to recover full damages in respect of loss of this kind. To allow him to do so would not, indeed, infringe the general principle that rescission for breach has no retrospective effect on the operation of exemption clauses; but it would be inconsistent with the rejection of the substantive doctrine of fundamental breach. This submission is supported by a dictum of Lord Diplock in the Photo Production case that liability for such loss can be "excluded or modified by express words".<sup>57</sup> Clauses which regulate "the manner in which liability . . . is to be established",<sup>58</sup> e.g. by limiting the time within which a claim must be made, similarly continue to govern the future relations of the parties even after rescission for serious breach.<sup>59</sup> Arbitration clauses likewise survive such rescission.<sup>60</sup>

To the general rule that termination does not retrospectively deprive a party of the benefit of exemption clauses, there is or may be an exception. In the deviation cases, it is commonly held that the carrier is deprived of the benefit of exemption clauses in respect of loss which has occurred before the owner of the goods elected to terminate the contract.<sup>61</sup> One possible explanation for this state of the law is that it follows from the special considerations which affect deviation. We have seen that one reason for classifying deviation as a breach of a fundamental term is that it deprives the cargo-owner of his insurance cover<sup>62</sup>; and since it so deprives him automatically and "as from the time of the deviation,"<sup>63</sup> the same reasoning would seem to support the view that deviation deprives the carrier of the benefit of exemption clauses in the contract of carriage from the same time and with the same retrospective effect. Alternatively, it can be argued that the cargo-owner may well intend the shipowner to be deprived of such protection from the time at which the insurance cover is lost and not from some later time at which he learns of the deviation and elects to terminate the contract of carriage. On this view, the deviation cases could be "assimilated into the general law of contract"<sup>64</sup>: that is, they could be explained as turning on the construction of the contract. It would follow that a shipowner would not be retrospectively deprived of the protection of an exemption clause merely because the ship had deviated: he would be so deprived only where the clause was, on its true construction, intended to have such retrospective effect. Yet another possibility is to regard the deviation cases as exceptional or sui generis.<sup>65</sup> Whichever may be the true explanation, the authority of the deviation cases was expressly recognised in the Photo Production case.<sup>66</sup>

(e) BURDEN OF PROOF. An exemption clause may, as a matter of construction, be held not to cover certain serious breaches, and it may be alleged that the loss which has been

<sup>57</sup> [1980] A.C. 827 at 849.

<sup>58</sup> The New York Star [1981] 1 W.L.R. 138 at 145.

<sup>59</sup> ibid. cf. the discussion of "ancillary" obligations at p.850, below.

<sup>60</sup> Heyman v Darwins Ltd [1942] A.C. 356.

<sup>61</sup> See the authorities cited at pp.228–229, above.

<sup>62</sup> See above, p.229.

<sup>63</sup> Marine Insurance Act 1906, s.46(1). For the principle that discharge is automatic (i.e. without any election on the part of the insurer), see The Good Luck [1992] A.C. 233, below, p.846. That case was concerned with the effect on the contract of insurance of breach of warranty under s.33(3) of the 1906 Act; but the crucial words of that subsection ("the insurer is discharged from liability as from the time of . . .") are identical with the corresponding words of s.46(1), above, which deal with the effect on that contract of deviation.

<sup>64</sup> The Antares (No.2) [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 424 at 430; State Trading Corporation of India v S M Golodetz Ltd [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 277 at 289; cf. ibid. at 287.

<sup>65</sup> Photo Production case, [1980] A.C. 827 at 845; cf. ibid. at 850.

<sup>66</sup> ibid.; see n.65 above, p.229.

suffered is due to such a breach. The question then arises whether it is up to the claimant to show that the breach which has occurred was of this kind or whether it is up to the defendant to show that the loss was not due to a breach of this kind (but to one that is covered by the clause).

This question has arisen in a number of cases in which goods were lost by a bailee to whom they had been entrusted for storage, carriage or cleaning. On the one hand, it can be argued that the bailee should not have the burden of proving that the loss was not due to the serious breach alleged, as it is notoriously difficult to prove a negative. On the other hand there is the argument that the result in these cases generally depends on the manner of the breach<sup>67</sup>; that the bailee will generally be in a better position than the bailor to know how the goods were lost; and that the bailor should not have the burden of proving facts peculiarly accessible to the other party. After some conflict in the authorities, the latter argument has prevailed, so that the burden is on the bailee to show that the breach was not so serious as to fall outside the scope of the exemption clause.<sup>68</sup>

The above cases all concern breaches by bailees of their duty with regard to the safekeeping of the goods. They do not necessarily apply where the breach consists of delay in performance and is alleged to be serious because of its consequences.<sup>69</sup> In such cases it is probably the claimant who has the burden of proving that the delay is so serious as not to be covered by the clause. This is consistent with the principle of the bailment cases; for the consequences of the breach on the claimant's position would be a matter peculiarly within his (rather than the defendant's) knowledge.

3. Other Common Law Limitations

Even if an exemption clause on its true construction covers the breach that has occurred, its effectiveness is subject to a number of further common law limitations. These are much reduced in importance by the legislative limitations to be discussed later in this Chapter<sup>70</sup>; but they retain their practical importance in cases to which those limitations do not apply.<sup>71</sup>

(1) Misrepresentation as to contents

In Curtis v Chemical Cleaning & Dyeing Co Ltd,<sup>72</sup> the claimant took a dress to the defendants to be cleaned. She signed a receipt after being told that it exempted the defendants from liability for certain specified kinds of damage, when it actually exempted them for liability "for any damage, however arising". It was held that the defendants could not rely on the clause as they had induced the claimant to sign the

<sup>67</sup> See above, pp.231–232.

<sup>68</sup> Levison v Patent Steam Cleaning Co Ltd [1978] Q.B. 68, following Woolmer v Delmer Price Ltd [1955] 1 Q.B. 291, and distinguishing Hunt & Winterbotham (West of England) Ltd v B.R.S. (Parcels) Ltd [1962] 1 Q.B. 617. See also J Spurling Ltd v Bradshaw [1956] 1 W.L.R. 461 at 466, 470; and cf. United Fresh Meat Co Ltd v Charterhouse Cold Storage Ltd [1974] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 286 (deterioration of goods in a warehouse); Handford, 38 M.L.R. 577; Males [1978] C.L.J. 24. Contrast, in Australia, The Antwerpen [1994] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 213. The normal rule as to burden of proof in such cases may be reversed by the terms of the contract: see Thames Tideway Properties Ltd v Serfaty [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 110.

<sup>69</sup> e.g. in cases like the Suisse Atlantique case, [1967] 1 A.C. 361; above, p.234.

<sup>70</sup> See below, pp.246–285.

<sup>71</sup> See below, pp.264–266, 277–280. Theoretically, the common law limitations could be used to impugn a clause which satisfied the legislative tests of reasonableness (below, pp.252–256) and fairness (below, pp.271–279); but in practice it is unlikely that these tests could be satisfied where one of the common law limitations applied.

<sup>72</sup> [1951] 1 K.B. 805; cf. Horry v Tate & Lyle Refineries Ltd [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 416 at 422.

receipt by misrepresenting its contents. Denning L.J. said<sup>73</sup> that mere failure to draw attention to the existence or extent of the exemption clause might in some circumstances amount to misrepresentation.

(2) Overriding undertaking

An exemption clause in a document with reference to which the parties contract can be overridden by an express inconsistent undertaking given at or before the time of contracting. Thus a buyer of goods by auction can recover damages for breach of an oral undertaking given at the time of sale although the printed conditions of sale exempt the seller from all liability for defects.<sup>74</sup> To bring this rule into operation, there must be an “express specific oral promise”<sup>75</sup> which is inconsistent with the exemption clause: a party is not prevented from relying on a clause merely because no reference was made to it at the time of contracting, so that (in this sense) it can be said to be inconsistent with the terms expressly agreed. Where a series of contracts is made under a master agreement, an obligation imposed by that agreement may similarly override an exemption clause contained in a written document evidencing the terms of the particular contract in question.<sup>76</sup>

(3) Excluding liability for fraud

The common law power to exclude liability for misrepresentation inducing a contract<sup>77</sup> has been limited by s.3 of the Misrepresentation Act 1967<sup>78</sup>; but that section does not affect contractual provisions purporting to exclude liability for fraud in the performance of a contract. It seems unlikely that such a provision would now be regarded as effective. In Tullis v Jacson<sup>79</sup> the parties to a building contract agreed to submit disputes to the arbitration of an architect, whose award was to be final, and not to be set aside for “any pretence, suggestion, charge or insinuation of fraud”. An attempt to challenge the award on the ground that it was not made in good faith failed because of this provision. But this decision has been judicially criticised<sup>80</sup> and is in any event limited in two ways. Such a clause would not protect a party from liability for his own fraud<sup>81</sup>; and although it is in principle possible to exclude liability for the fraud of an agent, even this cannot be done by general words.<sup>82</sup> Only “the clearest possible wording”<sup>83</sup> will exclude even such

<sup>73</sup> [1951] 1 K.B. 805 at 809.

<sup>74</sup> Couchman v Hill [1947] K.B. 554; Harling v Eddy [1951] 2 K.B. 739; these cases can also be explained on another ground: above, p.183; cf. Brikom Investments Ltd v Carr [1979] Q.B. 467 at 480; BCT Software Solutions Ltd v Arnold Laver & Co Ltd [2002] EWHC 1298, Ch; [2002] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 85.

<sup>75</sup> George Mitchell (Chesterhall) Ltd v Finney Lock Seeds Ltd [1983] Q.B. 284 at 309, affirmed without reference to this point [1983] 2 A.C. 803.

<sup>76</sup> Gallagher v BRS Ltd [1974] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 440; J Evans & Son (Portsmouth) Ltd v Andrea Merzario [1976] 1 W.L.R. 1078; cf. Mendelssohn v Normand Ltd [1970] 1 Q.B. 177.

<sup>77</sup> See Toomey v Eagle Star Insurance Co [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 89, where the clause on its true construction was held not to cover negligent misrepresentation.

<sup>78</sup> See below, p.385.

<sup>79</sup> [1892] 3 Ch. 441. In so far as this case decides that the architect's decision was final on a point of law, it will not be followed: Re Davstone Estates Ltd's Leases [1969] 2 Ch. 378.

<sup>80</sup> Czarnikow v Roth, Schmidt & Co [1922] 2 K.B. 478 at 488.

<sup>81</sup> S Pearson & Son Ltd v Dublin Corporation [1907] A.C. 351 at 353, 362; Shipskreditforeningen v Emperor Navigation [1998] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 67 at 76; cf. Garden Neptune Shipping Ltd v Occidental Worldwide Investment Corp [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 330 at 335.

<sup>82</sup> S Pearson & Son Ltd v Dublin Corporation, above; Walker v Boyle [1982] 1 W.L.R. 495. cf. Schneider v Heath (1813) 3 Camp. 506 and Re Englefield Holdings [1962] 1 W.L.R. 1119; Thomas Witter Ltd v TBP Industries Ltd [1996] 2 All E.R. 573 at 598.

<sup>83</sup> HHH Casualty & General Insurance v Chase Manhattan Bank [2001] EWCA Civ 1250; [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep 483, at [110].

liability: that is, there must be an “express reference to fraud” or “language which is in every way the equivalent of such express reference.”<sup>84</sup>

(4) Excluding liability for breach of certain fiduciary duties

The promoter of a company is under a fiduciary duty to the company not to make a profit out of the promotion without disclosing it to the company.<sup>85</sup> He cannot contract out of this duty.<sup>86</sup> It is submitted that any contract term by which a person who was under a fiduciary duty attempted to exempt himself from liability for a deliberate breach of that duty would be similarly ineffective.<sup>87</sup>

(5) Excluding “natural justice”

Where members of an association agree to submit certain disputes to a domestic tribunal, that tribunal is prima facie bound by certain rules of “natural justice”. It must give each party a fair hearing and a chance to rebut the case that is made against him; and its members must not have any pecuniary interest in the dispute or any other interest which is likely to bias them.<sup>88</sup> In a number of cases<sup>89</sup> Lord Denning M.R. has said that a provision in the rules of an association would be void if it purported to oust the rules of “natural justice.”

(6) Unreasonableness

It is sometimes said that exemption clauses may be held invalid on the ground that they are “unreasonable in themselves or irrelevant to the main purpose of the contract”<sup>90</sup> or “so unreasonable that no-one could contemplate that they exist”.<sup>91</sup> Unreasonableness of the latter kind can certainly be relevant to the process of incorporation of a clause in a contract, in the sense that the degree of notice required for this purpose increases in proportion to the unusualness of the clause.<sup>92</sup> Some dicta go further and suggest that even a properly incorporated clause can be invalid on the ground of unreasonableness<sup>93</sup>

<sup>84</sup> ibid. at [159].

<sup>85</sup> See Gower, Modern Company Law (6th ed.), pp.297, 133 et seq.

<sup>86</sup> Gluckstein v Barnes [1900] A.C. 240. This rule is quite independent of the statutory provisions referred to at p.399, below.

<sup>87</sup> Contrast Bogg v Raper, The Times, April 22, 1998 (liability for negligence of a solicitor as a trustee of a will drawn up by himself effectively excluded).

<sup>88</sup> See de Smith, Woolf and Jowell, Judicial Review of Administrative Action (5th ed.), Chaps 7 to 12, for a full account of these rules.

<sup>89</sup> Lee v Showmen's Guild [1952] 2 Q.B. 329; Bonsor v Musicians' Union [1954] Ch. 479 (dissenting): the majority decision was reversed by the House of Lords [1956] A.C. 104, without reference to this point. cf. Edwards v SOGAT [1971] Ch. 354 at 382; Enderby Town FC Ltd v The FA Ltd [1971] Ch. 591 at 606; Breen v AEU [1971] 2 Q.B. 175 at 190; and see London Export Corp v Jubilee Coffee Roasting Co [1958] 1 W.L.R. 661. For the contrary view, see Maclean v The Workers' Union [1929] Ch. 602 at 603; cf. Russell v Duke of Norfolk [1949] 1 All E.R. 109, where a majority of the Court of Appeal held that an undertaking to observe the rules of natural justice could not be implied into a contract the terms of which gave the domestic tribunal an absolute discretion. See also Fontaine v Chesterton (1968) S.J. 690, discussed in John v Rees [1970] Ch. 345 at 398–400.

<sup>90</sup> Watkins v Rymill (1883) 10 Q.B.D. 178 at 189.

<sup>91</sup> Thompson v London, Midland & Scottish Ry [1930] 1 K.B. 41 at 56.

<sup>92</sup> See above, p.219; cf. (in relation to terms other than exemption clauses) below, p.246.

<sup>93</sup> See Lord Denning M.R. in Thornton v Shoe Lane Parking Ltd [1971] 2 Q.B. 163 at 170; Gillespie Bros & Co Ltd v Roy Bowles Transport Ltd [1973] Q.B. 400 at 416; Levison v Patent Steam Carpet Cleaning Co Ltd [1978] Q.B. 68 at 69; Re Brocklehurst (dec'd) [1978] Ch. 14 at 31 (dissenting); Standard Chartered Bank Ltd v Walker [1982] 1 W.L.R. 1410 at 1416.

or unfairness.<sup>94</sup> But no decision squarely supports this view, which is also rejected in other dicta.<sup>95</sup>

Many exemption clauses are now subject to a requirement of reasonableness under the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 or to one of fairness under the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999.<sup>96</sup> One possible view is that the courts might rely by way of analogy on these requirements so as to develop similar requirements at common law. But such a development would be open to the objection that it would extend the requirements precisely to cases from which the legislator had deliberately excluded them; and it is submitted that the better view is that the existence of the legislative requirements has reduced both the need for, and the likelihood of, the recognition of unreasonableness or unfairness as grounds for the invalidity of exemption clauses<sup>97</sup> at common law.<sup>98</sup>

(7) Third parties

The question whether exemption clauses can protect or prejudice third parties is discussed in Chapter 15.<sup>99</sup>

SECTION 2. OTHER STANDARD TERMS AT COMMON LAW

The problem raised by standard terms is by no means confined to exemption clauses. It can arise also where such terms confer rights on the party relying on them, or where they restrictively define the other party's rights under the contract (other than those based on the former party's breach).

The first of these possibilities is illustrated by cases which raise the question at what stage an estate agent is entitled to his commission. This question is more fully discussed in Chapter 17; here it need only be noted that the courts have tried, by various more or less strained constructions, to uphold the principle that no commission is payable if no sale takes place (unless the sale falls through because of the client's default). But in the end the courts were unable to maintain this principle in the teeth of clearly worded contracts entitling the agent to his commission whether a sale resulted from his efforts or not.<sup>2</sup> The second possibility is illustrated by standard terms in contracts of insurance which may make statements by the assured the basis of the contract even though they are of little importance in relation to the risk. The effect of such clauses is that the insurer can repudiate liability for some quite trivial misstatement.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>94</sup> Laceys Footwear (Wholesale) Ltd v Bowler International Ltd [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 369 at 384–385, per Brooke J.J.; the majority based their decision on the construction of the clause: see above, p.221.

<sup>95</sup> Van Toll v South Eastern Ry (1862) 12 C.B.N.S. 75 at 85; Grand Trunk Ry of Canada v Robinson [1915] A.C. 740 at 747; Luddit v Ginger Coote Airways Ltd [1947] A.C. 233 at 242.

<sup>96</sup> See below, pp.252–258, 271–279.

<sup>97</sup> For other standard terms, see below, p.246.

<sup>98</sup> Clark v West Ham Corp [1909] 2 K.B. 858 is best explained as turning on the construction of the relevant statute.

<sup>99</sup> See below, pp.626 et seq.

<sup>1</sup> See below, pp.742–744.

<sup>2</sup> Note, however, the view of Lord Denning M.R. in Jaques v Lloyd D George & Partners Ltd [1968] 1 W.L.R. 625, stated below, p.743, n.24. The Estate Agents Act 1979, s.18 has done nothing to resolve the problem; it merely requires the agent to inform the client of the circumstances in which commission will become due. If the agent complies with the requirements imposed by or under the Act, the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999 seem to be excluded: see reg.4(2)(a).

<sup>3</sup> See below, p.396. The Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 does not alter this position: below p.264; the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999 might apply as contracts of insurance are not specifically excepted from their operation; see further below, p.272.

To a limited extent the courts have been able to protect the weaker contracting party in some such situations. They have, for example, held that the rules which govern the incorporation of exemption clauses<sup>4</sup> and some of the rules which govern their construction<sup>5</sup> also apply to certain standard terms<sup>6</sup> which purport to confer rights on the party relying on those terms. Such reasoning also forms one basis of Interfoto Picture Library Ltd v Stiletto Visual Programmes Ltd.<sup>7</sup> In that case, the defendants (an advertising agency) had hired photographic transparencies from the claimants under a contract allegedly incorporating the terms of the claimants' delivery note, which had been sent with the goods. One of these terms purported to make the defendants liable for a "holding charge" of £5 per day (an unusually high rate)<sup>8</sup> for each transparency retained for more than 14 days. In holding that the defendants were not liable to pay this charge, both members of the Court of Appeal regarded it as crucial that the claimants had failed to take reasonable steps to bring the term to the attention of the defendants. But while Dillon L.J. drew from this failure the orthodox conclusion that the term had not been incorporated in the contract,<sup>9</sup> it is less clear exactly why Bingham L.J. regarded the failure as vital. It seems that he so regarded it (even on the assumption, that the terms of the delivery note had been incorporated into the contract),<sup>10</sup> because, on account of the failure, it would not be "fair to hold [the defendants] bound by the condition in question".<sup>11</sup> He went on to suggest that "this may yield a result not very different from the civil law principle of good faith, at any rate so far as the formation of the contract is concerned".<sup>12</sup> The reference here to "formation" seems to indicate that Bingham L.J. was, after all, concerned with the incorporation of the clause and perhaps intended to make the point that "this unreasonable and extortionate clause"<sup>13</sup> was not incorporated merely because the formal requirements of offer and acceptance had been satisfied<sup>14</sup>: there must, in addition, be "fair" notice, and the degree of notice required increases with the unusualness or unreasonableness of the clause.<sup>15</sup> But once the requisite degree of notice has been given, the English common law does not, as a general rule, control the substance of the clause; it does not impose any further requirement that contracts must be reasonable or that contractual rights must be exercised reasonably.<sup>16</sup> The rejection by

<sup>4</sup> See above, pp.216–220.

<sup>5</sup> See above, pp.220 et. seq. Obviously, the rules governing cases of serious breach (above, pp.225–241) cannot apply where there is no breach.

<sup>6</sup> e.g. indemnity clauses: above, p.218, n.38 and some clauses conferring rights to be paid: Sonat Offshore S.A. v Amerada Hess Development Ltd [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 191.

<sup>7</sup> [1989] Q.B. 433.

<sup>8</sup> ibid. at 436: a reasonable rate would have been £3.50 per transparency per week.

<sup>9</sup> See above, p.219.

<sup>10</sup> [1989] Q.B. at 445: "I do not think that the defendants could successfully contend that [the conditions] were not incorporated in the contract."

<sup>11</sup> ibid.; cf. Timeload Ltd v British Telecommunications plc [1995] F.M.L.R. 459 at 468; contrast Nutting v Baldwin [1995] 1 W.L.R. 201 at 211, where the term was "neither onerous nor unusual," cf. above, p.219, n.51.

<sup>12</sup> [1989] Q.B. 433 at 445; this approach was favoured by Brooke L.J. in Lacey's Footwear (Wholesale) Ltd v Bowler International Ltd [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 369 at 384 (where the clause in question was a limitation clause).

<sup>13</sup> [1989] Q.B. 433 at 445. Semble, it does not for this purpose suffice merely that the clause was unusual: HIH Casualty & General Insurance Ltd v New Hampshire Insurance Co [2001] EWCA Civ 735; [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 39, at [211].

<sup>14</sup> cf. above, p.47.

<sup>15</sup> See above, p.219.

<sup>16</sup> See, for example Margaritis Navigation Agency Ltd v Henry W Peabody of London Ltd [1965] 1 Q.B. 300; Innisfail Laundry v Dame (1963) 107 S.J. 437; for exceptions, see above, pp.65, 168, and below, pp.1009–1010; and cf. Paula Lee Ltd v Robert Zehil & Co Ltd [1983] 2 All E.R. 390; Walkinshaw v Dinitz [2001] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 632 at 649, affirmed [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 165.

the courts of the substantive doctrine of fundamental breach<sup>17</sup> can be said to support this general common law rule. In a number of situations to be discussed later in this Chapter, standard terms other than exemption clauses are now subject to legislative control; and the need for such legislation seems to be based on the assumption that, at common law, the principle of freedom of contract as a general rule applies<sup>18</sup> to cases of the kind discussed in this Section.

There may, however, be highly exceptional cases in which the common law is prepared to recognise exceptions to its general rule. It has, for example, been said that a term in a contract for the deposit of goods at a railway station would be void for unreasonableness if it provided that £1,000 was to be forfeited if the goods were not collected within 48 hours.<sup>19</sup> The far-fetched nature of the example suggests that this common law exception to the general rule is not likely to have much practical importance. The invalidity of penalty clauses<sup>20</sup> could be regarded as another common law exception to the general rule; but this exception is limited in scope, as a clause is penal only if it requires a payment<sup>21</sup> to be made on breach: not if it specifies some other event on which the payment is to be made.<sup>22</sup>

SECTION 3. LEGISLATIVE LIMITATIONS ON EFFECTIVENESS OF STANDARD TERMS

The most important legislative limitations on the effectiveness of standard terms are now contained in the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 and in the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999. These two sets of provisions overlap, so that some types of terms are governed by both of them and others by one though not by the other.<sup>23</sup> The resulting structure is complex and proposals to simplify it by combining the two sets of rules into a single legislative scheme are under consideration by the Law Commissions.<sup>24</sup> In the present Section, we shall deal only with one technique of control (used by this and other legislation), which is to deprive certain exemption clauses and standard terms of their legal force. Other legislative techniques will be considered in the next Section of this Chapter.

1. The Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977<sup>25</sup>

The Act deals almost exclusively with exemption clauses in contracts<sup>26</sup>; it makes some such clauses ineffective in all circumstances and others ineffective unless they comply with a requirement of reasonableness.

<sup>17</sup> See above, pp.225–226.

<sup>18</sup> cf. below, pp.395–396, 422–423.

<sup>19</sup> Parker v South Eastern Ry (1876) 2 C.P.D. 416 at 428.

<sup>20</sup> See below, pp.999 et seq.

<sup>21</sup> Or some other performance: below, p.1003.

<sup>22</sup> See below, pp.1004–1006; in the example in Parker's case, above at n.19, it seems that failure to collect the goods is not a breach, so that the clause is not a penalty.

<sup>23</sup> See further p.267 below.

<sup>24</sup> Law Commission Consultation Paper No.166, Scottish Law Commission Discussion Paper No.119 (2002).

<sup>25</sup> Thompson, Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977; Coote, (1978) 41 M.L.R. 312; Sealy [1978] C.L.J. 15; Reynolds, [1978] 1 L.M.C.L.Q. 201; Adams and Brownsword, 104 L.Q.R. 94.

<sup>26</sup> See above, p.216 n.10. The Act also deals with certain notices not having contractual effect, e.g. in ss.2 and 11(3). Attempts by such notices to exclude or restrict tort liability are beyond the scope of this book.

(1) Preliminary definitions

The operation of the Act depends on a number of preliminary definitions.

(a) “BUSINESS LIABILITY” AND “DEALING AS CONSUMER”. The Act defines “business liability” as “liability for breach of obligations or duties arising (a) from things done or to be done by a person in the course of a business (whether his own business or another’s); or (b) from the occupation of premises used for business purposes of the occupier”.<sup>27</sup> Such a person will in the following discussion be called B.

A person “deals as consumer” if he does not make (or hold himself out as making) the contract in the course of a business and the other party does make the contract in the course of a business.<sup>28</sup> For this purpose, a contract is made “in the course of” a business only if it forms part of the regular course of dealing of that business.<sup>29</sup> In the case of contracts for the supply of goods, it is also excepted where the goods are supplied to an individual,<sup>29a</sup> necessary for the goods to be of a type ordinarily supplied for private use or consumption.<sup>30</sup> A buyer of goods is not to be regarded as dealing as consumer, (a) if he is an individual and the goods are second hand goods sold at public auction which individuals have the opportunity of attending in person; or (b) if he is not an individual and the goods are sold by auction or competitive tender.<sup>31</sup> In the following discussion a person who deals as consumer will be called C.

Generally, contracts will be made between B and C, or between B1 and B2. It is, however, impossible to have a contract between two persons each of whom deals as consumer, since it is part of the definition of dealing as consumer that one party does, while the other does not, make the contract in the course of a business. If, for example, a

<sup>27</sup> s.1(3). “Business” includes a profession and activities of government departments or local or public authorities: s.14. Liability to persons gaining access to premises for recreational or educational purposes is excepted, in certain circumstances, by Occupiers’ Liability Act 1984, s.2

<sup>28</sup> s.12(1)(a) and (b). The EC Directive on the Sale of Consumer Goods and Associated Guarantees (Dir. 1999/44) defines “consumer” more narrowly to mean “any natural person who, in the contracts covered by this Directive, is acting for purposes not related to his trade, business or profession”. The Regulations which implement this Directive in the UK use similar language in defining “consumer” as “any natural person who, in contracts covered by these Regulations, is acting for purposes which are outside his trade, business or profession” (Sale and Supply of Goods to Consumers Regulations 2002, SI 2002/3045, reg.2). But the techniques adopted by these Regulations to give effect to the new rights specified in the Directive are (1) to widen the scope of one the statutorily implied terms as to quality, where the person to whom the goods are supplied “deals as consumer” (regs.3, 7, 9, 10 and 13) and (2) to give certain additional remedies or rights to such persons where the supplier is in breach of certain statutorily implied terms or of an express term (regs.5 and 9). The expression “dealing as consumer” is defined in the relevant statutes by cross-reference to the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977: see Sale of Goods Act 1979, s.61(5A), Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982, s.18(4), Supply of Goods (Implied Terms) Act 1973, s.11A(4). The reference is to s.12 of the 1977 Act, which is amended by the 2002 Regulations but not so as to restrict the definition of consumer, even in contracts for the supply of goods, to natural persons: see text at nn.29a and 30, below. Hence “dealing as consumer” in the Acts above referred to seems to have a wider meaning than that of “consumer” in the Regulations.

<sup>29</sup> R & B Customs Brokers Ltd v United Dominions Trust Ltd [1988] 1 W.L.R. 321 (company held to have dealt as consumer in buying a car for use of one of its directors, having only made two or three such purchases in the past); Price, 52 M.L.R. 245; Jones and Harland, 2 J.C.L. 266. The amendment to s.12(1)(c) referred to in n.24 below does not affect this position: it merely removes the requirement that the goods must be of a type ordinarily supplied for private use or consumption from cases in which the buyer, etc. is a natural person. Contrast the interpretation in Stevenson v Rogers [1991] 1 All E.R. 613 of “course of business” in Sale of Goods Act 1979, s.14(2).

<sup>29a</sup> s.12(1A), as inserted by Sale and Supply of Goods to Consumers Regulations 2002 (SI 2002/3045), reg.14(2).

<sup>30</sup> s.12(1)(c) as amended by Sale and Supply of Goods to Consumers Regulations 2002 (SI 2002/3045), reg.14(2).

<sup>31</sup> s.12(2), as substituted by Sale and Supply of Goods to Consumer Regulations 2002 (SI 2002/3045), reg.14(3).

car were sold “privately” (neither buyer nor seller acting in the course of a business) there would be no dealing as consumer. However, a person can deal as consumer in disposing of goods, no less than in acquiring goods or services: for example, if the “private” (non-business) owner of a car transferred it to a car dealer in part-exchange for a new car, he would deal as consumer in relation to the first as well as to the second vehicle.

(b) EXCLUDING OR RESTRICTING LIABILITY. Many sections of the Act limit the effectiveness of clauses that “exclude or restrict” liability. To the same extent these sections also prevent a party from doing certain analogous things: for example, from imposing a short time limit within which claims must be brought, or from excluding a particular remedy (such as rejection or set-off)<sup>32</sup> without affecting another (such as damages).<sup>33</sup> Other clauses which do not in terms exclude or restrict liability may nevertheless have this effect in substance. For example, a provision in a contract between X and Y that Y will indemnify X for any liability which X may incur to Y is in substance a clause excluding X’s liability to Y and will be treated as such for the purposes of the Act.<sup>34</sup> A clause requiring an employee to work such long hours as would lead to injury to his health could likewise be regarded as one which exempted the employer from liability which, but for the clause, he would incur in respect of the injury.<sup>35</sup> On the other hand, a valid agreed damages clause<sup>36</sup> is probably not subject to the Act, for such a clause may extend as well as restrict liability. An agreement in writing to submit present or future differences to arbitration is not to be treated as excluding or restricting liability.<sup>37</sup>

In two cases, the Act prevents a party from excluding or restricting duties (as opposed to liabilities): namely where a provision purports to exclude (i) the duty of care giving rise to liability in negligence<sup>38</sup> or (ii) the duties arising out of terms implied by statute in contracts for the supply of goods.<sup>39</sup> Apart from these cases, the Act does not strike at provisions which exclude or restrict duties. Thus a provision purporting to exclude or restrict a seller’s duty as to the fitness of goods for a particular purpose would only be effective to the extent permitted by the Act<sup>40</sup>; but the effectiveness of a clause qualifying a provision as to the time of delivery (e.g. by making it “subject to strikes” or “subject to availability”) would not be governed by the Act.<sup>41</sup>

At common law a distinction is sometimes drawn between clauses which exclude or restrict liability and those which prevent it from arising<sup>42</sup> and in some cases this distinction is no doubt relevant for the purposes of the Act. For example, if a seller of goods expressly warned the buyer not to use goods for a specified purpose, any implied term of fitness for that particular purpose would be negated, and the warning would not be subject to the Act.<sup>43</sup> But to give such effect to all provisions which might at

<sup>32</sup> Stewart Gill Ltd v Horatio Myer & Co Ltd [1992] Q.B. 600; Esso Petroleum Ltd v Milton [1997] 1 W.L.R. 938; Schenkers Ltd v Overland Shoes Ltd [1998] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 499; cf. BOC Group plc v Centeon plc [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 970.

<sup>33</sup> s.13(1).

<sup>34</sup> Phillips Products Ltd v Hyland [1987] 1 W.L.R. 659, below, p.256.

<sup>35</sup> Johnstone v Bloomsbury Health Authority [1992] Q.B. 333.

<sup>36</sup> See above, p.237; below, p.999. For the position under the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999, see p.268 below.

<sup>37</sup> s.13(2). Contrast the position under the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999, below, p.269.

<sup>38</sup> See the reference to ss.2 and 5 in s.13(1).

<sup>39</sup> See the reference to ss.6 and 7 in s.13(1).

<sup>40</sup> See s.6(1) and (2).

<sup>41</sup> s.3(2)(b)(ii) would not apply to such a clause: see below, p.253.

<sup>42</sup> cf. above, p.238.

<sup>43</sup> Wormell v RHM Agriculture (East) Ltd [1987] 1 W.L.R. 1091; cf. Harlingdon & Leinster Enterprises Ltd v Christopher Hull Fine Art Ltd [1990] 1 All E.R. 737 at 753, and the examples given at p.238, above.

common law prevent liability from arising would, it has been said, “emasculate”<sup>44</sup> the Act. In Smith v Eric S Bush<sup>45</sup> the House of Lords has therefore held that a clause purporting to exclude responsibility for negligence on the part of the valuer of a house was subject to the test of reasonableness under the Act. The decision was based on s.13(1) of the Act, by which a term purporting to exclude the duty of care giving rise to liability in negligence is to be treated as a term excluding or restricting liability. In order to determine whether such a duty existed, the court must disregard the term purporting to exclude it, and ask itself whether, but for the existence of the term, there would have been such a duty; if so, the effectiveness of term is then subject to the restrictions imposed by the Act. It seems likely that the courts will also “look behind” certain other clauses which are similarly being used in an obvious attempt to evade the Act.<sup>46</sup>

(2) Ineffective terms

In the following cases, attempts to exclude or restrict liability are wholly ineffective under the 1977 Act or under other legislation.

(a) NEGLIGENCE LIABILITY: DEATH OR PERSONAL INJURY. By s.2(1) of the 1977 Act, B<sup>47</sup> cannot by any contract term or notice exclude or restrict his<sup>48</sup> liability for death or personal injury<sup>49</sup> resulting from negligence<sup>50</sup> to any person (whether C or not). Provisions excluding strict liability for death or personal injury are not affected by s.2(1). Under other legislation, any provision in a contract for the carriage of passengers by rail<sup>51</sup> or by road in a public service vehicle<sup>52</sup> is void if it purports to negative or limit the liability of the carrier in respect of the death or personal injury of the passenger. These Acts do not expressly refer to negligence, but since the carrier is not liable in the absence of negligence<sup>53</sup> their scope is restricted to negligence liability.

S.2(1) does not apply where death or personal injury results from a breach of contract or duty which can be, and is, committed without negligence: for example, where a seller supplies defective goods to a buyer, where a producer incurs “product liability” in respect of defective products, or where a person who does work for the provision of a dwelling fits defective components.<sup>54</sup> Clauses purporting to exclude liability for such

<sup>44</sup> Smith v Eric S Bush [1990] 1 A.C. 831 at 848.

<sup>45</sup> See above, n.44; cf. Davies v Parry [1988] 1 E.G.L.R. 147.

<sup>46</sup> cf. below, p.386. Smith v Eric S. Bush, above, deals only with clauses purporting to exclude the duty of care giving rise to liability in negligence. It seems that the “but for” test there formulated would not apply to sale of goods cases such as Wormell v RHM Agriculture (East) Ltd, above, n.43: in order to determine for what “particular purpose” goods had been bought, a warning such as the one given in that case would, it is submitted, have to be taken into account. For possible application of the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999, see below, pp.273–274.

<sup>47</sup> See s.1(3).

<sup>48</sup> s.2 does not prevent a contracting party from excluding or restricting the liability of a third party: The Chevalier Roze [1983] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 438 at 442. For the effect of the section on indemnity clauses, see below, p.256.

<sup>49</sup> As defined by s.14.

<sup>50</sup> As defined by s.1(1). “Negligence” is there stated to include “breach . . . of any obligation, arising from the . . . terms . . . of a contract, to take reasonable care . . . ;” for the purpose of this definition the court must apply the “but for” test (above, n.46), i.e. it must disregard a clause the effect of which is (or would be, if the clause were valid) to exclude liability for such a breach: Phillips Products Ltd v Hyland [1987] 1 W.L.R. 659.

<sup>51</sup> Transport Act 1962, s.43(7).

<sup>52</sup> Public Passenger Vehicles Act 1981, s.29. cf. also Financial Services and Markets Act 2000, s.253 (dealing with purely financial loss).

<sup>53</sup> Readhead v Midland Ry (1869) L.R. 4 Q.B. 376; Barkway v S. Wales Transport Co Ltd [1950] 1 All E.R. 392 at 403–404.

<sup>54</sup> For strict liability in such cases, see below, p.839.

breaches may, however, be ineffective under other provisions of the Act,<sup>55</sup> or under other Acts.<sup>56</sup>

(b) “GUARANTEES” OF CONSUMER GOODS. S.5 deals with provisions in “guarantees” of goods of a type ordinarily supplied for private use or consumption. It does not apply between the parties to the contract for the supply of the goods<sup>57</sup>; exemption clauses in such contracts are regulated by ss.6 and 7. It is aimed at the relations between manufacturer and customer under so-called manufacturers’ guarantees.<sup>58</sup>

The section defines a “guarantee” as a written promise or assurance that defects will be made good.<sup>59</sup> It provides that B<sup>60</sup> cannot by means of such a guarantee exclude or restrict liability for loss or damage that arises from defects in the goods while in “consumer use” and results from the negligence of a person concerned in the manufacture or distribution of the goods.<sup>61</sup> Goods are in “consumer use” when a person is using them or has them in his possession otherwise than exclusively for the purpose of a business. Thus generally s.5 will apply only between B and C. But it may also apply in certain other circumstances: for example, where a car is bought in the course of a business (so that the buyer does not deal as consumer) and used partly for business and partly for private purposes.

Under the Sale and Supply of Goods to Consumers Regulations 2002, a “consumer guarantee” relating to goods supplied to a consumer “takes effect . . . as a contractual obligation owed by the guarantor.”<sup>62</sup> The Regulations do not themselves<sup>62a</sup> prohibit exclusion or restriction of liability under the guarantee: e.g. by terms imposing a short time limit, or a low financial limit, on claims under the guarantee; but it seems that, if the “consumer guarantee” were also a “guarantee” within s.5 of the 1997 Act, then the validity of such terms would be open to attack under that section.<sup>62b</sup> Terms limiting the “duration” of the guarantee itself,<sup>62c</sup> or restricting the consumer’s right under it to one to the return of the price,<sup>62d</sup> seem however, to be authorised under the Regulations, so that their validity is not open to attack under the Act.<sup>62e</sup> The definition of a “consumer guarantee” in the Regulations differs significantly from that of a “guarantee” in the Act: in particular, the “consumer” under the Regulations must be a “natural person”<sup>62f</sup>; the “guarantor” may be the other party to the contract for the supply of the goods to the consumer<sup>62g</sup>; and there is no requirement of “consumer use” in the Regulations.

<sup>55</sup> e.g. ss.6, 7.

<sup>56</sup> Defective Premises Act 1972, s.1(1) (“proper materials”) and s.6(3). Consumer Protection Act, 1987, ss.5 and 7(1); below, p.252.

<sup>57</sup> s.5(3).

<sup>58</sup> See above, p.77 and below, p.582.

<sup>59</sup> s.5(2)(b); making good is defined so as to include payment of compensation.

<sup>60</sup> See s.1(3).

<sup>61</sup> s.5(1). Consumer Protection Act 1987, s.7 (below, p.252) could also apply to such a guarantee.

<sup>62</sup> SI 2002/3045 (implementing Directive 1999/44), reg.15(1).

<sup>62a</sup> For such a prohibition, see Directive 1999/44, Art.7.

<sup>62b</sup> Thus securing compliance with Art.7, above.

<sup>62c</sup> SI 2002/3045, reg.15(2) (“duration”).

<sup>62d</sup> ibid. reg.2 (definition of “consumer guarantee”).

<sup>62e</sup> Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977, s.29, below p.266.

<sup>62f</sup> Reg.2 (definition of “consumer”).

<sup>62g</sup> Reg.2 (definition of “guarantor”).

(c) SALE OF GOODS AND HIRE-PURCHASE. S.6(1) provides that liability for breach of the undertakings as to title implied by statute<sup>63</sup> into contracts for the sale or hire-purchase of goods cannot be excluded or restricted by reference to any contract term. S.6(2) lays down the same rule, but only "as against a person dealing as consumer", in relation to the statutorily implied terms as to correspondence of the goods with description or sample, and as to their quality or fitness for a particular purpose.<sup>64</sup>

As a general principle the only types of terms made completely ineffective by the Act are those purporting to exclude or restrict "business liability".<sup>65</sup> S.6(4), however, provides that the liabilities referred to "in this section" are not only "business liabilities . . . but include those arising under any contract of sale of goods or hire-purchase agreement". It follows that a private (non-business) seller cannot exclude or restrict liability for breach of the implied undertakings as to title. At first sight, s.6(4) suggests that an attempt by a private seller to exclude or restrict liability for breach of the implied undertakings as to correspondence with description, etc., (referred to in s.6(2)) is equally ineffective. But s.6(2) applies only "as against a person dealing as consumer", and a person can so deal only if "the other party does make the contract in the course of a business".<sup>66</sup> Since a private seller does not contract "in the course of a business", it seems that a person who buys from such a seller does not "deal as consumer" and is not protected by s.6(2); he is protected only by the requirement of reasonableness.<sup>67</sup> In some cases, indeed, the statutorily implied term only arises at all where the supplier acts in the course of a business. This is true of the implied terms as to satisfactory quality and fitness for a particular purpose.<sup>68</sup> Here the private supplier is never subject to the statutorily implied term at all, and so the issue of the validity of a clause excluding liability for breach of it cannot arise.<sup>69</sup>

(d) OTHER CONTRACTS FOR THE SUPPLY OF GOODS. S.7 deals with contracts for the supply of goods other than contracts of sale and hire purchase: for example, contracts of exchange, pledge or hire. By statute, such contracts contain implied terms as to title, correspondence with description or sample, quality and fitness for a particular purpose.<sup>70</sup> As against C, B<sup>71</sup> cannot, in such contracts, exclude or restrict liability in respect of the failure of the goods to correspond with their description or with a sample, or in <sup>63</sup> By Sale of Goods Act 1979, s.12 and Supply of Goods (Implied Terms) Act 1973, s.8 as substituted by Consumer Credit Act 1974, s.192 and Sch.4, para.35. For amendments of the 1979 and 1973 Acts, see Sale and Supply of Goods Act 1994 s.7 and Sch.2.

<sup>64</sup> By Sale of Goods Act 1979, ss.13–15 and Supply of Goods (Implied Terms) Act 1973, ss.9–11 as substituted by Consumer Credit Act 1974, s.192 and Sch.4, para.35; for amendments see above n.63; Hughes v Hall and Hall [1981] R.T.R. 430. The Regulations referred to in n.62 above make further amendments to s.14 of the 1979 Act (reg.3) and confer additional rights or remedies on buyers who deal as consumers (Sale of Goods Act 1979 ss.48A–48D, as inserted by reg.5 of those Regulations). It seems that these new provisions are subject to s.6(2) of the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977. For the meaning of the phrase "dealing as consumer" for this purpose see above, p.247, n.28. Similar amendments are made by the same Regulations to the Sale of Goods (Implied Terms) Act 1973 below, n.68) and to the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982 (below n.70; see regs.7, 9, 10 and 13).

<sup>65</sup> See s.1(3) of the 1977 Act.

<sup>66</sup> s.12(1)(b).

<sup>67</sup> s.6(3), below, p.254.

<sup>68</sup> Sale of Goods Act 1979, s.14(2) (as substituted by Sale and Supply of Goods Act 1994, s.1) and (3); Supply of Goods (Implied Terms) Act 1973, s.10(2) and (3) as substituted by Consumer Credit Act 1974, s.192 and Sch.4, para.35. For further amendments of the 1979 and 1973 Acts, see above n.64.

<sup>69</sup> See further below, pp.254–255.

<sup>70</sup> Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982, ss.2–5, 7–10, as amended by Sale and Supply of Goods Act 1994 s.7 and Sch.2. For further amendments of the 1982 Act, see above n.64.

<sup>71</sup> Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977, s.1(3).

respect of their quality or fitness for a particular purpose.<sup>72</sup> So far as liability for breach of the implied terms as to title is concerned, a distinction must be drawn. Such liability cannot be excluded by B<sup>73</sup> where the contract is one by which he transfers or agrees to transfer the property in the goods to another (not necessarily C): this rule would, for example, apply to a contract of exchange. But where the contract is not one by which property is transferred or to be transferred (e.g. where it is one of pledge or hire) attempts by B<sup>74</sup> to exclude or restrict such liability are subject only to the test of reasonableness.<sup>75</sup>

(c) PRODUCT LIABILITY. Under Pt I of the Consumer Protection Act 1987, producers, and certain other persons engaged in the distribution, of products which are defective, in the sense of being unsafe, are liable if the defect causes death or personal injury or certain kinds of damage to property. S.7 of the 1987 Act provides that such "product liability" (which arises without proof of negligence and irrespective of contract) cannot be limited or excluded by any contract term, notice or other provision.

(f) DANGEROUS GOODS. Under Pt II of the Consumer Protection Act 1987, it is an offence to supply goods which do not comply with a general safety requirement laid down by the Act and in safety regulations made under the Act. Failure to perform an obligation imposed by such a regulation gives a civil remedy to any person who may be affected by a contravention of the obligation; and the resulting liability cannot be excluded by any contract term, notice or other provision.<sup>76</sup>

(g) DISTANCE SELLING. The Consumer Protection (Distance Selling) Regulations 2000 provide, that in "distance contracts" between a commercial supplier of goods or services and a consumer, the consumer must be given specified information and is to have a right to cancel within a specified period and with specified consequences.<sup>77</sup> The Regulations also specify the time within which such contracts must be performed by the supplier, as well as certain legal consequences of his failure to perform it.<sup>78</sup> A term in such a contract is void if and to the extent it is inconsistent with a provision for the protection of the consumer contained in the Regulations.<sup>79</sup>

(3) Terms subject to the requirement of reasonableness<sup>80</sup>

In the following cases, exemption clauses are, under the 1977 Act, subject to the requirement of reasonableness. Where the requirement applies, the burden of showing (and of pleading<sup>81</sup>) that it is satisfied lies on the party so claiming.<sup>82</sup>

(a) NEGLIGENCE LIABILITY: HARM OTHER THAN DEATH OR PERSONAL INJURY. By s.2(2) the requirement applies to a contract term or notice by which B<sup>83</sup> seeks to exclude or restrict his<sup>84</sup> liability for negligence<sup>85</sup> giving rise to loss or damage other than death

<sup>72</sup> ibid. s.7(2).

<sup>73</sup> ss.1(3) and 7(3A), as inserted by Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982, s.17(2).

<sup>74</sup> Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977, s.1(3).

<sup>75</sup> ibid. s.7(4), as amended by Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982, s.17(3).

<sup>76</sup> Consumer Protection Act 1987, ss.10, 41(1) and (4).

<sup>77</sup> SI 2000/2334 (implementing Dir.97/7), regs 7–18.

<sup>78</sup> ibid. regs 19, 20. "Consumer" is defined in reg.3(1).

<sup>79</sup> ibid. reg.25.

<sup>80</sup> Brown and Chandler, 109 L.Q.R. 41.

<sup>81</sup> Sheffield v Pickfords Ltd [1997] C.L.C. 648.

<sup>82</sup> Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977, s.11(5).

<sup>83</sup> s.1(3).

<sup>84</sup> See above, p.249, n.48. For the effect of the section on indemnity clauses, see below, p.256.

<sup>85</sup> As defined by s.1(1).

or personal injury. The subsection does not apply to provisions excluding or restricting strict liability<sup>86</sup>; on the other hand it is not confined to cases where the other party deals as consumer. In both these respects, it resembles s.2(1).

(b) CONSUMER CONTRACTS AND STANDARD FORM CONTRACTS. S.3 applies to two situations: to any contract between B and C<sup>87</sup>; and to a contract in which a party (not necessarily C) deals with B on the latter's "written standard terms of business".<sup>88</sup> In such cases B cannot "by reference to any contract term", except insofar as it satisfies the requirement of reasonableness, do any of the following three things:

(i) Under s.3(2)(a) B cannot exclude or restrict any liability in respect of his own breach. "Any liability" here includes strict liability<sup>89</sup> for breach of contract.

(ii) Under s.3(2)(b)(i) B cannot "claim to be entitled . . . to render a contractual performance substantially different<sup>90</sup> from that which was reasonably expected of him". It has been held that a clause giving a lender power to vary interest rates did not fall within s.3(2)(b)(i) since the exercise of that power was not a "contractual performance."<sup>91</sup> Where a term in a contract for services entitles the provider to change those services, the questions what the recipient reasonably expected and whether the change is substantial can obviously give rise to difficult questions of fact and degree.<sup>92</sup> It seems that s.3(2)(b)(i) could apply to provisions in a contract between a carrier and a tour operator purporting to entitle the carrier to change the advertised route, accommodations or means of transport.<sup>93</sup> B could not rely on the provision even though he was not actually obliged to render the performance expected: the criterion is the reasonable expectation of the other party, not the obligation of B under the contract. There would, however, be no such reasonable expectation where the contract made it clear that, while B would endeavour to provide a particular service, he also reserved the right to substitute a reasonable alternative.<sup>94</sup>

<sup>86</sup> See above, p.249. A contract term or notice purporting to exclude certain types of property damage is ineffective irrespective of reasonableness: Consumer Protection Act 1987, ss.5, 7(1), above.

<sup>87</sup> An employee was held to have dealt as consumer with his employer for the purpose of s.3 in Brigden v American Express Bank Ltd [2000] I.R.L.R. 94.

<sup>88</sup> s.3(1). This part of the section does not generally apply to specially negotiated contracts: The Flammar Pride [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 434 at 438; but it does apply even though "there has been negotiation over those terms" if the terms in question "remained effectively untouched by those negotiations:" St Albans City & District Council v International Computers Ltd [1996] 4 All E.R. 491. Where a party makes use of a standard form drafted by a trade association or similar body, the terms of that form are that party's "standard terms" only if he "invariably or at least usually" contracted on those terms: British Fermentation Products Ltd v Compare Reavell Ltd [1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 389 at 401. For an exception to the requirement that, between parties acting in the course of a business, the contract must be on written standard terms, see Late Payment of Commercial Debts (Interest) Act 1998, s.14(2), below, p.995.

<sup>89</sup> See below, p.838.

<sup>90</sup> In Brigden v American Express Bank Ltd [2000] I.R.L.R. 94 a clause in a contract of employment providing for dismissal by notice without going through the normal disciplinary procedures in the case of an employee of less than two years' standing was held not to fall within s.3(2); the reference seems to be to s.3(2)(b)(i).

<sup>91</sup> Paragon Finance Ltd v Staunton [2001] EWCA Civ 1466; [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 102, at [75].

<sup>92</sup> Contrast Timeload Ltd v British Telecommunications plc [1995] E.M.L.R. 459 with Zokoll Group Ltd v Mercury Communications Ltd [1999] E.M.L.R. 385.

<sup>93</sup> e.g. it would apply to a situation such as that which arose in Anglo-Continental Holidays Ltd v Typaldos Lines (London) Ltd [1967] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 61. A contract of this kind between the tour operator and consumer would be governed by Package Travel, Package Holidays and Package Tours Regulations 1992 (SI 1992/3288) (below p.261); under reg.12; where the "organiser" is "constrained" to alter "an essential term" of the contract the consumer is entitled to cancel the contract. For the relationship between such legislation and the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999, see below, p.277.

<sup>94</sup> Duffy v Newcastle United Football Club Ltd, The Times, July 7, 2000.

(iii) Under s.3(2)(b)(ii) B cannot “claim to be entitled . . . in respect of the whole or any part of his contractual obligation to render no performance at all”. This would apply where an agreement is on its true construction held to impose a contractual obligation but gives or purports to give B a wide discretion whether to perform at all or to the full extent promised. The criterion is not (as it is under s.3(2)(b)(i)) what the other party reasonably expects: it is the obligation undertaken by B. If the “contract term” gave B a totally free discretion whether to perform or not, there might be no “contractual obligation” on B at all; and in such a case the requirement of reasonableness need not be satisfied.<sup>95</sup> S.3(2)(b)(ii) would also not apply to a clause defining B’s duty<sup>96</sup> in such a way that in the circumstances which have occurred no duty arose; e.g. where B promised to perform “subject to strikes” and strikes have prevented performance.

In a number of other situations, the scope of s.3(2)(b)(ii) is harder to determine. A contract may provide that B is entitled to cancel it by giving notice, or on the occurrence of specified events: e.g. on the other party’s failure to perform (whether or not it amounts to a breach) or on some other event, such as the other party’s death.<sup>97</sup> Or it may require B to perform only when the other party’s performance has been rendered in full, or when some prescribed part of the performance has been rendered.<sup>98</sup> For example, a building contract may provide that nothing is to be paid till the work is completed, or that instalments of the price are to be paid only when specific parts of the work had been done. Such provisions might at first sight appear to be literally within s.3(2)(b)(ii); but it does not seem to have been the purpose of that enactment to alter the law as to cancellation clauses of the kind mentioned above,<sup>99</sup> or as to the effect of the other party’s breach on the obligations of B. It is submitted that the scope of the enactment must be narrowed by a restrictive interpretation of the opening words of s.3(2), according to which B cannot do the three things specified in the subsection “by reference to any contract term”. These words should be taken to mean “by reference only to such a term”—not by reference to it combined with other circumstances justifying B’s refusal, such as a failure by the other party to perform his part.<sup>1</sup>

(c) SUPPLY OF GOODS. By s.6(3), the requirement of reasonableness applies to a term in a contract for the sale or hire-purchase of goods purporting to exclude or restrict liability for breach of the statutorily implied terms<sup>2</sup> as to correspondence of the goods with description or sample, or as to their quality or fitness for a particular purpose, where the buyer or hire-purchaser deals otherwise than as consumer.<sup>3</sup> A similar rule is laid down by s.7(3) with regard to terms in other contracts for the supply of goods (such as contracts of hire or exchange) purporting to exclude liability for breach of similar terms implied by law in such contracts.<sup>4</sup> S.7 applies only to terms purporting to exclude or restrict “business liability”<sup>5</sup> so that s.7(3) is restricted to the case where the supplier

<sup>95</sup> For the position under Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1994, Sch.3 para.1(c), see below, p.274.

<sup>96</sup> See above, p.248; s.3 is not referred to in s.13(1).

<sup>97</sup> See below, p.778.

<sup>98</sup> See below, pp.782–788.

<sup>99</sup> The view that s.3(2)(b)(ii) does not apply to such cancellation clauses is supported by the Paragon Finance case, above, n.91, at [76–77]; the question was left open in Timeload Ltd v British Telecommunications plc [1995] F.M.L.R. 459 at 468.

<sup>1</sup> For the position under Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999, Sch.2, para.1(o), see below, p.276.

<sup>2</sup> See above, p.250, n.56.

<sup>3</sup> See above, p.250 for the position where he deals as consumer.

<sup>4</sup> See above, p.251 at n.63.

<sup>5</sup> s.1(3).

acts in the course of a business and the acquirer does not deal as consumer.<sup>6</sup> S.6 is however not restricted to the case where the supplier acts in the course of a business.<sup>7</sup> A term by which a private seller seeks to exclude or restrict liability for breach of the statutorily implied terms (even against a buyer who acts in the course of a business) is therefore under s.6(3) subject to the requirement of reasonableness. However, the statutorily implied terms as to satisfactory quality or fitness for a particular purpose arise only where the supplier acts in the course of a business.<sup>8</sup> A private supplier is under no liability in respect of such matters unless he gives an express undertaking. There is nothing in the Act to prevent him from restricting his liability for breach of such an express undertaking, e.g. by limiting his liability to a specified sum. In this respect he is in a better position than a business supplier, whose right so to limit his liability for breach of an express term may be subject to the requirement of reasonableness under s.3, e.g. if he deals on his "written standard terms of business."

We have seen that B cannot exclude or restrict his liability for breach of the implied terms as to title in contracts of sale and hire purchase, and in certain other contracts under which he transfers or agrees to transfer the property in goods<sup>9</sup> (such as contracts of exchange). In contracts for the transfer or supply of goods which fall outside this group, s.7(4)<sup>10</sup> applies the requirement of reasonableness to terms by which B seeks to exclude or restrict such liability: this would, for example, be the position in contracts of pledge,<sup>11</sup> or hire. As s.7 applies only to "business liability",<sup>12</sup> a private supplier's right to exclude or restrict liability in respect of defects of title in contracts of this kind is in no way affected by the Act. This is also true where a private supplier enters into a contract (other than one of sale or hire-purchase) by which he transfers or agrees to transfer the property in goods: for example, where the contract is one of exchange.<sup>13</sup> Where, on the other hand, the contract is one of sale or hire-purchase, a term by which even a private supplier seeks to exclude or restrict liability for breach of the implied undertakings as to title is simply ineffective,<sup>14</sup> without regard to its reasonableness.

(d) INDEMNITY CLAUSES. A contract may provide that if one party incurs a liability under it, whether to the other party or to a third party, then the other party shall indemnify the first against such liability. For example, a contract for the hire of a vehicle with a driver may contain a clause by which the hirer promises to indemnify the owner for any injury, loss or damage caused by the negligence of the driver.

S.4 of the Act applies the requirement of reasonableness to a contract term by which C undertakes to indemnify another person in respect of a business liability<sup>15</sup> incurred by the other for negligence or breach of contract. The operation of the section, and its relationship to other provisions of the Act, can best be explained by distinguishing between two situations, based on the example just given.

<sup>6</sup> e.g., Stewart Gill Ltd v Horatio Myer & Co Ltd [1992] Q.B. 600.

<sup>7</sup> s.6(4).

<sup>8</sup> Sale of Goods Act 1979 s.14(2) and (3); Supply of Goods (Implied Terms) Act 1973, s.10(2) and (3), as substituted by Consumer Credit Act 1974, s.192 and Sch.4, para.35. For amendments, see Sale and Supply of Goods Act 1994, s.7 and Sch.2 and Sale and Supply of Goods to Consumers Regulations 2002, (SI 2002/3045), above p.250, n.64.

<sup>9</sup> See above, pp.250, 251, 252.

<sup>10</sup> As amended by Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982, s.17(3).

<sup>11</sup> See Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982, s.1(2)(c).

<sup>12</sup> Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977, s.1(3).

<sup>13</sup> The restriction on the effectiveness of terms excluding liability for breach of the implied terms as to title in such contracts is imposed by Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977, s.7(3A) (above, p.231, n.66) which, like the rest of s.7 only applies to "business liability": s.1(3).

<sup>14</sup> s.6(1); above, pp.250, 251.

<sup>15</sup> s.1(3).

(i) Injury, loss or damage caused to a third party. Where the driver negligently injures, or causes loss or damage to, a third party, s.4 subjects the indemnity clause to the requirement of reasonableness, but only if the hirer dealt as consumer. The clause is therefore not subject to the requirement of reasonableness, under s.4, if the contract of hire was between B1 and B2. Nor is the clause treated as an exemption clause for the purposes of the Act, since it does not "exclude or restrict" the liability of the owner to the third party: it simply determines by whom (as between owner and hirer) that liability is to be borne.<sup>16</sup> It follows that s.2 does not apply and that the clause is neither ineffective (in case of personal injury)<sup>17</sup> nor subject to the requirement of reasonableness (in case of other loss or damage).<sup>18</sup> S.4 likewise does not apply to an indemnity clause in a contract between two parties neither of whom acts in the course of a business, since neither party to such a contract "deals as consumer".<sup>19</sup> Here again the clause is not subject to s.2, both because it is not an exemption clause and because s.2 is restricted to "business liability".<sup>20</sup> The clause is likewise not an exemption clause for the purpose of other restrictions (already discussed)<sup>21</sup> imposed by the Act on the operation of exemption clauses.

(ii) Injury, loss or damage caused to indemnifier. Where (in our example) the driver negligently injures, or causes loss or damage to, the hirer himself, s.4 again subjects the indemnity clause to the requirement of reasonableness if the hirer dealt as consumer. In addition, the clause is regarded as an exemption clause for the purposes of the Act since there is no difference of substance between the owner's saying to the hirer "I am not liable to you" and his saying "you must indemnify me against any damages which I may have to pay to you".<sup>22</sup> The clause is therefore subject not only to s.4 but also to other provisions of the Act, for example to s.2. This point is significant for two reasons. First, in cases of personal injury the clause is not merely subject to the requirement of reasonableness, as it would be if s.4 alone applied: the clause is simply ineffective under s.2(1). Secondly, in cases of other loss or damage the requirement of reasonableness must be satisfied, not only in contracts between B and C, as would be the case if s.4 alone applied: it must be satisfied also in contracts between B1 and B2, since s.2 applies even in favour of a person who does not deal as consumer. An indemnity clause in the present type of case will likewise be treated as an exemption clause for the purpose of other restrictions (already discussed)<sup>23</sup> imposed by the Act on the operation of exemption clauses.

(e) MISREPRESENTATION. The 1977 Act<sup>24</sup> amends s.3 of the Misrepresentation Act 1967, which had originally applied a requirement of reasonableness to terms excluding or restricting liability for misrepresentation. Such terms are now subject to the requirement of reasonableness as newly defined by the 1977 Act. The requirement applies to all contracts, and is not restricted to "business liabilities" or to contracts in which one party "deals as consumer." It is further discussed in Chapter 9.<sup>25</sup>

<sup>16</sup> Thompson v T Lohan (Plant Hire) Ltd [1987] 1 W.L.R. 649; Sealy [1988] C.L.J. 6; Adams and Brownsword [1988] J.B.L. 146; cf. The Caspar Trader [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 550.

<sup>17</sup> Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977, s.2(1), above, p.250.

<sup>18</sup> ibid. s.2(2), above, p.252.

<sup>19</sup> See above, p.247.

<sup>20</sup> Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977, s.1(3).

<sup>21</sup> e.g. those imposed by ss.6 and 7, above, pp.251–252, 254–255.

<sup>22</sup> Phillips Products Ltd v Hyland [1987] 1 W.L.R. 659.

<sup>23</sup> See n.21, above.

<sup>24</sup> s.8.

<sup>25</sup> See below, p.385.

(4) Partly effective terms

Under the 1977 Act, a term may be partly effective and partly ineffective. There are two types of situations in which this may be the position.

First, a clause may be drafted so as to exclude or restrict both a liability which cannot be excluded or restricted at all, and one which can be excluded by a provision which satisfies the requirement of reasonableness or by one which is effective subject only to common law restrictions. A clause may, for example, purport to limit the liability of a seller of goods for any breach to the return of the contract price. Such a provision is wholly ineffective to protect him from liability for breach of the implied undertaking as to title.<sup>26</sup> But this does not make the clause entirely void.<sup>27</sup> Thus the seller could rely on it to limit his liability for some other breach: for example, for breach of the statutorily implied terms as to quality if the buyer was not dealing as consumer and the clause satisfied the requirement of reasonableness.<sup>28</sup> He could similarly rely on it to limit liability for late delivery (or simple non-delivery) subject only to common law restrictions.<sup>29</sup> These conclusions follow from the fact that the Act nowhere invalidates contractual provisions as such: it simply says that specified liabilities cannot be excluded or restricted "by reference" to them.

Secondly, the Act provides that terms subject to the requirement of reasonableness are ineffective "except in so far as",<sup>30</sup> or effective "only in so far as",<sup>31</sup> they satisfy the requirement of reasonableness. In most cases, the term will either satisfy the requirement (and so be effective) or fail to satisfy it (and so be ineffective). But the words "in so far as" make it possible for the court to hold one part of a term valid and another invalid. Thus where a clause in a contract for the sale of goods imposed a short time limit on all claims and also limited the seller's liability to the amount of the contract price, it was held that the first part of the clause was reasonable, and the second unreasonable.<sup>32</sup>

In the situation just described, what appears to be a single clause is treated as severable and the court, having severed the clause, then determines separately the reasonableness of each of its parts. Where a clause (or a severable part of one) is unreasonable, the court will not modify it so as to make it reasonable: e.g. by allowing a limitation of liability where the contract had provided for total exclusion,<sup>33</sup> or by striking out an unreasonably low limitation in the contract and substituting a higher one that the court regarded as reasonable. Similarly, where a clause excluded a customer's right to "any payment, credit, set-off [or] counterclaim" it was held that the clause was unreasonable as a whole, and that it could not be severed so as to exclude only the right of set-off.<sup>34</sup> To do any of these things would be inconsistent with the wording of s.11(1) of the 1977 Act, under

<sup>26</sup> s.6(1).

<sup>27</sup> cf. George Mitchell (Chesterhall) Ltd v Finney Lock Seeds Ltd [1983] Q.B. 284 at 303, 309 decided under an earlier and now superseded statutory requirement of reasonableness and affirmed without reference to this point in [1983] 2 A.C. 803.

<sup>28</sup> s.6(3).

<sup>29</sup> Such breaches are not covered by s.6. If the buyer was not dealing as consumer and the seller was not dealing on his written standard terms of business, the Act would not apply to such a case: see below, p.264.

<sup>30</sup> ss.2(2), 3(2), 4(1), and 7(4).

<sup>31</sup> ss.6(3) and 7(3).

<sup>32</sup> R W Green Ltd v Cade Bros Farms [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 602, decided under an earlier and now superseded statutory requirement of reasonableness.

<sup>33</sup> George Mitchell (Chesterhall) Ltd v Finney Lock Seeds Ltd [1983] 2 A.C. 803 at 816; cf. Esso Petroleum Ltd v Milton [1997] 1 W.L.R. 938.

<sup>34</sup> Stewart Gill Ltd v Horatio Myer & Co Ltd [1992] Q.B. 600; Hedley, [1992] C.L.J. 418; cf. Shirkreditfor-eningen v Emperor Navigation [1998] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 67 at 75 (applying the same principle for the purpose of Misrepresentation Act 1967, s.3, below, p.387).

which the requirement of reasonableness “is that the term shall have been a fair and reasonable one to be included.” This means that the reasonableness test has to be applied to the term actually in the contract (or to each such term, if the contract contains more than one) and not to some other term which in the court’s view might reasonably have been included.

(5) Rules relating to reasonableness

A judicially administered requirement of reasonableness is open to the objection that it is a source of uncertainty.<sup>35</sup> To meet this objection, the Act lays down a rule as to the time for determining reasonableness and it also provides guidelines for this purpose. In addition, the Act lays down two rules as to the effects of breach on the requirement; their object is to prevent undue restrictions on its scope.

(a) TIME FOR DETERMINING REASONABLENESS. The question whether a contract term satisfies the requirement is determined by reference to the time at which the contract was made.<sup>36</sup> If the term was a fair and reasonable one to be included having regard to the circumstances which were or should reasonably have been known to or in the contemplation of the parties at that time, its effectiveness will not be impaired by subsequent events.

(b) GUIDELINES. S.11(4) of the Act lays down two guidelines for determining the reasonableness of provisions limiting a person’s liability to a specific sum of money: regard is to be had to (a) the resources which that person could expect to be available to him for the purpose of meeting the liability, and (b) how far it was open to him to cover himself by insurance.<sup>37</sup> Under the second of these guidelines, a clause limiting the liability of a manufacturer for defects would not be reasonable if he could have insured against the liability without materially raising the price of his product (particularly if it would have been difficult or virtually impossible for the customer to have insured against the loss)<sup>38</sup> or if he actually had so insured.<sup>39</sup> On the other hand, a clause limiting the liability of a person engaged in the storage or carriage of goods would be reasonable if he had little knowledge of the nature or value the goods, and if the goods could be more cheaply insured by their owner than by the bailee.<sup>40</sup> In applying the second guideline, the court considers the availability of insurance to the defendant, rather than his actual insurance position.<sup>41</sup> The two guidelines stated in s.11(4) do not contain an exhaustive list of factors to be taken into account in deciding whether a limitation clause satisfies a <sup>35</sup> Treitel, Doctrine and Discretion in the Law of Contract, pp.13–19. For the American experience under UCC ss.2–302, see Leff, 115 U. of Pa L.Rev. 485; Ellinghaus, 78 Y.L.J. 757. For a legislative attempt to square this circle, see Late Payments of Commercial Debts (Interest) Act 1998, s.9(1)(b) and 9(3)(a).

<sup>36</sup> 1977 Act, s.11(1). In the case of a non-contractual notice (above, pp.247, 249, 252) the relevant time is the time when the liability arose or but for the notice would have arisen: s.11(3); see Monarch Airlines Ltd v London Luton Airport [1998] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 403; First National Commercial Bank v Loxleys, The Times, November 14, 1996.

<sup>37</sup> s.11(4). The subsection is in terms applicable only to terms which limit (as opposed to those which wholly exclude) liability: The Flammar Pride [1990] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 434 at 438; but the guidelines in question can be applied by analogy to clauses of the latter kind: see below, p.260 at n.57.

<sup>38</sup> Salvage Association v CAP Services [1995] F.S.R. 654.

<sup>39</sup> George Mitchell (Chesterhall) Ltd v Finney Lock Seeds Ltd [1983] A.C. 803 at 817, decided under earlier and now superseded legislation not containing this guideline; St Albans City and District Council v International Computers Ltd, [1995] F.S.R. 686, reversed but not on the application of the reasonableness test [1996] 4 All E.R. 481.

<sup>40</sup> Singer (UK) Ltd v Tees & Hartlepool Port Authority [1988] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 164.

<sup>41</sup> ibid. at 169; The Flammar Pride [1990] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 434 at 439; Monarch Airlines Ltd v London Luton Airport [1998] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 403 at 413.

reasonableness test. A negative answer to this question may, for example be given because of the “insufficient clarity”<sup>42</sup> of the clause.

Where a term in a contract for the supply of goods is subject to the requirement of reasonableness under ss.6 or 7,<sup>43</sup> the Act provides five further guidelines.<sup>44</sup> These include the strength of the bargaining positions of the parties relative to each other,<sup>45–47</sup> whether the customer “received an inducement to agree to the term” (e.g. in the form of a lower price), whether he could have bought elsewhere without being subjected to a similar term, and the customer’s knowledge or means of knowledge of the existence and extent of the terms.<sup>48</sup> Under these guidelines, the fact that the contract was in a standard form settled after negotiations between trade associations to which both parties belonged is relevant to the issue of reasonableness; for it helps to show that its terms were “not imposed by the strong upon the weak.”<sup>49</sup> A fortiori, terms are unlikely to be struck down for unreasonableness under the Act where the contract in which they are contained was made between commercial companies “of equal bargaining power”<sup>50</sup> after negotiations in which each party had made concession to the other.<sup>51</sup> In the interests of certainty, an “entire agreement” clause in such a contract is also like to satisfy the test of reasonableness.<sup>52</sup> But where the term has not been the subject of negotiation it may be struck down, even in a contract between such parties, if its effect is to “contradict a fundamental assumption that all parties have made in this respect”<sup>53</sup>: e.g., where a seller of ingredients to a manufacturer of beverages supplied a defective ingredient which made the resulting product unsaleable.

These statutory guidelines no doubt help to reduce the uncertainty to which the requirement of reasonableness gives rise; but the restrictions on their scope are hard to understand. Thus it is not easy to see why the strength of the bargaining positions of the parties is relevant only in contracts for the supply of goods; nor why the five guidelines<sup>54</sup> which can apply where a seller delivers goods of the wrong quality<sup>55</sup> do not also apply where he delivers goods of the wrong quantity.<sup>56</sup> The courts have remedied this defect in the wording of the Act by treating the guidelines as being of general application, so <sup>42</sup> Overseas Medical Supplier Ltd v Orient Transport Services Ltd [1999] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 273 at 280. This lack of clarity may, alternatively, be a ground for holding that, as a matter of construction, the clause does not cover the breach: see above p.221.

<sup>43</sup> See above, pp.254–255.

<sup>44</sup> s.11(2) and Sch.2.

<sup>45–47</sup> cf. Thames Tideway Properties Ltd v Serafly [1999] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 110 at 110.

<sup>48</sup> The question whether a term has been incorporated in the contract is, however, a separate question, as is recognised by the concluding words of s.11(2).

<sup>49</sup> R W Green Ltd v Cade Bros Farms Ltd [1978] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 602 at 607; above, n.98; The Zinnia [1984] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 211; Schenkers Ltd v Overland Shoes Ltd [1998] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 499; cf. British Fermentation Products Ltd v Compair Reavell Ltd [1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 389; contrast George Mitchell (Chesterhall) Ltd v Finney Lock Seeds Ltd where the conditions were not negotiated by the National Farmers Union but simply introduced by seed merchants without objection from farmers: see [1983] 2 A.C. 803 at 817.

<sup>50</sup> Watford Electronics Ltd v Sanderson Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 317 at [55]; [2001] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 696; cf. below, p.388 for the same approach to the test of reasonableness under Misrepresentation Act 1967, s.3.

<sup>51</sup> Watford Electronics case, above.

<sup>52</sup> ibid. at [39].

<sup>53</sup> Britvic Soft Drinks Ltd v Messer UK Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 548; [2002] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 321 at [26]; Bacardi Martini Beverages Ltd v Thomas Hardy Packaging Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 549 [2002] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 379 at [26].

<sup>54</sup> See above, n.44.

<sup>55</sup> The requirement of reasonableness applies to terms purporting to exclude or restrict B’s liability in such cases if the buyer does not deal as consumer: s.6(3).

<sup>56</sup> The requirement of reasonableness applies to terms purporting to exclude or restrict B’s liability in such cases if the contract is made on his “written standard terms of business”: s.3.

that, for example, the guidelines stated in relation to contracts for the supply of goods can be applied by analogy to other types of contracts.<sup>57</sup>

Even in relation to the situations covered by them, the statutory guidelines are by no means exhaustive; indeed it has been said that it is "impossible to draw up an exhaustive list of factors to be taken into account when a judge is faced with this very difficult question".<sup>58</sup> In Smith v Eric S Bush<sup>59</sup> the House of Lords held that a term purporting to exclude the liability for negligence of surveyors (engaged by a building society) to buyers of dwelling houses did not satisfy the reasonableness test. The principal factors leading to this conclusion were that there was no equality of bargaining power, that the houses were of modest value so that it was not reasonable to expect the buyers to commission their own structural survey, and that the surveyors could easily have insured against the risk without unduly increasing their charges.<sup>60</sup> On the other hand, a disclaimer might be reasonable if the task undertaken had been one of great difficulty and complexity; if the value of the subject-matter had been very high, so that insurance against professional liability would have been very expensive or impossible to obtain<sup>61</sup>; or if it would have been reasonable for the injured party to have taken steps to discover the truth. Thus the requirement of reasonableness was held to have been satisfied where an estate agent disclaimed liability in respect of representations as to area made to the prospective purchaser who later contracted to buy the property in question for £875,000<sup>62</sup>: in such a transaction the purchaser could be expected to make his own investigations before exchanging contracts. The availability to the other party of an opportunity of discovering the defect in respect of which he is seeking to exclude liability can likewise be relevant to the issue of reasonableness. Thus where the seller of a car was a company which had been brought into the transaction purely to provide finance, it was said that the test of reasonableness would have been satisfied (if the buyer had not dealt as consumer)<sup>63</sup> because the company had never seen the car.<sup>64</sup> It has also been said that the courts should not be "too ready" to hold a term unreasonable by reference to "remote contingencies" to which the term, if taken literally, might apply but which the parties had not in fact intended to cover.<sup>65</sup>

(c) NATURE OF DECISION ON REASONABLENESS. A decision on the issue of reasonableness is not merely an exercise of judicial discretion<sup>66</sup>; for it involves the application of statutory and judge-made guidelines. Nevertheless in the George Mitchell case Lord Bridge described such a decision as one on which there "will sometimes be room for a legitimate difference of judicial opinion"; and as one with which an appellate court should not interfere "unless satisfied that it proceeded on some erroneous principle or

<sup>57</sup> Singer (UK) Ltd v Tees & Hartlepool Port Authority [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 164 at 169; The Flammar Pride [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 434 at 439; Overseas Medical Supplies Ltd v Orient Transport Services Ltd [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 273 at 276-277; cf. Monarch Airlines Ltd v London Luton Airport [1998] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 403; Schenkers Ltd v Overland Shoes Ltd [1998] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 499 at 500.

<sup>58</sup> Smith v Eric S Bush [1990] 1 A.C. 831 at 858.

<sup>59</sup> [1990] 1 A.C. 831; Kaye, 52 M.I.L.R. 841; for other factors relevant to the issue of reasonableness, see George Mitchell (Chesterhall) Ltd v Finney Lock Seeds Ltd [1983] 2 A.C. 803, decided under an earlier (now superseded) statutory reasonableness test; Overseas Medical case, above n.57, at 280.

<sup>60</sup> Smith v Eric S Bush [1990] 1 A.C. 831 at 851-854, 858-859.

<sup>61</sup> ibid. at 859.

<sup>62</sup> McCullagh v Lane Fox & Partners Ltd [1996] 1 E.G.L.R. 35.

<sup>63</sup> See above, p.247.

<sup>64</sup> R & B Customs Brokers Ltd v United Dominions Trust Ltd [1988] 1 W.L.R. 321 at 332.

<sup>65</sup> Shipskreditforeningen v Emperor Navigation [1998] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 67 at 75-77 (where the question of reasonableness arose under Misrepresentation Act 1967 s.3, below, p.385).

<sup>66</sup> George Mitchell (Chesterhall) Ltd v Finney Lock Seeds Ltd [1983] 2 A.C. 803 at 816. cf. Comemscu Ltd v Contrapal (unrep.) referred to by Kerr L.J. in [1983] Q.B. 284 at 315.

was plainly and obviously wrong”.<sup>67</sup> These remarks are intended to restrict, but not to rule out, the possibility of successful appeals on the issue of reasonableness. An appeal may, for example, succeed where the trial judge has held the clause to be unreasonable by attributing to it a wider meaning than that which, in the view of the appellate court, it could, on its true construction, bear.<sup>68</sup>

(d) EFFECTS OF RESCISSION OR AFFIRMATION. S.9(1) of the Act provides that effect may be given to a term which satisfies the requirement of reasonableness even though the contract has been terminated; while s.9(2) provides that the requirement of reasonableness is not excluded by affirmation of the contract.<sup>69</sup>

(e) EFFECT OF SERIOUSNESS OF BREACH. Earlier in this Chapter, we saw that the question whether exemption clauses covered certain particularly serious breaches was one of construction.<sup>70</sup> If the clause does not cover such a breach, no issue of reasonableness will arise; but even if the clause does cover the breach it may still fail to satisfy the requirement of reasonableness, as in the George Mitchell case.<sup>71</sup> Hence reasonableness under the Act and the rules of construction applicable at common law remain separate requirements of the effectiveness of exemption clauses.<sup>72</sup> Although the importance of the rule of construction will thus be reduced where the clause is subject to the statutory requirement of reasonableness, factors similar to those relevant for construction purposes have been taken into account in determining issues of reasonableness. Thus clauses have been held unreasonable on the ground that, if valid, they would operate “in respect of matters which the parties would have regarded as fundamental”.<sup>73</sup> It is arguable that the concept of fundamental breach here makes its reappearance for a purpose that differs both from the former substantive doctrine<sup>74</sup> and from the rule of construction.<sup>74a</sup> That rule also differs from the statutory requirement of reasonableness in that reasonableness is determined by reference to the time of contracting,<sup>75</sup> while the question whether a clause covers a particular breach may depend on the manner in which the breach has been committed, or on its consequences,<sup>76</sup> and these circumstances can be known only at or after the time of breach.

(6) Restrictions on evasions

The Act invalidates two possible devices for evading its provisions.

(a) SECONDARY CONTRACT. The first such device is that the term restricting or excluding liability may be contained, not in the principal contract itself, but in another

<sup>67</sup> [1983] 2 A.C. 803, 810; Phillips Products Ltd v Hyland [1987] 1 W.L.R. 659 at 669; St Albans City & District Council v International Computers Ltd [1996] 4 All E.R. 481; Schenkers Ltd v Overland Shoes Ltd [1998] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 499; Overseas Medical Supplies Ltd v Orient Transport Services Ltd [1999] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 273 at 276.

<sup>68</sup> Watford Electronics Ltd v Sanderson Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 317; [2001] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 696.

<sup>69</sup> cf. the common law position, above, pp.238–240.

<sup>70</sup> See above, pp.225–241.

<sup>71</sup> [1983] 2 A.C. 803: see above p.258 at n.39; Lease Management Services v Purnell Secretarial Services [1994] Tr. L.R. 337.

<sup>72</sup> See the George Mitchell case, above, and R W Green Ltd v Cade Bros Farms Ltd [1978] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 602. Semble the decision in the Overseas Medical case, above, could have been based on construction, though it was actually based on failure to satisfy the reasonableness test.

<sup>73</sup> Bacardi-Martini Beverages Ltd v Thomas Hardy Packaging Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 549; [2002] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 335 at [26]; cf. above, p.259 at n.53.

<sup>74</sup> Above, p.225.

<sup>74a</sup> Above, pp.225, 233.

<sup>75</sup> See above, p.258.

<sup>76</sup> See above, pp.231–233.

(secondary) contract. To meet this possibility, s.10 provides that "A person is not bound by any contract term prejudicing or taking away rights of his which arise under, or in connection with the performance of, another contract,"<sup>77</sup> so far as those rights extend to the enforcement of another's liability which this Part of this Act<sup>78</sup> prevents<sup>79</sup> that other from excluding or restricting." Unfortunately, the terminology of s.10 differs from that used elsewhere in the Act,<sup>80</sup> and this fact gives rise to a number of difficulties of interpretation.

S.10 refers to a contract term "prejudicing or taking away rights", not to one "excluding or restricting liability". The statutory explanation of the latter phrase<sup>81</sup> therefore does not apply to s.10. In particular, it is by no means clear whether the section would cover a secondary contract excluding a particular remedy, or one imposing onerous conditions (such as short time limits) on the enforcement of a liability; or whether it would apply to a subsequent agreement to submit disputes under the original contract to arbitration.<sup>82</sup>

The exact scope of s.10 is also in doubt in relation to consumer contracts and contracts on written standard terms. S.3(2) applies the requirement of reasonableness to terms in such contracts which (a) exclude or restrict liability for breach, or (b) purport to entitle a party to render a performance substantially different from that reasonably expected of him, or to render no performance at all. Clearly, a secondary contract seeking to achieve result (a) is within s.10 and thus ineffective. But is the same true of a secondary contract seeking to achieve result (b)? The concluding words of s.10 give rise to a difficulty because the rights affected by the secondary contract must "extend to the enforcement of another's liability which . . . this Act prevents the other from excluding or restricting". S.3(2) appears to contrast terms excluding or restricting liability with terms purporting to entitle a party to render a performance substantially different, etc. It is at least doubtful whether s.10 is apt to cover a secondary agreement having the latter effect.

S.10 does not apply to a contract by which the parties to an earlier contract, containing terms which would be subject to the Act, reach a settlement of disputes which have arisen between them under the original contract. The argument that such a settlement was a secondary contract within s.10 has been rejected on the ground that there was no hint in the legislative history that the section was intended to strike at such genuine out of court settlements.<sup>83</sup> On the contrary, the legislative history indicates that, in using the phrase "another's liability" s.10 refers to the liability of a third party,<sup>84</sup> so that the section "does not apply where the parties to both contracts are the same".<sup>85</sup> The point of the section is to deal with the case in which a contract between X and Y provides <sup>77</sup> s.10 does not apply where a contract between A and B takes away A's right to sue a third party, C, in tort, since A's right against C does not arise "under . . . another contract." The Chevalier Rose [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 438 at 422.

<sup>78</sup> i.e. Pt I, which extends to England and Wales and to Northern Ireland.

<sup>79</sup> i.e. (semble) not only by making it totally ineffective but also by subjecting it to the requirement of reasonableness.

<sup>80</sup> Perhaps because s.10 was introduced at a late stage in the Parliamentary proceedings on the Act.

<sup>81</sup> s.13(1) above, pp.247-248.

<sup>82</sup> See s.13(2) which, unlike s.10, uses the standard terminology of the Act—"excluding or restricting liability."

<sup>83</sup> Tudor Grange Holdings Ltd v Citibank NA [1992] Ch. 53 at 65-67; Brown, 108 L.Q.R. 233; Cumberbatch, 55 M.I.L.R. 866.

<sup>84</sup> (1977) 385 H.L. Cols. 57-59, 511-514.

<sup>85</sup> Tudor Grange case, above, at 66.

that Y is not to exercise rights against Z under a separate contract between Y and Z.<sup>86</sup> The latter contract may not contain any exemption clause but be of such a kind that, if it did contain such a clause, that clause would be subject to the Act. At common law, Z could not as a general rule rely on the clause in the contract between X and Y as he was not a party to it<sup>87</sup>; and the statutory right to rely on it, which Z may have under the Contracts (Rights of Third Parties) Act 1999, will be of no avail to him where the clause is ineffective under the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977.<sup>88</sup> The purpose of s.10 of the 1977 Act is to prevent X from enforcing against Y a clause in the contract between X and Y which provides that Y is not to sue Z under the contract between Y and Z and which would have been ineffective under that Act if it had been contained in the contract between Y and Z. Even apart from s.10 such a proceeding might not be open to X unless X could show that he had a sufficient interest<sup>89</sup> in Z's immunity from being sued by Y. The view that s.10 does not apply where the parties to both contracts are the same (even though it is acknowledged that the words of the section are capable of covering such a case<sup>90</sup>) has also been supported by the argument that, between the parties to the original contract, s.10 would be unnecessary since the secondary contract, no less than the original one, would be subject to the requirement of reasonableness under ss.2 and 3 of the Act.<sup>91</sup> But this reasoning seems to overlook the possibility that the secondary contract may be subject only to the requirement of reasonableness (e.g., under s.3), while the original contract might be one in which the exemption clause was simply ineffective: e.g. under s.6(2) where it excluded or restricted liability for defects in goods sold to a consumer. In such a case to give effect to the secondary contract, even between the parties to the original contract, could significantly reduce the protection which the Act intends to give to the consumer under the original contract.

The view that s.10 does not apply where the parties to both contracts are the same would also help to solve the problem of the renegotiation of a contract before any dispute under it has arisen. A contract may, for example, contain a term limiting the liability of a party to it, and that term may be subject to, and satisfy, the requirement of reasonableness. The parties may later agree on a lower limit of liability which would also (had it been originally incorporated in the contract) have satisfied that requirement. If that later agreement were within s.10, it would be totally ineffective and incapable of being validated by being shown to be reasonable. This—surely undesirable—result can be avoided by arguing either that s.10 does not apply between the parties to the original contract or that the later agreement is a variation of the original contract, so that the terms of that later agreement do not prejudice rights which “arise under another contract.” The new limit of the defaulting party's liability would thus be subject to the same requirement of reasonableness as the term which originally limited that liability.

(b) CHOICE OF LAW CLAUSES. A second possible way of evading the Act is to provide that a contract which would otherwise be subject to its provisions shall be governed by the law of a foreign country (which imposes no such restriction on the effectiveness of contract terms). By s.27(2), the Act applies, even though the contract contains such a clause, where the clause was “imposed” wholly or mainly to evade the Act; and also where one of the parties dealt as consumer, was habitually resident in the United <sup>86</sup> See the example given in 385 H.L. Col. 57, on which the discussion in the Tudor Grange case above at 66 seems to have been based; reference to the Parliamentary report would now be authorised by Pepper v Hart [1993] A.C. 593.

<sup>87</sup> See below, p.626.

<sup>88</sup> See below, p.660.

<sup>89</sup> See below, p.603.

<sup>90</sup> Tudor Grange case, above, at 66.

<sup>91</sup> ibid., at 67.

Kingdom, and the essential steps necessary for the making of the contract were taken there. Further restrictions on the efficacy of choice of law clauses are contained in the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999, to be considered later in this Chapter,<sup>92</sup> and in the EC Convention on the Law Applicable to Contractual Obligations (also known as the Rome Convention), which has the force of law in the United Kingdom.<sup>93</sup> Art.5 of the Convention provides that, where specified conditions are satisfied,<sup>94</sup> such a clause in a contract for the supply of goods or services<sup>95</sup> to a consumer is not to have the effect of depriving the consumer of mandatory rules<sup>96</sup> of law of the country of his habitual residence.

(7) Situations not covered by the Act

These fall into two categories: those which are not within the scope of the provisions of the Act, and those which would be within the scope of its provisions if they were not specifically excepted.

(a) CASES NOT WITHIN THE SCOPE OF THE ACT. Contract terms excluding or restricting the liability of a person not acting in the course of a business are generally unaffected by the Act. The Act only limits such a person's right to exclude or restrict certain liabilities arising out of contracts for the sale and hire purchase of goods<sup>97</sup> and for misrepresentation.<sup>98</sup> Even terms excluding or restricting business liability may be outside the scope of the Act: this is the position where a contract between B1 and B2, not made on written standard terms of business,<sup>99</sup> excludes or restricts a liability other than one for breach of the implied terms in contracts for the supply of goods dealt with in ss.6 and 7 of the Act.<sup>1</sup> For example, a clause by which B1 excluded or limited liability to B2 for delay in delivering goods, or for short delivery or for an express undertaking as to quality going beyond those implied by law, would not be affected by the Act.

(b) CASES SPECIFICALLY EXCEPTED. Some or all of the provisions of the Act do not apply in the following cases.

(i) The principal group of contracts excepted<sup>2</sup> from some of the provisions of the Act is listed in Sch.1.

Para.1 of the Schedule lists a number of contracts to which ss.2, 3 and 4 do not apply. In the excepted cases, contract terms<sup>3</sup> excluding or restricting liability for negligence, terms in consumer contracts and provisions in written standard terms of business and indemnity clauses are not subject to the provisions of those sections. The contracts within para.1 of the Schedule are contracts of insurance and any contract "so far as it

<sup>92</sup> See below, p.283.

<sup>93</sup> Contracts (Applicable Law) Act 1990, s.2 and Sch.1, as amended by SI 1994/1900.

<sup>94</sup> See Art.5(2); these conditions relate mainly to the place where the steps leading to the conclusion of the contract are taken.

<sup>95</sup> With certain exceptions specified in Art.5(4) (contracts of carriage and contracts of service where the services are to be performed exclusively in a country other than that of the consumer's habitual residence).

<sup>96</sup> i.e. "rules of . . . law . . . which cannot be derogated from by contract:" Art.3(3).

<sup>97</sup> ss.6(1) and 6(4) above, pp.251, 254–255.

<sup>98</sup> s.8 below, pp.385–389.

<sup>99</sup> See s.3(1).

<sup>1</sup> See above, pp.251, 254–255; it is assumed that there is no "product liability" (above, p.252).

<sup>2</sup> By s.1(2).

<sup>3</sup> s.2 also deals with certain notices not having contractual effect, but the wording of s.1(2) ("in relation to contracts") indicates that the exclusions in Sch.1 only apply to contract terms.

relates to" the creation, transfer or termination of an interest in land<sup>4</sup> or in any patent, trade mark,<sup>5</sup> copyright or other intellectual property; the formation, dissolution or constitution of a company or the rights or obligations of its members; and the creation or transfer of securities or any right or interest in securities. Contracts of insurance are wholly excepted, but a contract falling within the other categories is only excepted "so far as it relates to" the matter specified.<sup>6</sup> Where a contract relates to such matters and also to others, the specified sections are excluded with regard to the former: e.g. they do not apply to a share option<sup>7</sup> contained in a contract of employment.<sup>8</sup> In the case of a contract for the transfer of an interest in land, it has been held that a clause in a lease by which rent was payable "without any deduction or set-off whatsoever" was excepted from ss.2, 3 and 4 since the tenant's covenant to pay rent was "an integral part of the creation of the interest in land".<sup>9</sup> This reasoning gives some support to the view that provisions in the lease which do not "relate to" the transfer would not be so excepted.

Para.2 of the Schedule lists three contracts: contracts of marine salvage or towage, charterparties of ships or hovercraft, and contracts for the carriage of goods by ship or hovercraft.<sup>10</sup> These contracts are subject to s.2(1), which provides that B<sup>11</sup> cannot by any contract term exclude or restrict his liability for death or personal injury resulting from negligence. But they are excepted from the remainder of s.2, as well as from ss.3 and 4, except in favour of C. Since some contracts within this group may involve the hire of a chattel<sup>12</sup> they are also excepted from s.7 which limits the extent to which liability for breach of certain implied terms in such contracts can be excluded or restricted.<sup>13</sup>

Para.3 of the Schedule deals with the case where goods are carried by ship or hovercraft under a contract which either specifies that means of carriage only for part of the journey<sup>14</sup> or makes no provision for the means of carriage. Such contracts may not be contracts for the carriage of goods by ship or hovercraft, but are nevertheless excepted from the operation of ss.2(2), 3 and 4 in the same way as such contracts.

By para.4 of the Schedule, ss.2(1) and (2) do not apply to contracts of employment "except in favour of the employee". The liability of the employee for negligence can therefore be restricted or excluded; but the employer cannot exclude or restrict such liability as against the employee. Since s.2 applies only to "business liability" the need for para.4 may not at first sight be apparent. But "business liability" includes liability for breach of a duty arising from things done in the course of another person's business<sup>15</sup> so <sup>4</sup> A provision in a lease for the payment without set-off of a service charge to a management company has been held to fall within this exception and so not to be subject to the requirement of reasonableness under the 1977 Act: Unchained Growth III plc v Granby Village (Manchester) Management Co [2000] 1 W.L.R. 739.

<sup>5</sup> See Trade Marks Act 1994, s.106(1) and Sch.4, para.1.

<sup>6</sup> Salvage Association v CAP Financial Services [1995] F.S.R. 654.

<sup>7</sup> Micklefield v SAC Technology [1990] 1 W.L.R. 1002.

<sup>8</sup> As to which see Sch.1, para.4, below.

<sup>9</sup> Electricity Supply Nominees Ltd v IAF Group Ltd [1993] 1 W.L.R. 1059 at 1063; for the treatment of provisions excluding set-off as exemption clauses under the Act, see above, p.247. In Connaught Restaurants Ltd v Indoors Leisure Ltd [1994] 1 W.L.R. 501 no attempt was made to rely on the Act, perhaps because the conditions for the applicability of s.3 (above, p.252) were not satisfied; but the tenant succeeded on the construction of the lease: see above, p.221.

<sup>10</sup> See, for example The European Enterprise [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 185. Certain contracts for the carriage of goods by sea also come within the excepting provisions of s.29, below, p.266.

<sup>11</sup> s.1(3).

<sup>12</sup> e.g. a demise charterparty.

<sup>13</sup> See above, pp.251–252, 254–255.

<sup>14</sup> This situation commonly arises where the goods are carried in a container from one inland destination to another in an overseas country.

<sup>15</sup> s.1(3).

that liability incurred by an employee (whether to his employer or to a third party) can be a "business liability." Moreover, "business" includes profession<sup>16</sup> so that an employee who in the course of his employment exercises a profession could incur a "business liability" which, but for para.4, would attract the operation of s.2(1) and (2).

Para.5 of the Schedule excepts from s.2(1) the validity of a discharge and indemnity given on or in connection with an award of compensation for pneumoconiosis.<sup>17</sup>

(ii) Contracts for the international supply of goods. In such contracts,<sup>18</sup> none of the limits "imposed by this Act" on contract terms which exclude or restrict liability apply.<sup>19</sup> However, it seems that the limits contained in s.3 of the Misrepresentation Act 1967 do apply: they were not "imposed by this [i.e. the 1977] Act" even though the 1977 Act amends s.3 of the Misrepresentation Act.<sup>20</sup>

Under the Unfair Contract Terms Act, the requirement of reasonableness sometimes applies to terms which do not "exclude or restrict" liability; for example, it applies to terms entitling a party to render a performance substantially different from that reasonably expected of him, or to render no performance at all,<sup>21</sup> and to indemnity clauses.<sup>22</sup> Where such terms or clauses are contained in a contract for the international supply of goods, the requirement of reasonableness does not apply.<sup>23</sup>

(iii) Contractual provisions authorised or required under legislation or international agreements. An increasingly common technique for controlling exemption clauses (and other contract terms) is found in international conventions, for example those regulating the international carriage of goods and passengers. Many such conventions have been given the force of law by statute.<sup>24</sup> These conventions often lay down a limitation of liability and then provide that any attempt at further reduction in the contract is void. This position is preserved by the 1977 Act.<sup>25</sup>

(iv) Choice of law clauses. The Act is intended to deal with contracts having some substantial connection with some part of the United Kingdom. A contract may be governed by English law though its connection with England is tenuous (or even non-existent); this can happen if it contains an express term that it is to be governed by English law. S.27(1)<sup>26</sup> accordingly provides that ss.2 to 7 do not apply where a contract is governed by the law of a part of the United Kingdom only by choice of the parties and would apart from that choice have been governed by the law of some country outside the United Kingdom. The point is of considerable commercial importance as contracts

<sup>16</sup> s.14.

<sup>17</sup> This matter is governed by an agreement originally made between the NCB and the NUM: HL, Deb., Vol.384, col.518.

<sup>18</sup> As defined by s.26(3) and (4); see Ocean Chemical Transport Inc v Exnor Craggs [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 446 at 451. Generally such contracts will be between persons acting in the course of a business, but this is not an essential part of the definition. A contract for the sale of goods can fall within s.26 even in respect of maintenance obligations imposed on the seller: Amin Flight Authority v BAE Systems plc [2002] EWCA 2481 (Comm), [2003] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 50 at [27].

<sup>19</sup> s.26(1).

<sup>20</sup> s.8, above, p.256.

<sup>21</sup> See s.3(2)(b), above, pp.252–254.

<sup>22</sup> See s.4, above, p.255.

<sup>23</sup> s.26(2).

<sup>24</sup> e.g. Carriage by Air Act 1961, Sch.1, Arts 22, 23(1) and 32; Carriage of Goods by Road Act 1965, Sch. Arts 23, 41; Carriage of Goods by Sea Act 1971, Sch. Arts III. 8 and IV. 5; Carriage by Railway Act 1972, Sch. Arts 6(2), 7 and 10; Carriage of Passengers by Road Act 1974, Sch., Arts 13, 16 and 23(1) (not yet fully in force); International Transport Conventions Act 1983, s.1; Merchant Shipping Act 1995, ss.183 and 184 and Sch.6, Pt I, Arts 7, 8, 18 and Pt III (not yet fully in force: for transitional provisions, see Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977, s.28).

<sup>25</sup> s.29. Certain contracts for the carriage of goods by sea are within both this exception and the somewhat more restricted exception of Sch.1, para.2(c), above, p.265.

<sup>26</sup> As amended by Contracts (Applicable Law) Act 1990, s.5 and Sch.4.

having no substantial connection with England are quite commonly made subject to English law by choice of the parties.<sup>27</sup>

2. The Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999

(1) General

These Regulations<sup>28</sup> give effect to an EC Council Directive<sup>29</sup> which is intended to promote the harmonisation of the laws of member states so as to ensure that contracts with consumers do not include terms which are unfair to the consumer.<sup>30</sup> They supersede earlier Regulations made in 1994<sup>31</sup> to give effect to the same Directive; and it will be necessary from time to time in the following discussion to refer to differences between them and the 1994 Regulations. The 1999 Regulations apply in relation to “unfair terms” which have not been “individually negotiated”<sup>32</sup> in contracts concluded between a seller or a supplier and a consumer. Their central provision is that if such terms are “unfair”, then they shall not be binding on the consumer.<sup>33</sup>

(2) Relation with Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977

The Regulations operate side by side with the Unfair Contract Terms Act, so that it is possible for a term to be valid under the Regulations and not under the Act, and conversely. Or, to put the same point in another way, a party wishing to rely on a contract term will have to satisfy the requirements of both sets of rules. The scope of the Regulations, however, differs significantly from that of the Act, so that often only one set of rules will apply.

In some respects, the Regulations are or may be narrower in scope than the Act. First, the Regulations strike only at contract terms,<sup>34</sup> while some of the provisions of the Act apply also to notices (not forming part of any contract) purporting to exclude or restrict liability.<sup>35</sup> Secondly, the Regulations apply only to any terms which have “not been individually negotiated”.<sup>36</sup> Only one provision of the Act is restricted to the situation in which a party deals on the other party’s “written standard terms of business”.<sup>37</sup> The other provisions of the Act can apply to individually negotiated contracts (or to notices given to individuals), though in practice they will no doubt most commonly apply to terms or notices in standard form. Thirdly, the Regulations apply only where one party

<sup>27</sup> See Shipskreditforeningen v Emperor Navigation [1998] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 67 at 78.

<sup>28</sup> SI 1999/2083, as amended by Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts (Amendment) Regulations 2001 (SI 2001/1186).

<sup>29</sup> 93/13/EEC. For the construction of legislation based on such Directives, see Litster v Forth Dry Dock & Engineering Co Ltd [1990] 1 A.C. 546 at 559, adopting a “purposive” construction, “even though perhaps it may involve some departure from the strict and literal application of the words which the legislature has elected to use.” cf. Three Rivers DC v Bank of England (No.2) [1996] 2 All E.R. 563.

<sup>30</sup> 93/13/EEC, Recital 4.

<sup>31</sup> SI 1994/3159.

<sup>32</sup> SI 1999/2083, regs 3(1) (definition of “unfair terms”) and 5(1). The combined effect of these two provisions appears to be that the 1999 Regulations apply only to terms which have not been “individually negotiated”. This point was more clearly expressed in reg.3(1) of the 1994 Regulations. The Directive (above n.29) on which the Regulations are based is stated in Recital 12 to cover “only contractual terms which have not been individually negotiated” but gives Member States the option of extending its protection beyond such terms. That option seems not to have been exercised by the United Kingdom in 1999 Regulations.

<sup>33</sup> SI 1999/3159, reg.8(1).

<sup>34</sup> ibid. regs 4(1) and 8(1).

<sup>35</sup> ss.2(1), 5(1), 11(3) and 11(4).

<sup>36</sup> Reg.5(1) and see n.32, above.

<sup>37</sup> s.3(1).

acts for purposes relating to his business and the other is a consumer<sup>38</sup> while some of the provisions of the Act apply where both parties act, or where neither party acts, in the course of a business. Fourthly, it is arguable that the Regulations apply only to a restricted range of contracts<sup>39</sup> while at least some of the provisions of the Act<sup>40</sup> apply to contracts generally. This difference between the two sets of rules (if it exists) is, however, much reduced by the list of contracts specifically excepted from the Act.<sup>41</sup> In respect of some of these exceptions,<sup>42</sup> indeed, the scope of the Act may actually be narrower than that of the Regulations.

In one significant respect, the scope of the Regulations is, on the other hand, clearly wider than that of the Act. With the exception of s.4, which deals with indemnity clauses, the Act is concerned only with exemption clauses, that is, with clauses which have the effect of excluding or restricting liability or of excluding or restricting an obligation or a duty. The scope of the Regulations includes such clauses but also extends beyond them to clauses which can confer rights on the party relying on them. This is clear not only from the operative parts of the Regulations, which refer generally to "an unfair term in a contract",<sup>43</sup> but also from the list of illustrations given in the Regulations of terms which may (though they will not necessarily) be regarded as unfair.<sup>44</sup> The list includes terms which allow the seller to retain sums paid by the consumer if the latter decides not to conclude or perform the contract, terms which require the consumer to pay a disproportionately high amount of compensation if he fails to perform his obligations, terms which automatically extend a fixed-term contract if the consumer does not give notice of termination, and terms which enable sellers or suppliers to increase their charges.<sup>45</sup> None of these provisions would fall within the 1977 Act since they are all terms which confer rights on the supplier and not terms which exclude or restrict his liability.

(3) Definitions

The Regulations contain a series of definitions comparable to those (already discussed)<sup>46</sup> in the 1977 Act.

(a) "SELLER" OR "SUPPLIER". The Regulations define this expression to mean "any natural or legal person who, in contracts covered by these Regulations, is acting for the purposes of his trade, business or profession . . ."<sup>47</sup> The words "contracts covered by these Regulations" here refer to contracts between such a seller or supplier and a consumer, containing terms which have not been "individually negotiated".<sup>48</sup> The definition however, perhaps deliberately, maintains an enigmatic silence as to the subject-matter of such contracts: in other words, it leaves open the question what it is that the seller must sell or the supplier supply. The 1994 Regulations answered these questions by defining seller as a person who sold "goods" and a supplier as one who supplied

<sup>38</sup> Regs 8(1), 3(1) (definition of "seller or supplier").

<sup>39</sup> See the discussion of the meaning of "seller" and "supplier" at p.268, below.

<sup>40</sup> e.g. ss.2 and 3.

<sup>41</sup> Above, pp.264–266.

<sup>42</sup> In particular, that relating to contracts for the transfer of interests in land: see above p.265, below, pp.278–279.

<sup>43</sup> reg.5(1); cf. reg.4(1).

<sup>44</sup> 1999 Regulations, Sch.2.

<sup>45</sup> ibid., para.1(d), (c), (h), (l); below, p.275–276.

<sup>46</sup> See above, pp.246–248.

<sup>47</sup> reg.3(1).

<sup>48</sup> See regs 3(1) (definition of "unfair terms"), 4(1); for exceptions, see below, p.278.

“goods or services”.<sup>49</sup> These words appear to have been intended to reflect the frequent use of the phrase “goods or services” in the Directive<sup>50</sup> on which the 1994 Regulations were, and the 1999 Regulations are, based and in the light of which the Regulations are to be interpreted<sup>51</sup>; and they have indeed survived in some of the provisions of the 1999 Regulations.<sup>52</sup> It seems that they were dropped from the definition of “seller or supplier” in the 1999 Regulations so as to leave open the question whether those Regulations could apply to contracts for the disposition of interests in land and similar problems could arise in relation to contracts for the transfer of interests in intellectual property or for the creation or issue of certain financial securities.<sup>53</sup> No doubt some aspects of such contracts would fall within the concept of “services” within the Directive and the Regulations (where they still use this term<sup>54</sup>); but this argument would not apply to a simple contract for the sale of land which did not oblige the vendor to do anything except to convey his interest to the purchaser. There is as yet no English authority on the point whether such a contract would fall within the Regulations.<sup>55</sup>

(b) “CONSUMER”. This expression is defined<sup>56</sup> to mean “any natural person who, in making contracts covered by these Regulations,<sup>57</sup> is acting for purposes which are outside his trade, business or profession”. The definition differs in various ways from the definition of “dealing as consumer” in the 1977 Act. First, it is not part of the definition under the Regulations (as it is under the Act) that the other party must make the contract in the course of a business; but this is a point of no significance as the Regulations have no effect on the contract unless the other party<sup>58</sup> acts for purposes relating to his trade, business or profession.<sup>59</sup> Secondly, the Regulations as a general rule<sup>60</sup> include only natural persons in the definition of consumer, while under the Act a corporation can deal as consumer in relation to a contract not made in the course of a business: e.g. if a company not engaged in the entertainment business hired musicians for social purposes of one of its staff.<sup>61</sup> Thirdly, a person is not to be regarded as dealing as a consumer for the purposes of the Act if he is an “individual”<sup>62</sup> and the goods are second hand goods sold at public auction which individuals have the opportunity of attending in person,<sup>63</sup> but a person who buys in this way may be a “consumer” within the Regulations. Finally, under the Act a person deals as consumer only if “he neither

<sup>49</sup> 1994 Regulations, reg.2(1).

<sup>50</sup> Dir 93/13 Recitals 2, 5, 6, 16, 18, 19 and Art.4(1); cf. Recitals 7 and 9 (“goods and services”), and see Recital 1, below, p.278, p.279.

<sup>51</sup> See below, p.278 n.65.

<sup>52</sup> reg.6(1), 6(2)(b). See also Sch.1, para.1(c), (f), (e), and (m); cf. ibid., para.1(k) (“product or service”).

<sup>53</sup> Such contracts are excepted from the scope of the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977: above, pp.264 et seq.

<sup>54</sup> See above, n.50.

<sup>55</sup> See further pp.278–279, below.

<sup>56</sup> reg.3(1).

<sup>57</sup> cf. above at n.48.

<sup>58</sup> i.e., the seller or supplier: see reg.4(1).

<sup>59</sup> See the definitions of “seller or supplier”, above.

<sup>60</sup> Exceptionally, for the purposes of Arbitration Act 1996 the Regulations are extended by ss.89–91 to consumer arbitration agreements so that such an agreement is unfair even though the consumer is a legal (as opposed to a natural) person where the amount claimed is £5,000 or less: Arbitration Agreements (Specified Amounts) Order 1999 (SI 1999/2167).

<sup>61</sup> The amendment of s.12(1)(c) of the 1977 Act discussed at p.227, above relates only to contracts for the supply of goods and so would not affect the example given in the text.

<sup>62</sup> There seems to be no significant distinction between “an individual” and a “natural person” within the definition of “consumer” reg.3(1), above, after n.56.

<sup>63</sup> 1977 Act, s.12(2), as substituted by Sale and Supply of Goods to Consumers Regulations 2002 (SI 2002/3045), reg. 14(3).

makes the contract in the course of a business nor holds himself out as doing so",<sup>64</sup> while under the Regulations a person is a consumer if in making the contract he "is acting for purposes which are outside his trade, business or profession".<sup>65</sup> These differences between the definitions in the Regulations and the Act should, however, be considered against the background of the relative scope of the two legislative regimes. The Regulations have effect only on contracts with consumers while many of the Act's provisions apply even where both parties act in the course of a business. It is often only the degree of control which is affected under the Act by the distinction between such a transaction and one in which one party deals as consumer, so that, for example, an exemption clause in a consumer transaction will be simply ineffective, while one in a business transaction will be subject to the requirement of reasonableness.

A person may be a consumer for the purposes of the Regulations even in relation to a transaction of considerable value: e.g., in one case, to a contract to acquire foreign currency worth $7million.<sup>66</sup> The value of the transaction appears likewise to be no bar to a person's dealing as consumer for the purposes of the 1977 Act.

(c) TERM NOT INDIVIDUALLY NEGOTIATED. The Regulations apply only<sup>67</sup> to terms which have not been individually negotiated; and they provide that a term "shall always be regarded as not having been individually negotiated where it has been drafted in advance and the consumer has therefore not been able to influence the substance of the term".<sup>68</sup> This definition does not require the term to have been drafted by the seller or supplier: it would cover a term drafted by a trade association for use by its members. The requirement that the term must have been drafted "in advance" prompts the question: in advance of what? The most obvious answer appears to be "in advance of the conclusion of the contract"; but this is unsatisfactory because all the terms of a contract will normally be drafted before the contract is made. "In advance" is therefore perhaps more appropriately taken to mean "in advance of the negotiations leading to the conclusion of the contract," so that it is because of the time at which the term was drafted that the consumer could not influence its substance.<sup>69</sup> Where a term has been negotiated between organisations representing on the one hand sellers or suppliers and on the other hand consumers, it would appear not to be "individually" negotiated but the fact that the term has been negotiated between such organisations will no doubt be relevant to the issue of its fairness.

Where one or more terms (or aspects of a particular term) have been individually negotiated, but the rest of the contract has not been so negotiated, the Regulations will apply to the rest of the contract if, viewed as a whole, it is a "pre-formulated standard contract".<sup>70</sup> The burden of proof on the issue whether a term was individually negotiated is on the seller or supplier who seeks to rely on the term.<sup>71</sup> A similar issue may arise under s.3 of the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 which applies where one party deals on the other's written standard terms. The section, however, lays down no rule as to the burden of proof on this issue; though other sections of the Act do require the party relying on an exemption clause to show (where these points are relevant) that the term was reasonable or that the other party was not dealing as consumer.<sup>72</sup>

<sup>64</sup> s.12(1)(a).

<sup>65</sup> reg.3(1).

<sup>66</sup> Standard Bank of London Ltd v Abelmolakis [2000] 1 I.L.Pr. 766.

<sup>67</sup> See above, p.267, n.32.

<sup>68</sup> reg.5(2) (italics supplied).

<sup>69</sup> See the word "therefore" in the definition quoted at n.68, above.

<sup>70</sup> reg.5(3).

<sup>71</sup> reg.5(4).

<sup>72</sup> ss.11(5) and 12(3).

(d) UNFAIRNESS AND GOOD FAITH. The definition of an “unfair term”<sup>73</sup> is the aspect of the Regulations which is likely to give rise to the greatest difficulty in their practical operation. Two ideas are central to the definition: the term must be “contrary to the requirement of good faith” and it must be one which “causes a significant imbalance in the parties’ rights and obligations arising under the contract to the detriment of the consumer.” These requirements standing alone would clearly be a source of considerable uncertainty, and the courts and the Regulations have sought in a number of ways to reduce this uncertainty.

(i) Factors relevant to “significant imbalance”. First, the Regulations direct the court, in deciding the issue of “significant imbalance”, to take into account or to refer to a number of factors.<sup>74</sup> One such factor is “the nature of the goods or services for which the contract was concluded” so that, for example, a term which was not fair in a contract for the sale of new goods might be fair if the goods were sold as being second-hand. The court is also directed to refer “to all the circumstances attending the conclusion of the contract” as at the time of its conclusion: here the fact that the consumer had examined goods before deciding to buy them would be relevant; and in a contract for the supply of services it would be relevant that, when the contract was made, the consumer was in a position to appreciate the risk that the services might fail to achieve the desired purpose.<sup>75</sup> It is significant that the Regulations refer at this point to the time of the conclusion of the contract, thus supporting the view that the issue of fairness (like that of reasonableness under the 1977 Act<sup>76</sup>) is to be determined by reference to the time of contracting. Finally, the court is directed to take into account “all the other terms of the contract or of another contract on which it is dependent”. The point here is that a term which might, standing alone, appear to be unfair could be fair having regard to the structure or system of rights and immunities created by the contract as a whole. It might, for example, be fair for a supplier who undertook liabilities beyond those imposed under a particular type of contract at common law to require notice of claims in respect of such liabilities to be given within a period shorter than the normal period of limitation for claims of the kind in question. The words “or of another contract on which it is dependent” would apply similar reasoning to the case in which the particular contract in question was made under a “master contract” governing a series of transactions between the parties.

(ii) “Core provisions.” Secondly, the Regulations are not intended to operate as a mechanism of quality or price control.<sup>77</sup> Reg.6(2) accordingly provides that “In so far as it is in plain intelligible language, the assessment of fairness of a term shall not relate (a) to the definition of the main subject-matter of the contract, or (b) to the adequacy of the price or remuneration, as against the goods or services supplied in exchange.” This

<sup>73</sup> In regs 5(1) and 6(1).

<sup>74</sup> ibid.

<sup>75</sup> e.g. where a ticket was bought to view an event, the parties knowing of a risk that it might be called off, as in the renegotiated term in Clark v Lindsay (1902) 88 L.T. 198 (below, p.288, n.17), where that term would now be regarded as having been “individually negotiated” within reg.5(2).

<sup>76</sup> s.11(1).

<sup>77</sup> This sentence is cited with apparent approval in Director General of Fair Trading v First National Bank plc [2001] UKHL 52; [2002] 1 A.C. 481, at [12] by Lord Bingham, with whose reasoning all the other members of the House of Lords agreed. Lord Roger, however, at [64] expresses “no concluded view” on the question whether, under the Regulations, it is open to the court to consider “whether there is an equivalence between the services or goods and the consideration for them”. He suggests that to regard this point as relevant “would seem to be consistent with the reference to the price/quality ratio” in the nineteenth recital” of the Directive (above p.267, n.29) to which the Regulations give effect. This recital is not easy to interpret but it seems to mean that this ratio is not relevant to the fairness of the price term itself (first sentence) though it may be relevant to the fairness of other terms of the contract (second sentence).

provision may be compared with a number of common law principles discussed elsewhere in this book. The most important of these principles is that the court will not, as a general rule, investigate the adequacy of consideration.<sup>78</sup> A term is not unfair for the purposes of the Regulations merely because it fixes a price or remuneration which may be regarded as “excessive” by the application of some objective standard of valuation.<sup>79</sup> Conversely, the Regulations leave it open to the parties to define the subject-matter of the contract: in this respect, they resemble the common law rules discussed earlier in this Chapter,<sup>80</sup> under which there would be no breach at all, even though the subject-matter was in some objective sense defective, if what was supplied was what the parties had contracted about: e.g. where the contract was simply to supply “seed” rather than “cabbage seed” and the seed, when planted, disappointed the buyer’s expectation of yielding a crop of cabbages.<sup>81</sup> Similarly, in the case of the hostess who asked a supplier to “send me peas or if you haven’t got peas send me beans, but for heaven’s sake send something”,<sup>82</sup> the term allowing the supplier to make such a choice would not appear to fall within the Regulations. The term would not be even prima facie unfair (as one enabling the seller unilaterally to alter the characteristics of the product to be provided<sup>83</sup>) since this product was defined by the contract not as “peas” but as “peas or beans or something”. A further group of terms excluded from control on the principle of reg.6(2) consists of terms in insurance contracts which “clearly define or circumscribe the insured risk and the insurer’s liability”.<sup>84</sup> This exclusion is, however, narrower in scope than the exclusion of “any contract of insurance” from the 1977 Act.<sup>85</sup> Terms in an insurance contract, other than those which define its subject-matter, would therefore be within the Regulations, though not within the Act. This would, for example, be true of a clause requiring the consumer to give notice of claims within an unreasonably short period: such a clause could be prima facie unfair on the ground that it “hindered” the consumer’s right to take legal action.<sup>86</sup>

Reg.6(2) is of crucial importance in recognising the parties’ freedom of contract with respect to the essential features of their bargain. It is limited by the words of the Regulation to cases in which the term in question is “expressed in plain, intelligible language.” Hence an obscurely expressed price term which, on its true construction, but unexpectedly, entitled the supplier to make additions to a price prominently stated elsewhere in the contractual document could, by reason of its obscurity, be an “unfair” term. The courts are, moreover, reluctant to give too wide a scope to the concept of a “core provision” since the effect of doing this would be to except too great a range of contract terms from the scope of the Regulations so that their object would be “plainly frustrated”.<sup>87</sup> A term which specifies payments to be made by the consumer is not necessarily one which relates to “the adequacy of the price or remuneration” within reg.6(2)(b).<sup>88</sup> The point may be illustrated by reference to a consumer credit agreement, in which a term specifying the rate of interest would no doubt fall within these words;

<sup>78</sup> See above, p.74.

<sup>79</sup> cf. below, p.422.

<sup>80</sup> See above, p.228.

<sup>81</sup> Example based on the George Mitchell case [1983] 2 A.C. 803, above, p.235.

<sup>82</sup> See above, p.228.

<sup>83</sup> Within reg.5(2) and Sch.2, para.1(k).

<sup>84</sup> See Dir.93/13, Recital 19.

<sup>85</sup> 1977 Act, Sch.1, para.1(a). This provision also excludes contracts “to pay an annuity on a human life;” the Regulations do not except such contracts.

<sup>86</sup> 1999 Regulations, Sch.2, para.1(q).

<sup>87</sup> Director General of Fair Trading v First National Bank plc [2001] UKHL 52; [2002] 1 A.C. 481, [12]; cf. ibid. at [34].

<sup>88</sup> Formerly reg.3(2)(b) of the 1994 Regulations considered in the case cited in n.87, above.

but the House of Lords has held<sup>89</sup> that they did not cover a term requiring the debtor to pay interest on outstanding amounts, even after judgment had been given against him for the principal sum, since this term was “ancillary”<sup>90</sup> to his principal obligation. The term was therefore subject to the Regulations, though it was upheld as being neither “unfair” nor “contrary to the requirement of good faith” since, when the contract was made,<sup>91</sup> neither party would have supposed that the lender “would willingly forgo any part of its principal or interest”.<sup>92</sup>

The requirement of considering the adequacy of the price or remuneration “as against”<sup>93</sup> the subject-matter of the contract could similarly restrict the concept of a “core provision” and hence of reg.6(2). The point may be illustrated by reference to the case in which a contract for the hire of goods for a fixed period provides that the hirer is to pay a “holding charge” if he retains the goods after the end of the stipulated period.<sup>94</sup> Although such a provision could be described as the “price” of an option to extend the period of hire,<sup>95</sup> it could also be regarded as “ancillary”<sup>96</sup> to the main object of the contract; or as fixing the “price,” not of what was to be supplied, but of the option described above. The provision would then be subject to the Regulations and, if the charge were unusually high, the term requiring it to be paid could be regarded as “unfair” within them. Indeed, the example comes very close to one of the illustrations given in Sch.2 of prima facie unfair terms.<sup>97</sup>

(iii) Good faith. Thirdly, the requirement of good faith has been described in the House of Lords as “one of fair and open dealing”.<sup>98</sup> Openness here refers to the way in which terms are set out: they must be “expressed fully, clearly and legibly, containing no concealed pitfalls or traps” and giving due “prominence to terms which might operate disadvantageously to the customer”.<sup>99</sup> Fairness refers to the substance of the contract and requires the supplier not “whether deliberately or unconsciously, [to] take advantage of the consumer’s necessity, indigence, lack of experience, unfamiliarity with the subject-matter of the contract, [or] weak bargaining position”.<sup>1</sup> The Directive on which the Regulations are based further lists, among factors relevant to good faith, “the strength of the bargaining positions of the parties, whether the consumer had an inducement to agree to the term and whether the goods or services were supplied to the special order of the consumer”.<sup>2</sup> It is probably impossible to achieve greater precision in formulating such an essentially flexible requirement.

(iv) Examples of unfair terms. Finally, the Regulations contain (in Sch.2) a long and elaborate list of terms “which may be regarded as unfair”,<sup>3</sup> this list in effect provides

<sup>89</sup> Director General of Fair Trading v First National Bank plc, above.

<sup>90</sup> ibid. at [12].

<sup>91</sup> See reg.6(1) (formerly reg.4(2) of the 1994 Regulations).

<sup>92</sup> Director General of Fair Trading v First National Bank plc, above, n.87 at [20].

<sup>93</sup> reg.6(2)(b).

<sup>94</sup> See Interfoto Picture Library Ltd v Stiletto Visual Programmes Ltd [1989] Q.B. 433, above, p.245.

<sup>95</sup> cf. below, p.1004.

<sup>96</sup> Above, at n.90.

<sup>97</sup> Sch.2, para.1(h), above, p.268 at n.45.

<sup>98</sup> Director General of Fair Trading v First National Bank plc [2001] UKHL 52; [2002] 1 A.C. 481 at [17].

<sup>99</sup> ibid.

<sup>1</sup> ibid.

<sup>2</sup> Dir.93/13, Recital 16. These guidelines were formerly contained in Sch.2 of the 1994 Regulations (above, p.267) but they are not reproduced in the 1999 Regulations. To some extent they form the basis of the judicial guidelines summarised in the text above. They also resemble the guidelines for applying the reasonableness test contained in Sch.2 of the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977. The further statement in Recital 16, above, that the requirement of good faith may be satisfied by “dealing fairly and equitably with the consumer” seems to be more in the nature of a restatement than a guideline for its operation.

<sup>3</sup> Reg.5(5), emphasis added.

further guidelines. It is "indicative and non-exhaustive",<sup>4</sup> so that, on the one hand, a term is not unfair merely because it is of a type included in the list; and, on the other hand, a term may be unfair even though it does not fall within, or closely resemble, any such type of term.

It will be convenient to refer to terms included in the list as "prima facie unfair terms". Some of the prima facie unfair terms listed in Sch.2 would also be classified as exemption clauses within the 1977 Act. Like the Act, Sch.2 distinguishes between clauses which exclude or limit liability for death or personal injury and other clauses excluding or limiting rights: any term of the former kind is prima facie unfair,<sup>5</sup> while in the case of a term of the latter kind there is the additional requirement that it must "inappropriately" exclude or limit the consumer's rights.<sup>6</sup> The list in Sch.2 also includes terms "limiting" the seller's or supplier's obligation to respect commitments undertaken by his agents<sup>7</sup>: such terms would clearly be regarded as an exemption clause under the Act. The fact that the Schedule at this point refers only to terms "limiting" the obligation would not preclude a clause which excluded it from being also regarded as prima facie unfair: this follows from the fact that the list is not exhaustive.

Terms "excluding or hindering"<sup>8</sup> the consumer's right to take legal action or exercise any other legal remedy are included in the list of prima facie unfair terms. In this context, the list refers, in particular, to terms "requiring the consumer to take disputes exclusively to arbitration not covered by legal provisions."<sup>9</sup> At first sight, this goes beyond the Act, which, while recognising that a term excluding or restricting a remedy may be an exemption clause,<sup>10</sup> expressly excepts arbitration agreements from this category.<sup>11</sup> The reference to arbitration clauses in Sch.2 is, however, restricted by the words "not covered by legal provisions" and the purpose of this restriction may be to narrow the category of prima facie unfair arbitration clauses to those in which the parties have agreed to exclude the powers of the courts to control the arbitrator's decision. In English law, the effectiveness of such a stipulation is subject to limitations which, in the case of a "domestic arbitration agreement", make the stipulation ineffective if it is contained in the original contract between the seller or supplier and the consumer.<sup>12</sup> Other types of terms listed in Sch.2, which would also be governed by the 1977 Act, are clauses entitling the seller or supplier to dissolve the contract at his discretion where the same facility is not granted to the consumer,<sup>13</sup> to terminate a contract of indeterminate duration without reasonable notice (except on serious grounds),<sup>14</sup> to alter the terms of the contract unilaterally without a valid reason which is specified in the contract<sup>15</sup> or to alter unilaterally without a valid reason any characteristic of the product or service to be provided<sup>16</sup>: all such terms could be subject to the requirement of reasonableness under s.3 of the 1977 Act.<sup>17</sup> Yet other terms listed in Sch.2 which would be classified as

<sup>4</sup> ibid.

<sup>5</sup> Sch.2, para.1(a).

<sup>6</sup> ibid. para.1(b). There is no reference to negligence in these illustrations.

<sup>7</sup> ibid. para.1(n).

<sup>8</sup> ibid. para.1(q).

<sup>9</sup> ibid., para.1(q); the Arbitration Agreements (Specified Amounts) Order 1999 (SI 1999/2167), makes an arbitration agreement with a consumer unfair where less than £5,000 is claimed.

<sup>10</sup> 1977 Act s.13(1).

<sup>11</sup> ibid., s.13(2).

<sup>12</sup> Arbitration Act 1996, s.87, below, p.447.

<sup>13</sup> Sch.2, para.1(f); cf. 1977 Act s.3(2)(b)(ii).

<sup>14</sup> Sch.2, para.1(g), subject to ibid. para.2(a) and (c); cf. 1977 Act s.3(2)(b)(i).

<sup>15</sup> Sch.2, para.1(k); cf. 1977 Act, s.3(2)(6)(ii).

<sup>16</sup> Sch.2, para.1(j), subject to ibid. para.2(b) and (c); cf. 1977 Act s.3(2)(b)(i).

<sup>17</sup> See above, pp.252–254. There is no reference in the last illustration to termination for breach by the consumer; as to this, see above, pp.253–256.

exemption clauses under the Act are terms which make the seller's or supplier's commitments subject to compliance with a particular formality,<sup>18</sup> and terms giving him the right to determine whether the goods or services supplied are in conformity with the contract, or giving him the exclusive right to interpret the contract<sup>19</sup>: all such terms could be treated, for the purpose of the 1977 Act, as exemption clauses on the ground that they made the enforcement of the seller's or supplier's liability "subject to restrictive or onerous conditions" within s.13 of that Act.

Sch.2 also refers to many varieties of terms which would not be regarded as exemption clauses under the Act or at common law,<sup>20</sup> and it is this aspect of the Schedule which is significant in indicating the potentially wide scope of the Regulations. The list in Sch.2 in particular includes many types of terms which confer rights (other than rights of cancellation) on the seller or supplier.

Some such clauses might, indeed, be ineffective at common law on grounds discussed elsewhere in this book. This might, for example, be true of a term making an agreement binding on the consumer while making performance by the seller or supplier subject to a condition depending on his own will alone<sup>21</sup>: at common law there might in such a case be no consideration for the consumer's promise so long as the seller's or supplier's promise remained executory.<sup>22</sup> Similarly, the list includes a term requiring the consumer, when in breach, to pay a disproportionately high sum in compensation<sup>23</sup>: at common law, such a term is likely to be invalid as a penalty.<sup>24</sup> The same might be true of terms entitling the seller to forfeit a deposit paid by the consumer<sup>25</sup>: these again might in certain circumstances be invalid as penalties at common law.<sup>26</sup>

A significant number of prima facie unfair terms listed in Sch.2 are, however, of a kind that has not, apart from the Regulations been subjected to legal control, at least as a matter of general principle, either at common law or by legislation (other than legislation applying to specific types of contract). One type of term within this group is that automatically extending a contract of fixed duration unless the consumer gives notice to terminate it, where the time for giving such notice is unreasonably early<sup>27</sup>: in contracts outside the scope of the Regulations, there appears to be no ground on which the validity of such a term could be called into question at common law or under the 1977 Act. The same is true of another type of prima facie invalid term listed in Sch.2, i.e. one "providing for the price of goods to be determined at the time of delivery"<sup>28</sup> or one providing for the price of goods or services to be increased without giving the consumer the right to cancel if the final price is too high in relation to the originally agreed price.<sup>29</sup> There is no reason to suppose that such a clause is open to attack at common law and even its prima facie invalidity under the Regulations is extensively qualified in relation to transactions in which the price is linked to stock exchange fluctuations or which contain <sup>18</sup> Sch.2, para.1(n); it is not clear whether the concluding words of this illustration are limited to commitments undertaken by agents.

<sup>19</sup> Sch.2, para.1(m).

<sup>20</sup> This is also true of other legislation designed to prevent avoidance by contract of a legislative scheme: e.g., Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995, s.25(1)(a).

<sup>21</sup> Sch.2, para.1(c). Terms conferring such rights can be exemption clauses under s.3 the 1977 Act: see text at n.13 above.

<sup>22</sup> See above, p.83.

<sup>23</sup> Sch.2, para.1(e).

<sup>24</sup> See below, p.999.

<sup>25</sup> Sch.2, para.1(d).

<sup>26</sup> See below, p.1008.

<sup>27</sup> Sch.2, para.1(h).

<sup>28</sup> Sch.2, para.1(l).

<sup>29</sup> ibid.

other indexation clauses; and in relation to contracts for the purchase of foreign currency or instruments expressed in foreign currency.<sup>30</sup> Yet another type of prima facie unfair term is that obliging the consumer "to fulfil all his obligation where the seller or supplier does not perform his".<sup>31</sup> A clause excluding the consumer's right of set-off would no doubt be regarded as an exemption clause for the purposes of the 1977 Act<sup>32</sup>; but the same would not be true of a clause which so defined the consumer's obligation that he had no right of set-off but only a cross-claim for damages in respect of the other party's default.<sup>33</sup> Again, a term is prima facie invalid within Sch.2 if it gives the seller or supplier "the possibility of transferring his rights and obligations under the contract where this may serve to reduce the guarantees for the consumer without the latter's agreement".<sup>34</sup> At common law the seller or supplier could not strictly transfer his obligations, though he might arrange for them to be vicariously performed,<sup>35</sup> and he could certainly transfer his rights by assignment<sup>36</sup>; and these powers would not seem at common law to be limited by the possibility that this would impair the consumer's guarantees. A term expressly limiting the effectiveness of guarantees given by the seller or supplier would no doubt be subject to control as an exemption clause, but that is not the type of term here under consideration. Yet another prima facie invalid term is one which has the object or effect of "irrevocably binding the consumer to terms with which he had no real opportunity of becoming acquainted before the conclusion of the contract".<sup>37</sup> This may already represent the common law position with regard to the incorporation of standard terms by notice<sup>38</sup>; but at first sight, it differs strikingly from the common law rule governing the incorporation of such terms by signature. The latter common law rule is, however, concerned with the effect of signature,<sup>39</sup> rather than with terms specifying that effect. If a consumer signed a document containing a term incorporating by reference conditions set out in another document, then that term could be prima facie unfair under the Regulations if the other document was not readily accessible to the consumer.

(4) Excluded terms

(a) STATUTORY OR REGULATORY PROVISIONS. The Regulations do not apply to contractual terms which reflect "mandatory statutory or regulatory provisions".<sup>40</sup> The effect of these words is that the Regulations do not apply to terms which a contract is by other legislation required to contain.<sup>41</sup> The 1977 Act is subject to similar, but more broadly expressed, limitation: it does not apply to contractual provisions "authorised or required"<sup>42</sup> by legislation. The use of the word "mandatory"<sup>43</sup> in the Regulations seems to mean that the exception in them does not extend to provisions which are merely authorised but not required by other legislation; though the fact that they are so authorised would no doubt be taken into account in determining whether they were

<sup>30</sup> Sch.2, para.2(c) and (d).

<sup>31</sup> Sch.2, para.1(o).

<sup>32</sup> See above, pp.247-248.

<sup>33</sup> See below, p.763.

<sup>34</sup> Sch.2, para.1(p).

<sup>35</sup> See below, p.757.

<sup>36</sup> See below, Chap.16.

<sup>37</sup> Sch.3, para.1(i).

<sup>38</sup> See above, pp.217-219.

<sup>39</sup> See above, p.197.

<sup>40</sup> reg.4(2)(a).

<sup>41</sup> e.g., below, p.285.

<sup>42</sup> s.29(1)(a).

<sup>43</sup> Above, at n.40.

"unfair". For example, the Consumer Credit Act 1974 at least by implication authorises a term in a regulated hire-purchase agreement requiring the hirer on exercising his right to cancel to make a minimum payment not exceeding on half of the hire-purchase price.<sup>44</sup> If that sum is excessive, the hirer can seek relief by way of reduction of the minimum payment under the 1974 Act<sup>45</sup>; and an undesirable conflict would be created between that Act and the Regulations if, under them, such a term were held to be "unfair" (and so not bringing at all on the hirer).

(b) INTERNATIONAL CONVENTIONS. The Regulations also do not apply to contractual terms which reflect "the provisions or principles of international conventions to which the Member States or the Community are party".<sup>46</sup> Again this exclusion resembles a similar limitation on the scope of the 1977 Act.<sup>47</sup> The exclusion is, however, wider than that contained in the Act in two respects. First, it refers to international conventions to which the Member States or the Community are party (while the Act refers only to international agreements to which the United Kingdom is a party). Secondly, the Regulations refer to "the provisions or principles" of such conventions, so that a term based on the principles of a relevant convention would not be governed by the Regulations even though the contract in which the term was contained was not governed by the convention: e.g. where a term in a contract for the domestic carriage of goods was based on the principles of a convention which in terms governed only international carriage.

Unlike the 1977 Act,<sup>48</sup> the Regulations contain no exception for international supply contracts; but it seems that contracts governed by the Vienna Convention on Contracts for the International Sale of Goods<sup>49</sup> would fall within the present exception. The point is not likely to be of major importance since the Regulations apply only to consumer contracts, and these will only rarely (if ever) be governed by the Convention.<sup>50</sup> But where the Convention does govern such contracts, the parties are allowed by it to "derogate" from or vary its provisions,<sup>51</sup> and thus a seller can exclude or restrict liability which, but for such derogation, would be imposed on him by the Convention. This appears to be one of the "principles" of the Convention, so that the Regulations would not apply to a term of this kind in such a contract.

(5) Excluded contracts

(a) CONTRACTS SPECIFICALLY EXCLUDED. The Directive on which the Regulations are based lists a number of contracts which "must be excluded from this Directive".<sup>52</sup> This list was reproduced in the 1994 Regulations<sup>53</sup> but is no longer contained in the 1999 Regulations. It is, nevertheless, arguable that contracts in this list remain outside the scope of the Regulations since, by force of the Directive, they are not contracts under which there is a sale or supply of the kind contemplated by it<sup>54</sup> to the consumer.<sup>55</sup> The

<sup>44</sup> s.100(1).

<sup>45</sup> s.100(3), below, p.1005.

<sup>46</sup> reg.4(2)(b); for definitions of "Member States" and "the Community," see reg.3(1).

<sup>47</sup> s.29(1)(b).

<sup>48</sup> 1977 Act s.26.

<sup>49</sup> See above, p.29.

<sup>50</sup> Art.2(a) of the Vienna Convention; Art.1, referring to "places of business," may suggest that the Convention does not apply to consumer contracts at all.

<sup>51</sup> Art.6 of the Vienna Convention.

<sup>52</sup> Dir.93/13, Recital 10.

<sup>53</sup> SI 1994/3159, reg.3(1) and Sch.1(a) to (e).

<sup>54</sup> i.e., contracts for sale or supply of "goods" (or "products") and for the supply of services (sc. to the consumer); see above p.269 n.50.

<sup>55</sup> cf. Chitty on Contracts (28th ed.), §15-021.

most important of the contracts excluded by the Directive are contracts "relating to employment".<sup>56</sup> This exclusion differs from the corresponding provision of the 1977 Act, some of the provisions of which do not extend to contracts of employment "except in favour of the employee".<sup>57</sup> Under the Directive, even the employee cannot rely on the unfairness of a term against the employer: the problems arising from such terms are left to be dealt with by employment law or perhaps by collective bargaining. The Directive also excludes "contracts relating to succession rights" or to "any contract relating to rights under family law"<sup>58</sup>; but these exceptions are unlikely to be of great practical importance in English law, which seems to provide no examples of such contracts being made between a seller or supplier acting in the course of business and a consumer. The Directive finally excludes "contracts relating to the incorporation and organisation of companies or partnership agreements."<sup>59</sup> This resembles a similar exclusion from the operation of the 1977 Act.<sup>60</sup> The question whether the Regulations apply to dealings in company shares after their issue is part of the wider problem (to be discussed below) whether certain contracts, though not specifically excluded, are nevertheless unaffected by the Regulations because they fall outside their inclusive provisions.

(b) CONTRACTS NOT COVERED BY THE INCLUSIVE PROVISIONS. It will be recalled that the 1977 Act excludes certain types of contracts from its scope and, in particular, that it excludes any contract "so far as it relates to" the creation of an interest in land or in intellectual property.<sup>61</sup> The 1999 Regulations contain no such exclusions, though under the 1994 Regulations it was arguable that such contracts were impliedly excluded by the definitions of a "seller" as a person who sold "goods" and of a "supplier" as one who supplied "goods or services."<sup>62</sup> This argument is no longer available now that the definition of "seller or supplier" in the 1999 Regulations<sup>63</sup> has ceased to tell us what it is that must be sold or supplied. But, as we have noted in discussing that definition,<sup>64</sup> the Directive on which those Regulations are based, and which must be taken into account in interpreting them,<sup>65</sup> contain many references to "goods or services"<sup>66</sup>; and the Regulations themselves contain two such references.<sup>67</sup> These references do not, however, conclude the question whether contracts for the sale of interests in land are excluded by the use of the word "goods" since in EC Directives and in legislation based on them this word does not necessarily bear the same meaning as that normally given to it in English law<sup>68</sup>; indeed, the view that in the Directive it bears a wider meaning is supported by some of the items in the list of prima facie unfair terms annexed to the

<sup>56</sup> Dir.93/13, Recital 10.

<sup>57</sup> 1977 Act, Sch.1, para.4.

<sup>58</sup> Dir.93/13, Recital 10.

<sup>59</sup> ibid.

<sup>60</sup> 1977 Act, Sch.1, para.1(d).

<sup>61</sup> Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977, Sch.1, para.1(b) and (c).

<sup>62</sup> 1994 Regulations, reg.2(1).

<sup>63</sup> 1999 Regulations, reg.3(1).

<sup>64</sup> See above, p.269.

<sup>65</sup> Case C.14/83 Von Colson and Kamman v Land Nordrhein Westfalen [1984] E.C.R. 1891; Craig and De Búrca, E.U. Law (2nd ed. 1998); Chitty on Contracts (28th ed.), §15-006.

<sup>66</sup> Dir.93/13, Recitals 2, 5, 6, 16, 18, 19 and Art.4(1); cf. Recitals 7 and 9 ("goods and services").

<sup>67</sup> reg.6(1) and 6(2)(b).

<sup>68</sup> Dir.97/77 on protection of consumers in respect of "distance contracts" applies to "contracts concerning goods and services" but finds it necessary specifically to except "contracts concluded for the construction and sale of immovable property... except for rental". This Directive has been implemented in the UK by the Consumer Protection (Distance Selling) Regulations 2000 (SI 2000/2334) under which a "distance contract" is likewise one "concerning goods or services" (reg.3(1)) and contracts "for the sale or disposition of an interest in land except for a rental agreement" are specifically excepted (reg.5(1)(a)). In Enterprise Act 2002, s.232(2)(a), "goods include buildings or other structures" but not, it seems, the land itself.

Directive and reproduced in the Regulations.<sup>69</sup> Some aspects of contracts for the sale of land could clearly come within the Directive (and hence of the Regulations) as contracts for the supply of "services": this would, for example be true of a covenant in such a contract to keep the subject-matter in repair or to render some other service in relation to it; but this reasoning would not apply to a simple contract for the conveyance of freehold land, containing no such additional undertakings.<sup>70</sup> Most contracts for the sale of private dwellings would not be covered by the Regulations because in them the seller, as well as the buyer, would act in a "private" capacity, i.e., not "for the purposes relating to his trade, business or profession".<sup>71</sup> But the seller would be likely so to act where he was a developer selling to a "private" buyer (who would be likely to fall within the definition of "consumer"). The question whether in such circumstances a simple contract for the sale of the freehold to the buyer would fall within the Regulations is one that awaits judicial determination in England.<sup>72</sup> As a matter of policy it can be argued, on the one hand, that there is no good reason why such a seller should not be subject to the Regulations; and, on the other, that the buyer has less need than the normal consumer of their protection since in such a transaction he is likely to be represented by his own solicitor. The latter consideration would not apply to what is now probably the most common type of contract for the "sale" of intellectual property to a consumer i.e., to one licensing him to use computer software; but as such contracts often also involve the transfer of a moveable physical object it seems that they would be contracts for the sale of supply of "goods or services" within the Directive and hence be covered by the Regulations.<sup>73</sup> Contracts of insurance are excluded from the scope of the 1927 Act<sup>74</sup>; but they are within the scope of the Directive<sup>75</sup> and hence (again) of the Regulations.

The failure of the 1999 Regulations to specify what it is that must be sold as supplied, coupled with the references noted above in the Directive and in the Regulations, to "goods" and "services"<sup>76</sup> gives rise to yet more difficulty in relation to certain other kinds of transactions which are not transactions in "goods" within other statutory definitions of that expression.<sup>77</sup> Of these, the best known is that in the Sale of Goods Act 1979, which provides that, in that Act, the word "goods" includes "all personal chattels other than things in action or money"<sup>78</sup>; and this definition is followed or adopted by many other statutes which have as at least one of their objects the protection of consumers.<sup>79</sup> The Vienna Convention on Contracts for the International Sale of Goods similarly does not apply to sales of "stocks, shares investment securities and money".<sup>80</sup> In the Regulations, however, some of the illustrations of prima facie unfair terms are evidently <sup>69</sup> See the Annex to Dir.93/13 and Sch.2 of the 1999 Regulations. Some illustrations of contracts which are assumed in these lists to be within the Directive and the Regulations are discussed in the paragraph that follows in the text below.

<sup>70</sup> The reference in Recital 1 of Dir.93/13 to "goods" which "move freely" is scarcely appropriate to such contracts.

<sup>71</sup> 1999 Regulations, reg.3(1).

<sup>72</sup> For the view that such contracts should be covered by the 1994 Regulations, see Attenw, 58 M.I.R. 696; cf. Bright and Bright, 111 L.Q.R. 655; Chitty on Contracts (28th ed.), §§15-012, 15-013.

<sup>73</sup> See St Albans City & District Council v International Computers [1996] 4 All E.R. 481 per Sir Iain Glidewell; the question in that case was discussed in relation to the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 and the buyer was not a "consumer".

<sup>74</sup> 1977 Act, Sch.1, para.1(a).

<sup>75</sup> See the reference to "insurance contracts" in Recital 19 of the Directive.

<sup>76</sup> See n.66, above.

<sup>77</sup> See Benjamin's Sale of Goods (6th ed.), §1-079.

<sup>78</sup> Sale of Goods Act 1979, s.62(1).

<sup>79</sup> e.g. Consumer Credit Act 1974, s.189(1); Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977, ss.14, 25; Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982, s.18.

<sup>80</sup> Art.2(d).

based on the assumption that certain transactions in securities could fall within the scope of the Regulations.<sup>81</sup> The assumption is not easy to reconcile with the references to “goods” and “services” in the Directive and in the Regulations<sup>82</sup> since the subject-matter of such a contract does not seem to be covered by either of these expressions. A similar difficulty arises from the assumption that contracts for the purchase or sale of foreign currency can fall within the Regulations.<sup>83</sup> It is not impossible for “goods” to be defined so as to include money<sup>84</sup>; but usually money, when used as a medium of exchange, is not regarded as falling within the definition of goods.<sup>85</sup> It seems highly unlikely that a person who in the course of business supplied English money in exchange for foreign currency would be regarded as a seller of goods; and it seems probable that the same is true of the converse situation, where the seller supplied foreign currency in exchange for English money. Such transactions can be brought within the scope of the Regulations only by arguing that the expression “goods” in them and in the Directive is used in an unusual and extended sense.

(6) Drafting and interpretation

Regulation 7 provides that “(1) A seller or supplier shall ensure that any written term of a contract is expressed in plain, intelligible language” and “(2) If there is doubt about the meaning of a written term, the interpretation most favourable to the consumer shall prevail . . .”<sup>86</sup> The restriction of these requirements to terms in writing indicates that oral contracts are covered by the Regulations<sup>87</sup> but (curiously) they are not required to be in plain or intelligible language. Failure to express a written term “in plain, intelligible language” does not of itself make the term even prima facie unfair. In this respect the present requirement is weaker than that already noted, by which a term defining the price or subject-matter of the contract must be in “plain intelligible language”<sup>88</sup>: here the sanction for failure to comply with the requirement is that the term may be considered unfair. The words of reg.7(2), quoted above appear to be no more than a legislative formulation of the contra proferentem principle.<sup>89</sup> No doubt this will most commonly apply to terms which are not drafted in plain, intelligible language; but it does not appear to be restricted to such terms. Language which is plain and intelligible may nevertheless be ambiguous; the fascination of oracular statements lies precisely in the fact that they combine these qualities.

(7) Effects of unfairness

(a) UNFAIR TERM NOT BINDING ON CONSUMER. Reg.8(1) provides that “an unfair term in a contract concluded with a consumer by a seller or supplier shall not be binding on the consumer”. The exact legal consequence of this regulation will depend on the nature of the unfair term. If that term is one excluding or limiting the liability of the seller or supplier, or the rights of the consumer,<sup>90</sup> the latter will be able to enforce those rights as if the term had not been included in the contract. If the unfair term is one

<sup>81</sup> Sch.2, para.2(c).

<sup>82</sup> Above, nn.66 and 67.

<sup>83</sup> ibid.

<sup>84</sup> See Theft Act 1968, s.34(2)(b).

<sup>85</sup> Mann, Legal Aspects of Money (5th ed.), 24–26.

<sup>86</sup> The concluding words of reg.7(2) make this provision inapplicable to proceedings for injunctions under reg.12 to prevent the continued use of unfair terms.

<sup>87</sup> c.f. Dir.93/13, Recital 11.

<sup>88</sup> reg.3(2), above, p.271.

<sup>89</sup> See above, p.221.

<sup>90</sup> Under Sch.2, para.1(a) and (b).

conferring rights on the seller or supplier (such as one extending a contract of fixed duration without giving the consumer a reasonable opportunity of cancelling it)<sup>91</sup> these rights will not arise. If effect has been given to such rights, reg.8(1) may require those effects to be undone: for example, where the term was unfair because it permitted the seller or supplier to retain sums paid by the consumer,<sup>92</sup> any such sums, if paid, would have to be restored. It is only the consumer who is not bound by the unfair term. The other party is so bound: for example, he may be bound by a term extending a contract of fixed duration<sup>93</sup> if the consumer should wish to enforce that term.

(b) REST OF CONTRACT GENERALLY UNAFFECTED. In general, the fact that the unfair term does not bind the consumer does not affect the binding force, even on the consumer, of the rest of the contract: for example, the fact that he is not bound by an exemption clause does not relieve him from liability for the price (though such liability may be reduced to the extent that a breach covered by the ineffective clause has caused him loss). The point is put beyond doubt by reg.8(2), which provides that “the contract shall continue to bind the parties if it is capable of continuing in existence without the unfair term.” The reason for the concluding words of this provision is that sometimes an invalid term goes so much to the heart of the contract that the effect of its not being binding on the consumer is likely to be that the consumer is not bound by the contract at all. This would, for example, be the position where the term was unfair because it irrevocably bound the consumer “to terms with which he had no real opportunity of becoming acquainted before the conclusion of the contract”.<sup>94</sup> If that term was not binding on the consumer, it would seem to follow that the terms to which it referred<sup>95</sup> were not binding on him either; and if those terms contained the whole or the essential part of the contract he would not be bound by any part of that contract. The other party would, however, be so bound if the consumer wished to enforce the contract: the argument that the consumer had provided no consideration because his own promises were not binding would probably be rejected on the ground that it was not the policy of the Regulations to protect the other party.<sup>96</sup> The question whether a term goes so much to the heart of the contract that the effect of its not being binding on the consumer is to relieve him of all obligations under the contract is obviously in borderline cases one of degree. The point may be illustrated by reference to a term which is prima facie unfair because it provides for the price of goods to be determined at the time of delivery without giving the consumer the right to cancel if that price is “too high in relation to the price agreed [if any?] when the contract was concluded”.<sup>97</sup> One possible consequence of the consumer’s taking the point that the term is not binding is that the contract contains no price term and is therefore not binding on him at all; another is that the contract contains no price term but remains in being as one under which a reasonable price must be paid; and a third is that the contract remains in being as one under which the originally agreed price (if any) must be paid. No doubt the result will depend on the exact wording of the price term; but, subject to this point, it is submitted that the “reasonable price” solution will normally achieve the most satisfactory balance between the interests of the parties. There is, of course, nothing to prevent the consumer from enforcing the contract according to its terms where it is in his interest to do so.

---

<sup>91</sup> Under Sch.2, para.1(h).

<sup>92</sup> Under Sch.2, para.1(d).

<sup>93</sup> See Sch.2, para.3(g).

<sup>94</sup> See Sch.2, para.1(i).

<sup>95</sup> See above, p.276.

<sup>96</sup> See above, p.149.

<sup>97</sup> See Sch.2, para.1(l), above, pp.275–276.

(c) COMPARISON OF EFFECTS OF UNFAIRNESS WITH 1977 ACT. The 1999 Regulations differ from the 1977 Act in that they lay down a single criterion (that of fairness<sup>98</sup>) on which the effectiveness of a term depends. Under that Act, by contrast, there are two possibilities: a term may be simply ineffective, or effective only insofar as it complies with the requirement of reasonableness. No difficulty arises from this difference in the situations (already discussed<sup>99</sup>) in which a term falls only within the scope of the Regulations or only within the scope of the Act. But where the same term falls within both legislative schemes there is the possibility that it may satisfy the requirements of the one but not those of the other. For example, a contract for the sale of goods to a consumer may contain a term limiting the seller's liability for breach of the terms implied by the Sale of Goods Act 1979 as to the quality of the goods. Such a term may be fair under the Regulations (which list among prima facie unfair terms those "inappropriately excluding or limiting"<sup>1</sup> the consumer's rights in respect of such terms) but it is simply ineffective under the Act.<sup>2</sup> Again, under the Regulations a term excluding or limiting liability for death or personal injury is only prima facie unfair,<sup>3</sup> while under the Act such a term is (if the defendant was negligent) simply ineffective.<sup>4</sup> The two schemes may also lead to different results where the same term is subject to a requirement of reasonableness under the Act and to one of fairness under the Regulations. No doubt in most cases a term which satisfied one of these requirements would also satisfy the other; but it is possible to imagine situations in which this might not be true, particularly where the guidelines for determining reasonableness under that Act differ from those for determining fairness under the Regulations.<sup>5</sup> A contract for the supply of services to a consumer might, for example, contain a term limiting the supplier's liability for breach to a specified sum of money, and this term might satisfy the requirement of reasonableness<sup>6</sup> under one of the guidelines applicable under the 1977 Act to such terms: e.g., on the ground that the supplier could not have insured against the breach without materially raising his charges.<sup>7</sup> But this guideline has no counterpart in the Regulations so that under them the term in question could nevertheless be an unfair one. In all such cases, in which the term falls within both the Act and the Regulations, the party relying on the term will have to show that the term satisfies the requirements of both these legislative schemes.

(8) Restriction on evasion

Like the 1977 Act,<sup>8</sup> the Regulations protect the consumer against the risk of being deprived of his protection under them by means of a choice of law clause: they apply "notwithstanding any contract term which applies or purports to apply the law of a non-Member State, if the contract has a close connection with the territory of the Member States".<sup>9</sup> Thus the Regulations cannot be excluded by a term specifying a law applicable only by virtue of being so specified, but they can be excluded by a term specifying a law which would or might have applied even in absence of the term. Art.5 of the Rome

<sup>98</sup> reg.8.

<sup>99</sup> See above, pp.267 et seq.

<sup>1</sup> Sch.2, para.1(b).

<sup>2</sup> s.6(1).

<sup>3</sup> Sch.2, para.1(a).

<sup>4</sup> s.2(1).

<sup>5</sup> See above, p.273.

<sup>6</sup> Imposed by s.3 of the 1977 Act.

<sup>7</sup> ibid., s.11(4), above, p.259.

<sup>8</sup> s.27(2), above, p.263.

<sup>9</sup> reg.7; for the definition of "Member State," see reg.3(1).

Convention (which has already been discussed<sup>10</sup>) gives similar protection to the consumer. The Regulations differ from the Act in that they do not except from their operation contracts governed by the law of a part of the United Kingdom only by virtue of the choice of the parties<sup>11</sup>; a consumer contract is perhaps thought unlikely to contain such a choice of law clause.

SECTION 4. OTHER LEGISLATIVE TECHNIQUES

Simply to deprive an exemption clause of legal validity might be a wholly ineffective means of control, particularly in cases between consumers on the one hand and commercial suppliers of goods and services on the other. If, for example, a contract contained an invalid exemption clause the consumer might believe that he was bound by it and so not pursue his claim. Even if he did make a claim, the supplier might settle it so as to avoid a judicial declaration of invalidity, and then continue to use the clause. To remedy this situation other legislative techniques have been devised.

1. Supervised Bargaining

This technique requires the bargain to be made under the supervision of the court or some administrative body. For example, the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 provides that in certain leases covenants by the landlord to repair are implied.<sup>12</sup> These can be excluded but only by a court order made with the consent of both parties.<sup>13</sup> The court's supervision ensures that no unfair advantage is taken of the tenant.

2. Administrative Control

This technique involves the intervention of a public authority<sup>14</sup>; it was used by the Fair Trading Act 1973 in provisions to be replaced by the relevant sections of the Enterprise Act 2002<sup>15</sup> when those sections are brought into force. Under these sections, one of the functions of the Office of Fair Trading is to promote "good practice for the carrying out of activities"<sup>16</sup>; e.g. by making "arrangements for approving consumer codes".<sup>17-21</sup> Delegated legislation<sup>22</sup> made under the 1973 Act (and to be continued in force under the Act of 2002) also makes it an offence for a person who sells goods in the course of a business to a consumer to apply (or to purport to apply) to the transaction an exemption clause which would be void under the statutory provisions discussed earlier in this Chapter.<sup>23</sup> However, under s.26 of the 1973 Act the mere fact that such an offence has been committed does not make "a contract . . . void or unenforceable": the point of the section seems to be that the whole contract is not invalid, so that the supplier can enforce

<sup>10</sup> See above, p.263.

<sup>11</sup> 1977 Act, s.27(1), above, p.266.

<sup>12</sup> s.11; cf. Housing Act 1988, s.16.

<sup>13</sup> Landlord and Tenant Act 1985, s.12.

<sup>14</sup> cf. National Minimum Wage Act 1998, s.20.

<sup>15</sup> See especially ss.8 and 10.

<sup>16</sup> ibid., s.8(1).

<sup>17-21</sup> ibid., s.8(2).

<sup>22</sup> Consumer Transactions (Restrictions on Statements) Order 1976 (SI 1976/1813) as amended by Consumer Transactions (Restrictions on Statements) (Amendment) Order 1978 (SI 1978/127). For a successful prosecution, see Hughes v Hall & Hall [1981] R.T.R. 430. The contra proferentem rule (above, p.221) can here operate in favour of the proponent of the clause: see Cavendish Woodhouse v Mancy (1984) 82 L.G.R. 376 where no offence was committed by a seller of furniture "as seen," since these words did not exclude liability but only confirmed that the customer had seen the goods. cf. above, p.224.

<sup>23</sup> See above, pp.248-252. (completely ineffective terms).

other provisions in it. For example, if the goods were not seriously defective he could sue for the price in spite of the fact that the contract contained a punishable exemption clause.

The technique of administrative control is also used by the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulation 1999, which impose on the Office of Fair Trading<sup>24</sup> ("OFT") a duty to consider any complaint made to it that any contract term drawn up for general use is unfair<sup>25</sup>; a similar duty is imposed on certain "qualifying bodies" (listed in the Regulations) which have agreed to consider such complaints.<sup>26</sup> If it appears to the OFT (or to the qualifying body) that the term is unfair, the OFT (or that body after due notice to it) may apply to the court for an injunction to restrain the use of the term, and the court may grant the injunction on such terms as it thinks fit.<sup>27</sup> The OFT and most of the qualifying bodies are also empowered to obtain information about the terms and use of any "pre-formulated contract in dealings with consumers",<sup>28</sup> and it is envisaged that the OFT and qualifying bodies may obtain undertakings from or on behalf of any person (such as a seller or supplier) as to the continued use of terms which it or the qualifying body considers to be unfair in contracts with consumers.<sup>29</sup> These provisions appear to be intended to promote negotiations between, on the one hand, the OFT and qualifying bodies, and, on the other, commercial sellers and suppliers or their trade associations. Such "pre-emptive challenges"<sup>30</sup> may well have greater practical effect than private litigation, initiated by consumers, in controlling unfair standard terms in consumer contracts.<sup>31</sup>

3. Prescribing the contents of a contract

This is another common method of controlling contracts of a particular type. It is well illustrated by the elaborate system of legislative control which exists in relation to regulated consumer credit agreements. To a considerable extent, the contents of such agreements are prescribed by the Consumer Credit Act 1974 and by delegated legislation<sup>32</sup>: the debtor is given a cooling-off period<sup>33</sup>; the creditor's power to terminate on the death of the debtor is restricted<sup>34</sup> and he can terminate for default only after giving a notice calling on the debtor to make good the default<sup>35</sup>; the debtor has the right to <sup>24</sup> See Enterprise Act 2002, s.2(3), substituting the OFT for the reference in the regulations to the Director General of Fair Trading, an office which is abolished by s.2(2) of that Act.

<sup>25</sup> reg.10.

<sup>26</sup> reg.11; "qualifying bodies" include a number of public bodies whose functions include the protection of consumers (Sch.1, Pt 1) and the Consumers' Association (Sch.1, Pt 2).

<sup>27</sup> reg.12. cf. Consumer Protection (Distance Selling) Regulations 2000 (SI 2000/2334), reg.27 (enforcement by injunction may be sought by the Director General or other enforcement authority). These Regulations implement Dir.97/7; Late Payment of Commercial Debts Regulations 2002 (SI 2002/1674), reg.3, implementing Dir.2000/35.

<sup>28</sup> reg.13(3); the Consumers' Association is not given this power: see reg.13(2).

<sup>29</sup> regs 10(3) and 11(2). For further powers of the Director General, going beyond the control of exemption clauses, see the Stop Now Orders (EC Directive) Regulations 2001 (SI 2001/1422) implementing Dir.1998/27, as amended by the Electronic Commerce (EC Directive) Regulations 2002 (SI 2002/2013), reg.16.

<sup>30</sup> Director General of Fair Trading v First National Bank plc [2001] UKHL 52; [2002] 1 A.C. 481, at [33].

<sup>31</sup> Under the 1999 Regulations, there are no criminal sanctions for the use of such terms: contrast the position under the 1977 Act, stated at n.22 above.

<sup>32</sup> See above, pp.177–178.

<sup>33</sup> s.67. cf. Consumer Protection (Cancellation of Contracts Concluded away from Business Premises) Regulations 1987, SI 1987/2117, implementing Council Dir.85/577; Chiron Corp v Murex Diagnostics Ltd [1995] All E.R. (EC) 88; Dir.97/7 of the European Parliament and of the Council on the Protection of Consumers in respect of Distance Contracts, Art.6.

<sup>34</sup> s.86.

<sup>35</sup> s.87.

make early payment and thereby to earn certain rebates<sup>36</sup>; and in the case of a regulated hire-purchase agreement he can terminate in certain circumstances on making prescribed payments.<sup>37</sup> Any term in such an agreement is void to the extent of its inconsistency with any such legislative provision for the protection of the debtor.<sup>38</sup> A number of other types of contracts are subject to similar detailed legislative control. These include contracts for the provision of package travel and similar facilities to consumers,<sup>39</sup> contracts with consumers concluded away from the trader's business premises,<sup>40</sup> and "distance contracts" with consumers.<sup>41</sup> A similar principle has been laid down by legislation regulating electronic commerce.<sup>42</sup> Where the customer places his order by "technological means"<sup>43</sup> (e.g. on a website) the service provider must make available to him "accessible"<sup>44</sup> means allowing the customer to identify and correct input errors before placing the order. Failure to comply with this requirement gives the customer the right to rescind the contract unless the court orders otherwise.<sup>45</sup>

---

<sup>36</sup> ss.94, 95.

<sup>37</sup> ss.99, 100.

<sup>38</sup> s.173.

<sup>39</sup> Package Travel, Package Holidays and Package Tours Regulations 1992 (SI 1992/3288) (which compulsorily imply terms into such contracts and restrict the other party's ability to exclude his liability to the consumer).

<sup>40</sup> Consumer Protection (Cancellation of Contracts Concluded away from Business Premises) Regulations 1987 (SI 1987/2117), implementing Dir.85/577.

<sup>41</sup> Consumer Protection (Distance Selling) Regulations 2000 (SI 2000/2334), reg.10, implementing Dir.97/7.

<sup>42</sup> Electronic Commerce (EC Directive) Regulations 2002 (SI 2002/2013) implementing most of Dir.2000/31.

<sup>43</sup> SI 2002/2013, reg.11(1); contrast use of the phrase "electronic means" in reg.9(1).

<sup>44</sup> ibid. reg.11(1)(b).

<sup>45</sup> ibid. reg.15.

CHAPTER EIGHT

MISTAKE<sup>1</sup>

IN Bell v Lever Bros Ltd,<sup>2</sup> Lord Atkin said: “If mistake operates at all, it operates so as to negative or in some cases to nullify consent.” Mistake negatives consent where it puts the parties at cross-purposes so as to prevent them from reaching agreement, e.g. because they intend to contract about different things. It nullifies consent where the parties reach an agreement which is based on a fundamental mistaken assumption made by both of them, e.g. where a contract is made to paint a portrait of someone who, unknown to either party, has just died. At law, the effect of mistake is to make a contract void<sup>3</sup>; but this rule is confined within very narrow limits. It is thought to be in the interests of commercial convenience that, in general, apparent contracts should be enforced. Equity sometimes gives relief for mistakes which have no effect at common law; but recent authority<sup>4</sup> has considerably restricted the scope of such relief. Certain special rules apply to documents mistakenly signed.

SECTION 1. MISTAKE NULLIFYING CONSENT

1. Fundamental Mistake at Common Law

Consent may be nullified if both parties make a fundamental mistake of fact.<sup>5</sup> In such cases, the extreme injustice of holding one of the parties to the contract outweighs the general principle that apparent contracts should be enforced. The following types of mistake can be “fundamental” for this purpose.

(1) Mistake as to the existence of the subject-matter

Consent is nullified where both parties are mistaken as to the existence of the subject-matter. Thus it has been held that a separation deed between a man and a woman, who

---

<sup>1</sup> Champness, Mistakes in the Law of Contract; Palmer, Mistake and Unjust Enrichment; Stoljar, Mistake and Misrepresentation; Lawson, 52 L.Q.R. 79; Tylor, 11 M.L.R. 257; Wade, 7 C.L.J. 361; Grunfeld, 13 M.L.R. 50; 15 M.L.R. 297; Slade, 70 L.Q.R. 385; Atiyah, 73 L.Q.R. 340; Atiyah and Bennion, 24 M.L.R. 421; Shatwell, 33 Can. Bar Rev. 164; Bamford, 72 S.A.L.J. 166, 282; Stoljar, 28 M.L.R. 265; Sutton, 7 N.Z.U.L.R. 40 (discussing possible reforms); Cartwright, 103 L.Q.R. 594; Smith, 110 L.Q.R. 400; other articles dealing specifically with mistakes as to identity are cited below, p.300.

<sup>2</sup> [1932] A.C. 161 at 217.

<sup>3</sup> Associated Japanese Bank (International) Ltd v Crédit du Nord SA [1989] 1 W.L.R. 255 at 268. In Re Goldcorp Exchange Ltd [1995] 1 A.C. 74 at 103 it is tentatively suggested that a contract which is not void for mistake can “perhaps” be “set aside at common law or under statute.” The reference to “statute” may be to the New Zealand Contractual Mistakes Act 1977 (the suggestion being made in a Privy Council appeal from that country); and “common law” may be used here simply by way of contrast to “statute” rather than to equity.

<sup>4</sup> The Great Peace [2002] EWCA Civ 1407; [2002] 4 All E.R. 689, below, p.319.

<sup>5</sup> Not of law: British Homophone Ltd v Kunz (1932) 152 L.T. 589 at 593; cf. Gee v News Group Newspapers, The Times, June 8, 1990. The rule does not apply where the mistake is one as to foreign law, which is treated as a matter of fact in English courts: The Amazonia [1990] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 236. Since relief for mistakes of law may be more widely available in equity than at common law, it is convenient to defer discussion of the nature and effects of the distinction (in the present context) between such mistakes and mistakes of fact to pp.313–316 below.

mistakenly thought that they were married to each other, was void, because it purported to deal with a marriage which did not exist<sup>6</sup>; and that a contract to buy an annuity was void where, at the time of the contract, the annuitant had died, so that the annuity no longer existed.<sup>7</sup> Contracts for the sale of non-existent goods illustrate the same point, but give rise to further difficulties, which are discussed below.<sup>8</sup>

(2) Mistake as to the identity of the subject-matter

Such a mistake usually arises where one party intends to deal with one thing and the other with a different thing. Here consent is negated,<sup>9</sup> and not nullified. Consent could, however, be nullified if both parties thought that they were dealing with one thing when they were in fact dealing with another.<sup>10</sup>

Mistake as to a fundamental quality of the subject-matter may sometimes be regarded as affecting the identity of the subject-matter; this possibility is discussed below.<sup>11</sup>

(3) Mistake as to the possibility of performing the contract

Consent may be nullified if both parties believe that the contract is capable of being performed when this is not the case.

(a) PHYSICAL IMPOSSIBILITY. In Sheikh Bros Ltd v Ochsner<sup>12</sup> a contract was made for the exploitation of sisal, growing on land belonging to A. The contract provided that B was to cut and process the sisal and to deliver an average of 50 tons of sisal fibre per month to A. It was held that the contract was void because (contrary to the parties' belief) the land was not capable of producing 50 tons of fibre per month.

(b) LEGAL IMPOSSIBILITY. A contract may be void if it provides for something to be done which cannot, as a matter of law, be done. For example, a person cannot acquire property which he already owns, and Lords Atkin and Wright have said that, if he purports to do so in the mistaken belief that the property belongs to the other contracting party, the contract is void.<sup>13</sup> On the other hand, a contract is not void merely because it purports to dispose of property which belongs to a third party,<sup>14</sup> for in such a case the vendor might be able to acquire the property and then make a proper transfer.

One special case of legal impossibility is illegality. A contract involving the commission of a crime is often illegal.<sup>15</sup> The contract may be illegal even though both parties believe it to be lawful, so that in a sense they were under a mistake as to the legal possibility of performing it. Persons may, moreover, agree to do what is the actus reus of

<sup>6</sup> Galloway v Galloway (1914) 30 T.L.R. 531.

<sup>7</sup> Strickland v Turner (1852) 7 Ex. 208.

<sup>8</sup> See below, pp.295–298.

<sup>9</sup> See below, pp.303–304.

<sup>10</sup> cf. Diamond v British Columbia Thoroughbred Breeders' Society (1966) 52 D.L.R. (2d) 146, where two horses at an auction were confused by the auctioneer and by the bidders; but the court held that the difference was one of quality only: sed quaere. See also Grains & Fourrages SA v Huyton [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 628.

<sup>11</sup> See below, pp.288 et seq.

<sup>12</sup> [1957] A.C. 136; applying the principles laid down in Bell v Lever Bros Ltd [1932] A.C. 161.

<sup>13</sup> Bell v Lever Bros Ltd [1932] A.C. 161 at 218; Normich Union Fire Insurance Society Ltd v Price [1934] A.C. 455 at 463. The proposition supported by these dicta remains valid even though, to the extent that they are based on Cooper v Phibbs (1867) L.R. 2 H.L. 149, they may involve a misinterpretation of that case: see Matthews, 105 L.Q.R. 599. For the view that the contract in that case should now be regarded as void, see also The Great Peace [2002] EWCA Civ 1407; [2002] 4 All E.R. 689, at [126]–[128] (though it may not have been so regarded at the time: see ibid., at [110]).

<sup>14</sup> Bell v Lever Bros Ltd, above; Clare v Lamb (1875) L.R. 10 C.P. 334.

<sup>15</sup> See below, pp.430 et seq.

crime, but may not commit a crime if they do the act because they lack mens rea. Such an agreement might not be illegal, but would probably be void for legal impossibility.

(c) COMMERCIAL IMPOSSIBILITY. In Griffith v Brymer<sup>16</sup> a contract was made for the hire of a room on June 26, 1902, the day fixed for the coronation of King Edward VII, for the purpose of viewing the coronation procession. The contract was held void<sup>17</sup> because, when it was made, the decision to postpone the coronation had (unknown to the parties) already been taken. Performance may have been physically and legally possible, but its commercial object was defeated. It could also be said that the parties had made a mistake about a quality of the subject-matter. On this view, the present status of the decision<sup>18</sup> depends on the discussion that follows.

(4) Mistake as to quality

Where the subject-matter of the contract lacks some quality which it is believed to have, the first question is whether the quality forms part of the contractual description of the thing. If it does and “the article does not answer the description of that which is sold”,<sup>19</sup> the contract is valid and the party who gave the description is in breach.<sup>20</sup>

If there is no contractual misdescription, the general rule is that mistake as to quality does not nullify consent. This is so whether the mistake prejudices the buyer (so that he pays “too much”) or the seller (so that he charges “too little”). In Scott v Littledale<sup>21</sup> a contract for the sale of tea was held valid in spite of a mistake as to its quality and hence as to its value. The same rule applies where the mistake affects, not the value of the subject-matter, but its utility to the buyer. In Harrison & Jones v Buntens & Lancaster<sup>22</sup> a contract was made for the sale of “‘Sree’ brand Calcutta kapok.” It was held that the contract was valid even though both parties believed such kapok to be pure, when in fact it was impure, and therefore of no use to the buyer.<sup>23</sup> The position is, a fortiori, the same where the mistake merely makes the subject-matter less useful to the acquirer than it was believed to be. In The Great Peace<sup>24</sup> a ship had been chartered for a minimum period of five days to provide escort services to another, which was in distress at sea, in the mistaken belief, apparently shared by charterer and shipowner,<sup>25</sup> that the chartered ship was “in close proximity” to the one in distress or that the former was “the closest

<sup>16</sup> (1903) 19 T.L.R. 434; cf. below, p.885.

<sup>17</sup> So that the hirer recovered back the money he had paid for the room. This appears to be the only reported “Coronation Case” in which the hirer of a room or seat was held entitled to recover back his money. Contrast Clark v Lindsay (1903) 88 L.T. 108, where a similar claim was rejected as the contract, though made in ignorance of the postponement, was later varied, after the parties had discovered the truth, so as to allow the hirer to use the room on the day of the postponed procession, which turned out to be a much less attractive event than that originally planned. cf. also below, p.910.

<sup>18</sup> The case is cited with apparent approval in The Great Peace [2002] EWCA Civ 1407; [2002] 4 All E.R. 689, at [67].

<sup>19</sup> Gompertz v Bartlett (1853) 2 E. & B. 849 at 853; cf. Gurney v Womersley (1854) 4 E. & B. 133. Contrast Harlingdon and Leinster Enterprises Ltd v Christopher Hull Fine Art Ltd [1991] 1 Q.B. 564, where a false attribution, made in good faith, was held not to form part of the contractual description on the sale of a painting by one art dealer to another.

<sup>20</sup> Gompertz v Bartlett, above.

<sup>21</sup> (1858) 8 E. & B. 815; cf. Hall v Conder (1857) 2 C.B.(N.S.) 22; Pope & Pearson v Buenos Ayres New Gas Co (1892) 8 T.L.R. 758; cf. William Sindall plc v Cambridgeshire CC [1994] 1 W.L.R. 1016.

<sup>22</sup> [1953] 1 Q.B. 646.

<sup>23</sup> It is not clear whether both parties thought that the kapok was pure, but this was assumed: see [1953] 1 Q.B. 646 at 657.

<sup>24</sup> The Great Peace [2002] E.W.C.A. Civ 1407; [2002] 4 All E.R. 689.

<sup>25</sup> See ibid., at [162] (“common assumption of both parties”); from the statement of facts at [8], [9], the exact state of the shipowner’s mind is less clear.

vessel" to the latter.<sup>26</sup> This mistake did not make the contract void since the chartered ship could, in spite of it, have reached the scene of the casualty to "provide several days of escort service".<sup>27</sup>

It does not follow from these illustrations of the general rule that a mistake as to quality can never make a contract void at law. In Kennedy v Panama, etc. Royal Mail Co,<sup>28</sup> the claimant applied for shares in a company on the faith of an untrue statement (made in good faith) that the company had secured a contract to carry mail for the New Zealand Government. The shares were allotted to him, and the actual decision was that the resulting contract between him and the company was valid.<sup>29</sup> But in reaching this conclusion Blackburn J. referred to the Roman doctrine of error in substantia, by which mistakes as to quality may make a contract void if they relate to the "substance" of the subject-matter, e.g. to the metal of which a thing is made.<sup>30</sup> He added that: "the principle of our law is the same as that of the civil law; and the difficulty in every case is to determine whether the mistake or misapprehension is as to the substance of the whole consideration, going, as it were, to the root of the matter, or only to some point, even though a material point, an error as to which does not affect the substance of the whole consideration".<sup>31</sup> This principle did not help the claimant as he got the very shares he bargained for and as his mistake did not affect the substance of the whole transaction. But it may be<sup>32</sup> possible to infer from Blackburn J.'s approval of the Roman texts that, in his view, mistake as to quality could in some cases make a contract void in English law.

Whether this view is correct depends on the decision of the House of Lords in Bell v Lever Bros Ltd.<sup>33</sup> Bell and Snelling had agreed with Lever Bros to serve for five years as chairman and vice-chairman of a company controlled by Lever Bros. Before the end of this period Lever Bros wished to terminate these service contracts, and the parties entered into compensation agreements under which Bell and Snelling received between them £50,000 for loss of office. Lever Bros then discovered that Bell and Snelling had broken their service contracts in a way which would have justified their summary dismissal without compensation.<sup>34</sup> It was found that Bell and Snelling had forgotten about these breaches of the service contracts when the compensation agreements were made, so that they were not guilty of fraudulent concealment.<sup>35</sup> The remaining issue was whether the compensation agreements were void for mistake, so as to entitle Lever Bros to recover back the £50,000 which they had paid under those agreements.<sup>36</sup> They had made the compensation agreements in the belief that the service contracts still bound <sup>26</sup> ibid., at [8], [9]. The mistake arose from information supplied to the charterer by a third party. If this had been accurate, the two ships would have been only 35 miles apart (see the judgment of Toulson J. at first instance at [21]). In fact, the distance between them was 410 miles: Toulson J. at [20]; CA at [16].

<sup>27</sup> ibid., at [165]. This conclusion was supported ibid. by the fact that the charterers themselves did not regard the contract as affected by the mistake immediately on discovery of the truth. They sought to cancel only when a third ship (which happened also to be under charter to the charterers) came on the scene and was able to provide the escort services.

<sup>28</sup> (1867) L.R. 2 Q.B. 580. Contrast Emmerson's Case (1866) L.R. 1 Ch. App. 433 (where special statutory provisions affected the result).

<sup>29</sup> There being then no remedy for innocent misrepresentation at common law: below, pp.366, 369.

<sup>30</sup> Lawson, 52 L.Q.R. 79; De Zulueta, The Roman Law of Sale, p.26. The Romans did not call such an error one of "quality" but an English lawyer could so describe it.

<sup>31</sup> Kennedy v Panama, etc. Royal Mail Co, above at 588.

<sup>32</sup> The point is not clear: see The Great Peace [2002] EWCA Civ 1407; [2002] 4 All E.R. 689, at [59].

<sup>33</sup> [1932] A.C. 161.

<sup>34</sup> See below, p.745; the harshness of this rule may account for the eventual decision in the case. cf. below, p.320, n.22.

<sup>35</sup> Nor were they under any duty to disclose their breaches of duty: cf. below, p.400.

<sup>36</sup> See below, p.1058.

them when in fact they were terminable. They had paid £50,000 to get rid of Bell and Snelling, when they might have got rid of them for nothing. Wright J. and a unanimous Court of Appeal held that the compensation agreements were void as Lever Bros had made them under a fundamental mistake. But the House of Lords, by a narrow majority, reversed this decision. The mistake related only to a quality of the service contracts (which were the subject-matter of the compensation agreements), and was not fundamental. Lord Atkin said: "The contract released is the identical contract in both cases,<sup>37</sup> and the party paying for release gets exactly what he bargained for".<sup>38</sup> Lord Thankerton stressed that mistake even as to a fundamental quality was of no effect unless it related to some assumption which both parties regarded as essential. In his view there was nothing to show that Bell and Snelling regarded the binding force of the service contracts as vital: only Lever Bros did so.<sup>39</sup>

The mistake in this case gave rise to a belief that subject-matter which was actually worthless had a value of £50,000. It might be thought that if such a mistake is not fundamental, no mistake as to quality can ever have this effect; but once one accepts the principle that a mere mistake as to value is not fundamental, the size of that difference cannot be decisive. Bell v Lever Bros Ltd has indeed been described as "a quite exceptional case"<sup>40</sup>; and dicta in it do recognise that some mistakes as to quality may be fundamental. Lord Atkin said that mistake as to quality "will not affect assent unless it is the mistake of both parties, and is as to the existence of some quality which makes the thing without the quality essentially different from the thing as it was believed to be".<sup>41</sup> Lord Thankerton said that a mistake as to subject-matter must relate to "something which both must necessarily have accepted in their minds as an essential and integral element of the subject-matter".<sup>42</sup>

These are stringent requirements, which make the common law doctrine of mistake "markedly narrower in scope than the civilian doctrine"<sup>43</sup> referred to by Blackburn J. in the dictum cited above.<sup>44</sup> It follows that generally a mistake as to quality will not make a contract void. According to Lord Atkin, it would not have this effect if a man bought a horse mistakenly believed to be sound; if he bought a dwelling-house mistakenly believed to be inhabitable; if he bought a garage on a road which was about to be starved of all traffic by the construction of a by-pass; and (most difficult of all): "A buys a picture from B; both A and B believe it to be the work of an old master and a high price is paid. It turns out to be a modern copy. A has no remedy in the absence of representation or warranty"<sup>45</sup> i.e. the contract is valid. The same view was taken in Leaf v International Galleries,<sup>46</sup> where it was said<sup>47</sup> that a contract for the sale of a picture <sup>37</sup> i.e. whether the service contracts were binding on Lever Bros or terminable by them. cf. Robert A Munro & Co Ltd v Meyer [1930] 2 K.B. 312.

<sup>38</sup> Bell v Lever Bros Ltd, above, at 223. It was particularly important for Lever Bros to get rid of Bell and Snelling by May 1, 1929, but this fact is not stressed in the speeches of Lords Atkin and Thankerton.

<sup>39</sup> At 235.

<sup>40</sup> Associated Japanese Bank (International) Ltd v Crédit du Nord SA [1989] 1 W.L.R. 255 at 267.

<sup>41</sup> [1932] A.C. 161 at 218.

<sup>42</sup> ibid. at 256.

<sup>43</sup> Associated Japanese Bank case, above n.40, at 268, approved in The Great Peace [2002] EWCA Civ 1407, [2002] 4 All E.R. 689, at [90]–[91].

<sup>44</sup> See above, at n.31.

<sup>45</sup> [1932] A.C. 161 at 224. Contrast Smith v Zimbalist, 2 Cal.App. 2d 234; 38 P. 2d 170 (1934) (violins mistakenly believed to be by Stradivarius and Guarnerius: held buyer not liable for the price on grounds of mistake and breach of warranty).

<sup>46</sup> [1950] 2 K.B. 86.

<sup>47</sup> ibid. at 89; below, pp.292–294. cf. Hurlingdon and Leinster Enterprise Ltd v Christopher Hull Fine Art Ltd [1991] 1 Q.B. 564, where the buyer's claim (which failed) was based solely on breach; no attempt was made to base it on mistake as to the authenticity of the picture; Lawrenson, 54 M.I.L.R. 122.

would not be void if the parties mistakenly believed that it was by Constable. Similarly it was held in Solle v Butcher<sup>48</sup> that a lease was not void because the parties mistakenly believed the premises to be free from rent control; in Magee v Pennine Insurance Co Ltd<sup>49</sup> it was said that a compromise of a claim under an insurance policy was not void because the parties mistakenly believed that the policy was valid when in fact it was voidable<sup>50</sup>; in F E Rose (London) Ltd v W H Pim Jnr & Co Ltd<sup>51</sup> it was said that a contract for the sale of horse-beans would not be void because the parties believed that they were dealing with a type of horse-beans more valuable than those with which they had actually dealt; in Oscar Chess Ltd v Williams it was said that a contract for the sale of a car would not be void because the parties made a mistake as to its age, so that the buyer paid more than he would have done, had he known the truth<sup>52</sup>; and in Naughton v O'Callaghan a horse sold by auction with a false pedigree was said to be "a different animal altogether",<sup>53</sup> but it was not suggested that the contract was void.

But according to other dicta and decisions a mistake as to quality can sometimes make a contract void. Thus it has been said that a contract for the sale of land believed to be freehold could be avoided if it turned out to be leasehold<sup>54</sup>; and where a chalet on a caravan site was sold in the mistaken belief that it was a chattel which could be sold separately from its pitch, it was said that the sale was void.<sup>55</sup> In Bell v Lever Bros Ltd Greer L.J. said in the Court of Appeal that a contract for the sale of a horse, believed to be a racehorse, would be void if it turned out to be a carthorse<sup>56</sup>: it may be significant that Lord Atkin, in his example of the unsound horse,<sup>57</sup> did not contradict this suggestion. Similarly, in Scott v Coulson<sup>58</sup> a policy on the life of one Death was sold for £460 on the assumption that Death was alive. The price paid was therefore fixed in relation to the surrender value of the policy. In fact Death was dead, so that the policy had matured and was worth £777. The vendor successfully claimed to have the contract set aside and Vaughan Williams L.J. said<sup>59</sup> that it was void at law. Again, in the Associated Japanese Bank<sup>60</sup> case payments to be made by the lessee under a purported sale and lease-back of machinery were guaranteed by the defendant. In fact no such machinery existed, so that the lease was voidable for fraud; and it was said that the guarantee was void for mistake. And in Nicholson & Venn v Smith-Marriott<sup>61</sup> the defendants put up for auction table napkins "with the crest of Charles I and the authentic property of that monarch". On the faith of this description the lot was bought for £787 10s., but the napkins were Georgian and worth £105 only. The buyer recovered damages for breach of contract but Hallett J. also said that the contract might have been treated by the

<sup>48</sup> [1950] 1 K.B. 671.

<sup>49</sup> [1969] 2 Q.B. 507; 85 L.Q.R. 454; Harris, 32 M.L.R. 688.

<sup>50</sup> For the relief given in the last two cases on equitable grounds see now below, pp.317-320.

<sup>51</sup> [1953] 2 Q.B. 450 at 459.

<sup>52</sup> [1957] 1 W.L.R. 370 at 373. cf. Wood v Boynton, 64 Wis. 265; 25 N.W. 42 (1885) (sale of uncut stone believed to be a topaz for $1: in fact it was a diamond worth $700: held, contract valid). Contrast Restatement, Contracts, §503, Ill. 3, but see Restatement 2d, Contracts §154 Ill. 3.

<sup>53</sup> [1990] 3 All E.R. 191 at 197.

<sup>54</sup> Durham v Legard (1835) 34 Beav. 611 at 613, possibly expressing a purely equitable view.

<sup>55</sup> Nutt v Read (2000) 32 H.L.R. 761.

<sup>56</sup> [1931] 1 K.B. 557, 597. cf. Sherwood v Walker, 66 Mich. 568; 33 N.W. 919 (1887) (sale of cow, believed to be barren, for no more than $80; in fact she was a breeder worth at least $750: held, contract invalid).

<sup>57</sup> [1932] A.C. 161 at 224; above, n.45.

<sup>58</sup> [1903] 2 Ch. 249.

<sup>59</sup> ibid. at 252. Cf. Glayne v Richardson [2001] EWCA Civ 716; [2001] B.C.L.C. 669, at [41] (agreement made in mistaken belief that option had been exercised).

<sup>60</sup> Associated Japanese Bank (International) Ltd v Crédit du Nord SA [1989] 1 W.L.R. 255; Treitel 104 L.Q.R. 501; Cartwright [1988] J.L.M.C.L.Q. 300; Marston [1989] C.I.J. 173.

<sup>61</sup> (1947) 177 L.T. 189.

buyer<sup>62</sup> as void for mistake. The transaction could be regarded in two ways. The parties may have intended to buy and sell antique table linen: in this case a mistake as to its exact age, provenance or value would not be fundamental. Alternatively, the parties may have intended to buy and sell a Carolean relic; in this case their mistake would be fundamental and make the contract void.

The cases and examples concerning mistakes as to quality cannot be perfectly reconciled; but there is a principle which runs through them. A thing has many qualities. A car may be black, old, fast and so forth. For any particular purpose one or more of these qualities may be uppermost in the minds of the persons dealing with the thing. Some particular quality may be so important to them that they actually use it to identify the thing. If the thing lacks that quality, it is suggested that the parties have made a fundamental mistake, even though they have not mistaken one thing for another, or made a mistake as to the existence of the thing.<sup>63</sup> The matter may be tested by imagining that one can ask the parties, immediately after they made the contract, what its subject-matter was. If, in spite of the mistake, they would give the right answer the contract is valid at law. Thus in Bell v Lever Bros Ltd, the parties would have said, quite rightly: "We are contracting about a service agreement". In Nicholson & Venn v Smith-Marriott they might have said, rightly, "We are contracting about antique table linen," in which case the contract would be valid; or they might have said, wrongly, "We are contracting about a Carolean relic," in which case the contract would be void. Most of the cases and illustrations given above can be explained in this way; but three of them give rise to particular difficulty.

The first is Scott v Coulson, where the subject-matter of the contract would no doubt have been described as "an insurance policy" so that the contract ought to have been valid at law. The view that the contract was void is also very hard to reconcile<sup>64</sup> with Bell v Lever Bros Ltd. If the difference between a binding and a terminable contract is not fundamental, why is there a fundamental difference between a contingent and an accrued debt?<sup>65</sup>

A second source of difficulty is that the contract of guarantee in the Associated Japanese Bank case was held to be void. The subject-matter of that contract was not the machinery, but the lease, and this contract was not void but only voidable for fraud. Yet the compensation agreements in Bell v Lever Bros Ltd were held valid even though their subject-matter, too, consisted of the earlier service contracts which were also terminable but not void. One possible way of distinguishing the cases is to say that the lease in the Associated Bank case was voidable for fraud, so that it was liable to be rescinded ab initio,<sup>66</sup> while the factor vitiating the service agreements in Bell v Lever Bros Ltd was breach, which entitled the employers to rescind them by dismissing the employees, but <sup>62</sup> It may be objected that Hallett J. held the contract valid by giving the buyer damages. But where one party negligently causes the other to make a mistake, the former cannot rely on the mistake to escape liability: McRae v Commonwealth Disposals Commission (1951) 84 C.L.R. 377 at 408; below, p.298.

<sup>63</sup> Contrast p.44, above. The rule that deterioration of the subject matter after offer may preclude acceptance is distinct from the principles discussed in this Chapter. It operates even though the parties at the time of the formation of the alleged contract were perfectly well aware of the true facts; and it may operate even though the change is not "fundamental" in our present sense: for example, the sale of a life-insurance policy would probably not be void for mistake merely because at the time of sale the person insured had (unknown to the parties to the sale) suffered serious injury. For another view, see Atiyah, 2 Ottawa L.Rev. 337 at 339.

<sup>64</sup> The Great Peace [2002] EWCA Civ 1407; [2002] 4 All E.R. 689, at [87].

<sup>65</sup> In Bell v Lever Bros Ltd [1932] A.C. 161 at 236 Lord Thankerton regards the contract in Scott v Coulson as one for the sale of a non-existent subject matter. But it is hard to see in what sense a policy of insurance ceases to exist when it matures.

<sup>66</sup> See below, pp.369–372.

not with retrospective effect<sup>67</sup>: hence the mistake in the former case could be said to be more serious than that in the latter case. Another is that in the Associated Japanese Bank case the guarantee was part of a composite transaction intended to raise money on the security of the alleged machinery, so that "the analogy of the classic res extincta cases . . . [was] fairly close".<sup>68</sup> Hence the crucial fact was that guarantor and lessor both mistakenly believed that the machinery existed: this was more important than their state of mind as to the legal effect of the fraud on the lease.

The third source of difficulty is Lord Atkin's example of a modern copy bought for a high price in the belief that it is an old master, supported by dicta in Leaf v International Galleries.<sup>69</sup> The assumption behind these statements seems to be that the parties would identify the subject-matter simply as "a picture"; but this seems to be a questionable assumption. Suppose that A has just paid B £10 million for what both believe to be a painting by Rembrandt. If A were asked "what have you just bought?" he would almost certainly reply "a Rembrandt"—not "a picture." With the greatest respect, this type of case stands on a different level from Lord Atkin's other examples.<sup>70</sup> Nor are the dicta in Leaf v International Galleries conclusive, for the buyer there sought only to rescind the contract for misrepresentation and did not claim that it was void for mistake.<sup>71</sup> It is submitted that, on the bare facts given by Lord Atkin, the contract should be held void. Of course in practice the facts of cases of this kind are likely to be more complex. On the one hand, it may be a term of the contract that the picture is authentic, in which case the seller is liable for breach of contract<sup>72</sup> so that no question of mistake will arise. On the other hand, a picture may be sold speculatively, in which case the contract will be valid and the seller will not be in breach, even though the buyer's belief in the authenticity of the picture turns out to be incorrect. Between these extremes lies the large group of cases in which both parties may believe the picture to be authentic but in which there can be no certainty on the point; scholarly or expert opinion as to the authenticity of a picture may vary from time to time.<sup>73</sup> In cases within this group, it has been held that the seller does not impliedly undertake that the picture is genuine (at least

<sup>67</sup> See below, pp.849–850; cf. above, pp.238–240.

<sup>68</sup> Associated Japanese Bank (International) Ltd v Crédit du Nord S.A [1989] 1 W.L.R. 255 at 269.

<sup>69</sup> [1950] 2 K.B. 86. cf. also Hindle v Brown (1907) 98 L.T. 44, where only misrepresentation was discussed.

<sup>70</sup> See above, p.290. The answer to the question "what have you just bought?" would in those cases be: "a horse," "a house," and "a garage."

<sup>71</sup> Nor did he claim damages for breach of warranty, though Denning and Jenkins L.JJ. thought that this remedy was open to him. The receipt described the picture as "One original oil painting Salisbury Cathedral by J. Constable, £85": [1950] 1 All E.R. at 694. cf. also 66 T.L.R. (Pt.1) 1031 at 1032. The only report which says that there was a representation that the picture was by "John Constable" is that in the Lam Reports, where the statement is that of the reporter and not of any member of the court. In the usage of art auctioneers "John Constable" would mean that the picture was considered to be the work of the famous painter, but "J. Constable" would not; and the seller may have been adopting this usage. The All E.R. and T.L.R. reports seem to be preferable, for it is hard to imagine that a dealer would have been prepared to give a contractual undertaking that the picture was "by John Constable" when the price was as low as £85. cf. Harlingdon and Leinster Enterprises Ltd v Christopher Hull Fine Art Ltd [1991] 1 Q.B. 564 at 578, stating that, at least between art dealers, the principle of caveat emptor applied. In Peco Arts Inc v Hazlitt Gallery Ltd [1983] 1 W.L.R. 1315 the buyer claimed no more than the return of the price plus interest; it seems that any claim for damages for breach of contract or for misrepresentation would have been statute-barred. cf. the newspaper report of de Balkany v Christie's, The Times, January 12, 1995.

<sup>72</sup> As in Peco Arts Inc v Hazlitt Gallery Ltd [1983] 1 W.L.R. 1315 (where it was a term of the contract that the subject matter of the sale was a drawing by J.A.D. Ingres, but it turned out to be a copy). The seller admitted liability to return the price as money paid under "a common mistake of fact"; the only issue was whether the claim was statute-barred. A seller who knows that his attribution is false may be guilty of an offence under the Trade Descriptions Act 1968: May v Vincent (1991) 10 Tr.L.R. 1.

<sup>73</sup> See Firestone & Parson Inc v Union League of Philadelphia 672 F. Supp. 819 (1987), affirmed 833 F.2d. 304; cf. Luxmoore-May v Messenger May Baverstock [1990] 1 W.L.R. 1009 at 1028.

where the sale is by one dealer to another, and the seller indicates that he is not an expert on the work of the artist in question)<sup>74</sup>; and it is submitted that the element of uncertainty would make it equally inappropriate to regard such a case as one in which the contract was void for mistake.

The suggested test for determining whether a mistake is fundamental, presupposes that both parties would give the same answer to the question “what are you contracting about?” If they would give different answers, the mistake, whatever else its effect may be, will not nullify consent. A seller may intend to sell antique table linen and the buyer to buy a Carolean relic. If the parties are thus at cross-purposes consent may be negated. The question whether the buyer could rely on the mistake as making the contract void at law would then depend on factors discussed later in this Chapter.<sup>75</sup>

(5) Mistake as to quantity

Mistake as to quantity has generally been dealt with in equity; but it may also be capable of invalidating a contract at law. In Cox v Prentice<sup>76</sup> a silver bar was sold under a mistake as to its weight. The buyer (who was the party prejudiced by the mistake) obtained a verdict for damages for the difference in value between the weight of the bar as it was, and as it was believed to be. The court added that the buyer could have recovered back the price he paid for the bar, which may suggest that he had the option of treating the contract as void for mistake.<sup>77</sup> Similarly, Lord Atkin in Bell v Lever Bros Ltd said: “I agree that an agreement to take an assignment of a lease for five years is not the same thing as to take an assignment of a lease for three years, still less a term for a few months,”<sup>78</sup> though it is not clear from the context whether Lord Atkin thought that such a mistake could make a contract void. And in Barrow, Lane & Ballard Ltd v Phillips & Co Ltd<sup>79</sup> a contract for the sale of an “indivisible parcel” of 700 bags of nuts was held to be void because, unknown to the parties, only 591 bags were in existence.

2. Cases in which a Fundamental Mistake Does Not Nullify Consent

In two situations, a contract may not be void, even though the parties have made a fundamental mistake of fact.

(1) Construction of the contract

When a contract is made on the basis of a fundamental assumption which turns out to be false, there are in theory four possible solutions: that neither party shall be bound, or that one shall be bound, or that the other shall be bound, or that both shall be bound.

In the cases of fundamental mistake so far discussed, the first solution has been applied, so that neither party could enforce the contract, and money paid under it could be recovered back. In such cases the contract may properly be called void.<sup>80</sup> But where the parties intend to adopt one of the other solutions the contract is, generally speaking, perfectly valid. Thus, contracts of marine insurance may contain a “lost or not lost” clause: the effect of this is that both parties are bound although the thing insured had

<sup>74</sup> Harlingdon and Leinster Enterprises Ltd v Christopher Hull Fine Art Ltd [1991] 1 Q.B. 564.

<sup>75</sup> See below, pp.303–306 et seq.

<sup>76</sup> (1815) 3 M. & S. 344; cf. Devaux v Connolly (1849) 8 C.B. 640 at 659.

<sup>77</sup> As to this option, see below, p.298.

<sup>78</sup> [1932] A.C. 161 at 223.

<sup>79</sup> [1929] 1 K.B. 574.

<sup>80</sup> Normich Union Fire Insurance Society Ltd v Price [1934] A.C. 455 at 463; Barclays Bank Ltd v W.J. Sims & Cooke (Southern) Ltd [1980] Q.B. 677, 695 (“void for mistake”).

(unknown to them) perished at the time of the contract.<sup>81</sup> That is, the insurer has to pay on the policy if the loss is covered by it; and the person insured has to pay the premium even though the loss is caused by an excepted peril, i.e. by one not covered by the policy. Similarly, a sale of "my title, if any" to specified land could bind both parties even though the seller had no title (unless he knew this fact)<sup>82</sup>; and the same is true where a contract for the sale of land limits the vendor's liability for defects of title to incumbrances known to him, and it turns out that his title was subject to an easement of which he was unaware.<sup>83</sup>

In these cases the express terms of the contract dealt with the possibility that certain assumed facts might not exist; but in others more difficult questions of construction may arise. Two cases concerning mining leases illustrate the point. In one the tenant promised to dig at least 1,000 tons of clay and to pay a royalty of 2s. 6d. per ton, but there was not so much clay in the land. It was held that the tenant was not liable in respect of the deficiency: he had not warranted that enough clay could be extracted from the land.<sup>84</sup> In the other the tenant of a coal mine agreed to raise a minimum quantity of coal and to pay a minimum rent in any event. He was held liable to pay this rent, though there was not so much coal in the mine, because the parties had appreciated the risk and had thrown it on the tenant.<sup>85</sup>

A similar question of construction arose in Couturier v Hastie,<sup>86</sup> where a contract was made for the sale of "a cargo of about 1,180 quarters of Salonika Indian corn of fair average quality when shipped, per the 'Kesia Page' . . . free on board, and including freight and insurance, to a safe port in the United Kingdom, payment at two months from this date upon handing over shipping documents." Before the contract was made, the cargo had, unknown to the parties, become overheated and been sold at Tunis to prevent further deterioration. The seller argued that the buyer was nevertheless liable for the price: what he had bought was an interest in a maritime adventure, or such rights as the seller had under the shipping documents, against which payment was to be made.<sup>87</sup> But the House of Lords rejected this argument and held that the buyer was not liable. Lord Cranworth L.C. said: "The whole question turns upon the construction of the contract . . . Looking to the contract . . . alone it appears to me clearly that what the parties contemplated . . . was that there was an existing something to be sold and bought."<sup>88</sup> The contract was for the sale of existing goods—not for the sale of the goods or the documents representing them. A similar issue may arise in relation to an accessory contract. The actual decision in the Associated Japanese Bank case<sup>89</sup> was accordingly based on the ground that the guarantee contained an express or implied undertaking in favour of the guarantor that the machinery was in existence; and as the machinery did not exist the guarantor was not liable.

In these cases the non-existence of the underlying subject-matter merely absolved the party prejudiced by that fact from liability, but it may as a matter of construction also impose a liability on the other party. This was the position in McRae v Commonwealth

<sup>81</sup> cf. Marine Insurance Act 1906, Sch.1, r.1.

<sup>82</sup> See Smith v Harrison (1857) 26 L.J.Ch. 412.

<sup>83</sup> William Sindall plc v Cambridgeshire CC [1994] 1 W.L.R. 1016 at 1035. Such a provision amounts to an allocation of risk of the defect.

<sup>84</sup> Clifford v Watts (1870) L.R. 5 C.P. 577.

<sup>85</sup> Bute v Thompson (1844) 13 M. & W. 487.

<sup>86</sup> (1856) 5 H.L.C. 673; Atiyah, 73 L.Q.R. 487.

<sup>87</sup> This would normally have satisfied the buyer, as he could have claimed the insurance money. But if the contract was indeed void (below at n.95) the buyer would not have acquired any rights by virtue of it under the "shipping documents," including the insurance policy.

<sup>88</sup> Couturier v Hastie, above, at 681.

<sup>89</sup> Associated Japanese Bank (International) Ltd v Crédit du Nord SA [1989] 1 W.L.R. 255, above, p.291.

Disposals Commission,<sup>90</sup> where the defendants purported to sell the wreck of an oil tanker, said to be lying on the Jourmand Reef, and to contain oil. The buyers sent out an expedition to salvage the tanker but found that there was not and never had been any such tanker. The High Court of Australia held that the defendants had impliedly undertaken that there was a tanker there<sup>91</sup>; and that, being in breach of this undertaking, they were liable in damages.

Thus there may be a good contract about a non-existent subject-matter if on the true construction of the contract the risk of non-existence is thrown on one party.<sup>92</sup> In Couturier v Hastie the risk was not thrown on the buyer: he was not liable for the price. It is more doubtful whether the risk was thrown on the seller, i.e. whether the buyer could have claimed damages for non-delivery. In McRae's case the court thought that prima facie the seller in Couturier v Hastie, had promised that the goods were in existence<sup>93</sup>; on this view, the contract in that case was not void and the seller could have been held liable on it. But in Barrow, Lane & Ballard Ltd v Phillips & Co Ltd,<sup>94</sup> Wright J. said "Where a contract relates to specific goods which do not exist, the case is not to be treated as one in which the seller warrants the existence of those specific goods, but as one in which there has been failure of consideration and mistake." The English courts would probably adopt this approach. Prima facie a seller would not be held to undertake that the goods existed, any more than the buyer would bind himself to pay for them in any event. Thus, neither party is bound and the contract can properly be called void. This explains why the contract in Couturier v Hastie has for long been regarded as void<sup>95</sup> for mistake, although the words "void" and "mistake" do not occur in any of the judgments. Similarly, in the Associated Japanese Bank<sup>96</sup> case Steyn J., having rejected the claim against the guarantor on the issue of construction, considered the alternative argument based on mistake and held that the claim also failed on this further and separate ground. Mistake and construction are thus not necessarily mutually exclusive concepts. Construction will displace mistake (as a ground of invalidity) only where it is clear from the words of the contract or from the surrounding circumstances that one party or the other promised to undertake responsibility in any event.

In McRae's case the tanker never existed; in Couturier v Hastie the goods originally existed but had, before the contract was made, "perished" as a commercial entity. This distinction, unimportant in principle, gives rise to difficulty because s.6 of the Sale of Goods Act 1979 provides that "Where there is a contract for the sale of specific goods, and the goods without the knowledge of the seller have perished at the time when the contract is made, the contract is void." At first sight this section prevents the buyer from recovering damages even though the seller has expressly guaranteed that the goods exist, and the seller from recovering the price or damages even though the buyer has expressly promised to pay whether or not the goods exist. The problem may be of more theoretical than practical interest, for it does not seem that contracts on such terms are at all common. In practice the more important question is whether s.6 would apply where the contract was either a sale of alternatives (e.g. of the goods or the shipping documents

<sup>90</sup> (1951) 84 C.I.R. 377 and see below, p.941.

<sup>91</sup> cf. the explanation of McRae's case in The Great Peace [2002] EWCA Civ 1407; [2002] 4 All E.R. 689, at [76]–[77].

<sup>92</sup> cf. Kalsep Ltd v X-Flow BV, The Times, May 3, 2001.

<sup>93</sup> McRae's case (1951) 84 C.I.R. 377 at 407.

<sup>94</sup> [1929] 1 K.B. 574 at 582; above, p.294. Cf. Bell v Lever Bros [1932] A.C. 161 at 217 per Lord Atkin: "void if in fact the article had perished before the date of the sale".

<sup>95</sup> See Sale of Goods Act 1979, s.6, originally enacted in 1893, and discussed below. Cf. The Great Peace [2002] EWCA Civ 1407, [2002] 4 All E.R. 1407, [2002] 4 All E.R. 689, at [51]–[53].

<sup>96</sup> [1989] 1 W.L.R. 255, above, p.292.

representing them<sup>97</sup>) or simply one of the documents. Probably s.6 would not apply as such transactions would, in the events which had happened, be sales of things in action and not of goods at all.<sup>98</sup>

If the parties are conscious of a doubt as to the existence of the goods, and one of them expressly undertakes to bear the risk that they may not exist, there seems to be no strong reason against upholding the contract. But in view of s.6 some ingenuity is required to reach this result. One possible argument is that s.6 is only a rule of construction which can be ousted by proof of contrary intention.<sup>99</sup> But many other sections of the Act expressly provide that they are subject to contrary agreement and there is no such provision in s.6.<sup>1</sup> Another possibility is to say that the main contract is void but that the seller can be held liable on a collateral contract that the goods do exist. But if nothing had been done under the main contract it would be hard to find any consideration for the seller's promise under the collateral contract. It is just possible that such consideration could be found in the buyer's act of purporting to enter into the main contract, especially if it involved the execution of a document.<sup>2</sup> There is even more difficulty in seeing how the buyer's promise to pay can be expressed as a collateral contract, for it seems to be merely a reiteration of his principal obligation under the main contract. It is finally possible that a seller who warrants that goods exist may be liable in damages for negligent misrepresentation<sup>3</sup>; but the damages on such a claim would be differently assessed from those for breach of contract,<sup>4</sup> and the claim would fail if the seller was wholly innocent.<sup>5</sup>

(2) Conduct of the parties

A party may be liable, even where he did not expressly or impliedly take the risk of the mistake, if he was at fault in inducing the mistake in the mind of the other party. This was a further ground for the decision in McRae's case,<sup>6</sup> where it was said that a party could not rely on a mistake consisting "of a belief which is . . . entertained without any <sup>97</sup> But for this possibility, Couturier v Hastie would scarcely have reached the House of Lords. The writer is not aware of any English case in which the court was called upon to consider a simple sale of goods "lost or not lost" at the time of the contract unless the buyer was entitled under the contract to documents giving him rights against the carrier or insurer in respect of the loss of the goods in certain events.

<sup>98</sup> See the definition of "goods" given in s.61(1) of the Sale of Goods Act 1979. The normal contract for the sale of goods on c.i.f. terms is not regarded as a sale of documents but as a sale of goods to be performed by the delivery of documents: see Arnhold Karberg & Co v Blythe, Green Jourdain & Co [1916] 1 K.B. 495 at 510, 514; and other authorities cited in Benjamin's Sale of Goods (6th ed.), §19-008. Couturier v Hastie provides an early illustration of a c.i.f. contract.

<sup>99</sup> Atiyah, 73 L.Q.R. 340.

<sup>1</sup> s.55(1) provides that "Where any right, duty or liability would arise under a contract of sale of goods by implication of law, it may (subject to the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977) be negated or varied by express agreement . . ." But this does not affect the present problem, since the effect of s.6 is that no "right, duty or liability would arise" and that there is no contract of sale. Atiyah (above) argues that under s.6 liability might arise to restore the price; but this would hardly be a liability which "would arise under a contract of sale."

<sup>2</sup> cf. above, p.84. Such a consideration would be blatantly invented (above, p.71).

<sup>3</sup> At common law, if there was a "special relationship" (below, p.345); and possibly under s.2(1) of the Misrepresentation Act 1967 (below, p.350). But that subsection only applies "Where a person has entered into a contract . . ." and it is not clear whether these words cover the case where the "contract" is wholly void.

<sup>4</sup> See below, p.359. cf. the damages recovered in McRae's case (below, p.941).

<sup>5</sup> See below, pp.366, 367-368.

<sup>6</sup> (1951) 84 C.L.R. 377.

reasonable ground, and . . . deliberately induced by him in the mind of the other party.”<sup>7</sup> In such a situation one party may be able to rely on the mistake while the other cannot. Thus in Nicholson & Venn v Smith-Marriott<sup>8</sup> the buyer could have relied on mistake to recover back his money while the defendant could not have relied on it to resist the buyer’s claim for damages.

SECTION 2. MISTAKE NEGATING CONSENT

Mistake negatives consent where the parties are so much at cross-purposes that they do not reach agreement. This may happen where one party is mistaken about the identity of the other, where one party intends to deal with one thing and the other with a different one, or where one party intends to deal on one set of terms and the other on a different set of terms. A mistake as to the other party or as to the subject-matter of the contract has no effect unless it is fundamental, and it is this requirement which links the present group of cases with those in which consent is nullified.

The mere existence of a mistake which negatives consent does not make a contract void. The mistake must also induce the contract, and be operative. In many cases, the last requirement will not be satisfied, so that there will often be a contract in spite of the fact that consent was negated.

1. Types of Mistake

(1) Mistake as to the person<sup>9</sup>

(a) REQUIREMENT OF FUNDAMENTAL MISTAKE. A mistake is fundamental, so that consent is negated, if one party is mistaken as to the identity of the other. In Cundy v Lindsay,<sup>10</sup> claimants received an order for handkerchiefs from a dishonest person called Blenkarn, who gave his address as 37, Wood Street, Cheapside. He signed his name to make it look like “Blenkiron & Co”, a respectable firm known by reputation to the claimants and carrying on business at 123, Wood Street. The claimants sent the goods to “Blenkiron & Co, 37, Wood Street,” where Blenkarn took possession of them. He did not pay for the goods and he later sold them to the defendants. It was held that there was no contract between the claimants and Blenkarn, as the claimants did not intend to deal with him but with someone else. Thus no property in the handkerchiefs passed to Blenkarn,<sup>11</sup> so that he could pass none to the defendants, who were accordingly liable for conversion.

But a mistake by one party as to an attribute of the other will not as a general rule put the parties so seriously at cross-purposes as to negative consent. In King’s Norton Metal

<sup>7</sup> (1951) 84 C.I.L.R. 377 at 408; cf. The Great Peace [2002] EWCA Civ 1407, [2002] 4 All E.R. 689, at [76]–[77]. In Associated Japanese Bank (International) Ltd v Crédit du Nord S.A. [1989] 1 W.L.R. 255 at 268 Steyn J. carries the principle further by omitting the second requirement (i.e. that of inducement) stated in the passage quoted in the text above from McRae’s case. That principle should be distinguished from “estoppel by convention” as applied in cases such as Amalgamated Investment & Property Co Ltd v Texas Commerce International Bank Ltd [1982] Q.B. 84; above, p.110. The mistake in that case related to the existence of a promise which, if made, was undoubtedly a valid contract, and not to facts on which the validity of that contract depended.

<sup>8</sup> (1947) 177 L.T. 189; above, p.291.

<sup>9</sup> Goodhart, 57 L.Q.R. 228; Williams, 23 Can.Bar Rev. 271 at 380; Wilson, 17 M.L.R. 515; Unger, 18 M.L.R. 259; Smith & Thomas, 20 M.L.R. 38.

<sup>10</sup> (1878) 3 App.Cas. 459; cf. Baillie’s Case [1898] 1 Ch. 110; Shogun Finance Ltd v Hudson [2001] EWCA Civ 1001 [2002] Q.B. 834.

<sup>11</sup> cf. below, p.371.

Co Ltd v Edridge, Merrett & Co Ltd<sup>12</sup> the claimants received an order for wire from “Hallam & Co” which was made on the letter-head to appear as a substantial firm having a large factory in Sheffield and dépôts in various other places. In fact “Hallam & Co” consisted solely of an impecunious rogue called Wallis. The claimants sent the goods to “Hallam & Co” on credit. Wallis took possession of them, failed to pay, and sold them to the defendants. It was held that the claimants had contracted with “the writer of the letters”.<sup>13</sup> Thus property in the goods passed to Wallis, so that he could pass it to the defendants, who were accordingly not liable for conversion. As Wallis and “Hallam & Co” were one and the same person, the claimants had not made any mistake as to the identity, but only one as to the credit-worthiness, of the other contracting party, whom they identified as the writer of the letter. The essential point is that “Hallam & Co” was Wallis, just as much as “Curren Bell” was Charlotte Brontë.

In both the above cases, the dispute was between one of the contracting parties and a third party who later acquired the subject-matter. The effect of holding the contract void was to prejudice the third party even though he might have acted in the most perfect good faith. A recommendation by the Law Reform Committee to reverse this result so as to protect the third party<sup>14</sup> has not been implemented by legislation; but the courts have provided such protection by confining the category of mistakes as to identity within narrow limits. This in turn can cause hardship to the mistaken party who may (as in Cundy v Lindsay) be an equally innocent dupe of the other party to the alleged contract. The mistaken party is not likely to suffer such hardship where the dispute is between the contracting parties themselves; for if the mistake is induced by the other party’s misrepresentation, the mistaken party will be entitled to rescind the contract for that misrepresentation.<sup>15</sup> He will need to rely on mistake as such only<sup>16</sup> where the mistake arises without any misrepresentation.<sup>17</sup>

Where a contract is in writing, the parties to that contract are prima facie<sup>18</sup> the persons described as such in the writing. In Hector v Lyons<sup>19</sup> a father conducted negotiations for the purchase of a house, and, when these were successfully concluded, instructed his solicitors to draw up the contract in the name of his son (who was a minor) as purchaser. Contracts were duly exchanged naming the son as purchaser and it was held that the father could not enforce the contract against the vendor, even though the vendor believed that she was dealing with the father. It was said that the identity of vendor and purchaser was established by the terms of the written contract. Similar reasoning was applied in Shogun Finance Ltd v Hudson<sup>20</sup> where a rogue (X) obtained possession of a car by pretending to be Y, producing a driving licence in Y’s name and forging Y’s signature to a hire-purchase agreement purporting to be between Y and Z. A majority of the Court of Appeal held that X was not a party to the agreement, so that a person who in good faith later bought the car from X acquired no title to it.<sup>21</sup> Equally, Y was not liable on the agreement as his signature to it was forged nor, as the contract was procured by

<sup>12</sup> (1897) 14 T.L.R. 98.

<sup>13</sup> ibid. at 99.

<sup>14</sup> 12th Report Cmnd.2958 (1966), para.15; for adverse comment on the failure to implement the recommendation, see Shogun Finance Ltd v Hudson [2001] EWCA Civ 1000; [2002] Q.B. 834 at [51].

<sup>15</sup> See below, pp.369 et seq.

<sup>16</sup> Contrary authorities such as dicta in Gordon v Street [1899] 2 Q.B. 641 and the decision in Sowler v Potter [1940] 1 K.B. 271 are no longer law: see Gallie v Lee [1969] 2 Ch. 17 at 33, 41, 45, affirmed without reference to this point [1971] A.C. 1004; Lewis v Avery [1972] 1 Q.B. 198 at 206.

<sup>17</sup> e.g. in Craven-Ellis Ltd v Canons Ltd [1936] 2 K.B. 403, below, p.302.

<sup>18</sup> Subject to the possible application of the principles of agency (below, pp.727–729).

<sup>19</sup> (1989) 58 P. & C.R. 156.

<sup>20</sup> [2001] EWCA Civ 1000; [2002] Q.B. 834.

<sup>21</sup> Under Hire-Purchase Act 1964, s.27.

fraud, could Y have acquired rights under the contract.<sup>22</sup> It is less clear whether, in Hector v Lyons, where there was no fraud, there was a contract between the vendor and the son. It is arguable that the vendor had made a mistake as to the identity of the other party: she believed that the other party was the father when actually it was the son. But it does not follow that there was no contract between the vendor and the son since that mistake, even if fundamental, would not have been operative (unless it was known<sup>23</sup> to the son). Hence it seems that the vendor could have been held liable in damages to the son.<sup>24</sup>

(b) MISTAKE INTER PRAESENTES. The difficulty of deciding whether the mistake is one of attribute or of identity is particularly acute where the parties who are alleged to have contracted have come physically face to face. In Phillips v Brooks Ltd,<sup>25</sup> a rogue called North entered a shop and asked to see pearls and rings. He selected (inter alia) a ring worth £450, produced a chequebook, claimed to be Sir George Bullough (a wealthy man known by name to the shopkeeper) and gave Sir George's address. The shopkeeper checked this address in a directory, and then allowed North to take away the ring in exchange for a cheque, which was dishonoured. North later pledged the ring with the defendant. The shopkeeper claimed that there was never any contract between him and North, so that the latter had no title to the ring which he could pass to the defendant. But Horridge J. held that the shopkeeper had "contracted to sell and deliver [the ring] to the person who came into his shop . . . who obtained the sale and delivery by means of the false pretence that he was Sir George Bullough".<sup>26</sup> The shopkeeper's mistake was not one of identity. "His intention was to sell to the person present and identified by sight and hearing."<sup>27</sup> Lord Haldane has explained the decision on the alternative ground that the sale was concluded before any mention was made of Sir George Bullough, and that the mistake only induced the shopkeeper to let North take the ring away on credit.<sup>28</sup> But this explanation was rejected in a later judicial discussion of the case<sup>29</sup>; and it is only doubtfully consistent with the reported facts. North made an offer to buy when he selected the ring<sup>30</sup>; and it is not clear whether he said that he was Sir George Bullough before or after the offer was accepted.<sup>31</sup>

The same result was reached in Lewis v Avery,<sup>32</sup> where a person had advertised his car for sale and was visited by a rogue who falsely claimed to be a well-known actor called Richard Greene. By this pretence the rogue induced the seller to sell the car to him on credit and to let him take it away in exchange for a cheque, which was dishonoured. The seller claimed the car from the defendant, who had bought it in good faith from the rogue; but the claim failed as the contract between the seller and the rogue was not void

<sup>22</sup> For the reasons given at p.723, below, Y could not have ratified X's act of forging his signature; nor does there seem to be any good reason why Y might want to do so.

<sup>23</sup> See below, pp.307–309; the other conditions there discussed, in which a mistake negating consent may be operative, were plainly not satisfied.

<sup>24</sup> See below, p.545–546. As the son was a minor, the remedy of specific performance was not available to him, nor was he liable on the contract: ibid.

<sup>25</sup> [1919] 2 K.B. 243; cf. Dennant v Skinner [1948] 2 K.B. 164.

<sup>26</sup> [1919] 2 K.B. 243 at 246.

<sup>27</sup> ibid. at 247.

<sup>28</sup> Lake v Simmons [1927] A.C. 487 at 501.

<sup>29</sup> Lewis v Avery [1972] 1 Q.B. 198 at 206.

<sup>30</sup> See above, p.12.

<sup>31</sup> Three of the reports of the case (88 L.J.K.B. 952, 35 T.L.R. 470 and 24 Com.Cas. 263) suggest that North said he was Sir George Bullough as soon as he entered the shop; while two ([1919] 2 K.B. 243, 121 L.T. 249) suggest that he said this a little later.

<sup>32</sup> [1972] 1 Q.B. 198; A.L.G. 88 L.Q.R. 161; Turpin [1972] C.L.J. 19; cf. (in criminal law) Whittaker v Campbell [1984] Q.B. 319.

for mistake. The presumption that the seller intended to contract with the person physically before him had not been overcome<sup>33</sup>: his mistake was not one of identity<sup>34</sup> but as to the credit-worthiness of the other party.<sup>35</sup>

It does not follow from Phillips v Brooks or Lewis v Aveyar that there can be no fundamental mistake as to the person merely because the parties alleged to have contracted were in each other's presence. There may, in the first place, be such a mistake where A induces B to deal with him by pretending to act as agent for C, while in fact intending to contract on his own behalf.<sup>36</sup> In such a case it could be said that there was no mistake as to the identity of A, but rather one as to the capacity in which he purported to contract.<sup>37</sup> Secondly, a mistake about a person who was present could be one of identity where he had adopted a physical disguise: for example, where A induced B to deal with him by disguising himself as C, and C was personally known to B, so that B thought that A was C. And there are, thirdly, other exceptional circumstances in which a mistake about a person present at the time of the alleged contract can be one as to his identity. This possibility is illustrated by Ingram v Little,<sup>38</sup> where the owners of a car had, again, advertised it for sale and been visited by a rogue who falsely claimed to be "P. G. M. Hutchinson of Stanstead House, Stanstead Road, Caterham." They agreed to sell the car to him on credit, but only after one of them had checked in a telephone directory that there was a person of that name living at that address. The rogue later sold the car to the defendants from whom the owners claimed it when the rogue's cheque was dishonoured. A majority of the Court of Appeal upheld the claim on the ground that the owners had intended to deal with the Hutchinson of Stanstead House and not with the person before them as such. The case was doubted in Lewis v Aveyar,<sup>39</sup> though it can be supported on its special facts: i.e. on the ground that the owners had refused to clinch the deal until they had consulted the telephone directory.<sup>40</sup>

(c) DISTINCTION BETWEEN IDENTITY AND ATTRIBUTE. The above discussion shows that it may be difficult to say precisely what mistake has been made: i.e. whether B thought that A was C, as opposed to merely thinking that A was not A or making a mistake about A's credit-worthiness. In other cases, it may be clear what mistake has been made, but disputed whether it should be described as one of identity or attribute. This possibility is illustrated by Lake v Simmons.<sup>41</sup> A woman called Esmé Ellison told a jeweller that she was married to one Van der Borgh (with whom she was in fact living as his mistress); and that he wanted to give her a necklace which he wished to see on approval. The jeweller let her have possession of the necklace and entered it in his book as being out on approval to Van der Borgh. Esmé Ellison absconded with the necklace, and the actual decision was that the jeweller had not "entrusted" the necklace to her as

<sup>33</sup> [1972] 1 Q.B. 198 at 208, 209.

<sup>34</sup> Lord Denning M.R. said at 207 that there was a mistake of identity but that it did not make the contract void. With respect, this approach cannot be reconciled with Cundy v Lindsay (1878) 3 App.Cas. 459, above, p.298.

<sup>35</sup> [1972] 1 Q.B. at 209.

<sup>36</sup> Hardman v Booth (1863) 1 H. & C. 803; cf. Higgins v Burton (1857) 26 L.J.Ex. 342. Contrast Citibank N.A. v Brown Shipley & Co Ltd [1991] 2 All E.R. 690 (identity of person acting as mere messenger not fundamental).

<sup>37</sup> cf. Ingram v Little [1961] 1 Q.B. 31 at 50, 66.

<sup>38</sup> [1961] 1 Q.B. 31.

<sup>39</sup> [1972] 1 Q.B. 198 at 206, 208 (Megaw L.J.).

<sup>40</sup> ibid. at 208 (Phillimore L.J.); cf. Shogun Finance Ltd v Hudson [2001] EWCA Civ 1001, [2002] Q.B. 834 at [45] per Dyson L.J.; contrast ibid. at [18] per Sedley L.J. (dissenting), who would have brought the case within Phillips v Brooks, above, p.300; Brooke L.J. left the point open. The actual decision of the majority was based on the ground stated at p.299–300, above.

<sup>41</sup> [1927] A.C. 487.

a “customer” within the terms of an insurance policy.<sup>42</sup> Lord Haldane also said that there was no contract, since there was no consensus. The jeweller “thought that he was dealing with a different person, the wife of Van der Borgh. . . . He never intended to contract with the woman in question.”<sup>43</sup> “Nothing short of a belief in her identity as a wife who was transacting for her husband as the real customer would have induced the [jeweller] to act as he did.”<sup>44</sup> One possible interpretation of these remarks is that Esmé Ellison’s “identity as a wife” was important in inducing a mistake as to the capacity in which she dealt: the jeweller intended to deal with her as agent for Van der Borgh, while she intended to contract (if at all) on her own behalf.<sup>45</sup> A second possibility is that the jeweller’s mistake was one as to her identity<sup>46</sup>: he identified her as the wife of Van der Borgh and not by the more usual process of sight and hearing. This possibility raises the question how the distinction between identity and attributes should in this context be drawn.

It is submitted that the test formulated for the purpose of defining fundamental mistakes as to the subject-matter<sup>47</sup> should also (with appropriate modifications) be applied in the present context. A person may be identified by reference to any one of his attributes. If a mistake is made as to that attribute,<sup>48</sup> there can be said to be a mistake as to identity. This is the basis of the second possible explanation of Lord Haldane’s remarks in Lake v Simmons. It is also supported by a dictum of Greene L.J. in Craven-Ellis v Canons Ltd,<sup>49</sup> where a director’s service agreement was held “void ab initio” as neither he nor those who appointed him had the necessary qualification shares. One reason for this conclusion was that the agreement was made “under a mistake as to the present existence of an essential fact recognised by the law as the foundation of the contract”.<sup>50</sup> Other hypothetical cases can be imagined which would come within the same principle. A college may hold a private dance and intend to sell tickets only to past or present members. In such a case the identifying attribute of an applicant for tickets might be his or her membership of the college.

The principle, then, is that a mistake as to the attribute by which a person is identified is in law regarded as a mistake of identity. In applying this principle, the law indeed makes certain prima facie assumptions about the way in which a person is identified: e.g. that a person physically present is identified by sight and hearing, and an unknown correspondent as “the writer of this letter”. The situations discussed above show that these assumptions can be displaced by showing that the mistaken party identified the other party in some other, unusual way. But one attribute on which the mistaken party cannot in law rely for this purpose is that of the credit-worthiness of the other party, about whom no other mistake is made.<sup>51</sup> In deciding whether the other party is credit-worthy, the mistaken party takes a business risk. It would be undesirable to allow an error of judgment on such a point to negative consent.

<sup>42</sup> As to this point, contrast John Rigby (Haulage) Ltd v Reliance Marine Insurance Co [1956] 2 Q.B. 468.

<sup>43</sup> Lake v Simmons [1927] A.C. 487 at 500.

<sup>44</sup> ibid. at 502 (italics supplied).

<sup>45</sup> As in Hardman v Booth (1863) 1 H. & C. 803; above, p.301 at n.36.

<sup>46</sup> Citibank N A v Brown Shipley & Co Ltd [1991] 2 All E.R. 690 at 700.

<sup>47</sup> See above, pp.291–292.

<sup>48</sup> Contrast Sunderland Association Football Club v Uruguay Montevideo Football Club [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 828 at 830 (mistake as to the division in which a football club competed not one of identity).

<sup>49</sup> [1936] 2 K.B. 403.

<sup>50</sup> ibid. at 413.

<sup>51</sup> e.g., King’s Norton Metal Co Ltd v Edridge Merrett & Co (1897) 14 T.L.R. 98, above, p.298–299; contrast Shogun Finance Ltd v Hudson [2001] EWCA Civ 1001 at [45]–[46], where a borrower by fraudulently impersonating another person procured a loan on the basis of a credit reference relating to that person.

(d) WHETHER ONE PERSON MUST BE MISTAKEN FOR ANOTHER. In most cases of mistaken identity, one person is mistaken for another existing person; but this does not seem to be a necessary requirement. If, in Ingram v Little,<sup>52</sup> it had been shown that Mr P G M Hutchinson had died six months before the transaction, this would have made no difference to the process by which the owners of the car identified the rogue; and it ought not to have affected the decision. If B thinks that A is C, there can be a mistake as to identity so long as C is or was a distinct entity from A (as opposed to a mere alias<sup>53</sup>) and is so regarded by B.

(e) UNDISCLOSED PRINCIPALS. A person who knows that another is unwilling to contract with him may employ an agent to make the contract without disclosing the existence of the principal. In some such cases the undisclosed principal is not allowed to intervene and take the benefit of the contract. But the contract is not void since the agent can (fraud apart) enforce it. These cases are discussed in Chapter 17.<sup>54</sup>

(2) Mistake as to the subject-matter

Consent is negated if one party intends to deal with one thing, and the other with a different one. This principle may have been applied in Raffles v Wichelhaus,<sup>55</sup> where a seller of "125 bales of Surat cotton . . . to arrive ex Peerless from Bombay" tendered cotton from a ship called Peerless which had sailed from Bombay in December. The buyer refused to accept the goods, alleging that he had intended to buy the cotton shipped on another Peerless which had sailed from Bombay in October: thus it was argued that there was no agreement between the parties. On a claim by the seller, judgment was given for the buyer but, as no reasons were stated, it is hard to tell whether the ground of decision was that there was no contract,<sup>56</sup> or that there was a contract to deliver cotton from the October Peerless which could not be performed by delivering cotton from the December Peerless.<sup>57</sup>

Consent was clearly negated in Falck v Williams.<sup>58</sup> A and B were negotiating about two charterparties: one to carry shale from Sydney to Barcelona, and one to carry copra from Fiji to Barcelona. B's agent sent a coded telegram intending to confirm the copra charter, but the telegram was ambiguous and was understood by A to refer to the shale charter. It was held that there was no contract. Similarly, consent is negated if a buyer at an auction thinks that the lot for which he is bidding consists of hemp when it consists of hemp and tow.<sup>59</sup>

On the other hand, consent is not generally negated by a mere mistake as to quality: thus it was held in Smith v Hughes<sup>60</sup> that if a person buys oats, thinking that they are old, from a seller who knows that they are new, there is a good contract. Similarly, a contract for the sale of goods is not void merely because the seller, under a mistake as to the quality of the goods, charges a lower price than he would have done, had he known the

<sup>52</sup> [1961] 1 Q.B. 31.

<sup>53</sup> As in Collings v Lee [2001] 2 All E.R. 332, where no attempt was made that the contract was void for mistake.

<sup>54</sup> See below, pp.727–730.

<sup>55</sup> (1864) 2 H. & C. 906.

<sup>56</sup> Smith v Hughes (1871) L.R. 6 Q.B. 597 at 609; O T Africa Line Ltd v Vickers plc [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 700 at 703. There was no allegation that the seller intended to deal with the cargo of the December rather than the October Peerless. The case was decided on a demurrer so that the facts were never proved.

<sup>57</sup> Van Praagh v Everidge [1902] 2 Ch. 266 at 269. On this view the buyer could have got damages for the seller's failure to deliver cotton from the October Peerless.

<sup>58</sup> [1900] A.C. 176.

<sup>59</sup> Scriven Bros & Co v Hindley & Co [1913] 3 K.B. 564.

<sup>60</sup> (1871) L.R. 6 Q.B. 597.

truth.<sup>61</sup> In such cases, the parties are at cross-purposes, but not to such an extent that they are not in agreement at all. A mistake as to quality can negative consent only if it is a mistake as to a fundamental quality by which the thing is identified.<sup>62</sup>

(3) Mistake as to the terms of the contract

Consent is negated if the parties intend to contract on different terms, e.g. if A sells goods to B for so many “pounds” intended by A to mean sterling and by B to mean a different currency<sup>63</sup>; or if A intends to sell rabbit skins at a fixed price per piece when B intends to buy at the same price per pound, there being about three pieces to the pound.<sup>64</sup>

Mistakes as to the person and mistakes as to the subject-matter negative consent only if they are fundamental. There seems to be no such requirement where the mistake is as to the terms of the contract. A sale of oats is not void merely because they are believed by one party to be old but known by the other to be new. The mistake is as to the subject-matter and is not fundamental.<sup>65</sup> But according to Smith v Hughes<sup>66</sup> a sale of oats believed by the buyer to be warranted to be old and not intended by the seller to be so warranted may be void for mistake. The mistake is as to a term of the contract and negatives consent although the term relates to a quality of the subject-matter which is not fundamental. This distinction seems to be generally accepted, but the reason for it is not easy to see. If a quality is not fundamental, a mistake as to its existence does not destroy consent. Why should consent be destroyed by mistake as to a warranty of that same quality? Is it really true, in the latter case, that the parties have not agreed at all? An alternative explanation for this aspect of Smith v Hughes will be put forward later in this Chapter.<sup>67</sup>

2. Mistake must Induce the Contract

A mistake negatives consent only if it induced the mistaken party to enter into the contract. If that party takes the risk that the facts are not as he supposed them to be,<sup>68</sup> or if he is simply indifferent as to the matter to which the mistake relates, the validity of the contract is not affected. For example, in Mackie v European Assurance Soc<sup>69</sup> the claimant took out an insurance policy through an agent, believing that the agent was acting for one company when in fact he was acting for another. It was held that the policy with the latter company was not void for mistake. The claimant’s intention “was not to

<sup>61</sup> Dip Kaur v Chief Constable of Hampshire [1981] 1 W.L.R. 578; but the invalidity of the contract is not decisive for the purpose of criminal liability: R. v Morris [1984] A.C. 320; Dobson v GAFAC [1990] Q.B. 274.

<sup>62</sup> As defined above, pp.291–292. The Kaliningrad and Nadezhda Krupskaya [1997] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 35 at 39 is, with respect, hard to reconcile with the usual interpretation of the requirement that the mistake must be “fundamental.”

<sup>63</sup> See Woodhouse A C Israel Cocoa Ltd v Nigerian Produce Marketing Co [1972] A.C. 741 at 768; cf. Felthouse v Bindley (1862) 11 C.B.(N.S.) 869 (“30” intended to mean pounds by buyer but guineas by seller); Smidt v Tiden (1874) 1 L.R. 9 Q.B. 446.

<sup>64</sup> Hartog v Colin & Shields [1939] 3 All E.R. 566.

<sup>65</sup> See above, after n.60.

<sup>66</sup> (1871) 1 L.R. 6 Q.B. 597; cf. London Holeproof Hosiery Co Ltd v Padmore (1928) 44 T.L.R. 499; Sullivan v Constable (1932) 49 T.L.R. 369.

<sup>67</sup> See below, pp.308–309.

<sup>68</sup> Wales v Wadham [1977] 1 W.L.R. 199 at 220; (approved on the issue of mistake in Jenkins v Livesey [1985] A.C. 424); cf. above, pp.294–295, 296–297.

<sup>69</sup> (1869) 21 L.T. 102; cf. Fellowes v Gwydyr (1829) 1 Russ. & My. 83.

remain uninsured for one hour and in what office it was was a secondary consideration, provided it would meet its engagements and was able to do so".<sup>70</sup>

This case should be contrasted with Boulton v Jones.<sup>71</sup> Boulton had just bought a shop from one Brocklehurst when the defendant sent his servant to the shop with an order, addressed to Brocklehurst, for a quantity of pipe hose. Boulton supplied the goods, no doubt thinking that the defendant did not care from whom he obtained them. The defendant was apparently satisfied with the goods and used them. He had clearly made a fundamental mistake, in that he thought he was dealing with Brocklehurst when he dealt with Boulton. Ordinarily, that mistake would have had no effect, since it would not matter to the defendant whether the goods were supplied by Boulton or by Brocklehurst. But Brocklehurst owed money to the defendant, who had intended to set off this debt against the price of the goods. He could thus show that it was important for him to contract with Brocklehurst rather than with Boulton. It was therefore held that there was no contract so that the defendant was not liable for the price of the goods.<sup>72</sup> To have held him liable would have been unjust as it would have deprived him of the benefit of his set-off against Brocklehurst. But the result of holding him not liable was almost equally unjust. The defendant got the goods for nothing but retained his right to sue Brocklehurst for the amount which the latter owed him. It seems that on such facts the defendant should be under some quasi-contractual liability,<sup>73</sup> or that he should at least be bound to transfer his claim against Brocklehurst to the supplier.<sup>74</sup>

In a number of English cases, reference has been made to the following passage from the French writer Pothier: "Whenever the consideration of the person with whom I am willing to contract enters as an element into the contract which I am willing to make, error in regard to the person destroys my consent and consequently annuls the contract. . . . On the contrary, when the consideration of the person with whom I thought I was contracting does not enter at all into the contract, and I should have been equally willing to make the contract with any person whatever as with him with whom I thought I was contracting, the contract ought to stand." This passage has sometimes been interpreted to mean that mistake will make a contract void if it relates to a personal attribute of the other party, but for the existence of which the mistaken party would not have contracted.<sup>75</sup> If it means this, it does not represent English law,<sup>76</sup> for a mistake must be fundamental, and a mistake as to the person is fundamental only if one person is mistaken for another or if the mistake relates to the attribute by which a person is identified.<sup>77</sup> But it seems that the purpose of the passage is not to define when a mistake is fundamental but to distinguish between cases in which it does, and those in which it does not, induce the contract. This is made clear by the examples given by Pothier: a contract by which an artist is commissioned to paint a picture is void if mistakenly made with the wrong artist; but a contract to sell a book is not void simply because the bookseller thinks he is contracting with Peter when in fact he is contracting with Paul. In both cases the mistake is fundamental, one person being mistaken for another. The difference between them is that in the first case the mistake induces the contract, while in the second it does not. Nor would a mistake induce the contract where it related, not <sup>70</sup> (1869) 21 L.T. at p.105.

<sup>71</sup> (1857) 2 H. & N. 564; L.J.Ex. 117; 6 W.R. 107.

<sup>72</sup> cf. Westminster CC v Reema Construction (No.2) (1992) 24 Con.L.R. 26 (no liability of successor in business under contract with predecessor).

<sup>73</sup> cf. below, p.1063.

<sup>74</sup> Goff and Jones, The Law of Restitution (6th ed.), pp.132, 591.

<sup>75</sup> e.g. in Sowler v Potter [1940] 1 K.B. 271 at 274; see above, p.300, n.16 as to this case.

<sup>76</sup> Lewis v Averay [1972] 1 Q.B. 198 at 206.

<sup>77</sup> See above, p.301.

to the person with whom the mistaken party believed that he was negotiating, but only to an intermediary through whom the contract was to be performed. Thus if A believes that he is contracting with B and has indeed entered into a contract with B, that contract is not void merely because A is induced to deliver its subject-matter to C by C's fraudulent pretence that he is a messenger authorised by B to receive it.<sup>78</sup> Such a case differs from Lake v Simmons<sup>79</sup> where the jeweller thought that he was dealing with the wife of Van der Borgh: Esmé Ellison in that case did not purport to act as a mere messenger for her alleged husband, but falsely claimed to be negotiating as his wife and on his behalf.

The requirement that the mistake must induce the contract applies not only to mistake as to the person but also to other types of mistake. If in Raffles v Wichelhaus<sup>80</sup> both ships Peerless had sailed from Bombay on the same day and had arrived at the same time, it might not have mattered to the buyer which cargo he got. In that case he could not have escaped liability by saying that he intended to buy the cargo in the one ship while the seller intended to sell the cargo in the other.

3. When Mistake is Operative

(1) Contract generally valid

A mistake which negates consent does not necessarily make the contract void. On the contrary, the general rule is that a party is bound, in spite of his mistake: this follows from the objective principle,<sup>81</sup> under which one party (A) is often bound if his words or conduct are such as to induce the other party (B) reasonably to believe that A was assenting to the terms proposed by B.<sup>82</sup> This principle is sometimes regarded as a kind of estoppel by representation. But such estoppel operates only in favour of a person who acts on a representation to his detriment<sup>83</sup>; while a person who invokes the objective principle need only show that he has entered into the contract in reliance on the appearance of the agreement created by the other's conduct. He need not show that he has, as a result of entering into that contract, suffered any actual detriment.<sup>84</sup>

The operation of the objective principle is most easily illustrated by the case of a person who by mistake bids for the wrong lot at an auction. Although the parties may

<sup>78</sup> Citibank N.A v Brown Shipley & Co Ltd [1991] 2 All E.R. 690.

<sup>79</sup> [1927] A.C. 487, above, p.301.

<sup>80</sup> (1864) 2 H. & C. 906; cf. Ind's Case (1872) L.R. 7 Ch.App. 485 (validity of share transfer not affected by which shares the transferee gets, so long as he gets the quantity contracted for).

<sup>81</sup> See above, pp.1, 8.

<sup>82</sup> Smith v Hughes (1871) L.R. 6 Q.B. 597, 607; OT Africa Line Ltd v Vickers plc [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 700. This principle contains no requirement of negligence and is in this respect wider in scope than that which prevents a mistake which nullifies consent from being operative on account of the conduct of one of the parties: above, p.297.

<sup>83</sup> See below, p.403; such detrimental reliance is also necessary for "estoppel by convention," discussed above at p.110. Reliance, though not "detriment" is also necessary for "promissory" estoppel: above p.111.

<sup>84</sup> Williston, in Selected Readings on the Law of Contracts, p.119; Atiyah's contrary suggestion in 94 L.Q.R. 193 at 202 is inconsistent with the cases discussed in the following paragraph, and with Centrovincial Estates plc v Merchant Investors Assurance Co Ltd, [1983] Com.L.R. 158. That decision is described by Atiyah in his Introduction to the Law of Contract (5th ed.), p.462 as "absurd and unjustifiable"; but it has on a number of occasions been cited with approval: see Whittaker v Campbell [1984] Q.B. 318 at 327; The Antclizo [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 130 at 146 (affirmed [1988] 1 W.L.R. 603); OT Africa Line Ltd v Vickers plc [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 700 at 704. In further support of his view, Atiyah relies (102 L.Q.R. 363) on The Hannah Blumenthal [1983] 1 A.C. 854, above, p.11. But the principal question in that case was whether A's conduct had induced B reasonably to believe that A was making an offer to B. Conduct amounting to reliance (not necessarily detrimentally) by B is one way in which such an offer can be accepted (above, pp.18, 35), but it is not the only way: an express acceptance in so many words would be equally effective.

not be ad idem,<sup>85</sup> (as they intended to deal with different things), the bidder is prevented by the objective principle from relying on the mistake and so from saying that the contract is void.<sup>86</sup> The same principle applies to mistakes as to the person<sup>87</sup> and as to the terms of the contract. Thus a seller who, as a result of some miscalculation, offers goods at a price lower than that which he would have asked but for the mistake cannot, after the offer has been accepted, generally rely on the mistake to make the contract void.<sup>88</sup> Similarly, where a landlord as a result of a clerical error offers to grant a tenancy at a rent of £1,000 per month, he cannot, after the offer has been accepted, escape from the transaction merely by showing that his real intention was to make the offer at a rent of £2,000 per month.<sup>89</sup> The position is the same where a person signs a document under some other mistake about its terms or legal effects: he cannot, in general, say that the contract is void because of his mistake.<sup>90</sup>

(2) Exceptional cases in which mistake is operative

Where the objective principle applies, the contract is valid in spite of the existence of a mistake, so that it is unnecessary to go into the difficult question whether the mistake is fundamental. That question need only be answered in the following three exceptional situations, in which the objective principle does not apply, so that the mistake is operative.

(a) AMBIGUITY. There may be such ambiguity in the circumstances that a reasonable person could not draw any relevant inference from them at all. In Raffles v Wichelhaus<sup>91</sup> a reasonable person could not have deduced with which cargo the parties intended to deal. Similarly, if parties stipulate for the payment of freight “per charterparty” but there are two charterparties in the case, providing for payment of different rates of freight, the reasonable person cannot put any definite interpretation on the promises.<sup>92</sup> In these cases, therefore, the mistake is operative and makes the contract void.

(b) MISTAKE KNOWN TO OTHER PARTY. The objective principle applies where A’s words or conduct induce B reasonably to believe that A is contracting with him; but it does not apply where B actually knows that (in spite of the objective appearance) A has no such intention.<sup>93</sup> It follows that the objective principle will not apply, and that the mistake will be operative, if A’s mistake is known to B. This is the reason why the contract in Cundy v Lindsay<sup>94</sup> was void. Lindsays may have behaved so as to induce a reasonable person to believe that they were dealing with Blenkarn, but the mistake was operative as Blenkarn knew that they had no such intention. The case would have been different if Blenkarn had written to Lindsays in good faith and they had misread his signature for “Blenkiron & Co.” In such a case, Lindsays could not have relied on their mistake, had they simply sent the goods to Blenkarn’s address, unless it had been clear

<sup>85</sup> Van Praagh v Everidge [1903] 1 Ch.434.

<sup>86</sup> Robinson, Fisher & Harding v Behar [1927] 1 K.B. 513.

<sup>87</sup> Cornish v Abington (1859) 4 H. & N. 549; Re Reed (1876) 3 Ch.D. 123, so far as contra, seems wrong.

<sup>88</sup> This would have been the position in Hartog v Colin & Shields [1939] 3 All E.R. 566 (below, p.309) if the court had not taken the view that the claimant must have known of the defendant’s mistake.

<sup>89</sup> Centrovincial Estates plc v Merchant Investors Assurance Co Ltd, above n.84.

<sup>90</sup> Blay v Pollard & Morris [1930] 1 K.B. 628; cf. L’Estrange v F Graucob Ltd [1934] 2 K.B. 394, a case of ignorance rather than mistake.

<sup>91</sup> (1864) 2 H. & C. 906 (“a case of latent ambiguity”: The Great Peace [2002] EWCA Civ 1407; [2002] 4 All E.R. 689, at [29]); cf. Hickman v Berens [1895] 2 Ch.638.

<sup>92</sup> Smidt v Tiden (1874) L.R. 9 Q.B. 446.

<sup>93</sup> See above, pp.11–12.

<sup>94</sup> (1878) 3 App.Cas. 459.

to Blenkarn from the contractual documents that they did not intend to deal with him but with Blenkiron & Co.<sup>95</sup>

In Boulton v Jones the defendant's order was addressed to Brocklehurst, so that Boulton knew it was not meant for him. It is not clear whether he also knew why the order was not meant for him, i.e. whether he knew that Brocklehurst owed money to Jones.<sup>96</sup> Probably such knowledge is not essential to make the contract void. A person who accepts an offer knowing that it is addressed to another must take the risk that the mistake may turn out to be material.

The rule that a mistake of one party is operative if known to the other is further illustrated by Smith v Hughes.<sup>97</sup> Oats were bought by sample, the buyer thinking that they were old when, in fact, they were new. He refused to accept them, as he had no use for new oats. In an action for the price, the trial judge told the jury to find for the buyer (1) if the word "old" had been used in the negotiations, i.e. if the oats had been expressly described as old; or (2) if "the [seller] believed the [buyer] to believe, or to be under the impression, that he was contracting for the purchase of old oats". The jury found for the buyer, but did not say which of these two questions they had answered in his favour. If they thought that the word "old" had been used, their verdict was clearly correct. But they might have based their verdict on their answer to the second question, so that the court had to decide whether this question was correctly formulated.

If the buyer's mistake had been as to the subject-matter, it could not in law negative consent at all because it was not fundamental.<sup>98</sup> The seller's knowledge of the buyer's mistake would not alter this. But if the mistake had been as to the terms of the contract it could negative consent although it was not fundamental.<sup>99</sup> There would have been such a mistake if the buyer believed that the seller had warranted the oats to be old, while the seller intended to sell without warranty. Prima facie this mistake would not be operative: the objective principle would apply, the buyer having behaved so as to induce the seller reasonably to believe that the buyer was buying oats of the same quality as those in the sample. The mistake would be operative only if the seller knew of the buyer's mistake—i.e. if he knew that the buyer believed he was buying the oats with a warranty that they were old.<sup>1</sup> Thus if the buyer thought the oats were old there was a good contract even if the seller knew of this mistake; but if the buyer thought the oats were warranted to be old and the seller knew of this, quite different, mistake the contract was void. The court ordered a new trial because the direction to the jury did not clearly distinguish between the two mistakes which the buyer might have made.

It has been suggested above<sup>2</sup> that it is hard to see why a mistake as to a warranty of quality should negative consent when a mistake as to the existence of the quality itself does not have this effect. The distinction is based on Smith v Hughes; and it is submitted that if the buyer did believe the oats to have been warranted old, and the seller knew this, the buyer could have been absolved from liability on an alternative ground. In such a case it could be said that there was a contract under which the seller was bound by the warranty that the oats were old, because he had behaved so as to induce the buyer

<sup>95</sup> cf. The Unique Mariner [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 438 at 451–452.

<sup>96</sup> The only report of the case which suggests that Boulton did know this is in 6 W.R. 107, where counsel for the defendants says at 108: "The plaintiff knew that Brocklehurst was indebted to the defendants . . ."

<sup>97</sup> (1871) L.R. 6 Q.B. 597.

<sup>98</sup> See above, p.304.

<sup>99</sup> See above, p.304.

<sup>1</sup> cf. Hartog v Colin & Shields [1939] 3 All E.R. 566 (below, p.309).

<sup>2</sup> See above, p.304.

reasonably to believe that he was contracting on those terms.<sup>3</sup> Breach of the warranty that the oats were old could have justified the buyer's refusal to accept new oats.<sup>4</sup>

(c) MISTAKE NEGLIGENTLY INDUCED. A mistake is operative where one party has negligently led the other to make it. In Scriven Bros v Hindley & Co<sup>5</sup> the defendant at an auction bid for two lots believing that both were lots of hemp, whereas one was a lot of hemp and tow. Normally, he could not have relied on this mistake,<sup>6</sup> but he was able to do so in this case because the mistake was caused by the misleading nature of the catalogue and by the conduct of one of the seller's servants. This principle is distinct from that which applies in cases of ambiguity.<sup>7</sup> Where a mistake is negligently induced, the circumstances need not be so perfectly ambiguous as to make each party's view of the contract equally tenable. If auction particulars are so obscure as to lead a purchaser to make a mistake, the mistake will be operative even though the particulars, properly interpreted, can only bear the meaning intended by the vendor.<sup>8</sup>

(3) Mistake may operate against one party only

If A's mistake is deliberately induced by B, then A can treat the contract as void, but it does not follow that B can do so. It seems probable that in Cundy v Lindsay Blenkarn could have been sued for the price of the handkerchiefs.<sup>9</sup> The same may be true even where B does not in any way bring about A's mistake. In Hartog v Colin & Shields<sup>10</sup> the defendants intended to offer hare skins for sale at a stated price "per piece", but inadvertently offered to sell at that price "per pound". A pound contained, on average, three pieces. The claimant purported to accept this offer. It was held that there was "no contract"<sup>11</sup> as the claimant must have known of the defendants' mistake in expressing their offer.<sup>12</sup> But it is possible that the defendants could have held the claimant liable on his acceptance if a fall in the market had made them wish to do so.

4. Theoretical Basis

It has been suggested<sup>13</sup> that the cases discussed in this Section do not depend on mistake at all, but on the rule that there is no contract if offer and acceptance do not correspond. If, for example, contract notes are exchanged by which A agrees to sell "St. Petersburg clean hemp ex Annetta" but B agrees to buy "Riga Rhine hemp ex Annetta",<sup>14</sup> then it is as plausible to say that there is no contract because offer and acceptance do not <sup>3</sup> This is the argument of counsel for the buyer as reported in 40 L.J.Q.B. at p.223. But in the Law Reports, counsel is reported as saying: "The parties were not ad idem" (p.600).

<sup>4</sup> It is true that under the Sale of Goods Act 1979, s.11 refusal to accept is (as a general rule) justified only by a breach of condition and not by one of warranty (below, p.788 et seq.). But in 1871 these words were probably not used in their present sense: see below, p.790; cf. Hardwick Game Farm v Suffolk Agricultural, etc. Association [1969] 2 A.C. 31 at 83.

<sup>5</sup> [1913] 3 K.B. 564.

<sup>6</sup> See above, p.307. cf. Lloyd's Bank v Waterhouse [1993] 2 F.L.R. 97, 123.

<sup>7</sup> See above, p.307.

<sup>8</sup> cf. Swaisland v Dearsley (1861) Beav. 430, in equity, but Scriven Bros & Co v Hindley & Co [1913] 3 K.B. 564 shows that the common law is the same.

<sup>9</sup> So in the agency situation discussed at p.301, above, the agent might have been liable: cf. Bell v Balls [1897] 1 Ch. 663 at 669.

<sup>10</sup> [1939] 3 All E.R. 566.

<sup>11</sup> ibid. at 567.

<sup>12</sup> cf. Watkin v Watson-Smith, The Times, July 3, 1986.

<sup>13</sup> Slade, 70 L.Q.R. 385; Shatwell, 33 Can.Bar Rev. 164; Atiyah, 2 Ottawa L.Rev. 337, esp. at 344-350 and Essays in Contract, pp.253-260; cf. Whittaker v Campbell [1984] Q.B. 319 at 327—but in that case the mistake was as to attribute only, and so not fundamental: see ibid. at 329.

<sup>14</sup> As in Thornton v Kempster (1814) 5 Taunt. 786.

correspond as it is to say that there is no contract because the parties intended to deal with different things.

But there are also difficulties in the way of this “offer and acceptance” theory.<sup>15</sup> It clearly does not mean that there is a good contract merely because the express words of the offer correspond with those of the acceptance. In Raffles v Wichelhaus,<sup>16</sup> there was, so far as appears from the report, no lack of verbal correspondence between offer and acceptance, and yet (on one view of the case) there was no contract.

Another version of the same theory is that the full terms of the offer, as intended by the offeror, must correspond with the full terms of the acceptance, as intended by the offeree. But on this view it is hard to see why some discrepancies prevent the formation of a contract, while others do not. Two cases may be contrasted. In the first, A intends to sell oats which are new; B intends to buy oats which are old. In the second, A intends to sell cotton ex Peerless (December); B intends to buy cotton ex Peerless (October). The contract in the first case is expressed to be for “oats” and in the second for “cotton ex Peerless.” In both cases offer and acceptance correspond verbally. In neither case would they correspond if each party expressed his full intention. Yet in the first case there is a good contract, while in the second there is none. This version of the “offer and acceptance” theory makes no allowance for the crucial distinction between mistakes which are fundamental and those which are not.

A third version of the theory is that the required correspondence is between offer and acceptance as construed by the court. On this view Raffles v Wichelhaus can be explained on the ground that offer and acceptance were so ambiguous that the court could not, in the context, determine their meaning at all. But this version of the theory makes it hard to explain the distinction drawn in Smith v Hughes between a mistake as to the age of the oats and a mistake as to a warranty as to their age; and, more generally, to say why offer and acceptance should have been held to correspond in some of the cases discussed in this Section, but not in others. It seems that this version of the “offer and acceptance” theory still raises the same difficulties as those which arise under the doctrine of mistake. If the offer and acceptance correspond verbally, the court is unlikely to hold that they do not correspond on their true construction unless the parties are very seriously at cross-purposes; and such a process of construction would not appear to differ substantially from the application of the principle of fundamental mistake.<sup>17</sup>

SECTION 3. MISTAKE IN EQUITY

The common law of mistake can be a source of hardship in a number of situations. First, a contract may be held valid because of the narrow common law definition of a “fundamental” mistake. The result is that a person may have to pay for something that he does not want<sup>18</sup> or for something that is nearly worthless.<sup>19</sup> Secondly, a contract may be valid at common law, in spite of the existence of a fundamental mistake, because of

<sup>15</sup> cf. Devlin L.J. (dissenting) in Ingram v Little [1961] 1 Q.B. 31.

<sup>16</sup> (1864) 2 H. & C. 906; above, pp.303, 307.

<sup>17</sup> Atiyah, above, n.13 at pp.350 and 260, suggests that the courts are “in fact using” the construction technique and not the mistake technique, citing Sullivan v Constable (1932) 48 T.L.R. 369. On the other hand, it seems that the mistake technique was used in Dennant v Skinner [1948] 2 K.B. 164 and in Lewis v Averay [1972] 1 Q.B. 198. It is also accepted in the Law Reform Committee’s 12th Report Cmd. 2958 (1966), para.15. The difficulty of determining which technique was used by the majority in Ingram v Little [1961] 1 Q.B. 31 may support the view expressed in the text that there is little (if any) practical difference between them.

<sup>18</sup> e.g. Smith v Hughes (1871) L.R. 6 Q.B. 597 (assuming that the only mistake was as to the age of the oats).

<sup>19</sup> e.g. Bell v Lever Bros Ltd [1932] A.C. 161.

the objective principle. Here again the mistaken party can suffer hardship through being held to a contract which he did not intend to make<sup>20</sup> though this hardship must be weighed against that which the other party might suffer if the contract were held invalid.<sup>21</sup> In both these situations, the common law emphasises the needs of commercial certainty, sometimes at the expense of the demands of justice in individual cases. Thirdly, an innocent third party may suffer hardship where the contract is void at common law, as in Cundy v Lindsay.<sup>22</sup>

Equity deals only to a very limited extent with the hardship which the mistaken party can suffer under the objective principle<sup>23</sup>; and it provides no relief against the hardship to third parties that can arise when the contract is void at law. It has been concerned mainly with the first of the above hardships: that is, it has given relief for certain kinds of mistake which do not make the contract void at law. Three kinds of relief were at one time available for this purpose. First, equity could refuse specific performance (or grant that remedy only on terms); secondly, it could rescind the contract, again on terms; and thirdly, it could rectify a contractual document where a mistake had been made, not in the formation, but in the recording, of a contract. Considerable powers of adjustment were available where relief could be given on terms; but this flexibility<sup>24</sup> has been much reduced now that the Court of Appeal<sup>25</sup> has rejected the former view<sup>26</sup> that rescission on terms could be ordered in equity where a contract was made under a mistake which was not "fundamental" in the narrow common law sense. The position that there is no such power to rescind must now be accepted, at least until the issue arises in the House of Lords. The reasons for this development are discussed later in this Chapter; here it must be stressed that it affects only rescission and has no effect on equitable relief for mistake by way of refusal of specific performance (or the granting of that remedy on terms) or of rectification. It also gives rise to a problem as to the status of the previous authorities concerning rescission on terms. One of these has been disapproved<sup>27</sup> but this disapproval does not expressly extend to later cases<sup>28</sup> exercising the power to rescind or to earlier cases<sup>29</sup> in which equitable relief was given by way of (or amounting to) rescission.<sup>30</sup> Such cases still serve to illustrate the types of mistake for which equity can give relief<sup>31</sup>; though they are no longer reliable as to the form of relief given in them, unless, where this amounted to rescission, it could be justified on grounds other than mistake.<sup>32</sup>

To the extent that equity has given, and still gives, relief for mistakes which do not make the contract void at law, it sacrifices the requirement of certainty which is emphasised by the common law. Here (as elsewhere in the law of contract<sup>33</sup>) rules which

<sup>20</sup> cf. below, p.317.

<sup>21</sup> The other party can, however, invoke the objective principle even though he has not suffered any detriment by relying on the appearance of agreement induced by the conduct of the mistaken party: above, p.306.

<sup>22</sup> (1878) 3 App.Cas. 459; for a proposal for reform, see above, p.298.

<sup>23</sup> Below, pp.318, 322; cf. above p.306.

<sup>24</sup> The statutory powers of adjustment available in cases of frustration (below, pp.911–917) do not apply to cases of mistake: e.g. the defendant in a case like Griffith v Brymer (1903) 19 T.L.R. 434 (above, p.288) would not, even now be able to invoke these powers in respect of his expenses.

<sup>25</sup> In The Great Peace [2002] E.W.C.A. Civ 1407, [2002] 4 All E.R. 689, below, p.319.

<sup>26</sup> Usually thought to have originated in Solle v Butcher [1950] 1 K.B. 671, below, p.318.

<sup>27</sup> Solle v Butcher, above: see The Great Peace, above, at [160].

<sup>28</sup> i.e., cases after Solle v Butcher, above; for such cases see below, p.318, n.1.

<sup>29</sup> i.e., cases before Solle v Butcher, above; some of these cases are discussed at pp.318–319, below.

<sup>30</sup> See, for example, Re Garnett (1885) 31 Ch.D. 1; Allcard v Walker [1896] 2 Ch. 369.

<sup>31</sup> Below, pp.316–317.

<sup>32</sup> e.g. Torrance v Bolton (1872) L.R. 8 Ch. App. 118 (perhaps explicable on the ground of misrepresentation); Colyer v Clay (1843) 7 Beav. 188 (where it was conceded that the contract could not stand); and see below, pp.312, 313, nn.42 and 43.

<sup>33</sup> e.g. below, p.778.

are intended to achieve certainty can lead to results, the justice of which is open to question; and English law presents, or has presented, an incongruous appearance, with the common law striving for certainty while equity tried to promote justice. It may be that the common law approach the mistake has over-stressed the need for certainty. This is suggested by the fact that the American rules on this subject are much closer to those of English equity than to those of the English common law,<sup>34</sup> and do not seem to have caused widespread inconvenience. Nor has such inconvenience resulted from the rule that a contract can be set aside for even a wholly innocent misrepresentation.<sup>35</sup> Yet from the representor's point of view this rule creates almost as much uncertainty as would a broad doctrine of mistake.

At first sight, it may seem odd still to provide a separate discussion of mistake in equity. A more satisfactory approach, it might be thought, would simply be to look at each mistake situation and to ask whether the law (including equity) provided any relief.<sup>36</sup> But this approach would not help towards an understanding of the present law, because equitable remedies for mistake differ from those available at common law in being not only more flexible but also discretionary. Even today it is therefore not enough to know that there is some remedy for mistake in a given case. It can still make a practical difference whether the remedy is available at common law (because the contract is void) or in equity (even though the contract is not void).

1. Types of Mistake Dealt With in Equity

(1) Mistake of fact

(a) MISTAKE NOT FUNDAMENTAL. Equity may give relief to a person who has made a mistake which is not fundamental in the narrow common law sense: for example to a purchaser who buys under a mistake as to the vendor's title,<sup>37</sup> though at law the contract would be valid unless the title happened to be in the purchaser himself.<sup>38</sup> Similarly, equity may give relief if a vendor intends to sell property subject to a right of way or a mortgage, but the purchaser believes he is buying without incumbrance.<sup>39</sup> Conversely, equitable relief can be given to a vendor who sells property to which he has a greater right than he thinks he has: e.g. if he thinks that he has only a half-share in property when he is in fact entitled to the whole.<sup>40</sup> Other cases in which equitable relief may be given for mistakes that are not fundamental in the common law sense are considered later in this Chapter in the discussion of the various forms which such relief can take.<sup>41</sup>

(b) MISTAKE AS TO VALUE. Occasionally, equity has intervened even where a mistake has been made by a vendor which merely affects the value of the thing sold.<sup>42</sup> Similarly,

<sup>34</sup> See Williston, Contracts, rev. ed., §1544; cf. his criticism in §1570, n.3 of Bell v Lever Bros Ltd; Restatement 2d, Contracts, §§152, 153.

<sup>35</sup> See below, Chap.9.

<sup>36</sup> Phang, 9 Legal Studies 291; Burrows, 2002 O.J.L.S. 1.

<sup>37</sup> Hitchcock v Giddings (1817) 4 Price 135 (Court of Exchequer, stating equitable principles).

<sup>38</sup> See above, p.287.

<sup>39</sup> Manser v Back (1848) 6 Hare 433; Torrance v Bolton (1872) L.R. 8 Ch.App. 118; but not if the mistake is trivial or the risk of it is allocated by the contract: William Sindall plc v Cambridgeshire CC [1994] 1 W.L.R. 1016.

<sup>40</sup> Colyer v Clay (1843) 7 Beav. 188.

<sup>41</sup> e.g. below, pp.316–317.

<sup>42</sup> Cocking v Pratt (1749) 1 Ves.Sen. 400; cf. cases of “surprise” (below, pp.420, 1027) such as Evans v Llewellyn (1787) 1 Cox CC 333 and Walters v Morgan (1861) 3 D.F. & J. 718; Bettyes v Maynard (1882) 46 L.T. 766; Scott v Coulson [1903] 2 Ch. 249, above, p.267 may be explained as a case of relief for such a mistake as to value.

in Re Garnett<sup>43</sup> a testator left half his estate to his sister and the other half to be shared equally between his nieces, who lived with the sister. The nieces later released their shares to the sister in consideration of a payment of £10,500. The releases were set aside on the ground that the shares of the nieces were worth over £15,000. However, where a contract price is fixed by the valuation of a third party, equity will not intervene merely because that valuation is too high<sup>44</sup> or too low. The remedy (if any) of the party prejudiced by the mistake is against the valuer.<sup>45</sup>

(c) NO RELIEF FOR MISTAKE AS TO EXPECTATION. Equity can grant relief for a mistake as to facts existing at the date of the contract; but not for “one which related to the expectation of the parties”.<sup>46</sup> The distinction is illustrated by Amalgamated Investment & Property Co Ltd v John Walker & Sons Ltd<sup>47</sup> where a contract was made for the sale of a London warehouse which the purchaser (to the vendor’s knowledge) intended to redevelop. Before the contract was made, a government official had decided that the warehouse ought to be listed as a building of special architectural or historic interest. But the actual listing took place only after the conclusion of the contract; its effect was to make it harder to obtain permission to redevelop. If such permission were refused the value of the property would be reduced by some £1,500,000 below the contract price of £1,710,000. The Court of Appeal held that equity could not intervene<sup>48</sup> merely because the purchaser mistakenly believed that the property was “suitable for and capable of being developed”.<sup>49</sup> No doubt the official’s decision, if known, would have affected the negotiations; but that decision did not amount to a listing, and therefore did not affect the quality of the subject-matter at the time of contracting. It only affected the extent of the risk that permission to redevelop might be refused—a risk which would have existed, though to a lesser extent, quite apart from any question of listing. It follows, a fortiori, that relief will not be given for a mistake which relates neither to subject-matter nor to the terms of contract, but only to “the commercial advantage which the contract gave”<sup>50</sup> to the mistaken party.

(2) Mistake of law

At common law, the traditional view is that a mistake can affect the validity of a contract only if it is one of “fact” as opposed to one of “law”,<sup>51</sup> and this view has been said also to apply in equity.<sup>52</sup> But the distinction between these two categories of mistake is not always easy to draw<sup>53</sup> or to justify<sup>54</sup>; and in Kleinwort Benson Ltd v Lincoln C<sup>55</sup> the

<sup>43</sup> (1885) 31 Ch.D. 1; cf. Jones v Rimmer (1880) 14 Ch.D. 588 (where the mistake was induced by a misleading omission in auction particulars).

<sup>44</sup> Campbell v Edwards [1976] 1 W.L.R. 403; cf. Jones v Sherwood Computer Services Ltd [1992] 1 W.L.R. 277; contrast Macro v Thompson [1996] B.C.C. 707 (expert valuing assets of wrong company).

<sup>45</sup> If he is negligent: below, p.345.

<sup>46</sup> Amalgamated Investment & Property Co Ltd v Walker & Sons Ltd [1977] 1 W.L.R. 164 at 172. For a similar distinction in the law relating to restitution of money paid under a mistake, see Dextra Bank & Trust Co Ltd v Bank of Jamaica [2001] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 193 at 2002.

<sup>47</sup> See above; Brownword, 40 M.L.R. 467.

<sup>48</sup> Whether by rescission or by refusal of specific performance; rescission is now ruled out by the development described at p.319, below.

<sup>49</sup> [1977] 1 W.L.R. at p.171.

<sup>50</sup> Clarion Ltd v National Provident Association [2000] 1 W.L.R. 1888 at 1905.

<sup>51</sup> See above, p.286, n.4.

<sup>52</sup> Midland Great Western Ry of Ireland v Johnson (1858) 6 H.L.C. 798 at 810–811.

<sup>53</sup> See Friendly Provident Life Office v Hilliers Parker May & Rowden [1997] Q.B. 85. cf. below, pp.333–335 for a similar distinction in the law of misrepresentation.

<sup>54</sup> cf. Avon CC v Howlett [1983] 1 W.L.R. 605 at 620; Woolwich Equitable Building Society v IRC (No.2) [1993] A.C. 70 at 154, 199.

<sup>55</sup> [1999] 2 A.C. 349; below, p.1059.

House of Lords held that the analogous right to recover back money paid under a mistake existed even where the mistake was one of law, the mistake there being that contracts under which moneys had been paid to local authorities were valid when actually they were beyond the powers of those authorities and therefore void. Neither this result nor the reasoning on which it was based directly settles the present question, whether a mistake can make a contract void at law or be a ground for relief in equity if it is one as to some point of law other than the validity of the contract itself.<sup>56</sup> But it does seem to be probable that the principle of the Kleinwort Benson case will be extended to cases of this kind, so that a mistake will not be precluded from affecting the validity of a contract (even at law) merely because it is one of law. Since, however, there can be no certainty that this further step will be taken,<sup>57</sup> an account must still be given of cases in which relief has been given in equity for certain types of mistakes which under the common law, as it now stands, would not affect the validity of a contract because they were mistakes of law.

(a) PRIVATE RIGHT: A mistake as to private right can make a contract void, even at law if it results in an attempt by a person to buy his own property.<sup>58</sup> Such a mistake may be based on a pure mistake of fact, e.g. where A is wrongly thought to be older than B. More usually, the mistake arises out of the misconstruction of a document, such as a will or settlement.<sup>59</sup> It may also result from a mistake about the law, e.g. as to the age at which a person can marry or make a will, or as to the contractual capacity of a person under a disability. In such cases the mistake seems to be a pure mistake of law, though, like many mistakes of law, it may affect private rights.

(b) PURE MISTAKE OF LAW: There is some support for the view that equity can relieve against a pure mistake of law of the kind last mentioned, even though it does not result in an attempt by a person to buy his own property. In Allcard v Walker<sup>60</sup> a married woman executed a settlement containing a covenant to settle after-acquired property. As the law then stood, a married woman could not bind herself by such a covenant. In later divorce proceedings she agreed to an order varying the settlement, mistakenly believing that the settlement and the covenant were valid. It was held that the order could be set aside on terms. Since orders made by consent may for this purpose have the effect of contracts,<sup>61</sup> the case supports the view that equity can give relief to a party who has entered into a contract under a pure mistake of law. Stirling J., apart from affirming this proposition, also said that the mistake was one as to private right: he relied on the analogy of Cooper v Phibbs,<sup>62</sup> where equitable relief was granted to a person who had taken a lease of land to which he was already entitled beneficially, though not at law, neither party being at the time of the transaction aware of the true state of the title. The

<sup>56</sup> As, for example, in Solle v Butcher [1950] 1 K.B. 671, below, pp.316, 334.

<sup>57</sup> According to a dictum in S v S [2002] N.L.J. 398, the Kleinwort Benson decision was "specific to the law of restitution and was not intended to apply across the board of every branch of law".

<sup>58</sup> cf. above, p.287.

<sup>59</sup> As in Cooper v Phibbs (1877) 1 L.R. 2 H.L. 149; regarded in Kleinwort Benson Ltd v Lincoln City Council [1999] 2 A.C. 349 at 407 as an exception to the rule that relief was not available for mistake of law.

<sup>60</sup> [1896] 2 Ch.369; cf. Stone v Godfrey (1854) 5 D.M. & G. 76 at 90; Re Saxon Life Assurance Soc (1862) 2 J. & H. 408 at 412 (affirmed 1 D.J. & S. 29). In Gibson v Mitchell [1990] 1 W.L.R. 1304 the court puzzlingly distinguishes at 1309 between a mistake of law as to the "effect" and "consequences" of the transaction. The actual decision is based on the Variation of Trusts Act 1958.

<sup>61</sup> Huddersfield Banking Co Ltd v Henry Lister & Son Ltd [1895] 2 Ch.273; cf. Sport International Bussum BV v Inter-Footwear Ltd [1984] 1 W.L.R. 776. But a "consent" order may be merely one to which a party submits without objection in which case it does not have the effect of a contract: Siebe Gorman & Co Ltd v Pneupac Ltd [1982] 1 W.L.R. 185; and in matrimonial proceedings consent orders are not now regarded as contracts: Thwaite v Thwaite [1982] Fam. 1; Jenkins v Livesey [1985] A.C. 424.

<sup>62</sup> (1867) 1 L.R. 2 H.L. 149; Matthews, 105 L.Q.R. 599.

mistake in that case, however, was one as to the construction of the documents on which the title to the land depended,<sup>63</sup> while that in Allcard v Walker was one as to the general law which then governed the contractual capacity of married women. In Solle v Butcher<sup>64</sup> it seems to have been assumed by all the members of the court that relief for a mistake of pure law was not available even in equity; the court was divided only on the question whether the mistake was one of law.

(c) MISTAKE AS TO CONSTRUCTION. Law and equity can give relief where a contract is made under a mistake as to private rights arising out of a misconstruction of earlier documents that specify those rights. Equity can also sometimes give relief where one of the parties has misinterpreted the contract itself. The mere fact that A has misinterpreted the contract does not entitle him to enforce it against B in the sense in which A understood it<sup>65</sup>; and, in general, the court will specifically enforce the contract, properly interpreted, at the suit of either A<sup>66</sup> or B.<sup>67</sup> But the court can, in its discretion, refuse B specific performance on the ground that A has misinterpreted the contract<sup>68</sup>; and if A's mistake is induced (even innocently) by B, A may be entitled to have the contract set aside.<sup>69</sup>

A mistake as to the contents of a contract is clearly one of fact.<sup>70</sup> Action in reliance on such a mistake may give rise to an estoppel by convention. The requirements and effects of such an estoppel are discussed in Chapter 3<sup>71</sup>; they differ from the kind of relief with which we are concerned in this Chapter. Such relief is sought by a party who wishes to claim relief against enforcement of the contract. Estoppel by convention is, on the other hand, invoked by a party who seeks to rely<sup>72</sup> on the contract, as understood by him. This accounts for the fact that the requirements of such an estoppel are more stringent than those of relief for mistake. Estoppel by convention requires action in reliance on an agreed but mistaken assumption; usually this takes the form of acts done in the performance of the contract. There is no such requirement where a party merely seeks to resist the enforcement of a contract on the ground of mistake: he need show no more than that he entered into the contract under the mistake, and that it falls into one of the categories (discussed above) for which equity gives relief.

(d) MISTAKEN INFERENCES. Many cases involve an inquiry into the physical circumstances from which some inference then has to be drawn. The physical circumstances are called the primary facts of the case and the inference is called a secondary fact. Questions of secondary fact are for some purposes treated as questions of law and for others as questions of fact.<sup>73</sup>

The cases of mistake dealt with at common law involve mistakes as to primary facts or as to private rights. But equity goes further and gives relief against mistakes of <sup>63</sup> It made no difference that one of these was a private Act of Parliament: cf. below, p.334 n.37.

<sup>64</sup> [1950] 1 K.B. 671; below, p.317; disapproved in The Great Peace [2002] EWCA Civ 1407; [2002] 4 All E.R. 689, but not on this point.

<sup>65</sup> Midland Great Western Ry of Ireland v Johnson (1858) 6 H.L.C. 798.

<sup>66</sup> Berners v Fleming [1925] Ch.264.

<sup>67</sup> Powell v Smith (1872) L.R. 14 Eq. 85; Hart v Hart (1881) Ch.D. 670.

<sup>68</sup> Watson v Marston (1853) 4 D.M. & G. 230.

<sup>69</sup> Wilding v Sanderson [1897] 2 Ch.534; Faraday v Tamworth Union (1917) 86 L.J. Ch. 436. Rescission in these cases could now be explained on the ground of misrepresentation, as the reference in Wilding v Sanderson to Stewart v Kennedy (1890) 15 App.Cas. 108 suggests.

<sup>70</sup> See below, p.333.

<sup>71</sup> See above, p.119.

<sup>72</sup> Though probably only by way of defence: see above, pp.123–124.

<sup>73</sup> cf. below, p.836, Benmax v Austin Motor Co Ltd [1955] A.C. 370.

secondary fact, or mistaken inferences. In Solle v Butcher<sup>74</sup> a flat was extensively altered and then let. Both landlord and tenant mistakenly thought that, as a result of the alterations, the flat had changed its "identity", so that it was no longer subject to the Rent Acts. In the Court of Appeal, the mistake was variously described as one of fact, as to private rights, or of law.<sup>75</sup> It is submitted that it is best described as a mistake of secondary fact. The parties were under no mistake as to the primary facts: they knew what work had been done in the flat. Their mistake was as to the inference to be drawn from those facts and this mistake could be a ground for equitable relief. The actual form of relief granted was by way of rescission on terms in favour of the landlord, and this would no longer be available.<sup>76</sup> But it seems that if the tenant had claimed specific performance, then relief by way of refusal of this remedy (or by granting it only on terms) would still be available to the landlord.<sup>77</sup>

2. Forms of Equitable Relief

(1) Refusal of specific performance

Refusal of specific performance is the most freely available form of equitable relief for mistake. It leaves the contract enforceable at law, so that it does not seriously prejudice the interests of certainty.

(a) ABSOLUTE REFUSAL. Specific performance will clearly be refused where the contract is void at law, e.g. where a person contracts to buy his own property<sup>78</sup> or where one party, to the knowledge of the other, makes a mistake as to the terms of the contract<sup>79</sup>; or as to its binding force.<sup>80</sup>

Specific performance may also be refused where the contract is valid at law because the mistake is not one of fact, or not fundamental,<sup>81</sup> or not operative by reason of the objective principle.<sup>82</sup> Thus in Day v Wells<sup>83</sup> the defendant instructed an auctioneer to sell cottages thinking that he had told the auctioneer to put a reserve price on them. The auctioneer sold without reserve, at a lower price, and it was held that the defendant could not be compelled to perform specifically. Similarly, in Wood v Scarth<sup>84</sup> a landlord agreed to let a public house, intending to take a premium but failing to say so. He successfully resisted a claim for specific performance, though he was later held liable in damages at law.<sup>85</sup>

Where the contract is valid, refusal of specific performance is a matter for the discretion of the court. In exercising that discretion, the court must weigh the hardship of granting the remedy against the uncertainty caused by refusing it. Two cases may be contrasted. In Malins v Freeman<sup>86</sup> the defendant at an auction bid for one lot under the mistaken impression that he was bidding for another. Although he was clearly liable at

<sup>74</sup> [1950] 1 K.B. 671; disapproved, but not on this point, in The Great Peace [2002] EWCA Civ 1407; [2002] 4 All E.R. 689.

<sup>75</sup> ibid. at 685, 693, 705 (Jenkins L.J. dissenting).

<sup>76</sup> The Great Peace [2002] EWCA Civ 1407; [2002] 4 All E.R. 689, below, p.319.

<sup>77</sup> Below, under next heading.

<sup>78</sup> Jones v Clifford (1876) 3 Ch.D. 779.

<sup>79</sup> Webster v Cecil (1861) 30 Beav. 62. It seems reasonable to deduce from the report that the claimant knew of the defendant's mistake; but this fact is not actually stated.

<sup>80</sup> Pateman v Pay (1974) 232 E.G. 457.

<sup>81</sup> e.g. Jones v Rimmer (1880) 14 Ch.D. 588.

<sup>82</sup> See above, pp.306–307.

<sup>83</sup> (1861) 30 Beav. 220.

<sup>84</sup> (1855) 2 K. & J. 33.

<sup>85</sup> (1858) 1 F. & F. 293.

<sup>86</sup> (1837) 2 Keen 25.

law,<sup>87</sup> it was held that specific performance should not be ordered against him. But in Tamplin v James<sup>88</sup> the defendant at an auction bid for an inn and a shop mistakenly believing that the lot included a certain garden. The Court of Appeal ordered specific performance, stressing the uncertainty which would result from allowing the defendant to rely on his own mistake. James L.J. said that a defendant could rely on a mistake to which the claimant had not contributed only "where a hardship amounting to injustice would have been inflicted upon him by holding him to his bargain, and it was unreasonable to hold him to it".<sup>89</sup> The two cases may be reconciled by saying that it is a "hardship amounting to injustice" to force a person to take one property when he thinks he has bought another, but not to force a person to take a property which is less extensive than he thought.

Since the object of refusing specific performance is to avoid hardship to the party prejudiced by the mistake, it follows that, where the contract is valid at law, only that party can rely on the mistake. Thus if A thinks that he is buying more than B intends to sell, A can specifically enforce the contract for the smaller quantity intended by B.<sup>90</sup> But where the contract is void at law, neither party can specifically enforce it<sup>91</sup> unless the circumstances are such that, even at law, one party, but not the other, can rely on the mistake.<sup>92</sup>

(b) SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE ON TERMS. Equity can take a middle course between refusing specific performance and granting it in spite of the mistake: it can, where the contract is valid at law, grant specific performance on terms. Thus in Baskcomb v Beckwith<sup>93</sup> an estate was sold in lots, on the terms that the purchaser of each lot should covenant not to build a public house on it. The vendor kept one of the lots himself, and proposed to build a public house there, but the plan of the lots did not make this clear. It was held that the vendor could specifically enforce the contract but only if he covenanted not to build a public house on the land retained by him. Similarly, equity can order specific performance with compensation, i.e. abatement or increase of the purchase price, where the value of the property sold is less or greater than supposed because of some misdescription of the property.<sup>94</sup>

(2) No rescission in equity for mistake

Two questions call for discussion. The first is whether a contract which is valid at law can be rescinded in equity for mistake; the second is whether this remedy is available where the mistake makes the contract void at law. Both questions must (though for different reasons) be answered in the negative.

(a) CONTRACT VALID AT LAW. A contract may, in spite of the mistake, be valid at law either because the mistake is not fundamental or because the mistake is, under the objective principle, not operative.<sup>95</sup> It will be convenient to begin by discussing the second (relatively uncontroversial) situation.

<sup>87</sup> See above, p.307.

<sup>88</sup> (1880) 15 Ch.D. 215; cf. Calverley v Williams (1790) 1 Ves.Jun. 209.

<sup>89</sup> Tamplin v James, above, at 221; cf. Stewart v Kennedy (1890) 15 App.Cas. 75 at 105.

<sup>90</sup> Preston v Luck (1884) 27 Ch.D. 497.

<sup>91</sup> Higginson v Clowes (1808) 15 Ves. 516 (vendor's claim); Clowes v Higginson (1813) 1 v & B. 524 (purchaser's claim).

<sup>92</sup> See above, p.309.

<sup>93</sup> (1869) L.R. 8 Eq. 100.

<sup>94</sup> See below, p.771.

<sup>95</sup> Above, p.306.

(i) Mistake not operative. Here equity may refuse specific performance against the mistaken party,<sup>96</sup> leaving the other to his remedy at law. But it will not rescind<sup>97</sup> and so deprive the other party of his remedy at law on the contract; for to take this step would subvert the certainty which the objective principle is intended to promote.

Accordingly, equity will, in general, follow the common law rule that a mistake is not operative if the mistaken party, A, has so conducted himself as to induce the other party, B, reasonably to believe that A has agreed to the terms proposed by B. In particular, a person cannot have a contract set aside because of a mistake which he made because he failed to act with due diligence.<sup>98</sup>

(ii) Mistake not fundamental: Solle v Butcher. A line of twentieth century cases supported the view that a contract could be rescinded on terms on the ground that it was made under a mistake, even though the mistake was not fundamental in the narrow common law sense and so did not affect the validity of the contract at law. The leading case was Solle v Butcher<sup>99</sup> where a flat had been let for £250 per annum, both parties mistakenly believing that it was free from rent control, when in fact it was subject to the Rent Acts and to a standard rent of £140 per annum. Had the landlord realised this, he could, before granting the lease, have increased the rent to about £250 per annum, on account of the work done by him to the flat; but he had no right to make such an increase during the currency of a lease already granted. The tenant claimed a declaration that the standard rent was £140 per annum and repayment of the excess; the landlord claimed rescission of the lease. It was held that the lease could be rescinded, though it was valid at law. As it would have caused considerable hardship to the tenant to turn him out of the flat, the court gave him the option of staying on if he paid the standard rent plus the amount by which the landlord could have increased it, had he been aware of the true position when he granted the lease.

(iii) Criticism. In the 50 years after Solle v Butcher, the equitable power to rescind contracts for mistakes which did not invalidate them at law was exercised in a number of first instance and Court of Appeal decisions.<sup>1</sup> No doubt the reason why the courts continued to use this equitable power was that, in mitigating the narrow common law definition of mistake, rescission in equity could "on occasion be the passport to a just result".<sup>2</sup> But in one of these cases<sup>3</sup> Winn L.J. dissented on the ground that the majority view (that the contract should be rescinded) was inconsistent with the refusal of the

<sup>96</sup> Above, p.316.

<sup>97</sup> Riverlate Properties Ltd v Paul [1975] Ch. 133; below, p.298. In OT Africa Line Ltd v Vickers Ltd [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 700, the court was prepared at 704 to assume that a contract could be rescinded for mistake "where it is simply inequitable for one party to hold the other to a bargain objectively made". But this assumption is, with respect, inconsistent with the Riverlate Properties case, which was not cited and it would seriously subvert the certainty which the objective principle is intended to promote. The actual decision in the OT Africa Line case was that there had been no "inequitable" conduct, so that the contract was upheld.

<sup>98</sup> Attorney-General v Tomline (1877) 7 Ch.D. 388; Soper v Arnold (1877) 37 Ch.D. 96; 14 App.Cas. 429. For the common law position, cf. above, pp.297-298.

<sup>99</sup> [1950] 1 K.B. 671, above, p.316.

<sup>1</sup> Peters v Batchelor (1950) 100 L.J. News 715; Laurence v Lexcourt Holdings Ltd [1978] 1 W.L.R. 1128; Grist v Bailey [1967] Ch. 532 (the last two cases were doubted in William Sindall plc v Cambridgeshire CC [1994] 1 W.L.R. 1016 at 1035 on the ground that the risk of mistake had been allocated by the contract); Magee v Pennine Insurance Co Ltd [1969] 2 Q.B. 507; Nutt v Read (2000) 32 H.L.R. 761; The Times, December 3, 1999; West Sussex Properties Ltd v Chichester DC, June 28, 2000, CA. These are described in The Great Peace [2002] E.W.C.A. Civ 1407; [2002] 4 All E.R. 689, at [153] and [157] as a "small number" and "a handful" of cases; and although these statements are true in absolute terms, the number of such cases in relation to those in which contracts were impugned on the ground of mistake in the same period is by no means insignificant.

<sup>2</sup> West Sussex Properties case, above, at [42].

<sup>3</sup> Magee's case, above.

House of Lords in Bell v Lever Bros Ltd<sup>4</sup> to grant relief for mistake; and no satisfactory way was ever found of explaining the relationship between that leading case and the equitable jurisdiction to rescind.<sup>5</sup> One view was that the equitable jurisdiction could have been exercised in Bell v Lever Bros Ltd if an attempt had been made to invoke it; but some of the relevant equity cases were cited to,<sup>6</sup> and equitable principles were discussed by, the House of Lords.<sup>7</sup> A second view was that the exercise of the equitable jurisdiction depended on relative degrees of “fault” so that rescission would not be ordered in favour of a party who was himself at fault,<sup>8</sup> while conversely it could be ordered against one who had acted improperly in inducing the mistake,<sup>9</sup> or whose insistence on his legal rights after becoming aware of the mistake was unconscientious.<sup>10</sup> The difficulty with this view was that, since there was no definition of “fault” for this purpose, it did little to clarify the scope of the jurisdiction. A third view was that the common law rules laid down in Bell v Lever Bros Ltd determined the rights of the parties, while the equitable jurisdiction entitled the court to vary these at its discretion, so that equity “supplemented”<sup>11</sup> the common law; but the difficulty with this view lay in the failure of the relevant cases to formulate any principles governing the equitable discretion.

(iv) The Great Peace. At one time it seemed that, in spite of the criticisms summarised in the preceding paragraph, the courts had accepted the existence of the equitable jurisdiction,<sup>12</sup> though without giving any clear answer to the question just when a contract which was valid at law could be rescinded in equity. The issue arose again in The Great Peace<sup>13</sup> where, as will be recalled, it was held that a charterparty was not void at law<sup>14</sup> by reason of a mistake as to the “proximity” of the chartered ship to the vessel to which she was to render escort services. The Court of Appeal further held that there was no power to rescind the charterparty in equity. It did so on the ground that Solle v Butcher was inconsistent with Bell v Lever Bros Ltd<sup>15</sup> and that there was, therefore, no equitable power to rescind a contract which, in spite of the mistake was “valid and enforceable on ordinary principles of contract law”.<sup>16</sup> Only by taking this view could

<sup>4</sup> [1932] A.C. 161.

<sup>5</sup> A.L.G. 66 L.Q.R. 169; Atiyah & Bennion, 24 M.L.R. 421 at 439.

<sup>6</sup> e.g. Harris v Pepperell (1867) L.R. 5 Eq. 1; Paget v Marshall (1884) 28 Ch.D. 255. As to these cases, see below p.322; cf. Associated Japanese Bank International Ltd v Crédit du Nord S.A [1989] 1 W.L.R. 255 at 256.

<sup>7</sup> See the discussion in Bell v Lever Bros Ltd, above of Cooper v Phibbs (1872) L.R. 2 H.L. 149 and the discussion of the latter case in The Great Peace [2002] E.W.C.A. Civ 1407; [2002] 4 All E.R. 689, at [100] et seq.

<sup>8</sup> [1950] 1 K.B. at 693; cf. Harrison & Jones Ltd v Buntens & Lancaster Ltd [1953] 1 Q.B. 646 at 654 (equitable relief refused as neither party was at fault); Laurence v Lexcourt Holdings Ltd [1978] 1 W.L.R. 1128 (relief granted as party prejudiced by mistake was not, while the other party was, at fault); The Llyndiana [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 313 at 318 (relief refused as mistake entirely due to fault of allegedly mistaken party); Associated Japanese Bank International Ltd v Crédit du Nord S.A [1989] 1 W.L.R. 255 at 270 (equitable relief would have been available, had the contract not been void at law, as claimant was “not at fault in any way”).

<sup>9</sup> e.g. Cocking v Pratt (1749) 1 VEs.Sen. 400; Evans v Llewellyn (1787) 1 Cox C.C. 333; Torrance v Bolton (1872) L.R. 8 Ch. App. 118; cf. Beauchamp v Winn (1873) L.R. 6 H.L. 223 AT 233.

<sup>10</sup> e.g. Huchcock v Giddings (1817) 4 Price 135; Bettyes v Maynard (1882) 46 L.T. 766, but see Riverlate Properties Ltd v Paul [1975] Ch.133 at 140–141.

<sup>11</sup> Associated Japanese Bank (International) Ltd v Credit du Nord S.A [1989] 1 W.L.R. 255 at 267, describing this as “an entirely sensible and satisfactory state of the law.”

<sup>12</sup> See the dictum quoted in n.11, above.

<sup>13</sup> [2002] E.W.C.A. Civ 1407, [2002] 4 All E.R. 689.

<sup>14</sup> Above, p.288.

<sup>15</sup> The Great Peace, above n.13, at [157], [160].

<sup>16</sup> ibid. at [161].

"coherence . . . be restored to this area of our law"<sup>17</sup> which had been thrown into "confusion"<sup>18</sup> by Solle v Butcher and later cases which had exercised the jurisdiction to rescind. What lies at the heart of this reasoning is the need for doctrinal consistency, rather than any attempt to evaluate past exercises of the equitable jurisdiction on their merits.<sup>19</sup> With regard to the latter point, the judgment merely hints that there is "scope for legislation to give greater flexibility to our law of mistake than the common law allows".<sup>20</sup> At this stage, two further possibilities cannot be ruled out. The first is that the House of Lords might yet disagree with the Court of Appeal on the issue of discretionary relief for mistake,<sup>21</sup> and the second (no doubt more remote) one is that the House might even review the narrowness of the scope of mistake at common law as laid down in Bell v Lever Bros Ltd.<sup>22</sup> With regard to The Great Peace itself, it may be relevant to note that the question of equitable relief arose in the context of a charterparty, that this is a type of contract in which certainty (which would be subverted by the exercise of a discretion to rescind) is of paramount importance,<sup>23</sup> and that on the facts there was said to be "no injustice in the result".<sup>24</sup>

(b) CONTRACT VOID AT LAW. The cases which formerly supported the existence of an equitable power to set contracts aside on terms must at first sight have been restricted to contracts which were valid at law.<sup>25</sup> Where the contract is void at law, it can simply be ignored; there is nothing to "set aside" and hence no power to impose terms: "It is axiomatic that there is no room for rescission of a contract which is void."<sup>26</sup> There are, however, two apparent difficulties in the way of this view.

The first arises from Cooper v Phibbs.<sup>27</sup> In that case A was the legal owner of land to which B was beneficially entitled in equity. A improved the land and later agreed to grant a lease of it to B, together with other land of which A was both legal and beneficial owner. It was held that the agreement must be set aside for mistake (neither party having been aware of B's entitlement to part of the land); and that B could get back rent which he had paid under the agreement. But B had to compensate A for the improvements, and to pay a reasonable rent for that part of the land in which he had no interest when the agreement was made. Cooper v Phibbs is now regarded as a case of a contract which was

<sup>17</sup> ibid. at [157].

<sup>18</sup> ibid.

<sup>19</sup> See the dictum referred to at n.11, above.

<sup>20</sup> The Great Peace, above at [161], referring to the analogy of the Law Reform (Frustrated Contracts) Act 1943. If such legislation following the principle of equitable intervention in mistake cases, it would differ in nature from the 1943 Act. This assumes that the contract is discharged by the supervening event; equitable intervention assumes that the contract is not made void by the mistake.

<sup>21</sup> In another branch of contract law, the House of Lords has been prepared to mitigate a common law rule by a discretion based on equitable analogies: see Attorney-General v Blake [2001] 1 A.C. 168, below, p.930.

<sup>22</sup> [1932] A.C. 161. The decision was reached by a majority of three to two, reversing the unanimous view of the judges in the courts below. Perhaps the majority in the House of Lords used the narrow definition of mistake to mitigate the severity of the rule that the breaches by the employees justified their summary dismissal without compensation (below, p.777), particularly at a time when a less serious view was taken of those breaches than might now be the case; cf. Treitel, 104 L.Q.R. 501 at 505. For doubts about the merits of the case, see also above, p.312 n.34 and (perhaps) p.290 at n.40.

<sup>23</sup> See the judgment of Toulson J. in The Great Peace, Transcript, November 9, 2001, at [126], affirmed on appeal; cf. below p.780.

<sup>24</sup> [2002] E.W.C.A. Civ 1407; [2002] 4 All E.R. 689, at [166]. Cf. above, p.289, n.27. The outcome was that the owners recovered five days' hire even though the charterers had cancelled only about two hours after the chartered ship had changed course towards the stricken vessel: see [15], [21]. There was no discussion as to the remedy and it is arguable that, on receipt of the charterer's cancellation, the owners should have mitigated by resuming their original course: see below, pp.1015-1019.

<sup>25</sup> Ingram v Little [1961] 1 Q.B. 31 at 62.

<sup>26</sup> The Great Peace [2002] E.W.C.A. Civ 1407; [2002] 4 All E.R. 689 at [96].

<sup>27</sup> (1867) L.R. 2 H.L. 149.

void at law<sup>28</sup>; and this view of the case may give rise to the impression that equity can impose terms even where the contract is void at law. But the actual decision in Cooper v Phibbs was that the agreement “ought to be set aside”,<sup>29</sup> this form of relief begin then thought to be necessary because the legal title to the land was not vested in B.<sup>30</sup> It is, moreover, submitted that, in imposing terms on B (which in any event he did not contest)<sup>31</sup> the court gave effect to obligations that were based, not on any purported contract, but on general principles of equity or restitution. The crucial point was not that A and B had purported to enter into a contract under a mistake, but that A had conferred benefits on B, by the retention of which (without compensating A for them) B would be unjustly enriched.<sup>32</sup> Cooper v Phibbs does not support the view that equity can impose terms merely because parties have entered into a void contract.

The second difficulty arises from a number of statements by Lord Denning to the effect that the contract in cases such as Cundy v Lindsay<sup>33</sup> would now be voidable in equity.<sup>34</sup> The attraction of this view is that it would enable the court in such cases to protect innocent third parties. But he has also said that there was “no contract at all”<sup>35</sup> in Cundy v Lindsay; and this view is certainly the more consistent with the decision. Unless Cundy v Lindsay is reversed by legislation or by the House of Lords, there can be nothing to rescind in such a case.

(3) Rectification

Contracting parties may execute a document purporting to contain the terms previously agreed between them. If, as a result of a mistake, the document fails to contain all those terms, or contains different terms, the court may rectify it, that is, order its wording to be changed so as to bring it into line with the earlier agreement<sup>36</sup>; alternatively, the court may treat the document as having been so rectified without making a formal order for its rectification.<sup>37</sup> Having been developed in equity, rectification is a discretionary remedy.<sup>38</sup> It is available where there has been a mistake, not in the making, but in the recording, of a contract: “Courts of equity do not rectify contracts; they may and do rectify instruments.”<sup>39</sup> Rectification can be ordered although the contract is one which

<sup>28</sup> See above, p.287.

<sup>29</sup> (1867) L.R. 2 H.L. at 167, 173.

<sup>30</sup> See Matthews, 105 L.Q.R. 599. The Great Peace, above, n.26 at [109] and [110].

<sup>31</sup> (1867) L.R. 7 H.L. 149 at 154.

<sup>32</sup> cf. below, p.382 in respect of the improvements and below, p.1063 in respect of the rent (showing that even where a contract is void there may be liability at law in respect of benefits obtained under it).

<sup>33</sup> (1878) 3 App.Cas. 459; above, p.298.

<sup>34</sup> Solle v Butcher [1950] 1 K.B. 671 at 692; Lewis v Averay [1972] 1 Q.B. 198 at 207; and see his statement in Magee v Pennine Insurance Co Ltd [1969] 2 Q.B. 507 at 514, that “a common mistake, even on a most fundamental matter, does not make a contract void at law: but makes it voidable in equity.” This view would very much increase the scope of the equitable jurisdiction but it appears to be inconsistent with many of the cases discussed in Sections 1 and 2 of this Chapter. cf. Associated Japanese Bank (International) Ltd v Crédit du Nord SA [1989] 1 W.L.R. 255 at 266, describing Lord Denning’s view as an “individual opinion.”

<sup>35</sup> Gallie v Lee [1969] 2 Ch. 17 at 33 (affirmed [1971] A.C. 1004).

<sup>36</sup> Murray v Parker (1854) 19 Beav. 305; Crane v Hegeman-Harris Co Inc [1939] 1 All E.R. 662, affirmed [1939] 4 All E.R. 68; for a passage omitted from these reports, see [1971] 3 All E.R. 245; The Rhodian River [1984] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 373.

<sup>37</sup> The Nile Rhapsody [1994] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 382; OTV Birmelco Ltd v Technical & General Guarantee Co Ltd [2002] EWHC 2240 (TCC); [2002] 4 All E.R. 668, at [39].

<sup>38</sup> Re Butlin’s S.T. [1976] Ch.251 at 263.

<sup>39</sup> Mackenzie v Coulson (1869) L.R. 8 Eq. 369, 375; The Olympic Pride [1980] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 67 at 72. The point seems to have been overlooked in McAuley v Bristol CC [1992] Q.B. 134, where the phrase “rectify a . . . contract” occurs at p.147.

must be in, or evidenced in, writing.<sup>40</sup> The availability of the remedy depends on the following rules.

(a) MISTAKE OF BOTH PARTIES OR KNOWN TO ONE.

(i) Mistake of one party generally insufficient. A contractual document<sup>41</sup> can, in general, be rectified only if it fails to record the intention of both parties. Thus if A lets a house to B and both agree that the rent is to be £200 per month, the lease can be rectified if by mistake it states the monthly rent to be only £100. But if all the time A intended to charge £200 while B intended to pay only £100 the lease could not be rectified to conform with A's intention,<sup>42</sup> for this would force on B a contract to which he had never agreed. Rectification could, however, be ordered if B, when he executed the lease, knew of, or wilfully shut his eyes to,<sup>43</sup> A's mistake,<sup>44</sup> or if B was guilty of fraud<sup>45</sup> or other unconscionable conduct: for example, if he intended A to be mistaken as to the construction of the document and prevented A from discovering the mistake by making "false and misleading statements" during the negotiations.<sup>46</sup> In such cases, the remedy would cause no injustice to B.

Some cases formerly supported the view that, where the intention of only one party (A) was inaccurately recorded, the court could force the other (B) to choose between having the contract rescinded or having it rectified.<sup>47</sup> These cases have, however, been overruled<sup>48</sup> since they conflicted with the objective principle<sup>49</sup> in that they deprived B of a bargain on terms which had every appearance of being offered to him. A is accordingly bound by the terms of the contract as recorded in the document.

(ii) One party indifferent. In Van der Linde v. Van der Linde<sup>50</sup> the court refused to rectify a covenant so as to achieve the tax advantage which the covenantor had intended (but failed) to secure. One reason for the refusal was that there was not sufficient evidence of mistake; another was that the covenantee had no view as to "the intention of the document".<sup>51</sup> In Whiteside v Whiteside<sup>52</sup> the court likewise refused to rectify a covenant made for (but failing to achieve) the same purpose, partly because there was no evidence of the common intention of the parties, and partly because there was no issue between them: the covenantor went on paying the covenantee (his wife) as if the <sup>40</sup> Olley v Fisher (1886) 34 Ch.D. 367; Johnson v Bragge [1901] 1 Ch.28; USA v Motor Trucks Ltd [1924] A.C. 196; May v Platt [1900] 1 Ch. 616, if contra, is not law: Craddock Bros v Hunt [1923] 2 Ch. 136; Law Com.No.164, para.5, 6. The position was different before the Judicature Act 1873: Woollam v Hearn (1802) 7 Ves. 211; Squire v Campbell (1836) 1 My. & Cr. 459; but s.24(7) of that Act altered the law. See now s.49 of the Supreme Court Act 1981.

<sup>41</sup> A voluntary settlement can be rectified on account of a mistake of the settlor alone: Re Butlin's S T [1976] Ch.251.

<sup>42</sup> Faraday v Tamworth Union (1917) 86 L.J.Ch. 436; W. Higgins Ltd v Northampton Corp. [1927] 1 Ch.128; cf. Lloyd v Stanbury [1971] 1 W.L.R. 535; The Nai Genova [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 353; The Ypatia Halcoussi [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 364 at 370; Thomas Witter Ltd v TBP Industries Ltd [1996] 2 All E.R. 573 at 601.

<sup>43</sup> Commission for the New Towns v Cooper (Great Britain) Ltd [1995] Ch. 259 at 280.

<sup>44</sup> Garrard v Frankel (1862) 30 Beav. 445, 451; A Roberts & Co Ltd v Leicestershire CC [1961] Ch.555, discussed by R.F.M., 77 L.Q.R. 313; The Olympic Pride, above n.39 at 72; Thomas Bates & Son Ltd v Wyndham's (Lingerie) Ltd [1981] 1 W.L.R. 505.

<sup>45</sup> Blay v Pollard & Morris [1930] 1 K.B. 628 at 633.

<sup>46</sup> Commission for the New Towns v Cooper (Great Britain) Ltd [1995] Ch. 259 at 280.

<sup>47</sup> Harris v Pepperell (1867) L.R. 5 Eq. 1; Paget v Marshall (1884) 28 Ch.D. 255.

<sup>48</sup> Riverlate Properties Ltd v Paul [1975] Ch.133.

<sup>49</sup> See above, p.306; Commission for the New Towns v Cooper (Great Britain) Ltd [1995] Ch. 259 at 277.

<sup>50</sup> [1947] Ch. 306.

<sup>51</sup> ibid., at 312.

<sup>52</sup> [1950] Ch. 65; cf. Rubin v Gerson Berger Association Ltd [1986] 1 W.L.R. 526 at 534 (where no claim for rectification was made); Sherdley v Sherdley [1986] 1 W.L.R. 732 at 744, reversed on other grounds [1988] A.C. 213; Racal Group Services v Ashmore [1995] S.T.C. 1151.

covenant had been rectified. But such an issue can be manufactured by simply refusing to make a single payment. If the document in fact fails to express the intention of the parties, rectification can be ordered even though there is no dispute between them inter se, but only one between them and the Revenue authorities.<sup>53</sup>

(iii) Customary terms. A document may be rectified if it fails to record terms implied by custom into an agreement even though there is no evidence that the parties actually intended such terms to be incorporated. Thus in Caraman, Rowley & May v Aperghis<sup>54</sup> sellers were prevented by war from performing a contract for the sale of sultanias. Similar contracts normally contained a “force majeure” clause which would have protected the sellers; but in this case the clause was inadvertently left out. It was held that the contractual document could be rectified by the inclusion of a “force majeure” clause, whether or not the buyer knew that such a clause was usual. In such a case the customary term is, by implication, part of the contract<sup>55</sup> even though the document is not rectified. But it may be convenient to have the document rectified, especially if the contract is a long-term one, or if it affects, or is likely to come into the hands of, a third party.

(b) TYPES OF MISTAKE. Rectification is most frequently ordered where the terms of a document do not correspond with those of the agreement between the parties, e.g. where the rent is misstated in a lease, or the area of land to be conveyed is misstated in a conveyance.<sup>56</sup> For this purpose, “the agreement” refers to the terms actually agreed between the parties. Thus where those terms were accurately recorded in a lease it was held that rectification was not available merely because they had not been correctly stated in the earlier written agreement for the lease.<sup>57</sup> The only “mistake” of the parties was as to the effect of that written agreement, and to rectify the lease would have defeated, rather than given effect to, the intention of the parties.

Rectification is also available where a person who intends to sign a document in one capacity does so in another, e.g. where the name of a person to whom a bill of exchange is meant to be payable is put in as drawer instead of as payee.<sup>58</sup> The court may also rectify a document executed under a mistake as to its meaning or legal effect<sup>59</sup>; but such a mistake will not be a ground for rectification if the true legal effect of the document was fully explained to the party claiming to have made the mistake.<sup>60</sup> A mere misnomer can sometimes be corrected as a matter of construction, in which case there may be no need to rectify the document.<sup>61</sup> The same is true of other mistakes as to the construction of the document: e.g. of mistakes as to the subject-matter covered by it. For example, A may believe that the document relates to X alone and B allege that it relates to X and Y. If A succeeds on the issue of construction, rectification is strictly unnecessary<sup>62</sup> (though it

<sup>53</sup> Re Colebrook's Conveyances [1973] 1 W.L.R. 1379; cf. Re Slocock's Will Trust [1979] 1 All E.R. 359; Seymour v Seymour, The Times, February 16, 1989; Lake v Lake [1989] S.T.C. 865.

<sup>54</sup> (1923) 40 T.L.R. 124.

<sup>55</sup> See above, p.213.

<sup>56</sup> e.g. Murray v Parker (1854) 19 Beav. 305; Beale v Kyte [1907] 1 Ch.564; Blacklocks v J B Developments (Godalming) Ltd [1982] Ch. 183.

<sup>57</sup> London Regional Transport v Wimpsey Group Services (1987) 53 P. & C.R. 356.

<sup>58</sup> Druif v Parker (1868) L.R. 5 Eq. 131 cf. Co-operative Bank plc v Tipper [1996] 4 All E.R. 366 (guarantor's name mistakenly inserted as borrower's).

<sup>59</sup> Re Colebrook's Conveyances [1973] 1 W.L.R. 1379; cf. Jervis v Howle & Talke Colliery Ltd [1937] Ch.67, following Burroughes v Abbott [1922] 1 Ch.86; Tucker v Bennett (1887) 38 Ch.D. 1; Re Butlin's S T [1976] Ch. 251. No claim for rectification was made in Keen v Holland [1984] 1 W.L.R. 251 (where a mistake as to legal effect was held not sufficient to give rise to an estoppel by convention: above, p.125).

<sup>60</sup> Constantinidi v Ralli [1953] Ch. 427.

